Council to set elections

Elections for city councilmembers from newly formed Districts 1 and 3 will be held April 7, if the Big Spring City Council approves an emergency ordinance Tuesday calling the elections and if no injunction delaying the elections is issued.

The two districts were created as part of the city's recent court settlement with the League of United Latin American Citizens (LULAC) to bring minority representation to the city council.

Only residents living within a district's boundaries are eligible to run for office in that district, and voting is restricted to district residents.

The settlement calls for the expansion of the city council from five to seven members and provides for three councilmembers to be elected from single-member districts in addition to citywide elections for the mayor and three other councilmembers.

April elections for the District 1 and 3 seats may be held up due to a possible lawsuit against the city now being considered by former councilmember Jack Watkins and other city residents.

Watkins and two other residents spoke to the council at its last meeting to protest the extension of terms of office for the mayor and two other councilmembers that also were a part of the LULAC settlement.

If the ordinance calling elections for Districts 1 and 3 is approved unimpeded, persons residing in these districts who wish to file for the seats may do so between Feb. 6 and March 7.

The council also is expected to hear appointments made by Mayor Clyde Angel for judges and alternate judges for polling places in the two districts and approve rates of pay for election officials.

Other items on tomorrow night's agenda include:

• Awarding of a bid to repair the runway at Big Spring Air Park. City officials budgeted $104,000 for repair of the runway. Low bid for the work is listed at about $61,500.

• A public hearing to consider designation of Big Spring's Petroleum Building as a "blighted area" under the Development Corporation Act of 1979. If approved, the designation will facilitate remodeling of the building by Eidsen, Wasson and Lish Realtors of Odessa.

• Awarding of a bid for a new computer system for the Big Spring Police Department. A low bid of about $29,750 for computer hardware, software and training was received from NCR Computer Corp.

• Approval of specifications and permission to advertise for bids for 2,300 feet of new fire hose for the city fire department. City officials have budgeted $4,850 for the purchase.

• Acceptance of the city's 1982-1983 audit.

• Approval of radio maintenance contract specifications.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan announced today he will nominate presidential Counselor Edwin Meese III to succeed Attorney General William French Smith, who is resigning after conducting the most wholesale reshaping of Justice Department policy in decades.

The president, in a letter to Smith, said he was accepting the surprise resignation "with deep regret."

Smith will stay on at the Justice Department until Meese wins Senate confirmation, according to presidential spokesman Larry Speakes.

In his letter of resignation, which the White House released today, Smith told Reagan that, while "service in your Cabinet has been both a great honor and a personal pleasure," the attorney general felt it was time to return to private life.

"Among the several reasons why I must do so is the strong conviction that the interests of the country require that you run and be re-elected," Smith wrote. "I have been involved in that process since 1966 and I do not want 1984 to be an exception. This would not be possible in my present position."

The president, in his letter to Smith, replied, "While I will deeply miss your continued participation as a member of the Cabinet, I appreciate your offer to participate in the 1984 campaign."

Reagan praised the changes Smith has brought about in the Justice Department, mentioning several by name, and said the attorney general had agreed to serve as a member of the President's Foreign Intelligence Advisory Board.

On Capitol Hill, Sen. Charles McC. Mathias Jr. of Maryland said the upcoming Judiciary Committee confirmation hearings "will be a review of administration policies with respect to Justice."

"I expect a bitter debate on anti-trust, civil rights and questions of privacy. ... It is too early to tell how much trouble Meese will have, but any nominee who fails to satisfy our concerns ... will certainly have a rocky time."

County tackles litter campaign

By CAROL BALDWIN
Staff Writer

County commissioners agreed to work on the problem of cleaning up trash along county roads during their meeting this morning at the Howard County Courthouse.

County Judge Milton Kirby recommended that two part-time employees be hired by the county and assigned to cleaning up county roads.

"I'd like to see someone out there at least a half day at a time," Kirby said.

Commissioner David Barr said, "I know we need it. I've had a lot of complaints." However, Barr recommended that the commissioners talk with the roads department and see if present employees could be assigned to cleaning up instead of hiring new personnel.

Commissioners approved a routine six-month raise for Tammy Burgess, an employee in the county treasurer's office.

They also agreed to amend the county budget to allow Jackie Olsen, auditor, to begin interviewing people to work as a deputy in her department. Mrs. Olsen originally asked for a full-time employee but commissioners asked her to find someone part-time.

Kirby defended the hiring of a new employee and said, "there's no sitting around in that office. They are always busy."

County Clerk Margaret Ray drew the names of Billy Bryant, William Gressett and D.R. Thomas from a cigar box to see if the three would agree to serve on a county grievance committee.

Mrs. Ray must now contact the three and get a written letter of acceptance from them before the committee can begin work.

Commissioners also granted permission for the purchase of a filing cabinet for the Game Warden's office. Commissioners stipulated that no more than $75 be spent on the filing cabinet.

Acceptance of bids for an electronic typewriter for the county judge's office and for two 17-inch paper-size typewriters for the county clerk's office was postponed so commissioners could study the typewriters submitted for bids.

Three bids for the county judge's typewriter were submitted, including a bid of $1,720 for a Xerox, $1,895 for an Olivetti and $1,716 for an IBM.

Bids for the two typewriters for the county clerk's office included $1,310 (for two) Olivetti typewriters and $3,016 (for two) IBM typewriters.

Town hurt by presidential snub

TAMPICO, Ill. (AP) — President Reagan will celebrate his birthday next month in the Illinois town where he grew up, but residents of his birthplace in Tampico — just 25 miles away — are hurt and insulted that he isn't coming here.

At stake, local folks say, is Tampico's place in history. Some also say a visit from Reagan — pronounced "Reegun" in these parts — could rejuvenate their dying agricultural town. And some are forgiving about the whole thing.

"How many parents are there whose children have done them wrong, who come right back loving the kids?" said Dean Verdick, 59, a farmer who has lived in the area all his life. "That's how it is with Tampico and Reagan."

The president is to travel about 700 miles from Washington on Feb. 6 to celebrate his 73rd birthday in Dixon. He is not scheduled to travel the 25 additional miles to his birthplace.

"I just can't understand why his helicopter can't fly from Dixon and land on the football field. All he has to do is wave and let us sing 'Happy Birthday,'" said Howard Batten, mayor to the 947 people of Tampico.

The town still plans a birthday bash for Reagan at the high school, and Batten doesn't think many townspeople will accept a White House invitation to join the festivities in Dixon.

Peter Roussel, a White House deputy press secretary, said Saturday the president wasn't aware of the Tampico party.

"We weren't aware of this, but the president is looking forward to his visit and to people from the area participating in the occasion at Dixon," Roussel said.

Reagan is to begin his trip by dedicating the two-story house his family rented for four years in Dixon after moving from Tampico in 1920. He left Dixon in 1932 after graduating from Eureka College — which he also plans to visit — and went on to a radio job in Iowa and a movie career in Hollywood before entering politics.

The Dixon festivities irk Paul Nicely, who owns the brick building on Tampico's Main Street where, in an upstairs apartment, Nelle Wilson Reagan gave birth Feb. 6, 1911, to 10-pound Ronald Wilson Reagan.

Nicely said "Dixon's being choreographed" by leaders of the larger and more affluent town who want the lion's share of whatever reflected glory is available.

100 horses die as deal falls through

MARLIN, Texas (AP) — Officials in Falls County said a "tragic situation" for horses and ranchers involved in a horse-trading scheme that fell through could end up costing the local economy millions of dollars.

At least 100 horses have died, and several ranchers say they are facing financial ruin because the hard winter freeze ruined grazing and a horse-trading company left them with thousands of horses they did not expect to have to feed.

"There are a bunch of us here who will be bankrupt," said rancher Louis Corpora, who said he invested $390,000 in the horses.

Prosecutors say a company called Horses Unlimited Inc. apparently reneged on promises to buy back horses sold to ranchers who were asked to pasture the animals, then sell them back to Horses Unlimited at a profit.

A grand jury is investigating the transactions. Don Walker, a quarterhorse breeder, said he was worried about the remaining horses and started a "Save the Horses" fund to raise money for feed. He had no figures on how much money has been raised.

"They started dying and nobody was doing anything," he said. "They're just dying all over. It looks like those film strips you see of Nazi concentration camps. It's just sickening."

Horses Unlimited brought 8,000 to 10,000 horses into the county since last summer, officials and ranchers estimate, but no one knows how many have died since the hard, Christmas-week freeze.

Numerous dead animals could be seen over the weekend in pastures around the county, and truck driver Mose Hill said he had hauled about 100 carcasses from the Falls County Livestock Auction in the past two weeks.

"It's just a real tragic situation for the horses and the investors," Falls County District Attorney Tom Sehon told the Dallas Times Herald. "We're looking at about a $2 million to $5 million loss to the Falls County economy, and that's a pretty serious to a ranching and farming economy like ours."

Seven Falls County ranchers filed a total of 12 felony theft complaints last week against the Horses Unlimited, Sehon said.

The firm was created last spring by Roland Jones Jr., who resigned last week as chairman of the Bosque County Bank in near Meridian, and R.D. "Big Shot" Plunkett, owner of a Marlin tack and veterinary store, Sehon said.

Plunkett told the Marlin Daily Democrat last week he was paying to feed some horses out of his own pocket, and Jones' attorney, Artie Giotos of Waco, said his client has done nothing wrong.

"Mr. Jones is innocent... and since there is a pending investigation, I think I shouldn't comment beyond that," he said.

Up in smoke

Calendar cheerfully helps smokers kick habit

Editor's note: "Heavy smoking kills live men and cures dead pigs." — 1984 Thanks for Not Smoking Calendar.

By MIKE COCHRAN
Associated Press Writer
FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) - If everything else fails, if you simply can not break the habit, you may want to run right out and buy a minor epic called the 1984 "Thanks for Not Smoking Calendar."

And then again, you may not. The calendar doesn't curb your craving for cigarettes, but it might help you quit with a smile. Or continue smoking with a frown.

It opens with this thought for January: "It's easy to quit smoking...all you need is determination, will power...and wet matches."

February: "Cigarette smoke kills germs...but it's so difficult to teach all those germs to smoke!"

What the calendar does is remind us daily that non-smokers look upon smokers with the same high regard as love bandits for herpes and the Redskins for the Cowboys.

August: "Kissing a smoker is like licking a dirty ashtray." June: "The best time to kiss a smoker is when you have the flu."

September: "Death is nature's way of telling you to quit smoking."

The "No Smoking Calendar" is the creation of Jim Browder & Associates, a Fort Worth advertising company known rather widely for such lofty literary endeavors as the Aggie Calendar and the Aggie Cookbook.

Browder, a former newsman, said irate smokers have not come pounding on his door or blown smoke in his face but that he is concerned about his calendar.

NON-SMOKER — This is a photo of the 1984 "Thanks For Not Smoking Calendar," a creation of Jim Browder and Associates in Fort Worth. The calendar opens with this thought for January: "It's easy to quit smoking...all you need is determination, will power...and wet matches."

"My wife says if I don't sell all those that I've had printed I'll have to roll 'em up and smoke 'em."

His calendar carries a $5.95 price tag and a cryptic message: "Warning: The Surgeon General has determined that waving this calendar in the face of a smoker could be dangerous to your health."

Each of the 12 calendar pages offers an advertisement for a different brand of cigarettes, such as Beige, "The Cigarette That Matches Your Teeth," and Silver: "Every Lung Needs a Silver Lining."

There's also Smoulder: "The Odor Lingers On and On," and C&W Lights, which promises "23 Percent Less Cancer." Surely headed for big things is Hump, the March brand with a picture of a deformed cow on the package and the notation: "I'm not a camel, I'm a cow with a tumor."

California's will love Smog, the filter kings that "Re-create Los Angeles in Your Own Living Room." And doctors can identify with Duck 100s, "Recommended by More Quacks Than Any Other Cigarette."

On the final page, the calendar contains ample space for recording "important phone numbers" for smokers:

"Fire Department, Emphysema Clinic, Chest X-Ray, Acme Oxygen, Furnigator, Burn Center, Upholstery Repair, American Cancer Society, American Heart Association and American Lung Association."

The 1984 epic also provides us with a common but previously anonymous quotation. "I wish I could stop smoking." — Joan of Arc.

Hometown

town is dying and some are convinced a visit by Reagan could help stall — if not reverse — the process. The town reached its peak around the turn of the century, when it was the flouring headquarters for construction of a now-defunct canal.

"I don't think we're dead yet because Reagan is alive. A visit by him would give us credibility. It would be like a shot of insulin for a diabetic that lasts years," said Nicely.

Reagan's birthplace is historically more significant than his boyhood home in Dixon, Nicely said.

"But Tampico is not a period of time he (Reagan) can remember fondly; he was too young," he conceded. "His memories are of high school and after."

He fears history may relegate Tampico to a footnote, if that.

Still, few in Tampico hold the president solely responsible for the perceived slight.

"I don't know as we can blame it all on him. There are a lot of people running his schedule," said Nicely's wife, Helen.

Reagan visited Tampico during his losing bid for the 1976

Republican presidential nomination. He also was grand marshal of the 1950 cheese festival, which was replaced by the high school homecoming festivities after the town's creamery folded.

Most recently, in the 1980 campaign, Reagan came as close as the Rock Falls airport 10 miles northeast. Many Tampico residents saw him then.

Virgil McKenna, 61, who remembers Reagan as a lifeguard on the Rock River, recently reminded friends at the Good Times Tap across the street from Reagan's old home: "He said '76 he'll be back. He'll be back."

predicted before the announcement that Meese would be approved by the GOP-controlled Senate.

"With the makeup of this Senate," Leahy said, "they would confirm Attila the Hun as surgeon general."

And Sen. Joseph R. Biden Jr., D-Del., also a committee member, said he was concerned "whether Meese will be what (James) Watt was to the Department of Interior — that he is so controversial that he won't be able to perform well."

The committee's chairman, Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., said he would schedule hearings on the nomination as soon as it is received from the White House, probably within the next two weeks.

Thurmond said Meese "is an able man, a dedicated person. He has been a prosecutor and is very strong for law and order. He would make an excellent attorney general."

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., told reporters "there's no question that as attorney general, Meese would portray the philosophy of the president. I think the philosophy is bad, to be perfectly truthful."

Smith had told Reagan of his decision to resign in a private session Wednesday.

Town evacuated over bomb scare

POINT COMFORT, Texas (A) — Investigators failed to find the explosives an extortionist threatened to detonate at a chemical plant, but about three-fourths of this small coastal community's 1,125 residents were evacuated anyway as the bomb deadline neared.

A note received by the Formosa Plastics Corp. last week demanded that an undisclosed amount of money be placed in a park in nearby Port Lavaca or the plant would be blown up at 3:30 p.m. Sunday.

At 2 p.m., radio and television stations broadcast a message from Point Comfort Mayor Trinidad Rocha, who told residents that no bomb had been found, but that they could evacuate to Travis Middle School in Port Lavaca "as a precaution."

Rocha told the Victoria Advocate that about 75 percent of the town's 1,125 residents left.

Between 3 and 4 p.m., police set up roadblocks on highways leading into the town.

Point Comfort police chief Tommy Ochoa said investigators inspected the plant Wednesday morning after the note was received and interviewed employees. He said plant workers have been searched daily as they arrived and left the plant.

Ochoa said the FBI and Texas Rangers had joined in the investigation.

Despite continual searches, no bomb was found and no other notes were received.

The plant manufactures polyvinyl chloride resin used in the production of phonograph records, bottles and pipes.

Law enforcement officials said they feared that an explosion and fire at the facility could produce phosgene gas, similar to the nerve gas used in World War I.

Company officials said employees on duty Sunday remained at the plant, but were told they could go to a protected area at the front of the building while volunteers were asked to stay in control rooms.

"About 39 people stayed," said Jack Wu, a plant spokesman, "though some came to the front during the critical hour."

Officials say prison finances out of control

HOUSTON (AP) — The Texas prison system has grown so rapidly that administrators do not have the expertise to control the $320 million-a-year operation and recent reports of mismanagement are "just the tip of the iceberg," state officials say.

As the inmate population doubled in the past decade to more than 36,000 prisoners, administrators of the Texas Department of Corrections may have concentrated on managing convicts instead of business affairs.

Now, state officials say, evidence indicates poor management of resources.

Officials said they do not suspect any criminal wrongdoing, but agreed that the administration has shown its lack of management background.

"I think they got so big, so quickly, they just got sloppy," State Sen. Ken Caperton, D-Bryan, told the Houston Post in a story published Sunday.

"I do think there has been some poor money management that apparently the state auditors did not catch. But that doesn't equate to wrongdoing. And the last thing that we need to do to our TDC people, who have a hard enough job as it is, is to form some lynch mob that pre-judges those people," Caperton said.

One state official, who asked not to be identified, said reports of mismanagement were "just the tip of the iceberg, not the iceberg."

Fiscally, "that place stinks over there," the official said.

Grandson breaks tradition

LONDON — Randolph Churchill, the great-grandson of wartime leader Winston Churchill, is in the navy now — the Royal Navy, breaking a family army tradition dating back to the 17th century.

Before entering politics in 1800, Randolph's great-grandfather served as an army officer on India's northwest frontier and at the Battle of Omdurman in the Sudan in 1898. In 1911, he was appointed First Lord of the Admiralty but never served as a uniformed officer with the navy.

"I wasn't under any pressure from my family to join the army, in spite of the long tradition," midshipman Churchill, 18, said before the HMS Torquay set out from Portsmouth on England's south coast. "In fact, my family encouraged me to be the first Churchill to join the navy."

As one of some 200 officers aboard the vessel for training in the Caribbean the next two months, he'll study navigation, but he also said he'll be taking his turn swabbing the decks.

A Churchill ancestor, John Churchill, was one of the greatest military commanders in history and was created the first Duke of Marlborough. That Churchill joined the British army in 1667.

Whitmire meets Blackwell

HOUSTON — Mayor Kathy Whitmire "just decided not to wear" her trademark business suit and bows when she met Mr. Blackwell, the Hollywood fashion designer who a year ago put her on his list of the 10 worst-dressed women.

Sporting a black cocktail dress Sunday night at a $250-a-plate fundraiser for cancer research, Mrs. Whitmire got the designer's promise "to make me a suit and send it to me." And even a compliment. "She's looking so good now," Mr. Blackwell said.

KATHY WHITMIRE

He put Mrs. Whitmire on his worst dressed list in 1983, but she was bumped this year by Boy George, the heavily made-up male leader of the rock band Culture Club.

Her Honor has not changed her curly hairdo or traded in her large glasses — which helped her tie for 10th place on last year's list with actor Dustin Hoffman in drag in his title role in the movie "Tootsie."

Mrs. Whitmire says she has only one regret about the publicity: "I still haven't gotten Dustin Hoffman here for a fundraiser."

Governor wins big money

MONTE CARLO — Louisiana Gov.-elect Edwin Edwards says he just "hit a lucky streak."

His good fortune was worth $15,000 — the amount he collected with a win at the craps table at the Monte Carlo Casino.

And the money will come in handy, since Edwards was in the pish principality Sunday night on a fundraising tour to help wipe out a $4.2 million debt from his $13 million election campaign.

He is leading 600 supporters on a swing through France, Belgium and Monaco — with profit from the $10,000-a-head tab going to the debt.

Ball, Berle receive honors

SANTA MONICA, Calif. — "We Love Lucy" said TV industry representatives as actress Lucille Ball was formally proclaimed "the first lady of television comedy" and Milton Berle was honored as "Mr. Television" for helping get TV started.

Miss Ball, 72, famous for her long-running "I Love Lucy" programs and Berle, 75, were among seven television pioneers inducted into the new TV Academy Hall of Fame at a black-tie affair attended by 1,400 people at the Santa Monica Civic Auditorium Saturday.

Also honored were CBS founder William S. Paley, producer Norman Lear, and the late RCA Corp. founder David Sarnoff, newsman Edward R. Murrow and writer Paddy Chayefsky.

The event, featuring Carol Burnett and Steve Allen recreating sketches by Miss Ball and Berle, will be broadcast on NBC March 4.

Stars rock Shubert Theater

NEW HAVEN, Conn. — The stars, including dancer-actress Gwen Verdon, again rattled the boards at the Shubert Theater, the out-of-town birthplace for such Broadway hits as "Oklahoma" and "My Fair Lady."

Opening the refurbished showplace after a seven-year interruption, Miss Verdon, 59, and other performers including Tom Bosley and Richard Kiley put on a song-and-dance program Saturday night.

Miss Verdon, a four-time Tony winner, remembered how she was about to make a grand entrance in "New Girl in Town" at the Shubert in 1957, "when someone plugged in an iron at the Taft Hotel (an adjoining building) and the lights went out ..."

Rebel positions bombed

SAN SALVADOR — Armed forces planes bombed suspected rebel positions in an eastern province where the government is beginning a new counterinsurgency drive, civilian sources say.

The sources said government planes blasted targets Sunday in the city of Jucuaran, 78 miles southeast of this capital city.

Jucuaran is in Usulután province, where the army began a counterinsurgency program Friday through which it hopes to dislodge rebels from the region and then encourage farmers to return to the land.

The plan is patterned after the pacification program used by the United States in Vietnam.

The civilian sources, who requested anonymity for fear of reprisals, said they did not know if there were any casualties in the attack.

Usulután, along with the other eastern provinces of San Miguel, Morazan and La Unión, remained without electricity throughout the weekend as a result of rebel sabotage Saturday. About 1.3 million people in the eastern half of the country were affected by the black-out.

The sabotage appeared to be an attempt to thwart the pacification operation. Usulután is the second phase of the program, begun in June in San Vicente province, which borders Usulután on the west.

Civilian sources said five soldiers were killed and 19 wounded in fighting Sunday at Tres Calles, another Usulután town.

Walesa meets with Glomp

GDANSK — Lech Walesa met with Cardinal Jozef Glomp, Poland's Roman Catholic primate, for the first time in 10 months and then heard the cleric celebrate Mass for some 10,000 worshippers who flashed Solidarity's V-for-victory sign.

Glomp had conferred with John Paul II, the Polish-born pope, at the Vatican last week. The cardinal refused to say what he and Walesa discussed in their 20 minute-meeting Sunday.

After leaving the chancery of St. Mary's, a 13th-century cathedral in the Baltic port of Gdansk, Walesa told reporters waiting outside in the snow flurries, that he and Glomp had met. But asked what the men had talked about, Walesa replied, "Don't ask me questions like that."

Since his last meeting with Glomp in the spring, Walesa was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize for his work in leading the now-outlawed Solidarity labor federation, the only independent trade union in the Soviet bloc.

As Walesa left the cathedral, some 300 Solidarity backers surged around him. They shouted "Lech!" "Solidarity" and "Down with the Rises!" in reference to government increases in food prices of about 10 percent which are to begin Jan. 30.

Price hikes sparked bloody riots in Gdansk in 1970 and 1976 and led to the strikes which spawned Solidarity in August 1980.

As Walesa pushed through the crowd, he raised his hand in the victory sign. The demonstrators then went home peacefully, and police did not interfere.

The Communist government considers Walesa a subversive. Glomp has given tacit support to the labor leader's outspoken defense of free trade unions and political prisoners.

Glomp took care to avoid being photographed with Walesa, possibly so the primate would not antagonize the government of Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, with whom he met for five hours on Jan. 6. Poland is predominantly Roman Catholic.

Earthquake hits California

MONTEREY, Calif. — A strong earthquake that felt like an explosion to some people and a roller to others triggered burglar alarms in King City and rattled homes along 200 miles of California coastline.

Officials said Sunday night's quake, which registered 5.25 on the Richter scale, and two strong aftershocks caused no damage or injuries. But hundreds of people from San Francisco to San Luis Obispo called police, radio stations and newspapers to report they felt it.

The first and strongest of the shakes, which had an epicenter 12 miles southeast of Monterey, struck at 9:40 p.m., according to Patty Murtha of the University of California Seismographic Station in Berkeley.

The first aftershock, which had a preliminary reading of 4.0, hit nine minutes later, Ms. Murtha said, and a second aftershock of the same magnitude came about 11:10 p.m.

She said it hadn't been determined which fault line the quakes were on, but she didn't believe it was on the San Andreas Fault.

"We're not aware of any damage," said Clyde Campbell of the state Office of Emergency Services in Sacramento. "But lots of people felt it."

Campbell said he had no reports of any damage in Coalinga, which was devastated by a 6.7 quake on May 2, 1983. Coalinga is about 75 miles east of the epicenter of Sunday's quake.

The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion as recorded on seismographs. Every increase of one number means a tenfold increase in magnitude. Thus a reading of 6.0 reflects an earthquake with ground motion 10 times as intense as one of 5.0.

An earthquake of magnitude 5 on the Richter scale is considered capable of causing considerable damage. The San Francisco earthquake of 1906, which occurred before the Richter scale was devised, has been estimated at 8.3 on the Richter scale.

Shultz breaks ice with USSR

WASHINGTON (AP) Secretary of State George P. Shultz says the United States and the Soviet Union are talking informally about arms control and could soon be negotiating face-to-face over reduction of conventional forces.

"We have pretty good discussions going on now on the hot line," Shultz said Sunday without pinpointing the subjects. "That's a form of arms agreement."

Shultz also said the United States is agreeable to a Soviet proposal that the estranged superpowers resume their suspended talks aimed at reducing the level of conventional military forces in Eastern and Western Europe.

And Shultz said rising terrorism in the Middle East is "increasingly originating in Iran ... with the acquiescence of Syria." He named Iran, Syria, the Soviet Union and Libya as nations that have encouraged and aided terrorist groups as part of their strategy for gaining influence in the Middle East.

The secretary said on ABC-TV's "This Week with David Brinkley," that the Soviets have suggested resumption of the negotiations on March 16 in Vienna.

Shultz offered no similar hope regarding the stalled talks over strategic and intermediate nuclear weapons, but he said Americans should "take heart" because the Reagan administration's military buildup has lessened the threat of nuclear war.

However, Shultz also moved away from the long-standing administration scenario that placement of U.S. cruise and Pershing 2 missiles in Western Europe would pressure the Soviets into serious talks about limiting the spread of intermediate-range nuclear devices.

"I don't know whether they'll come back or not," he said. "That's something they have to determine. ... Our position is to be realistic about what they are doing, to be strong in our own capabilities and to be ready to engage in reasonable negotiation."

Asked to characterize U.S.-Soviet relations, he replied: "There are some positive things. There are some negative things. It's kind of a mixed picture."

Nevertheless, Shultz said, "the American people should take heart" because a stronger United States is in a better negotiating position.

King drops price hike plans

RABAT, Morocco — King Hassan II has canceled a government plan to raise food prices after bloody protest riots erupted in the northern region along Morocco's Mediterranean coast.

There was no government announcement on casualties, but Spanish news reports Sunday said as many as 200 people may have been killed in the unrest last week.

Hassan, in a speech broadcast over national television and radio, referred to an earlier announcement that planned price increases for food and other commodities would not affect the poorest sectors of the population.

"I ordered an inquiry to determine how many people would be exempt from the increases. When I saw the results, I decided there would be no increases in basic foodstuffs," the king said.

Tunisia's President Habib Bourguiba took a similar step earlier this month in rescinding government-ordered food price increases after more than 80 protesters were killed in riots.

Hassan said he had ordered a freeze on prices of essential food — presumably bread, cooking oil and sugar — because he found that too many Moroccans were unable to afford them. He did not refer to strong pressure from the World Bank for the government to abandon its program of food subsidies, nor indicate how long the freeze would remain in force.

The riots also were believed fueled by rumored increases in tuition fees. The government denied such increases were planned.

Hassan said the riots were caused by a coincidental overlap of interests of communists, Israelis and Iranians, who he said sought to disrupt the Islamic summit conference in Casablanca.

The three-day summit ended Thursday with an invitation to Egypt to rejoin the 45-nation Islamic movement which expelled it four years ago for making peace with Israel. Syria, Libya and other militant Arab nations bitterly opposed the move and Iran boycotted the meeting altogether.

Three groups tried separately to disrupt the summit, Hassan said:

— "The Marxist-Leninist Communists who wanted to prevent the Afghan freedom fighters from speaking of their successes against the (Soviet) invaders, and wanted to prevent the summit from expressing its solidarity with Bangladesh and Pakistan who recently had to suppress similar riots."

— "The Zionist Secret Service, whose intelligence and effectiveness are well known," was determined to prevent any move to bring back Egypt into the Islamic fold, Hassan said, because this would "greatly strengthen the basic Islamic position against Israel."

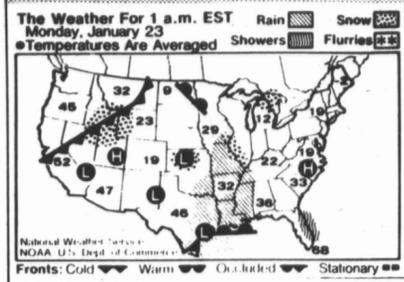

— Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini and his supporters in Iran, who seek to spread "evil and godless revolution" throughout the Islamic world.

Hassan read excerpts from what he said were pro-Communist and pro-Iranian pamphlets distributed in Morocco — including one which declared "Hassan is a murderer." He claimed these had sparked the rioting.

Weather

By the Associated Press
West Texas — Mostly fair through Tuesday. Lows 15 Panhandle to 25 south and 35 Big Bend valleys. Highs Tuesday 45 Panhandle to 55 most sections and 65 Big Bend valleys.

Warming trend predicted

Rain, drizzle and fog covered wide sections of Texas before dawn today, but forecasters expected a clearing trend to herald the return of sunny skies and warmer temperatures.

Skies were clearing over West Texas, while wet conditions prevailed over the rest of the state. Travel advisories were posted for sections of North Central Texas because of the combination of drizzle and fog.

Light rain and drizzle were noted across much of East and Central Texas, while a few isolated thunderstorms roamed southeastern sections. Light fog also developed over the coastal waters, the Lower Rio Grande Valley and the Hill Country.

Pre-dawn temperatures were mostly in the 30s and 40s, although the mercury dipped into the teens in the Panhandle. Readings at 4 a.m. ranged from 14 at Amarillo to 56 at Galveston.

Winds were generally light and variable in direction.

The forecast called for decreasing cloudiness moving eastward across the state through tonight. Most of the rain was expected to end by early Tuesday. A warming trend was in store for Texas, with afternoon highs reaching the 40s and 50s.

The nation got relief today from an air mass so cold that Maryland firefighters thought "it was nice" near a house fire, but a new winter headache developed with freezing rain that slicked highways from Dallas to Chicago.

At least 43 deaths in 14 states were blamed on the weather as the Canadian-born cold wave moved slowly from the Rockies to the Atlantic coast last week and drifted off to sea Sunday. In its wake it left at least 100 record low temperatures.

The victims included nine people on a Montana school bus who died in a collision with a truck, and a New York State man who police said froze to death when he was locked outside a friend's residence overnight while intoxicated.

Temperatures in the Northeast were 20 to 40 degrees warmer this morning than they had been Sunday morning. Washington hit minus 18 Sunday morning but was at 20 degrees today. In Concord, N.H., it went from minus 33 Sunday to minus 4 today.

As the temperature in Idaho rose to 20 degrees Sunday, ice on the choked Salmon and Lemhi rivers began breaking up and rescue workers said residents of 127 evacuated homes could begin returning as floodwaters that reached 6 feet began to subside.

But in the South and East, even a rapid rise in temperatures that had fallen Sunday to between zero and 10 degrees in Alabama and Mississippi offered little to cheer about as a moist air flow from the Gulf of Mexico turned to freezing rain early today.

Numerous traffic accidents were reported and some roads were closed around Kansas City, Mo., early today, and travelers' advisories warned of treacherous morning driving conditions in north central Texas, Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma, Iowa, western Tennessee and western Kentucky. Light snow fell over Illinois, prompting warnings to motorists there.

The air felt warmer Sunday in many places, but only in comparison to Saturday when 50 cities had record lows. More than two dozen low-temperature records were broken Friday and again early Sunday.

One of 50 firefighters battling a blaze early Sunday at a vacant house in Carroll County, Maryland, suffered frostbite, said Gamber Community Fire Co. Chief John Warner.

"Someone said it was minus seven" when fire units arrived, Warner said. "While the fire was burning it was nice. While (the cleanup) dragged on, the firefighters took the cold."

Puzzle palaces of the Potomac

It's all been "an unbelievable nightmare," according to Rita Lavelle.

The former Environmental Protection Agency bureaucrat was found guilty of perjuring herself while testifying before Congress. She was sentenced to prison for six months and fined $10,000.

She was convicted on four felony counts of perjury and impeding the investigation into a toxic waste enforcement case against Aerojet General, her former employer in California.

Lavelle's nightmare really started when she was appointed to handle the environmental agency's $1.6 billion "superfund" — which provided money for grants to finance the cleanup of toxic waste dumps.

It was big job even for Washington, obviously too big for Lavelle. She had no background for it. Her only background for it was as a minor functionary for the Reagan administration when Mr. Reagan was governor of California.

Rita Lavelle let her Washington job go to her head. She saw herself as a powerful figure. She was fawned upon by lobbyists. She was in an exalted position, and she lost her perspective.

That happens when people in important roles start believing what they hear from those who flatter them to gain favors.

Lavelle was fired from her job a year ago. Her leaving triggered several congressional investigations of the environmental agency. Eventually, more than 20 top officials left the agency. However, Lavelle was the only one who was tried.

Her story is a sad one. But it isn't the first story of a bureaucrat who has fallen from grace amid what Ronald Reagan used to call "the puzzle palaces of the Potomac." And it will not be the last.

The private war of Imelda Marcos

WASHINGTON — A strange and ironic feud has erupted in Manila, between the Philippines first lady and the American ambassador.

The irony lies in the fact that recently, Ambassador Michael Armacost was widely regarded as one of the few friends of ailing President Ferdinand Marcos' beleaguered regime. The ambitious first lady, Imelda Marcos, continues to play a powerful role in her husband's government. Now she apparently feels that, with friends like Armacost, who needs enemies?

For his part, the ambassador is trying to put some distance between the Reagan administration and the Marcos dictatorship, which many Filipinos hold responsible for the assassination of opposition leader Benigno Aquino last August. The U.S. aim is to hedge against the day when Marcos dies or is forced out.

In angry retaliation, Mrs. Marcos has engaged in guerrilla warfare against Armacost, inspiring articles in the government-controlled press to the effect that the ambassador is "interfering" in the internal affairs of the Philippines.

A State Department source told my associate Lucette Lagnado about a strange report that Mrs. Marcos accused Armacost of saying that her husband had resigned. This was regarded as an attempt to damage the ambassador's credibility in both Washington and Manila.

Armacost has returned the fire. In a speech to the Rotary Club of Makati, the financial suburb of Manila, Armacost dwelt at length on the "brutal political assassination" of Aquino. He noted pointedly that Aquino had articulated "political beliefs most Americans share — a belief in a free press, in free elections, in due process of law." As his listeners well knew, Marcos tolerates none of these.

The ambassador also warned that failure to conduct a thorough, honest investigation of Aquino's murder would "inevitably complicate" U.S.-Philippines relations.

In another speech, to the Manila Overseas Press Club, Armacost sarcastically brushed aside suggestions in the Philippine press that American media criticism of Marcos played an important role in the refusal of international banks to renew credit to the Philippines.

"As a group," Armacost observed, "bankers do not tend to make their decisions simply on the basis of news and media reports."

CITIZENS' WATCH: Of all the complaints that flood into my office from my citizens' network, probably the most frequent have to do with lawyers.

From Oklahoma City, Earl David Shaffer writes: "A housecleaning of our court system is long overdue. American citizens are victimized by crooked lawyers who take advantage of their legal training to escape punishment."

From Seattle, Eric Peterson demands: "Have you ever tried to file a grievance against an attorney? Forget it. The grievance committee will be made up of lawyers, who are more inclined to protect fellow lawyers than wronged clients. So what is left for you to do? File a malpractice suit? Forget it. The judges are also attorneys."

From San Diego, a private detective, who requests that his name be withheld, reports: "California has been hit with an epidemic of lawsuits filed by ambulance-chasing lawyers who solicit business and offer to take their fees out of the judgments. The lawyers have little to lose: just the time it takes them to prepare the paperwork. But the victims are put through the anguish and expense of a costly legal defense. If the lawyers lose the gamble, they can write it off. The cost was nominal. But the victims are out thousands of dollars and many sleepless nights."

From Long Island, Joel Cohen writes: "There is a new breed of vultures preying upon the American public. They're the attorneys who con their clients into believing they can get something for nothing by filing claims against doctors, hospitals, corporations, etc. Don't they know that the cost of defending and settling these lawsuits is passed on to the public? High-premium malpractice insurance has become part of every doctor's basic overhead. No wonder doctor bills are so high. Just about everyone doing business must retain a stable of lawyers. No wonder prices keep soaring. Litigation is one of the principal causes of inflation in this country."

From a suburb of Atlanta, J.M. Hall contends: "Lawyers and judges will never clean up their own profession. You simply can't count on lawyers to discipline themselves. It will take legislation, a legal code of conduct, to bring lawyering under control in America."

Footnote: Citizens across the country are helping to make democracy work by keeping a watch on waste and wrongdoing. For more information, write me at P.O. Box 2300, Washington, D.C. 20013.

POLITICAL POTPOURRI: After three months of campaigning, former Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., is still hopeful, in a modest way. "Any man running for the presidency always has at least a hope that he can win, that lightning can strike," he said. McGovern thinks the Iowa caucus will be his lightning rod.

Democratic National Chairman Charles Manatt waxed nostalgic at a recent fund-raiser and recalled the last time he was in the particular hotel room: "a gathering of Youth for Johnson and Humphrey in 1965." He added: "May we do as well this time as we did then" — evidently forgetting that the election was actually in 1964.

Around The Rim

By BOB CARPENTER

Write hard work

Writing is frustrating work. Actually, it's not the writing that's so bad, but the process of settling down to the task that's tough.

Writers by nature are procrastinators. To avoid writing, we can sit around and look up interesting words in the dictionary like empyrean and empyrean, and then look up synonyms for them in the thesaurus. We can also repair our typewriters and take the roller off and see if it will double as a rolling pin. Or, we can roll a piece of paper up and down in the typewriter to see if the friction will set the paper on fire.

Of course, this list doesn't even include important extracurricular writing activities like dusting baseboards, checking the mailbox 12 times to see if perhaps we missed a letter wedged in the corner, or pasting in those accumulated Green Stamps.

However, when we've exhausted all of the mandatory details above and really set down to write, we don't want to be disturbed. But we're never that lucky because of two recurring problems. One, writing is one of the easiest tasks to interrupt and two, no one, except a writer, thinks of writing as real work.

Friends ring a writer on the phone and say, "Am I interrupting anything?" and when the writer replies, "Well, I was writing..." the friend will invariably say, "Oh, well then you've got time to talk."

Or if the writer works in an office, he probably will be delayed many times before he finishes his work. For example, if a writer is sitting at his desk staring into space, he is automatically thought to be idle and fair game for questions or conversations.

Right when one is about to form the perfect sentence, Hemingway searched his life for, a non-writer will launch a questions like "Does disco music cause cancer in mice?" at the writer and the perfect sentence will vanish. It's enough to make a writer want to stab the interrupter in the heart with an eraser pencil, or at least torture the bothersome person by ramming his little finger into an automatic pencil sharpener.

Setting words to paper is never easy for most writers and the job requires time to concentrate on and capture all those thoughts zigging and zagging around in one's mind. Capturing those thoughts and putting them in a coherent, meaningful order is a difficult, but satisfying, job. One really comes to know him or herself by forcing the soul out on paper.

But this is a private exercise and is accomplished only by focusing all the body's energy on writing.

So the next time you see a writer gazing peacefully into space, or meticulously adjusting the tabs on his typewriter, please leave him alone — he's hard at work.

Opinions expressed in this column are those of the staff writer and do not necessarily reflect the views of the newspaper's management.

Medicare's luxury of no progress

While everyone has been sighing with relief at last year's "rescue" of the Social Security retirement fund, another trust fund is sinking. The Medicare program is expected to run out of money by 1988. By 1995, it will compile a deficit of some $400 billion. In an area where the choices are divided into those that are painful and those that are useless, the Reagan administration has decided on the former.

Medicare suffers partly from the same misfortune that plagues Social Security — the growing number of old people whom it must support. But its deeper problem comes from the rising cost of medical care, which has defied the deflation of the last three years. Medicare's costs have been rising at a rate of 18 percent a year, and the Congressional Budget Office expects the annual increase to average 13 percent between now and 1995. If the crunch is to be averted, those costs have to be cut.

There are really only two ways to go about that. The first is decrees from the top down — trying to control the prices charged by doctors and hospitals, as we used to control those charged by gas stations. The second is pressure from the bottom up — discouraging patients and doctors from overuse of health care. The first is attractive for the painless results it promises, but likely to fail. The second is unappealing because it requires sick people to make some sacrifices, but sure to work.

The administration's plan embodies the second approach, which is why it got nowhere when it was first proposed a year ago. Medicare now pays almost all the hospital costs of the moderately ill patient, while exposing the seriously ill to vast medical expenses. The administration plan would make it a program of catastrophic protection, with less (though still substantial) help for victims of less critical ailments.

As it is, a Medicare patient who checks into a hospital pays a set fee of $356, called a deductible, for the first day's care. For the next 60 days, however, the patient pays nothing. Not until the 61st day does he or she become liable for a share of the expenses — one-fourth of the deductible, rising to half after 90 days and 100 percent after 150 days. The Reagan plan requires the patient to pay 8 percent of the deductible for each day after the first and 5 percent after the 15th. After 60 days, the government would pay all expenses.

The measure would dramatically reduce the cost of a long hospital stay. A 150-day visit would cost a patient more than $13,000 under the current law, and less than $1,600 under the revision. But the average patient will pay more. A typical hospital stay of 11 days would cost the patient $285 more under the administration proposal.

Unfortunately, that is the only way to encourage doctors and patients to find cheaper ways to treat health problems. A doctor who knows his patient is liable for a portion of his medical costs is more likely to guard against keeping him in the hospital too long. A patient who knows he has to pay something may insist that his physician find the least expensive way to cure him. The one certain result of shifting some of the cost of health care to patients is that patients will demand less of it.

Medicare thus would save both in the direct costs shifted to patients, and in the cost of shorter and fewer hospital visits. Since it pays a large share of the nation's medical bill, the change may also induce broader efforts to reduce health care costs.

This sort of cost-sharing makes sense, since most old people are not poor and can pay part of their way. Those who are poor are protected, since they can qualify for Medicaid. Granted, that means higher Medicaid costs, but it's a winning trade. When the CBO examined a plan similar to the Reagan one, it found that for every extra dollar Medicaid would spend on poor elderly people, Medicare would save $20.

Of course there are other measures that would impose needed discipline on the private health insurers to bid for a share of the Medicare market, promoting the use of cheaper alternatives like home care in government-financed programs.

But any solution to the Medicare crisis has to begin with something like the administration's proposal. The only alternative is making the burdensome payroll tax even heavier.

Today in History

By The Associated Press Today is Monday, Jan. 23, the 23rd day of 1984. There are 343 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On Jan. 23, 1968, North Korea seized the U.S. Navy ship Pueblo, holding its 83 crewmen as spies.

On this date: In 1845, Congress decided that all national elections would be held on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November.

In 1932, New York Gov. Franklin Roosevelt announced his candidacy for the Democratic presidential nomination.

In 1964, the 24th Amendment to the Constitution was ratified, eliminating the poll tax in federal elections.

And in 1973, President Richard Nixon announced that an accord had been reached to end the Vietnam War.

Ten years ago: President Nixon asked for greater taxation of oil companies' foreign profits, and proposed a two-year freeze on auto emissions standards.

Five years ago: In his State of the Union address, President Jimmy Carter asked Congress to help build "a new foundation" for the future by controlling inflation and strengthening peace through a new strategic arms accord with the Soviets.

Charles Weeg named outstanding employee

Charles A. Weeg, Hall-Bennett Memorial Hospital administrator, recently was named Outstanding Employee for the First Quarter of 1984 by the Hall-Bennett staff.

"Because of the nature of the business we run, a hospital administrator should never be surprised at what happens, but this award comes as a complete surprise to me. I am most grateful for the recognition. I have always been blessed with a most loyal and efficient staff," he said.

Weeg, a native Big Springer, chose to go into hospital administration after graduating from University of Texas with a BBA degree. After receiving his training at Brackenridge Hospital in Austin, Weeg joined the staff of Hall-Bennett Memorial Hospital. Weeg has held the position as hospital administrator since July 1981.

Weeg has served as president of the Big Spring Rotary Club, Texas Association of Hospital Accountants, and Howard County Council on Aging. He helped establish a

Dr. Donohue

Congestive heart failure

Dear Dr. Donohue: I read you daily and would like to have you publish something about congestive heart failure. Thanks in advance. — Mrs. E.M.

You want a nutshell discussion of a very vast topic, but that's all right.

We've all got a pretty clear idea of what heart failure is; the heart is failing as a pump. It's the "congestive" part of the term that throws us for a loop. But all it means is that as a result of the pump failure blood backs up in the vessels, forcing the fluid part out into the lungs to cause breathlessness, also out under the skin to cause swelling, especially in the legs. It's not hard to understand why there would be trouble breathing when the lungs are filled with fluid. It's the same thing that happens in drowning. And I'm sure you are familiar with the swollen ankles and legs of people with heart failure. That's called edema.

The next question is, why does the heart fail? There are a number of reasons. A massive heart attack can destroy so much of the heart muscle that it loses its pumping force. Or a defective valve between chambers can lead to the failure. So can myocarditis — inflammation of heart muscle. Those are a few reasons.

To round out this discussion, let's turn to treatment, which as you might guess, is based on the cause. I can outline a few generalizations on treatments often used. Salt restriction is advised to lessen the fluid retained in the circulatory system. Diuretics are given for the same reason. And digitalis drugs, of which there are many kinds, help strengthen the pumping action of the heart alleviating the backup problem in the vessels.

That's congestive heart failure — in a nutshell.

Dear Dr. Donohue: My sister has systemic lupus erythematosus. To date, her doctor has not put her on steroids. Another patient of the same doctor is on steroids. Why not my sister? Are there times when it is not supposed to be used? — Miss R.R. (P.S. She has great faith in her doctor, but is confused because she had read about steroids, and is just curious.)

Mild cases of SLE can be treated without use of steroid drugs. In serious cases, as when certain organs are involved, the steroids are usually required. The milder cases can be controlled with the non-steroid anti-inflammation medicines, like aspirin or the newer aspirin-like drugs. SLE (for other readers) is a disease of the body's connective tissue, and it is believed to result from auto-immunity — the body attacking its own tissues. The goal of treatment is to control the resulting inflammation.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I was taking speed to lose weight. I stopped two weeks ago. I'm to have a physical in two weeks. How long does the drug stay in the body? — K.W.

Any trace of amphetamines should have disappeared a month after stopping.

Much heart trouble is preventable. Write to Dr. Donohue, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, IL 60611, for a copy of his booklet, "How to Take Care of Your Heart." Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 50 cents.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Dear Abby

Woman's treasure is couple's trash

DEAR ABBY: Bless your heart for repeating that column on what to give and what not to give older people for Christmas.

This year instead of getting perfumes, dusting powder and a lot of useless jewelry and trinkets for the house, I received tins of tuna, chicken, ham, packets of instant soup mixes, herbal tea, assorted cheese and fancy cookies for guests. What practical gifts!

Please run that column every year, Abby.

LOVE YOU IN BENTONVILLE, ARK.
DEAR LOVE: Thanks, but not everybody in Arkansas "loves" me. Witness this letter from Fayetteville.
DEAR ABBY: I wish to high heaven you would stop putting out that list of gift suggestions in which you recommend food for elderly people.

Ever since you put that out, we have gotten great heaps of food for Christmas, and we simply loathe it! Not only do we not need it, we can't eat half of it.

Last year we got enough cheese to keep all the mice in Christendom happy. I don't like cheese, and my husband can't tolerate dairy products of any kind.

We were given a whole smoked ham, which we gave away because neither of us can eat smoked meat, and what more, we don't care for it. We also got candy and fruitcakes — unwelcome gifts because they make us bulge in the wrong places. I could go on and on.

Abby, we do not need food. I love jewelry, perfume and nice things for the house and my husband loves records, books and camera equipment.

Now for heaven's sake, please stop recommending gifts for older people!

ELDERLY BUT NOT HUNGRY IN ARKANSAS

DEAR ABBY: I'll make this short and to the point. Last year I had a rather brief affair with my boss. (He's married, I'm not.)

I thought I was pregnant August, so I told him and he quickly gave me $300 for an abortion. Well, as it turned out, it was a false alarm, so I spent the $300 on clothes and never told him the abortion wasn't necessary.

He still thinks I had the abortion and my conscience is bothering me. I rationalize it in my own mind by telling myself that the scare was worth the $300.

What do you think?

GUILTY CONSCIENCE

DEAR GUILTY: Scare up $300, give it to your boss and tell him the truth.

Mrs. Cobean presents program at meeting

Mrs. John Cobean gave a program about "Heraldry" at a meeting of the Richard Hubbell Chapter of the Colonial Dames of the 17th Century at Canterbury, Jan. 14.

Heraldry is a term given to the duties and functions of a herald during the middle ages. The program was restricted to armorial bearings. The practice of carrying personal devices on the shield and banner began during the feudal times when it was necessary for a knight to be recognized at a distance. King Edward the 4th established the Herald's College.

During the meeting, Mrs. Bob Wren was appointed

Veterans Administration Volunteer Services representative for the chapter.

Country life popular in Evergreen

EVERGREEN, Texas (AP) — Before blacktop roads snaked their way through these woods, it was a two-day ride to the closest big town, Huntsville. Like a scene from a Western movie, local lawmen would handcuff their prisoners to trees while they slept under the stars on their overnight journey to jail.

This is still the country known by the city slickers as "the sticks." But only 60 miles from bustling Houston, Evergreen and other small communities sprinkled throughout San Jacinto County are now into a second childhood.

For the first time in 100 years, people are moving here for relatively low taxes, clean air, elbow room and Lake Livingston.

"People come in this store nearly every day asking if we know where there's any land for sale," said Doug Cox, a Houston firefighter who helps out at Everitt's Evergreen Grocery on his days off.

Cox, 43, was born, reared and married in Evergreen. Although he works for the City of Houston, when his 24-hour shift is over he can't wait to head home, where the living is "nice and easy," he said.

"Some of the older folks don't like to see the subdivisions coming in, but there's nothing they can do about it," Cox said. "I don't have anything against them. The people are real neighbors. But well, I thought I was going to be away from everybody."

With Interstate 45 to the west and U.S. Highway 59 and Lake Livingston on the east, however, it suddenly became easy for everybody to find Cox's hometown hideout.

The Evergreen Grocery, owned by Cox's sister, Falvey Everitt, and her husband, is one of several roadside general stores on Texas Highway 150 between New Waverly and Coldspring. Except for homemade signs for yard eggs posted on trees, the stores are the only sign of commerce.

Most places have a gas pump outside, a friendly face behind the counter inside and cold drinks and hot sandwiches for hungry people who find themselves so many miles from McDonaldland.

Evergreen proper is just east of Pumpkin, an offset four-cornered intersection marked by the only traffic signal for 15 miles — a flashing yellow light. There are nearly as many churches as houses, and on Sunday they draw people from the surrounding forest for sermons, songs and socials.

The churches arrived with three of the first permanent settlers. The brothers Godfrey, Samuel and Phillip Ellisor, all Methodist ministers, led several congregations after their arrival in 1850 and in later years donated land for churches of other denominations.

A scrapbook history of the Ellisors' journey from South Carolina to the promised land between the Trinity and San Jacinto rivers and of their descendants can be found in Evelyn's Grocery. It is on the west side of "town."

The owner, Evelyn Ellisor Niederhofer, 57, has devoted 30 years of filling in the holes of her family tree with names and personalities. The best-known branch on her chart is for Houston Mayor Kathy Whitmire. But Mrs. Niederhofer's obvious favorite relations are the three Ellisor brothers who came with family, friends and slaves to untamed Texas 130 years ago.

Evergreen is providing a haven for another man of the cloth, former Methodist lay minister Dearing Estes Jones of Conroe. Jones was convicted in 1982 of felony theft for defrauding two elderly sisters out of nearly $89,000 in a land-buying scheme. He is now on 10 years' probation and is paying restitution of $200 a month.

During his trial, Jones had the moral and financial support of the Interfaith Church in Evergreen, which sponsored barbecues to pay his attorney's fees. He continues to preach there every Sunday to a forgiving congregation that includes Mrs. Niederhofer.

"We can't believe he'd do something like that, and even if he did we couldn't just turn our backs on him," she said. "I would just die if anything happened to Brother Jones. He's as much a part of this church as the pulpit and songbooks are."

The church's history, however, dates well before Jones. Since it was organized in 1862, it has switched location and affiliation and now is recognized by the State of Texas as a historical site.

The church was barely 30 years old when John Jackson was born in Evergreen, the child of former slaves owned by one of the first ranchers there.

Jackson lives alone on his father's homestead, back off the main road. It's the type of isolated rural area that's last on the list to have electrical service restored after a disaster such as Hurricane Alicia.

But Jackson, 91, knows how to take care of himself. His parents, he said, were good teachers.

Cold cars stall thief

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — A 17-year-old boy was stopped cold in 17-below-zero temperatures when he tried to steal first one car, then four others, police say.

The boy walked into a service station on the city's east side Friday night and told the attendant he had come to pick up his father's car. The attendant told the boy to take the keys off a pegboard on the wall.

Police said the boy first tried the keys to a 1969 Pontiac, but it wouldn't start in the freezing weather. When the attendant had his back turned, he switched them for keys to a 1972 Rambler, but that wouldn't start either.

The same thing happened with a 1970 Cadillac, a 1980 Buick and a 1971 Hornet.

At that point, according to the police report, the attendant looked up and asked the boy what he was doing.

"Looking for any car that will start," the boy replied, according to police.

Joy makes computer resolution

By JOY CULWELL
Colorado City
Correspondent

Last Saturday I was in a Big Spring store with some friends when I stopped by a display of home computers and I thought, "I know I don't know anything about computers but there's nobody looking so I think I'll attempt to see if I can figure out how to use one. I typed in my name and it appeared on a screen above the computer. There it was "Joy Culwell" on the screen.

I started to walk away and then I remembered I didn't want to leave my name there so I turned around and tried to erase it. I didn't know how and was standing there with a puzzled look on my face when a handsome little boy walked up. He could tell I was trying to figure out the computer and he said, "May I help you?"

Well, I was surprised and turned to see him better. "I don't know how to erase my name," I said. He said, "I'll show you." And he did show me — everything — how to make hearts appear all the way across the bottom of the screen, how to make my name appear all the way from the top of the screen to the bottom and all kinds of good, fun things.

I never saw such a charming kid! He was all salesman, all charisma, all helpful. If only grown up salesmen would be that charming. I had fun playing with that computer through the eyes of my new friend. His name is Bryan Brown and he attends Moss Elementary School and is the son of Freddie and Judy Brown who live at 1304 Tucson in Big Spring. Bryan brought his mother to me to meet.

Isn't that something! If we adults want to know about computers we ask a child. They usually have one to play with. I remember when I taught my older neighbor to drive. I had grown up driving but she had a husband to drive her everywhere. Then he died. She had to learn a difficult job at 53. Now I'm 53 and I need to learn computers. Reckon I could get Bryan to come over and teach me a short course.

Well, Bryan I accept your challenge. In 1984 I will learn how to use a computer and I will not be scared of it. After all, I can read instructions and that's all there is to it — following instructions.

Doesn't the Bible say something about that "a little child shall lead them." I doubt if where the little child shall lead them was referring to computers, but if a child can learn it, I can too!

Raiders' 'orphans' take title from Washington

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — With poise and precision, never rattled and always ready, the Los Angeles Raiders are National Football League champions again, one-sided winners over a Washington team whose title hopes were drowned in a sea of mistakes.

And, the Raiders gladly declare, it was never in doubt. Certainly, their 38-9 devastation of the Redskins in the most lopsided Super Bowl in history Sunday, makes it hard to argue the point.

"We outplayed 'em, out-muscled 'em," said linebacker Ted Hendricks, surveying the destruction the Raiders had wrought. "We just gave them a sound beating."

Pro football's dead-end kids, an outcast organization seemingly locked in perpetual litigation against the league's establishment, became only the second team to win a third Super Bowl championship with as complete a demolition of an opponent as this game has ever seen.

Playing against a close-knit Washington team that calls itself a family, the renegade Raiders, described by Coach Tom Flores as "an orphanage," were absolutely awesome.

They stunned the Redskins with a pair of electrifyingly sudden scores, turning two Washington possessions into points for themselves. Then they shut down Joe Theismann's passing game and John Riggins' running game. And, finally they turned loose Marcus Allen for a record-setting romp through the NFL record book that sealed the decision.

Allen shattered Riggins' one-year-old Super Bowl rushing record with a 191-yard day that included a 74-yard TD — the longest run in NFL postseason history.

The game turned up front where the Raiders manhandled Washington's offensive line, breaking down the Redskins' huge Hogs.

"We are a tailor-made line to defend against Riggins," said defensive end Howie Long. "We're all built like refrigerators. We all have 30-inch thighs."

In strength against strength, the Raiders won. "I never had hog before," Long laughed. "It tasted good."

Los Angeles' demolition came against a team that had compiled some impressive statistics, a team that had won 31 of its last 34 games, a team that had scored at least 21 points in 24 consecutive games.

But Washington never had a chance against the Raiders, who sliced away at the Redskin strengths, dominating the game on offense, defense and special teams.

From the moment Derrick Jensen blocked a Washington punt and fell on it in the end zone for a touchdown, less than five minutes into the game, the Raiders had control. They never let up.

Jim Plunkett bombed the leaky, suspect Washington secondary with a 50-yard pass that set up a 12-yard TD pitch to Cliff Branch, and quickly this game, expected to be so close, turned into a blowout.

The usually unflappable Redskins, unable to generate any offense against a Raider front wall that Long called "The Slaughterhouse Seven," panicked.

A dangerous screen pass play from their own 12-yard line with just 12 seconds left in the first half turned into an interception and a touchdown for reserve linebacker Jack Squirek.

If it had been a boxing match, the referee would have stopped it then. The Redskins seemed beaten, thoroughly and unquestionably.

THE THRILL OF VICTORY — Victorious coach Tom Flores gestures to members of the Los Angeles Raiders as they carry him off the field after their 38-9 victory over the Washington Redskins in Super Bowl XVIII in Tampa Sunday.

Redskins credit LA all the way

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — The Washington Redskins, bidding for a shot at football immortality, missed the brass ring, falling victim to the Los Angeles Raiders in the most lopsided game in Super Bowl history.

"The brass ring was there for the taking," said running back Joe Washington. "We just didn't catch it. I thought we had prepared for them extremely well, but we got beat. The Raiders deserve all the credit."

The National Conference champion Redskins, who had defeated Miami 27-17 in last year's Super Bowl, were hoping to become just the fourth team ever to win back-to-back Super Bowls. But their dream died Sunday when they were overwhelmed by the Raiders 38-9.

"We lost in about every way. It wasn't Redskins football," said coach Joe Gibbs, a loser in post-season play for the first time in seven games. "I think the overall credit has to go to Los Angeles."

"They did such a great job. They rushed the ball on us. We never really got into the groove. They did a good job pressuring on us all day."

The Redskins, who had beaten the Raiders 37-35 in October, were shut down by a Raider defense that limited the league's most potent offense to its lowest point total since early in the 1981 season.

"They beat us in every facet of the game... We tried to do what we did to get us here, and it just didn't work," said Redskin quarterback Joe Theismann.

He suffered two interceptions while completing just 16 of 35 passes for 243 yards. Wide receivers Art Monk and Charlie Brown, who combined to catch 14 passes for more than 240 yards in the first Raider game, had just four catches for 119 yards the second time around, including one 60-yarder when the game was out of reach.

"We played hard, but the Raiders were all over us," said Monk, held to just one catch. "We just seemed to be a little out of sync."

The Redskins, trying to become the first NFC team in 17 years to repeat as Super Bowl champions, saw the first crack in their dream come five minutes into the game when tight end Derrick Jensen blocked a Jeff Hayes punt and fell on the ball on the end zone for a 7-0 Raider lead.

THE AGONY OF DEFEAT — Washington Redskins quarterback Joe Theismann pulls his jersey back over his shoulder pads as he walks off the field after being sacked during Sunday's Super Bowl loss to the Raiders. Washington captured the title last year, but it was all LA in a 38-9 whipping over the NFC champions.

Purtzer breaks victory drought with one stroke win in Phoenix golf action

PHOENIX (AP) — The first one came too quickly, Tom Purtzer said. And the second one, well, he wondered if it would ever come.

"I was beginning to wonder if it would ever happen, if I'd ever win again," Purtzer said after he converted a great sand shot into a 72nd-hole birdie and the winning margin in a one-stroke victory Sunday in the Phoenix Open Golf Tournament.

The bunker shot — "one of the best I ever hit" — set up a two-foot putt for the birdie four he had to have to turn back rookie Corey Pavin. It finished off a no-bogey final round of 65 and produced a winning total of 268, 16 under par on the Phoenix Country Club course.

It was only the second victory in Purtzer's 10-year career that has been marked by solid but unspectacular play and in which he has won $100,000 or more for each of the past five seasons. But he won no titles.

His first victory came early in his third season as a touring pro, in the 1977 Los Angeles Open.

"In a way, it might have been too early," Purtzer said. "I didn't appreciate what was happening. I wasn't ready for it."

His game went into a decline. He developed what he called "some bad habits" in the swing.

And the years slipped by without another victory. First one. Then another. Then another.

He went seven full seasons without a victory, then he stood over that little, two-foot putt.

"It had been so long," he said. "My heart was jumping right through my sweater."

He backed away momentarily, collected himself, then rapped it into the back of the cup to end the long victory drought and, he said, fulfill a dream.

"For years now, I've had a dream of winning two tournaments: the U.S.

Open and the Phoenix Open," said Purtzer, a product of the Phoenix public schools, a graduate of Arizona State and a resident here for 31 of his 32 years.

"How much better can it get? What could be better than winning in your own backyard?" he asked.

He was quick to admit, however, that he had wondered if this or any other title ever would come his way.

Freshmen girls second with two wins at tourney

SWEETWATER — The Big Spring High School freshmen Lady Steers took home the second place trophy from the Sweetwater Freshmen Basketball Tournament held here last Friday and Saturday.

Big Spring beat Wylie, 38-28 and Clyde, 67-9 enroute to a showdown with Roscoe for the championship. Roscoe nipped the frosh squad, 52-49.

Moncia Lockridge had games of 10, 11 and 23 points for Big Spring. Priscilla Banks with 12 points against Wylie and Sheila Chatman with 14 against Clyde were other freshmen Lady Steers having double digit games.

Next action for the freshmen is tonight at 6:30 against Lamesa in the Runnels Gym.

San Angelo Central (8-0, 14-6) at Big Spring Lady Steers (3-5, 10-11)

The Lady Steers are in the midst of a three game district losing streak which has them tied for fourth place with Odessa Permian. San Angelo is one game ahead of Midland Lee. Big Spring lost to Permian, 52-51 in its last game, the fourth time this year the Lady Steers have lost by one point. Monette Wise and Debra Rubio paced Big Spring in its most recent game with 16 points apiece. San Angelo may be without the services of senior forward Val Schlaudt. Schlaudt hurt a knee and ankle when she tripped over the basketball against Odessa last week. Game time in the varsity contest is 8 p.m.

preceeded by a junior varsity game beginning at 6:15 p.m.

Midland College (14-5, 4-2) at Howard County Hawks (16-1, 6-0)

The defending Western Junior College Athletic Conference and national champion Midland College Chaparrals invade Dorothy Garrett Coliseum tonight for a game against the front running Hawks. The Hawks were pressed to the limit for a half in their most recent game, a 70-45 win over New Mexico Military, while Midland suffered a three point decision to Amarillo. The Chaps are tied with Odessa College for second and need a win to stay within striking distance of coach Mike Mitchell's Hawks. The Lady Lobos attract large support for program

LONGVIEW, Texas (AP) — The colorful foldup pamphlet at the front desk of any Longview inn lists tourist attractions such as the Schlitz Brewery, the Caddo Indian Museum and the East Texas Oil Museum. Not exactly an Atlantic City lineup, but then what else is there to do and see here in the dead of winter?

What do the Longview folks do? What if they said they watch girls' high school basketball, that they often fill the Longview High gym, which seats 2,000, and then leave feeling giddy in anticipation of the Lady Lobos' next contest?

Six years ago, girls' basketball in Longview was merely a product of Title IX — a federal statute that requires boys' and girls' athletic programs to be treated on equal ground. If it's got to be, people said, it's got to be. No one really knew much about the team, much less cared.

Today, the Lady Lobos are the talk of this town, population 70,000. This season, they are outdrawing the boys' team, which plays on different nights. They regularly have 200 fans at road games, often outnumbering their competition. They have a Lady Lobo radio show 8 a.m. Sundays on KLUE. And last season, a Longview musician wrote a three-minute song about the team that pop stations air on request.

That's some fanfare. And reasons for it aren't hard to find. The Lady Lobos are 26-0 (8-0 in District 13-5A), have won 84 of their last 86 games and have a 57-game home winning streak. Their average winning margin is 33, they score 83.8 a game and easily could have scored 100 points in 27 of their last 63 games, Coach Tommy Aldridge said.

USA Today ranks them fourth in the nation. Said Jody Conradt, the University of Texas women's basketball coach: "I think they're one of the best high school teams I have ever seen. I've seen private schools, the ones in the East that recruit, that may be better, but in terms of what you've got to work with, they've got the best team I've seen."

Aldridge certainly didn't have much to work with when he took the job six years ago. It was his first high school coaching job after five years of boys' junior high duty. Working with girls, he hesitantly told the Longview administration, would be an intriguing challenge.

And now? "I wouldn't trade this now for anything. I wouldn't go back to boys from girls," said Aldridge, 37. "I've found they'll do everything you want them to do, they won't complain, they want to learn, they don't think they know everything, they give up all their Saturdays, all their holidays. Guys always had a problem with that. They also think they know how to do things already."

Aldridge's first group of girls basically knew nothing. Fifty-five of them showed up at the first Longview practice. Only three had any experience — playing in a church league. Yet the Lady Lobos finished third in their district, 19-10 overall.

"We put in presses," Aldridge said. "We couldn't shoot well at all. In fact, we didn't have a kid who could shoot above 37 percent, and now I don't have a starter who shoots below 49 percent from the field."

Longview teams have only gotten better, with three straight district titles and one state playoff trip as pro. Last year, the Lady Lobos lost by one point in the Class 5A semifinal to Houston Yates, the eventual state champion. This season, the Lady Lobos beat Duncanville, the Times Herald No. 1 team in the Dallas area, by 14 points in the final of the Arlington Classic and then trounced Louisiana's top teams in the Red River Classic, where the Lady Lobos starting lineup was named to the all-tournament team.

And the common denominator through the years has been the Longview press: Full-court, half-court, three-quarters. It beats 'em nearly every time.

Aldridge had decided from the start that if a bunch of average talents were going to win, they would have to know fundamentals and be able to press eight minutes

BLOCKED SHOT — Kentucky's Sam Bowie (31) blocks a shot by Houston's Akeem Olajuwon (35) during the second half of Kentucky's 74-67 victory Sunday. Kentucky's Melvin Turpin (obscured by Olajuwon) also went up for the block.

UK is seven better than UH

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Sam Bowie of third-ranked Kentucky rose to the occasion Sunday, grabbing 18 rebounds in the Wildcats' 74-67 college basketball victory over No. 4 Houston.

Bowie, a 7-foot-1 senior, had help from 6-11 Melvin Turpin, who had 11 rebounds, and 6-8 Kenny Walker, who grabbed 10, as the Wildcats boosted their record to 14-2 and dropped the Cougars' mark to 16-3. "They had Akeem. We had Walker, Bowie and Turpin," said Bowie, "so it was 3-1 in our favor. It worked out."

Kentucky outrebounded Houston 51-45.

Akeem Olajuwon, Houston's 7-foot senior, was in foul trouble much of the game and fouled out with 6:14 left after scoring 14 points, grabbing 12 rebounds and blocking five shots.

"We knew Olajuwon would block some shots, but we feel like they've never seen a team go after the ball like we did," said Bowie.

Olajuwon, who had three personal fouls in the first half, was upset about the officiating.

"I just raised my hands and they called the fifth foul," he said. "They called everything. They decided the game. I'd like to play them on a neutral court."

Houston Coach Guy Lewis said, "Foul trouble bothered us. Foul trouble bothered Kentucky, too. We just don't have as many big horses to put in there as they do."

Walker paced Kentucky with 20 points, while Turpin added 19 as the Wildcats snapped Houston's six-game winning streak.

But Alvin Franklin, Houston's sophomore guard who finished with a game-high 25 points, kept the Cougars in the game.

Houston pulled within 70-67 with 1:58 remaining when Franklin scored his 10th straight point.

The nationally televised (CBS) game then became a foul shooting contest as the Cougars fouled in order to break up the Wildcats' stalling tactics.

Freshman Winston Bennett made three of four free throws in the final 31 seconds to add to Kentucky's margin. He finished with 11 points.

Michael Young scored 19 for Houston.

Houston led at the start 7-0 and 11-1 before Kentucky got rolling as Bowie collected 10 rebounds in the first half. After three ties, Kentucky led at halftime 35-31.

"To come back like we did took a lot of poise," said Kentucky Coach Joe B. Hall. "I thought we played with tremendous aggressiveness. We came through the way a good team should."

Walker's alley oop stuff shot with 8 minutes left had given the Wildcats their largest lead 61-51.

Kentucky, which suffered two losses after winning its first 12 games, now has won two straight.

Kentucky outshot Houston from the floor 49 percent to 34, helping overcome 24 turnovers to the Cougars' 13.

Irsay denies considering Colts' move

BALTIMORE (AP) — "Everything's fine," with the Baltimore Colts' future here, according to owner Robert Irsay, following a week of confusion over rumors that the team might find itself in a new home town.

Irsay's comments followed his arrival, with just minutes to spare, at Tampa, Fla. to attend Sunday's Super Bowl game.

However, Irsay refused to elaborate, saying "I don't have time. I've got to meet my wife."

Irsay flew in his private plane from his Skokie, Ill. home to the Super Bowl site with his general counsel Michael Chernoff and several guests to meet his wife and son, who had traveled to Tampa earlier in the week.

Confusion about a possible move was fueled by reports from Arizona businessmen, and the governor of Arizona that a meeting had been scheduled to discuss moving the National Football League team to Phoenix.

According to one business leader, such a deal was only a handshake away, and moving vans to transport the team's equipment in the middle of the night had been lined up.

"We were hoping to get a handshake agreement Friday," Bill Shover, a newspaper official close to the negotiations said in an interview published by The Baltimore Sunday Sun.

Shover, the director of community services for The Arizona Republic, was one of four businessmen who were scheduled to attend a meeting Friday with Irsay, Phoenix businessman Anthony J. Nicolli and Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt.

The meeting which was originally scheduled for Thursday, was resched-ed for Friday, and ultimately cancelled after rumors emerged that the NFL team was about to be sold.

An Arizona legislative leader agreed the deal was to be clinched during the week prior to the Super Bowl game since the championship game could act as a potential smoke screen by turning attention away from the move.

"Irsay told Nicolli, 'Let's do it during the week of the Super Bowl,'" said Arizona House Majority Leader Burton Barr. "So much attention is on that that people wouldn't know what we're doing."

If Irsay had shaken hands over the deal with Nicolli, it would have set in motion five moving vans to remove equipment from the Colts' training complex and offices in suburban Owings Mills.

"It was bizarre," Shover said. "Tony ordered the vans earlier in the week. They wanted to bring in the vans from other states. It was Irsay who wanted to leave in the middle of the night."

Sale of Cowboys near completion

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Vance C. Miller, a real estate developer who has been negotiating the purchase of the Dallas Cowboys on behalf of a group of Dallas investors, says he has reached an agreement in principle to buy the team, according to a published report.

Cowboys owner Clint Murchison put the National Football League team on the block last year.

Miller, who along with Dallas car dealer W.O. Bankston has been negotiating with Cowboys General Manager Tex Schramm, said he believes his group has "the blessings of the Cowboys," the Dallas Times Herald reported Sunday.

"As far as the price goes, yes, we have reached an agreement," Miller said. "Right now I would say I'm feeling pretty positive about the deal. We need to get the lawyers from both sides together, and we need to get the approval of the NFL owners. We have some technical things to work out."

Schramm, here for the Super Bowl, refused comment Saturday night, the Times Herald said. However, the newspaper said, Schramm arranged tickets for Bankston and Miller and planned to sit with them during Sunday's game.

A Dallas businessman who asked not to be identified but said he was asked to join Miller's group, said Schramm is asking $60 million for the club.

Murchison decided to sell the team because of failing health and the desire to settle the estate of his brother, John, who died in 1979.

Miller said he has been designated majority owner of the club, fulfilling an NFL requirement that one investor own 51 percent.

"W.O. has suggested that I take the 51 percent, and I have agreed to do it," Miller said. "I really think that either one of us could be approved as the majority owner."

Miller said other minority owners could include Donald Carter, owner of the National Basketball Association's Dallas Mavericks, and Dallas oilman Max Williams. Miller said the purchase proposal includes Schramm and Coach Tom Landry as minority owners.

"Under our proposal, Tom and Tex would have economic interests without having material economic risks," Miller said.

Part of the agreement would leave Schramm in full control of the club and Landry at the coaching helm, Miller said.

"There will be absolutely no change in the Cowboys," Miller said. "It's like they say. If it ain't broke, don't fix it."

New welterweight champ crowned

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Unbeaten Johnny Bumphus says he was "stunned" when Lorenzo Garcia landed a short right to the neck that knocked him down, but it wasn't enough to keep him from capturing the World Boxing Association junior welterweight title.

The title, which was made vacant by the retirement of unbeaten Aaron Pryor, belongs to Bumphus following his 15-round unanimous decision victory Sunday over the Argentine contender.

"I wasn't hurt, but I was stunned," Bumphus said about the knockdown, which occurred midway through the fifth round. "He stunned me about three times with good right hands. He was crafty. He was doing a lot of things inside. Like keeping his hands way down and then shooting them up into me."

After feeling each other out in a slow-paced first round at the Sands Hotel & Casino, Bumphus, ranked No. 1 by the WBA, and Garcia, ranked No. 2, exchanged a few punches in the next two rounds with the 6-foot Bumphus more aggressive against his 5-7 opponent.

The Argentine, the South American lightweight champion who had only seven knockouts in 61 previous pro fights, kept the heat on in the fifth round.

Garcia remained on his feet the entire fight, even standing in his corner rather than sitting on a stool between rounds. He was taken to Atlantic City Medical Center immediately after the fight for what promoter Dan Duva said was routine observation.

Bumphus was on the attack at the start of the sixth round, but late in the round Garcia landed a left that put Bumphus on the ropes. Bumphus was warned by Referee Tony Perez for a low blow in the sixth round. Garcia complained throughout the fight that Bumphus was landing low blows and hitting him when his back was turned.

Bumphus bloodied Garcia's nose in the seventh round from hard jabs, but the 23-year-old southpaw had trouble taking charge. "I've had a lot of tension. It's not pressure people have put on me, but that I've put on myself," Bumphus said. "And I'm really grateful to be able to fulfill my dream."

Bumphus, 22-0 with 16 knockouts, and Garcia, 53-2-7 with seven knockouts, took turns working each other over in the corner in the ninth round, but in the 10th round Garcia began to assert himself.

Garcia buckled Bumphus' legs with a single shot to the head in the 11th, but Bumphus came back with a combination of shots to the head.

Bumphus unloaded in the 12th round and appeared to take command with blows to the head and body. But the 27-year-old Garcia

Your Daily HOROSCOPE
 from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, JAN. 24, 1984

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A fine day and evening for you to adopt a new and more advanced attitude and more optimism in whatever confronts you today or tonight. Combine intuition and judgment.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) If you get out of some tiresome rut you may be in, you can replace it with something very interesting and lucrative.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You have a splendid sense of artistry and beauty and should utilize this to your greatest advantage.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Plan to enjoy sports with good friends whose interests are similar to your own. Set up appointments with them.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Good day to extend invitations to friends or relatives that you like and then entertain them well.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) By complimenting allies, you can have a better relationship in the future. A good day to call on friends you've neglected.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Get your property looking more modern and increase its value. Get advice from an expert who can show you how to add to income.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Pursuing some personal aim that means much to you can easily see you gain it, if you get others to assist you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You have to decide which private aims are most important to you and then you can go after them in a positive way.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Good day to state your aims to allies and friends who can help you to gain your finest goals.

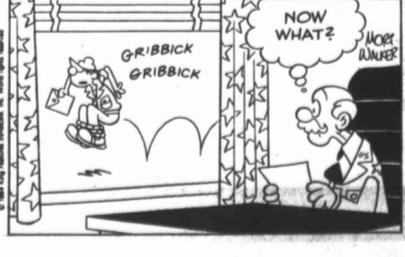

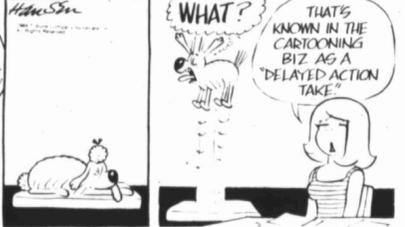

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Concentrate on doing something for a higher-up that would please this person and you get fine results.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Any new contacts you make today of persons whose ideas are different to your own will gladly go along with your views.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) State your plans to the one you love and get cooperation you need. Be happier together. A business matter needs your attention.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will have the ability to understand the needs and ambitions of others and be helpful to them. Teach to think first about own needs and welfare and not let hers impose upon him or her. Give a good education.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Tarzan's shout resounds at funeral

ACAPULCO, Mexico (AP) — Tarzan's famous jungle shout resounded at Johnny Weissmuller's funeral as the casket of the star of 18 Tarzan movies was lowered into the grave.

Weissmuller, who also won five gold medals as a swimmer in the 1924 and 1928 Olympics, was buried Sunday in a simple ceremony marked by the playing of a tape of the famous cry of Tarzan of the Apes, the jungle hero created by author Edgar Rice Burroughs.

Dr. Estasio Ormaz Parades, the Weissmuller family physician, said the film star died Friday night in his home of blood clotting of the vessels in the brain.

Weissmuller lived in Acapulco with Maria, his sixth wife, since 1979. His years in this Pacific Ocean resort city were spent as a virtual invalid, due to a series of strokes in 1977.

After his strokes, Weissmuller was hospitalized at the Motion Picture and Television Country Hospital in Los Angeles. But the director there complained Weissmuller would let out his jungle cry late in the night, disturbing other patients, and the Weissmullers moved to Acapulco.

Burial was at Valley of the Light cemetery, seven miles east of the city. About 100 people, including friends and residents of nearby towns, attended.

A choral group sang "Cucurucucu Paloma" (Cooing Doves) and "Cien Abejas" (One Hundred Bees) — songs that Weissmuller's wife, whom he married in 1963, said were among his favorites.

Mrs. Weissmuller, speaking in Spanish, told mourners her husband loved Mexico and wanted to pass his last years there. She choked back tears and ended by saying, "Viva Mexico!" three times.

She left the cemetery holding a crucifix she had taken from the casket before it was lowered to the ground.

The inscription on Weissmuller's tombstone read: Johnny Peter Weissmuller (Tarzan) 1904-1984

Despite his prowess as a swimmer, Weissmuller was best known for his Tarzan movies, beginning with "Tarzan the Ape Man" in 1931 and ending with "Tarzan and the Mermaids" in 1947.

His three children from his marriage to Beryl Scott are: John Jr. and Wendy, both living in the San Francisco area, and Lisa Gallagher of Beverly Hills, Calif. None of the children attended the burial.

Mrs. Gallagher's husband, Ed, said memorial services are planned for Wednesday in Beverly Hills and in Chicago, where Weissmuller served as an altar boy in his youth.

Weissmuller was born in Windber, Pa., but his parents moved to Chicago soon after his birth.

A. There are several ways to aid in driving on ice or snow covered streets. Some of which are listed below:

1. Allow yourself adequate time for driving from one place to another, don't get in a hurry;
2. When possible plan the most direct route avoiding such things as blind intersections or steep grades where coming to a complete stop is required;
3. Avoid spinning your tires in an attempt to move forward rather let off the accelerator so the spinning stops and then increase the pressure on the accelerator to move ahead;
4. When the car starts to slide on the roadway then you need to steer the car in the direction of the slide;
5. Avoid applying your brakes suddenly rather apply the brakes gently and allow yourself at least twice the normal braking distance; and
6. Avoid shifting gears on your car in such a manner that it causes a sudden surge forward.

It is urged that when the roads are covered with ice and snow that travel be on a need to basis, by this I mean travel only when necessary to be out.

Q. What is a security survey?

A. A security survey is an in-depth on-site examination of a physical facility and its surrounding property. The survey is conducted to determine a facility's security.

The survey has two other advantages: it can be undertaken prior to the commission of a crime, and it can offer protection against crime rather than just remedial action after the fact.

48 illegal aliens nabbed

SUGAR LAND, Texas (AP) — Authorities found 48 illegal aliens jammed into a station wagon and a truck Sunday when the vehicles were stopped near here on traffic violations.

A Fort Bend County deputy sheriff said the station wagon was stopped for illegal lane changing and officers found 15 illegal aliens inside the vehicle. Five were under a blanket in the back of the station wagon.

Later, a rented van truck was stopped by a Texas Department of Public Safety trooper after the truck sped past the area where the station wagon had been halted.

Officers found 73 illegal aliens crowded inside the truck. They were standing in the back of the locked truck and had only snack food for nourishment and plastic water jugs for rest room needs, officials said.

The aliens were jailed and then turned over to U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service officials. Drivers of the two vehicles were charged with moving violations and with having no valid drivers licenses.

TV recycles yet another old idea

NEW YORK (AP) — Television, which specializes in reruns, thin copies and milking the skimpiest of ideas, has found another form of recycling. Two "clip" shows featuring outtakes of mistakes and pratfalls have become network replacement shows.

Hollywood may not have an original thought in its caverns, but you must admire the shamelessness with which it borrows and varies the themes. Tonight, it's "TV Bloopers and Practical Jokes" on NBC. On Tuesday nights, it's "Foul-Ups, Bleeps and Blunders" on ABC.

These patched-together shows represent second-generation TV at its most "creative." And self-perpetuating.

"The possibilities are limitless," said Dick Clark, co-host of NBC's "Bloopers." "As soon as we do something wrong on one of our shows, we say let's hold it for 'Bloopers.'"

One could say these programs proved that midseason series development was light at NBC and ABC. NBC chairman Grant Tinker, whose network was not prepared for the failure of all nine new fall shows, admitted as much: "We didn't have enough product in the pipeline."

But one could also say the networks are giving audiences what they want, as they seem to revel in other people's embarrassments and humiliations. Last week's ratings, reflecting the shows' debut performances two weeks ago, had "Bloopers" the No. 5 show and "Blunders" the 13th-rated program.

"Bloopers" does have its funny moments, and it's much better than the ABC version, proving there are many degrees of schlock.

"We stumbled into a way of doing variety shows in the 1980s without singing and tap-dancing," said Clark. "Our show is not planned to improve your life. We know there's no socially redeeming value in it."

"Bloopers" does have its funny moments, and it's much better than the ABC version, proving there are many degrees of schlock.

First of all, the NBC program uses two production companies experienced in putting together these tape jobs. Carson Productions did the nostalgic and humorous commercial specials and the Dick Clark Co. did blooper shows.

Second, Clark and Ed McMahon, Johnny Carson's human laughtrack, are thoroughly professional and compatible as co-hosts. "We're not the star, the show's the star," McMahon said.

On ABC, the odd couple of Don Rickles and Steve Lawrence doesn't have the same chemistry, and the humor is forced.

Salesman held in killings

SHERMAN, Texas (AP) — Investigators have arrested a 36-year-old chemical salesman on charges of gunning down four men in a rural airplane hangar last October, but officers have no motive for the killings.

"We have 50 theories," Grayson County Sheriff Jack Driscoll said. "Only the suspect knows his own state of mind, and he's not talking to us."

Lester Leroy Bower Jr. 36, of Arlington, was being held Sunday in Sherman on $400,000 bond on four capital murder charges.

"We're very confident we have the right man," Driscoll said. He said there were no other suspects in the slayings.

Driscoll said Bower was watching television when officers arrived at his house about 8 p.m. Friday.

Officers executed two search warrants, one for Bower's house and one to obtain hair samples from him, Driscoll told reporters at a news conference Saturday. He refused to comment on what evidence investigators have against Bower.

But an attorney who agreed to represent Bower told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram that authorities took a van-load of ultralight airplane parts from Bower's house.

Bower was interested in ultralights and was building one in his garage, said Jerry Buckner, who was representing Bower.

The four victims were shot to death Oct. 8 in an airplane hangar on a ranch about five miles northeast of Sherman. Authorities said a $4,000 ultralight airplane — a motorized hang-glider — was missing, but the victims' wallets, jewelry and other belongings were not taken.

Investigators said relatives told them three of the men had gone to the hangar to meet someone interested in buying an ultralight plane.

Driscoll would not say whether an ultralight aircraft missing from the hangar was found.

Man plans big GOP welcome

DALLAS (AP) — Fred Meyer is planning a morning prayer breakfast for an intimate gathering of 10,000. He's expecting 15,000 people at 75 different parties in an effort to provide Texas-sized hospitality to Republican convention-goers this summer.

Meyer, chairman of the Republican Host Committee, wants to "overwhelm" at August's Republican National Convention in Dallas.

"What we are going to do is unique," he said during one of the dozens of addresses to local GOP groups. "We want people to leave here knowing it was the best convention ever. Perhaps perfect is barely good enough."

Meyer told the Dallas Times Herald he has raised his original fund-raising goal by 50 percent to pay for the activities he plans during the convention week.

"Four events for every one they (delegates) have time to attend," Meyer said of his schedule.

Approximately $325,000 has been raised so far, Meyer said. The original goal of $500,000 for Host Committee expenses has been abandoned and replaced with a $750,000 price tag.
