Study says enrollment at HC to rise

Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau
Enrollment at Howard College and other community schools throughout the state is expected to rise in the next decade, according to the latest Texas college and university enrollment forecast.

The study predicts the number of students will climb 1 percent annually for the next 11 years.

Coordinating Board officials said the projection for future college and university enrollment is higher than predicted in a forecast two years ago since "enrollments have grown at a higher rate than expected since 1982." Sharp enrollment peaks, "such as we are currently experiencing, are not uncommon and seem to occur coincident with increasing unemployment and economic recession," the board staff said.

According to the forecast, total college and university enrollments, including private institutions, will exceed 850,000 by 1995.

Private junior colleges are the only higher education sector expected to feel a slight dip in enrollment by 1995, according to the data.

Mitchell agent marries during livestock show

By JOY CULWELL
C-City Correspondent

COLORADO CITY — Mitchell County Extension Agent Marion Morris took time off from the judging Saturday at the county livestock show to get to the judge on time for her marriage.

Wearing her normal stock show attire of boots and jeans, Marion was married to Raymond Farr of Midland in the courthouse office of Justice of the Peace Charles Watlington.

Nolan County Extension Agent Geniece Whisenhunt was maid of honor for the double-ring ceremony.

After the wedding, the couple returned to the livestock show where Marion had hosting duties and work in the kitchen area of the stock show barn.

When the marriage was announced over the show public address system, Marion was congratulated by members of her 4-H club.

The two will honeymoon in Las Vegas in a few days.

Schools get high marks

By DAVID HILL
Texas Poll Director
First of five parts

Texans give unusually high ratings to schools in their own communities, but they say schools elsewhere in the state place too much emphasis on extracurricular activities, according to the Texas Poll released today.

Public education in Texas and around the country has been under a drumfire of criticism for nearly a year, but almost 50 percent of those surveyed statewide in December rated their local schools above average with a grade of A or B.

This is a much higher rating than schools have enjoyed nationally in the last decade. The annual nationwide Gallup education survey has recorded a steady decline in public approval since 1974, when 48 percent gave their local schools a grade of A or B. Last year only 31 percent of those surveyed by Gallup rated their schools so highly.

On the question of whether schools are over-emphasizing outside activities such as band and sports, the poll suggests a majority of Texans think it's not happening at their own schools but that it is a statewide problem.

Those who do believe their schools overdo non-academic activities tend to be better educated, older and residing in smaller cities.

But parents with school-age children were among the most emphatic that their schools had kept the proper balance. Sixty-two percent said outside activities weren't being stressed too much.

The results may indicate a common tendency among people to take a parochial view of things — to accept that a problem exists everywhere but in their own backyard. On the other hand, it may mean that many have not been persuaded by either the national or state panels that have studied public education and found it wanting.

The Texas Poll, sponsored by Harte-Hanks Communications Inc., is conducted quarterly by the Public Policy Resources Laboratory at Texas A&M University. The December telephone survey of 1,007 adults has a sampling error of 3 percent, meaning any result could vary by as much as three percentage points either way.

The Texas Poll also found:
● By a 9-to-1 margin, Texans want teachers to pass competency tests before they are allowed in the classrooms. They also say by the same lop-sided tally that high school seniors should pass competency tests before they can get diplomas.

● Nearly two-thirds of those surveyed said teachers should be paid according to some merit system, rather than on a standard scale.

Loving care

CHAMPION — Sixteen-year-old Ron Brooks holds his Heavyweight Exotic Crossbreed, named the Grand Champion Steer, ready as he prepares to show it in the Howard County Junior Livestock Show Saturday. He said he spent an 1 1/2 hours grooming and washing the steer with different soaps so it would shine. Ron also received the Steer Showmanship Award.

Well-dressed steer

It takes time, hard work to show off

By KEELY COGHLAN
Staff Writer

What does the well-dressed steer wear on a big day out of the barn? Plenty of hairspray, special oils, show sheens and other cosmetics, if he's going to be in the Howard County Junior Livestock Show.

Contestants spend an hour to an hour and a half preparing their steers on the day of the show, with the help of one to two more persons, they said. And that doesn't include the time spent getting the animal ready in the preceding weeks.

For 14-year-old Lance Robinson of Ackerly, whose black Maine-Anjou Saturday was named Reserve Grand Champion Steer, the work started months ago when he began training his three steers for the show.

Lance and Shauna Richardson, whose entry was named the Champion English Crossbreed, said they both spent about an hour to an hour and a half working with each of their steers during the months before the show. Lance had three steers, the Maine-Anjou, a Limousin, and a Hereford, in the show. Shauna entered two, a Hereford and a Limousin.

In the weeks before a show, the animal is sprayed for lice and his hair is cropped several inches. The steer is groomed carefully, and the contestant tries to correct any problems in the animal's appearance, such as dry skin. Lance used conditioner on T.J., the reserve grand champion, to fight dandruff caused when the lice treatment dried the animal's skin.

'There are hairsprays, hair colors that we put on his feet, and show sheen, and conditioners. It's expensive.'

"It's a beauty operation," said Mrs. Lloyd Robinson, Lance's mother. "There's probably more (cosmetics) and oils for him (the steer) than (for women). There are hairsprays, hair colors that we put on his feet, and show sheen, and conditioners. It's expensive."

Right before the show, the steer is washed, trimmed and dried. Some steers' hooves are sprayed with an enamel-type coloring so they shine. He is combed and brushed, his eyes are cleaned, and oils are sprayed on him to smooth his hair and make it shine. After the oil is sprayed on, the steer is dried with a vacuum dryer to keep the hair in place, contestants said.

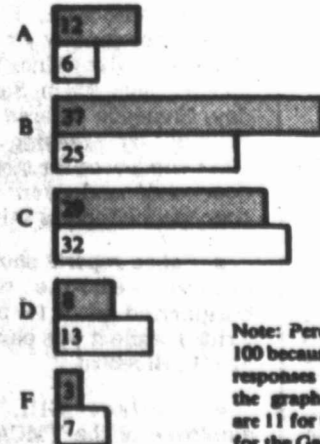

And the grooming continues, brushing and combing mostly, until the animal is led into the ring. "Every hair has to be in place," said Lance's older brother, Scott, who was helping to groom the animals.

"It's worth the time," Shauna said. "I like to show them off."

Suspect released in center robbery

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A 24-year-old man held on suspicion of holding up a day care center was released Saturday by police, who said they would try to build a stronger case against him.

Willie Drake, of St. Louis, was released after he was questioned and the circuit attorney's office declined to press charges, authorities said.

Sgt. William Daus said police would try to con-

Police: newstand bomb not remote-controlled

DALLAS (AP) — Police said Saturday they have ruled out the possibility that a bomb in a newspaper machine that killed a man was detonated by remote control but are still considering the possibility that the man was the bomb's target.

Discovery of a remote control triggering device would have enhanced the likelihood that Ward Keeton, 63, was the bomber's intended victim, police said.

Keeton, a property supervisor for a Dallas management firm, was dressed only in a bathrobe and slippers at the time of the blast, neighbors said. The explosion "hit him in the torso" and apparently killed him instantly about 5:15 a.m. Friday, said police Sgt. Carl Dorman.

Police said they had not ruled out the possibility that Keeton was the target because of a neighbor's report that Keeton routinely purchased a paper from the vending machine at the north Dallas apartment at the same time every morning.

An examination of the wreckage indicated the device, possibly contained in a wooden frame, was sitting on top of the copies of the Dallas Morning News that had been placed in the machine only 15 to 20 minutes earlier.

The device contained far more explosives than would have been needed if someone wanted only to blow up the newspaper rack, officers added.

Pieces of shrapnel from the explosive device, believed to be a pipe bomb, were hurled up to 200 feet from the box, said Sgt. Ron McCracken of the police bomb squad.

A two-inch piece of metal pierced the rear wheel well of a sports car parked 50 feet away and ripped through the back seat into the passenger compartment, McCracken said.

A preliminary examination did not reveal what may have been the triggering mechanism, authorities said. Police said none of the apartment complex residents reported seeing the explosion. But they said several people recalled seeing a small dark-colored car drive away from the complex shortly after the blast.

Federal officials said Keeton had been an FBI informant about 20 years ago, but said they do not think the bomb incident is related to his past work for the government.

Keeton had separated from his wife of two months, Clara, in November, and he and his first wife, Opal Mae Pharris, divorced in 1974 after 30 years of marriage, the Dallas Morning News said it learned from county records.

In an interview with Dallas television station KXAS-TV, Ms. Pharris said her former husband had many enemies, but she declined to elaborate.

Missing Chicago youth seen alive

CHICAGO (AP) — An Iowa youth whose kidnapping drew national attention reportedly was seen alive last March when he attempted unsuccessfully to escape from his abductors, a published report says.

The mother of John David Gosch, 13, said both the FBI and a private detective agency hired by the family confirmed the sighting, the Chicago Sun-Times reported in Sunday's editions.

The boy was abducted in West Des Moines, Iowa, by two men who pulled him into a car while he was delivering newspapers Sept. 12, 1982. His parents' efforts to find him, including founding a non-profit organization to promote awareness about child abductions, drew an outpouring of sympathy and support.

Noreen Gosch said a woman saw two men chasing a boy down the street March 2 in a large city that investigators have asked her not to identify.

"The boy ran up to the woman and said 'Please, lady, help me. My name is John David Gosch,'" Mrs.

Gosch said. "At that point, one of the men grabbed him, twisted his arm behind his back, and dragged him away."

Mrs. Gosch was not available for comment on the Sun-Times report Saturday. Phone calls to the family's home in West Des Moines were being handled by an answering service and were not returned.

A spokesman for the FBI's Washington office declined comment on the report, saying the agency would not discuss an ongoing investigation.

But an unidentified spokesman for the Investigative Research Agency, a private detective firm hired by the Gosches, said, "We and the FBI checked it out. And we're both convinced it positively was Johnny. So now we start all over again, backtracking from there."

Last October, the woman recognized John among the missing or abducted children who were pictured after the television drama "Adam" was aired.

Kohl tours Jerusalem

JERUSALEM (AP) — Closely guarded by police, West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl visited Judaism's holiest shrine, the Wailing Wall, on Saturday and stood before it in silence, his head bowed.

He endured some heckling from Jews with bitter memories of the Nazi German Holocaust as he spent the Jewish sabbath, the fifth day of his planned six-day visit to Israel, touring religious sites in Jerusalem.

A threat of violence also lingered. Israel Radio said before Kohl's arrival that police had confirmed reports of grenades and explosives being found on the Temple Mount near the wall. The reports said police chased two Jewish men near the Al Aqsa Mosque Thursday night, but they escaped in the Old City's narrow, twisting alleys.

The West German leader, wearing a dark coat and black homburg hat, was driven in a motorcade Saturday to the Western Wall, the last remnant of the ancient Jewish temple destroyed by the Romans in A.D. 70.

Dozens of police guarded the plaza next to the wall. Others were stationed on roads leading to the sacred site.

Kohl was quickly surrounded by journalists and a crowd of about 50 people, including a group of ultra-Orthodox Hasidic Jews.

One man shouted in Hebrew "Germans back to Germany!" Others "Get out of Jerusalem!" and "Not at the Wailing Wall!"

In accordance with tradition, Kohl placed a small piece of paper in a crack of the wall.

Kohl toured Christian and Moslem religious sites in Jerusalem for 3½ hours.

Bomb kills 3 in India

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Terrorists believed to be Sikh militants threw a grenade into a movie theater in Punjab state early Saturday, killing three people and wounding 29, police said.

The attack occurred in the remote town of Nawanshahar, 230 miles north of New Delhi.

In Amritsar, 300 miles north of New Delhi, rival Sikh factions battled with guns, swords and spears in the shadow of the Golden Temple, holiest of Sikh shrines.

The violence was sparked by militants angered over the postponement of a new civil disobedience campaign for more religious and political autonomy for the Sikh community.

Officials said that in another incident in Amritsar, Sikhs in a jeep hurled a grenade at a Border Security Force patrol. They said the device exploded in the air, wounding two bicyclists.

Police Inspector General P.S. Bhinder said the mobs seized railway employees and cut the telephone lines before spraying the buildings with kerosene. He said one of the three stations was heavily damaged.

S. Africa captures missile

CAPE TOWN (AP) — South Africa says it has captured a new Soviet-made, SAM-9 surface-to-air missile system and called it the first complete system of its kind to fall into Western hands.

Col. Julius Kriel, director of intelligence for the air force, told reporters Friday the missiles and their mobile, armored launcher were captured Jan. 2 during a major battle in South Africa's six-week invasion of southern Angola.

South Africa says it was hunting black-nationalist guerrillas trying to infiltrate neighboring South-West Africa, also called Namibia.

Kriel said the SAM-9 gives Marxist Angola a completely integrated air defense capacity, in conjunction with the older but longer-range SAM-3 and the shoulder-fired SAM-7.

South Africa, said Kriel, will study the system to adapt tactics its pilots use to evade the missiles. Like most modern anti-aircraft missiles, the SAM-9 homes in on heat from a jet's engine.

"This system, to our knowledge, is the first complete system that has fallen into the hands of the West," Kriel said.

A Western diplomat who asked not to be identified said military attaches assigned to Pretoria inspected the captured system at the invitation of the South African government.

He said this was of some interest to Western intelligence, but he believed most of the system's details were already known in the West.

The missile is 12 centimeters (4.8 inches) in diameter, is faster and has more in-flight maneuverability than the SAM-7.

PLO's Arafat gets support

BUCHAREST (AP) — President Nicolae Ceausescu reaffirmed his support Saturday for Yasser Arafat as chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization, the state-run news agency AGERPRES said.

Arafat, whose leadership is being challenged by PLO rebels and some Arab hard-liners, arrived earlier in the day for an unannounced visit along with four other senior PLO officials.

MAYAN GODDESS OF WEAVING HANDMADE IN GUATEMALA

A great deal has changed since Bernal Diaz del Castillo (a soldier serving with Cortes) first wrote his chronicle of pre-Spanish crafts. Many of the crafts are no longer practiced. One, however, that has changed little with the centuries is hand looming of the native cotton. The only major change being the introduction of a frame standing loom to replace the hip loom. This innovation enabled the Indians to produce a wider and longer piece of fabric. The designs are still produced by a method known as finger weaving or loom embroidery. The weaver has separate hanks of colored threads and inserts them by hand across a limited number of warp threads to make a design. This produces a fabric that looks very much like a needle embroidery.

Kelly changes plans to reach his dreams

HOUSTON (AP) — Quarterback Jim Kelly's dreams keep changing in real life. As a schoolboy in East Brady, Pa., he dreamed of leading Penn State to the national championship.

But the Nittany Lions thought Kelly would make a great linebacker and Kelly took his quarterbacking dreams south to the University of Miami, where he helped lay the foundation for the Hurricane's 1983 national championship.

Kelly had also dreamed of one day playing in the National Football League, but he awoke one morning to find the United States Football League Houston Gamblers waiting with a five-year, $3.5 million contract.

Once again, Kelly altered his plans. "I guess my dreams have changed but so far they've been changing in the right aspects," Kelly said. "Everything I've fits into a pattern for Kelly, who follows challenges.

"I've taken on a new challenge but when I went to Miami that was a challenge too, just to go down there where they were ready to throw football out the window," Kelly said.

The balmy Miami weather helped Kelly forget his lifelong desire to attend Penn State.

"Penn State was the place to go for anyone from my area," Kelly said. "I wanted to go there but I didn't want to play linebacker."

Kelly set Miami school records, including 376 career completions for 5,228 yards and 31 touchdowns, but has not played since the third game of the 1982 season because of a shoulder injury.

As he resumes his career, Kelly also must learn the intricacies of becoming a

CHANGING PLANS — Houston Gamblers quarterback Jim Kelly starts working out for the coming season of the United States Football League season. Kelly as a schoolboy had dreamed of wanted I'm getting. It's just in a different league and a different city."

The NFL Buffalo Bills made Kelly their first-round selection in the 1983 college draft but lost in the bidding with the Gamblers.

"They needed top quality players and the contract they offered me was better than the NFL," Kelly said. "There are a lot of off-the-field endorsements I can get here that I couldn't get in Buffalo."

"Plus I could come right in and play and make a name for myself and not have to sit behind (Buffalo quarterback) Joe Ferguson for three years playing in the snow in Buffalo."

Casting his lot with the Gamblers really leading Penn State to a national championship, but his plans went south to the University of Miami. He also dreamed of playing in the NFL, but the money was greater in the USFL.

TV causes fans to wait for Houston, Razorbacks clash

AN AP Sports Analysis
By DENNEH
FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

Big Red versus the Dream.

It was a matchup to ponder while surviving the rigors of root canal and a made-in-Russia winter.

An upgrading of Southwest Conference basketball recently has made sporting life bearable after the Cotton Bowl.

Lately there's been a Sidney Moncrief or Darrell Walker or Terry Teagle or Clyde Drexler to watch and enjoy.

So where's Joe Kleine, all 6-foot-11, 250 pounds of Arkansas Razorback trading blocked shots and body slam rebounds with Houston's 7-foot, 255-pound Akeem Olajuwon?

So where's this much heralded classic matchup?

So where's all the beef?

January is almost gone and no Kleine challenging Olajuwon.

Wasn't there the prospect of three rim-rattling sessions between these two giants, two in the regular season and possibly another in the post-season tournament?

What's going on? Did we miss one?

No, it's just the SWC way of making some fast bucks and getting some prime time points at the expense of a sane and orderly schedule.

The same conference that brought you Houston versus Southern Methodist in Tokyo last November to decide second place in the football championship race has put the hoops on hold.

Instead of spacing out the confrontations of Top Twenty teams Houston and Arkansas, the conference has them meeting TWICE in FIVE days in late February and early March.

Both the Cougars and Hogs, have one loss between them in SWC action, will have played 14 SWC games each before they collide Saturday, Feb. 25 in Houston for the sake of NBC and national television. Tipoff time is supposed to be 3:10 p.m.

Then they turn right around and do it again Sunday, March 4 for CBS at 1:40 p.m. from Fayetteville.

Then they could meet again seven days later in the championship of the SWC Post-Season Classic at The Summit in Houston.

Just like an NBA mini-series.

The exposure for the SWC, not to mention the $100,000 each school gets per appearance (some of it will be split with SWC brethren), will be tremendous.

But the SWC also runs the risk of putting a diluted product on display.

Isn't there going to be some wear-and-tear from quick, turnaround tussles?

Won't it be tough emotionally on both teams?

Just how sharp can they be?

These questions can't be answered until Olajuwon, the junior giant from Lagos, Nigeria, and the fiery competitor Kleine, a junior from Slater, Mo., match muscle.

Recall last year that Olajuwon got the best of it in Hofheinz Pavilion with eight points, 10 rebounds and 11 blocked shots to Kleine's six points and six rebounds.

Also recall that Kleine won the rematch in Barnhill Field House with 20 points and 10 rebounds to Olajuwon's 15 points and nine rebounds.

The meetings, indeed, should be dandies — even if we have to wait until baseball spring training starts to get to see 'em.

Miller wins Quaker State Open

GRAND PRAIRIE, Texas (AP) — Hugh Miller of Everett, Wash., kept his record on television unblemished Saturday when he defeated Joe Berardi, 217-171, in the title match of the $125,000 Quaker State Open.

Miller, now a four-time Pro Bowlers Association champion, won his sixth game in the championship round without a loss to capture the $20,000 first prize.

The top-seeded Miller, a left-hander, also went through his sixth straight TV game without an open frame.

The four right-handers, however, were struggling. They combined for a total of 19 splits in the four matches, including three by Berardi in the finale.

On his way to the title game, Berardi, Brooklyn, N.Y., defeated local favorite Del Ballard, Richardson, Texas, 202-177, and stopped Mark Roth, Wall Township, N.J., 204-190.

Ballard, who earned $6,000, had eliminated Bob Handley, Pompano Beach, Fla., 178-156, in a match that saw the bowlers combine for eight splits.

"After seeing all those splits in the opening match, I said 'All right!' because I had a good shot," said Miller, 27. "The lanes had dried out a little from practice, so I decided to throw high and hard. I figured if I stayed away from the big splits I would win."

Berardi, the defending Firestone Tournament of Champions titlist, picked up $11,000 for second; Roth, who has finished third here four times to go along with a first and a second, $7,500 for third and Handley $5,000 for fifth.

Envoy receives award

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Jeane J. Kirkpatrick, whose "plain speaking" as U.S. ambassador to the United Nations "has added a new note in world diplomacy," will receive the 1984 Harry S. Truman Good Neighbor Award, the award sponsor said Saturday.

In naming this year's recipient, the Good Neighbor Award Foundation said Mrs. Kirkpatrick is a "diplomat extraordinaire, a public servant in the best Truman tradition."

The Good Neighbor Award was established in honor of Truman, who was born 100 years ago in Lamar, Mo., and served as the nation's 33rd president. The award will be presented to Mrs. Kirkpatrick May 8 in Kansas City at the 32nd annual luncheon celebrating Truman's birthday.

"Her love of country, her plain speaking, has added a new note in world diplomacy, and her devoted service to her president has helped blaze new trails in the implementation of American foreign policy," the foundation said in a news release.

Mrs. Kirkpatrick was a member of President Reagan's foreign policy advisory group during the 1980 election campaign. She was sworn in as U.N. ambassador Feb. 4, 1981.

Prior to her U.N. appointment, Mrs. Kirkpatrick was a professor of political science at Georgetown University in Washington. She also was resident scholar at the American Enterprise Institute for Public Policy Research.

Mrs. Kirkpatrick is the first woman to receive the Truman Good Neighbor Award. Past honorees include Dr. Jonas Salk, former President Gerald R. Ford, Nelson A. Rockefeller, Gen. Omar N. Bradley and U.S. Sens. Barry M. Goldwater and Thomas F. Eagleton.

Potato passion
Spud love sweeps the country

CHICAGO (AP) — A new fast-food fascination is sweeping the land, a passion for potatoes that's anything but half-baked, according to the company that's top banana in the spud field.

Researchers at Wendy's International Inc. were looking around for new potato products when they realized that the answer was right in front of their eyes — baked potatoes.

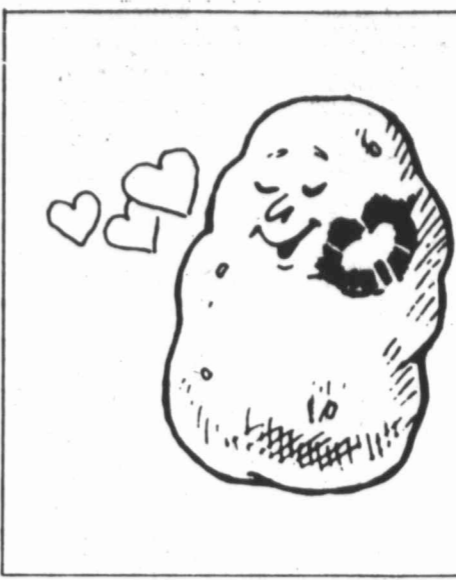

"Americans grew up on the meat and potato concept," said Denny Lynch, a spokesman for Wendy's.

With that in mind, the fast-food chain decided to push potatoes in a big way — and the results have been spudacular.

This year, in 2,600 restaurants in the United States and Canada, Wendy's expects to sell a quarter of a billion baked potatoes topped with chili, broccoli and cheese, bacon and cheese or other concoctions.

"That's a few potatoes," said Lynch.

Stuffed baked potatoes are hardly new — many smaller chains and individual restaurants have sold them for years — but Wendy's developed a system for serving them money.

While Wendy's is the league leader, there's a growing interest elsewhere, too, although Lynch said he's not aware if either Burger King or McDonald's is cranking up to roll out baked potatoes.

And Wendy's wasn't the first to hit the spuds, because Wisconsin banker Alan Kirschner got the idea four years ago.

He bought a four-unit chain of fast-food potato restaurants called 1 Potato 2, spiffed up the operation and started expanding.

Now, Kirschner's 1 Potato 2, which sells nothing but stuffed potatoes and concentrates its restaurants in shopping malls, boasts 72 units in 26 states and expects to double that in the coming year.

Kirschner will sell about 8 million potatoes this year. Meanwhile, when Wendy's accountants stop counting, they expect to post a record $1.8 billion sales year.

"The stuffed potatoes are bringing in new business," said Lynch. "The sales of french fries have not dropped. Stuffed potatoes attract a different kind of customer."

One group that's digging the potato passion are the farmers who grow the suddenly hot item.

The wholesale price of big Idahos is a record $32 or $33 per hundred pounds, double what it was a year ago, said Gordon Randall, executive director of the Idaho Potato Commission in Boise.

The price leap comes partly from last summer's weather, which wasn't good for producing big potatoes, but Randall said the new-found love of spuds is a welcome and important factor in bringing in the

Murderer regains medical license

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A doctor who killed his socialite wife 25 years ago and practiced in rural Missouri for 10 years after his parole has regained his California physician's license.

The state Board of Medical Quality Assurance granted Dr. R. Bernard Finch's request for reinstatement last month, saying "it would not be contrary to the public interest."

Finch and his present wife, Betty, are living in California now, but he has not yet reopened a practice in the state.

"I don't have any comments to make. You've got the decision. You can write whatever you want about it. The decision was based on good material," Finch said when contacted Friday by the Los Angeles Times.

Finch and his wife, a licensed clinical social worker, operated a medical clinic in rural Bolivar, Mo., where he was invited to practice by a citizens group.

Finch told the California board that he and his wife wanted to return to California to get to know their children and grandchildren better. In addition, he said his wife suffers from arthritis, which is irritated by cold Missouri winters.

In granting the license, state officials placed Finch on two years' probation. During that time, he must obey all laws and submit to regular reviews and interviews by board personnel. If he meets probation conditions, his license will be fully restored.

Finch and Ms. Tregoff were convicted at a third trial, after two trials ended in hung juries.

Worker attacks building

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A fired worker rammed an earth-mover into a dispatching building at his old workplace and then wrecked two other buildings after a guard told him to leave, officials say.

Thomas H. Stone, 31, who was fired from Louisiana Materials Co. Inc. on Monday, was held on $36,000 bond Saturday on charges of attempted murder, aggravated criminal damage and criminal trespass, said Harbor Police Superintendent Joseph Cannatella.

Two days after he was fired, Stone allegedly pinned security guard Raymond Dordain's car against a pile of seashells when the guard tried to drive away after telling Stone to leave. The shells are sold as a paving material.

"I left on the first hit," Dordain said Friday. "I couldn't wait for a second hit; I might be dead now."

The guard said he bruised his leg running from the 20-by-40-foot wood-and-metal building after the earth-mover buckled the wall a few feet from him.

Damage to the buildings at Louisiana Materials, a shell dealer, was estimated at $25,000 and damage to Dordain's car at $200, police said.

Dordain said he was on duty at the shell dealer's early Wednesday and spotted Stone walking in the company yard.

Officers said Dordain went out, told Stone he was not allowed on company property, and returned to the office.

Dordain said in an interview that he tried to telephone a supervisor to tell him Stone was there, but the phone was dead.

Microsurgery restores girl's eyesight

By TINA STEFFEN
Lifestyle Editor

The cloud of white near the center is the scar from the accident. Liz was blinded in her right eye in 1980 following an accident at home when she was about seven. A cataract formed in the blinded eye later. Recently Dr. DuBiner removed the cataract and restored Liz's eyesight through the use of microsurgery. Her patch was removed Thursday.

Nine-year-old Elizabeth (Liz) Perez and her family had almost given up hope. An accident in 1980 left her blind in her right eye. But last December Dr. Harvey DuBiner believed she would be a successful candidate for microsurgery. Today, 19 days after surgery, Liz can see out of both eyes.

Liz's story began in 1980. She was about seven years old and was playing with a friend at her home. Her brother, Michael, made a homemade bow and an arrow, which was an artist's paint brush. The paint brush's handle was broken at the tip and had a jagged edge. As he shot the brush Liz turned around to face him and the brush pierced her eye on the side of the pupil.

Liz didn't cry much, nor did she complain. "I was scared," she said. "I could see. It was kind of blurry." Her eye turned red, but there was no blood. Her other eye was fine.

"She didn't have too much reaction," said Lucia Perez, Liz's mother. "You would think when you cut yourself you see blood, but it (the eye) just looked like little red veins."

Mrs. Perez thought Liz would be okay. When Liz grew tired and sleepy, Her mother let her sleep. Later, Mrs. Perez realized that Liz could have been in shock and that sleeping may not have been the ideal thing to do.

When Liz's father, Anastacio Perez, came home, the family took her to the hospital. They learned that Liz had a severe, traumatic injury.

DR. P.W. MALONE took Liz into surgery to determine what damage had been done to the eye and to try to save it. The brush went inside the pupil without splintering. It broke the cornea and lens, but didn't damage the optic nerve. Had it damaged the nerve she would have lost the eye.

Malone saved the eye and decided to see how much it would heal by itself. It healed and later formed a cataract over the pupil. Liz could see light and darkness from the sides of her eye but was blinded from anything else by the rest of her eye. Liz never complained much about her handicap. At school classmates would ask her why she would look to the side instead of to them when they spoke to her. "I felt bad," she said. "Why are they asking me that? I'm looking at them," she wondered.

When Liz served herself a drink, sometimes she would position the pitcher a little too far across the glass and spill the liquid on the counter. Sometimes her vision would cause her to stumble. At first her mother thought that was due to Liz's youth and clumsiness, later she realized it was Liz's vision. Liz's left eye was strong, alert and overcompensated for the bad eye.

"(Dr. Malone) told us that when she was older, she could probably have surgery to help her," Mrs. Perez said. At that time, the state-of-the-art in surgery had not progressed enough for most doctors to have the training needed to perform the microsurgery that might allow her to see again.

"We thought that would be so far in the future, like after Liz was 20, but not this soon," Mrs. Perez said.

RECENTLY, LIZ BEGAN having trouble with her good eye's vision. "It got to where she had to (look) sideways to see things on the (chalk) board," Mrs. Perez said. Liz has an astigmatism in the eye.

Liz visited Dr. Harvey DuBiner, ophthalmologist at Malone-Hogan Clinic, Dec. 13, 1983 for a checkup. He prescribed new glasses for her good eye and decided to test the bad eye to see if the cataract could be removed and if she could see.

He used a bright red light to test the macula of her eye. The macula is the central part of vision that is used to see color. He also used a computer to shoot a picture of the back of Liz's eye and to reconstruct the image. If something was floating in the eye, it would show up in the image and would have told him that surgery would not have been good. The image showed nothing floating. "I had two indications that surgery would have been successful," he said. He told Mrs. Perez that advancements have been made and Liz could have her blind eye worked on.

DuBiner decided to perform surgery to remove the cataract in hopes that Liz would gain her eyesight back. "It seems like everything was heading toward that — to have an operation to help her see," Mrs. Perez said. "We're thankful Dr. Malone saved the eye. And Dr. DuBiner said it was a good operation (that Malone performed earlier). We didn't know she could be helped."

Liz was scheduled for surgery Jan. 10. Before her surgery began, her family had a prayer time with her, to pray for God's will and a successful surgery. Liz wasn't scared this time. She had been through it all before.

DUBINER REMOVED the cataract except for a little piece that he left. If he tried to remove it, it would have caused more damage. Liz has a little cloud on her eye where the scar is from her injury. It will always be there.

"We spent 45 minutes to an hour doing it (the surgery). The faster you can get in and out of the eye the better it is going to do," DuBiner said.

When DuBiner took the patch off Liz's eye following surgery she saw his hand move. "It was a little bit faded out. He put up his hand," she said. The first thing she told him was she could see his fingers, how many he was holding up and whether his hand was going up or down. "He said, 'Can you see light?' That was easy to see," she said. "It's going to be hard seeing with both eyes because I'm used to one."

"I was speechless," Mrs. Perez said. "I couldn't find the words to say when she was repeating the letters," during an eye exam following surgery. "I know there's a lot of people who believe in divine intervention. Dr. DuBiner says he just performed the surgery." The Perezes believe Liz's new eyesight is a miracle.

When Liz returned to school, her classmates asked her questions like, "Why do you have that patch on your eye?" "Do you have an eye?" "Let me see your eye. Is it red?" she said. "Even Mr. Huibregtse asked." Harlan Huibregtse is her school's principal.

LIZ CONTINUED to wear a patch over her eye until Thursday. Her eye was red from surgery, but much of the redness has gone away with time. She is being fitted with a permanent contact lens for the eye.

"If for some reason she lost her good eye, she could depend on this eye to see," Mrs. Perez said. "It's a pretty darn good eye considering she saw nothing out of it before," DuBiner said. "She's a super patient."

DuBiner was almost as excited Mrs. Perez was when Liz was reading eye charts. "I think it will get to the point where she will be able to pass a driver's test. She's progressed so much in the last two weeks. I'm sure she will continue to progress and do real well," he said.

"To know that I can take patients like Elizabeth and make her see again is great for me."

Waneta Mitchem

Woman expresses feelings through poetry

By RHONDA WITT
Lifestyle Writer

Waneta Walker Mitchem has been writing poetry about her friends and things affecting her life since she learned to write as a child. Writing was something "born in me," she said. "I wrote poems for everybody in school and I still write."

Mrs. Mitchem was surrounded by poetry while growing up, but her parents didn't encourage her writing. "My daddy was a poet. He didn't write them, but he said them. Daddy kept everybody laughing by making up poems. He talked in rhymes."

Mrs. Mitchem grew up in Beckley, W. Va., with five brothers and five sisters. She is the only one that writes poetry. "I don't know why some of them didn't pick it up," she said, since they were around their father all the time. "But if everybody had the same talent it would be a dull world."

SINCE MOVING TO Texas, Mrs. Mitchem hasn't tried to write as often. "I'm kind of lonesome for the hills." Many of her poems are about growing up in West Virginia. She writes about people, places and things that have affected her life. According to her, several poets live in West Virginia. She was the first president of the Beckley Chapter of the West Virginia Poetry Society.

"My poems are not complicated," she said. They are down-to-earth reading, and you don't have to have a dictionary to read them. I feel much better after I get it out of my system.

"I write things, then I put them away and forget I wrote them. I've got a box full of hundreds of poems that haven't been in a book yet. I write all kinds of poems. There's no limit on what you can write."

Mrs. Mitchem writes when she is alone, often at night. "Many a time I have gotten up in the middle of the night to write something down, because I would forget it if I didn't," she said. "It just pops in my head. If I don't write it fast, I lose it."

One of her poems, "Expectant Father," was written after her daughter had a baby. Her son-in-law was working out of town, so she had to take her daughter to the hospital. Mrs. Mitchem spent 15 hours in the waiting room waiting for the baby to be born. "I had been an expectant mother before, but it was my first time to be an expectant father," she said.

MRS. MITCHEM authored the books "Mountain Memories" in 1977, which she dedicated to her children, and "Hill Country Poems to Delight" in 1970, which she dedicated to her grandchildren. "Mountain Memories" was a best seller at the state fair in Ripley, W. Va. two years ago.

It's a job getting the poems ready to put in a book, Mrs. Mitchem said. "You just don't measure it in time. You've got to have enough good stuff to go in a book. I don't work at it (writing poetry). When a poem hits me, I go write it down. They are all original. It may take years to get enough material."

Mrs. Mitchem lives with daughters, Rebecca Hancock and Sherry Halstead, and grandchildren John Halstead, Lee Hancock, and Sonya Hancock. Mrs. Mitchem's son David also lives in Big Spring. Some of the poems she writes are about her children and grandchildren.

One of Mrs. Mitchem's daughters has shown some interest in writing poetry. Mrs. Hancock wrote a poem for her mother, titled "Mom." "She has written one poem, and it was hard for her," Mrs. Mitchem said. "She said, she worked and worked on it."

Every member of Mrs. Mitchem's family has a copy of her books. "Everytime I write a poem, they want to read it."

READING POETRY — Waneta Walker Mitchem enjoys reading a poem from her book, "Mountain Memories". She authored "Mountain Memories" in 1977. Her first book, "Hill Country Poems to Delight," was published in 1970. Mrs. Mitchem has written poetry since she was a little girl. Her poems reflect her life and growing up in the hills of West Virginia.

The couple was wed before an altar decorated with candles, greenery and ribbons. Rex Wilson, pianist, provided music for the ceremony.

The bride wore a formal-length candlelight gown. The bodice covered by brocade, and pearls accented the puffed sleeves. The dress fell from the waist into a cathedral-length train. To complete her ensemble, the bride wore a waist-length veil held by a Juliette cap. She carried long-stemmed red roses.

Ruth MacWilliams of Fort Davis was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Sonya Phillips, Marion Norris, Cathy Bailey, all of Alpine, Jan Blacklock of Midland and Sara Spurlock

Dear Abby

To keep the peace, man won't speak his piece

DEAR ABBY: I was once advised that at all costs, I should try to keep peace in the family, yet when I'm with my in-laws I feel as though I've landed on another planet.

They are the most bigoted people I've ever known. They make their feelings known in many ways. My father-in-law always has a new "joke" that invariably insults a minority group.

I have kicked myself for not speaking up and thereby encouraging further incidents. How can I tactfully make my feelings known, contain my anger and keep peace in the family? I don't want to suddenly blow up at the next family gathering and ruin everything, and I don't want my wife to do my talking for me.

PERPLEXED

DEAR PERPLEXED: Speak up! You may not educate your in-laws with one speech, but you can let them know that you disapprove of racial "jokes" and do not care to hear them.

Apropos remaining silent when one should speak up is this gem of a piece I have kept for nearly 30 years. It was written by a German Lutheran pastor who was arrested by the Gestapo in 1938 and sent to Dachau concentration camp until he was freed by the Allied forces in 1945.

I DIDN'T SPEAK UP by the Rev. Martin Niemöller

"In Germany, the Nazis first came for the communists, and I didn't speak up because I wasn't a communist. Then they came for the Jews, and I didn't speak up because I wasn't a Jew. Then they came for the trade unionists, and I didn't speak up because I wasn't a trade unionist.

Then they came for the Catholics, and I didn't speak up because I was a Protestant. Then they came for me, and by that time there was no one left to speak for me."

DEAR ABBY: Recently I attended a funeral service at a church. The family of the deceased filed in this order and sat in the front row: first the sister of the widow, then the widow, next her sons and their families.

To be correct, shouldn't the widow's sister have let the widow and her immediate family go first and be seated in the front row, then she (the widow's sister) bring up the rear? A QUESTION OF PROTOCOL

DEAR QUESTION: The funeral director usually instructs the mourners concerning the "correct" order to file in and be seated for the service. However, at a time when most families are numb with grief, if the correct protocol is not strictly observed, only the pettiest of the petty would take note and be critical of the lapse.

DEAR ABBY: This is in reference to the older woman who was hoping to get her attorney son-in-law to draft her will:

Choosing lighting fixtures

When selecting lighting fixtures, it's important to be aware that each type has a different purpose and will create a different effect of mood.

A wide variety is available on the market today, ranging from shaded lamps to accent lights, translucent spheres, smoky glass chandeliers, track lighting and many more. Some fixtures spread light equally in all directions. Others with shades tend to cast light up and down only, which contributes to highlight and shadow in a room. Another fixture, such as track lighting, will wash an entire wall with light or accent a plant or painting.

It may be difficult to get a clear sense of how each type of fixtures will perform in your home by looking at a store display. Take time to observe lighting in other places including friends' homes, hotels, restaurants and other places. Over time you can get an idea of the effect each type of lighting will create and which will work best for various needs in your home.

Lights selected for each room in your home will vary depending upon the mood you want to create, as well as the need for a particular task. In a kitchen, every area is used for a variety of tasks, so good general lighting is recommended. A ceiling fixture with fluorescent tubes or incandescent bulbs that spread light in all directions is a good choice. It should be placed an equal distance from all cabinets. Large kitchens may need more than one fixture.

Provide a light at each working area in the kitchen so you don't have to work in your own shadow. Single fluorescent tubes under cabinets are recommended for this purpose because of their long narrow shape and high efficiency.

An unshaded ceiling fixture which floods the room may not be pleasant in a dining room as it eliminates shadow and texture and results in a bland, uninteresting effect. Dimming doesn't really help because all it does is make the room gloomy unless shaded lamps are also used nearby. Instead, you may prefer a shaded hanging fixture which casts its light mainly on the table and on the ceiling, contributing a relaxed atmosphere. Bedroom ceiling fixtures are usually of little value except to see to find your way into the room so another light can be turned on. A more efficient use of the bedroom lighting system would be to connect the light switch directly to a lamp instead of a ceiling fixture.

Living or family rooms are most pleasant with a series of several light sources distributed throughout the space rather than only general illumination from a ceiling fixture. This is because brightness overhead tends to create a brisk, work-like atmosphere which is more suitable for a laundry room or kitchen.

Jewels & Gems

by Ralph and Lynette Brooks

Today when speaking of the "ring finger," we all know that the reference is to the third finger of the left hand. However, this is a relatively recent custom in terms of the history of the wedding ring. Until the 1750s, Roman Catholics used the right hand for wedding bands. In fact until the sixteenth century all European women wore their wedding rings on the right hand and on any finger. The little finger was frequently used because it is the least active finger. Wealthy women favored their thumbs with huge wedding rings in order to impress their servants, while in India women have worn their wedding rings on their thumbs since ancient times.

Begin planning your flower garden

With cold weather the rule for West Texas this time of year most horticultural work is best done in-doors!

Plan your spring and summer flower garden from the comfort of your favorite armchair. Rely on the garden catalogs as references. Most reputable seed companies provide accurate information in their catalogs. They want to keep you as a satisfied customer year after year. These catalogs provide a wealth of details about flower varieties — giving such information as color, height, planting tips, and season of bloom. Armed with this information it is easy to plan a well-arranged, attractive garden. At times be adventurous and select one or two of the new or different varieties to include in your garden as a conversation piece. Another variation that often proves interesting is to plan an all-white or all-pink flower bed or attempt to select only flowers with fragrance for your garden.

Whether you start your annuals from seed or whether you purchase started plants, a well-organized planting plan is helpful. It will enable you to make your purchases early and obtain quality plants rather than have to take what is left at the end of the season. Price should not be a factor when purchasing seeds or started plants. Quality plants, while slightly more expensive initially, will usually provide much more beauty and satisfaction in the long run.

Flowering annuals create dazzling displays of color in the garden, so why not bring a few indoors to add sparkle to your home this winter and year round.

Many annuals, especially the dwarf varieties, can be grown indoors in a sunny window. It's easy enough to do — simply buy transplants, or bedding plants, at your local garden center. Plant the small bedding plants in a container with a drainage hole using a commercial potting mix. Then...sit back and enjoy your indoor flower garden.

A few of the best to bring indoors are wax begonias, browallia, impatiens, and ornamental peppers. All of these plants will tolerate night temperatures around 60 degrees F. and prefer day temperatures of 68 degrees F. or higher.

Wax begonias bloom profusely and continuously even indoors. They have small, satiny flowers in white or shades of pink and red which top glossy green or red-tinged foliage. Set in a sunny window where they'll receive about four hours of direct sunlight and allow the soil to dry slightly between waterings.

Try a hanging basket of impatiens or browallia. The soft, flat flowers of impatiens in red, pink, orange, purple, gold, white, and bicolors practically cover the shiny green leaves. Browallia has satiny clear blue or snowy white trumpet-shaped flowers. Both bloom freely in your home if placed in a sunny window. Browallia needs about four hours of direct sunshine; impatiens prefer indirect or curtain-filtered sunlight. For the most attractive baskets, look for dwarf varieties.

Ornamental peppers have tiny white flowers, but the real showstopper is the bright, clear color of the fruit — red, orange, yellow, green, and purple. The fruit change color as they ripen, so all colors can be present on one plant at the same time. Do not fertilize these plants; just place in a window where they'll receive at least four hours of direct sun.

You might try bringing some other flowering annuals indoors, such as geraniums, celosia, petunias, and coleus. Ones that prefer shade outside are your best choices.

Q.: A while back, I heard the figure 25 percent as being the standard outlay of a family's income for housing. Is that figure valid?

A.: Until about the last decade it was thought sound financial management for a family to spend more than 25 percent of their income on housing. But, of course, times have changed drastically to such an extent that the 1980's call for an equally drastic change in investment psychology. Inflation has put housing at the top of the list of preservers of dollar purchase power — indeed a better hedge than savings accounts, securities or government bonds. As early as 1976, the acceptable average housing outlay had risen to 31 percent and, recognizing this trend, many lenders have expanded their guidelines for home loan qualification. Housing today remains one of the few profitable savings plans, equity builders and tax shelters for the average family.

Reverse tennis elbow

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I have what has been diagnosed as "reverse tennis elbow." I have had cortisone for it, and wonder now if surgery will be needed since I still have the pain. I play golf and bowl, but don't play tennis. Please explain this condition and what can be done for it. — J.G.

(no more than three injections a year). In only a very few instances is surgery required, and that would be to correct serious damage to the muscles.

Do this test. Let your arm (either one) drop to your side with the palm facing forward. With the other hand, feel for two prominent nubbins of bone, one on either side of the elbow.

The one toward the body side is the medial epicondyle. The one on the other side is the lateral epicondyle. These two points are where certain lower arm muscles attach themselves. Muscles from the underside (hairless side) of the arm attach to the inner (medial) epicondyle. They bend your hand downward at the wrist. Muscles from the hairy side of the arm attach to the lateral (outer) epicondyle. They cock the wrist upward. When either set of muscles is stressed pain appears at the elbow point of attachment.

Regular tennis elbow involves the muscles attached to the lateral epicondyle. That's because those muscles (hair side) take much of the shock when the tennis player hits a backhand with the wrist locked, as he should. The pain from regular tennis elbow, then, appears at the outer side of the elbow (as you're holding it in that palms forward position).

Reverse tennis elbow, if you haven't guessed, involves the muscles on the other (hairless) side of the arm, the muscles attached to the medial epicondyle. When you swing a golf club, there is a forceful contraction of those muscles at the end of the swing. If they are injured from repeated stress the resulting pain is felt at their attachment at the inside of the elbow. That's reverse tennis elbow.

If conservative measures, like rest and aspirin, don't bring relief, then steroids may be tried

Restaurant manager chases sheep

ALICE AND CLYDE SELF were leisurely dining at Golden Corral restaurant when a waitress went over to some men sitting at a table next to them. The waitress asked the men if the sheep running about on FM 700 belonged to the men. The men either had been or were about to participate in one of the area stock shows. The sheep had gotten out of the truck and were walking around the parking lot and FM 700. Traffic was backed up as people slowed down to watch the men and the restaurant manager try to catch the sheep.

DEBBIE SALAZAR and her best friend ADELA PADILLA went to San Antonio to Adela's aunt's wedding last weekend. The two had a blast. They walked in the rain to the Alamo, and visited Hemisphere Plaza and several night clubs. In one of the malls, they met some friends who live in San Antonio but visited Big Spring three years ago.

Also last weekend, MR. AND MRS. CARL HIGDON of Odessa visited in the home of MR. AND MRS. MIKE HIGDON.

MR. AND MRS. JOHN BAILEY of Luther, recently returned from a trip to Junction, Mason and San Angelo where they visited their children and grandchildren.

On Turning Heads

by Gary Don

Are you new to the area? It is usually with great anxiety that you consider entrusting your hair to a new stylist. You may wish to continue the look to which you have become accustomed without a radical departure. It is easy to understand these feelings about your crowning glory. Approach the problem by first visiting a recommended salon. Once there, have a manicure or hairstyling only, not a cut. Use the time there to observe the styles being completed and watch for an operator who most closely allies himself with your sense of style. Then, based on your observations, make an appointment for a cut.

A hairstyle for today's woman on the go, should be easily maintained while flattering to the individual. At LA CON-TESSA, our staff is extremely experienced in all the latest techniques in haircutting and styling. You will find us conveniently located at 1508 Marcy. Our salon is open to serve you Tues.-Sat. Tel. 267-2187.

When choosing your china, you'll find that the shapes of different patterns vary tremendously. Dinner plates come with or without rims, flat or with gently sloping sides, swirled from the center and on the border, or fluted on the border only. Coffee cups have different shaped bowls and handles and may or may not be footed. Here at The ACCENT SHOPPE we suggest you study each shape carefully before deciding on which features are the most pleasing to you. And very importantly, we'll help you enjoy making your "final decision!"
