Off the wall: Long night

HONOLULU (AP) — Most players in the Pro Bowl went to bed early the night before to be well-rested for the game, but Gren Bay Packers wide receiver James Lofton had some extra work to do.

He helped as his wife delivered their first child. "He was my coach," Beverly Lofton said Sunday while resting in Kapiolani Children's Medical Center, where she gave birth Saturday night to the 9-pound, 8-ounce boy, David James.

Despite his fatigue he also delivered on the field, catching an 8 yard touchdown pass as the NFC beat the American Football Conference all-stars, 45-3.

Most Texans dislike integration

By DAVID HILL
Texas Poll Director
Second of five parts

It's been 30 years since the U.S. Supreme Court struck down racially segregated schools, but a statewide survey suggests that blacks — and not whites or Hispanics — are the only people clearly convinced that integration has been a good thing for their communities.

The Texas Poll, a telephone survey of 1,007 Texas residents conducted in December, found 71 percent of the blacks having an opinion said school integration had been good for their communities.

Among whites, however, 32 percent said integration had been a positive change while 19 percent said it had not made much difference at all.

Hispanics were divided over whether school integration had been good (48 percent) or had made no difference (45 percent). Only 6 percent said integration had been a bad experience.

If whites and Hispanics have been slow to acknowledge the benefits of school integration, they have also made some accommodation to its drawbacks.

The poll shows that problems with school integration rank relatively low — ninth place — among the problems mentioned as the most important facing local public schools in Texas.

This result tracks the findings of the annual nationwide Gallup survey of public schools. After ranking behind "discipline" as the second biggest problem facing public schools in the mid-1970s, integration has dropped steadily down the list to eighth place in 1983. Those in Texas who said school integration was a bad experience for their communities most often said it lowered academic standards and led to busing.

"Your children are bused 45 miles from home, and if they miss the bus — you're out of luck — and they miss school," said a 38-year-old construction worker.

A retired white railroad worker, 81, was blunt: "There are too many blacks who are allowed to pass whether they are competent or not."

Supporters most often mentioned that integration reduced racial prejudice and was simply "the right thing to do."

"I want my little girl to have all colors and kinds of friends," said an unemployed white woman, 36, from the Dallas area.

A 19-year-old black sales clerk said: "I have many times been the only black in my class, so when integration came it changed the thinking of many people."

The poll found that those who remained on the fence about integration most often said it accomplished nothing, or that their community never had any prejudice, or that there were no blacks living there.

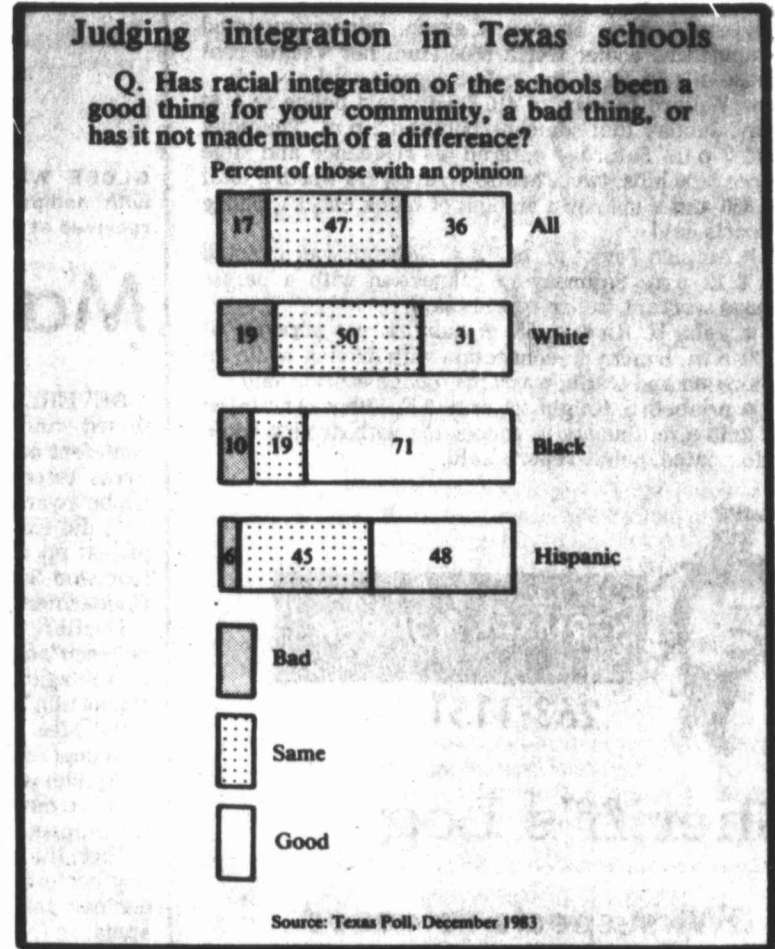

"Racism is not the problem — discipline is the problem because it is sadly missing," said a white homemaker, 47, from the San Antonio area.

"There are some schools that are segregated and some schools that are not, and there doesn't seem to be any difference in them," explained a white painter, age 53.

An Hispanic clerk, 42, expressed his disappointment this way: "People's opinions have not been integrated; they still think racist and pass it on to their children."

In all, 809 people expressed an opinion on the question: "Has racial integration of the schools been a good thing for your community, a bad thing, or has it not made much difference?" Of that number, 643 were whites, 59 were blacks and 93 were Hispanics.

Tuesday: Texans are still confused over telephone charges.

Unsung heroes battled big freeze

By RICK BROWN
Staff Writer

City water and street workers are the "unsung heroes" of the Freeze of '83. That's the assessment of City Public Works Director Tom Decell, whose crews repaired 132 water main breaks between Dec. 21, 1983, and Jan. 6, which virtually covered the map of Big Spring.

Decell said during the crisis that his workers contributed "superhuman efforts" in combating the breaks.

"They worked far beyond what was expected. They worked long hours in terrible conditions, and they worked cheerfully," he said.

More than 1,500 overtime hours were logged by the workers during the period.

Three of the workers, Eliseo Gamboa, Joe Torres, and Johnie Scott said the breaks hit the city slowly at first, but speeded up as cold weather held its grip on the city.

"We were running from one break to the next, just shutting the water off so we could come back and fix it later," Gamboa said.

The men displayed an amazing amount of loyalty to their jobs. Gamboa said he worked 24 straight hours on one occasion during the period of bad weather. Scott said he worked three such 24-hour shifts during the freeze. Scott said he kept on working even after his supervisor told him to go home.

Torres said he did not spend any holiday time with his family during Christmas or New Year's Day because he was needed to help fix the main breaks.

DOWN IN THE HOLE — City utility workers Eliseo Gamboa and Joe Torres dig out around a water main in extreme south Big Spring. Conditions much worse than these prevailed when the workers fought bitter cold to keep city water flowing during the Freeze of '83.

Conditions the men worked in were nothing short of polar. In temperatures as low as two degrees, the men worked to dig out the area around the leaks and then one of them would jump into the at times waist-deep water to try and patch the leak.

"Runny noses are part of the job," Torres said. Some of the workers were sent home because of sickness and still returned to work because the crisis was so bad, Scott said.

Torres said to be working "in the hole" was "not so bad" because the water kept workers relatively warm. He said it was important when working in such cold weather to keep wet body parts underwater and not splash body parts that were dry.

The worst part of the work was waiting outside the hole after already having gotten wet, Gamboa said.

When working on a break, Torres said it is important to "get on it and don't stop until the job is complete."

"Then get someplace warm so you don't get sick," he added.

Sun Belt lets out another notch for growth

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Sun Belt will continue to set the pace in population growth through the Eighties with all three of the nation's fastest growing cities, American Demographics magazine predicts.

Fort Lauderdale-Hollywood-Pompano Beach, Fla., is expected to be the nation's fastest growing metropolitan area, increasing 27.9 percent by 1990, according to the February issue of the magazine, which specializes in population issues.

Second is expected to be Phoenix, Ariz., increasing by 27.1 percent, followed by Houston, Texas, up 25.2 percent.

The projections are based on studies done by the Washington-based National Planning Association.

Such growth notwithstanding, the

New York City area will remain the nation's largest in 1990, the magazine predicts. The metropolitan area is expected to decline from 8.3 million to 8.27 million people by 1990, but to still top No. 2 Los Angeles-Long Beach, Calif.

Noting the growth of non-urban areas, however, the magazine estimated that the 45 percent of Americans who now live in the nation's 50 largest metropolitan areas will drop to 44 percent.

Of the top 50 metropolitan areas, only New York and Buffalo, N.Y., are projected to lose population.

However, four more cities could drop off the Top 50 list if smaller areas increase their growth rate.

Those four possibilities are Dayton-Springfield, Ohio; Kansas City, Mo.; Memphis, Tenn., and Middlesex-Somerset-Hunterdon, N.J.

Their likely replacements are Monmouth-Ocean City, N.J.; Oklahoma City; Nashville, Tenn.; and Providence-Pawtucket-Woonsocket, R.I., according to the projections.

Here's a rundown of the predicted 50 largest metropolitan areas in 1990 and their populations compared to 1980. The figures are for metropolitan statistical areas, as defined by the federal Office of Management and Budget, and not for individual cities.

1. New York, 8.27 million, down from 8.30 million; 2. Los Angeles-Long Beach, Calif., 8.05 million, up from 7.49 million; 3. Chicago, 6.32 million, up from 6.07 million; 4. Philadelphia, 4.85 million, up from 4.72 million; 5. Detroit, 4.71 million, up from 4.49 million;

6. Boston-Lawrence-Salem-Lowell-Brockton, Mass., 3.83 million, up from 3.67 million; 7. Washington, D.C., 3.47 million, up from 3.25 million; 8. Houston, 3.34 million, up from 2.74 million; 9. Nassau-Suffolk (counties), N.Y., 2.75 million, up from 2.67 million; 10. Atlanta, Ga., 2.45 million, up from 2.14 million;

11. Baltimore, 2.34 million, up from 2.20 million; 12. Anaheim-Santa Ana, Calif., 2.31 million, up from 1.93 million; 13. Dallas, 2.30 million, up from 1.96 million; 14. San Diego, 2.27 million, up from 1.86 million; 15. Pittsburgh, 2.26 million, up from 2.22 million;

16. Minneapolis-St. Paul, Minn., 2.05 million, up from 1.94 million; 17. Miami-Hialeah, Fla., 1.96 million, up from 1.72 million; 18. Oakland, Calif., 1.94 million, up from 1.76 million; 19. Newark, N.J.,

Reagan will run in 1984

WASHINGTON (AP) — Declaring, "Our work is not finished," President Reagan said in a paid political broadcast Sunday night that he will stand for re-election.

"We are here to see that government continues to serve you — not the other way around," he said. "We are here to lift the weak, and to build the peace." He set no specific goals for a second term.

Reagan, 72, confirmed that Vice President George Bush will again be his running mate in a campaign already well underway.

There were no surprises in the text of the five-minute announcement being televised from the Oval Office at 10:55 p.m. EST. Several newspapers were on the street with the story even before the broadcast began.

The president ticked off a list of problems that he said faced the nation when he took office in 1981, and concluded, "Well, things have changed." Echoing his 1980 campaign theme, he said, "We made a new beginning."

The former actor and governor is making his fourth presidential campaign. Twice he did not win the Republican nomination; this time he is unopposed.

His decision came as 1,000 GOP officials gathered in a nearby hotel ballroom to cheer a candidate who is riding high in the polls and has already amassed a $4 million re-election war chest. "Tomorrow we have all got to go to work," Campaign director Edward J. Rollins told the crowd.

"Vice President Bush and I would like to have your continued support and cooperation in completing what we began three years ago," Reagan said. "I am therefore announcing that I am a candidate and will seek re-election."

He said, "Our work is not finished," he said. "We have more to do in creating jobs, achieving control over government spending, returning more autonomy to the states, keeping peace in a more settled world, and seeing if we can't find room in our schools for God."

Eight men are seeking the Democratic nomination to oppose Reagan and the president was already on the attack.

In an interview with Newsweek magazine, Reagan took direct aim at former Vice President Walter F. Mondale, who leads the field of Democrats seeking to oppose him.

"Frankly, I think he has tried to be all things to all people, and I think he has made more promises than probably can possibly be kept. His promises, if all kept, would give us a budget that, as one

Testimony resumes in infant death trial

GEORGETOWN, Texas (AP) — Prosecutors in the Gene Jones murder trial go back to work today, opening a third week of trying to prove that the nurse killed a toddler with a dose of a powerful muscle relaxant.

Kerr County District Attorney Ron Sutton has said he would wrap up his case by mid-week. Evidence will include further testimony from Dr. Kathleen Holland, Ms. Jones' former boss in Kerrville.

Ms. Jones, 33, is charged in the September 1982 death of Chelsea McClellan, a 15-month-old Kerrville girl who died after getting two injections from the nurse.

The shots were supposed to be routine immunizations, but prosecutors say they carried a deadly dose of a muscle relaxant.

Sutton also said he would try to show a motive this week.

Texas Monthly magazine, in an article published last year, reported that prosecutors believe Ms. Jones liked to put children in life-threatening situations and then save them. She is charged in a string of infant deaths and illnesses.

Defense lawyer Jim Brookshire, who has spent two weeks trying to poke holes in prosecution testimony, has not said whether Ms. Jones will testify.

Meanwhile, the presiding judge decided to move the trial to a larger courtroom this week.

During the first two weeks of testimony, the case attracted overflow crowds to State District Judge John Carter's small courtroom. In addition to ruling on crucial legal questions, Carter has played seating monitor — reserving seats for reporters, the dead baby's family and high school students.

The second-floor courtroom holds only about 60 spectators. On many days, spectators have been on hand before the doors opened.

The trial has attracted a varied crowd, but always a crowd larger than the courtroom's padded benches could hold.

GLOBE WINNER — Barbra Streisand displays with delight the two Golden Globe awards she received at the presentation ceremonies in Beverly Hills, Calif. Saturday night. She won best director for the film "Yentl," which also won best film.

MacLaine, Cher win Globes

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Cher was a surprised winner, but Shirley MacLaine was frankly confident of her victory as the Hollywood Foreign Press Association handed out its 41st annual Golden Globe awards.

"I did expect this," Miss MacLaine said as she picked up a best dramatic actress award, one of four won Saturday night for the movie "Terms of Endearment."

The film, tracing the rocky but loving relationship between an overbearing widow and her daughter, also snagged best drama, best screenplay and a supporting actor award for Jack Nicholson.

But Miss MacLaine was the movie's only winner to accept in person at ceremonies taped for nationwide television broadcast later.

"Give me these things and I show up every time," she quipped. "I sure deserve it."

Cher, the singer who was honored for her supporting performance as the troubled friend of an anti-nuclear activist in "Silkwood," won appreciative applause from a Beverly Hilton hotel audience that seemed to enjoy her revealing black leather miniskirt as much as her funny, flustered acceptance.

"I don't have any speech prepared because I just didn't think I was going to win this," she said. "Just look at my dress until I can think of something."

When the laughter died down, she thanked her mother, former husband Sonny Bono and her two children "for believing in me when all you Hollywood moguls wouldn't give me a job."

Another winner who professed astonishment was Julie Walters, who co-hosted the awards show with John Forsythe of television's "Dynasty" and was named best actress in a comedy for her performance as a hairdresser-turned-scholar in "Educating Rita."

"Blimey!" Miss Walters exclaimed. "This looks like it's a fix, (but) you know it's not — they sent my $2 back."

Michael Caine, who co-starred as Miss Walters' alcoholic university don, won the comedy actor award.

"Yentl," Barbra Streisand's musical about an Eastern European woman who passes for a man in order to attend yeshiva at a time when such studies were forbidden to women, earned best musical and best director honors.

"I feel very grateful to have had the opportunity to make this film, and that to me is its own reward," said Miss Streisand, who produced, directed, cowrote and starred in the movie.

"Flashdance" won awards for its score and the hit song "Flashdance... What a Feeling."

The best dramatic actor award was shared by Tom Courtenay, who played an elderly actor's servant in "The Dresser," and Robert Duvall, the aging country singer in "Tender Mercies."

"Fanny and Alexander," Swedish director Ingmar Bergman's saga of love and loss in a well-to-do turn-of-the-century family, was named best foreign film.

Paul Newman was the previously announced winner of the Cecil B. de Mille award, presented by the foreign press association's board of directors to honor career achievement.

In television categories, the big winner was "The Thorn Birds," a miniseries about an Australian outback family. It earned the best miniseries or TV film award, the miniseries actor award for Richard Chamberlain and supporting player honors for Barbara Stanwyck and Richard Kiley.

Forsythe won the drama series actor award for "Dynasty," which was also named best drama series.

President Reagan's former wife, Jane Wyman, picked up the drama series actress award for "Falcon Crest," while Ann-Margret won the miniseries-film actress award for her portrayal of a dying mother in "Who Will Love My Children?"

In comedy series categories, "Fame" was named best show, Joanna Cassidy of "Buffalo Bill" best actress and John Ritter of "Three's Company" best actor.

Reagan

of his opponents in the Democratic contest said of him, would make the deficits $400 billion."

Under Reagan, the deficit has skyrocketed to $180 billion. Reagan said he expects a close race, adding, "As I've said so many times, just take the advice of President Dewey — don't get overconfident."

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., one of Reagan's most prominent Democratic critics, was quick to react.

"Ronald Reagan has been a divider, not a uniter," he said. "He has divided our country between rich and poor, between the hopeful and the hopeless, between the comfortable and the miserable. He has not been fair and the people know it."

"The American people will reject four more years of danger, four more years of pain."

In a statement given to her spokeswoman Saturday, first lady Nancy Reagan said: "It was a mutual decision. I support him fully. I'm very proud of him, and all he's accomplished in a very short space of time."

Mrs. Reagan's desires, and the president's age, were two of the chief reasons for speculation that the president might not seek a second term.

Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., one of those likely to have sought the GOP nomination if Reagan had not, said in a statement released by the White House: "He has clearly earned the right to finish the job he began over three years ago, and I pledge my wholehearted support."

Jimmy Carter, the president Reagan ousted from office in 1980, would not comment Sunday night, his office said in Georgia.

Edward J. Rollins, Reagan's campaign director, told the assembled crowd: "Tomorrow we have all got to go to work. We have to work very, very hard."

Reagan said that in the three years since he first spoke to the nation from the Oval Office, "We've faced many difficult problems, and I've come to feel a special bond of kinship with each one of you."

He said that three years ago, the nation's defense were weak, "we had suffered humiliation in Iran. And at home we were adrift possibly because of a failure here in Washington to trust the courage and character of you the people."

"But worst of all, we were on the brink of economic collapse from years of government overindulgence and abusive overtaxation," he declared.

Citing rising rates of interest and inflation at the time he took office, Reagan said "The only things going up were prices, unemployment, taxes, and the size of government. While you tightened your belt, the federal government tightened its grip."

"Well, things have changed." To bolster this theme, Reagan cited an inflation rate that has dropped to 3.2 percent, interest rates cut in half, growing sales of automobiles and houses, and a drop in the unemployment rate, which under his tenure reached a post-depression high of 10.8 percent.

The Reagan-Bush campaign committee paid about $400,000 to air Reagan's announcement. The money couldn't buy suspense, but Reagan was coy to the last, telling GOP officials early in the evening: "We'll trust that everything comes together before the night is over."

Broken valve cause of small Cosden fire

A fire that was "more spectacular than anything else" broke out early Sunday morning at the Cosden Oil and Chemical Company when crude oil from a broken nipple ignited and sprayed flames straight up in the air.

Cosden firefighters with the help of two units of the Big Spring Fire Department fought the blaze for about forty minutes after it started at 12:25 a.m., according to Jimmy Wood, a Cosden spokesman.

Wood said he is not sure how the fire started, but thinks it might have begun with the heat generated by the mechanical failure.

Damage from the fire should be slight, according to Wood, although he could not estimate damages in dollar figures as of noon today.

Attorneys ask judge to dismiss Geter case

DALLAS (AP) — A new round of courtroom efforts to exonerate black engineer Lenell Geter began today when defense attorneys asked a state district judge to dismiss the controversial armed robbery charge against Geter.

Judge John Ovard set a Feb. 13 hearing to consider evidence on the motion for dismissal.

Defense attorney George Hairston said he hoped to prove that Geter, 26, was improperly identified by witnesses to a $615 robbery of a fried chicken restaurant.

Geter, who was accompanied to court by NAACP executive director Benjamin Hooks, had his 1982 conviction and life sentence thrown out after news reports of the case raised doubts about his guilt. Geter is scheduled to go on trial a second time on the charge on April 9.

"I'm anxious to get married and get on with my life in a relaxed way," Geter said before the pre-trial hearing. "I'm confident because I know I am innocent and I just want to get this over with."

Ovard granted a prosecution request for a "protective order" to prevent CBS News from destroying any videotape made while its "60 Minutes" news show investigated the Geter case.

Hooks, who said the NAACP's national convention will be held in Dallas in 1985, said he came "to see what the (racial) climate in this town is like."

"I'm a little bit concerned about this case and what impact it might have nationwide on what we're trying to do," Hooks said. "Our people are very disturbed about the climate we are going into."

Weather

By the Associated Press

West Texas — Mostly fair tonight through Tuesday. A little colder south tonight. Warmer north Tuesday. Lows 25 north to 28 south, except near 29 mountains. Highs near 58 most sections to 68 Big Bend valleys.

Front moves out of state

A cold front completed its sweep across most of Texas early today, triggering pre-dawn showers and thundershowers in southeastern portions of the state.

Dense fog developed from Beaumont to the middle coastal region, prompting travel advisories because of hazardous driving conditions. Visibilities across the area were reduced to several hundred feet or less, the National Weather Service said. Skies were mostly clear across the rest of the state, except for some scattered high-level cloudiness.

Pre-dawn temperatures ranged from near freezing in the Panhandle to the 50s and 60s in South Texas. Most readings were in the middle 30s to middle 40s.

Northerly winds at 15 to 25 mph took the place of light breezes as the front passed. Wind gusts of 40 to 60 mph were reported in the mountain passes of West Texas.

The forecast called for cloudy skies and showers to continue into the evening over far South Texas. Fair skies and slightly cooler temperatures were on tap for the rest of the state. Warmer afternoon readings were forecast for northern regions of the state Tuesday.

Some showers were expected to linger along the lower Texas coast tonight and Tuesday. Elsewhere in the nation, up to 8 inches of snow blanketed the Midwest from Iowa to the Ohio Valley today with more snow spreading eastward into New England.

The winter storm, churned up by strong winds gusting to near 60 mph, dumped 6 Iowa Sunday with 2 or 3 more inches expected early today.

Snowfall across northern Illinois was expected to average 4 inches while up to 7 inches locally was expected to smother northern Indiana.

Gusting winds from 45 to 60 mph were expected to cause near blizzard conditions across the region today. Travelers advisories were issued for parts of Missouri, Indiana and Kentucky where freezing rain was mixed with up to 3 inches of snow.

Meanwhile, blowing and drifting snow in the upper Midwest caused travelers advisories to be posted there.

The threat of flooding continued on the Salmon River near Salmon, Idaho. Dense fog enveloped northwest and eastern Utah.

The national weather forecast for today predicted continued strong and gusty winds over the Central Rockies, southern Arizona and the mid Mississippi valley region.

The national forecast called for locally heavy snow to continue from the Great Lakes, across the Ohio valley to the Central Appalachians.

Temperatures on left indicate previous day's high and overnight low to 8 a.m. EST. Temperatures on right indicate outlook for tomorrow.

Perkins faces drug charge

LONDON — "Psycho" star Anthony Perkins faces a court appearance Thursday on charges of smuggling eight grams of marijuana and three "spots" of LSD into the country, according to Scotland Yard.

ANTHONY PERKINS

Perkins, 51, was arrested at Heathrow airport Sunday after officers found marijuana and LSD during a search of his baggage, a Scotland Yard spokesman said.

He said Perkins was released without bail and ordered to appear at Uxbridge Magistrate's Court in west London, he added.

LSD can be obtained in small "spots" attached to a piece of paper under plastic covers that peel off. Perkins starred in the Alfred Hitchcock movie "Psycho" and the sequel last year, "Psycho II."

Singer defused crisis

SEATTLE — New York Metropolitan Opera star Jerome Hines says an appearance he made in Moscow at a critical time in U.S.-Soviet relations may have helped defuse the Cuban missile crisis.

Hines, who was in Seattle to perform in Verdi's "La Forza del Destino," recalled that Soviet ships carrying nuclear missiles were en route to Cuba and President Kennedy had proclaimed the U.S. naval blockade of the island when he was on stage in Moscow in the title role of "Boris Godunov" in October 1962.

The 62-year-old singer, an evangelical Christian, said he'd prayed that God would send Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev to the performance that night.

As the curtain rose, the 6-foot-6 Hines, whose booming bass voice has won him starring roles all over the world, marched out behind a minor player carrying a banner of Christ. "I thought, 'OK, commies, here's your Savior,'" Hines recalled.

Khrushchev did attend, and after the grand finale, a delighted Hines walked over to the premier's box and bowed. Later, the singer was invited to a reception at which Khrushchev proposed a toast to Soviet-American friendship.

Hines felt an impasse had been broken. It was the next day, he said, that Khrushchev ordered the Soviet ships to turn back.

"That was the Lord's work," says Hines, co-founder and national president of the 5,000-member Fellowship of Christians in the Arts, Media and Entertainment.

Man marries 26th wife

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — Glynn Scotty Wolfe, America's most-married man, says wedlock "is the greatest adventure in the world next to death. It's always fun."

And he should know. He's just tied the knot for the 26th time.

Wolfe, 75, took his latest bride Saturday at a wedding chapel on the Las Vegas Strip. As he stepped out with his new wife, 38-year-old Christine Camacho, someone handed him a copy of "The Guinness Book of World Records," which lists him as the man with the most marriages in "the monogamous world." The book, already out of date, says he's been married 25 times.

"I feel wonderful," said Wolfe, of Blythe, Calif., the owner of a small hotel.

His longest marriage lasted nearly five years while the shortest ended after 19 days. He has fathered 40 children and been divorced 25 times.

Wolfe said until now none of his brides has been older than 22.

"I married two of the wives twice," he said. Then, frowning, he added, "I have 24 mothers-in-law."

GLOBE, Ariz. — Marine Sgt. James Lopez received a hero's welcome when he returned to his hometown after 15 months as a hostage in Iran. But now his family is moving because his father can't find work.

JAMES LOPEZ

Jesse Lopez had worked in the copper industry for more than 20 years. Now, he says, he and his wife, Mary, and their daughter, Marcie, will be moving to Phoenix as he continues his search for a job.

His son is studying at the Citadel in South Carolina, where he expects to become an officer in three years.

When the Marine came home, he and his family met President Reagan and hobnobbed with senators, congressmen and governors. Later Lopez was the center of the biggest parade in Globe's history.

Soviets lodge complaint

MOSCOW — The Soviet Union has lodged a complaint saying the United States violated accords on nuclear weapons by deploying new missiles in Western Europe last year.

The complaint was delivered "a few days ago" by the Soviet Embassy in Washington to the State Department, according to the official Soviet news agency Tass, which ran the text of the note on Sunday.

Last week, President Reagan sent Congress a report alleging Soviet "violations and probable violations" of arms control treaties and political agreements.

Reagan's report said Soviet conduct "raises doubts about the reliability of the U.S.S.R. as a negotiating partner."

The Soviet note said Reagan's report was "openly directed at worsening Soviet-American relations." It claimed the Soviet Union had taken an "honest and responsible approach to the fulfillment of its commitments."

The Soviet statement accused the United States of violating the second Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty by deploying medium-range nuclear missiles in Western Europe late last year. The Soviets said SALT 2 forbids use of third parties — in this case Western European nations — to circumvent its limits.

The United States never ratified SALT 2 because of the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan and controversy in the U.S. Senate over verification procedures and other issues. But Reagan had said he would try to abide by terms of the treaty.

The Soviets maintain that deployment of the missiles has upset the U.S.-Soviet strategic balance because the rockets are capable of striking Soviet territory.

NATO claimed the new missiles were needed to counter the threat posed by Soviet nuclear rockets capable of hitting Western Europe.

The Soviets quit talks in Geneva, Switzerland, aimed at reducing medium-range nuclear missiles in Europe after the new NATO missiles arrived in Western Europe. They are demanding removal of the missiles before they return to the negotiations.

The Soviets also refused to set a date for resuming talks on limiting strategic nuclear arms.

The Soviet statement said the United States "blocked and frustrated" the Geneva arms talks and earlier had stopped negotiations on banning nuclear weapons tests, on making the Indian Ocean a nuclear-free zone, on anti-satellite systems and other matters.

Bombing victim was in KKK

DALLAS — A 63-year-old man killed when a bomb exploded in a newspaper vending machine was a member of the Ku Klux Klan, according to a man identifying himself as the organization's Texas recruiter.

Ward S. Keeton had told classmates in a community college that he had infiltrated the Klan and the American Nazi Party for the government.

An FBI spokesman said Keeton "is known to us" but would not confirm any connection between Keeton and the agency.

Orval Pugh, who identified himself as the Klan's King Kleagle and Texas recruiter, told The Dallas Morning News and Dallas Times Herald that a man listed as "W. Keeton" was a KKK member for a short time.

Pugh said Klan records at the organization's national headquarters show Keeton joined the Klan on Aug. 10, 1976 and completed a three-month probation period. Keeton then attended regular Klan meetings of a now disbanded chapter in Dallas for a month before dropping out, Pugh said.

Pugh, who originally said that Keeton had not been a Klan member, said he received calls from other members Sunday saying they remembered Keeton.

Pugh said the Klan had nothing to do with the bombing.

"We would not bomb anybody and that's being frank with you," Pugh said. "That's too violent for the Klan."

Classmates who attended Richland Community College with Keeton two years ago, said Keeton brought several items of Nazi paraphernalia to an evening business communications class — including weapons, swastikas and propaganda pamphlets — as visual aids for a speech about his undercover activities.

"His function was to find out basically something about their (Nazi and KKK's) main motives, just to keep tapped in and keep a tight rein on what's going on," one classmate told the Dallas Times Herald Saturday in recalling Keeton's presentation. "He needed to know what their moves were going to be, so he had to be a member."

"I remember him saying he infiltrated subversive groups for the government," said Germaine Roberts of Rowlett. "And once you got him talking, you couldn't shut him up."

FBI spokesman U.H. Specht said in Dallas that he could neither confirm nor deny any involvement by Keeton with the agency, but Specht did say that Keeton "is known to us."

Priceless films found

TYLER, Texas (AP) A batch of long-discarded reels discovered in an East Texas warehouse has turned out to be a potentially priceless collection of early movies starring, produced and directed by blacks, according to film historians.

Some of the movies were made in Dallas during the 1930s and 1940s, say experts who have studied the films.

Eighty films were found recently in a Tyler warehouse. The reels have been donated to the Film Video Archives at Southern Methodist University.

The metal film canisters were discovered in August in a construction warehouse owned by Roosth and Genecov, a Tyler real estate firm. The company wanted to get rid of them, said the firm's rental manager, Roy Larson.

"We've turned everything we have over to the Dallas Police Department and the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms," Specht told the News.

Keeton, dressed in a bathrobe, was killed instantly early Friday when he opened a News vending box near his apartment. Neighbors said he bought a paper from the machine every morning at about the same time.

Jackson recovering nicely

LOS ANGELES — Singing sensation Michael Jackson, recuperating from scalp burns caused by fireworks apparently mistimed during the filming of a commercial, is "doing great" at his fan-flanked home, his brother says.

Devotees bearing cards, flowers and stuffed animals streamed up to the gate of the house in Encino in Los Angeles' San Fernando Valley Sunday to give security guards their offerings. Some clutched cassettes, records and fan magazines as they stood vigil across the street, waving happily when Jackson's mother appeared and waved back.

"Michael's fine. He's doing great." Tito Jackson said Sunday as he drove through wrought-iron gates in front of the house.

"He's taking it easy," said Jackson's physician, Dr. Steven Hoefflin.

Jackson's scalp sustained second- and third-degree burns when an explosion set his hair on fire Friday night as he was filming a Pepsi-Cola commercial to the tune of his hit "Billie Jean" at the downtown Shrine Auditorium.

The ad was one of two being made for use during the broadcast Feb. 28 of the Grammy Awards, which will also be held at the Shrine. Jackson, who won eight American Music Awards two weeks ago, has 12 Grammy nominations for singing, songwriting and producing and even for narrating a children's album.

Hoefflin, who viewed videotapes of the accident with Jackson Saturday night, said it appeared the accident happened when one of the fireworks exploded at the wrong time.

The tax exemption for mortgage bonds expired Dec. 31. Last week, the first of the 1984 session, more than two dozen separate bills were introduced to revitalize the program. Since three-quarters of the members of the House and Senate endorsed the bonds last year, extension is a good bet, despite objections of the Treasury Department and the General Accounting Office. It would cost $2.2 billion over the next five years.

The House Ways and Means Committee approved a bill last year that would have extended the tax exemption for another five years. But the measure bogged down in the House after the committee insisted the extension be accompanied by new restrictions on another tax-exempt bond, known as private-purpose industrial development bonds.

Under the old law, state and local governments could issue mortgage revenue bonds that, because they were exempt from federal income tax, could be sold at lower interest rates and still attract upper-income investors. In turn, the money would be lent to first-time homebuyers at three to four percentage points below the going market rate for mortgages. On a $42,000, 30-year mortgage, that subsidy would cut a monthly house payment by about $80.

This subsidy comes at no cost to the local government or the homebuilder. The federal treasury foots the bill.

The General Accounting Office concluded last year that 74 percent of the benefits went to bond lawyers, investors and other middlemen, and that most of the remainder benefited middle-income families that probably could have gotten along without a subsidy.

Exemption comes under fire

WASHINGTON — Just a year ago, members of Congress were lining up by the dozens to demand repeal of tax withholding on interest and dividends. Now they have a new cause: extension of a federal housing-aid plan that has been branded inefficient and a huge tax loophole for the rich.

The mortgage subsidy is a classic example of a tax benefit that is enacted for a lofty purpose — in this case, promoting home ownership — and becomes so popular that it can't be ended, despite evidence it might not be working as intended.

LULAC suit settled fairly

By unanimous vote, the school board agreed Thursday to usher in a new era of representation by all our citizens. It chose to amicably settle, out-of-court, the voting rights lawsuit of the League of United Latin American Citizens.

What LULAC pleaded in its federal court suit was that the at-large system of electing school board members diluted the voting strength of a sizable segment of non-white voters — particularly Hispanics. The intent of the school district's at-large voting system wasn't to advance discrimination, but the effect surely was the same. In its history, there never has been a minority representative.

Minority voters are congregated in the northwest part of the city. With at-large (district-wide) elections, a minority voting bloc has little effect. But with the school limits divided into districts, one of the four voting wards will have a majority of non-white voters. And the new plan gives our schools a running start at having representation that mirrors the demographics of the city.

This is not to say that District 1, the minority district, will have a non-white representative. Any resident of that district has equal opportunity to seek office. But in District 1, a white person will be required to convince a 66 percent non-white constituency that he or she is their candidate of choice. That's the mirror image of what minority candidates have always faced.

With a seven-member board, the new plan represents the best of all worlds. It assures minority voting strength in one district; it offers geographically vested interests in the candidates from all four of the new districts; and it provides district-wide representation by three at-large trustees. Taken in total, we are comfortable that the new structure of the board of trustees will allow ample consideration of all points of view in future decision-making.

Best of all, the new plan has these pluses without the negative of tampering with the voters' mandate on term of office by trustees. The settlement still faces federal approval, but given the fact that all parties to the suit are satisfied with it, that blessing seems certain.

Henry's folly

WASHINGTON — Negative reaction unsaid the message of the Kissinger Commission on Central America before it was delivered. For most Americans instinctively recoil from heavy commitments to that area.

The national imagination is now caught up in a wholesale restructuring of basic industry. While there may be a little energy left over for such large affairs as Europe and Asia, the U.S. will — not wrongly — try to get by in the foreign backwaters by doing as little as possible.

The great merit of the report is that it asserted the rich mix of different elements required for a long-term solution in Central America. It incorporated both the show of force cherished by the Reagan administration and the human rights so dear to Jimmy Carter. It went past the economic growth of the Alliance for Progress, and beyond the diplomacy of the Good Neighbor Policy, it called on the U.S. to "promote the development of Central America in all its dimensions — economic prosperity, social change, political modernization and peace."

A very tall order, indeed. The commission finds an emergency requirement for military and economic assistance to prevent El Salvador from going under. It asserts a potent case for keeping pressure on the agents of Cuban-Cum-Russian expansion in Nicaragua. All the countries in the area are said to need more help to promote security, health and education, human rights and democracy. On top of that the commission wants a full-fledged diplomatic effort with Mexico and Venezuela, who are urged to join the U.S. in a new Central American Development Organization, CADO.

Each one of the interested parties in Washington wants a tiny piece of that prescription. The White House seeks to use the report as a basis for negotiation with the Congress. The State Department is keen for the emergency help that can see El Salvador through to the elections set for March 25. The Pentagon is delighted to be relieved of the responsibility for direct engagement of American forces. The Democrats are taking bows for a provision which ties continued military aid to "periodic reports" from the president showing "demonstrated progress" toward democratic government.

Partial endorsement finds its flip side in extensive reservation on the commission itself. Eight of the 12 members went beyond a general disclaimer of absolute unanimity to file specific dissents. The most engaging of these dissents came from the former Democratic Party chairman, Robert Strauss. After underlining the need for political reform in Central America, he wrote: "My concern is that this report, while not saying otherwise, might incorrectly be interpreted to the contrary."

That remark is absolutely empty of analytic content. A fellow Democrat, Lane Kirkland of the AFL-CIO, dismissed it with the barnyard epithet for nit-picking. But the double talk also reflects the kind of good sense that goes beyond articulation. Though there is no politics way to say exactly why, Bob Strauss knows in his bones that the Kissinger Commission report is not going to fly with the American people.

What can't be said is something we can all feel. The American people, almost without knowing it, have plunged into a new adventure in the national saga. By chops and changes of a dizzying kind, we are remaking the national economy.

The best telephone system in the world has been pulled up by the roots, and transplanted. Banks are going national, and many different service companies are into banking. A consolidation of the whole energy business was initiated by the merger of Texaco and Getty. The airline industry has been put up for grabs. General Motors is, almost casually, redrawing its organizational table. U.S. Steel is getting out of the steel business. IBM is developing the quickness at innovation of a small company.

Running through all of these changes is a new relations between work and machines. The country is reshaping the institutions primarily responsible for violent swings from inflation to recession. We are groping toward a system for gearing wage bargains to productivity. A post-industrial order is arising before our eyes.

Even absorption in such excitements does not exempt the U.S. from foreign responsibilities. This country will continue to stand up to Soviet pressure in Europe — though perhaps with a smaller troop presence. It will protect the oil fields of the Middle East. It may even move haltingly toward a new relation with the technologically dynamic lands of East Asia.

But the U.S. is not about to take on ambitious new projects in small countries that are only ambiguously connected with the new adventure of American life.

Joseph Kraft's reports on Washington, national affairs and trends are distributed nationally by the Los Angeles Times Syndicate.

Him Tarzan, me very sad fan

For me, when Johnny Weissmuller died last week, so did Tarzan.

Weissmuller, who starred in 18 Tarzan films, was the best of the pack of actors who portrayed the Ape Man. Forget Buster Crabbe, Lex Barker, Gordon Scott or latter day pretty boys like Mike Henry and Ron Ely — Big John was the best Tarzan for my money.

Weissmuller looked like Tarzan. Barrel-chested, with a strapping physique and square jaw, he cut an imposing figure. His tour de force, though, was the Ape Man look: a dull but tough jungle-wise countenance. He had the look one would expect Burroughs' Tarzan to have.

Most of the other actors looked too intelligent to be Tarzan, but Weissmuller's simple, slightly ignorant look sold the myth entirely.

Weissmuller's last film was in 1947, but I was lucky enough to catch most of them on Saturday and Sunday afternoon TV. Of course, none of the plots were too complex, but they all held to the notion that good always triumphs over evil — important stuff for little children's minds.

I watched old films and cheered Tarzan's triumph over evil everytime. Invariably, some bad bwana would infiltrate the jungle looking for a gold statue of some pagan god and then kidnap either Jane or Boy and force them to help find the treasure. Then Cheetah would go tell Tarzan and he would jump in the water, kill an alligator to get his blood pumping and then swing through the jungle to pluck his family from danger. He generally finished things off by sending a herd of elephants to trample the greedheads into jungle compost.

I'm sure the other Tarzans tried to, but Weissmuller was the only one who brought out a real sense of moral outrage when the bad guys stirred up trouble. Somehow he was able to show, to me at least, that a firm grasp of right and wrong and fair play was important.

Sure, Weissmuller was only an actor, but he had to be convincing if we were to by Tarzan as the protector of innocence and good. He had to make us think that doing the right thing was indeed the way to live. And I think his portrayal was resonant because he believed in decency and honesty.

Right and good were on Tarzan's side, he didn't need super-powers or a laser sword to win. Maybe it's corny, but Tarzan showed that one could triumph with simple ethics and truth.

And since Weissmuller's Tarzan helped me to see those things, I feel like that Big John's passing means that Tarzan is also gone. However, his lessons won't be forgotten, at least not by one fan.

Timber bailout to harvest votes

WASHINGTON — In an apparent attempt to harvest votes in the Pacific Northwest, President Reagan approved an industry bailout that will benefit some of the nation's richest timber companies — at an estimated cost to the taxpayers of $600 million.

Unlike the $1.5 billion Chrysler Corp. loan guarantee — which eventually earned the Treasury $311 million from the sale of stock warrants that were part of the deal — the timber barons' bailout will represent an unrecoverable loss to the taxpayers. The companies will be given a five-year extension on contracts to buy government timber on which they overbid, without having to pay interest that would normally be required for such contract extensions.

And unlike Chrysler, which was on the verge of bankruptcy when it appealed for government help, the big timber corporations that will benefit most from the bailout are in healthy financial condition. Individual companies earned profits as high as $60 million in the first nine months of 1983.

In fact, Wall Street analysts are predicting industry profits of nearly $3 billion for 1984. That's a 93 percent increase over 1982, when the timber companies first began whining for permission to waltz on their contracts.

What makes the bailout particularly galling is that it was the timber companies' own reckless greed that put them in the predicament from which Reagan has now rescued them. Wrongly expecting high inflation and the housing boom to continue indefinitely — and hoping to freeze out smaller competitors — the big timber companies went on a bidding binge in the late 1970s, offering prices for government timber that were as high as 400 percent of its appraised value.

Then the recession sent housing demand — and lumber prices — skidding down like logs on a flume.

The industry demanded to be let out of its contracts and allowed to buy the timber at the lower current price.

The timber barons found a sympathetic ear in John B. Crowell, assistant agriculture secretary for natural resources. Before he joined the government, Crowell was general counsel for Louisiana Pacific, which will gain an estimated $10 million share of the contract bailout.

It was Crowell who raised the political issue. My associate Michael Binstein obtained an internal memo from Crowell that said: "If extensions with interest are the most that the government offers, we can expect continued political agitation for doing something more. A recent poll in Oregon showed 53 percent of the persons queried to be in favor of allowing logging companies to satisfy their contract obligations by paying the lower current prices."

Crowell claimed he had no conflict of interest because he and his family had divested all their timber holdings.

The political point was also driven home by Oregon's Republican Gov. Victor Atiyeh when he came to Washington with timber industry officials last summer. Reagan carried Oregon by a slim margin in 1980.

During several stormy Cabinet sessions, the bailout was opposed by the president's Council of Economic Advisers, Treasury Secretary Donald Regan, Budget Director David Stockman and the Justice Department. One of the principal objections was that the bailout would set a precedent for other industries that are in trouble — or that claim to be.

The decision was made to hold the timber firms to the prices they bid for the timber, but to allow them an extra five years to purchase it. In the meantime, they will pay no interest on the money owed the government.

Footnote: For years Louisiana Pacific has been urging the Forest Service to require larger down payments at bidding time, piously proclaiming that this would reduce speculation. But Forest Service officials believe that this would squeeze many smaller timber companies out of business and lead to even greater control of the industry by the big companies.

BOONDOGGLE OF THE WEEK: Pentagon officials insist on using commercial rental cars on out-of-town travel instead of cheaper ones available from the General Services Administration, the Defense Department's inspector general reports.

"Seventy-seven percent of the paid travel vouchers we examined showed that DOD travelers elected to use commercial rental vehicles in lieu of GSA contract rental vehicles," an internal IG report states. The result was that "33 percent of the car rental costs could have been saved."

FRITZ BITZ: Recognizing his underdog status in the Democratic presidential race, Sen. Ernest "Fritz" Hollings, D-S.C., recently described himself as the "Cabbage Patch candidate."

God can rescue troubled marriage

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: My wife and I have been having some marriage problems, and in fact have talked about divorce. I have decided that maybe we need to find a church and turn to God for an answer, but my wife is reading some self-help psychology books that say divorce can be a very good thing. What direction should we go? — B.G.H.

DEAR B.G.H.: When something goes wrong (for example) with a household appliance, we are often told to return it to the manufacturer for repairs. He made the appliance, and therefore he knows what needs to be done with it in order to make it work again. In the same way, God was the one who gave marriage to us. Doesn't it make sense to turn to him when things go wrong, and follow his instructions to make your marriage work as he intended?

You and your wife should do everything you can to repair the damage that has been done to your marriage. Yes, divorce may seem to be an easy way out of the problems, but it will not solve anything for you in the long run. God's will is for marriage to be a life-long commitment of a man and woman to each other, and when you said your marriage vows you made that kind of commitment. Jesus said concerning marriage, "Therefore what God has joined together, let man not separate" (Matthew 19:6).

A perfect marriage actually involves three people — you, your wife, and God. Why is God so important in a marriage? One reason is because God can give you both a true love for each other — not an emotional attraction that will not last, but a love that is not selfish and instead wants to do what is best for the other person. When two people in a marriage are constantly insisting only on their own way and refusing to consider the needs of the other partner, conflict is inevitable. But Christ can give you a new depth of love for each other, because he can take away your self-centeredness and replace it with love.

Open your heart to Jesus Christ. By faith invite him to come into your life as your Lord and Savior, and then grow in your relationship with him every day as you read his work, pray, and have fellowship with other believers.

Dear Abby

Woman has cheerless holiday

DEAR ABBY: On Christmas Eve my husband and I got into an argument and he hit me in my eye with his fist. It felt like he had knocked my eyeball back into my head, so I went to the emergency room where I was X-rayed. Luckily no bones were broken.

When I got home he hit me under the chin, causing a knot to appear, so I took my two kids and went to a friend's house for the night. He followed me, forced the door open and demanded that I go home with him. I refused, so he lit the curtain with a cigarette lighter and left. Fortunately, my friend and I were able to put the fire out.

The next day when I went home, the place was a wreck. My clothes were all ripped up, lamps broken, etc.

When he came home he said he doesn't even remember hitting me. Then he said he was sorry. Well, being sorry doesn't help my face any. He could have blinded me or broken my chin.

I don't love him anymore and he sure couldn't love me and treat me this way. Abby, I don't want him here. Is there any way I can get him out and keep him out? And how can I keep him from bothering me? He's 26 and I'm 31.

ABUSED IN ATLANTA
DEAR ABUSED: Contact your nearest shelter for battered women. The people there not only provide abused women with temporary shelter, they tell them how to protect themselves from further abuse. Be prepared to get a restraining order against your husband. If he violates that order he will be locked up. He sounds like a sick man, but that doesn't excuse his brutal behavior. First, protect yourself and your children. Then insist that he be examined by a psychiatrist.

Please write again and let me know how you're doing. I care.

DEAR ABBY: A guy I work with said he was a little short just before Christmas, so he asked if I could let him have $50 until after the first of the year.

I gave him the $50 and so far he hasn't said anything about it. Do you think he's forgotten?

BIGHEARTED

DEAR BIG: Not yet. But give him a little more time and he probably will.

(If you put off writing thank-you notes or letters of sympathy because you don't know what to say, get Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Dr. Donohue

Wry neck may require treatment

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I have torticollis and it is pulling on the left side of my neck. It is very upsetting and painful. I've tried everything I know and nothing helps. Do you know of any kind of surgery? I am 52 years old. — J.H.

Torticollis, from the Latin words tortus (twisted) and collum (neck) has many causes and its treatment depends on the cause. Some have it after having experienced a sudden and severe snap in the neck. That can lead to a protracted neck muscle spasm and a twisting of the head in the direction of the contracted muscle. This is called traumatic torticollis. Others have it after a viral infection (post-infection torticollis). And many more have the painful twisting for reasons that cannot be identified.

If it results from trauma, then traction on the neck muscles, applied while the person is anesthetized, often brings relief. For the post-infection kind, neck traction is applied for several days, after which the person wears a soft neck brace until the muscles relax spontaneously.

Other types of torticollis, for which no cause is evident, are more difficult to treat. Sometimes, the nerves to the offending neck muscles must be cut. And let me add another procedure called to my attention by a kind reader the last time I discussed this problem. It is one about which I was unaware and which was successful for her. Her neurosurgeon implanted electrodes in her neck. A small amount of electric current was then applied to her spinal cord, relieving her of the symptoms. The device used is called a spinal cord stimulator.

If you haven't been seen by a physician about this, you should set up an appointment for proper diagnosis and evaluation of any of the treatments.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Variable-rate loans prosper

By LOUISE COOK
 Associated Press Writer

A growing number of homebuyers are taking out variable-rate mortgages, either by choice or as a matter of necessity. And an expert in the field says the lender's credibility is the key to the loan's success.

The Federal Home Loan Bank Board says that 55 percent of the mortgages granted in December were written with variable rates. Lenders in some areas no longer offer conventional, fixed-rate mortgages. If they do, they charge a substantial premium.

Mortgages with variable or adjustable rates became widely available on a national basis in 1981. Some states have permitted state-chartered lenders to offer them for decades, however.

West Bend Savings in West Bend, Wis., has been offering variable-rate mortgages since 1942. Richard A. Larson, president of West Bend, said every one of the institution's mortgages granted since the late 1940s has had an adjustable rate.

Holdings of those mortgages have seen their monthly payments go up — and down, Larson said. Rates during the 1960s and 1970s, for example, fluctuated between 6 percent and 7½ percent, he said; there were regular adjustments of one-fourth or one-half a point in the rates on outstanding mortgages.

Larson said the variable-rate mortgages are popular. "It's just a matter of building up your credibility," he said. Once borrowers are convinced that rates can indeed go down as well as up, "once they see what happens year in and year out," they will accept the adjustable loan.

"People get used to things," Larson said, adding that it was unfortunate that the variable-rate mortgages made their nationwide debut at a time of record interest charges. "There were a lot of scare stories," he said.

Someone who took out a mortgage at West Bend in 1980 or 1981 would have had an interest rate of 14½ percent or 15 percent, Larson said. Today, the mortgage holder's rate would have been adjusted down — to a little less than 12 percent.

There are many varieties of the new mortgages around the country. Most have some kind of cap, limiting the amount by which the interest rate can rise. In Wisconsin, West Bend is limited by law to a boost of 1 percentage point every six months and Larson said an increase of that magnitude would occur "very seldom."

The interest rates on most of the loans are tied to a pre-selected financial index. West Bend has one mortgage on which the rate is linked to the interest on three-to-five year Treasury securities; the rate is reviewed annually. Larson said the institution's most popular variable-rate loan, however, is not tied to any index; the rate is reviewed every six months and may be changed at West Bend's option.

A Look at All-Star Sunday

East rallies for 154-145 overtime win

MOST VALUABLE PLAYER — East All-Stars guard Isiah Thomas of the Detroit Pistons (11) looks for an open teammate while sailing around the West's Alex

English during the NBA All-Star Game in Denver on Sunday. Thomas received the MVP award for his 21 points and 15 assists in the East's 154-145 victory.

DENVER (AP) — Andrew Toney scored seven points and Julius Erving tossed in six of his game-high 34 points in overtime Sunday, lifting the East to a 154-145 victory over the West in the 34th annual National Basketball Association All-Star Game.

The East, winning for a record fifth straight time, rallied from a 14-point halftime deficit and was seemingly in command with a 128-119 lead with 3:50 to go in regulation.

But Jack Sikma of Seattle triggered a dramatic West rally, climaxed by Magic Johnson's basket that tied it 132-132 with 20 seconds remaining.

The East's Larry Bird missed a jumper from the corner with about six seconds left. The West got the rebound, but a desperation jumper at the buzzer by Johnson caromed off the backboard.

Isiah Thomas of the Detroit Pistons put the East ahead for good with a three-point play to open the overtime and was named the game's Most Valuable Player. The guard finished with 21 points and 15 assists.

Johnson, who held the game's old assist record with 16 last year, finished with 22 Sunday.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar of Los Angeles, making his record-tying 13th All-Star appearance, finished with 25 points to lead the West.

It was the third overtime game in NBA All-Star history, each won by the East, and the second in four years. The 154 points was an All-Star record, as was the combined 299 points.

Johnson, of Los Angeles, and Sikma finished with 15 points apiece, and Kiki Vandeweghe of Denver had 14 for the West.

York, who helped key the East's second-half rally, wound up with 18 points.

With Johnson dishing out 13 assists, the West broke on top 76-62 in the first half, despite 17 points by Philadelphia star Erving.

The East, spearheaded by King, closed within three points midway through the third quarter, but the West went into the fourth period with a 107-99 advantage which quickly vanished as Bill Laimbeer, a 6-foot-11, 245-pounder from the Detroit Pistons, took charge.

The East outscored the West 14-4 early in the fourth period to forge a 113-113 deadlock with 7:50 to go.

Laimbeer, scoreless during the first three quarters, scored six of his 13 points, and his Pistons' teammate, Thomas, had four points and an assist. Laimbeer's three-point play put the East ahead 122-117 with 5:54 remaining. Twenty seconds later, the big Detroit center, who was named to the All-Star team as a substitute for the injured Moses Malone of Philadelphia, hit a follow shot for a 124-119 lead.

But the West came rushing back, led by Johnson.

Theismann leads NFC to 45-3 rout in Pro Bowl

HONOLULU (AP) — Joe Theismann, who helped the Washington Redskins become the highest-scoring club in National Football League history, brought his act to Hawaii and started the Pro Bowl scoreboard flashing.

Theismann shattered two Pro Bowl passing records and ignited a National Conference scoring onslaught that ended in a 45-3 victory over the American Conference in Sunday's all-star game. Both the 45 points and the margin of victory also were Pro Bowl records.

Theismann completed 21 of 27 passes, rewriting the Pro Bowl standard of 17 completions set by Dan Fouts last year, and threw for three touchdowns, tops ever in the annual NFC-AFC clash.

And he played just over half the game, sharing the quarterback duty with San Francisco's Joe Montana.

"You put a group like this together and football is really fun," said Theismann, who guided the Redskins to an NFL-record 541 points during the regular season.

Asked if his performance, which earned him Player of the Game honors, helped ease the pain of the Redskins' 38-9 Super Bowl loss to the Los Angeles Raiders a week ago, Theismann answered: "No, I didn't come out here for that."

While the National Conference's offense was piling up the points, its defense was throttling the potentially high-powered AFC offense.

The NFC logged a Pro Bowl-high eight sacks of San Diego's Fouts and Kansas City's Bill Kenney.

Tampa Bay's Lee Roy Selmon and Washington's Dave Butz logged two sacks apiece, and safety Nolan Cromwell of the Los Angeles Rams ran a Fouts interception 44 yards for a touchdown.

NFC Coach Bill Walsh of the San Francisco 49ers was duly impressed by the performance of his squad.

"I think this could be the greatest group of players ever put together on one team," he said. "The quarterbacks, the receivers, the linebackers and defensive linemen are particularly impressive."

"It's hard to explain how a game like this turns into such a one-sided affair ... We may have had a little more incentive since the NFC Redskins lost the Super Bowl last Sunday."

Although Theismann, who started off with 11 consecutive completions, had the most spectacular outing, a couple of NFC runners also turned in fine performances.

Eric Dickerson of the Los Angeles Rams, who gained 1,808 yards to lead the league in rushing and become its top rookie runner ever, led the Pro Bowl rushers with 46 yards on 11 carries.

Greenwood, Borden Co. set for second showdown

By STEVE BELVIN
Staff Writer

The number seventh and eighth ranked Class A basketball girls teams in the state, both in the same district, with only four losses between them, last time they met four points was the difference; now it time for the second showdown.

This will be the case Tuesday night at Greenwood Gym at 6:30 p.m. when the seventh ranked Greenwood Rangerettes face the eighth ranked Lady Coyotes from Borden County.

Right now coach Cliff Stephens' Rangerettes lead the District 11-A race with a perfect 5-0 record, and stand 19-3 for the season. Their losses came to tough opponents Midland High, Andrews and San Angelo Lake View.

Borden Co. mentor Bill May feels his team has some paying back to do since the only blemish on their 19-1 slate is a 36-32 loss to Greenwood in the first district contest. One of the Lady Coyotes victories was 47-46 over Highland, the third ranked team in the Class A polls.

Each team employs a different of play. The Rangerettes like to play an up tempo type of game with their pressing defense and utilizing the fine outside shooting of guard Blinda Duke who averages 17 points per game.

Borden Co. is more more accustomed to playing a tough man-man defense while working the ball in for the high percentage shot, hopefully getting the ball down low to post players Roxie Wolf and Kelly Williams who average 13 and 12 points respectively, and combine for 15 rebounds.

In the first contest between the two, both coaches agree on one thing for sure; their team did not shoot well, as both teams shot under 30 percent from the field.

Wolf got three fouls in the first quarter guarding Greenwood's Kay Wallace; who at 6-1 has Wolf by two inches. Wallace averages 10 points and 11 rebounds per contest. But in that contest she failed to reach her average, as did Duke who scored only five points; while Wolf led the Lady Coyotes with 14 points.

It was the play of forward Deona Dean that pulled Greenwood to victory with her 11 points and 12 rebounds.

Other key players in the Greenwood line up is guard Maria Morgette, who at 5-9 is an excellent ballhandler and added strength on the boards averaging eight rebounds per game. Sophomore point guard Terri Busic earned her way into to the starting line up midway through the season, and has been running the Rangerettes offense since.

Borden Co. gets strong rebounding from 5-7 forward Shawn Vaughn who averages seven per game, and good ball handling from guards Shanna Bradshaw and Kelli Williams.

Unlike most small schools, these two teams do not have to rely on starters throughout the game; each has excellent bench strength. "We have a good bench," said May. "Becky Massingill and Teri Billington are good reserves, and I won't hesitate to put them in."

Stephens answers with Andrea Graham, Cindy Lea, Kendra Turbow and Stephanie Smith. "I would say we have fine bench strength," said Stephens. "Most of the time they do a good job."

And how does each coach foresee the upcoming battle?

"I expect we'll see a man-man defense," said Stephens. If they slow it down it won't bother us, we just have to hit our shots. We'll press some, it doesn't give the opponents time to think of what they are going to do, and it helps keep my team alert. I don't think it will be a high-scoring game because of their tempo."

And what about May? "I think they will press again," he said. "Their press really didn't give us that much of a problem, it was the missed shots; especially the free throws. We made only six of 16. I expect them to run the same things as last time — hopefully the results will be different."

Lewis aims for 30-foot long jump

NEW YORK (AP) — Carl Lewis has been threatening to become the first long jumper to break the 30-foot barrier, and he thinks this is the year he will make it.

"I think I can beat the world record outdoors this year, and I think I can jump 30 feet," he said Friday night after smashing his world indoor best with a remarkable leap of 28 feet, 10 1/4 inches in the Millrose Games at Madison Square Garden.

Lewis' winning effort, on his final attempt, equalled the second-longest jump ever — indoors or outdoors — and was 9 1/4 inches farther than the previous world indoor best of 28-1 that he had set nearly two years ago.

HUGS FOR THE CHAMP — The new WBC Lightweight Champion Billy Costello, receives congrats from his father, left, and another family member after his 10th round technical knockout of former champion Bruce Curry in Beaumont, Texas Sunday.

Vikings name new coach

HONOLULU (AP) — Les Steckel, who says he's frequently described as a "perfectionist and a workaholic," was formally announced Sunday as the new coach of the Minnesota Vikings.

Steckel, a boyish-looking 37-year-old, replaces Bud Grant, who announced Friday that he was resigning in order to have time "to pursue some other interests in life."

On the Vikings' staff as a receivers coach since 1979, Steckel becomes only the third head coach in the club's history. Norm Van Brocklin was the first, from 1961-1966, and Grant had held the job the past 17 years.

"Some people describe me as perfectionist and a workaholic," Steckel said at an informal press conference at Aloha Stadium just prior to the start of the National Football League's Pro Bowl game. "I say, 'What's wrong with a guy who works hard and tries to do a good job?'"

Steckel, who recently rejected a chance to become head coach at the University of Minnesota, said Grant had told him a few years ago that he believed he had the ability to be a head coach in the NFL.

Steckel added, however, that he was surprised it happened so quickly.

"I was shocked, as everybody was shocked, when Bud announced he was retiring," Steckel said. "Bud called me Friday night and told me they were offering me the job."

Steckel flew into Honolulu late Saturday, met with Vikings President Max Winter, General Manager Mike Lynn and Grant to work out details of a contract.

Winter said Steckel had been given a three-year contract, and added: "Les has done an excellent job for us. I feel the transition is going to be minimal, since he knows the system and the personnel."

Tar Heels lose starter in 90-79 win over LSU

By MIKE HARRIS
AP Sports Writer

Even games on consecutive days couldn't slow down North Carolina, yet the nation's top-ranked college basketball team may be in for trouble because of an injury.

The 17-0 Tar Heels overcame a strong first-half effort by No. 10 Louisiana State Sunday, pulling away in the last 20 minutes to a 90-79 victory. That was on the heels on Saturday's 73-61 victory over Georgia Tech.

North Carolina led 78-71 when Smith was sent sprawling as he drove for a layup. LSU's John Tudor was called for a flagrant foul and the Tar Heels' Michael Jordan, angered by the play, shoved Tudor to the floor and was assessed a technical foul.

"I know (Tudor) didn't do it on purpose," said North Carolina Coach Dean Smith. "Michael won't come to a teammate's defense like that again."

LSU Coach Dale Brown, whose team also lost 80-78 to unranked Auburn Friday night, said, "I thought it was a lack of confidence on our part down the stretch. You don't match basket for basket against the top-ranked team on the road."

As for the fouls by Tudor and Jordan, Brown said, "Tudor didn't try to hurt anybody. It was an aggressive foul. But, according to the rules, Jordan should have been ejected."

Brown was not unsympathetic of Jordan's actions, explaining, "I would have done the same thing. He was protecting one of his players."

Jordan scored 23 of his season-high 29 points against LSU in the second half as North Carolina overcame a 37-34 halftime deficit. Sam Perkins added 19 points and a career-high 17 rebounds for the Tar Heels.

Meanwhile, No. 16 Arkansas lost 58-54 to unranked Villanova at Philadelphia Sunday. Dwayne McClain scored 20 points, including a tip-in with three seconds left, to pace Villanova.

On Saturday, No. 2 DePaul routed 15th-ranked UCLA 84-68; Notre Dame tripped fifth-ranked Maryland 52-47; Marquette upended 14th-ranked Louisville 65-60; third-rated Kentucky stomped No. 18 Georgia 64-40; No. 4 Georgetown ran past Pittsburgh 63-52; sixth-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas turned back Fullerton State 82-75 in overtime; No. 7 Houston trounced Baylor 84-58; Eighth-ranked Texas El-Paso tripped New Mexico 60-59; No. 9 Illinois outlasted Michigan 75-66 in four overtimes; No. 11 Oklahoma fell to 13th-ranked Memphis State 69-65; No. 17 Wake Forest got past No. 19 Virginia 84-76, and No. 20 Syracuse defeated St. John's 78-74 in overtime.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, JAN. 31, 1984

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day and evening to spend your time building up whatever your usual duties and vocational responsibilities and duties happen to be and to see just where you can add to your income.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Discuss your ambitions with higher-ups and gain the support they can give you and also cooperate with their aims.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You have new aims in mind that need more study before you can reach them successfully. Garner all necessary data.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Keep any promises you have made meticulously and avoid trouble later on. Get routine work done in an efficient manner.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Show some practical thought for partners who are loyal and you appreciate being allied with.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Get right down to the work ahead of you and don't quibble or make any changes. Persevere to gain the respect of co-workers.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Your talents should be put on a more practical basis so that there can be a market for them. Be careful driving.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Be more practical and please kin. If you do any entertaining, make sure to be with people who can be helpful to you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You have a penchant for neatness and order and this is a fine day to exercise it. State your aims to good friends.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Good day to add value to your property by some repairs and slight modern changes. Get your accounts in order.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Get into personal affairs that can bring you more of the things you want. Do something to impress your friends.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Make a plan along more worldly and practical lines and you can have that added security you desire. Show devotion to mate.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Show more friendship for dynamic friends and they can be of assistance to you. Take part in that group affair.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be capable of comprehending worldly and practical affairs and how best to utilize them to own advantage. There can be quite a success during the lifetime, provided a good education is given.

"The Stars impel; they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Artists create Olympic murals

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Abandoning quiet studios for the hazards of life near the fast lane, 10 artists in hardhats are painting murals to beautify downtown freeway walls and overpasses for next summer's Olympics.

"It's very draining work, much more so than my other street murals," said Terry Schoonhoven, who has incorporated the Pantheon and the Nike of Samothrace into a fictionalized Los Angeles skyline taking shape above the 6th Street bridge over the Harbor Freeway.

"Seeing the amount of poor decisions made and bad driving that goes on, it's amazing the freeway system works at all," Schoonhoven marveled.

The traffic isn't the only hazard faced by participants in the Olympic Arts Festival's mural project. There's also the smog, auto emissions, incessant noise and discomfort from long hours spent standing on metal platforms or walkways to paint murals that will stretch out 300 feet or more wide and up to 20 feet high.

How do the artists handle it?

"With planning and earplugs," said Alonzo Davis, the project's co-producer and creator of a mural combining African and American symbols at the 3rd Street Harbor Freeway on-ramp.

"I'd put myself in a rubber suit if I could," added Judith Baca, whose "Women in Marathon" will grace the 4th Street Harbor Freeway off-ramp.

The artists, who chose their sites from a California Department of Transportation list of locations deemed sufficiently visible and safe, "must conform to normal safety measures required of any contractor," said Caltrans engineer and art coordinator Bob Goodell.

All must wear hard hats and vests and use signals. They cannot work during rush hours, which means they must start after 9 a.m. and finish by 3 p.m. each day.

Five of the artists found out after choosing their sites that they had to erect concrete safety barriers, paying costs ranging from $350 to $1,100 out of their commissions: $2,000 for the original drawing and $15,000 for the mural.

The money must also cover materials and wages for any assistants, such as the "gang-oriented kids" who are working with Glena Boltuch on a mural incorporating portraits of children of various ethnic groups. The work is going up under the Children's Museum, for which it will also serve as a label.

ART IN THE FAST LANE — Artists in Los Angeles brave smog, noise and traffic to paint murals along freeways, like the one shown above, in an effort to beautify downtown form next summer's Olympics.

"Paint alone costs $2,000," Ms. Baca said.

The artists who had to put up barriers will probably also have to pay for their removal, and none of them expect to turn a profit for the murals, which are supposed to be completed by May 1.

Still, the artists are excited — if a bit weary — about the project, which is offering some a chance to try out new techniques and mediums. Schoonhoven is experimenting with a mineral paint made in West Germany that has been tested for 75 years' durability.

The artists were given free rein in selecting subject matter, which will range from Schoonhoven's visionary skyline and Willie Herron's wrestler to Kent Twitchell's massive portraits of artists Lita Albuquerque and Jim Morphesis and Frank Romero's homage to the city's automobile cult with "a joyous procession of cars," one for each of the Olympic rings.

"These are murals that are meant to be seen from the fast lane," Olympic Arts Festival director Robert J. Fitzpatrick said when the project was first announced.

Right-of-way laws

Q. What is the failure to yield right of way law?
 A. Article VIII, Section 71 of the Texas Motor Vehicle Laws deals with right-of-way. Section 71 (a) states, "The driver of a vehicle approaching the intersection of a different street or roadway shall stop, yield and grant the privilege of immediate use of such intersection in obedience to any stop sign, yield right-of-way sign, or traffic control device erected by public authority, and after so stopping may only proceed thereafter when such driver may safely enter the intersection without interference or collision with traffic using such different street or roadway."

It is violation of this particular law that is most common in motor vehicle accidents. When it is determined that this violation has occurred a charge of Fail to Yield right-of-way can be filed.

Who is the professional check writer?
 Anybody who continually cashes bad checks. The professional can wear work clothes or be dressed in expensive clothes. Age and sex are not standard, because the professional could be young or old, male or female. Many times the professional will use very complex methods of cashing checks. Usually the professional will have planned each step carefully, because they want things to run smoothly. The professional has all the answers.

One of the best deterrents against the professional check writer is the camera recording system. Each person cashing a check is photographed, and this is one method the professional does not like. They feel that they can get by without getting caught if their true identity is not known. The photo also provides very good identification in court.

Texaco may sell Getty stations

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — Texaco Inc. says it has agreed, if it acquires Getty Oil Co., to sell Getty's service stations and other marketing assets in 11 Eastern states to Power Test Corp. for approximately $90 million.

The sale would take place if Texaco succeeds in its $10.1 billion bid to acquire Getty, an offer that is being reviewed by the Federal Trade Commission for possible antitrust conflicts.

Texaco also said Sunday that the deal with Power Test is contingent on a federal antitrust review. Power Test, based in Plainview, N.Y., is an independent petroleum marketing company with about 450 service stations in New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts and Connecticut.

Under the agreement, Texaco would sell about 600 Getty service stations and nine marketing terminals in New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont.

Meanwhile, Power Test agreed to assume contractual obligations to supply another 1,300 Getty stations.

The $90 million sales price is subject to appraisal of the real estate and inventories involved, Texaco said.

Feds charge preacher evaded tax payments

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Federal prosecutors contend evangelist David Heze Terrell is a tax cheat, but his followers believe that he's more like a saint.

Terrell, the nearly illiterate son of Alabama sharecroppers, is charged with underreporting $200,000 of his income between 1976 and 1979. His trial enters its third week of prosecution testimony today.

James Westmoreland, a Houston mechanic and former pastor of a San Antonio church associated with Terrell, has testified that the evangelist was more interested in building wealth than helping the poor.

"He didn't want anyone to approach him with less than $1,000," Westmoreland said of church offerings. "I remember one Sunday when one gentleman stood up and gave $15,000."

Westmoreland told jurors that Terrell preached God would bless only those who gave everything to the evangelist, and that great tragedy would befall those who did not give generously.

"He said for us to sell out — all your houses, your land, your cars," Westmoreland said. "He said give to the prophet and you will be blessed like the children of Moses."

Westmoreland said he decided to leave the ministry during a missionary trip to Guatemala and Honduras. He said he became disgusted when ordered by Terrell to seek contributions from the poor people of those countries.

Prosecutor Ken Robinson painted Terrell as a preacher with two lives — and two names.

The government introduced evidence showing that Terrell legally changed his name to Daniel Hugh Ford, but continued to maintain separate drivers' licenses with both names.

"It is our contention the defendant did so for the sole purpose of attempting to conceal himself and his undue assets," Robinson said.

John Kinlaw of Florida testified that he and his family gave the Terrell ministry some $125,000 in property, including two Mercedes-Benz automobiles.

Another witness said Terrell spent $30,000 to build a guitar-shaped swimming pool.

Several evangelists told the jury that it was unusual for preachers in the congregation to give each other $30,000 or more in cash loans or gifts, and for the money to be stuffed in mattresses, paper bags or safe deposit boxes.
