Off the wall: No yolk

OXNARD, Calif. (AP) — It's no yolk — Kenneth Varnau has delivered more eggs than the Easter Bunny, hauling his fragile cargo to contented customers for 43 years.

But now Varnau is calling it quits. It's not that he's chicken-ing out or that he's finally cracked — it's just that, at age 76, the delivery man has decided take things over easy and retire.

The not-so-hard-boiled hauler of literally millions of eggs over the years says things have changed since he first began selling eggs from the back of his truck — most notably the price, which was 15 cents a dozen when he first started.

Now he plans to travel a little, indulge in his hobby of model trains and take it easy in his retirement.

"What I'll miss most is seeing my old customers," he said. "They're more than customers — they're friends."

Varnau has racked up a few hundred thousand miles in his delivery trucks, but he says he never got egg on his face by having an accident in an egg-filled truck.

"I have dropped a few boxes," he admits.

He also confessed that can't stand to eat yolks or whites.

Keeping an eye on weather

Meteorologist offers safety tips for stormy days

By RICK BROWN
Staff Writer

Although most West Texas residents say their weather is unpredictable, they can be sure that weather severe enough to post a watch or a warning will hit their area several times during the year. At such times, tornadoes are always a possibility.

To inform West Texans of the characteristics of severe weather and to help them decide what safety precautions to take when severe weather hits, Meteorologist Jim Yates of the Midland office of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) is leading seminars and training sessions in several less populated West Texas locations.

The seminars and training sessions also are designed to encourage spotter networks so people will know about severe weather problems before fatalities can occur.

Yates, who is in charge of 17 West Texas counties, was he was in Glasscock County Thursday at the Garden City High School Auditorium to lead the first of seven "out-county" seminars concerned with severe weather.

Yates will lead similar seminars in Stanton at 7 p.m. March 1 at the District Courthouse and in Gail at 7 p.m. March 5 at the high school auditorium. Other seminars are planned during the coming month for Crane, Kermit, Iraan and Midland.

Yates defined severe weather as having at least one of three characteristics: damaging winds (including tornadoes), hail larger than three-quarters of an inch in diameter and heavy rain that could cause flooding.

When such conditions exist, weather officials will issue either a "watch" or a "warning," Yates said. A severe weather watch usually will last for a period of several hours and will cover a wide area, such as 70 miles on either side of a line from San Angelo to Wichita Falls.

A severe weather watch is a forecast and only indicates that a possibility for damage exists, he said.

In contrast, a severe weather warning indicates that the damaging conditions are present, he said. Warnings are usually issued for a shorter period of time, such as one hour, and are issued to a more specific area, such as one or more counties.

Persons who think they might be in an affected area during a severe weather warning should take

Bus line may face petition

Greyhound plans may be contested

AUSTIN — Texas Railroad Commissioner Jim Nugent urged the state's lawyer Friday to "build a bonfire under his staff" to file a lawsuit to save Greyhound bus service in 38 rural communities.

"Twenty six cities already have been abandoned and 12 more will lose service in about three weeks," Nugent said in a written statement.

Big Spring-area towns that are among the 26 communities that already have lost Greyhound service are Coahoma, Loraine and Westbrook. None are among those to lose service on Feb. 25.

Last year, Greyhound asked the Railroad Commission to discontinue service to 58 Texas communities but was refused.

"Greyhound then appealed our decision to the Interstate Commerce Commission. And the ICC rolled over for the industry once again, reversing our decision and allowing Greyhound to abandon service to 38 of the 58 towns," Nugent said.

He said that no other form of transportation exists in some cases.

"Now the commission has asked the attorney general to file a lawsuit in federal district court asking them to overturn the ICC and continue service to the towns which have been abandoned," Nugent said. "I hope the attorney general will quickly focus on this problem and see if we can't get this situation corrected."

A spokesman for Attorney General Jim Mattox's office said that attorneys working on the case plan to file a petition with the 5th Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans by mid-month.

The petition would ask the appeals court to review the ICC ruling and probably request a temporary decision, the spokesman said.

Asked about Nugent's insistence that the petition be filed right away, he said that attorneys on the case seem to feel that "the time limit they are working under is fairly good."

REFUELING — An Amtrak train on a fact-finding mission in West Texas stopped in Big Spring Friday to refuel. The "track inspection" train is studying tracks from Houston to Dallas and Dallas to El Paso.

Amtrak 'track inspection' train rolls through Big Spring depot

By CAROL BALDWIN
Staff Writer

Amtrak officials aboard a "track inspection" train which stopped locally Friday said tracks from Dallas into Big Spring were "well maintained" and in reasonably good shape, unlike a portion of line between Dallas and Houston.

The inspection tour includes an area from Houston to Dallas and Dallas to El Paso.

Amtrak officials aboard the train are preparing an "evaluation of the route," Al Clark, an Amtrak official riding aboard the train, said.

Such evaluation trips "are fairly routine," Clark said.

About 25 people were gathered at the Big Spring depot Friday afternoon to welcome the Amtrak train. Several voiced their support to re-establish passenger service into West Texas.

The train arrived locally about 3:30 p.m. and was to leave an hour later. But, much to the delight of the small group of children and adults, Amtrak officials let anyone who was interested walk through the three-car train which featured sleeping quarters, dining rooms, and a kitchen.

James Larson, an assistant vice president of Amtrak who was also aboard the train, said the crew had "found the tracks of the Missouri-Pacific line west of Dallas in reasonably good condition and well-maintained."

However, Clark said a segment of the tracks between Houston and Dallas "were found not suitable for passenger trains" because of "slow and rough" conditions. He did not specify the trouble points. These tracks pose "serious problems" for passenger service, Larson said.

The track in question, which belongs to the Southern Pacific line, may eventually be upgraded because "Southern Pacific has programs to gradually improve" tracks under their jurisdiction, Clark said.

Although the tracks are not suitable for passenger trains, those conditions "wouldn't necessarily stop passenger service" by Amtrak, Larson said. However, the tracks do pose "serious obstacles" to re-establishing passenger service, he said.

Amtrak at present has two routes which run through Texas, including a route from New Orleans to Los Angeles, which includes Houston, San Antonio and El Paso, and one from Chicago to Los Angeles, which includes Dallas and Fort Worth, Austin and San Antonio, Larson said.

"I'd like to emphasize that this trip is a very preliminary study of the railroad line," Larson said. He and his crew are studying "the feasibility of establishing passenger trains (in this area) from a transportation and engineering standpoint."

Before any recommendation about re-establishing passenger service could be made, Larson said further studies would have to be conducted.

"It's difficult to re-establish passenger service after it has been discontinued," Larson said. "Freight-only railroad lines have different physical requirements than passenger lines."

Larson said Amtrak officials "in many cases are finding rail lines which once handled passenger trains are today no longer suitable."

As he looked around at a handful of children scurrying to climb into the back of the train, Larson said "It's gratifying to have such a positive response"

Death ruled homicide

The death of a 23-year-old Big Spring man whose body was found Monday afternoon lying abandoned near Gail Road has been ruled a homicide by Justice of the Peace Willie Grant.

Mrs. Grant said she is listing the cause of death for Robert Dutchover Jr. of 1205 Lamar as homicide by gunshot wounds. However, she said she had not completed the death certificate because Dr. Robert Rember, who is performing an autopsy on the shooting victim, is still trying to determine the time of death.

Howard County Sheriff A.N. Standard said the body, which law enforcement officials discovered at 4:30 p.m. Monday, may have been laying at the site it was discovered "for a day or two." A motorist told sheriff's deputies of seeing an object that appeared to be a body lying near Gail Road about two miles from Snyder Highway, Standard said.

The body was found with three gunshot wounds, Mrs. Grant said, two to the head and one to the abdominal area. Preliminary autopsy findings indicate that one of the head wounds was fatal, and the abdominal wound was determined to be fatal if left unattended, she said. Sheriff's deputies, Texas Ranger Charles Brune and reserve deputy George Quintero are continuing to investigate the case, Standard said.

Fern Cox files for new post

A former 118th District official filed Friday as a Democratic candidate for a different county office, Howard County Clerk Margaret Ray said Friday.

M. Fern Cox, a Howard County rancher, filed in the county clerk's office as a county commissioner Precinct 3 hopeful. Cox was the 118th District Clerk for Howard County in the late 1960s and the early 1970s before losing to the present district clerk, Peggy Crittenden, in 1974 by a margin of one vote, Mrs. Ray said.

Cox faces a crowded campaign race. His Democratic opponents in-

Filing deadline Monday

Filing deadline for candidates for county public office is 6 p.m. Monday, Howard County Clerk Margaret Ray said.

The Monday deadline also is the deadline for candidates to pay county party chairmen the necessary fees.

Howard County Democratic Party Chairman M.L. "Slick" Boatler will be at the county courthouse through 6 p.m. to receive fees from candidates who have filed with the county clerk but have not paid party fees, Mrs. Ray said.

Republican candidates should pay their party fees to Howard County Republican Chairman Charles Beil, the president of First Federal Savings and Loan.

Voter cards in the mail

Registered voters in Howard County should receive their new voter registration cards sometime next week, County Tax Assessor-Collector Dorothy Moore said Friday.

"The cards are in the mail as of today," Mrs. Moore said.

The new cards were mailed late because of the changes made with the addition of city districts and the creation of new voting precincts, Mrs. Moore said.

The new cards are labeled with the county commissioner precinct number, the voting box number and the city district number, which the county calls wards. An example of the numbering system would be: 11.w1. The first number stands for the county commissioner precinct number, the second number for the voting box number and the number following the district indicates the city district, or ward, number.

Episcopalians donate large amount of food to needy

McAlLEN, Texas (AP) — Food bank operators say they are "amazed" at the amount of food donated to the poor of the Rio Grande Valley by Episcopalians church members this week.

Food began arriving Wednesday, the first day of a convention of Episcopalians church leaders from their diocese in South and West Texas. By Friday afternoon, 30 tons of food had been received, said Kathy Degrief, coordinator of the Brown Bag Program at St. John's Episcopal Church in McAllen.

Parishes in 67 counties from Canyon Lake west to Kerrville and from San Antonio south to Brownsville contributed to the food drive, which was spearheaded by the Rev. Edward Bush of St. James' Episcopal Church in Del Rio, Ms. Degrief said.

Ms. Degrief said Bush decided a week ago to ask all 1,500 delegates to the Episcopal convention to bring donations from their parishes for Rio Grande Valley farmworkers.

An estimated 30,000 workers have been struggling to make ends meet since a December freeze destroyed crops and crushed the Valley's agricultural industry.

"There was no time for a letter, so the request was made by phone, the message spread by word-of-mouth," Ms. Degrief said.

"I thought we'd get maybe 20,000 pounds of food at the most, but they just went hog wild."

Ms. Degrief said she shared 15 tons of food with the Pharr Pantry which provides five churches and seven "satellite" organizations in Alamo and San Juan with food. These churches and satellite groups then distribute food to individual families.

Pamela Butts of the Pharr Pantry said they currently provide food to 2,000 families.

"This is unbelievable," Butts said of the donation. "We're stocked for a good, long time."

Ms. Degrief said she also received $1,800 cash from the convention delegates. The money will be used to pay for transporting additional food donations from various Texas cities.

Of the 15 tons of food which Ms. Degrief kept in McAllen, a portion was distributed to a low-income housing project, a portion went to a neighborhood service center and some went to the La Lomita Mission.

Weather

 precautions for their own safety, Yates said.

Yates said warnings are issued based on information received from two systems, radar traced at National Weather Service offices in Midland, and trained "spotters" who radio in weather conditions to the office.

Yates compared storm systems that bring severe weather to an engine, with water vapor serving as fuel.

The storm system sucks up water vapor in updrafts and lets the moisture out in the form of rain and hail in downdrafts. "This quick conversion of vapor to liquids and solids give the system its violent power," he said.

Downdrafts of rain and hail generally come at the leading edge of the storm, followed by updrafts of water vapor. In this way, the storm sucks up and feeds on the moisture it has already left on the ground, Yates said.

According to Yates, most storms have a flat, "anvil" head at their tops because clouds characteristically flatten out instead of entering the earth's stratosphere. Storms of an especially violent nature will have "overshooting tops" above the anvil head, indicating that updrafts are strong enough to push the cloud formation into the stratosphere.

These "overshooting tops" are one indication that a storm will bring severe weather, Yates said.

The quick sucking up of moist air creates the possibility of a tornado, Yates said.

According to the meteorologist, 90 percent of all tornadoes occur in the rain-free base which can usually be found under the highest point of the storm.

A tornado is a "violently rotating column of air that is in contact with the ground," Yates said. They usually fall out of the main cloud structure from a "wall cloud" which is in the rain-free base and connected to the main cloud.

Yates said the blowing debris and dust make the tornado visible.

However, cases of invisible tornadoes are common, according to Yates, and the meteorologist said clouds of blowing dust under a storm cloud should not be mistaken for "dust devils," but should be considered the trailing edge of an invisible tornado and left alone.

What should people do to keep their family and themselves safe during times of severe weather?

Yates said making plans in advance is very important.

At the first indication that a tornado might be approaching, Yates recommended that lawn mowers, furniture and children's toys be taken out of the yard and put in a covered shelter so they would not fly around and cause damage should winds become very high.

If a person is living in a structure with a basement, Yates said residents should go there, stay away from chimneys and windows and hide with his or her head covered under furniture or stairwells.

In a structure without a basement, the resident should go to the lowest part of the house into an inside room with no windows, usually a bathroom or a closet. The resident should turn away from the approaching tornado and keep his head covered. Yates said that bathtubs often provide the best protection available in structures with no basements.

Yates emphasized that persons should stay out of moving vehicles during a tornado warning. Houses and buildings provide a better chance of survival than evacuation for those already in a structure at the time the warning is issued.

In mobile homes, however, evacuation is a must, he said. The strongest tie-down can only withstand winds of 70 m.p.h., hardly enough to withstand the up to 300 m.p.h. winds that come with a tornado.

If persons find themselves in a car or out in the open with no shelter nearby and a tornado approaching, Yates recommended they find a ditch or gully to ride out the storm and avoid flying debris.

Most importantly, a person should stay informed during severe weather. Yates recommended that keeping an eye on the sky is the best way to keep informed, while also keeping an ear out for severe weather sirens.

Yates said a NOAA weather radio would be an excellent investment, especially for mobile home residents who would need to be evacuated during a severe weather warning. Owning such a radio would give these residents the earliest possible warning, he said.

Yates said television or AM radio would be the next fastest means of getting weather warnings.

Yates said residents should remember that a tornado watch means there is a possibility of one or more tornadoes in the area. Normal activity can be continued, but residents should watch for tornadoes.

When a tornado warning is issued, a tornado has actually been sighted and may be approaching. Residents should seek shelter immediately in these cases, he said.

Careful addressing may help prevent broken hearts

Careful addressing of valentines may help prevent broken hearts, Frank Hardesty, postmaster, advises.

"A return address should be the first address a person puts on an envelope," Hardesty said. "If there is a delivery problem, it will allow us to return the letter, card or parcel to the sender."

Both the return address and mailing address should contain complete address information. This includes full name, apartment mailbox number or apartment number, rural route number and box number, street name and number or post office box number, and city, state and zip code.

Hardesty said it's also important to write legibly using a ball point pen. Felt tip pens tend to smudge. He also urged attaching correct postage.

"Proper addressing is especially important around holidays when many people do not use their return address in order to momentarily surprise the recipient. But when the card or letter is undeliverable, the one who is surprised is the sender when he or she discovers it was not received," Hardesty said.

Oilfield equipment recovered

A Howard County sheriff's deputy assisted in the recovery of more than $65,000 of stolen oilfield equipment recovered within the county Thursday, sheriff's records show.

Howard County Deputy Eddie Owen, Lubbock Texas Ranger Jackie People and a Lubbock County deputy sheriff recovered the equipment reported stolen from Lubbock and Lamb counties, sheriff's records said.

A 19-year-old Lubbock man remains in Howard County Jail today awaiting transfer to Lubbock County authorities, sheriff's records show.

Howard County deputies Friday arrested Steven Tingle, 19, of Lubbock on a Lubbock County warrant for suspicion of driving while intoxicated with serious bodily injury. Howard County Judge Milton Kirby set bond at $7,500.

Eusebio Fierro, 33, of 604 N. San Antonio Friday was transferred to the county jail from the police department on suspicion of driving while intoxicated. He was released on $1,000 bond set by Municipal Judge Melvin Daratt.

Texas man accused in Florida drug ring

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A Texas man was accused in an indictment Friday of operating a nationwide drug-smuggling cartel that a federal prosecutor said managed to stay in business "through bribery and corruption of public officials."

U.S. Attorney Robert Merkle said the ring operated from 1978 to 1983 under the guidance of Rick Hernandez of Brownsville, Texas, who was indicted Friday, and Angelo Bedami of Tampa, who was arrested last May.

Friday's 20-count indictment charged 37 people nationwide in what federal officials said was a Tampa-based cartel that smuggled drugs into Florida, Georgia, Alabama and Kentucky and distributed them as far north as Pennsylvania and Illinois.

The indictment, containing racketeering and drug charges, alleges that Norman Cannella, 43, a former chief assistant state attorney in Florida, and Tampa lawyer John Demmi, 43, solicited and took bribes as protection for a drug ring which operated from 1978-1983.

U.S. Attorney Robert Merkle said at a news conference that arrests were being made in the Florida cities of Tampa, Miami and Ocala, and Wilkes-Barre as well as Pittsburgh; Atlanta; Savannah, Ga.; Mobile, Ala.; and Chicago.

The indictment seeks forfeiture of a beachfront condominium, owned in partnership by Drew Ramsey of St. Petersburg, Fla., and Salvatore "Sam" Lorenzo of Tampa. Merkle said rackets profits were used to establish and operate the Pinellas County condominium.

Cannella and Demmi allegedly sought and accepted a bribe from Bedami and Hernandez in fall 1981 while Cannella was still the main assistant in the state prosecutor's office at Tampa, the indictment alleges.

Grand jurors list some two dozen instances where drugs were either smuggled or distributed in various states.

Susskind proves cruel

LOS ANGELES — Producer David Susskind has been dropped from a guest appearance on the ABC comedy, "Oh, Madeline," after he became angry when his role was cut and blew up at the director, the show's producer says.

"His behavior was unprofessional and abusive," Irma Kalish said Wednesday. "The director, J.D. Lobue, had no choice but to fire him."

Susskind, in turn, described the people in charge of "Oh, Madeline" as "slime."

"I haven't used the kind of language I used on them since I was in the Navy during World War II," said Susskind, host of the "David Susskind Show," a syndicated television talk show.

According to Ms. Kalish, Susskind became angry when three or four minutes were cut from a fictional panel show that was part of the episode.

Ms. Kalish said Susskind wasn't soothed when Lobue pointed out that everybody's lines, including those of the program's star, Madeline Kahn, had been reduced.

"It's standard procedure on any show," Kalish said. "You always run over during the rehearsal, as we did, and then you have to make a few cuts."

Graham leaves Mayo Clinic

ROCHESTER, Minn. — Evangelist Billy Graham has left the Mayo Clinic, where he was being treated for an inner ear infection, an acute sinus condition and exhaustion, and returned to his home in Montreat, N.C.

BILLY GRAHAM

A clinic spokeswoman said Graham checked out of Rochester Methodist Hospital Thursday. He had spent five days at the hospital.

The 65-year-old evangelist said through an aide that he planned to go with his wife, Ruth, to an undisclosed location for a two-week rest.

Graham was hospitalized Jan. 29 after flying here from England where he had spent three weeks organizing a three-month spring crusade.

Pop star has identity crisis

NICE, France — English pop star Boy George was detained for several hours after he arrived at Nice airport and presented his passport.

"He was dressed completely like a woman, in a dress and wearing full make-up," a spokesman for the French border police said Friday.

"French law ... requires that a person entering the country corresponds to the details on his or her passport," said the spokesman, who declined to identify. "So when someone who looks like a woman presents a man's passport, we have to investigate and that took some time, a couple of hours."

In London, Daily Mirror reporter Paul Callan, who was accompanying the 22-year-old pop star, said Boy George stabbed a lacquered fingernail at his passport picture showing him as definitely male George O'Dowd — his real name — and said: "Look, look, this is me."

The case was referred all the way to Paris, the police spokesman said, before authorities agreed that because Boy George and his manager were en route to San Remo, Italy, and not planning to stay in France, they would be allowed to continue their journey.

"He wasn't searched or anything like that," the spokesman said. "We were satisfied by his statements and those of his manager and some members of his group."

Carters visit royal spot

HONOLULU — Former President Jimmy Carter got a little glimpse of what America's only royalty once lived like.

Carter and his wife, Rosalynn, toured Hawaii's Iolani Palace Thursday and pronounced it "a treasure — a source of pride to all of us."

The palace was the home of Hawaii's royalty before the overthrow of the Hawaiian monarchy in 1893.

The Carters, making a one-day stop in Hawaii en route to Australia, were treated to a 45-minute private tour of the palace, restored at a cost of $7 million over 10 years.

Like all visitors, the Carters had to take off their shoes and tour the palace in cloth booties designed to protect the restored wooden floors of the palace.

U.S. helicopter crashes

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — A U.S. army helicopter crashed in bad weather in mountainous northeastern Honduras, killing four American soldiers and injuring six others, three of them critically, the U.S. Embassy said today.

The accident occurred Thursday afternoon 35 miles from the border with Nicaragua, the embassy said in a communique. It said the helicopter was en route to San Lorenzo on the Pacific coast from El Aguacate air base in the mountains 130 miles northeast of Tegucigalpa, the Honduran capital.

"There was no indication of any hostile action," said the communique.

On Jan. 11, a U.S. helicopter pilot was killed by hostile fire from Nicaraguan troops when his aircraft strayed off course toward the Nicaraguan border while on the same route.

The communique today said the names of the victims of Thursday's crash were being withheld until relatives could be informed. The soldiers were taking part in joint U.S.-Honduran military exercises.

In Washington, a Defense Department spokesman confirmed the crash killed four soldiers and injured six. Col. Robert O'Brien said officials believe the cause of the crash was the weather.

The embassy said the UH-60 Blackhawk helicopter was carrying three crewmen and seven passengers — all U.S. Army personnel — when it went down.

The communique said two HU-60 Blackhawk helicopters were flying together and that one lost visual and radio contact with the other after they encountered "adverse weather."

"A search and rescue mission was initiated and the wreckage of the aircraft was reached by a ground party at about 10:40 p.m.," it said. "The helicopter was destroyed."

"Bad weather prevented evacuation during the night," the communique said. "The casualties were evacuated this morning by helicopter to the U.S. Army hospital at Palmerola Air Base. Three survivors are listed in critical condition and three in stable but guarded condition."

Beirut fighting escalates

BEIRUT — Government troops trying to recapture a key highway entrance to Beirut battled with Shiite Moslem militiamen Friday, and the fighting spread to several sections of the capital in the worst civil war flareup in six weeks.

Police said at least 45 people were reported killed in two days of rocket and artillery barrages on Beirut and its suburbs, and in house-to-house fighting for control of the Galerie Semaan intersection, the southern gateway to the capital.

Both the Lebanese army and the Shiite militias claimed control of the area, but the fighting continued. Four rockets hit one edge of the U.S. Marine base, but no casualties were reported.

Police said at least 125 were wounded since fighting broke out Thursday evening. The escalation of the fighting was a new blow to the government of President Amin Gemayel, which issued new appeals for a cease-fire.

U.S. Ambassador Reginald Bartholomew and senior aides were in touch with all warring factions and exploring terms for a truce, diplomatic sources said.

Syrian-backed Druse insurgents fired volleys of Soviet-made rockets on Beirut's Christian sector and suburban neighborhoods throughout the day, apparently to ease pressure on their Shiite allies.

The army and rightist Christian Phalange Party irregulars responded with massive artillery barrages on Druse towns and villages in Lebanon's central mountains.

Fires burned out of control in many of the bombarded areas, and thousands of families remained huddled in basements and bomb shelters, police said.

Regan takes issue with report

WASHINGTON (AP) — A simmering feud between two of President Reagan's top advisers blew up on Capitol Hill Friday as Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan recommended that Congress trash most of the president's new economic report.

That report, including its seven-page message from the president, was written chiefly by Martin Feldstein, chairman of Reagan's Council of Economic Advisers. The treasury secretary questioned Feldstein's real-world experience and said of the report: "As far as I'm concerned, you can throw it away."

As the Senate Budget Committee quizzed Regan about Reagan's 1985 $225.5 billion budget and ways to reduce the projected $180 billion deficit, the secretary first declined to detail his objections to the report on grounds there wasn't time enough to list all the problems.

But he mentioned such basic disagreements as whether the deficit is responsible for high interest rates and whether Reagan's massive tax cuts and big military buildup caused the deficit. Of Feldstein, Regan said: "I support this budget, apparently he doesn't."

"You can't walk away from this budget," Regan exclaimed. "It's the president's budget."

Feldstein went before the same committee later in the day and was praised by the chairman, Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., for "an honest effort to put forward economic forecasts that are about as accurate as any and economic policy recommendations that are clearly intended to be in the best interest of this country."

Informed about Regan's remarks, Feldstein quipped, "I suppose that was just a throw-away line." He acknowledged "there have been some differences about technical questions."

Feldstein said he does support Reagan's budget; endorsed the president's call for a bipartisan group to develop a $100 billion deficit-reduction package this year, and repeated a premise basic to his dispute with Regan: that high deficits "are a major factor in keeping interest rates high."

Reagan: Marines stay

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, digging in his heels on Middle East policy, said in an interview published Friday he is not "ready to surrender" by pulling U.S. Marines out of Lebanon, regardless of the wishes of House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. and other congressional Democrats.

"He may be ready to surrender, but I'm not," Reagan declared when he was asked by The Wall Street Journal to respond to the Massachusetts Democrat's call for a timely and orderly withdrawal of the Marines from the multinational peacekeeping force in Beirut.

The president also said the United States was prepared to retaliate against the suspected perpetrators of the suicide bombing of Marine headquarters in Beirut but someone else — presumably the French or Israelis — destroyed the terrorists' stronghold "before we could get to it."

Reagan said if the United States withdraws now, "That means the end of Lebanon and ... any ability on our part to bring about an overall peace in the Middle East."

"And, I would have to say," he added, "it means a pretty disastrous result for us worldwide."

O'Neill called Regan's reference to surrender "intemperate and inaccurate."

"He should calm down," O'Neill said in a statement. "The issue of the Marines in Lebanon is not an issue of how tough Ronald Reagan is. It is an issue of how safe the Marines are and what their role is."

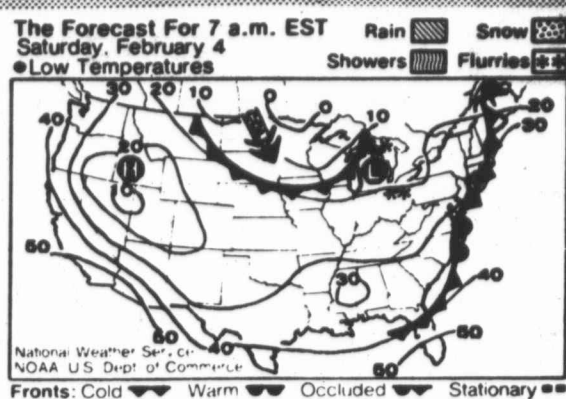

The speaker said "it is obvious" that Regan has not assessed alternative means to achieve U.S. goals in Lebanon, as called for by a Pentagon commission in December.

"Lebanon is a test not of how tough we are, but of how smart we are," he added.

Rain, snow over nation

Snow showers were scattered from northern Minnesota across Wisconsin and lower Michigan on Friday, while rain reached from the upper Ohio Valley across the central Gulf Coast.

The lingering cold over the Midwest was powered by a pair of cold fronts, one that dipped over central Ohio and central Tennessee, and a second extending southwest from a low pressure system over the Mississippi coast. A third cold front reached from Minnesota into southern Canada.

A warm front extended from the central coast of Maine.

For Saturday, rain was forecast for much of the East Coast, with showers stretching from New England to Florida, and rain changing to snow over the upper Great Lakes and the rest of the Ohio Valley.

High temperatures will remain only in the teens in northern Minnesota, with Atlantic Coast temperatures ranging from the 40s over Maine and near 60 along the Virginia coast to the mid 70s across southern Florida. Southern Texas highs will be in the upper 60s, with the mercury pushing into the 50s along the northern Pacific Coast and with highs in the mid to upper 70s over Southern California and through the inland Southwest.

Temperatures around the nation at 2 p.m. EST ranged from 19 degrees at Alamosa, Colo., to 79 degrees at Key West, Fla.

Autrey's execution stay dissolves

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — A federal judge rejected arguments that the state had lost the right to execute James David Autrey and dissolved the stay Friday that had spared the condemned killer's life less than 30 minutes before he was to be put to death.

U.S. District Judge Robert Parker denied claims that Autrey was subjected to unnecessary pain and suffering because Texas prison officials put him on a gurney and inserted intravenous needles in his arms one hour they had the legal right to do so.

Stefan Presser of the American Civil Liberties Union said his client's ordeal in Texas' death chamber last October was "tantamount to torture" and asked Parker to bar the state from further attempts to execute the 29-year-old drifter from Amarillo.

Autrey was convicted of killing a Port Arthur convenience store clerk on April 20, 1980. Evidence indicated he shot Shirley Drouet between the eyes rather than pay $2.70 for a six-pack of beer.

Business highlights

Sales continue to surge

Sales by the major retail chains continued to surge in January. Analysts said the gains should continue and are a good sign inflation may remain under control. Sears, Roebuck and Co., the nation's biggest retailer, said Thursday its January sales were up 9.1 percent to $1.38 billion, excluding revenues of its new Canadian unit. Including results of the Canadian unit, Simpson-Sears, which it acquired in July 1983, January sales totaled $1.60 billion. K mart Corp. reported a 5.8 percent sales gain. Bernard Fauber, chairman of K mart, the nation's second largest retail chain, said strong sales in December left only minimal supplies of seasonal goods for January clearance. J.C. Penney Co. reported a 16.5 percent increase. Federated Department Stores Inc. was up 12.2 percent, and F.W. Woolworth Co. said domestic sales were up 17.9 percent.

Delay called 'serious'

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Any delay in Texaco Inc.'s proposed $10.1 billion takeover of Getty Oil Co. would have "very serious financial consequences" for the companies and their shareholders, a Texaco official told a federal judge.

James W. Kinnear, president of Texaco U.S.A. and vice chairman and director of its parent, Texaco Inc., said Thursday he has "faith in the American judicial system" that it can keep the merger from leading to other acquisitions that could diminish competition within the industry, as critics of the deal have warned.

"I say no, that the 'domino theory' will not apply in this case," said Kinnear.

He was the first defense witness in a U.S. District Court hearing on Pennzoil Co.'s attempt to block the proposed Texaco-Getty deal on antitrust grounds.

"There is no anti-competitive aspect of the Texaco acquisition of Getty," Kinnear told Judge James Ellison in the fourth day of the hearing.

Pennzoil, which formally rested its case Thursday, is asking Ellison to impose a temporary injunction to halt the proposed takeover. If the transaction were completed, it would be the largest corporate takeover in U.S. history.

Chrysler hits milestone

DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler Corp. has reached another milestone in its recovery. On Thursday it issued $18.3 million in common stock dividends, its first in nearly five years.

The payout was set at 15 cents a share. Chrysler directors also voted to issue $6.8 million in dividends on preferred stock, the second payout in that category since Chrysler's brush with bankruptcy.

Several auto industry analysts said the amounts were conservative enough to get Chrysler through any unexpected cash shortages while generous toward stockholders eager to share in what Chrysler says will be record 1983 earnings.

Earnings are to be announced later this month.

Groups asks for block

NEW YORK (AP) — Dorchester Gas Corp. asked a federal court to block an investment group's bid to gain control of the company in a $209.8 million tender offer.

Monte Wetzel, an executive vice president of Damson, said the Dorchester suit is "totally without merit." He said Damson would launch a vigorous defense.

Auto dealers open convention

DALLAS (AP) — A record number of auto dealers will open a four-day convention today with an optimistic outlook for 1984 car sales and cash to spend on new business equipment, the outgoing president of the National Automobile Dealers Association says.

"The dealers have had four to five years that have not been so good," said NADA President William Turnbull.

"Those that normally come to the convention will be buying this year and those that couldn't afford to come in the past will be able to come, and probably be able to buy."

Convention officials expect 15,000 people to attend the group's 67th annual convention. Advance registrations were up 14 percent, and a record number of exhibitors — 210 — will be offering automobile and dealership products.

Turnbull said dealerships steered through the recession by cutting their costs and learning to use their money more efficiently.

This year should be the year of the payoff, he said. "If the industry turns up or even stays the same, they (dealers) will make a profit, and if car sales go way up, they obviously will do very well," said Turnbull, a GMC-International Harvester dealer from Huntington, W. Va.

"Dealers have repositioned themselves over the last two to three years through better management of money and better management of people," he said. "They've gotten rid of their people who didn't produce, or at least sent them to schools so they would learn how to be more productive."

Industry sources say General Motors dealers will be eager to learn more about the company's internal reorganization that will group divisions into either the large-car unit or the small-car unit.

Steers fall, 88-65

By BILLY NABOURS
Sports Editor

Try as they might, the Big Spring Steers simply couldn't stay up with the Odessa High Bronchos Friday night at Steer Gym.

When the final seconds had ticked off the clock the Bronchos, last year's 4-AAAA champions, had dumped the Steers to the tune of an 88-65 win that upped Odessa's district slate to 4-6 and left Big Spring nursing an 0-10 slate and 2-22 season record. The Steers' losing streak is now at 12 games.

Against Odessa the Steers found themselves in a hole early only to dig their way out and then be pushed back down by the Bronchos.

Odessa ran up an 8-0 lead before Fred Cole answered for Big Spring with a pair of free throws. On the night the Steers were only a little better than 50 percent at the line (17 of 33). After missing their first five field goals of the contest the Steers actually shot pretty well. They were 16 of 27 in the second half. The only catch was that Odessa was just as hot.

After Odessa jumped on the Steers hard and fast Big Spring managed a rally midway through the second quarter. Sparked by John Howie and George Roman the Steers battled back within one at 15-14 and went ahead briefly on a steal and layup by Roman, 16-15. That would be the last time Big Spring was in the game.

After Howie's free throw Odessa ran off eight straight points to go up by 10, 27-17 with 4:15 before halftime. Mark Sanders and Mike Lueschner scored points down the stretch for Big Spring, but for the first time in four games the Steers found themselves way behind at halftime, 44-25.

The third period was mostly a continuation of the first half as Odessa hit the first two baskets for a 48-25 advantage. In a three minute stretch of the period Chris Roberts' lone field goal was all the offense mustered by the Steers. And it was more a case of turnovers rather than poor shooting that caused Big Spring misery. The third period ended with Odessa pulling ahead by 25, 66-41.

Big Spring made things respectable with a little flash in the final quarter. Roberts, Dale Crenshaw, Roman, Sanders, Tim Hastings, Howie, Lueschner and Eric Sherman scored baskets with Lueschner leading the way with six points. Lueschner, Roman and Howie all reached double figures while Odessa had four players in double digits.

Big Spring's next contest will be Tuesday, Feb. 7 in Abilene against Cooper.

In the junior varsity game Bernard Williams scored 28 points in a good effort that fell just short as Odessa took a 72-60 win.

Wolves wallop Sonora, 71-29

By STEVE BELVIN
Staff Writer

COLORADO CITY — It was no contest once the Colorado City Wolves cranked up their shooting game here Friday night in a runaway, 71-29 win over Sonora in District 6-AAA boys' basketball action.

After winning the first half of the district chase with a 5-0 mark the Wolves are off and running in the second round with a 1-0 slate. Overall the Wolves are 15-6.

Colorado City missed its first seven field goals and Sonora may have been thinking of a possible upset when the score was knotted at 6-6 midway through the first quarter. Don Randle sparked a six point run for the Wolves to put them up 12-6. Colorado City never looked back. Randle went on and finished the game with 15 points and 10 rebounds. Doug Chitsey was another factor throughout the game. He popped in 21 points and seven rebounds after missing his first three shots. He went on and enjoyed a streak where he made six in a row.

So dominant was Colorado City with its pressing defense that Sonora committed 23 turnovers. Dennis Rivera registered five steals in the first half.

Randle and Chitsey were the only Wolves in double figures, but all 10 players on the Wolves' bench saw action.

Colorado City plays next on Tuesday, Feb. 7 when the Wolves host Coahoma.

Colorado City girls fall in 6-AAA action, 70-53

COLORADO CITY — The Colorado City Wolves were french fried here Friday night in girl's 6-AAA action to the tune of, 70-53 by Sonora.

Lorri French to be exact. French scored 38 points, snared 15 rebounds and dished out seven assists to keep the Wolves winless (0-3) in the second round of district.

French's teammate Debbie Bible chipped in 15 first half points as Sonora ran up a 44-34 halftime lead. At one point, however Sonora led, 42-21 when French went out with an injured ankle. Her absence allowed Jody Huff and Lin Scott the chance to get Colorado City on the road back.

And despite outrebounding Sonora, Colorado City was stymied in its comeback effort by poor shooting. The Wolves made only 20 of 81 field goals and went 13 of 38 at the charity stripe.

Laura Baum paced Colorado City with 18 points.

Winter Games stewing over many questions

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia (AP) — Wars of fire and ice hit the XIV Olympic Winter Games Friday with disputes over ice hockey, speedskating and the traditional torch relay next summer overshadowing the approach of the Games.

With the Winter Olympics only three days away — An International Olympic Committee official said he was ready to question the amateur status of Finnish goaltender Hannu Kamppure in a hockey game that potentially could involve as many as a dozen players from six nations, including the United States and Canada.

Goaltender Mario Gosselin, one of four Canadian players whose amateur status is being challenged by the United States, is prepared for the worst. "It could be six months of work maybe going for nothing," he says.

Eric Heiden, who won five gold medals in speedskating at the 1980 Winter Olympics, was accused of abandoning his sport by a current U.S. speedskater, Erik Henriksen. Another U.S. speedskater backed Heiden's decision to retire from the sport.

—The IOC reaffirmed the Los Angeles organizers' right to stage a run for money at the '84 Summer Games. The Greeks renewed their opposition to selling the relay to sponsors to raise money for charity. A Greek Olympic official said the people of Greece might bar the way to Olympia, the traditional starting point of the relay.

The Olympics get underway Tuesday with six hockey games, including a matchup of the United States and Canada. The game took on added significance when the U.S. Olympic Committee said it would protest the eligibility of four Canadian players. The Canadians have hinted they will expose the questionable eligibility of two players on the 1980 U.S. team, which won the gold medal at Lake Placid, N.Y. Willi Daume, chairman of the IOC's Eligibility Committee, said Thursday that Kamppure "did not follow the rules." Kamppure played in one game with the Edmonton Oilers of the defunct World Hockey Association in 1979.

The IOC, ruling body of the Games, has the authority to declare any athlete ineligible.

As Daume questioned Kamppure's eligibility, the Finns said they would question the eligibility of nine players from six nations. It was not immediately known what other nations or players might be dragged into the dispute.

The U.S. has been more specific about its questions concerning the amateur status of four Canadian players: Gosselin, Mark Morrison, Dan Wood and Don Dietrich. Morrison played in nine games for the New York Rangers of the National Hockey League two years ago, while the other three are under contract to NHL teams.

Representatives of the USOC and Canadian Olympic officials are to meet on Monday to discuss the dispute, according to F. Don Miller, executive director of the United States governing body.

Miller said Friday, "We will not file any protest until after we've had that meeting." The Canadian hockey team arrived in Sarajevo late Friday afternoon. Gosselin said pre-Olympic play has already given him valuable experience. Faced with the prospect of disqualification, he said, "What can you do? That's the rules."

The USOC is contesting a rule adopted by Canadian hockey officials that says a player is still an amateur if he has played in 10 NHL games or less.

Canadian Coach Dave King said, "We've been prepared for it, but we hoped it would not happen... If we lose four guys, we'll be a little thin. Realistically, maybe it would have been wiser to come here with 12 or 13 players under that rule. Then, let them throw the whole team out."

In an interview at the Olympic Village Thursday, Henriksen, 25, of Champaign, Ill., told The Associated Press that Heiden had "disappeared from our sport for four years," at a time when speedskating "could have used a personality, an Arnold Palmer-type of personality, someone who could court public exposure."

Heiden thinks remarks from teammate wrong

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia (AP) — Eric Heiden said Friday he had been surprised by a former teammate's remarks that the Olympic champion had failed to contribute enough to speedskating since winning an unprecedented five gold medals in Lake Placid in 1980.

"I never really get hassled personally like that," he said, "but there are a number of things I've done for the skaters. There's some things I haven't been able to do because of scheduling conflicts, school. Last year I was supposed to go to a banquet, but it was at the time of finals. For me right now, school is first."

On Thursday, Erik Henriksen, an alternate on the 1980 speedskating team and America's top medal hopeful in the sport this year, blasted Heiden for failing to do more to promote the program that brought him fame.

Since sweeping the five men's races at Lake

Placid, Heiden has turned to competitive cycling, club hockey in Finland and academics. He currently is a pre-med student at Stanford University.

Heiden, here to work as an expert commentator on speedskating for ABC's Winter Olympic coverage, said Henriksen's remarks took him somewhat by surprise. But he added that he felt he had done all he could for speedskating.

Heiden said he is taking the current semester at Stanford off. He has one quarter, or about three months, left before he graduates.

Unlike 1980, when the U.S. hauled in a total of eight speedskating medals, Americans are not listed among the top competitors in the sport this Olympics. But, as he watched the U.S. team practice, Heiden said they could surprise people — and even picked Henriksen as a possible medalist in some races.

"If Henriksen can have a good opener, a good 100 meters, I think he can do well," Heiden said.

Some 15 members of the Soviet speed skating team, including ace sprinter Sergei Khlebnikov, also watched the Americans' timed practice session.

"My chances? Ask me after the competitions," said Khlebnikov, one of the favorites for the gold medal in the 500 meters.

The Soviets think the Zetra ice is fast "but not like Medeo, of course," said Khlebnikov.

He was referring to the high-altitude rink near Alma Ata, where the Soviets have had some impressive times this season.

"When I was skating, Khlebnikov was good," said Heiden, who arrived at Zetra after the Russians had left. "He's a big guy. I think he and Akira Kuroiwa (of Japan) probably will be battling it out for the 500 meters. And maybe even the 1,000 meters."

The men's 500 meter race is scheduled for Feb. 10. The opening speed skating event is the women's 1,500, set for Feb. 9.

SECOND FASTEST — Bill Johnson of the United States speeds down the course in the World Cup downhill men's ski trials earlier this week in Cortina, d'Ampezzo, Italy. Johnson had the second fastest time.

Times Herald meet has talented field for 1984

DALLAS (AP) — Pole vaulter Billy Olson, high jumper Dwight Stones, distance runner Don Paige and sprinter Carl Lewis highlight a star-spangled field in Saturday night's Dallas Times Herald Invitational Track Meet at Reunion Arena.

Lewis will be competing in the 60-yard dash in which he owns the world indoor best of 6.02 seconds. He set the standard on the ultra fast boards here last year.

He established a world indoor best of 28 feet, 10 1/4 inches in the long jump at the Millrose Games last week, but will not participate in that event at Reunion Arena.

"Carl loves the boards in Reunion," said Meet Director Ted McLaughlin. "They are the fastest in the world. The boards are good and firm. I wouldn't be surprised to see him eclipse his own record."

Lewis said it's just a matter of time before he breaks six seconds.

"I like to feel I can go under six and that's why I'm really looking forward to Dallas," Lewis said.

Lewis' main challengers will be Calvin Smith and Ron Brown, the only two men to defeat him in 1983.

Stones will be tested by Jerome Carter but Tyke Peacock had to withdraw because of illness.

Olson's top competition will come from Jeff Buckingham, Earl Bell and France's Pierre Quinon.

Olson no longer owns the world indoor best mark. Russian Sergei Bubka soared 19-feet, 1-inch in a meet in Italy.

"I feel like with the right jump on the right day I can do 19-6," Olson said. "I'm healthy and feeling strong. I have a new pole that seems to boost me up higher at the end of the vault. It's given me a lot of confidence."

"I'm excited about the Dallas meet this year. It's the first time I've come into the meet fresh without jumping the night before. There's no place in the world I want to do better than here."

Olson will have some 25 supporters from Abilene who will make the long drive from West Texas to see him perform.

Paige, who holds the world indoor best in the 1,000-yard run of 2:04.7, will be challenged by Mark Belger, Sammy Koskel and Detlef Wagenknecht of East Germany.

"This is my first indoor race of the winter," Paige said. "If we have a fast enough pace I believe my record will be broken."

Belger handed Paige his first indoor loss in four years by defeating him here in 1982 in a time of 2:06.6.

Greg Foster will be tested in the 60-yard hurdles by Sam Turner, Roger Kingdom, and Rod Milburn.

A crowd of some 15,000 was expected for the meet.

Campbell meets with Gunslingers

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Houston Oilers running back Earl Campbell met Friday with the owner of the United States Football League's San Antonio Gunslingers, his agent said.

Campbell, one of the best running backs in the National Football League, watched the Gunslingers work out Thursday and said he was "very impressed and interested."

The USFL expansion club holds Campbell's territorial rights.

"Anything is possible," said his agent, Mike Trope. Campbell, 28, still has two years left on his contract with the Oilers, but has demanded to be traded.

"I'd love to play with the Oilers, but there comes a time in your life when you feel you should be making more money. I'm at that point now," Campbell told the San Antonio Express-News.

"I think that as an individual and a team player, I've produced very well," he said. "I definitely want to stay in Texas. Like Tanya Tucker says in her song, 'When I die I may not get to heaven, but Texas is as close as I'll ever get.' I'd love to work here if I could."

Gunslingers owner Clinton Manges, a wealthy South Texas rancher, said he plans to concentrate on signing the 1977 Heisman Trophy winner from the University of Texas.

"We'll sit down with our attorneys and start working to get Earl," Manges said. "We love him. We think Earl Campbell has all the makings of a real good Gunslinger. We want him real bad."

Oilers spokesman Gregg Stengel declined to comment on Campbell's comments.

Trope said Thursday's visit with the Gunslingers was for both "pleasure and business."

"What we're doing is exploring our options, and we consider San Antonio a viable option," he said. "San Antonio has the rights to Earl in the USFL, and if he does go to the USFL, San Antonio would be the spot.

"I don't think Earl would want to play for the (USFL) Houston Gamblers," the agent said. "Besides, the Gamblers don't have his rights."

Trope said he isn't ruling out the possibility that Campbell could play for both the Gunslingers and the Oilers until his contract expires, and Campbell said he could play year-round "just as sure as Sherman burned Georgia."

"There is no physical conflict of scheduling," Trope said. "If (the Gunslingers) are willing to challenge the exclusivity of Earl's NFL contract, we would be willing to be partners with them."

The NFL's general counsel, Sargent Karch, said the standard NFL Player Contract would bar such an arrangement.

"I wouldn't try it," Karch said. "That's what I would do."

CAMPBELL VISIT — Houston Oilers running back Earl Campbell wears his cowboy hat while shaking hands with Roger Gill, the general manager of the United States Football League's San Antonio Gunslingers.

Campbell visited the Gunslingers in San Antonio and says he is "very interested" in the team. At center is Campbell's agent, Mike Trope.

Dallas' Brandt chats with kids

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Dallas Cowboys' Vice President Gil Brandt was surrounded Friday by more than a dozen of the top college football players in the nation, but the only person he offered a contract to was 10-year-old Paul Batchelder.

"I'll see you next week so we can sign it," the pro football executive told Batchelder, who could barely breathe on his own but mustered a broad smile as he sat, his head braced at an angle in his wheelchair.

Batchelder was among several patients in Yale-New Haven Hospital's pediatrics ward who were visited Friday by members of the Walter Camp Foundation 1983 All-America football team, professional players and officials from pro teams.

Among those accompanying Brandt on the hospital tour were linebacker Ricky Hunley of Arizona, placekicker Luis Zendejas of Arizona State, offensive guard Dean Steinkuhler of Nebraska and tackle Doug Dawson of Texas.

But while he was eager to share a laugh with the collegians, Brandt wasn't interested in talking turkey. He was here to pass out autographed footballs and posters to smiling children even though few knew who he was.

"This is a great change of pace from negotiating with agents and answering questions about the USFL," Brandt said. "And it's great for the players. They can be seen as caring."

"I'm a people-person. I like getting out like this. And it makes you realize how lucky you have been. It makes you feel that all the problems you have are nothing compared to what these kids have put up with."

The visit to Yale-New Haven was among a series of activities this week in honor of the 1983 Camp All-America team, the oldest of its kind in the nation. Twenty-two All-Americans, as well as a player of the year, coach of the year, man of the year and two distinguished Americans will receive awards during ceremonies Saturday night.

Sarandon struggles for success

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Susan Sarandon was beginning to wonder if she would be known in life as the star of unloved movies.

Though she was nominated for an Academy Award for best actress last year for her work in "Atlantic City," she points out that the movie languished for a year without a releasing company. Paramount Pictures finally gave it a half-hearted release, until the film started winning awards.

Miss Sarandon's newest movie is "The Buddy System," with Richard Dreyfuss. It's a gentle story about a divorced mother and a budding author who befriends her son. There's no violence and no blatant sex — which may be why 20th Century-Fox waited a year before releasing it.

"The fact that Fox has brought me here is a good sign," said the actress, who arrived for interviews from London, where she spent the holidays. "I can't bad-mouth Fox because they seem to be putting forth an effort. At last."

"I can understand what happens. Because there is no sex, no violence, they don't know exactly what to do with it. If the marketing people can't find some way to sell a picture, they can't fight for it. There's the constant danger that if they attach their names to selling a failure, they're in trouble."

Miss Sarandon was in "The Rocky Horror Show," which wasn't released at all, and finally became a cult classic — a "midnight" movie that played in neighborhood movie houses late at night.

Then there was "Pretty Baby," Malle's film of life in a New Orleans bordello. The movie was threatened with an X rating and was banned in Canada. "The Hunger," the vampire tale with Catherine Deneuve and David Bowie, had a momentary release by MGM last year.

...late bloomer

Still, Miss Sarandon has appeared in films that were easily released, such as "The Great Waldo Pepper," "The Front Page" and "The Other Side of Midnight."

Perhaps the reason for her number of misses is her fierce independence and her willingness to take chances.

You can see it in the eyes. Even behind round, scholarly glasses, the eyes are alive with curiosity and determination. She is as concerned with raising money to feed Nicaraguan mothers as with the pursuit of an acting career.

"There are a lot of things in life besides acting," she says.

She came by acting accidentally, through marriage to Chris Sarandon while both were studying at Catholic University in Washington, D.C. They joined the Garrick Players in Washington in 1970, and later that year she took a role in "Joe," a low-budget movie with Peter Boyle. The film attracted critical praise, and both Susan and Chris found themselves with busy careers — and divorce after 11 years of marriage.

Susan Sarandon, 36, has remained a New Yorker, dividing her time between films, stage and causes.

"I couldn't live in Hollywood; it's too much of a company town," she remarked. "I never look at the trade papers. I used to, but I was scandalized by reading about actors who made deals before they read the script. How could they possibly do that?"

Miss Sarandon was born in New York of Welsh-Italian parents and grew up in New Jersey, the eldest of nine children.

She said being the first of a big family gave her "a large dose of practicality and pragmatism."

"It also ingrained the habit of taking care of people," she said. "That is something I've had to unlearn. The tendency is for me to step in and try to solve other people's problems."

She added that one of her pleasures is to "rediscover my siblings as people, rather than someone I was holding on my hip."

Though she lives in a metropolis and maintains a wide variety of interests, she admits that she is basically lonely. That doesn't bother her.

"I have a solid, extended family that I've worked hard to maintain," she said. "Most of us are artists of various kinds, and artists move around a lot. So I'm alone a great deal, but I think loneliness is a part of the human condition."

"When things are going well, I like to have people to share it with. I've been alone in troubled times, and I don't mind that. Some things have to be endured alone. As Hemingway said, the human being is strong in all the broken places."

Unrecognized actor hopes TV will gain him exposure

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The only actor to appear in each of the last two Academy Award-winning best pictures, "Chariots of Fire" and "Gandhi," could walk the streets of Hollywood without being recognized.

Ian Charleson gets respect but not much attention. In fact, his co-star, Dyan Cannon, in this month's "Master of the Game," miniseries, didn't get to meet him until after that nine-hour movie had finished production.

"Hi, I'm Dyan," Miss Cannon said, clasping Charleson's hand when the two were brought together for a recent press conference. "I admire your work."

Actually, Charleson once passed Miss Cannon during a shooting break, but "she didn't recognize me," he said. He was wearing a wig and fake beard at the time.

That they hadn't met was really a fluke of filming. In CBS' "Master of the Game," which will be broadcast Feb. 19, 20 and 21, Charleson plays Jamie McGregor, an ambitious diamond prospector who dies in the first episode — before he can share a scene with his grown-up daughter (Miss Cannon).

"Master of the Game" conflicts with ABC's Winter Olympics only on Feb. 19, the last day of the Sarajevo games. "It's the only part I'm in," said Charleson, "and people will be watching people skiing down slopes."

Before that appearance, Charleson gets additional American TV exposure with CBS' broadcast of "Chariots of Fire" this Sunday. It should be his biggest shot yet. When "Chariots of Fire" ran on cable last spring, it didn't attract large audiences. "Chariots" was disappointing," said Steve Scheffer, in charge of movie acquisitions at HBO. "It was primarily an off-shore film, with no names in the cast."

In that film, Charleson, a Scot, played Eric Liddell, a Scottish missionary and world-class runner. The gentle Liddell believed his talent was God's gift, and that calling helped him find the motivation to qualify for a berth on Great Britain's 1924 Olympic team.

Charleson played another idealistic minister in "Gandhi." His character was one of Gandhi's first followers.

Charleson said he almost turned down the Liddell part, fearing it was too goody-goody. "It's hard to play someone who is so virtuous without making him somehow unappealing," he said.

His character in "Master of the Game" breaks the divine typecasting, although, once again, he's a Scotsman with an idealistic nature. But that doesn't last. "I like the opportunity to be mean," Charleson said. "I get to rant and rave, and even die on screen."

Charleson said he "didn't particularly enjoy" reading Sidney Sheldon's soapy "Master of the Game."

"It's a good story, but not great literature," he said. "It's not Anna Karenina, but I was bored with doing all that Chekhov and Ibsen. ... I like to do good stories." And, besides, "Master of the Game" was filmed in Africa, "and who could turn down a job in Kenya?"

In choosing scripts, Charleson said he goes by "smell."

"Some things just grab you," he said. "My one rule with scripts is that if I'm still reading them an hour later, then that's the impact they'll have on the screen."

"Master of the Game" should change some preconceptions about Charleson, at least for those who know him well enough to have any stereotypical conceptions. But some other performances, which haven't been seen in America, should make movie fans forget about his previous clergymen.

He was the slick gambler Sky Masterson in a British production of "Guys and Dolls," a part requiring him to sing and speak with an American accent. "To be taken seriously as an actor (in England), you have to learn to speak properly," said Charleson, adding that means learning accents other than a Scottish brogue.

In "Louisiana," an upcoming movie on cable TV, Charleson will be seen as a plantation overseer, and in "The Devil's Lieutenant" on British TV he played a scheming mass murderer.

That's certainly one way to get noticed.

IAN CHARLESON

Birdwatchers may need a license

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — What's good for the goose is good for the gander, say two members of the Maryland General Assembly. If hunters and fishermen need to get licenses, birdwatchers should too.

"This is no joke," said Delegate Anthony DiPietro of Baltimore. "They use the same grounds that hunters, fishermen and campers do, so why shouldn't they get a license?"

Under DiPietro's bill, birdwatchers — defined as people who identify, study and record the presence of wild birds in their natural surroundings — would have to buy a $5 license. The funds would be used to help preserve protected birds.

"It's not as farfetched as some people would believe at first glance," said Delegate Michael Weir, who co-sponsored the bill.

"The ones who don't participate in birdwatching, we don't care if they understand this or not," said Weir. "But I would think the ones who do it seriously would embrace the idea."

Wrong, said several members of the Maryland Ornithological Society.

"Do you charge $5 to watch cows?" said Glenda

Weber, a licensed bird bander and former vice president of the Chesapeake Audubon Society.

"They are going to have some problems with that. Looking at birds — that's a very nebulous thing," she said.

Make a Soft Heart

You'll need:

- construction paper in different colors
- paste
- scissors
- sandpaper

What to do:

- Cut 12 hearts, all the same size, out of three colors of construction paper (four of each color).
- Fold a sheet of construction paper in half to make a card. Paste hearts to the front, all exactly on top of one another, mixing the colors.
- Let paste dry completely. You may want to put something heavy on top.
- Sand edges and different parts of heart until other colors show through. The heart will have a soft, velvety feeling. Write a message on your card.

How the Postal Service Plays Cupid

The valentine season is a very busy one for the U.S. Postal Service because many love messages are sent by mail.

To find out how the Postal Service works, The Mini Page interviewed Cupid, who gave us this step-by-step explanation.

- Your sweetheart puts your valentine into a mailbox.
- The mailman picks it up.
- Your valentine is unloaded at the post office.
- It is dumped onto a moving belt and sorted according to size.
- A special machine cancels your valentine's stamp.
- Another machine with many operators sorts cards and letters according to ZIP codes.
- Your valentine is put into a special tray for shipping to your city.
- A truck takes it to the airport.
- Your valentine is loaded into a plane.
- Like most of the mail, it takes a night flight.
- Your valentine is put onto a mail truck again.
- It is taken to a large post office and put with other cards and letters going to your city.
- It is taken to a smaller post office in your town or neighborhood.
- Your valentine is put into a special slot that has your address on it.
- Your valentine is delivered to you!

Franks goes from ivy walls to concert halls

NEW YORK (AP) — Unlike many musicians, Michael Franks did not perform in backwater saloons or wait on tables while he sought a recording contract.

Discovering that he had a knack for getting grants and teaching jobs, he lectured on the history of popular song at three universities and almost completed a Ph.D. on the social import of music before signing with Warner Brothers Records in 1975.

Since then, Franks has made seven LPs and his academic career has thus fallen on hard times. But it has served him well. The knowledge he acquired about the great American songwriters may be partly responsible for the urban sophistication and intelligent lyrics that typify his music.

His newest album, "Passionfruit," is perhaps his best collection yet. It is beautifully produced and, like all of Franks' albums, contains a stellar cast of musicians, including the jazz trumpeter Randy Brecker; Toots Thielemans, the harmonica virtuoso; Steve Gadd, a drummer currently much in demand; and the singer Kenny Rankin.

Astrud Gilberto, the Brazilian singer whose version of "The Girl From Ipanema" led Franks to develop a strong affinity for Brazilian rhythms, sings back-up vocals on a song called "Amazon."

That tune marks a return to what Franks calls his Brazilian period. Several of the songs on "Sleeping Gypsy," which appeared a decade ago, were recorded in Brazil.

Ever since, Brazilian rhythms have been an important part of Franks' music. But aside from "Amazon," Franks says that "Passionfruit" marks something of a break with the "languid, tropical sound I've been immersed in for so long."

"I think this album has a more urban feel than some of my earlier work," he said. Despite the change in feeling, the new compositions have lost none of the lyrical imagery that Franks spins so well.

Franks is a shy performer, but he makes that shyness work for him. The result is an appealing intimacy. His dress is usually simple but stylish. At a recent Carnegie Hall concert, it was bluejeans, a lavender shirt and narrow white tie.

His music is marked by strikingly contemporary jazz rhythms and blues riffs. It is "popular" music in the best sense of the word, reflecting the musical trends of the times but pushing those trends in new directions.

His songs have been performed by such artists as Manhattan Transfer, and Franks' distinctive whispery baritone has become a favorite in Japan. But his originality makes him difficult to classify. "I like being associated with jazz," he says.

But he still considers his music to be pop music — even though "it doesn't pop quite as loudly as I'd like it to."

His records have sold well enough for Warner Brothers to sign him to a second five-year contract. But Franks, 39, has not achieved the recognition that he would like, or that he deserves.

His first album, "The Art of Tea," has sold 400,000 copies, partly on the strength of his one Top-40 hit, "Popsicle Toss," a delightful comic love song that has also been recorded by Manhattan Transfer.

"The Art of Tea" and his second LP, "Sleeping Gypsy," both sold respectively well in Japan, meaning that they sold more than 50,000 copies there.

Brazil is not the only exotic locale that has captured Franks' imagination. He also has a special feeling for Japan, where he has performed often and where he was married in a traditional Japanese ceremony in 1977.

Franks grew up in La Jolla, Calif., where he taught himself to play guitar after abandoning "the usual abortive piano lessons as a kid." In high school, he liked Pete Seeger and The Weavers, and played in an amateur folk group.

By the early '70s, he had earned a master's degree in comparative literature and was commuting between the campuses of the University of California in Los Angeles and Berkeley, teaching a course on the history of popular song.

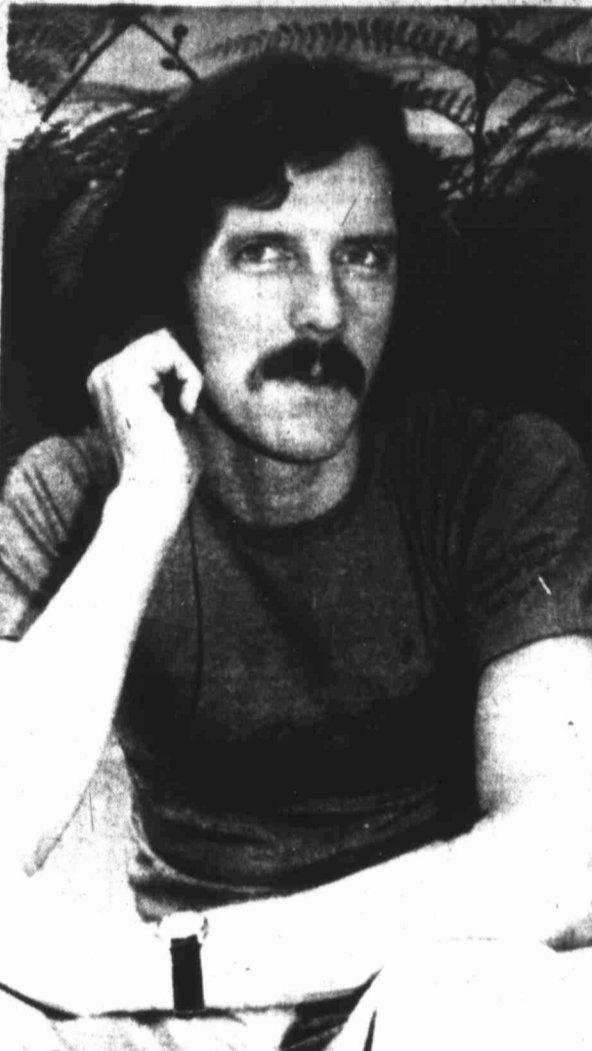

As a result of contacts he had made through friends, he was hired to write the score for a Warner Brothers movie, "Zandy's Bride," and he eventually met executives at Warner Brothers records.

Franks now lives in Woodstock, N.Y., with his wife, a painter. "All we do is work," he says.

He plans tours of Japan and Europe this spring, is working on a book of poems and is completing a musical based on the life of Paul Gauguin, the artist.

Gauguin, whose "Two Tahitian Women" was reproduced on the cover of Franks' last album, has been an inspiration for the musician.

"In a way, that subterranean river of inspiration still flows underneath 'Passionfruit,'" he says.

ACADEMIC MUSICIAN — Discovering that he had a knack for getting grants and teaching jobs, Michael Franks, seen in this 1979 photo, lectured on the history of popular song at three universities and nearly completed a Ph.D. on the social impact of music before signing with Warner Brothers Records in 1975.

Students begin 26-hour trivia contest

AMES, Iowa (AP) — How many park benches are there in the small town of Nevada? How many steps lead up to the Iowa Capitol? Nearly 6,000 Iowa State University students began pondering the answers to such weighty questions Friday as they started a 26-hour trivia marathon.

For 20 years, groups of ISU students have taken books from the library, gulped down countless cups of coffee and picked their intellects in hopes of becoming the first team to get the correct answers in the trivia quiz.

It's all in fun. But it's also a full-scale battle of the brains, complete with code names, spies and cloak-and-dagger tactics.

"It's really cut-throat competition," said Linda Behr, news director at student radio station KUSR, which has conducted the trivia contest called "Kaleidoquiz" since the early 1960s.

"Once, in order to prevent another team from finding out the initials in the hall of fame at the end of a video game, a team filled the machine with 15 to 20 quarters and then paid someone to stand there playing it," she said.

The dirty tricks came out of the bag last year, too, when the station asked about the number of park benches in Nevada, a city of 5,900 five miles east of Ames.

"The park has a cliff, and one of the entries threw the benches over so they couldn't be seen by the other entries.

Airlines consider smoking ban

CHICAGO (AP) — Midway Airlines is considering expanding its experimental smoking ban to other flights after calling its Chicago-St. Louis experimental no-smoking trips a qualified success.

"We have not made a definite decision on whether to ban smoking in any one market or system-wide," said Neal F. Meehan, Midway president and chief operating officer. "But we are considering expanding the smoke-free flight experiment to other cities to determine if we will receive the same passenger support."

For one week recently, no one was allowed to smoke aboard flights between Chicago and St. Louis. Instead, flight attendants handed out "survival kits" of candy, gum and no-smoking hints to people who were getting the jitters from lack of nicotine.

Passengers were asked to fill out questionnaires on whether they liked the experiment: 65 percent were in favor of the ban, 14 percent were against it, and 21 percent didn't care.

The airline also asked the passengers if they would be less likely to fly Midway if they couldn't smoke. Forty percent said they would be more likely to choose Midway, 13 percent said they would be less likely and 47 percent said it wouldn't make any difference.

But, the carrier said Thursday, no decision has been made on what to do about it.

Ms. Jackson was hired a few minutes later for a job her mother had held years before. She is now a carhop.

More than 40 skaters — all young women — tried out for the carhop positions at Angelo's. Approximately 150 more men and women braved a slow-moving line for a chance at 40 openings working inside the nostalgic drive-in.

Although the basic need for money was a motivation for many of the people applying for jobs, the skaters seemed more captivated by nostalgia.

"I like the '50s atmosphere. It seems like crazy times," said Judy Harding, 19, as she nervously glided back and forth on her skates while waiting to be interviewed.

Another carhop hopeful, Hazel Fisher, 18, of San Bernardino, thinks the work will be more fun than most.

"The job sounds really neat. It sounds like a lot of fun exercise, and you get to meet all kinds of different people," Ms. Fisher said. "It doesn't seem like it would be heavy on your head as long as you do your job right."

Owner Tony Strammiello, who owns two other California drive-ins, one in Anaheim and one in Santa Ana, thinks fascination with the "time of innocents" makes his restaurants a success. In fact, he said the idea for the carhop revival stemmed from a club whose members dress in the 1950s style for their monthly meetings.

Strammiello said that at one of the club's get-togethers, a woman came as a drive-in carhop. He said he took one look at her and knew the idea would be a success.

"Bringing back the 1950s is bringing back good times. There were less hassles then. Kids weren't into drugs. It was fun," he said.

Sue Eaton, who works as a carhop at the Anaheim eatery, agreed with her boss. She said that many times families bring their children to Angelo's to show them what it was like when they were growing up.

CATCHING RAYS — Though the temperature hovered in the low 30s, Larry Kringer of Onalaska, Wis. watched traffic go by as he sat in his homemade tanning salon. Kringer said the device, a curved piece of masonite lined with aluminum foil, kept him as warm as if he were sitting in his home.

Carhops enjoy nostalgia of old job

SAN BERNARDINO, Calif. (AP) — Kathy Jackson skated about 15 feet on the bumpy asphalt, then turned and glided back to a wrought-iron fence surrounding Angelo's Drive-in restaurant.

When she reached the fence she smiled and breathed a sigh of relief that a loose pebble had not ruined her troyout.

Ms. Jackson was hired a few minutes later for a job her mother had held years before. She is now a carhop.

More than 40 skaters — all young women — tried out for the carhop positions
