How's that? W-2

Q. What is the deadline for employers to give their employees W-2 forms? Where do you complain if you think they are arriving late?

A. Employers should have mailed or distributed W-2 forms to employees by Jan. 31, according to I.R.S. guidelines. If you haven't received your W-2 statement, talk to your employer first. If you no longer work for that company, make sure they have the correct address. Many employers mail out statements only to have them returned because employees did not leave a forwarding address. If you continue to have trouble, write to the nearest I.R.S. Service Center, 300 E. Eighth, Austin, Texas 78701.

Calendar: Donors

MONDAY

• Persons who wish to donate blood may do so at the Dora Roberts Health Care Center from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m.

• The Soil Builders Garden Club will meet at 7:30 p.m. at the Texas Electric Reddy Room. Charles Neefe will show slides on an African safari.

• The Howard College Hawks and Hawk Queens will meet Amarillo tonight in the Dorothy Garrett Coliseum. The Hawks play at 8 p.m. and the Queens at 6 p.m. Students, faculty and administrators from the Garden City ISD will be special guests.

TUESDAY

• Lloyd Doggett, a Democratic candidate for the U.S. Senate, will be in Big Spring at 9:30 a.m. in the Justice of the Peace courtroom, second floor, court house. The public is invited.

• The Blue Blazers division of the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce will meet at noon at La Posada.

• The VFW Post 2013 and its Auxiliary will meet at 7:30 p.m. in the Post home on Driver Road.

WEDNESDAY

The League of United Latin American Citizens will meet at 7 p.m. at Amigo's, 205 Runnels. The group will be joined by members of the NAACP at 8 p.m. for a joint meeting.

• Spring City Theatre will have a general meeting at 7 p.m. in the Municipal Auditorium to select committees to work on costumes, props, tickets, programs, promotions, advertising, hospitality and maintenance for their upcoming spring production. Anyone interested in participating is invited to the meeting.

Tops on TV: Arthur

Dudley Moore, Sir John Gielgud and Liza Minnelli star in the movie "Arthur" at 7 p.m. on channel 2. Moore stars as a wealthy man who must choose between a bread heiress and a street-smart waitress. At 8 p.m. on channel 13, the last episode of "Little House on the Prairie: The Last Farewell," airs. Barbara Walters hosts another special at 9 p.m. on channel 2. Guests are Mr. T, Esther Williams and Howard Cosell.

At the movies Surf II

"The Power" and "Surf II" are in Big Spring this week showing at the Ritz Twin. At the R-70, "Angel" continues for another week. At the Cinema, look for "Uncommon Valor" and "To Be or Not To Be." Check listings for movie times.

Outside: Nice

Sunny skies and warm temperatures are on tap for the Big Spring area today and Tuesday. Today, look for highs in the mid-60s with southerly winds, 5 to 10 miles per hour. Tonight, look for clear skies and lows in the low 30s. Winds will be southerly, 5 to 10 miles per hour. On Tuesday, highs should again climb into the mid-60s.

Suit challenges extended terms

By RICK BROWN
Staff Writer

April elections for Big Spring City Council members whose terms of office were extended by a recent voting rights court settlement is what three city residents today will ask a state court of appeals to order.

The three residents, former city council member Jack Watkins, local bail bonds company president Mary Thomas and local businessman Bill Chrane, want to run in elections for the positions and believe the present council "overstepped its bounds ... by extending the three seats on the council."

The three positions would have been open this April if a provision of the settlement between the city and the League of United Latin American Citizens had not extended the terms of three incumbents beyond their scheduled expiration. Positions at issue are for mayor, council member from the newly created city District 2 and an at-large place.

The settlement was approved by federal Judge Hal Woodward of Lubbock Sept. 12, 1983. It extended by two years the terms of office of Councilman Larry Miller and Mayor Clyde Angel and by one year the term of office of Councilmember Robert Fuller. It is for these positions that the three residents wish to run.

The council has called elections April 7 for council members from Districts One and Three. Filing for those positions opened today.

Along with their attorney Wayne Burns, Watkins, Chrane and Mrs. Thomas presented themselves as candidates for the three un-called seats this morning to Angel, City Secretary Tom Ferguson and City Manager Don Davis. City Attorney Doyle Curtis did not attend due to illness.

Angel and Ferguson told the trio they could not accept their applications for election since the council did not call elections for the places they wish to run for.

Burns then gave the city officials notarized copies of the petition he said would be filed today with the state court of appeals in Eastland. The petition asks for a court order to call elections for the three places and that the ballot for such an election include Watkins' name for the position of Mayor, Mrs. Thomas' name for the position of council member at-large and Chrane's name for the position of council member from District 2.

Mrs. Thomas said the petition is being filed in Eastland instead of in Howard County's 118th District Court for reasons of expediency.

Named as respondents in the petition are the City of Big Spring, the members of the Big Spring City Council and City Secretary Ferguson.

In a statement to the press released after the meeting, the three said the settlement between the city and LULAC was an "agreed federal court order."

"The federal judge did not, unilaterally on his own, decide to order this extension. It was done by virtue of an agreement between LULAC and the City of Big Spring, admittedly proposed by our incumbent city council. ... Such action runs contrary to every democratic principle we consider to be the rights of American people."

Burns said that if the city council had not proposed the extensions, the judge would not have approved them. "They killed the election

Gemayel's cabinet jumps ship

BEIRUT (AP) — Moslem militiamen poured through the heart of Beirut today in running battles with the Lebanese army, and the government appeared to have lost control of much of the city's western half.

A top Moslem leader called on U.S.-backed Lebanese President Amin Gemayel, whose Cabinet resigned Sunday, to step down himself.

"The battle is about to end, Lebanon's little shah (Gemayel) is on the verge of collapse!" the Moslem leader, Nabih Berri of the Shiite militia Amal, declared in a radio broadcast.

Witnesses said two U.S. Marines guarding the American and British embassies in west Beirut were wounded in a brief firefight.

(In Washington, Pentagon spokesman Maj. Don Brownlee said one Marine was injured at the Marines' Beirut International Airport post, but none elsewhere.)

(Italy's Defense Ministry said in Rome that eight Italian soldiers were wounded in Beirut.)

Later, the army command announced a cease-fire at 4 p.m. (9 a.m. EST) "at the request of political and religious leaderships and an Amal representative ... A committee of officers will be put in charge of overseeing the cease-fire." But the sound of artillery blasts continued to shake the city past the truce deadline.

The heavy fighting engulfed several neighborhoods of Moslem west Beirut as Amal militiamen and fighters of the leftist Druse movement took command of the streets, which echoed with artillery, rocket and mortar fire. Government troops holed up in isolated strongpoints or pulled back into the city's Christian eastern sector.

It was the first time in weeks that gunfire had crackled through west Beirut neighborhoods. Civilians dashed toward their homes or into nearby buildings for cover, or sounded their car horns in panic as they tried to drive through jammed intersections.

Gunfire rang out at the U.S. and British embassies on west Beirut's waterfront boulevard, and two wounded U.S. Marines were seen being put in a station wagon by other Marines, said witnesses in an adjacent apartment building. One could walk, but the other was on a stretcher, his head bandaged, they said.

There was no confirmation of the report from Marine spokesmen here, since telephone communication was disrupted.

The U.S. Marine contingent at Beirut International Airport apparently was not going to the aid of the embattled Lebanese army. People fleeing to the city center from the southern suburbs said the Marines were not believed involved in the fighting. The airport was closed.

Earlier, Marine spokesman Maj. Dennis Brooks said the Lebanese antagonists were battling around the base.

"There are rounds going off around us, and some going over our heads. ... We are staying very close to our bunkers," Brooks said.

(In Rome, Italy's Defense Ministry said eight Italian soldiers

Mailmen to become watchdogs

By CAROL BALDWIN
Staff Writer

To most people, accumulations of mail at a residence is a sign that no one is home. Its only significance is to would-be burglars that the house is an easy target.

But there are others who keep an eye on the mailbox and watch accumulations of mail with concern. To letter carriers accustomed to their routes, uncollected mail at the home of an elderly or disabled person is a sign that something may be wrong with the resident.

Letter carriers have unofficially been watchdogs for years. Tom Conway, safety manager of the Big Spring Post Office, said. However, under the Carrier Alert program which will open Monday in Big Spring, letter carriers will work with the Salvation Army to check on persons in homes where mail goes uncollected.

The program is a joint venture of the post office, the Letter Carriers Union and the Salvation Army.

Any elderly or disabled people in the community who have mail delivered to their homes are eligible to join the Carrier Alert program, Conway said. Residents wishing to enroll may contact the problems.

Participants in the Carrier Alert program will be issued a red and white sticker for their mailbox. If the participant plans to be out of town and unable to collect their mail for a short period of time, it is the participant's responsibility to tell their carrier or to cover up the sticker so the carrier will not report a problem.

Under the program, mail carriers will keep an eye out for accumulations of mail at addresses on their routes. Should a resident enrolled in the program fail to collect their mail from one day to the next, the carrier will contact the Salvation Army, the local sponsoring agency for the program.

The Salvation Army will then attempt to contact the resident. Should there be no answer, the Salvation Army will contact a relative or the police to check on the resident.

Conway, who is coordinator of the Carrier Alert program, said he tried for six months to find a local sponsoring agency before the program could begin.

"There were any number of agencies wanting to help us," Conway said. However, sponsors had to be available to answer phone calls from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on all regular mail delivery days.

"Luckily for me, Lt. Carroll Braun (of the Salvation Army) walked in to my office to ask me about the program," Conway said. The Salvation Army is the sponsoring agent of the program in Dallas and Braun had learned of the program through Dallas.

To get the program off the ground, Wade Bledsoe and the local Letter Carriers' Union donated $200 to use for mailing forms. Conway said that far the program has been well received by everyone involved.

"I can't say enough for the cooperation I've received," he said.

Salvation Army for registration forms.

The Salvation Army will send the participant registration forms which ask for name, age, address and phone number. The form also requests the names of people to contact in case of an emergency, living arrangements, medical contacts, and a list of special health

Killer storm

SNOWBOUND — Four people perished early Sunday in a vehicle buried in a deep snowbank in north Fargo, N.D. The four died of carbon monoxide poisoning, officials said. At least 21 people died in a blizzard that swept through the Dakotas and Minnesota.

Doggett plans Big Spring visit

State Sen. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin, a Democratic candidate for the U.S. Senate seat to be vacated by Sen. John Tower, will be in Big Spring Tuesday as part of his first 1984 campaign swing through West Texas, a Doggett aide said.

Doggett will attend a 9:30 a.m. reception in the Justice of the Peace Courtroom on the second floor of the Howard County Courthouse. He also will tour the courthouse, the aide said.

Doggett, 37, has served as a Texas state senator for 10 years, and is the present president pro tem of the Texas Senate.

According to recent campaign expenditure reports, Doggett — considered by many to be the underdog in the Democratic primary race for U.S. Senate — has collected the most money of the three Democratic candidates for U.S. Senate. He has collected more than $1.1 million, and still has $750,000 left after expenditures, Doggett campaign aide Paul Begala said.

In contrast, former U.S. Ambassador to Mexico Bob Krueger of New Braunfels collected $850,000 and spent $650,000. U.S. Rep. Kent Hance of Lubbock has nearly the same amount of money as Doggett, Begala said.

Doggett was one of the authors of the Texas Sunset Act, which requires state agencies to undergo a periodic review to justify their existence, Begala said.

He was twice named one of Texas Monthly's best legislators, and received two awards this year from the NAACP for his commitment to civil rights, Begala said. He advocates reform of government so that it is responsible to the people and is fiscally conservative, Begala said.

Sanchez files for council

2 council seats open this year

A 49-year-old man was the first Big Spring resident to file as a candidate for one of the two city council seats up for election this year, City Secretary Tom Ferguson said today.

Today is the first day a citizen can file as a candidate in city elections, according to the Texas Secretary of State's office in Austin.

Enrique "Henry" Sanchez, 49, of 709 Douglas filed as a candidate for the City Council District 1 seat. The new district is composed of 61 percent minority residents, according to 1980 Census figures.

The City Council District 3 seat also is up for election this year, Ferguson said.

Sanchez is a Big Spring native, and worked for the city for 13 years, he said in a statement to Ferguson. He also is the vice president of the local League of United Latin American Citizens.

"I believe I have a good working knowledge of the city's systems," Sanchez said. "If elected to this position, I will work with the council members to assure that all areas of our city have the same standards," he said.

Sanchez is married and has three children.

Sanchez has not designated a campaign treasurer yet, Ferguson said.

Elections are scheduled for April 7. Candidates also must file an account of campaign expenditures with the city secretary's office 30 days before the election, seven days before the election, 30 days after the election and on Jan. 15, 1985.

Police Beat

Man reports wallet stolen

Police are investigating the theft of $920 in the form of a billfold, currency and payroll check from Cecil T. Gay, who gave a Houston address.

Gay told police Sunday that someone slipped into the bedroom of a home he was sleeping in at 106 W. Sixth and took the billfold containing his driver's license, a $560 payroll check and about $350 in currency.

Phillip Gressett of Gressett Service Center Inc., 311 S. Gregg, told police Sunday morning that someone had broken into the service center and taken seven car batteries, valued at $374, two impact wrenches, valued at $197, and an impact socket, valued at $144.

Several door jams, valued at about $50, were damaged in the incident, which occurred between 6 p.m. Saturday and 8:15 a.m. Sunday.

Police were called to an empty building at 11th and Settles about 12:24 p.m. Sunday. Upon arrival, they found a pane of glass, valued at about $200, had been broken with an unknown object. Police said it appeared entry into the building had not been gained.

Two accidents over the weekend saw two people sent to a local hospital for treatment of injuries.

Jeff Ford of 1608 Bluebird was injured when a car he was riding in, driven by Douglas Bailey of 1508 Bluebird, overturned on a dirt road near Lawrence Street. Police reports show the vehicle was heading north when Bailey attempted a turn, hit a dirt incline and rolled the car over. Ford was treated for minor injuries at Malone and Hogan Hospital and released.

Jesse Jones, 27, of 1004 W. 7th, remains in Malone and Hogan Hospital today following injuries he received Sunday in a motorcycle accident.

Reports show Jones was riding on a dirt road in the area of FM 700 and Baylor when he fell with his motorcycle. He is listed in very good condition today.

Roger Rivera, an employee of K mart at FM 700 and Birdwell, told police Saturday that he chased a woman from the store who had taken a purse without paying for it. Rivera said the woman threw the purse at him and fled the scene.

Jane Mauldin of 1000 Hearn told police Saturday night that her grandson and several other juveniles had been threatened by an unknown male subject carrying a handgun.

Patsy Dorton of 1514 11th Place told police Saturday night that two tires on a vehicle parked at her home were destroyed when two juveniles known to her slashed them. The damage was listed at $210.

Gary Hamilton of 1110 N. Goliad told police early Sunday morning that a woman known to him struck him with a pool cue stick while the two were inside the T-Club at NW 4th and Lancaster.

Charles Perry, a truck driver from Vintia, Okla., told police Sunday that a Whistler radar detector, valued at $250, was stolen from his vehicle while it was parked in the lot at the Motel 6 Saturday night.

Police made several arrests during the weekend for various charges.

Edward Berry, 19, of 2604 Richmond, was arrested at 7:59 p.m. Saturday for driving while license is suspended. Berry was arrested on Interstate 20 near mile marker 180.

Carl Winton, 18, of 1904 Nolan, was arrested Saturday at the 7-Eleven at 4th and Johnson for possession of drug paraphernalia and public intoxication.

Police arrested Gary Don Wright, 21, of Abilene, on Interstate 20 one mile east of Coahoma, for several warrants from the Department of Public Safety.

Police arrested Severo T. Torres, 35, of Snyder, at the Rip-Griffin Truck Stop early Sunday morning for warrants issued from the Department of Public Safety.

Police arrested Russell Kent Reece, 29, of 609 Colgate, for DPS warrants issued from Midland. He was arrested at Interstate 20 and FM 700.

Gunther Stephen Muthe, 24, of Midland, was arrested Sunday morning in the 500 block of W. Fifth for traffic warrants.

Eldrid Ray Price, 62, of Route 1, was arrested at 9:30 a.m. Sunday for driving while intoxicated.

At 10:15 a.m. Sunday police arrested Douglas Joe Adams of the Knott Route for several traffic citations. Adams was arrested at Malone and Hogan Hospital.

Police Sunday assisted members of the Big Spring Fire Department with a couch fire in a home belonging to Walter Emfinger of 1217 Madison. Damage was limited to the couch and no reason was listed for the cause of the fire.

Sheriff's Log

Leads examined in death

Local law enforcement officials are continuing to investigate the death of Robert Dutchover Jr., 23, of 1205 Lamar, Howard County Sheriff A.N. Standard said.

Officials say they have some leads into Dutchover's homicide, but no charges have been filed in connection with the shooting death. Dutchover's body was found Jan. 30 lying near Gail Road about two miles from Snyder Highway.

Today's topic

SKEE-BALL A STAPLE — Samuel High tosses a Skee-Ball recently at the Landsdale, Pa., headquarters of the arcade game company. Invented and patented 75 years ago, Skee-Ball is a staple game of boardwalks, midways and arcades.

Skee-Ball lives on

At 75, game is 'Rock of Gibraltar' of arcades

LANSDALE, Pa. (AP) — In a sophisticated era of entertainment dominated by computer games, Skee-Ball, the mini-bowling game, is rolling into its 75th year as a remarkably well-sustained staple of boardwalks, midways and arcades.

The only concession to the video crowd is a little electronic gadgetry.

"There will always be a Skee-Ball. It transcends generation after generation," said Samuel High, 49, president of the privately owned Skee-Ball Inc.

"It's the oldest surviving arcade game. There were probably coin-operated games before us, but none survived," he said in a recent interview. "It's the Rock of Gibraltar in every amusement park. It's an arcade's bread and butter."

On the diamond anniversary of its invention and patent in Philadelphia, more than 20,000 Skee-Ball alleys are in operation in the United States, High said. The game also has spread to South America, Europe, the Middle East and the Far East.

The first alleys were a bally 36 feet long, reduced to 14 feet in 1928. The Philadelphia Toboggan Co., a roller-coaster and merry-go-round builder, purchased the rights to Skee-Ball in 1945 and promoted the game's ability to attract players with the lure of prizes ranging from Kewpie dolls to toasters and lamps.

A concept similar to bowling, Skee-Ball is played by rolling wooden balls down an alley that curves upwards at the end. Players aim at concentric holes that award zero points for a gutter ball to 50 points for hitting the smallest, center target.

The perfect score in a nine-ball game is 450 points, although some modern games offer six balls and inflation has jacked up the price per game from a nickel or dime to a quarter or 50 cents.

The higher the score a player got, the more tickets were earned to be redeemed for prizes. The company switched to automatic ticket dispensers in 1967, eliminating the need for apron-wearing barkers.

In 1974, digital scoring mechanisms were added, leading to more sophisticated sound and light effects to attract a generation of players accustomed to Space Invaders, Pac Man and Donkey Kong.

"We've added lights and sounds, but the game remains the same. It's a physical skill game. If you're good enough, you win a prize. Those kinds of things are always popular," said High, who has been with the company for 25 years, including 13 years as president.

Skee-Ball machines have found a niche in the flashy video parlors and pizza palaces geared to the young, according to High.

"The secret is it's a fun game. 1983 was our best year. That's the beauty of Skee-Ball. It's popular year after year," he said.

Skee-Ball, which became a separate company from Philadelphia Toboggan in 1977, builds several thousand machines a year at its production shop north of Philadelphia. The top-of-the-line model costs $2,400, and the company's latest innovation is a six-foot version, about the size of a pinball game, designed for play in taprooms and taverns.

"Skee-Ball appeals to all ages. A 6-year-old can roll a ball," said Ron Knoebel, co-manager of Knoebels Grove Amusement Resort, a family-owned park in Elysburg, Pa.

"It's a simple game to play. You understand it the first time you play it. I'll play a video game and spend six quarters on it before I figure out what I'm supposed to do," he added.

Lawsuit

themselves when they proposed (the extensions)," Burns said.
Watkins called the extension a "dangerous precedent."
Chrane said he thought the extensions were "a subterfuge on the part of the city council to keep their people in control."

Burns said the petition could bring a delay in the scheduled April elections, although he did not anticipate such a delay.
As part of the court agreement, which will bring greater minority representation to city government, the council will be enlarged from five to seven members, with three positions elected from single member districts and the mayor and three other positions elected on at-large basis.

Mideast

were wounded by grenade blasts near Palestinian refugee camps in the area where the Italian contingent of the Beirut multinational peacekeeping force is stationed. The soldiers were being treated at the Italian military hospital in Beirut, the ministry said.

A soldier reached at the headquarters of the French contingent of the multinational force in mid-city said French troops were involved in a firefight. Shells could be heard crashing around the post.

The Lebanese army announced a total curfew on both Moslem and Christian sectors and said anyone seen on the streets would be shot. There were no reports of casualties in today's fighting, but more than 70 people have been killed and 250 wounded since the new surge in fighting started last Thursday.

The resignation of the Lebanese Cabinet on Sunday deepened the political crisis. Gemayel accepted the resignation of Prime Minister Shafiq Wazzan and his eight-member Cabinet and said he might scrap the May 17 troop withdrawal agreement with Israel — a key demand of Gemayel's opponents.

He said the failure of the U.S.-sponsored agreement with Israel, which envisioned the withdrawal of both Israeli and Syrian troops from Lebanon, "has put us in an embarrassing impasse."

Wazzan, a Sunni Moslem, said he and the eight other ministers were stepping down in hopes that a coalition government could be formed to help end the civil war. Gemayel said he was inviting the warring Moslem and Christian factions to Geneva, Switzerland, for reconciliation talks Feb. 27.

A&M aiming for space station

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Texas A&M University, long known for its agricultural research, has unveiled plans for a space research and technology program that may eventually lead to an orbital laboratory, university officials said.

The university plans to establish a program at its Texas Engineering Experiment Station to aid both industry and government in developing the economic potential of space, officials said.

About $200,000 has been allocated by the university so far to design the program and recruit faculty members. The program has a five-year goal of attracting $5 million in space research proposals, the Dallas Times Herald reported Sunday.

In the next year, four to eight professors will be hired to help staff the program, which will start with about 20 graduate students by fall 1985. Research will be conducted in laboratories around the campus.

"The future of major universities is going to be in the space business," said Arthur H. Blair, an assistant to A&M President Frank Vandiver. "That's the next frontier. In fact, that's the only one we have left now." A&M, which provided computer training for the original astronauts and helped correct tile problems on the space shuttle, will specialize in business applications of space technology.

"No other university or educational system has made a major commitment to meeting this technological challenge to the United States," said W. Arthur Porter, director of the Texas Engineering Experiment Station.

Officials said the program could eventually lead to the establishment of an orbital laboratory.

The A&M program, which would be financed partly with the help of U.S. businesses and government grants, would help develop the commercial potential in communications, remote sensing, pharmaceuticals, materials processing, space power and energy management.

"We are interested in exploitation, not exploration," said David Norton, the associate director of the engineering experiment station and the space project coordinator. "We want to take entrepreneurial advantage of space, to use space for practical man's purposes."

Fight erupts over inspirational book

DALLAS (AP) — Two different editions of an inspirational book designed to pay tribute to the "Year of the Bible" in 1983 have triggered a theological feud complete with charges of plagiarism.

The book, "Power for Living," was promoted by Dallas Cowboys coach Tom Landry and other celebrities in one of the most expensive evangelistic media campaigns ever mounted.

But David Chilton of Tyler, Texas — one of three men who teamed to write the book — protested after learning that the material in the book was revised and published under another author's name, The Dallas Morning News reported Sunday.

Chilton has leveled charges of plagiarism and called the new work "a very defective version of Christianity, a very watered-down version of Christianity."

Florida minister and writer Jamie Buckingham, who put together the second version, said his only mission was to make the book more readable.

"I'm concerned that this project could degenerate into a theological debate or name-throwing situation," Buckingham said.

The project was born in August in a discussion between Bill Bright, founder of the Campus Crusade for Christ, and Nancy DeMoss, head of the Philadelphia-based Arthur S. DeMoss Foundation, which eventually funded the media blitz and book.

Another writer of the first edition, the Rev. Ray Sutton of Tyler, said the total cost of the project would approach $25 million.

"To my knowledge, no one has ever mounted this kind of campaign before," he said.

Television commercials, which ended Jan. 1, featured testimonies by Landry, entertainer Pat Boone, Atlanta Falcons quarterback Steve Bartkowski, U.S. Sen. Bill Armstrong of Colorado, and others.

Full-page advertisements also appeared in the Wall Street Journal, New York Times, Fortune, Time Reader's Digest, TV Guide and other publications.

Landry said he is distressed that the controversy had erupted. But he said eight million copies of the book had been requested.

"The response has been tremendous," he said. "If it were being sold, it would unquestionably be the best seller of the year," Chilton said.

DeMoss foundation officials, who commissioned Atlanta-based American Vision Inc. to write the book, declined to discuss the project.

American Vision turned the book over to Chilton, a writer and editor for the ultra-conservative Institute for Christian Economics in Tyler. Chilton completed the project in four days with the help of colleagues Sutton and Michael Gilstrap.

But late in December, after 2.5 million copies of the book had been printed, the three writers learned that a revised edition written by Buckingham was being published.

Although substantial parts of the book were retained, Buckingham was listed as the sole author, Sutton said.

"I produced a piece of work for someone, and it was changed without my permission, and someone else's name was placed on it, which we call plagiarism," Sutton said.

Sutton and the other Tyler writers said their version emphasized Christian life as a matter of obedience to God's laws. Buckingham's book, they said, emphasizes Christian life as a matter of feelings and experience.

"Buckingham's book and a lot of churches say, 'Come to Jesus and feel good and be happy.' The danger is that people would come to Mickey Mouse if they thought they would get a joy ride out of it. What people need to know is what God wants us to do," Chilton said.

Buckingham, senior minister of an interdenominational church in Melbourne, Fla., said the DeMoss Foundation asked him to revise the book.

"They didn't have any problem with the theology of it. They had problems with the literary construction. They didn't think it was very readable," Buckingham said.

Deaths

Neal aids stroke victims

NEW YORK — "When one door of happiness closes, another opens," says actress Patricia Neal, who recovered from a massive stroke in 1965 and now devotes much of her time to helping other stroke victims.

PATRICIA NEAL

Miss Neal, who won an Oscar for Best Actress in "Hud" in 1963, spoke Sunday as she received a "Flame of Healing Award" from a hospital in the borough of Queens. "Her courage and fortitude in confronting enormous physical and emotional challenges has inspired us all," said Max Kupferberg, board chairman of Flushing Hospital and Medical Center. The award was presented in conjunction with the hospital's centennial celebration.

Miss Neal, 58, works with the Patricia Neal Rehabilitation Center in Knoxville, Tenn., and is international chairwoman of Aid for Adoption of Special Kids.

Jackson keeps his style

LOS ANGELES — Even during his hospital stay for treatment of scalp burns, singer Michael Jackson never lost his style — trading in a hospital gown for white socks, a turquoise scrub outfit and his trademark jeweled glove.

MICHAEL JACKSON

The 25-year-old pop music phenomenon, whose hair caught fire last week during filming of a commercial loaded with special effects, asked ambulance attendants on the way to Brotman Medical Center to let him keep the white sequined glove he always wears in public.

"This way," he explained, "I am never offstage." Sporting a macramé hat nurses made to cover the bandage on top of his head, Jackson made rounds with doctors during his overnight stay at the Culver City hospital, signing autographs and talking with other burn patients.

He also watched a videotape of "Close Encounters of the Third Kind," and a nurse said that by the next day he was "bebobbing in bed" to the beat of "American Bandstand" while doctors examined him, the current issue of People magazine reports.

Hussein has medical exam

CLEVELAND — King Hussein, returning to Jordan today after two days of medical examinations at the Cleveland Clinic, "looked remarkably well" despite recent complaints of digestive bleeding and pain, a clinic spokesman said.

Hussein, 48, met with Dr. William Sheldon and the royal physician Sunday to go over the test results, which were not immediately released, clinic spokesman Frank Weaver said.

The king, accompanied by his American-born wife, Queen Noor, arrived at the clinic Friday for cardiovascular and digestive tract tests. A hospital stay in Jordan last month was unable to determine the exact cause of his health problems.

"He is not complaining of any pain," said Weaver. "I ... thought he looked remarkably well, considering he went through very extensive examinations. He was in excellent spirits and seemed very animated."

15 million hear broadcast

NASHVILLE — With kind words for "the planet Earth," guitarist-fiddler Charlie Daniels joined an array of American performers at a live concert broadcast by the Voice of America to an estimated 15 million people worldwide.

Daniels' 10th annual "Volunteer Jam" concert was broadcast to countries speaking 42 different languages, including the Soviet Union and China.

Broadcast officials said the signal would have been strongest in south Asia, all of Africa and throughout Latin America.

Satellite remains useless

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — An Indonesian satellite spun out of Challenger's cargo bay today and its rocket engine fired successfully — avoiding the fate of Westar VI, whose rocket failed, leaving it alive and healthy in space but totally useless.

"We saw the beginning of the burn ... It looked good," mission specialist Robert Stewart reported. "It was rather bright at first."

The 7,300-pound satellite, Palapa B2, was streaking toward a stationary orbit 22,300 miles out.

That was good news to the astronauts, Mission Control, the Indonesians and the companies that hold the $100 million insurance on the satellite.

Westar VI failed Friday when its rocket shattered after the payload was ejected by Challenger's astronauts.

Today, under the guidance of mission specialists Ronald McNair and Stewart, the Palapa satellite was spun up to 50 rpm on a turntable. At 10:13 a.m. EST, six latches released and springs pushed the twirling package away from the shuttle.

"The deployment was absolutely normal, on-time," Stewart reported. "Can't ask for better." Mission Control responded.

Forty-five minutes later, a timing device triggered Palapa's rocket and started the package on its outward journey. There is another milestone ahead: On Wednesday, another onboard rocket is to fire to arrest the satellite at its high outpost above the Indian Ocean.

After the release from the cargo bay, commander Vance Brand and pilot Robert Gibson maneuvered Challenger a safe eight miles away to avoid possible damage to the ship from the rocket fire. The fifth crewman, Bruce McCandless, monitored the operation.

Although the Westar failure remained a mystery, the Indonesian government gave the go-ahead for the spacemen to launch Palapa B2, after delaying the exercise, which had been set for Saturday.

Congress focuses on crime

WASHINGTON — The Senate considers some of the nation's most controversial anti-crime legislation this week, including a death penalty measure, while Lebanon and El Salvador share the House spotlight.

Meanwhile, jockeying over President Reagan's 1985 federal budget continues as top administration officials shuttle among congressional hearing rooms to answer questions and deflect criticism of the $925.5 billion spending plan.

Legislators planned to quit Washington at the end of the week for a 10-day Lincoln-Washington recess.

The Senate's anti-crime legislation includes measures that would legalize the death penalty for certain federal crimes and allow admission in court of some illegally seized evidence.

These measures and others were kept out of a comprehensive crime control bill that passed the Senate on Thursday, 91-1. Sponsors felt the subjects are so divisive they could have scuttled the omnibus legislation.

The bills would: —Establish constitutional procedures for imposing the death penalty in such federal crimes as treason, espionage and attempts to assassinate the president.

—Create an exception to the exclusionary rule to permit introduction of evidence obtained by officers acting with the reasonable, good faith belief their conduct was legal. Currently, the rule allows courts to throw out improperly obtained evidence regardless of the officer's state of mind.

—Restrict access of state prisoners to federal courts. The measure would require federal judges to respect "full and fair" state court proceedings, and limit the time during which a criminal can appeal a state verdict to the federal courts.

—Make the United States, rather than individual federal law enforcement agents, liable for damages resulting from unconstitutional actions such as illegal searches.

St. Helens may erupt again

VANCOUVER, Wash. — The government issued a strong warning for people to stay out of a restricted zone around Mount St. Helens today after scientists predicted a potentially explosive eruption from the volcano that erupted with deadly force in 1980.

A 24-hour eruption alert for the 8,300-foot peak was issued late Sunday night, prompting the evacuation of a U.S. Army Corps of Engineers pumping station at Spirit Lake, about five miles north of the volcano's gaping crater.

Steve Brantley of the U.S. Geological Survey said molten rock apparently was moving upward within the mountain in southwest Washington. But he said the most potent eruption that appeared likely probably would not endanger anyone.

Rain clouds obscured the mountain from view early today, and earthquakes were periodically rumbling under the area. The restricted zone covers roughly a circle 10 miles in diameter around the volcano.

A furious blast from Mount St. Helens on May 18, 1980, left 57 people dead or missing, devastated a fan-shaped 154-square-mile area north and northwest of the peak and spread ash around the globe.

Bombing suspect released

DALLAS (AP) — A man cleared in the bombing death of his brother-in-law says that he had a private talk with his jailed nephew, but could provide police with few clues in the killing.

Billy Jeff Cornett, 35, was released from jail on his own recognizance late Saturday after investigators interviewed witnesses that placed him in Southeast Texas when a bomb went off inside a newspaper vending box, police said.

Assistant District Attorney Rider Scott said he authorized Cornett's release after investigators determined that Cornett was not in the Dallas area when the bomb killed Ward S. Keeton, 60, on Jan. 27.

Scott said he expected the murder charge to be dropped today.

Keeton was killed as he tried to buy a newspaper near his north Dallas apartment. Last Thursday, Keeton's stepson and Cornett's nephew, Marshall DeWayne Williams, 21, turned himself in, said police spokesman Bob Shaw.

Golding's new novel panned

LONDON (AP) — William Golding's first novel since he won the Nobel Prize for Literature last year was panned by London critics on the eve of its publication today.

"The Paper Men," a novel about a prize-winning novelist, was called "banal" in the Sunday Observer, lacking any "driving force" in the Sunday Telegraph and "embarrassingly slipshod" in the Sunday Express.

Only one of four reviewers who reported on the book had words of praise for it.

Anthony Curtis in the Financial Times, said it showed "skill, unexpectedness, economy and sustained tension."

Golding, the 72-year-old author of "Lord of the Flies," was the first British novelist to win the Nobel Prize for Literature since John Galsworthy in 1932, although other Britons had won it since then for history, philosophy and poetry.

The award last October led immediately to controversy when Swedish writer Artur Lundkvist, a member of the Swedish Academy that elected Golding, opined that the winner was of "no importance whatsoever" internationally.

When asked about that remark, Golding said there is a bound to be a "dissenting minority" in any democratic vote.

Golding's new, 12th novel, is the story of novelist Wilfred Barclay, an embittered alcoholic and an aging lecher who is fleeing his reputation as a literary giant — and from a young American academic, Rick L. Tucker, who wants to be Barclay's biographer.

Storms pound Northern U.S.

An arctic cold front finished its sweep through Texas early today, leaving behind chilly temperatures and clear skies.

The front moved across the state Sunday, ending several days of mild temperatures, before it pushed into the Gulf of Mexico and northern Mexico.

Skies were clear statewide, except for some scattered clouds along the lower Texas coast.

Elsewhere in the nation, blowing snow and bitter cold blamed for at least 29 deaths roared out of the Midwest today, leaving a family of six dead in their car and turning routine travel into an icy hazard from Kentucky to Maine and as far south as Georgia.

A snowstorm invaded New England, with more than a foot in the Berkshire Hills of Massachusetts and 10 inches in Vermont.

Temperatures tumbled into the teens overnight in northern Georgia and up to 4 inches of snow was reported today in Jasper, with an inch on the ground in Athens and Atlanta, where most schools were closed today. Record lows were reported in Louisiana and Alabama.

Heavy snow was reported today in southeast Kentucky, where 6 inches were expected before the day is out. Early today, accumulations from 2 to 4 inches were reported in Clay, Knox and Harlan counties, where some roads were closed and travel was described by the National Weather Service as "treacherous."

Blinding snow whipped by winds gusting to 60 mph produced blizzard conditions over the weekend in parts of the Dakotas, Iowa and Minnesota, stranding hundreds of motorists. As the snow moved east today bitter cold set in, sending the mercury plunging as low as 15 degrees below zero.

Of the 29 known weather-related deaths, 15 were in Minnesota, including a family of six who froze when their car stalled in swirling snow and got stuck in a snowbank, authorities said.

"The real heavy snow and high winds are dying down, but snow will continue today across the northeast accompanied by highs only in the teens," said Nolan Duke of the National Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo.

"Freezing temperatures stretched to the Gulf Coast this morning," Duke said. "In fact, at 44 degrees, it was warmer in Billings, Mont., than in Houston and New Orleans."

It was 31 early today in New Orleans, breaking the record for the date of 32 set in 1978, and 40 in Houston. The mercury fell to 28 in Dallas, and Mobile, Ala., set a record low of 22, snapping the old mark of 25 set six years ago.

A winter storm moved into the central Atlantic states today, with more than 2 inches of snow falling in South Carolina and up to 6 inches in the western counties of North Carolina. Four inches blanketed northern Alabama. In Chattanooga, Tenn., an icy bridge was closed by a 13-car pileup Saturday night, critically injuring a 13-year-old girl.

By Tuesday morning, the mercury could fall below freezing in northern Florida, Duke said.

Readings below zero covered Iowa and Minnesota today. It was 15 below this morning in Mason City, Iowa, and 12 below in Redwood Falls, Minn., the National Weather Service said.

The worst of the weekend weather walloped the northern Plains and upper Midwest. While only 2 to 3 inches of snow accumulated, high winds dropped wind chills to 50 below zero and whipped up near-whiteout conditions that made travel extremely dangerous.

An estimated 800 motorists were stranded Saturday night in motels, restaurants, schools and armories along a 50-mile stretch along Interstate 90 from Sioux Falls, S.D., to Worthington, Minn. The mercury in both states plunged to 16 below early this morning, but most travelers were able to move on cleared roads.

Africa food aid worth the price

Millions of starving Africans will get a taste of U.S. generosity if Congress goes along with the Reagan administration's plan to give $100 million in short-term food aid to the continent's drought-stricken nations.

The emergency aid is in addition to existing U.S. assistance of $85 million for the current fiscal year and would launch a five-year, $500-million program to help African nations boost food productivity and adopt more economically viable agricultural practices.

Aid even is earmarked for Marxist-run Mozambique — one of the areas where the food crisis is most acute. According to one administration official, "starving children don't have an ideology." As in the recent relaxation of economic sanctions to Poland, the White House policy toward Mozambique is designed to help people without bolstering their rulers.

Such compassion could put the president in a no-win situation. There will be those who say it is not enough, despite the fact that over half the food going to Africa over the years has come from the United States. Others may complain that the Reagan administration is ignoring America's poor in the process.

Put in proper perspective, the $100 million supplemental request is a pittance compared to the $18 billion the federal government spent on domestic food and nutritional programs in 1983 — an increase of $4 billion over 1982.

It is well-targeted, however. Half of the world's estimated 10 million refugees are in Africa and 22 of the continent's nations are experiencing major food shortages caused in part by several consecutive years of drought. An added factor is the practice of many African governments to subsidize consumers in the cities by holding down the prices paid to farmers for their crops, thus reducing incentives to grow more.

Credit for the sudden policy change has to go to Sen. John Danforth, R-Mo., who succeeded in focusing White House attention on Africa's emergency and long-term needs following a two-week fact-finding trip during the congressional recess. Upon his return, Danforth immediately saw the president and showed him color slides of Africa's hungry that had been processed on a rush basis.

The administration's commitment didn't make very many front pages and the domestic political benefits are questionable. But as Secretary of State George Shultz noted, "I think the message is that when people are hungry and dying, America responds."

Regardless of the party in the White House, we might add.

Today's heroes

WASHINGTON — America is back, all right, but not back where Ronald Reagan says it is. For his model of the country and the world ceased to apply around 1960.

The American heroes of the 1980s are almost certain to hail from big companies, not from the ranks of brown and black entrepreneurs. The exercise of raw American power now rattles as much of the world as it reassures.

The basic fact of an American resurgence is not open to serious doubt. The economy has done far more than merely bounce back from — more briskly, perhaps, than indicated by the 4.5 percent rise in GNP registered in the fourth quarter of last year. Thus the increase in consumer spending, business fixed investment and residential construction was 8 percent.

More important still is a burst of dynamism in the world of the big corporations. IBM has reasserted itself, after years of slump, as the master of high technology. The breakup of the phone company signals a revolution in the communications industry. The oil business is following the Texaco-Getty merger with a new wave of consolidation.

General Motors has announced a reorganization about which Chairman Roger Smith says, "I can't remember in my 35 years with General Motors anything that has been as substantial a change..." Deregulation has put the airlines up for grabs. The big financial institutions, with Citibank in the lead, are going national.

Nobody yet knows where all this activity will lead. A strong impression is that the professional managers are, at last, reacting to the spur of recession, technological change and increased competition from abroad. If they make the right moves they will impart to the largest institutions the capacity for change and innovation that used to distinguish the small firms of the high-tech field.

Identifying the heroes of the 1980s, in these conditions, is decidedly premature. It was just a nice touch when President Reagan, in his State of the Union message, cited a couple of candidates. A nice political touch especially, for two of his nominees turned out to be Barbara Procter, "who rose from a ghetto shack to build a multimillion-dollar advertising agency in Chicago; and Carlos Perez, a Cuban refugee who turned $27 and a dream into a successful importing business in Coral Gables, Florida."

But it is doubtful, given the realities of American life, whether individual entrepreneurs can budge this country very far. It is the big institutions that make the difference. So the probable heroes of the 1980s are those who infuse dynamism into the giant corporations. They are Smith and Brown, if you like. But Roger Smith of GM and Charles Brown of ATT.

A similar anachronism colors Reagan's view of this country's relations with the rest of the world. For the president assumes a one-to-one relation between American strength and international harmony. In that vein, the State of the Union message said:

"We have no territorial ambitions. We occupy no countries. We build no walls to lock people in. Americans build the future."

American power, to be sure, did tend to equal international stability for the first 15 years after World War II. At that time much of the rest of the world was prostrate, and only the U.S. could stand up to Russia. But since then enormous changes have reshaped the globe.

The Soviet Union has acquired strategic parity with the U.S. Given the likelihood of a Soviet response, an American threat to use nuclear weapons lacks credibility and affords little reassurance. The Europeans have developed forces of their own and the capacity to work out autonomous security relations with Moscow.

What happened in Vietnam does not cause all underdeveloped countries to look to Washington for their security. On the contrary, China and India and not a few others have chosen to balance between the superpowers.

American influence in the world, accordingly, now depends more on diplomacy than raw power. It is possible to use strength in a discriminating and intelligent way. If so, stability is enhanced. But that has not, so far, been the record of the Reagan administration. On the contrary, the application of American force has gone hand in hand with a deterioration of security in both Lebanon and Central America.

The fact is that doubts about the president's touch in foreign policy are not partisan. They come close to being universal. For they are rooted in the perception that Mr. Reagan has not adjusted to the international transformation that has taken place over the past 20 years. Maybe he knows better. But he sounds like a man out of the 1950s who is prone to equate an American comeback with a return to the past.

Around The Rim

By BOB CARPENTER

I always find myself in the position of disliking something that everyone else loves. My latest subject of rancor is Michael Jackson. Actually, it's not Jackson exactly that has me sulky, but rather what happens when people turn a hot item like a Michael Jackson or a Cabbage Patch doll into a mania.

Jackson has sold $30 million worth of copies of his album "Thriller," his MTV video by the same name is one of the most requested on that show and every piece of news about him is devoured by fans. I believe Jackson to be a decently talented young man, but all this hype and clamor makes me think he'll never be the same after the thrill of "Thriller" dies down. I fear the promoters and hucksters will rush him to turn out mediocre products for a hungry public.

"Come on, Michael, hurry up, they don't know the difference between garbage and genuineness."

The same scenario has happened before. Hollywood types have taken advantage of all sorts of performers or fads and wrung them for every buck until the public attention span ends and the "star" is left burned out and forgotten. John Denver, Henry Winkler, disco...where are you? Travolta, Stallone, Mr. T...you're headed that way.

Yet, when a hot item like Jackson appears, the American public has always transformed itself into a feverish herd of sheep ready to scoop up any morsel doled out by these "stars." It's as if the public loses its ability to discern hype from honesty. And that has always bothered me. Don't we know how to tell quality for ourselves, or must we be the slaves to the marketers, the consultants and other liars who tell us what's good and bad?

The artists don't escape blame on this one either. Too often they sell out to the manipulators just as quickly as the public surrenders to marketing schemes. Truth and art, and the ability to discern legitimate quality, get trampled by the profit margin.

I wish Jackson wouldn't have let it get so out of hand. He is now over-rated (in spite of his sizable talent) and I would guess his ego has expanded right along with the mountainous publicity.

Take the video "Thriller," for example. The thing has credits and Jackson's name not only appears in them as the star but also the producer and writer and I don't know what else — no other video star has been quite so bold. He seems to value himself highly and is not about to let us forget that he is the "star." I find that kind of ego boosting hollow and unsavory. An artist should be in touch with his audience, but Jackson, with the help of Hollywood types, only shows me an affinity for the public's dollar.

Some say Jackson's dancing is superb in "Thriller," but when I look at the thing I see 30 other persons dancing right with him doing the same steps. Maybe Jackson choreographed the steps, but they're nothing new or particularly exciting. He ain't rocking the joint like Elvis.

Also have you heard "Thriller" sans the video, it's not a very good radio song. Actually, what makes "Thriller," if anything is good about the film and song, is the special effects and makeup. The stuff that enralls the fans is the gingerbread, not anything Jackson is doing. Yet, the video is so popular that MTV announces the specific times it will show which is something it doesn't do for other artists.

I fear Jackson as an artist will be a victim of all this adulation and popularity. His music will suffer and he will lose touch with his world and audience, which is death for a creative artist. Oh, he may be rich, but that initial drive and spirit will be gone.

Then the audience will move on, leaving Jackson to fade away. The hucksters will come up with something new and we'll all rush out to buy because the proverbial "they" say it's good. We'll take it home and like it even though we don't know why.

And some say the mind control described in Orwell's "1984" is not apparent in our society — guess again.

Opinions expressed in this column are those of the staff writer and do not necessarily reflect the views of the newspaper's management.

The year of the terrorist

WASHINGTON — A number of intelligence reports warn that 1984 could be the year of the terrorists. Thousands of relentless assassins — professional terrorists trained and indoctrinated behind the Iron Curtain, fierce fanatics sworn to die for Ayatollah Khomeini, right-wing killers belonging to death squads — will be stirring up bedlam around the world.

The United States won't be spared, intelligence sources say. The 1984 election and the Los Angeles Olympic Games, it is feared, will draw terrorists to this country. Presidential candidates and Olympic stars could be in danger.

But there is some good news: U.S. lawmen will be ready and waiting. I asked my associated Tony Capaccio to check into the preparations. He found that the Secret Service and local law enforcement authorities are prepared for the worst.

Tomorrow, the Secret Service will officially start protecting all the presidential candidates. Because of threats against the Rev. Jesse Jackson, he has been receiving protection since November. One of the supervisors assigned to his campaign is the man who set up the command center at George Washington University Hospital when President Reagan was shot in 1981.

The Secret Service will provide far more than a "human shield" formation to accompany each candidate. Hotels will be swept electronically; security arrangements at local hospitals will be checked; motorcade routes, including the quickest way to hospitals, will be scouted in advance; the whereabouts of potentially dangerous individuals will be sought.

Planning for the February and March primaries actually began back in August 1982 with the formation of a permanent Candidate-Nominee Protective Division. The cost: The Secret Service has asked Congress for $27 million.

Security experts give some of the reasons they believe the candidates will be safe:

— The long, unofficial campaigning has given state and local police substantial time to refine their security techniques. One 20-year veteran of the political wars, now working for one of the Democratic candidates, expressed amazement at the improved quality of local protection. "I find it all the way down to the sheriff's department," he said.

— Since the 1980 campaign, some 8,950 state and local police officers have taken one-week courses to familiarize themselves with the Secret Service's protective methods.

— The Secret Service learned a lesson from the near-assassination of President Reagan in March 1981. According to Dr. Richard W. Kobetz, a top security expert, the lesson was: "Never take anything for granted. Expect the unexpected. Nothing is routine."

— Since last April, the FBI has notified the Secret Service whenever an individual who is considered a potential threat to the president or a candidate is picked up. Most of these persons are in prisons or mental institutions, but there are about 125 at liberty. Their names have been put in the national Crime Information Center computer; if one of these people is arrested on any charge, the Secret Service will be notified of his whereabouts. Within two hours of its activation, the computer system flagged one of the names.

— Recommendations by the House assassinations committee have been enacted into law by Congress. One important change expanded the use of "zones of protection" to include political candidates. Entire hotel floors, for example, can be closed off and intruders can be arrested, even though there may be no obvious physical threat to a protectee. Previously, the use of "zones of protection" had been limited to presidents, vice presidents and their families.

BUSINESS BRIEFS: Paul Thayer, the former deputy secretary, is working on his defense against charges of "insider trading." Meanwhile, his old company, the LTV Corp., is taking no chances on the reception facility it is planning to set up for delegates to the Republican convention in Dallas this summer. The company queried the Federal Election Commission to make sure its hospitality suite and a cocktail party for the delegates wouldn't be classified as campaign contributions. The FEC told LTV not to worry. The freeloader would not "express advocacy of the election or defeat of a candidate for federal office." Let the good times roll.

— General Motors, evidently stung by bad publicity over Federal Trade Commission charges that it sold cars it knew had defective transmissions, camshafts and diesel fuel-injection pumps, is carefully monitoring the information released by the FTC under the Freedom of Information Act. It has asked for copies of FTC documents that were given to Rep. Al Swift, D-Wash.; Diane Halferty, director of Consumers Against GM, and a private citizen from Ann Arbor, Mich.

The problem with 'dopey' brothers

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I am alarmed about my brother, who is two years older than I am. I accidentally discovered he is playing around with drugs, but he threatened to hurt me if I told our parents. What should I do? — T.S.D.

DEAR T.S.D.: I want you to imagine for a minute that you were walking down the street with your brother and suddenly he accidentally stepped off the curb into the path of a speeding truck. Wouldn't you do all you could to reach out and grab him before he got killed? Of course you would.

Your brother is in a very dangerous position — potentially just as dangerous as if he had stepped in front of that speeding truck. Almost no one who begins to "play around with drugs" plans to get more and more involved and trapped by them to the point of no return — but far too many do. The drug epidemic today is almost out of control and is tragically wrecking the lives of countless young people. Many die each year from drug-related problems, and many more do irreversible damage to their minds and bodies that will cripple them for the rest of their lives.

No, your brother may want you to keep quiet — but the alternative is to let him continue on a path that could destroy him. If you love your brother, you owe it to him to help save him from his own foolishness, even if it will not be easy for you or him right now. Later, when he realizes what could have happened to him, he will thank you. Encourage him to seek help from a pastor or a qualified drug rehabilitation program. At some stage he also will have to be honest about his problem with your parents — and if he doesn't, you will.

But you also need to help your brother spiritually. Christ can give you both a new direction in life, if you will let him. If you have never opened your heart to Christ, commit yourself to him and discover the joy and peace he can bring. You also can discover the strength that Christ brings — strength to turn your back on temptation, and strength to do what is right and become the person that God wants you to be.

HCD OFFICERS — Officers for the Highland Council for the Deaf are Delores Erlanson, vice president, Angel Ramos, president, Pat Jones, secretary, and Marcus Myers, treasurer.

Council provides services for deaf, hearing people

By CAROL BALDWIN
Staff Writer

Highland Council for the Deaf provides services to both deaf and hearing individuals, Angel Ramos, president of the organization, said.

Other HCD officers are Delores Erlanson, vice president, Pat Jones, secretary, and Marcus Myers, treasurer and past president.

Ramos, head of the developmental studies department at the SouthWest College Institute for the Deaf, explained that the organization is not part of SWCID but is funded in part by the Texas Commission for the Deaf. Other money comes from fund raisers and private donations.

"The Texas Commission for the Deaf receives money from the government to provide various services to the deaf community. They in turn contract with various organizations for the deaf," such as HCD, Ramos said.

But, "HCD is in Big Spring to help everyone," Ramos said. He added that "a lot of people in Big Spring have been very supportive" of the organization.

People not acquainted with the services of HCD think it is only for deaf individuals. However, HCD provides a liaison service for people who need to relay messages between a hearing individual and deaf individual over the telephone.

To provide this service, HCD works through a service provider, Shelly Massey. Mrs. Massey receives phone calls and relays messages to people through the aid of a telecommunications device for the telephone, called a TDD or TTY.

People without a TTY who need to make a phone call to someone with a TTY can call HCD at 267-6779 to have their message relayed. The process is also reversed through the HCD service.

Providing telephone service is not the only function of HCD, Ramos said.

The organization also seeks to "increase public awareness of deafness," he said. "Many people have a misconception about deafness. It's not that they dislike deaf people. They are just misinformed."

"People in general are scared of the unknown. Our job is to educate them about deafness."

To better educate the public, HCD members participate each year in events such as Deaf Awareness Week.

HCD is also planning an all-day workshop in sign language.

"We realize a lot of people in Big Spring are interested in learning sign language. (The workshop) should be a good start for them."

The workshop is being planned for February or early March.

HCD also arranges interpreting services for legal, governmental, economic and medical situations. Funding is not provided to pay for interpreting social or educational events.

When HCD is contacted through Mrs. Massey, she will attempt to find an interpreter. HCD will bill the appropriate agency to pay the interpreter.

Ramos explained that should someone in the courthouse request an interpreter through HCD, their office would be asked to pay for interpreting services. If the Department of Human Resources requested an interpreter, for example, then DHR would be billed.

"We have a list of certified interpreters in the Big Spring, Midland and Odessa area," Ramos explained.

Locally, HCD recently joined the Better Business Bureau so that "people will realize we are a bona fide organization," Ramos said.

Ramos said "there are a lot of things we want to do but can't do because of a lack of money. One of my goals as president is to be able to provide interpreting for any situation. The problem is finding the money to do this."

Dr. Donohue

Thyroid infection

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I am a lady 54 years of age. I had a severe sore throat and went to a medical doctor. I was diagnosed through blood work as having subacute thyroiditis. Should I be taking some medicine besides aspirin? Please discuss and advise. — Mrs. C.H.H.

Your problem is inflammation of the thyroid gland, most often caused by a viral infection. The symptoms usually follow an upper respiratory infection, one that may smolder for weeks, with pain in the lower front part of the neck (where the thyroid is). It may produce a dragged-out feeling.

In most cases, aspirin controls the symptoms and there is a return to normal thyroid function in a matter of weeks. In more severe cases, steroids are used to quiet the inflammation. Your doctor feels aspirin will do the job for you.

I should explain the term subacute, and others of that kind often used in qualifying degrees or types of illness. Subacute refers to the onset of symptoms. It implies a more or less indolent course over a fairly long period. In contrast, acute means the symptoms have come on abruptly, almost overnight. Acute thyroiditis is less common than subacute thyroiditis, and is usually caused by bacteria, so antibiotics are used in treatment. Yours, remember, is most often virus-caused, so antibiotics are ineffective.

Another kind of thyroiditis is called "chronic." In this the inflammation has lingered, usually leading to diminished thyroid hormone production. This form demands a search for the many different causes that can be involved. Viruses and bacteria do not appear to be implicated in chronic thyroiditis. I trust that by the time you read this your subacute thyroiditis will be but a memory for you.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Your article on autopsies gave me a peace of mind I have not had in five years. My husband died. He had suffered gravely. He had a wonderful, kind surgeon who took very good care of him and did all he could to give him back his health.

I, too, was asked to sign the paper for the autopsy the night he died, but in a very gentle and kind manner, I replied that if it would help the doctor in any way to further his efforts in treating patients, I would sign, and I did.

I had often wondered if I did the right thing. Your answer to the daughter who questioned the procedure has satisfied me that I did. — Mrs. A.H.

Your thyroid plays a critical health role — in everything from eyesight to fertility. The booklet "Your Thyroid: How It Works for You" explains this important, and misunderstood, gland. To get a copy, enclose one dollar and a long, stamped and self-addressed envelope to Dr. Donohue in care of the Big Spring Herald, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, IL 60611.

Kim Blount installed as worthy advisor

Kimberly Diane Blount, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James F. Grizzard, 1507 E. 5th, was installed as worthy advisor of the Big Spring Assembly No. 60, Order of the Rainbow for Girls, at the Masonic Temple, Feb. 4.

Installing officers were Dianna Garret, officer; Amy Dwire, marshal; Sandra Waggoner, musician; Sharon Andrews, recorder; and Amy Cox, chaplain.

Officers for this term are Tanya Ferguson, worthy associate advisor; Jan Donald, charity; Kimberley Phipps, hope; Stephanie Kimbell, faith; Lisa Vigus, recorder; Amy Dwire, chaplain; Amber Logback, love; Michelle Smith, religion; Michelle Fortune, nature; Kathleen Crooks, immortality; Joanna Jenkins, fidelity; Tami Burnsed, patriotism; Sherri Marlow, service; Kristi West, confidential observer; Ronda Jenkins, outer observer; and Rebecca Read, drill leader. Mrs. Edie Fryar will preside as mother advisor.

Miss Blount dedicated her term to her parents, family and friends. She chose "friendship" as her theme. Her poem is "A Friend", and her song, "You've Got a Friend." Her scripture was Proverbs 17:17.

Kimberly Diane Blount

Bill Phipps presented his daughter, Kimberly Ray Phipps, with her Rainbow gavel, a gift from the assembly. Ms. Andrews presented Mrs. Fryar with her Mother Advisor's pin.

Following tradition, the assembly attended church at College Baptist Church, Sunday.

Dear Abby

Children rarely lie about sexual abuse

DEAR ABBY: The recent ABC television special, "Something About Amelia," caused hundreds of people to come forward and admit that they are — or had been — victims of child sexual abuse.

I am enclosing a column you wrote several years ago. I think it should be printed on the front page of every newspaper in the country. Please run it again. The message it contains cannot be repeated often enough.

SACRAMENTO SOCIAL WORKER
DEAR SOCIAL WORKER: The column you sent was published in July 1982. Many other professionals dedicated to halting child abuse requested permission to reprint it. And here it is:

DEAR ABBY: I am a psychiatrist who works closely with a child development specialist. As an example of the power for good that your column has, we want to share this story:

Two years ago, a teacher in a nearby town gave her class an assignment to bring in a news item for class discussion. Expecting current events and human interest stories, the teacher was surprised when a quiet 12-year-old approached her desk with a clipping from your column about a girl who was being sexually abused (raped), and said, "This is happening to me."

The teacher and the school's guidance person obtained our help in providing supportive counseling during the difficult process in which the child was placed in foster care because her mother "stood by" her husband (the child's stepfather) and called her daughter a "lying bitch."

You have many young readers. We urge you to encourage children to seek help from their school guidance people, doctors or community health center if they are being involved sexually by adults. You may use our names or sign us...

CONCERNED PROFESSIONALS

DEAR CONCERNED: The importance of your message cannot be overstated. Whenever I publish a letter from someone who has been sexually abused as a child, I am inundated with letters from readers saying that this has happened to them. (Many confide that they had lived with that ugly secret for as long as 40 and 50 years — too ashamed to tell anybody.)

It is the responsibility of adults to teach children (3- and 4-year-olds are not too young to understand) that it is not OK for ANYONE to touch their private parts, and if someone does, the child should tell a trusted adult immediately. Stress that even if the person who has made these advances has threatened to "kill" her (or him — little boys are molested, too), the child must tell anyway and be assured she (or he) will be protected.

Some facts: Today in many communities there is a 1-in-4 chance that a child will be the victim of incest, child molestation or rape by the time he or she reaches 18 years of age. Statistics tell us that 80 percent of the offenders had themselves been physically or sexually abused as children.

Children seldom lie about sexual abuse. Child molesters are rarely strangers. They are usually related to or living near the child and are known and trusted by the child.

A child needs to tell a trusted adult if he or she has been molested; if not believed, the child should tell another adult, and still another adult until believed.

A child needs to be assured that if he or she has been molested, the shame and blame belong to the adult — the child is the victim!

P.S. To report suspected child abuse, dial this toll-free number: (800) 422-4453.

Club members review the holiday activities

A review of meetings and activities during the holidays was given at a meeting of the Sew and Chatter Club in the home of Della Nobles, Jan. 25.

November was "Eat Out" month and Ruth Appleton's birthday was celebrated. The Christmas party was in the home of Norma Murdock. Donations were sent to the Cheer Fund, March of Dimes and as a memorial in memory of Ethel Weaver, a long-time club member. Members told of their most memorable Christmas.

The club was organized in March 1937 under the name "Busy Bee Club" with 18 members. Later the name was changed to "Dos Por Ocho", and in 1946 it was changed to "Sew and Chatter". Two charter members, Lona Crocker and Neva Clinkscales, are still active.

President celebrates birthday in big way

EUREKA, Ill. (AP) — President Reagan, celebrating his 73rd birthday at his alma mater, declared today that he has restored America's image as a world leader.

"We're trying to see to it that American citizens — and it doesn't matter whether they are Navy pilots in the Gulf of Sidra or medical students in Grenada — can no longer be attacked or their lives endangered with impunity," Reagan told students and faculty at Eureka College, from which he was graduated in 1932.

"We've tried to bring a new honesty and moral purposefulness to our foreign policy, to show we can be candid about the essential differences between ourselves and others while still pursuing peace initiatives with them," he said.

Reagan flew here by helicopter from nearby Dixon, where he toured his newly refurbished boyhood home, rode in a parade and received an eight-layer birthday cake at a party for 4,000 in the Dixon High School gymnasium.

Reagan's speech at Eureka College was the first in a series of lectures by people who have appeared on the cover of Time magazine.

Reagan said a broad consensus established during the 1940s and 1950s that America would defend freedom began to break down in the 1960s and 1970s — "partly in response to the Vietnam tragedy, an era of paralyzing self-doubt," he said.

"The consequences of America's retreat were not long in coming," he added. "All of you can remember a few years back when the tragedy of the Iranian hostages was fresh in our minds; when around the world, especially in Afghanistan and Central America, Soviet expansion proceeded unchecked; when our defenses had declined dramatically, and some nations thought they could threaten or harm the United States with impunity."

Declaring, "We've changed this," Reagan quoted U.N. Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick as having said that the Reagan administration's foreign policy is different because "we've taken off our 'Kick Me' sign."

The president said that "Peace remains our highest aspiration and that's why arms control isn't enough, arms reduction is our goal." He added that "our new realism is an important means to this end."

Domestically, the president said that even though the economic recovery "is in full swing," the nation needs some changes "that will protect us against government's all too powerful tendency to grow and grow."

Specifically, he reiterated calls for line-item veto power, changes in the tax code and a constitutional amendment requiring a balanced federal budget.

At his birthday celebration in Dixon, the president said his hometown "Dixon has changed a lot" since he left it in 1928 to go to Eureka. "But in many ways," he added, "it hasn't changed at all."

"What I'm really referring to are the values and traditions that made America great."

Reagan recalled the Depression years. "Times were tough, but what I remember most clearly is that Dixon held together. Our faith was our strength. ... People held on to their hopes and dreams. Neighbors helped neighbors. We knew we would overcome adversity; that after the storm, the stars would come."

The trip was Reagan's first to Dixon as president, but at least his second as a presidential candidate. Despite the campaign-style undertones of the nostalgic journey, it was paid for by taxpayers because it was not considered an overtly political event.

Joined by his brother, Neil, the president arranged to tour the newly restored home at 816 S. Hennepin St., where he lived from 1920 to 1924.

Then, Reagan was testing his new armored Cadillac, complete with interior fluorescent lights to make him more visible, as he rode at the head of a parade through the main business district.

A White House spokesman, who did not wish to be identified, said beforehand that the president would remain shielded inside the car until he reached a reviewing stand. The car, which was delivered last week, has a roof that was widened and raised three inches from past models so people can see inside while the president remained protected.

For the birthday party, tickets were distributed over the weekend on a first-come, first-served basis. Also, 500 of the tickets were reserved for those who attended a fund-raiser to defray the cost of the event. The tickets were sold for $100 each.

Referring to scenes he first articulated in his recent State of the Union address last month, the president said it was easy to understand "why America is back on her feet and moving forward with confidence. Our rebirth began right here, in our homes, schools, churches and neighborhoods. From the grocery store to the football field, and from the service clubs to the Chamber of Commerce, America has recaptured her drive, energy and determination."

Reagan said he came to Dixon "not to celebrate my birthday, but to celebrate Dixon and America. Honor, integrity and kindness do exist all across our land. There is a zest for life and laughter."

And he quoted Adlai Stevenson, another Illinois native, as saying America is "the first community in which men set out in principle to institutionalize freedom, responsible government and human equality."

Reagan added: "That's what we're celebrating today."

At the high school, the president was receiving an eight-layer white cake, with white icing, baked by JoAnn Levan, whose hobby is baking wedding cakes for neighbors.

"They originally said I could use candles, but 73 candles I thought was a little much," Mrs. Levan said in a telephone interview. It didn't matter, because she recently was told not to put any candles on the cake.

DIXON'S PRESIDENTIAL PRIDE — Curator Lynn Knights stands outside of the home where President Reagan lived between 1920 and 1924 in Dixon, Ill. The President visited the home today on the occasion of his 73rd birthday.

Blind teacher beats discrimination

TEACHER WITH GRIT — Ceinwen King-Smith, a blind teacher uses a Braille text to teach a class in mathematics at the Connelly Skill Learning Center in Pittsburgh, Pa. Mrs. King-Smith, who has been blind since birth, applied to teach in the Pittsburgh school system in 1968, but failed to earn a spot until 1980.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Her students know her simply as "teacher," the one who is teaching them English in a country which prides itself for giving individuals the freedom to achieve what you can.

But the fact that the foreign-born adults can't remember — let alone pronounce — her name doesn't bother Ceinwen King-Smith, a blind woman who fought 15 years for the right to teach in the Pittsburgh city schools.

"I'm very, very, very happy to be here. They (the students) respect me so much, so it's very easy for me to put everything into this job," Mrs. King-Smith said recently after a long day of classes at the Connelly Skill Learning Center.

"I'm teaching, which has been my main goal for a long time. Not only am I teaching, I am teaching people who are receptive enough to learn from me," she said, smiling.

Mrs. King-Smith, 38, who has been blind since birth, applied to teach in the Pittsburgh City Schools in 1968. She was a Phi Beta Kappa graduate of Stanford University and held a master's degree in education from Harvard University. But she failed to earn a spot on the school board's eligibility list for hiring.

After filing a lawsuit against the school district and bidding her time as an instructor at private schools, she finally won a job teaching junior high math in 1980.

But then she received an unsatisfactory rating as a teacher — after students threw gum at her, pulled her hair, untied her shoes and stole money from her purse.

She was transferred to another junior high school, but was suspended in April 1981 because of another unsatisfactory rating. Three months later, she was among 138 teachers laid off.

In a second lawsuit, she contended that her civil rights had been violated and that school officials hadn't backed her in discipline matters. She also claimed that any teacher — sighted or blind — needed aides or other methods for dealing with misbehaving students.

She dropped the lawsuit when she was offered a job at Connelly teaching English to foreign-speaking adults. She's been conducting one of the school's four such classes since January 1983.

"I had thought that I might not like this job so much, but at least I could deal with it," she said recently. "I discovered after about that second day that I was here that I loved working with the students, and it's every bit as rewarding as teaching math or anything else I've taught."

School officials and the American Foundation for the Blind say they're pleased, too.

"She's always had the potential for being a fine teacher. All she needed was a fighting chance," said vice principal Bill Jackson.

"There's been a great move against discrimination of blind teachers in the past 10 years," said the foundation's Dr. Susan Spungin, who estimates there are about 350 blind public school teachers in the country.

From 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. each weekday, Mrs. King-Smith uses small magnetic boards and colorful plastic letters in lieu of blackboards to spell out English words to her 27 students, most of them in their 20s and 30s from Laos, Vietnam and China.

"I don't think of myself as a crusader at all. Or a fighter," she said. "I simply needed to get a job and I wanted to teach. Therefore I had to do what I had to do."

3 inmates flee during prison melee

ATOKA, Okla. (AP) — An inmate from a minimum-security prison farm was at large today after fleeing the facility during an uprising in which inmates shattered windows and set fire to items in the building.

Corrections spokesmen said the uprising, which began late Sunday night at the McLeod Honor Farm, was quelled within an hour, and no major damage or injuries were reported.

Rick Allen Crisp, serving a term for first-degree rape, was reported missing after a headcount at the facility, said Oklahoma Highway Patrol dispatcher Lyndel Christian. The prison is located several miles southeast of Atoka in southern Oklahoma.

Prison Warden Ron Champion said Archie Norman Smithpeter, James Traywick and Crisp all made a break during the outbreak at the facility about 9:30 p.m. Traywick and Smithpeter were captured just before midnight about two miles southeast of the prison.

The unfenced prison farm houses about 400 inmates, officials said. There were no reported injuries during the melee.

Champion said the incident began Sunday evening when inmate Billy Joe Webb was caught trying to break into a prison warehouse. As he was taken to an office for questioning, Webb produced a homemade knife and threatened guards, then threatened to kill himself, the warden said.

Champion said Webb then barricaded himself in a prison canteen area, where he passed snacks and food to other inmates.

Some 30 to 40 other inmates joined in the looting and then went on a rampage about 9:30 p.m., storming through the dormitory area adjacent to the canteen, setting fire to bedding items and trash cans and breaking out windows in the prisoners' barracks.

Mike Darst, a dispatcher at the Atoka County Sheriff's office, said officers from his unit were sent to the scene shortly after the incident began. City police units and members of the highway patrol also responded to the call. Spokesman Bill Ward said the Corrections Department sent an 11-man team and two dogs to the facility, and the incident was under control by 10:30 p.m. Officials said all the fires had been extinguished by that time.

Champion said an inmate helped talk Webb into surrendering. Webb is serving sentences for grand larceny and receiving stolen property.

The highway patrol reported at 10:35 p.m. that the inmates had been isolated in one area of the facility, and corrections officials were conducting a head count to make certain all the prisoners were accounted for.

Joyce Jackson, Corrections Department spokeswoman, said about 11:30 p.m. Sunday that Webb had been placed in a holding cell until his punishment was determined.

She said Webb apparently had become upset because another prisoner was being held in disciplinary segregation.

Public intoxication

Q. What is the Public Intoxication law in Texas?

A. The statute is found in the Texas Penal Code under Section 42.08. This statute states an individual commits this offense if he appears in a public place under the influence of alcohol or any other substance to a degree that he may endanger himself or another.

Intoxication means disturbance of mental or physical capacity resulting from the introduction of any substance into the body. This definition is found in Section 8.04(d) of the Texas Penal Code.

The term public place is defined in Section 1.06(a) (29) as any place to which the public or a substantial group of the public has access and includes, but is not limited to, streets, highways, and the common areas of schools, hospitals, apartment houses, office buildings, transport facilities and shops.

A person arrested for public intoxication is not required by any statute to take a test to show the level of the blood/alcohol content in his blood. An officer making an arrest for public intoxication bases his action on what he observes the intoxicated person do, their speech pattern, and physical appearance.

This is a Class "C" misdemeanor and is punishable by a fine not to exceed $200.00.

In Olympic hockey

Eligibility questioned

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia (AP) — The 1984 Winter Olympics were only one day away, and a new game was on the agenda.

A game of chance, it has become known here as hockey eligibility roulette.

With the disclosure that one hockey player, a Finnish goaltender, already has been disqualified for professionalism, the International Olympic Committee has accepted a formal protest by Finland that could affect 11 more players from at least four countries.

At the same time, the IOC hoped to resolve by late today a hassle between the United States and Canada over the eligibility of four Canadian players. Today was the deadline for filing team rosters with the IOC, since hockey competition begins Tuesday.

"Everybody will wait until tomorrow night and file their rosters and take their chances," Canadian Olympic Association President Roger Jackson said Sunday.

Finnish, American and Canadian Olympic officials met with Willie Daume, head of the IOC's eligibility committee, for 1½ hours Sunday evening. After the meeting, Kosti Rasinpera, secretary general of the Finnish Olympic Committee, revealed the protest and the disqualification of goalie Hannu Kamppure, who had played in one World Hockey Association game in 1979.

Rasinpera declined to identify the 11 players questioned by his Olympic committee, but he said none were from the United States. He said four were from Italy, three from Austria and one each from Canada and Norway. That left two more players who were not even identified by country.

The Finnish Olympic official said his committee sent a telegram to the IOC two weeks ago only as an inquiry, naming the 11 players. On Sunday, Rasinpera said he had been told by Daume that the telegram had been accepted as an official protest.

After the first meeting, Daume met separately with Jackson to discuss the USA-Canada situation.

Sunday also marked the second day of time trials for the men's downhill, and American Bill Johnson said he now was ready to assume astronaut status.

He says he has "The right stuff."

The hockey debate between the United States and Canada centers on four players whom the U.S. Olympic Committee contends are professionals. One, Mark Morrison, played nine games with the New York Rangers of the National Hockey League two years ago.

"I guess we are talking about whether people who have signed pro contracts can or cannot play, and we haven't decided that yet because we can't agree on what a pro contract is," Jackson said.

The Canadians contend no player is professional unless he's played more than 10 NHL games, and they say they were given permission from the International Ice Hockey Federation last September to use that standard.

"Everybody hopes to have this resolved by tomorrow evening," Jackson said Sunday. He said the matter would not be resolved, however, until officials from the rest of the nations involved had been consulted by the IOC.

Johnson, who won one World Cup downhill this season, led all competitors in the trials with a time of 1 minute, 47.99 seconds over the 3,070-meter course at Mount Bjelasica.

Peter Mueller of Switzerland, who won Saturday's time trials in 1:48.19, was tied for second on Sunday with Helmut Hoeflehner of Austria at 1:48.47.

"I did what I wanted to do today," said Johnson, 23, of Van Nuys, Calif. "I set out to see how fast I could go. I still can improve on some of my turns, but I definitely feel I have the right stuff to win here."

Franz Klammer of Austria, who won the 1976 downhill but couldn't even make his country's team in 1980, fell in Sunday's trials. Dr. Ernst Raas, Austria's team physician, said Klammer sustained a slight pull in his groin in the fall.

Winter Games causes television cooperation

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia (AP) — Three years ago, there was a hole in the ground and the hopes that it would be filled in time to make a dream come true. Today, a massive radio-television center stands where the hole used to be, and Yugoslavian Television is ready to turn the dream into reality.

"We have been preparing for this ever since Sarajevo was nominated for the Games six years ago," said Zoran Udovicic, the head of JRT, the Yugoslav radio-TV organization. "Immediately, we decided to pool the resources of all of the television centers in Yugoslavia. None of our eight centers could have covered the Games on its own."

"When we came here three years ago, there was this empty field," said Jeff Ruhe, the coordinating producer for ABC's Olympic coverage. "It's now the most sophisticated Olympic operation I've ever been involved in. I wish I had a building like this to work out of in New York."

"In 1976 at Innsbruck, they turned a bus depot into the broadcast center. In 1980 in Lake Placid, they built a bus barn for us. Now we have this."

Viewers in the host country will see a maximum of 8½ hours of Winter Olympic programming a day, or 104½ hours during the 13-day run. By comparison, ABC is carrying 63½ hours of the Winter Games to U.S. audiences. While most of ABC prime-time shows will be on tape because of the six-hour time difference to the East Coast, the bulk of JRT's coverage will be live.

And, while ABC paid some $90 million for the U.S. television rights to the Winter Games, JRT gets domestic rights for free.

The radio-TV center, a seven-story building the size of a city block, is designed "to meet the requirements not just of the Olympics but the radio-TV requirements for Sarajevo after the Olympics," Udovicic said. "The merging of the Olympics and our longterm goals has been very beneficial for us and the coverage of the Games."

Udovicic declined to say how much the building cost or JRT's Winter Olympic production costs.

JRT is in charge of all the feeds from the eight venues. It will use 22 vans, 106 fixed cameras and 25 portable cameras. Almost 2,200 people, including 1,000 who normally work in Sarajevo, are involved.

"Our prime aim was to cover the Olympics by using our own experts and hardware," Udovicic said. "We have attracted high-quality experts in the field from throughout Yugoslavia. But we have also stressed throughout our preparations that we welcome suggestions and help from other organizations who have had experience in Olympic coverage."

Sarajevo's site varies from Moscow's

EDITORS' NOTE: The writer, a foreign correspondent for The Associated Press, is a former Moscow staffer who covered the 1980 Olympics there. Now part of the AP staff at the Sarajevo Winter Games, he looks at the differences between the way the two Communist cities host an Olympics.

By DAVID MINTHORN
Associated Press Writer
SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia (AP) — As the second Communist city to host the Olympics, Sarajevo is stressing smiles and less obtrusive security to avoid a repetition of the grim 1980 Summer Games of Moscow.

"The Olympic Games are not a military exercise where the organizers behave like troops. We want to function like an army without looking like an army," Sarajevo Games spokesman Pavle Lukac said. "Our young people don't have to be trained to smile. A plate of caviar and a bottle of champagne aren't substitutes for a smile."

At the Moscow Games four years ago, thousands of Soviet soldiers and uniformed and plainclothes police were an intimidating presence at sports venues, the Olympic Village and hotels for journalists and tourists.

Moscow, a city of eight million people, was put off-limits to Soviets from out-of-town to minimize contacts with foreigners. The city was virtually emptied of school children, and food shops were specially stocked to give visitors a favorable impression.

"An artificial atmosphere was created," recalled a West German journalist, who didn't want his name used. "We couldn't mingle with the locals. For three weeks we were pretty much confined to our hotel, the press center and the venues."

A U.S.-led boycott to protest the Soviet military incursion of Afghanistan kept three dozen teams away from Moscow and prevented the Soviets from realizing their goal of staging the largest Games in history.

Although stung by the boycott, the Soviets did manage to put on conflict-free and well-organized athletic competitions in excellent sports facilities for 5,353 athletes from 81 competing nations.

The state-run Soviet press called the Moscow Games — the first in a Communist country — the most successful in history and incapable of being surpassed.

The Yugoslav press has also been full of self-congratulatory articles about staging the first Winter Olympics in a Communist country.

The Winter Games are much smaller, with 49 countries and 1,600 athletes competing.

But the Sarajevo organizers make no secret of wanting to avoid the oppressive atmosphere of Moscow while not shying away from employing enough security to assure that no incidents mar the events.

Security is mainly in the hands of uniformed police in blue snow suits who patrol the venues with automatic assault rifles strapped across their chests. The police are polite but firm when making identity spot checks or shoos visitors away from unauthorized areas.

Tourism is a billion-dollar annual business in Yugoslavia. But most is confined to the coastal resorts and relatively few foreigners venture to Sarajevo, a city of 400,000 on the country's rocky spine.

Nevertheless, visitors aren't being pestered by black marketeers seeking to purchase Western clothes or change currency as they often were in Moscow during the Olympics.

The local Bosnians are friendly and outgoing, and happy to show visitors the sights of a exotic city whose skyline of minarets and mosques is the legacy of nearly 500 years of Turkish rule.

In contrast to Moscow, where there was little merchandise of real value outside special hard currency shops, Sarajevo is filled with shops offering bargains in local handicrafts and clothing, generally of top quality.

Restaurant food is good and plentiful, and there are no lines at butcher shops and stands selling fresh fruit and vegetables.

"Generally speaking, the food supply situation has improved over the last three or four months throughout Yugoslavia, but Sarajevo seems particularly well stocked," said a Belgrade journalist, noting bananas and pineapples on local shelves.

Yugoslavia and the Soviet Union both adhere to Communist ideology and one-party rule, but life is far freer in the Mediterranean nation and the living standard considerably higher. Yugoslavia is not a part of the Warsaw Pact, the Eastern European bloc with strong military and political ties to Moscow.

While Soviet authorities warn youth against idolizing American pop music and films, Yugoslav officials appear unconcerned about capitalist influences.

At least three cinemas in Sarajevo are showing first-run U.S. films, including several with nudity and violence starring Burt Reynolds, Meryl Streep and Arnold Schwarzenegger. Such movies are never shown publicly in Moscow — not even to impress Olympic visitors.

Hawks show well in scrimmage

EL PASO — The Howard College Hawks were "very pleasing," according to head baseball coach Bill Griffin after he watched his team scrimmage in four games here over the weekend.

The Hawks were outscored by UTEP, 6-3 and 9-6. Howard also scrimmaged a college from Arizona and managed one game where the score stood 2-1 in favor of the Hawks. In another the Hawks came up short, 5-3.

McEnroe wins Virginia Classic

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Top-seeded John McEnroe used a powerful serve Sunday to dispose of Steve Denton 6-3, 7-6 in the finals of the $100,000 United Virginia Bank Tennis Classic.

McEnroe, who ran his 1984 match record to 12-0 with the win, collected $30,000. Denton, the No. 7 seed this year and runner-up in the event for the second straight year, won $12,000.

"I was mentally prepared for the year going into the Masters," McEnroe said. "I didn't know how well I was playing, but the Masters meant more to me this year than past years because it meant number one." McEnroe beat Ivan Lendl in the Masters.

McEnroe, who held service throughout the Richmond event, registered nine aces Sunday against in disposing of Denton in one hour and 20 minutes.

"I don't think I could have served any better," McEnroe said. "I was in control at the beginning." "If he (McEnroe) is hitting his first serve that well and disguising it like he does, then he gets about three or four feet from the net and he has the best volley of anybody," said Denton, who lost in last year's finals to Guillermo Vilas. "That combination makes him impossible to beat."

Denton lost his serve in the second game of the first set, but was able to save two break points and get back to deuce. He then hit a forehand volley into the net, and McEnroe hit a backhand winner.

There were no service breaks in the second set. In the tiebreaker, McEnroe double-faulted on the third point to give Denton a 2-1 lead. Denton won four of the next six points to take a 6-3 lead.

McEnroe made it 6-4 with a backhand volley, then served an ace to make it 6-5. A backhand service return winner by McEnroe tied it at 6-6.

Denton had a service winner to make it 7-6, but McEnroe came back with one of his own to tie it. McEnroe took an 8-7 lead when Denton hit a forehand wide.

On the final point, Denton came in behind his second serve and hit a forehand volley into the net.

Mandlikova stays perfect on Slims

HOUSTON (AP) — Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia has won all three Virginia Slims tennis tournaments she's entered this year, including one at the expense of Martina Navratilova, the world's top-ranked women's tennis player.

But Mandlikova isn't ready to grab Navratilova's crown, despite her impressive 6-4, 6-2 dissection of Bulgaria's Manuela Maleeva in Sunday's finals of the $150,000 Virginia Slims of Houston.

"I consider myself the No. 5 women's player in the world and working to be No. 1," said Mandlikova. "I have beaten Martina one time and she has beaten me nine times. I have to prove that I can beat her again."

Mandlikova had little trouble avenging the defeat she suffered from Maleeva in their last meeting.

Maleeva, 16, had played giant killer throughout the tournament, upsetting sixth-seeded Zina Garrison and seventh-seeded Wendy Turnbull to gain her first finals berth on the Slims tour.

"I served well and put a little more pressure on her than Wendy," Mandlikova said. "Wendy came to net too much and got passed. I tried to come in and stay back and mix her up."

Maleeva and Mandlikova traded service breaks to start the match and were tied at 3-3 when Mandlikova broke Maleeva in the seventh game of the first set.

Mandlikova's strong serve started taking its toll after the break game in the first set. She lost only four points on her serve the rest of the set.

Mandlikova broke Maleeva in the third and fifth games of the second set to take control.

Maleeva said she was tired following the match, which marked the first time she had played the entire week.

Luck helps Irwin win Crosby

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — It took him eight years to do it, but Hale Irwin finally got even with the luck factor in golf.

Luck, in the form of a bizarre bounce off a gallery-stake rope, cost him the title in the inaugural Memorial Tournament.

That time Irwin was the victim.

Luck, in the form of an equally-bizarre bounce off surf-washed rocks where sea lions sun themselves kept him alive to win a sudden-death playoff for the title in the 43rd Bing Crosby National Pro-Am Sunday.

Irwin said the shot that eventually won it for him on the second playoff hole was the "greatest second shot of my life." Still, without the lucky ricochet on the last regulation hole, the one that went his way, there never would have been a playoff.

"It is the nature of the game," he said.

"You have to take the bitter with the sweet."

"And this was the sweetest I've ever seen."

His taste of the bitter, of course, occurred on the Muirfield Village Golf Club in the Memorial tournament of 1976.

Irwin was involved in a playoff with Roger Maltbie on that summer day in Ohio. And Irwin appeared a sure winner when Maltbie hooked a shot toward the crowd. But the ball hit a slender metal stake supporting the ropes that restrain the gallery, then bounced onto the putting surface. Maltbie made the par that kept him alive and eventually won the tournament.

Very lucky for Roger. Very lucky for Hale.

This time, Hale got lucky.

And Jim Nelford, the left-handed putter from Canada who appeared to have his first Tour title in hand, was very unlucky.

Nelford came from four strokes back, finished off his 68 and was standing behind the 18th green at Pebble Beach with a one-stroke lead when Irwin went to the tee on that picturesque par-5 finishing hole. Irwin had to make birdie to tie.

He launched his drive from the tee "and I thought, 'oh, my Lord, what have I done'."

"It was hooking (over the cliffs that separate the fairway from the wave-washed rocks of Carmel Bay). It was definitely out of here, into the rocks and things," Irwin said.

"And then it was back in the fairway."

The ball hooked over the cliff, down into the rocks that serve as a playground for seals, sea-lions and otters, and — incredibly — bounced back up over the cliff and on to the fairway.

"It was a tremendous break. The entire tournament revolved around that shot. I've not enjoyed that sort of break before," Irwin said, paused and obviously was delighted to add:

"Now I've got a piece of the rock."

And, after hitting the flagstick with his third shot on the hole, he tapped in for a birdie that gave him a piece of the lead. It finished off a round of par 72 and enabled him to tie Nelford at 278, 10 under par.

After they made routine pars on the first playoff hole, Irwin popped his drive into a fairway bunker. Moments after the national television commentators had completed their analysis — "He's dead," said one; "He has no chance to reach the green," said another — Irwin lashed a 2-iron shot 195 yards to within 10 feet of the flag and holed the putt for the winning birdie.

The victory, Irwin's 16th in a career that started in 1968 and includes two U.S. Open titles, was worth $72,000 from the total purse of $400,000.

Nelford took some consolation in a check for $43,200.

"These things all even out," he said. "It's the luck of the game. Maybe it'll be my turn next time."

Mark O'Meara and Fred Couples, with 70s, tied for fourth at 280, two strokes back. Nick Faldo, an Englishman who won five times on the European circuit last year, was next at 68-281. PGA champion Hal Sutton, with a 72, and Craig Stadler, with a 70, were at 282.

Sheehan captures title

NORTH MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Despite a double-bogey on the final hole, there was never any question in Patty Sheehan's mind who would win the $175,000 Elizabeth Arden Classic.

"I never felt in danger of losing the tournament," Sheehan said Sunday after shooting a closing par 72 for a record-breaking 72-hole total of eight-under 280.

With her earlier rounds of 71, 68 and 69, Sheehan picked up the winner's check of $26,250 for her first tour victory of the year and ninth since turning pro in 1980.

Sheehan, who finished the Ladies Professional Golf Association event two strokes ahead of Sherri Turner, said she was "impressed" with her competitor's style.

"Sherri played very well," said Sheehan. "She must have been nervous. But she looked calm and collected."

Sheehan's total over four rounds of the 6,992 Turnberry Isle course bettered by three strokes the tournament record shared by Jane Bialock, Sally Little and JoAnne Carner.

The 27-year-old Sheehan, last year's Player of the Year and the 1981 Rookie of the Year, entered the round with a two-stroke lead over Ann-Marie Palli with Turner another shot back.

Sheehan bogeyed the 450-yard, par-5 second hole, then followed with birdies on the third and fourth to move a stroke up on Turner for the day as Palli bogeyed two of the first nine with no birdies.

Sheehan then birdied the 367-yard, par-4 ninth to make the turn at 1-under.

Turner, playing in her first LPGA tournament, also bogeyed the second hole but added birdies on the third and eighth.

Sheehan remained at par until the 140-yard 17th hole when she used a 9-iron over the water that hit the pin. She made a six-foot putt for a birdie.

Turner, who bogeyed the 11th and birdied the 15th, was unable to pick up any ground on Sheehan.

Sheehan got into trouble on the par-5, 496-yard final hole when her first shot with a 3-wood caught the right bunker. Her second shot hit the lip coming out and traveled only 30 feet to above a second trap. That forced Sheehan into an off-balance shot that landed 190 yards from the green.

Two shots later, she hit the green and then 2-putted for a seven.

Lakers down Spurs, Jabbar nears record

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Kareem Abdul-Jabbar needs only two more field goals to pass Wilt Chamberlain as the player with the most career field goals made.

Chamberlain made 12,681 field goals in his career. Abdul-Jabbar scored 27 points on 11-of-14 shooting from the field Sunday night to lead the Los Angeles Lakers to a 110-98 victory over the San Antonio Spurs in a National Basketball Association game.

"I was ready to play tonight, and I was looking for my shot because I felt I had my rhythm. The trajectory on my hook shot depends upon who is guarding me. The Spurs lost a potent offensive force in George Gervin, but we game's last five minutes to put the Lakers up by 16, 108-92, with less than a minute to play.

The loss was the fourth in a row for the Spurs, now 20-28. The Lakers extended their current win streak to six and are now 30-16.

Sonics 104, Mavericks 96

SEATTLE (AP) — Jack Sikma and Gus Williams may collect the big numbers, but Seattle Coach Lenny Wilkens likes his reserves' minutes.

"I thought the guys who came off the bench did an excellent job," Wilkens said after his SuperSonics Sunday won their ninth straight home game, beating the Dallas Mavericks, 104-96, in National Basketball Association action.

"Even if somebody came in for five minutes, it helped us because it enabled us to give guys like Jack and Gus a rest. When we came back with our starters at the end, we came back strong."

Sikma scored 10 of his 32 points in the fourth quarter when Seattle rallied to hand Dallas its ninth straight loss in Sonics home territory. The Mavericks have not won here since Oct. 22, 1980.

With starting forwards Reggie King and Danny Vranes totaling just two points, Sonic reserve forward Clay Chambers tossed in 21 in 35 minutes. Johnson, meanwhile, scored seven points late in the first half when Seattle whittled the Mavericks' 15-point lead down to four.

GIMME THAT — Texas Christian University's Jamie Dixon (23) struggles with Texas Tech's Tony Benford (34) for possession of the ball during second half action at Daniel-Meyer Coliseum in Fort Worth. The Red Raiders defeated the Horned Frogs, 47-45 to remain in a tie for third in the Southwest Conference at 6-3. Tech is tied with SMU.

Dallas blew past Seattle in the early going as Mark Aguirre, the league's No. 2 scorer coming into the game with an average of 29.8, sank his first 10 shots from the field. He finished with 37 points.

Aguirre, however, struggled in the fourth quarter when the Mavericks shot .294 and were outscored by Seattle, 26-17.

Williams, who scored 24 points, quickly scored six to highlight a Sonic surge as Seattle cut the Maverick lead to 78-79 entering the final quarter.

A Williams free throw with 7:25 to play gave Seattle the lead for keeps, 85-84. The Sonics pulled away in the closing minutes.

BASKETBALL

Amarillo College (16-6, 6-4) at Howard Queens (3-4, 16-8)
 Each game is a must win for the Queens if they are to have any chance of reaching regional play. Howard is on a two-game winning streak, with its last victory coming over New Mexico Junior College, 103-73.

The Queens placed six players in double figures in the win, paced by Terri Moore's 24 points. Alex Provenzio followed with 18. Moore, Provenzio, Molly Early and Debbie Hall are all averaging in double figures for Howard.

In the last meeting, Amarillo defeated the Queens 70-47 in overtime. AC has the conference's leading scorer in forward Michelle Whitehead who averages 24 points and 10 rebounds per contest. Georgia Walton and Mandy Funk average 16 and nine points respectively. Game time is 6 p.m.

Amarillo College (6-4, 16-6) at Howard College Hawks (19-2, 9-1)
 The Hawks start the second half of conference play, and another shootout is expected between the two teams. In the first contest Howard won, 77-72 as Jerry Stroman gunned in 21 points.

The Hawks defeated scrappy New Mexico Junior College 74-71 in their last game. Stroman led the scoring with 21 points, while Michael Porter added 15.

AC is led by Ignatius Lott who averages 19 points per game. Andrew Kennedy averages 14 points and seven rebounds. Game time is 8 p.m.

Abilene Cooper (8-12, 5-7) at Big Spring Lady Steers (12-13, 5-7)
 The Lady Steers will be making their final home appearance of the season, and need this win in order to have a chance for a .500 mark in district play.

Big Spring won its last contest over Odessa, 68-53. Paula Spears keyed a balanced scoring attack with 20 points. Tris Clemmons added 17, while Monette Wise and Debra Rubio combined for 26 points. Cooper defeated Big Spring the first time, 64-50.

Cooper has been playing well of late, upsetting Midland 44-43 in its last game.

 NO... THOUGH WE'VE HAD IT, AND SNOW, THE LAST FEW WEEKS!
 UNCLE GUNNAR! WHAT'S GOING ON UP THERE?
 UNGER! I'M GLAD YOU'RE BACK! HE KILLED A FARMER... HE'S COMING THIS WAY!

GASOLINE ALLEY
 I thought you should know!
 Virgil is thirty years old...
 ...and he's never been out with a girl?
 And you're teaching him how to act on a date?
 I pose as his young girl friend!
 That's a big load to put on the poor guy's imagination!

MUPPETS
 YOU DIDN'T BUY ANY SEED FOR THE BIRD-FEEDER, DID YOU, PIGGY?
 NO, I'LL PICK SOME UP SOON.
 YOU HAD BETTER!

BEETLE BAILEY
 OH-OH! HERE COMES OTTO! WE BETTER GET BACK TO WORK!
 RELAX! HE CAN'T TALK! HOW WILL SARGE KNOW WE'RE NOT SHOVELING?

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RICHTER INSTITUTE

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, FEB. 7, 1984

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The early part of the day is the best time to make headway with those in position of authority in aiding you to get your new and pioneering plans put across.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Going after personal desires in a positive way is wise and you find friends are also helpful. Be more supportive of a bigwig.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) See experts who can aid you in some unusual enterprise you are currently working on. Use care in motion today.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Friends can be amenable to your suggestions and helpful today. Analyze your personal aims.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Try a new tack where your business affairs are concerned and you can make greater progress. Use care with money.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Contact those who can appreciate your creative ideas and make the most of them. Avoid overplaying your hand.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Before you ask a favor of a person of different background to yours, think it over well. Be aware of loved one's needs.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) If you want to join forces with a charming partner, make sure you do not give up too much of your own holdings.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Be more cooperative with fellow workers and you can gain their aid for some new venture you want to put in motion.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) It is natural that you want to have a good time, so contact right playmates and have fun.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Some new ideas can bring fine results today if you get it in motion early. Extend invitations to friends for this evening.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Good day to make improvements that are needed, whether at home or at work. A pat on the back should be given to co-workers.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Yesterday's benefits can continue today from monetary plans you made not long ago. Plan for even greater progress.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will like to study into as many different things as possible. Channel all this energy into constructive outlets. Teach early to finish a project before going on to another one. A college education is a must here.

"The Stars impel; they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Doctor testifies for 8th day in infant's death trial
 GEORGETOWN, Texas (AP) - Children who suffered mysterious seizures after injections from nurse Genee Jones recovered shortly after the unexplained attacks, the murder defendant's former boss testified today.
 Dr. Kathleen Holland of Kerrville, returning to the stand for the eighth day, read medical records showing that doctors, in several cases, could not figure out why the children had suffered the seizures.
 Ms. Jones, 33, faces a murder charge in the death of one child who did not recover. Fifteen-month-old Chelsea McLellan died in 1982 after injections from Ms. Jones. The shots were supposed to be immunizations but prosecutors say the girl was killed by an injection of a powerful muscle relaxant.
 In testimony Friday, Ms. Holland said every child under two who had medical problems and who was treated by Ms. Jones suffered an unexplained seizure. During cross-examination, defense lawyer Burt Carnes apparently believed he had found records of one child treated by Ms. Jones who did not have an unexplained attack. But Ms. Holland said, "It was not exactly the same kind of situation."
 She testified that Ms. Jones had not prepared or started the intravenous on the child in question. The infant's aunt, a registered nurse, was at the office and helped prepare the intravenous, according to the doctor.
 Ms. Holland has testified that six children under Ms. Jones' care fell into respiratory arrest after receiving injections or intravenous solutions prepared by the nurse. Chelsea was the only child to die, she said.
 Ms. Holland, somber throughout the cross-examination, admitted she suspected Ms. Jones might have injected succinylcholine only after possible use of the drug was raised by hospital officials.
 She said she was first asked about succinylcholine on Sept. 27, 1982.
 "After Sept. 27, was it not clear in your mind that succinylcholine was suspected in every case you've testified about?" asked Carnes. "Aren't you setting it up so it could be succinylcholine?"
 Ms. Holland responded: "After Sept. 27, I had occasion to reflect back while it was still close to the events."
 Later she added, "I knew in retrospect that it (finding the vial) was something that could be extremely important."
 Prosecutors have shown that, during Ms. Jones' employment in Ms. Holland's office, all five infants younger than two years who had a history of illness and who were subjected to intravenous solutions or injections prepared by Ms. Jones inexplicably went limp and stopped breathing.
 Once the cross-examination of Ms. Holland is completed, prosecutors say they will call mothers of infants stricken in Ms. Holland's office to testify, and will attempt to develop a motive.
 The state will probably not rest its case until Tuesday or Wednesday, attorneys said.
 Carnes attempted to show Friday that Ms. Holland has altered her recollection of events in order to tighten the case against Ms. Jones.

REAGAN'S farm policy attacked
 DIMITT, Texas (AP) - The Reagan Administration has no farm policy, says Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower.
 "In 1984, we're going back to the same old policy of over-production, low prices and declining export markets," Hightower told the annual meeting of the Texas Corn Growers Association and the Texas Corn Producers Board.
 Hightower said the administration's 1985 budget submitted to Congress last week proposed to reduce farm commodity export credit guarantees by $1 billion.
 "When the Reagan-Block Administration preaches to farmers, they preach that U.S. producers must accept a low price on their commodities in order to compete in the export market. Yet, now, when it comes time to put their money where their mouth is, they won't practice what they preach."
