How's that? Sliders and fastballs

Q. Who won the 1965 World Series? My friend says it was the Boston Red Sox or the New York Yankees, but I think it might have been St. Louis.

A. Three strikes and you're out. The Los Angeles Dodgers beat the Minnesota Twins, four games to two, with the help of their pitching ace Sandy Koufax, Don Drysdale and Claude Osteen. The series was considered a pitchers' duel, with Jim Kaat and Jim Grant throwing for the Twins.

AUSTIN (AP) — The State Board of Education, moving Saturday to upgrade Texas public education, approved a revised curriculum which establishes student achievement standards and recommended that teachers get raises of nearly $4,000 a year.

The standards in the curriculum approved 20-4 by the board Saturday set out the minimum amounts of time that must be spent on each elementary school subject and require high school students to take more English and math.

School Board Chairman Joe Kelley Butler and other board members made it clear that their actions were not influenced by Dallas computer magnate H. Ross Perot, the chairman of the Select Committee on Public Education who has been highly critical of the board.

"Everyone had input and we welcomed the input from everyone as we put this compromise document into effect," Butler said. "We did not operate in that dictatorial vacuum envisioned by H. Ross Perot." Education Commissioner Raymon Bynum estimated that the additional $2.2 billion in recommended education improvements, including teachers pay, could be handled by a one-cent increase in the state sales tax. But he said he was not recommending that.

Gov. Mark White named Perot to head a blue-ribbon committee to study and make recommendations about Texas' education system after White failed to get a teachers pay raise out of the 1983

Legislature. White has said he will call a special legislative session after Perot's committee reports, if the recommendations are acceptable to lawmakers.

The committee meets in Dallas next Wednesday, Thursday and Friday to decide on a preliminary report to the governor.

After Saturday's board session, Butler, who is a member of the select committee, said he would order statewide public hearings on any recommendations by Perot's committee. Perot and Butler have clashed frequently over one of Perot's personal suggestions that the 27-member board of education, elected from each congressional district, be replaced by a seven-member board appointed by the governor.

The recommendations approved Saturday by the board proposed increasing a starting teacher's salary to $11,500 a month. The present pay is $11,100 a year.

Sen. Hart chalks up Wyoming

CASPER, Wyo. (AP) — Colorado Sen. Gary Hart fought off a challenge by rival Democratic presidential candidate Walter F. Mondale in the Wyoming caucuses Saturday to score a solid, fourth consecutive victory.

With all of the state's 23 county caucuses reporting, Hart swept all but two counties and polled 61 percent of the vote, to 36 percent for Mondale in a record turnout.

Hart had 2,120 votes, Mondale had 1,267, and there were 104 uncommitted. The Rev. Jesse Jackson had 15, former Sen. George McGovern had eight and Sen. John Glenn had three.

State Democratic Chairman Dave Freudenthal estimated that based on the outcome of Saturday's caucuses, Hart would get seven or eight of the 12 national convention delegates that were at stake. Wyoming's three other convention delegates are the party chairman and vice chairman and the ranking elected official.

Mondale state coordinator Tom Cosgrove said he considered the outcome a moral victory for Mondale because Hart did not win by as large a margin as Mondale had expected. But Hart state coordinator Trevor Cornwell called it "an overwhelming victory" and said Hart "demonstrated support in virtually every county in the state."

"I think we needed to beat Mondale and we did," he said.

"As a fellow Westerner, I hope this victory means that Democrats can begin the effort to regain the West for our party," Hart said in a statement released in Washington.

Like the other states where he won primary victories Hart said "this is another situation where we were outmaneuvered."

Mondale campaign organizer Peter Handler said Wyoming Gov. Ed Herschler's endorsement of Mondale last week may have been the biggest boost for the campaign, See Hart page 2-A

McMurtry follows his instincts

Texas writer explains his strange craft

By BOB CARPENTER
Staff Writer

AMARILLO — Texas' premiere fiction writer describes his craft as one in which he locks himself in a room day after day with a funny-looking machine and then proceeds to herd words into sentences, paragraphs, chapters and ultimately, the finished novel.

This combination of isolation and herding has worked well for Archer County native Larry McMurtry, best known for the books "Horseman Pass By" (later filmed as "Hud"), "The Last Picture Show" and more recently, "Terms of Endearment," which inspired the movie. He also has written five other novels and one book of nonfiction essays.

McMurtry, currently on the lecture circuit, brought his writing acumen to Amarillo this week to speak about "The Creativity of the Writer."

"Actually, I've been brooding on the strangeness of my craft for the past year," McMurtry told a crowd of about 500 literature fans at Amarillo College Wednesday night. "Everyday I go into a room alone with a funny-looking machine, roll paper into it on which I project my imaginations and emotional resources. Now, we have a grand world going on out there, so what possesses a person to do this?"

McMurtry, who comes from a large ranching family, said that in his youth he had been trained to be a cowboy. Fortunately, for his readers at least, his skills as a herdsman were lacking.

"My father would send me out to bring back a particular cow and I would always bring the wrong one back which was inexplicable to him. He knew every cow by sight, but they all looked the same to me," he said. "I figured out pretty McMURTRY VISITS AMARILLO — Texas' best known fiction writer, Larry McMurtry, was in Amarillo this week discussing and writing and talking about his books. He is the author of "The Last Picture Show" and "Terms of Endearment."

"Writing just seemed interesting to me. Working with the imagination to make things up was fun, it was seductive."

quickly that I wasn't going to be a cowboy and began to look around for something else to do."

Even though he is a failed cowboy, McMurtry says the herdsman's way of life has guided his life.

"Writing is herding words into sentences, paragraphs, chapters and books. I suppose I need to satisfy my herdsman instinct that way," he said.

McMurtry also said his writing grew out of a passion for reading that was uncommon in barren North Texas. He said he began to copy the style of Faulkner one week, Kerouac the next, and so on until he developed a style of his own which is laced with conflict and irony.

"I was also lucky to have a good subject matter to write about," he said. "At the time I began writing, the death of the agrarian tradition was beginning. People were leaving the small towns for the cities and so I wrote about that subject, which I felt was very rich."

McMurtry wrote a trilogy of sorts about trend: "Horseman Pass By," "Leaving Cheyenne" (later filmed as "Lovin' Molly") and "The Last Picture Show." He then reversed himself and wrote three books about "what happens when country people (who have left the small town) have to deal with city pressure." "Terms of Endearment" fell into that category.

"Writing just seemed interesting to me. Working with the imagination to make things up was fun, it was seductive," he said. "I go in there to make things up and get my imagination to go to places I've never been rather than reporting about things that I've seen or that have happened to me."

"For instance, it's a lot more fun for me to imagine the mind and soul of a 47-year-old woman like Aurora Greenway in "Terms of Endearment," than it is for me to write about a 47-year-old man, which I am."

Since "Terms" was published in 1975, McMurtry has chosen to base his last three books in Hollywood, Washington, D.C. and Las Vegas.

Although he has been criticized for straying from the Texas setting, McMurtry said he made the decision to vary his novels partly to avoid repetition and staleness in his work, and because he began to tire of writing.

"The first 10 to 15 years, writing was fun. However, about 10 years ago I stopped liking writing, and it's not much fun writing what you don't like. All my sentences seemed the same, the characters

Woman charged in Lubbock shooting

KEN DOUTHITT

LUBBOCK (AP) — Charges of attempted capital murder have been filed against a woman accused of planting a gun in a dentist's office that a convicted robber used to critically wound a deputy and escape.

The prisoner, Ellis Kennedy Douthitt, 43, of Abilene committed suicide about an hour after the escape Friday morning. Douthitt shot himself in the head when officers in Brownfield, about 40 miles from Lubbock, approached a car where he was hiding under a blanket, authorities said.

Douthitt shot Lubbock County Deputy Sheriff Billy Daniel, 22, five times in the leg, shoulders and chest, officials said. Daniel was listed in critical condition today at Lubbock General Hospital.

Jorita Hagins, 42, of Anson — a witness for Douthitt when he was convicted of aggravated robbery last week in Lubbock — was arrested at a Brownfield motel, where she was loading luggage into a car that matched the description of the car that Douthitt fled in after Daniel was shot.

The conviction was in connection with the 1983 abduction of an advertising saleswoman for a Lubbock radio station. He was to stand trial later for kidnapping. The woman escaped after she convinced her assailant to allow her to take her children to school, she said.

Brownfield officers said they were on their way to check out the car when they heard a gunshot. They found a fatally wounded Douthitt, still in leg shackles and handcuffs, in the car. Officers said he put a gun in his mouth and shot himself.

Douthitt had been wounded in the cheek in an exchange of gunfire with Daniel at Lubbock, 40 miles northeast of Brownfield, officers said.

Ms. Hagins was taken before Brownfield Municipal Court Judge F.S. Burda, who set bond at $200,000. She then was transported to Lubbock for arraignment, where Justice of the Peace McKinley Shephard continued the $200,000 bond.

Miss Hagins formerly was employed by Douthitt as a manager of one of Douthitt's Behavioral Medicine Clinics, officials said.

Officers alleged she planted the gun used in Douthitt's escape and shooting of Daniel. Wearing a gray wig, a woman walked into a dentist's office a few minutes before the deputy arrived about 9 a.m. with Douthitt, officials said.

After making an appointment, she asked to use the restroom and then left, authorities were told.

Douthitt was shackled in leg irons and handcuffed when he and the deputy arrived at a dentist's office in West Lubbock, authorities said. As soon as they arrived, he registered and asked to go to the restroom, officers said. Daniel escorted him to the restroom and waited outside the door.

A few minutes later, Douthitt came out of the bathroom carrying a white-handled pistol and pointed it at the jailer.

Threatened with eviction, widow settles land claim

CARROLLTON, Texas (AP) — A 75-year-old widow threatened with eviction from her dilapidated, lifelong home and land worth more than $500,000 has reached a settlement that will give her a new house and an income for life.

Lawyers for the widow, Callie Wallace, reached the settlement Friday with a developer who is buying the land and agreed to drop a lawsuit against a contractor Mrs. Wallace claimed cheated her out of the suburban Dallas property more than 18 years ago.

"I heard a song in my heart that the Lord was watching over me," Callie Wallace said when the sale was made final Friday.

The property was given to Mrs. Wallace and her late husband by a cotton-farming family that had employed the couple for half their lives. The land had skyrocketed in value from about $2,500 when they took it over 40 years ago to more than $500,000 because of the rapid growth in this Dallas suburb.

The Dallas contractor, Virgil Whately, maintained that Mrs. Wallace had turned the property over to him to settle a debt and attempted to sell the valuable five acres of property to the developer, F. Peter Lee.

Friends of Mrs. Wallace filed suit in January to stop the sale, and Lee later agreed to build Mrs. Wallace a new home, let her live on the property for the rest of her life and provide her with a monthly income.

As part of the agreement, Whately also agreed to contribute an undisclosed sum to a trust fund that has been established in Mrs. Wallace's name.

Lee, Whately and Mrs. Wallace were scheduled to appear in state district court for a hearing on the suit Friday, but the hearing was canceled.

Lee, who plans to build miniwarehouses and offices on most of the property, called Mrs. Wallace "a cutie" and said he was glad the settlement was reached.

"I'm just delighted that she's gotten what she needs," Lee said. "Our financial promise will more than take care of her for the rest of her life."

Most details of the settlement were not disclosed, but Lee said he has agreed to build Mrs. Wallace a two-story, prefabricated house that will revert to his company when she dies.

Members of the Charles McKamy family, which gave the land to the Wallaces in 1944, estimated it was worth $2,500 then. Lee took title to the land for $539,000, some of which went to Whately and the rest to a third man who had a lien against the property.

Mrs. Wallace, who has sent Whately more than $9,000 since 1965 to pay for repairs to her home's roof, said she did not discover that she had lost title to the land until late in 1983, when a friend conducted a title search and discovered that she had signed the property over to the contractor in 1966.

Whately has denied defrauding Mrs. Wallace, insisting that the woman knew that she was giving him the property as payment for the repairs. He says the money she has paid him in the intervening period was for rent.

BRAVE BOY — Kevin Orr of Algonquin, Ill. does an handstand in the locker room at his high school. Kevin, who suffers from a muscle-fiber disease and cannot walk, is a member of the school's wrestling team.

High school wrestler doesn't let handicap slow him down

ALGONQUIN, Ill. (AP) — Jacobs High School wrestler Kevin Orr hasn't won a match all year, but he's a winner.

Orr, a 15-year-old sophomore, suffers from a muscle-fiber disease called arthrogryposis. He cannot use his legs and is confined to a wheelchair most of the time.

Besides wrestling in the 105-pound class, he is a student manager of the football team in this small town northwest of Chicago, plays the French horn and has won a part in the school play.

"He's always doing something," says Tom Miller, Jacobs athletic director. "I'm not at all surprised at what he can do because I've seen him do so many things."

Orr once ran, using his crutches, in a 1-mile race. Last year, he used his wheelchair to cover a 6.2-mile race course.

When Orr wrestles, he is losing before he even begins.

A high school match consists of three 2-minute periods. The first period begins with both wrestlers standing. The next period starts with one wrestler on his knees and his opponent in a dominant position resting on one knee to his opponent's side. The wrestlers reverse positions in the third period.

Because Orr must start the match from a kneeling position, his opponent moves in behind him and gets credit for a takedown. When Orr starts in the up position, his opponent usually reverses the position and receives two more points.

Although Orr hasn't won a match, he's only been pinned four times this year.

When asked why he began wrestling, Orr replied, "It seemed like the thing to do."

"My father was second in Illinois at 145 (pounds) and my brother (twin Dave, who does not suffer from the disease) was wrestling with the (Dundee) Highlanders, and some older guys I knew said they wrestled. It looked like fun so I thought I'd try."

Young Orr says he's not embarrassed about having to crawl onto the mat. The only time he's embarrassed, he says, "is when I'm on my back."

"My main concern was his safety," said Jacobs Coach Eliseo Saldivar. Last year Orr broke a leg in practice when an opponent fell on him.

"In a match, I explain to the referee what to watch for and if Kevin is in any kind of trouble at all I'll stop the match," Saldivar said. "Pound for pound, Kevin is stronger than anybody he wrestles. His upper body, as you can imagine, is powerful."

"He's a gutsy kid. I give him all the credit in the world."

Education

For an experienced classroom teacher the pay would go from $21,000 a year to $24,000. Each teacher would get an increase of at least $100 a month.

A three-step career ladder would be set up to advance the most progressive teachers.

"We must have a sufficient salary schedule based on the premise of having starting salary at a level to attract our best boys and girls into teaching and so teachers can look to a rewarding career," said Bynum.

One of the most controversial features in the curriculum changes approved Saturday calls on ninth-graders to choose one of two paths to getting a diploma.

Under an advanced honors program, which would be strong on basic academic subjects with fewer electives, a student must have 22 credits before graduating. A general study program, allowing more vocational education study and electives, requires only 21 credits for a diploma.

Both paths of study would require more English and math than the present state school curriculum which requires only 18 credits for a diploma.

Voting against the new curriculum were board members J. Murphy Horton of Midland; Marge West of Amarillo; Linda Howell of Missouri City, and Mary Helen Berlanga of Corpus Christi.

The board voted unanimously to accept its budget committee's recommendation that the Legislature be asked to provide an increase in state public education costs of $2.2 billion the next three years.

dull... and then I realized the reason — I was tired of reading the same writer for 25 years.

"Many writers write themselves out and start saying the same thing again and again. However, I think you feel like you want to get better, you want to get back to that union of intelligence, creativity and imagination."

Hence the search for new and fertile ground with the three non-Texas books.

McMurtry said he has still not unlocked his creativity as much as he would like. Currently he has three books in progress. If one project gets boring he switches to another.

"I would prefer to do it the old way, but it's better than not writing at all," he said.

Incidentally, McMurtry says he never rereads his books once they're done. He said fans often remember his writing better than he does.

McMurtry's book have not only attracted the eye of the publishing industry, but also the interest of filmmakers. To date, four of his books have been adapted for the screen, with three of the movies being successful.

but it may have come a little too late to be effective.

Mondale campaign coordinator Tom Cosgrove said he was "excited" by the closeness of the race when Hart was leading by a 57-40 margin.

"We came into the state knowing we were going to lose," Cosgrove said. "We felt Hart needed to win by at least a 2-1 margin. He obviously didn't do as well as he should have."

Mondale won majorities in two counties where he enjoyed support from organized labor.

Colorado Gov. Richard Lamm flew to Casper and Laramie to campaign for Hart on Saturday, calling him the candidate of the future.

"This one is a winner and can give us the sense of enthusiasm that can take us all the way to the White House," Lamm said in Casper.

Hart counted on an early start and a strong organization to give him a victory that would maintain his momentum from New England and distinguish his campaign as a Westerner with "new ideas."

But Mondale forces countered that anything less than a 2-1 margin for Hart would be an embarrassing defeat so close to his home turf of Colorado.

Hart campaigned hard in the state, visiting it five times during the past year and sending his wife, Lee, this week. He was the only candidate to buy television time in Wyoming.

Mondale did not visit Wyoming during the past four years — a sore point with many Democrats.

County to discuss building of new jail

Howard County Commissioners Monday will discuss the construction of a new county jail and the organization of a county park in a move that would continue support to the county boxing club through legal methods.

County Judge Milton Kirby said he invited representatives from Southwestern Detention Facilities to discuss construction of a new jail with the commissioners at their meeting at 9 a.m. Monday.

The current county jail, located on the fourth floor of the courthouse, has barely been passing state standards because of its physical conditions, according to Kirby and Sheriff A.N. Standard. Jail standards have become considerably stricter since the construction of the current jail.

Commissioners will discuss creating a county park near the current site of the building housing the boxing club, Kirby said. The county has land near the building they currently lease from the school district that could be turned into a softball or baseball field, he said.

The boxing club building could be turned into a physical fitness club, which boxing club members also could use, he said.

"We ought to do something with it (that building) so everyone can use it," Kirby said. "We should do something for the kids. If we don't, who is?"

Stolen keys cause flap

LONDON — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's daughter, Carol, denied Saturday that the keys to 10 Downing Street, the British leader's official residence, were lost when her handbag was stolen.

A spokesman for Mrs. Thatcher's office mistakenly said Friday that the keys to No. 10, one of the world's most famous front doors, were in the handbag. That led Labor lawmaker Tom Torney to denounce "this grave and astonishing lapse of security."

"We know that police maintain a continuous guard at No. 10, but there is no sense whatever in making life any simpler for some crank determined to get inside," the legislator said.

"I don't have any keys to No. 10," Miss Thatcher said in a radio interview. "The handbag contained keys to the family house in Chelsea but luckily not the keys to my car."

Miss Thatcher, 39, a free-lance reporter and writer, was at a bar on Fleet Street with journalist friends Thursday when her bag was taken.

Asked what she would say to the thief, she replied: "I would like my address book back."

Boxer's room burglarized

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — Boxer Tim Witherspoon spent some expensive time in the ring while he was winning the world heavyweight championship.

Las Vegas Metro Police Lt. Wilbur Jackson said that while Witherspoon was fighting Greg Page on Friday night, someone burglarized his hotel room at the Riviera Hotel, and got away with $31,000 worth of jewelry.

Police had no immediate suspects in the break-in, he said.

Witherspoon won a majority decision over Page in the World Boxing Council title bout.

Brady Bunch star gets role

SEATTLE — Actor Barry Williams, best known for his role in television's "Brady Bunch," will star in a movie called "The Obsession of Ted Bundy."

Bundy, formerly of Tacoma, is on Florida's death row while his appeals on three murder convictions move through the courts. Part of the movie will be filmed in the Seattle area this summer, says the state Motion Picture Bureau.

Bundy was convicted of the 1978 murder-rape of a 12-year-old girl in Lake City, Fla., and the slayings of two women students at Florida State University also in 1978.

He also had been charged with killing a vacationing Michigan nurse in Colorado and was convicted of kidnapping in Utah.

Bundy was also a prime suspect, though never charged, in a string of murders in Washington state of college-age women in the mid-1970s. Six bodies were eventually found.

"Obviously, no one wants to make money off Bundy, he's not a shining example, but if someone is going to make a film about him it may as well be made here as anywhere else," Bill Cushing, assistant director of communications for the movie bureau, said Friday.

Williams, the 29-year-old star of the $2.3 million film, was the oldest brother in the "Brady Bunch."

The Utah-based Kerner-Smith Productions intends to begin work immediately on the film. Paul Kerner, the director, was in Seattle on Friday scouting locations.

The news in brief

Fire breaks out on cruise ship

PORT CANAVERAL, Fla. — A fire on the cruise ship Scandinavian Sea burned out of control Saturday, a day after flames broke out five miles from shore, cutting short a gambling excursion and forcing the ship to speed back to port with 946 people aboard.

At least 15 people were treated for smoke inhalation because of the fire that erupted in a passenger cabin on the 506-foot vessel Friday evening, said Coast Guard Petty Officer 1st Class Joe Gibson. He did not know how many of those treated were firefighters, but said no one required hospitalization.

Gibson said that by Saturday afternoon the fire had spread to four passenger decks. He said extra breathing equipment was flown in and out-of-state "strike-force teams" trained in fighting shipboard disasters and oil fires were called to join more than 100 firefighters who had been on the scene since Friday.

The fire started as the ship was returning from a "cruise to nowhere" outside the three-mile limit, where gambling is legal, said Jill De Chello, a spokeswoman for Miami-based Scandinavian World Cruises.

By Saturday, the fire was still burning out of control and flames "shooting about 100 feet behind the bridge ... spread up to the fourth deck" of the eight-deck cruise ship, Gibson said.

He said there was no immediate danger of the vessel exploding, although some diesel fuel had briefly caught on fire.

Tom Tarrants, a damage controlman with the U.S. Coast Guard helped battle the blaze on the main deck. He said the temperature on the vessel "was well over 500 degrees."

In Washington, Les Reingold, a spokesman for the National Transportation Safety Board, said the agency was sending two investigators to Port Canaveral.

The cause of the fire was not immediately known. But Capt. Jack Houts of the Merritt Island Fire Department told the newspaper TODAY in Cocoa that it was believed to be electrical.

"There was no attempt on his part to reach for the holster," Tarr said.

Juvenile Court Judge John Butler, who accompanied Montgomery to the rally, said Montgomery was there "simply to welcome Mr. Mondale" and "certainly did not pull a gun."

Butler said Montgomery does not customarily wear a gun for his courthouse job.

Montgomery called the incident "unfortunate" and said he suffered a small cut on his left wrist when Secret Service agents dragged him out of the restaurant.

12 bodies found inside ship

HOUSTON — Divers searching inside an American drilling ship for the first time since it sank in the South China Sea five months ago have discovered the bodies of 12 crewmembers, officials said Saturday.

Dick Vermeer, a vice president with Global Marine Inc., the ship's owner, said the search of the Glomar Java Sea is continuing around the clock.

The 12 bodies were found Friday morning in the ship's galley, recreation room and other areas, he said.

The discovery of the bodies marked the first time the fate of any crewmembers has been known.

Divers were searching the crew's quarters Saturday, the third day of the investigation, Vermeer said.

The ship, which was carrying a crew of 81 workers, sank during Typhoon Lex Oct. 25 and now lies in 300 feet of water 60 miles south of China's Hainan Island and 200 miles east of Vietnam.

Company officials have said the crew's last radio transmission indicated workers were in life jackets preparing to board lifeboats. Officials have theorized that crew members might be alive but imprisoned in Vietnam, where the storm's winds would likely have carried them.

Vermeer said bad weather and a lack of equipment kept company officials from investigating the inside of the ship sooner.

Gun incident spooks Mondale

MOBILE, Ala. — An elderly court bailiff who approached presidential candidate Walter Mondale while wearing a holstered gun said he only wanted a handshake and didn't expect to be arrested.

Clarence Montgomery, 77, said he "never intended to use the weapon and never has" and that he carries the pistol under his coat for "self-protection."

Secret Service agents grabbed Montgomery as he reached out to shake Mondale's hand during a rally at a restaurant Friday night and dragged him outside.

"We were in a crowd talking, laughing. I heard a noise, apparently when the person hit the floor. That's all I know," Mondale said. "They rushed me out of there."

"It's not the best of all feelings," the Democratic presidential candidate and former vice president said.

Montgomery, a juvenile court bailiff, was not charged and was released a few hours later, Secret Service spokesman Mike Tarr said in Washington.

Fighting rages in Beirut

BEIRUT — Heavy fighting raged through most quarters of the capital Saturday and an artillery shell slammed into a clinic, killing seven people. Political leaders went to a conference in Switzerland to try to "put an end Lebanon's agonies."

Fourteen people were killed, including four Lebanese army soldiers, and dozens were wounded in the fighting Saturday, police said.

By nightfall, barrages of artillery and mortar fire battered much of east and west Beirut, as well as in both its Christian and Moslem suburbs, police said.

In the predominantly Shiite Moslem southern suburbs, officials at the Al Zahraa Hospital said seven people were killed and at least 22 were injured when a shell struck a medical clinic.

Officials at the hospital, where victims from the clinic were taken, said some of the casualties were children who had been waiting for treatment at the clinic. The officials declined to be identified.

A field hospital near the Sabra and Chatilla Palestinian refugee camps came under fire Saturday, with an undetermined number of injuries.

Police reported heavy exchanges of fire along "green line" frontier between Christian east and mostly Moslem west Beirut. At times all sections along the front were engaged in the fighting, which pitted the Lebanese army against Syrian-backed Shiite and Druse militiamen.

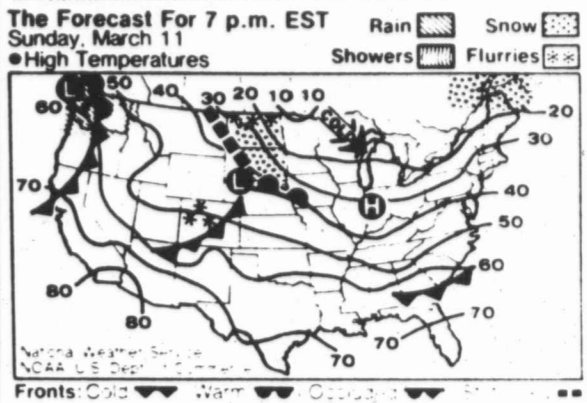

Lawsuit challenges church elders

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Ms. Guinn, 36, a nurse and divorced mother of two sons aged 18 and 12 and two daughters aged 16 and 14, said her experience has been "terrible."

Her suit says that in October 1981, elders Ron Witten, Ted Moody and Allen Cash publicly denounced her for "the sin of fornication" and ordered church members to avoid her. She had already resigned from the congregation in anticipation of the sanctions and shortly afterward moved to Tulsa, where she works.

But privacy will be the issue Monday when Marian Guinn's lawsuit against the elders goes to trial in state district court. She is seeking $1.3 million, alleging invasion of privacy and intentional infliction of emotional distress.

Blizzard blasts Northeast

A fast-moving blizzard barreled out of Canada and into Minnesota and the Dakotas on Saturday, swirling snow into a "white wall" that cut visibility to zero on highways.

Arctic air hovered over much of the northeastern quarter of the nation, with record lows at more than 30 locations from the northern half of the Great Plains to the middle and northern Atlantic Coast. Light snow fell in the mid-Mississippi and lower Ohio valleys and as far south as Arkansas and northern Alabama.

A blizzard warning was issued for northwestern and west central sections of Minnesota and the eastern part of North Dakota. Gale warnings were in effect for Lake Superior, Lake Michigan and Lake Huron.

Wind blowing at 50 mph whipped up loose, fluffy snow to cut visibility in the Red River Valley on the Minnesota-North Dakota border from 20 miles to zero in a matter of seconds. The storm hit like a "white wall," said Jon Stortley, spokesman for the Minn-Kota chapter of the Red Cross.

COST OF YOUR RESIDENCE

It is necessary to keep track of the cost of your personal residence. This cost includes the original purchase price plus the money spent on improvements.

Even though the gain on the sale of your residence may be "deferred" because you buy a new home, a future sale of the replacement residence could be taxable. The cost of the property sold may be determined, in part, by the cost of a prior residence on which gain was deferred.

Many of the expenses on your home will be regular repairs and maintenance and cannot be added to the cost of the home. Expenditures for additions to the property such as patios, garages, sidewalks or landscaping do qualify as additional costs of the property and should be recorded. A log book used specifically for expenditures on your home is advisable. You are not entitled to include the value of your own labor, but you can include the cost of all material and labor for which you have a cash outlay.

Here is an example of the gain one may have on a sale. You purchase a home for $50,000 and over a period of years spend $20,000 for a garage, sidewalks, and a family room. You also put in 300 hours of your time. You sell the property for $100,000. Your cost in the property for income tax purposes is $70,000. Your gain on the sale is $30,000 minus selling expenses for realtor fee, etc.

If you are buying a fixer-upper or if you are planning a major renovation of your residence, consider opening a separate checking account which is used strictly for property improvements. Since all expenditures, even those which are normally repairs and maintenance, are includable if the work is done within 90 days of the date the property is sold, keep track of all expenditures and let your accountant determine which expenditures qualify as additional house costs.

Welcome retreat from censorship

President Reagan has backed away from a proposal to plug national security leaks by means that were more likely to intimidate civil servants than to enhance security. But the retreat seems inspired less by concern for openness than by hopes that a reluctant Congress will accept a softened version of the plan. Congress should not be swayed.

In a directive last March, Mr. Reagan proposed two new tactics to safeguard government secrets: The first would impose lifetime censorship on federal employees with access to classified information, requiring them even after leaving office to submit anything they write for prepublication government review. The second would force any employee suspected of leaking secrets to take a lie detector test; those who refused could be fired.

The directive's supposed purpose was to protect national security. But lawmakers who studied it found little logic in the plan. They realized that the order would cover fiction, satire and opinion articles as well as secrets. And they asked what harm the plan was intended to prevent — something the administration has been unable to explain.

Congress recognized the president's directive to be censorship in federal employees' clothing. By forcing thousands of past and present federal employees to seek permission before speaking out, the plan would grant considerable power to a sitting administration to determine what citizens can read and hear. Such a system would subvert the open government essential to democracy.

Alarmed, Congress voted last fall to suspend the plan while reviewing its constitutional implications. Now the president has decided to forgo a losing battle in favor of negotiation. A reasonable opening — and concluding — congressional negotiating position would be: Junk the March proposal entirely.

Here we go again

The Social Security reform bill signed in law last April contained "something for everyone," said President Reagan. The elderly were assured that "America will always keep its promises" and young workers were pledged "that they will get their fair share of benefits when they retire."

Less than a year later the euphoria is fading fast. A gloomy report from the 200-member Committee for Economic Development warns that if drastic measures are not taken to cut costs, the Social Security system will be broke by 1990.

Contrary to the president's statements, the Social Security legislation contained nothing for hard-headed realists. Their complaints, lost in the din of congratulatory rhetoric, are now beginning to be heard.

News flash

Here's a capsule review of the major news stories last week.

This is the real important stuff. All that page one stuff about Iraq and Nicaragua and Reagan is boring.

Admit it. Funny stuff and guys who are real jerks and people doing stupid things are what makes the world turn.

PENNY-LOAFERLESS

UNIVERSITY PARK — The Kappa Alpha fraternity at Southern Methodist University was put on probation after three pledges got so drunk they couldn't find their penny loafers.

Officials at the school for snobs suspected something was amiss when one of the proto-preppies complained the day after the party. "I can't vomit."

X-RATED GOSPELS

DALLAS — Evangelist Billy Graham's new movie, "The Prodigal," received a "not suitable" rating from the movie review board here because the board was too bored to review it.

A representative of the board said the film eventually will receive a PG rating because "pre-teen-aged children should not be exposed to Christianity without their parents' consent."

DISCO WARS

TAIPEI — The government here revealed its latest weapon in the propaganda fight with the yellow brethens across the sea.

Teresa Teng, a Taiwanese pop singer, has been beaming her voice to the mainland in an attempt to destroy communism with disco.

With titles like "Forget Him" and "Goodbye, My Lover," Miss Teng's repertoire is sure to challenge the authority of Mao's Little Red Book.

On hearing the news, U.S. State Department officials suggested bouncing Barry Manilow's latest album off Russian ears.

"No way," George Shultz is reported to have said. "Chernenko's a fan."

WHERE'S TIMBUKTU?

SANTA ANA, Calif. — A Cal State Fullerton geography professor said his students can't locate such countries as Afghanistan, Nicaragua and South Africa on a map.

He said 16 percent of his students couldn't even find the USSR, and 34 percent were hard-pressed to point out France.

"I doubt the students are more ignorant than the typical person off the street," the professor said.

Life just isn't fair

Life's not fair. It's not fair that I should have a college degree and my wife not. She's the one who worked fulltime to keep payments going out as fast as the bills came in — sacrificing her last year of college so I could complete mine.

It's not fair that I'm not more inclined toward cooking and bottle-washing. My wife effectively has two fulltime jobs.

It's not fair that I couldn't be handsomer, or smarter, or more likeable, or more adept at sports, or... If you dwell on it, it can be obsessive.

Nowhere is this concept of life's basic unfairness pronounced with more frequency than among the children. It's not fair, says the 5-year-old, that older sister should have friends and him not. He takes no consolation in assurances that, in time, he'll have playmates in his new town.

It's not fair that older sister is required to be the "hopper," the one charged with responsibility for hopping up to get the things we forget to bring to the dinner table.

It's not fair to either that 2½-year-old Melissa should get by with not eating her peas, not being responsible for picking up her clothes and not being punished for knowingly destroying an hour's worth of block-building with one well-placed kick.

It's not fair that the oldest gets to go places the younger two can't, and it's not fair that the three of them can't have an extra bowl of ice cream for dessert if they want.

My wife and I try to explain that in the balance of the whole, everything evens out. A baby too young to go by herself to visit a friend is allowed temper tantrums by virtue of her age. A young lady of 7 is too old to be soaking the bathroom carpet with her tub-time rough-housing; by the same token, she's old enough to take ballet lessons. Such explanations always fail to satisfy.

I guess there are two levels of unfairness. The inconsequential kind that the children experience, and which they'll grow to pass off. And the basic kind, such as my wife's lost opportunity to achieve a personal goal like completing her college education.

Or maybe there's just one kind, the inconsequential kind, and my wife and I simply aren't wise enough yet to realize the missed chance to finish college can become a challenging goal for the future.

If you look, and possibly not very hard, nearly every travail we describe as not being fair can be turned over to reflect a positive. The child who's too young to be left unattended — despite her protestations about how "grown up" she is — is spared most of the household chores by virtue of her age.

The missed timing that meant the loss of one job put me on the path I took in journalism, and led me in eight years to be managing editor of a daily newspaper.

And the last year of college my wife wasn't able to complete gave me the opportunity to finish school and pursue my career, which in turn led me here, her to a challenging job in her own right, and both of us to three beautiful children and a stable home life.

My life's fair after all.

Reagan can pray in school

In case he's getting bad advice from White House lawyers, let Ronald Reagan be informed: there's no law that says he can't go into a public school and utter a prayer asking God's help in understanding the First Amendment.

The President, mindful of the need for the support of the Moral Majority and its allies in his reelection bid, pretends that the Supreme Court has been too busy hounding God out of the public schools to have time for putting criminals behind bars. He thinks it's a shame that our school children couldn't even find the USSR, and 34 percent were hard-pressed to point out France.

"I doubt the students are more ignorant than the typical person off the street," the professor said.

That's a comforting thought.

publicly refusing to pray. But if the entire class is asked to join in the recitation of a prayer, that is their only option.

Is this truly voluntary? Reagan and a lot of other people claim it is. But they might feel differently if the prayers weren't at least vaguely Christian, and thus agreeable to the majority of Americans. Would the administration be so eager to uphold a school's right to lead pupils each morning in a Moslem prayer, with ostentatious silence the only option for non-Moslems?

Probably not, and with good reason. Letting a Moslem principal or a Moslem teacher give Islam the implied endorsement of the government would mean forcing Christians and Jews to provide financial support, through taxes, of religious beliefs they do not share and may find deeply repugnant. It also would mean using the state's coercive power over children to indoctrinate them in a particular religion. If this were the case being considered, Reagan and his allies might stumble onto the key insight: There is very little "voluntary" about officially-sponsored prayer in the public schools.

The President, in truth, isn't willing to stop at simply permitting students to pray — in other words, at foiling what he calls "intolerance toward genuine religious freedom," which is also protected by the First Amendment. He might be able to make a case for a measure to allow periods of silence in class, to be used by students for any purpose they choose, including prayer. Unfortunately for Reagan's political objectives, the Supreme Court hasn't proscribed such interludes. But the administration says this sort of genuinely voluntary prayer isn't enough.

Reagan also goes beyond merely ensuring that God isn't barred from public schools. Sen. Mark Hatfield, an Oregon Republican, is sponsoring a proposal to stipulate that schools which provide facilities for student-initiated activities cannot deny them for activities that are religious. But here too, no legislation is needed, since the Supreme Court hasn't halted the practice. In any case, Reagan wants more. He apparently won't be satisfied until the government is allowed to organize the recitation of prayers by students in public schools.

It's not selfish to pray for success

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: Do you think God is concerned about business and financial decisions we make? My business partner and I are facing a big decision about our business, and I wonder if it is something I should pray about. — P.M.L.

DEAR P.M.L.: The Bible says, "Pray continually" (1 Thessalonians 5:17). It also declares, "In everything, by prayer and petition, with thanksgiving, present your requests to God (Philippians 4:6, emphasis added)."

Yes, pray about this decision you face because God commands us to pray about every aspect of our lives. Why does he tell us to do this? One reason is so that we will know what the will of God is. As Jesus taught us in the Lord's Prayer, we should always pray, "Your will be done on earth as it is in heaven" (Matthew 6:10). As you pray about this decision, therefore, you should pray most of all that God's will may

Right to vote? what silly irony

To the Editor:
How ironic that while Big Spring citizens are petitioning for a public forum to try to understand how and why they have been disenfranchised of their vote on the City Council, a letter being sent to every household in the 17th Congressional District by Charles W. Stenholm, our Representative in Washington, states in its first and second paragraph:

"One of our greatest rights and responsibilities as a United States citizen is the RIGHT TO VOTE."

"Whether you are selecting those to represent you in your county courthouse or the nation's White House, your vote is your voice in government and you have a responsibility for that vote to be heard."

In the latter part of Stenholm's letter he states:

"A democracy such as ours cannot survive without the active participation of its citizens."

All of these are true — and I hope Congressman Stenholm has been reading the Big Spring Herald and recognizes that the Federal Government, by decisions of Federal Judges appointed for life, has effectively helped our incumbent City Council perpetuate themselves in office, deny one-third of the whole town of the right to even vote at all in the next city election, and thumb their noses at citizens who don't understand why they can't vote simply because the present Council thinks they are indispensable and chose not to run for re-election, but rather use the Federal Court system to insure their positions.

In this great country, where national elections every four years can and do change the whole political scene, how did five men become so important they not only extended the terms of the Mayor and two councilmen, but they're making noises like they did it "for the good of the city?"

Our neighborhood is not a city dump

To the editor:
Some people in Big Spring feel that it's just alright to throw their trash just anywhere. In case, you haven't heard we have a City Dump. The area I am talking about is just north of the Texas and Pacific Railroad.

When you people come and throw your trash, and old lumber, rags etc. there, your are just about putting it in our front yards. Sure, some of that area looks ugly, but think how you would feel if someone emptied their trash bags in your yard. The place looks bad, why make it look worse. I feel sorry for the people who come and dump here, because sooner or later you will get caught. Throwing trash anywhere outside a designated area is punishable by law. And if you don't get caught "think before you throw," because not only are you getting rid of your trash etc. but you are giving someone else your germs. Someone, who, you ask? Kids, little kids, and old folks. Think about them before you throw.

Weather modification experiments come up dry

By JAY ROSSER
Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Charles William Post, the founder of Post cereals, moved to West Texas from Battle Creek, Mich., three-quarters of a century ago with a grandiose scheme tucked in his baggage.

Post, who bought about 250,000 acres in Garza and Lynn counties hoping to grow grain for his cereals, was troubled by the lack of rainfall at his new home.

Thinking he could give Mother Nature a boost, Post perched 15 stations atop the Cap Rock and, every four minutes, exploded four pounds of dynamite.

Four years and $50,000 later, one of the initial attempts at weather modification in Texas ended, as inconclusive as it was disappointing.

In the eyes of Texas water officials, not much has changed: weather modification experiments, usually some form of cloud seeding, are still inconclusive.

And, unless a funding source is discovered to replace a loss of federal study funds, that situation isn't likely to change soon, according to Bob Riggio, chief of the Texas Department of Water Resources weather and climate division.

In the eyes of the state, weather modification remains more a concept than scientific reality. And, Riggio notes, about $7.5 million will have to be spent in the next five years before Texas will have enough scientific evidence to determine the validity of such weather-control efforts.

The state has issued only two permits authorizing weather modification — or cloud seeding — activities in Texas during 1984. The more active of the two permit-holders is the Big Spring-based Colorado River Municipal Water District, which attempts to increase rainfall in Borden and Mitchell counties as well as portions of Dawson, Scurry, Howard, Martin, Nolan, Glasscock, Sterling and Coke counties.

The concept of weather modification is particularly intriguing to West Texans farmers and ranchers, whose economic future is linked with a rapidly depleting Ogallala Aquifer.

In the eyes of Texas water officials, not much has changed: weather modification experiments, usually some form of cloud seeding, are still inconclusive.

The Ogallala now supplies irrigation water for about 5.9 million acres in Texas, but state water officials estimate that aquifer will only irrigate 2.2 million acres by the turn of the century.

A recently published report by the Texas Department of Water Resources estimates that merely boosting rainfall totals by 10 percent over 8.1 million acres of West Texas during the spring growing season could increase agriculture output by about $3.68 million and expand regional income by about $2.3 million.

Annual evaluations conducted by the Colorado River Municipal Water District indicate there is some merit to enhancing rainfall through cloud seedings. Rainfall collected in a 1979 cloud seeding project was 26 percent greater in the seeded area than in adjacent areas in which the clouds were not tampered with.

Texas, in the mid-1970s, joined several other states in a federally backed study to determine the feasibility of weather modification. Those funds, however, were among the first to go in President Reagan's budget slashing efforts, Riggio said.

That, he said, leaves Texas — and other states that participated in the High Plains Cooperative Program — with truckloads of data suggesting weather modification can work, but with no sure-fire blueprint on how it can best be accomplished.

"What we have now is a cookbook ready to go," Riggio said. "We know what is says, but we still have to determine whether its hypothesis is accurate."

Weather modification, which also covers attempts to suppress crop damaging hail, is not an exact science.

"It has been shown to work in the laboratory," Riggio said. "But when you take the project out of the lab and put it into the real world, it's a whole different ball game. There are so many variables. You just don't have the same controls."

Riggio said Texas has joined with Oklahoma in an attempt to lobby congress for a resurrection of lost funding for weather modification studies.

If that bid fails, he said, the funding question will be posed to Texans.

"It's a very expensive proposition," Riggio said. "Whether Texas will make up the lost funding depends on grass roots support. You aren't likely to get much of that in wet seasons."

Tourists spend vacations at work picking oranges

NAUPLION, Greece (AP) — In winter few tourists can be seen lounging at the waterfront cafes in this medieval resort town in southern Greece. Instead, they're hard at work picking oranges in the surrounding citrus groves.

Hundreds of unemployed back-packers from the United States, Europe and South America flock here every fall to provide cheap labor for farmers in this fertile region who grow over half of Greece's orange crop.

The orange-pickers squat in empty houses in Nauplion and nearby villages, sleep in mountain caves or camp out in the open.

Nauplion residents are wary of the penniless foreigners who move in for winter and work without residence or labor permits.

But the fruit farmers say the 600-odd foreigners are vital to the local economy. A police officer in Nauplion admitted authorities turn a blind eye to infringements of the permit rules.

"We can't judge what sort of people they are but if it wasn't for them our oranges would still be on the trees. Greeks demand twice as much money," Panayotis Mantavelis, who employs five orange-pickers a day for his 800 trees, told The Associated Press.

The orange-pickers, who gather in Nauplion's main square every morning waiting for the farmers to come and take as many workers as they need for the day, get paid up to 1,500 drachmas ($15) for eight hours' work.

"It's hard work picking the oranges. You get nasty scratches from thorns on the trees and backache from bending over to collect the oranges on the ground," said Mark Evans, 24, from Berkeley, Calif.

Orange grove owners say it's easier and cheaper to send their fruit to Eastern bloc countries.

"Every orange that goes to the EEC (European Economic Community) has to be specially stamped, and carefully wrapped and packaged," said Dimitrios Tsiros, president of the Assine Orange Growers' Cooperative, near Nauplion.

A Closer Look

By Jim Davis

Reagan's a liberal

AUSTIN — President Reagan is a raving liberal. H. Ross Perot is one, too.

That personal assessment may seem contrary to popular conceptions, but columnists are supposed to be contrary sometimes. In fact, it's practically mandatory.

The realization that Reagan is a liberal came to me last week after his speech to the National Association of Evangelicals.

According to The Wall Street Journal, the president "implied that his administration has promoted a 'spiritual reawakening' in the nation."

The Journal story added: "Mr. Reagan argued that in his term of office, 'our country is seeking a rebirth of freedom and faith, a great national renewal. As I said in my State of the Union address, America is back.'"

"As evidence, he said that 'church attendance is up. Audiences for religious books and broadcasts are growing. On college campuses, students have stopped shunning religion and started going to church.'"

Some nitpickers have had the bad taste to point out that the president, himself, hasn't been an exemplary churchgoer through the years. And, undoubtedly, enterprising investigative reporters are checking churches near college campuses to see if attendance is up.

But all that is beside the point. The important thing is that President Reagan is convinced that it is true and is taking credit for it.

There are various dictionary definitions for "liberal" and "conservative," but my general concept is that a liberal believes that government can and should be used frequently to improve society and a conservative believes that government has limited capabilities to improve things.

And, yet, our supposedly conservative president is saying his government has done things which have resulted in people getting out of bed and going to church on Sunday morning, or to a synagogue on Saturday morning or to whatever whenever a particular religion calls for it.

No disrespect intended for our elected leader, but I suspect he is rather like a surfer taking credit for a big wave. Maybe more people are feeling more religious, but it's doubtful that anyone in Washington, D.C., had anything to do with it.

The TV movie "The Day After" probably had more to do with making many of us pray — either for safety from nuclear madness or for salvation from more bad movies — than anything the Reagan administration has done.

So, we have documented President Reagan's liberalism; what about H. Ross Perot? Easy.

Perot, the Dallas millionaire currently heading a special committee studying public education, is one of the biggest liberals around.

We should have caught on when he led the "War on Drugs" three years ago. Basically, the whole theory behind that movement was that new laws and new governmental expenditures could solve the illegal drug problem, or at least substantially improve it.

If Perot's goal had been to increase welfare payments or aid to the handicapped, the liberalism of the cause would have been spotted immediately. Wrapping it all up in law enforcement provided the perfect disguise.

Now, Perot is leading a state task force to bring about new laws, new rules and new expenditures to "fix" our public education system.

So, we have proven that Ronald Reagan and H. Ross Perot are liberals. Or, maybe we've only proven that political labels don't mean much these days.

And maybe that's worth remembering this political year when the races get hot and the accusations are flying from the politicians' lips.

Speaker says he didn't gain by selling property to state

DALLAS (AP) — Two days after House Speaker Gib Lewis and a business partner sold a money-losing Fort Worth shopping center to a member of Lewis' legislative staff, Lewis began using taxpayer money and campaign contributions to rent office space there, the Dallas Morning News reported today.

Legislators are prohibited from benefiting from rental contracts for offices in their home districts.

A $139,000 debt owed by Lewis and his partner, Jim Odom, was paid off through the sale of the center, the News said. But Lewis said paying off the debt was "not a benefit, in the sense that means."

Until Lewis began renting two units at the R.C.O. Center, two of its four spaces stood empty.

When he and Odom owned the shopping center, there wasn't enough rental income to equal payments on its mortgage, Lewis said.

In addition to being Lewis' employee, the new owner of the property, D.L. Womack Jr. of Azle, sits with Lewis on the board of Lake Worth National Bank — which had lent Lewis' partnership money with the shopping center as collateral.

Womack bought the property last July 30. The bank canceled the Lewis partnership's debt by making out a new note to Womack, said Lake Worth president Thomas E. Stewart.

Womack paid no money but agreed to assume the center's debts, according to Lewis. "He just took it over," the speaker said.

Lewis said there was no relationship between his decision to rent office space in the shopping center beginning Aug. 1 and Womack's decision to buy it July 30 — "none whatsoever."

The state is paying $625 a month to rent a district office for Lewis in the shopping center.

Jewels & Gems

by Ralph and Lynette Brooks

The quality of star sapphires and rubies can be judged by examining their color, star and proportions. If related flaws are not readily visible to the naked eye, the stone may be regarded as a fine-quality specimen. A star stone that exhibits no defects under ten-power magnification is the exception. Such stones are exceedingly rare. The most famous and ancient star sapphire is perhaps the "Star of India," which is on display at the American Museum of Natural History in New York. This magnificent specimen weighs 543 carats and is one of the most celebrated stones in the world. A furor arose when this rare gem was stolen, but it was subsequently recovered and returned to the museum.

BLUM'S JEWELERS, conveniently located at 222 Main, 267-6335 cordially invites you to make us your personal jeweler today. Enjoy the experience and expertise of our experienced staff and browse throughout our showroom for a fine selection of elegant jewelry of all types, watches by Rolex, Omega and more and our fine selection of distinctive gifts, just perfect for any and every occasion. The value of a star stone depends on its transparency and the definition of its star.

Joy! To the world Miracle children

By JOY CULWELL
Colorado City
Correspondent

COLORADO CITY — The age of miracles is still with us. I met two children recently in Carter's Furniture where I was browsing around looking at all the furniture with Dorothy Carter.

Mrs. Carter introduced me to Thad, 6, and Ryan, 14 months. I say they are miracles as far as tax deductions go because Thad was born on Dec. 30 and Ryan was born Dec. 29. As a matter of fact, the whole family is a miracle because that's their last name — "Miracle." Daniel and Linda Miracle are very proud of their two little Miracles. Thad told me he is in kindergarten and that Mrs. Burgess is his teacher at Kentwood School.

Anita Howell is a good friend and I always enjoy visiting with her. She is an accomplished person in that she is very knowledgeable about rocks and how to make jewelry out of them.

She also is an outstanding carpenter as she and her children rebuilt their home after a disastrous fire and even added an extra room as she got the money to build. Her carpentry skills have led her to make all kinds of wooden toys, including a little duck with rubber feet cut out of an innertube that can really walk, that she sells at arts and crafts fairs.

Anita has another skill that few women have. She is a full-fledged printer who is as skillful at working the old-style equipment as she is the latest equipment used today at Plagens Printing here. Bob Dennis trained her and he loves to brag about how adept at the trade his former apprentice is.

Anita and I were discussing one of her other talents the other day — gardening. She had out an old-fashioned almanac, hunting up when to plant root crops like potatoes, onions, etc. You do that March 18 and 19, and plant above the ground plants March 7 through March 9, according to the almanac.

She said now that haircuts are as expensive as they are, you should have your hair cut after March 20 if you want your hair to grow slower. If you want your hair to grow faster, you trim the ends of it before March 20, she said. She also said weaning babies from the breast or bottle should be done between March 22 and 31 if you want it to go as smoothly as possible for the mother and the child.

My grandma Collins pierced hundreds of ears in her time but I couldn't get her to pierce mine. She said to only pierce them when the signs were in the knees and going down. That time this month will be March 25 and 26. I used her formula when I was 39, and my pierced ears never even got sore.

Councilman sounds off about ear-splitting siren

LaMOURE, N.D. (AP)

—Alderman Tim Robideau is fed up with one of LaMoure's long-standing traditions and wants to pull the plug. He sees no reason for an ear-splitting siren every morning at 7 a.m.

"It's stupid," said Robideau. "It serves no purpose except for those too lazy to go out and buy an alarm clock."

Robideau said Friday he doesn't normally arise until 7:30 or 8 a.m. and sometimes the siren, only two blocks from his home, awakens him prematurely.

Acting on a motion by Robideau, the City Council last week voted to remove the timer that sets off the siren every day at 7 a.m., noon and 6 p.m.

"Maybe next month we'll get so many complaints we'll turn it back on," said Robideau, 33, adding that three people had already called him protesting withdrawing the 7 a.m. whistle.

The siren, which also serves as the town's fire alarm, was installed in 1929, Robideau said. Mayor George Kaftan said he could not remember LaMoure, a town of about 1,100 people in southeastern North Dakota, being without a siren and he has lived there 73 years.

Today's column is going to deal with the relative obscurity or relative importance (it depends on you or you are) of second teams.

You know second teams. They're the guys who mop up when a game is being won hands down or who just try to survive when a game is totally lost.

I never had the fortune to be a second teamer, but I had the lifestyle of just such explained to me by a trio of Wildcats basketball players when I first got started in this business on the Golden Gulf Coast.

That group of Toby, Gregson, Andrew and Leon had asked me to do a feature or column on the importance of being second teamers in earnest. I thought a feature was in order until all three nipped their second team status in the bud before I could do the story.

Leon was forced to play most of a game when a starter had four first half fouls slapped on him. During the second half when another starter contracted fooditis, Toby had to be put in. He responded by leading the second team with six points. Gregson and Andrew did live up to their status, however by "mopping up".

Because of that term — "mop up", second teamers and bench warmers carry with them a certain stigma. Gregson and Toby, however took it upon themselves to head up a sort of fraternity along the bench because of that stigma.

The group went by any of three aliases. "Pine Partners," was the first name for the four. As the season progressed, however the two main instigators of the whole affair came up with two more ways to describe life among the more sedentary members of the club.

Hence, they also answered to "Bench Buddies," and "Scrub Club."

According to the two young gentlemen, the best sixth man on a basketball team is a second teamer.

Anything after a sixth man is really something special they said.

Yes indeed. In listening to Toby, one got the feeling it is a real honor to be a 'P.P.', B.B. or S.C.' person.

"You know you are a 'Pine Partner' when your greatest feeling of self accomplishment at the end of a game is knowing you get in free," Toby informed this sportswriter.

Another bit of what it takes to be a 'Bench Buddy' also came to light in listening to the youngster's words of wisdom.

"Being a 'Bench Buddy' means looking forward to practice because you know you're really going to sweat," Toby said.

All kidding aside though, 'Pine Partners, Bench Buddies, Scrub Clubbers,' or whatever they are called wherever they are — whatever the sport — are important to any team. And while they may not be much in the eyes of the average fan, coaches appreciate their being there ready to spring into action at the motion of a wrist or yell of a command.

Oh yea, Toby led the 'Scrub Club' in points scored with 45 and in point production average (2.2). He played in 20 of the team's 29 games. Gregson also saw action in 20 contests and led the elite in rebounds (22) while Leon played in the highest number of games (24). Andrew got 23 games under his belt before becoming an old grad the next year when he was elevated to starter's status.

Blackman scores 43 in Maverick victory

DALLAS (AP) — Rolando Blackman scored a career-high 43 points Saturday night to lead the Dallas Mavericks past the Golden State Warriors 120-103 in a National Basketball Association game.

The victory enabled Dallas, 35-30, to pull into a tie for the Midwest Division lead with Utah, which lost to the New York Knicks earlier in the day.

Blackman scored 18 points in the first half, which ended with Dallas leading 57-48. The Mavericks hit seven of their first eight shots in the third quarter to pad their lead to 17 points, and held a 90-74 advantage going into the final 12 minutes.

Don Collins scored all seven of his points early in the fourth quarter to lead a run of nine straight points that pulled Golden State to within 90-83 in the first 1½ minutes of the final period.

But Dallas' Jay Vincent responded with three quick jumpers and rookie Derek Harper added a 19-foot jumper and a stuff after his own steal. With 6:53 to play, the Mavericks had a near-sellout crowd cheering a 102-85 lead.

Blackman had 33 points, four below his previous high, with less than four minutes left in the game. But he hit three straight outside jump shots, and with the crowd urging him on, added a 13-foot jumper with 20 seconds left to play before driving the length of the court for another basket just before the final buzzer.

WTC advances to nationals

Hawks fall to WTC, 56-55

By STEVE BELVIN
Staff Writer

MIDLAND — It was winner-take-all in round three of the Howard Hawks versus the Western Texas Westerners bout, and like two fighters scrapping for a world championship, each team went at each other tooth and nail. When the final whistle was blown, and the final shot had been taken, the Westerners had earned a trip to the national junior college tournament with a narrow 56-55 victory.

It marked the third time the teams had met, Howard won the first contest 70-66 in Snyder, while WTC won the second confrontation, 73-72 in Big Spring. But it was the Westerners who took the all-important Region V championship tilt, due to a cold shooting Hawk team that made only four of its last 12 shots of the contest.

Howard's cold streak began with 12 minutes remaining in the contest and the score tied 43-43. The Hawks then proceeded to miss their next eight shots, converting on two of three free throws. By that time WTC had upped its lead to 50-45 with 5:02 remaining.

The Hawks stayed close with a tight defense. Credit also goes to WTC's defense also, no matter what defense either team was in, the other squad had to work for every shot.

Michael Porter ended the Hawks' field goal drought when he collected a steal and connected on a jumper from the free throw line, cutting the margin to 50-47 with 4:11 remaining in the contest.

At the 10 minute mark in the game WTC switched from their man-man defense to a zone. At one time coach Mike Mitchell's squad held the ball for two and a half minutes without taking a shot.

Mitchell explained the move. "At the time we had Jerry Stroman on the bench getting a rest and our big man Anthony Snooks on the out with four fouls," said Mitchell. "I was trying to stall for time so we could get them back in."

Mitchell's strategy didn't look so good with 2:35 remaining in the contest and Howard trailing 54-47. But Mitchell and his troops did indeed know what they were doing, with Stroman and Snooks back in the contest, the Hawks battled back.

Stroman, who led all scorers with 23 points; hit a basket, which was followed by a steal by Snooks and another Stroman basket, cutting the margin to 54-51, with 1:24 remaining.

Pestered by a swarming Hawk defense, WTC forced an errant shot, Stroman promptly came down and hit a bomb from the top of the key with WTC's Fred Johnson all over him. The basket pulled Howard to within 54-53 with 20 seconds remaining.

Snooks again came up with the big play when he stole and inbounds pass intended for Johnson. Johnson got his fifth foul of the game, sending Snooks to the line with 18 seconds left.

On the foul, Snooks was shaken up causing a protest by WTC coach Barry Davis claiming that the Hawks were faking an injury. After peace was restored, Snooks stepped to the line, and fortunately for the Westerners he missed the front end of the one and one, sealing the victory for WTC.

Mitchell said that the game was "well played by both teams". When asked if his squad was drained from Friday night's triple overtime win over Amarillo, he replied, "I don't think we were drained so much physically as emotionally. They hurt us on the offensive boards and our free throw shooting hurt us (3-7). We had the cold streak in the last part of the game. We couldn't do anything about that, the shots just wouldn't go in."

The Hawks end the season with a sparkling 28-4 record, while WTC advances to the national tournament in Hutchinson, Kansas with a 24-10 slate.

Duke upsets North Carolina, 77-75

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Sophomore David Henderson sank four free throws in the last 42 seconds to propel 16th-ranked Duke into the finals of the Atlantic Coast Conference basketball tournament with a 77-75 victory over top-ranked North Carolina Saturday.

The Blue Devils will play either No. 19 Wake Forest or No. 14 Maryland, who met in the other semifinal at the Greensboro Coliseum.

Duke will be in its first ACC tournament final since 1980, when it lost a 73-72 decision to Maryland. For North Carolina, it was the first ACC loss after 15 victories over league rivals.

The hotly-contested battle was tied eight times in the first 15 minutes of the second half, the latest a 69-69 tie on Matt Doherty's jumper with 2:39 left. Johnny Dawkins broke the knot with a 15-foot jumper with 2:10 left, and Mark Alarie added two free throws with 60 seconds left to play.

Freshman Joe Wolf was fouled by Alarie and hit two free throws to bring the Tar Heels within 73-71 at the 51-second mark, but Henderson started his string at that point.

The 6-foot-5 Henderson was hacked and converted a one-and-one with 42 seconds left. Doherty responded with a running one-hander with 36 seconds remaining to cut the deficit to 75-73.

Henderson added another one-and-one with 17 seconds left to finish Duke's scoring with a 77-73 lead.

Michael Jordan's jumper proved to be North Carolina's last gasp at the five-second mark. Henderson then missed the front end of a one-and-one and the Tar Heels called timeout. With three seconds left, Doherty tried a long pass to Jordan. The ball never got inbounds, however and the Blue Devils were home free.

Arkansas 49, A&M 47

HOUSTON, Texas (AP) — Arkansas guard Ricky Norton's 22-foot jump shot without second to play Saturday night carried the No. 8-ranked Razorbacks into the Southwest Conference basketball tournament finals against No. 5 Houston with a 49-47 victory over Texas A&M.

Aggie guard Darnell Williams traveled with 10 seconds to play to give Arkansas a chance to win the game in regulation.

A&M, 15-14, was unable to get a shot off after Norton's clutch jumper just inside the three-point circle.

Houston outlasted Rice 53-50 in the other semifinal game as Akeem Olajuwon blocked nine shots and scored 15 points.

The Razorbacks, now 25-5, will play Houston for the third time this season at 1:10 p.m. in The Summit.

Arkansas guard Alvin Robertson, who had a game-high 20 points, hit four free throws and Arkansas led 47-45 but Kenny Brown tied it with 1:44 to go with two free throws.

The Razorbacks stalled most of the time off the clock but suffered a turnover and the Aggies promptly returned the favor.

The Aggies outscored Arkansas 16-2 as they overcame a 15-point deficit to take the lead 33-31 behind fiery freshman guard Todd Holloway, who finished 15 points.

Arkansas went 9-16 without a field goal during the Aggies' rally.

The Razorbacks were also ice cold from the free throw line, making only seven of 18 attempts.

Arkansas raced to a 24-9 lead in the first half behind Robertson before the Aggies rallied with 11 unanswered points to trail 24-20 at intermission.

Robertson scored Arkansas' first five points and had 10 in the half. Arkansas went the last 5:46 of the first half without a point.

Houston 53, Rice 50

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston's Akeem Olajuwon scored 15 points, blocked nine shots and helped the fifth-ranked Cougars beat back a late Rice charge led by Tyrone Washington Saturday night to edge the underdog Owls 53-50 and gain the finals in the Southwest Conference Post-Season Basketball Tournament for the fourth straight year.

Houston, the SWC regular season champion the last two seasons, will meet the winner of a later game between Arkansas and Texas A&M in Sunday's nationally televised finals at 1:10 p.m. CST.

The Cougars, who had their 39-game SWC winning streak snapped Sunday by Arkansas, was cruising along with a 17-point lead at 43-26 with 14:26 left in the game when Washington, a senior playing his final game, scored 14 consecutive points to throw a late scare into the Cougars.

Washington finished with a game-high 20 points and Tony Barnett added 18 points. Alvin Franklin hit 12 points for the Cougars and Michael Young, the team's leading scorer, was held to 10 points.

Rice pulled to a 53-48 deficit with 48 seconds to play when Olajuwon blocked a shot by Barnett and grabbed the ball on a key play. Barnett added two free throws with 23 seconds to play for the final points of the game.

NEW YORK (AP) — Patrick Ewing, Georgetown's 7-foot center, scored 27 points Saturday night, nine in overtime, to lead No. 2 Georgetown to an 82-71 victory over Syracuse in the championship game of the Big East Conference, giving the Hoyas an automatic bid to the NCAA Tournament.

Ewing, the tournament's MVP, also grabbed 16 rebounds and blocked five shots as the Hoyas pulled away from a 63-63 tie at the end of regulation. They became the first top-seeded team to win the Big East tourney in the five years the conference has existed.

Sophomore guard Michael Jackson added 20 points, 16 after the intermission, for the Hoyas, 29-3, who won their third Big East championship.

Freshman guard Dwayne Washington led Syracuse, 22-8, with 27 points and six assists. He fouled out with 28 seconds left

DePaul 64, Marquette 49

CHICAGO (AP) — Kevin Holmes and Tyrone Corbin helped Coach Ray Meyer celebrate his retirement party after 42 years at DePaul's helm with 64-49 triumph over Marquette on Saturday.

The victory gave the fourth-ranked Blue Demons a season-closing 26-2 record and all but clinched a top seed in the upcoming NCAA tournament.

Holmes scored 17 points and Corbin added 16 helping to drop Marquette to a 16-12 record for the year.

Meyer, retiring after a four-decade love affair with basketball coaching, was showered with gifts in pre-game ceremonies, including a rocking chair. There was also a gift and an embrace from another coaching legend, John Wooden, who guided UCLA to 10 NCAA championships before retiring himself in 1975.

Arkansas captures first NCAA indoor track title

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Mike Conley became the first athlete in 15 years to win the men's long jump and the triple jump in the NCAA Indoor Track and Field Championships and led Arkansas to its first team championship Saturday.

The Razorbacks, the runners-up in 1982 and third last year, finished the two-day, 16-event competition with 38 points, edging Iowa State, which finished second with 36.

Nebraska, paced by a 1-2-3 finish in the women's 55-meter dash, led by Merlene Ottey, plus Angela Thacker's upset victory over Carol Lewis of Houston in the long jump, won the women's championship for the second straight year.

The Lady Cornhuskers amassed 59 points in 13 events. Tennessee, second last year, again was the runner-up, with 48 points.

Conley, a junior, who finished third in the World Championships last year in the long jump, took that title Saturday with a leap of 25 feet, 8 inches.

Then, he won the triple jump — an event in which he was fourth in the World Championships — at 55-8.

The only other athlete to take those events in the same NCAA Indoor Championships was Bob Beamon of Texas-El Paso in 1968. Beamon went on to win the Olympic gold medal in the long jump that year with a world record 29-2 1/2.

Conley, ranked fourth in the world in both jumps, had finished sixth in the NCAA long jump last year and won the triple jump.

As a freshman in 1982, he was eighth in the long jump and fourth in the triple jump.

Prior to this meet, Arkansas Coach John McDonnell had said he needed big points in both events from Conley for the Razorbacks to win the title. He got 20 of them. The Razorbacks collected their other 18 points from Tom Moloney's second-place finish in the 1,500-meter race, a third in the distance medley relay and Marty Kobza's fourth in the shot put.

Scoring was on a 10-8-6-4-2-1 basis.

Arkansas' winning total was the lowest since Washington State won with 25 1/2 in 1977. Washington State finished third this time with 28.

In the battle for the women's team title, Nebraska easily surpassed its winning total of 47 in 1983, with the help of 24 points in the dash.

Ottey won it in 6.70 seconds and was followed by Thacker in 6.74 and Janet Burke in 6.79.

The long jump, however, produced one of the biggest shockers of the day, as Thacker soared 21-10 1/4 in handing Lewis her first indoor setback in the event in two years.

Lewis, the American indoor record holder and a prohibitive favorite in the long jump, placed second at 21-9 3/4.

Meanwhile, Tennessee's swift relay teams produced two of the most sizzling performances in winning the 1,600-meter and 3,200-meter events.

In the 3,200, the team of Karol Davidson, Alison Quleich of Australia, Alisa

Harvey and Joetta Clark registered the fastest indoor clocking in history, 8:40.17.

And in the 1,600, the foursome of Mary Bolden, Ilrey Oliver, Sharriffa Barksdale and Cathy Rattray of Jamaica set a collegiate record of 3:37.04.

Clark and Rattray also won individual events, Clark capturing the 1,000 in 2:43.85 and Rattray taking the 500 in 1:10.82.

But those two victories, plus the two in the relays, were not enough for the Lady Vols, who couldn't match Nebraska's overall strength.

Meanwhile, Michael Carter of Southern Methodist University became the first field event athlete to win four titles in the NCAA Indoor Championships.

The muscular Carter, also a standout middle guard on SMU's football team, won his fourth shot put crown with a heave of 66-1 1/2.

He also had finished first in 1980, 1981 and 1983, missing the 1982 meet with a knee injury. Carter also has won three NCAA outdoor shot put titles and will be going for the "Grand Slam" in June at Eugene, Ore.

The only other athlete to win four NCAA indoor titles in the same event was Suleiman Nyambui of Texas-El Paso. He took the mile from 1979-1982.

Carter indicated that his future would be in professional football rather than track.

"I enjoy both football and track equally as well, but football is where the money is — especially in the USFL (United States Football League)," he said. "As far as which league (the USFL or National Football League) I will play in, I'll go to whoever gives me the best deal."

Another outstanding men's performer was freshman Tony McKay of Georgia Tech.

McKay, holder of the world indoor best in the 400-meter dash, won in 46.46, beating the second, third and fourth-ranked quarter-milers in the world

— Sunder Nix of Indiana, Michael Franks of Southern Illinois and Sunday Uti of Iowa State, respectively.

Uti finished second in 46.68, Franks was third in 46.69 and Nix fifth in 47.27.

Other men's winners included Rod Richardson, Texas A&M, 55-meter dash, 6.14; Roger

The other women's champions were Candy

WORKING TOWARDS OLYMPICS — Jaime Baldwin (left) and Gene Dukus (right) work on their hand speed at a recent workout at the Howard County Boxing Club. Both boxers have been selected by the National Boxing Committee to participate in the Olympic Training Camp in Colorado Springs, Colorado in May. This week the duo will be in Golden Gloves competition in Ft. Worth.

Boxers Baldwin and Dukus have shot at Olympic gold

By STEVE BELVIN Staff Writer

There is a possibility that Big Spring could have three representatives on the United States Olympic Team for in the Summer Games in Los Angeles.

Rose Majors has already made the squad via volleyball. Gene Dukus and Jaime Baldwin, members of the Howard County Boxing Club will get a chance at a berth on the U.S. boxing team at the training camp in Colorado Springs, Colo. in May.

The duo was nominated by the West Texas Boxing Committee as representatives for the area. The National Boxing Committee, after taking a careful look at the boxers' history, selected Dukus and Baldwin to the prestigious camp.

And all of a sudden — Baldwin and Dukus find themselves in a position to go for the gold.

Both know that a spot on the canvas in Los Angeles is a long and rocky road against some very experienced competition, including the State Golden Gloves competition in Fort Worth March 12-17. But both make no bones about the fact that they are not in awe of their latest challenge.

Dukus, who got his career started in Louisiana five years ago feels good about his chances in Ft. Worth and Colorado Springs. "I'm confident that I'll do alright," said Dukus. Right now I'm in the best shape I've ever been in," said the 18-year-old.

Dukus' two year record in Big Spring speaks for itself. Thirty-five wins against four losses. Last year the 147-pound welterweight was runner-up at the National PAL tournament in Ohio and Regional Golden Gloves in Odessa.

This year he has been even better, going undefeated while winning the Regional Golden Gloves in Odessa. "I've improved on everything in the ring this year," he said. "My hook, jabs, footwork has all improved. A lot of it comes from experience."

"Gene is a very powerful fighter," said boxing club coach Joe Martinez. "He can hurt you with a straight right hand or left hook. The good thing about either Gene or Jaime is that they don't let it get to them because alot of their opponents are much older and experienced. They look at them as just another fighter."

For Baldwin, boxing is a family affair, since dad, Jaime Sr. is one of the coaches and brothers Juan and Martin are members of the HCBC.

The 16-year-old flyweight has been boxing for four years and has lost very few of his 125 bouts. In fact his hardest problem has been keeping his weight down to the 112-pound flyweight limit.

"I guess I'm just going through growing pains," said Baldwin. "The weight is not hard to get off. All I do is work and sweat it off," he explained.

Baldwin's record is a sparkling one at that. He is three-time Junior Olympic champion, winner of this year's Golden Gloves in Odessa, and runner-up in Golden Gloves and nationals in Ohio last year.

His most impressive bout this season came at the Odessa Golden Gloves when he defeated the two-time defending state champ. His performance was spectacular according to coach Ed Garza. "He gave that kid a boxing lesson," said Garza.

Like Dukus, Baldwin is not intimidated by being in the open class against more experienced competition. "It doesn't bother me that they are older," said Baldwin. "I see them like myself, a 112-pound flyweight."

Baldwin feels that he has a good chance at Fort Worth this week, and at Colorado Springs, because of ring savvy he has learned during four years. "I'm more of a boxer and not a slugger. I'm more ring wise and more conscientious of the opponent. Also my left hook has improved," he explained.

After this year, what does the future hold for these two young promising boxers? Dukus said more than likely he will go after his goal of boxing professionally, after the Olympics are finished. Baldwin will finish high school and then consider turning pro.

That the future — for the time being — Gene Dukus and Jaime Baldwin are thinking about going for the gold.

Lietzke, Archer tied for Doral tourney lead

BRUCE LIETZKE
...tie for lead in Doral Open

MIAMI (AP) - After Jack Nicklaus had been victimized by a double bogey on the 16th hole, Bruce Lietzke and veteran George Archer emerged as co-leaders Saturday in the third round of the $400,000 Doral-Eastern Open Golf Tournament.

Nicklaus, the famed Golden Bear, was cruising along in sole command of the lead when he dumped a shot in a bunker, came out long and 3-putted on the 16th hole at the Blue Monster course at the Doral Country Club.

It deprived Jack of the lead and set it up for Lietzke, still riding a high from last week's victory in the Honda Classic, and the gangling, 44-year-old Archer to tie for the top at 205, 11 shots under par.

Archer, a former Masters champion whose last victory came eight long years ago, had a 69 in the bright, warm weather. Lietzke had the lead alone until he bogeyed the final hole, finishing off a 67.

Nicklaus struggled to a 70 and was tied at 206 with Johnny Miller and Gary Hallberg. Miller had a 68 and Hallberg 69.

They were followed by Tom Kite, Wayne Levi and Bernhard Langer of West Germany. Kite's round of 70 included an eagle-2 on the 14th, where he dropped out a 165-yard, 6-iron shot. Levi had a 69 and Langer 68.

Defending champion Gary Koch was next at 69-208, only three back and very much in contention.

So are at least 21 others, according to Lietzke.

"It's the kind of golf course that anyone within six shots can come out of the pack tomorrow and win it," he said.

"With the field we have, with the course we're playing, I'd say it's a very good chance, better than 50-50, that the winner will come out of a playoff."

'With the field we have, with the course we're playing, I'd say it's a very good chance, better than 50-50, that the winner will come out of a playoff.'

Lietzke, ho chipped in from about 50 feet for a birdie on the third hole, had it 6 under par for the day and was one shot clear of the field until he made his lone bogey on the 18th. He let his approach leak to the right, chipped down to about eight feet and missed the putt.

"I'm playing confidently — just a carry-over from last week," he said. "That was a confidence-builder. I was playing well and had confidence coming into this week. I had all the ingredients. So far, I've been able to apply them."

That bogey on the last hole let the 6-foot-5 Archer gain a share of the lead and put him one big step closer toward a longtime goal.

Archer, who had serious back surgery in 1976, said he came back "with one goal in mind — win one more time after the operation."

"I've been close a few times, but I think wanting it so much has kept me from it. If I make it tomorrow, good. If not, well, for a guy that was 80-20 on even walking again, I guess I can't complain."

Nicklaus, trying to break a 1½-year non-winning string, broke out of a three-way tie with a birdie-birdie start, and got to three under for the day with a wedge shot to six feet on the fifth hole.

A drive that bounced off a tree, then a spectator, then settled in high grass, set up his first bogey of the tournament on the seventh hole.

He made a 25-footer for birdie on the next hole, got a wedge close on the 10th and held his position atop the standings despite some extremely erratic play over the next three holes.

He came out of a fairway bunker on the 14th and made a 30-foot putt for birdie that kept him two in front of the pack.

That margin was cut in half when he bogeyed the next hole from a bunker, then disappeared entirely with the double-bogey disaster on the 16th.

LHS baseballers seeking good season

By BILLY NABOURS

LAMESA — With five full time and one part time starter back, the Lamesa Golden Tornados are expected to have at least as successful a year on the baseball diamond as they did during 1983.

And perhaps the team can equal the district championship season if the Lamesa boy's basketball team since most of coach Lee Almaguer's veterans made up the Tors 25-3 roundball crew.

All Lamesa did last season on the diamond was lose their first three 2-AAAA games before regrouping to go 6-5 overall and finish second to state champion Snyder. Actually Lamesa tied for second with Andrews and missed a chance at the playoffs when the Mustangs won a one game playoff. Lamesa was the only team to defeat Snyder (score was 6-5) in district play. Overall the Golden Tors went 12-14.

Almaguer, in his third year at the school, said, "experience will be a definite strength this year. Because of experience I think we'll be a better ball club defensively."

He added, "Finding a good second pitcher and a good reliever will be the two biggest problems."

Kenneth Williams is one of the veterans. The sophomore batted .300 in district action last year. Richard Diaz, a junior shortstop hit .290, and according to his coach, "has the potential to be tops in the district."

John Joe Hernandez is a senior infielder and, "pretty good glove," said Almaguer. "If we get John Joe to come around with his bat we'll be in very good shape."

Two time all-district choice Gilbert Aaredondo, a junior, has been varsity tested for awhile and while his freshman average of .529 dropped to .280 last year, the centerfielder-pitcher slugged 11 homers.

Behind the plate is Greg Hogg who Almaguer said, "has the tools to be a good catcher. He's already an awfully good worker."

At first base will be one of the standout Lamesa baseballers in Chris Mason. A junior, Mason is a good hitter in the Gary Maddox tradition. "Chris is a spray type hitter," said Almaguer of the youngster who began starting halfway through last year.

On his pitching prospects Almaguer said, "Jimmy Scott and Jacob Valdez are the top candidates for starter's roles while Johnny Gonzales will play rightfield, but also be used in relief."

About the upcoming district race Almaguer sees Pecos and his own team as favorites based upon returning numbers. Snyder should be considered for the 2-AAAA title based simply on experience he said and Andrews can be expected to battle with a group of young players.

Lamesa's first loop encounter will be Mar. 19 against Brownfield in Lamesa at 4 p.m.

game, will take a record of 723 victories against 353 losses into the upcoming NCAA tournament, his last hurrah as a coach.

Showing the effects of trying too hard for their coach, the Blue Demons fell behind 4-0 but rattled off the next eight points to take an 8-4 lead.

But Marquette, led by Dwayne Johnson, Marc Marotta and Tom Copa, rallied at the start of the second half with 11 straight points to climb within two points of the lead at 36-34.

UTEP 44, New Mexico 38

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Behind the shooting of Fred Reynolds and the rebounding of Juden Smith, ninth-ranked Texas-El Paso came from behind Saturday to defeat New Mexico 44-38 and win the first Western Athletic Conference tournament.

Reynolds, a 6-foot forward, poured in 15 points, and sophomore Smith pulled down 10 rebounds as the Miners improved their record to 27-3.

The victory gave UTEP an automatic berth in the National Collegiate Athletic Association playoffs that begin this week.

Smith, who also scored eight points for the Miners, was named the most valuable player of the tournament. He helped UTEP get to Saturday's championship game by scoring eight points and pulling down 11 rebounds Friday against Wyoming.

Big Spring relays have good day Cork third in 100 meters

ODESSA — The Big Spring girls varsity track team had a fairly successful day at the West Texas Relays here Saturday with the 400 and 800-meter relay teams grabbing second places.

The 400-meter relay team of Aretha Cork, Tina Smith, Latresa Cork and Pam Palmer clocked at 50.13 time, and later the same lineup posted a 1:48.62 in the 800-meter relay.

In other performances, Teresa Pruitt placed sixth in the 400-meter dash; Aretha Cork placed third in the 100-meter dash with a time of 12.84; Latresa Cork ran fourth in the 100-meter dash with a time of 12.84; and the 1600-meter relay of Paula Spears, Tina Smith, Pam Palmer and Teresa Pruitt placed eighth.

of the Big Eight Conference post-season basketball tournament.

The Sooners, the regular-season Big Eight champions, called time out with 13 seconds left. Darryl Kennedy missed on a shot from the top of the key and Greg Dreiling rebounded for the Jayhawks, who won the Big Eight automatic bid in the NCAA Tournament and delighted a fiercely partisan crowd of 16,000.

Kansas outscored the favored Sooners 16-4 at the outset of the game, and the lead reached a shocking 17 points, 25-8, less than nine minutes into the contest. It was the deepest hole the Sooners have found themselves in all year.

Kelly Knight's 15-footer put Kansas on top 31-17 with 8:45 left.

David Johnson, a 6-foot-8 forward, then ignited a Sooner charge. Johnson scored 11 points the rest of the way, and his three-point play with five seconds left reduced Kansas' halftime lead to one point, 40-39.

All-American Wayman Tisdale, who had scored 67 points in Oklahoma's two previous tournament games, wound up with 17.

La. Tech 68, Lamar 65
BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — Junior forward Willie Simmons' 17 points and 12 rebounds led Louisiana Tech to a 68-65 upset of defending champion Lamar in the finals of the Southland Conference Tournament Saturday night, ending the nation's longest active home-court winning streak at 80 games.

The 6-10 Simmons scored 13 of his points and had six rebounds in the first half as the 25-6 Bulldogs earned the conference's automatic bid to the National Collegiate Athletic Association tournament. The New Orleans native also picked up the tournament's most valuable player award.

To All Concerned Tax Payers

I would like to take just a moment of your time to ask for your support and vote. When elected to serve as your next County Commissioner Precinct 3, I will do my best to see that your tax dollars are used to the best interest of all concerned.

In looking over the financial report of Howard County, and talking with our County Auditor, I find that the year ending 1982 we had a surplus balance of $2,140,244.98 carried over into 1983 and at the year end of 1983 we had a surplus balance of $3,242,807.00 and by the 1st of January 1984 our surplus balance was $4,104,000.00. The budget for the year 1984 is $5,800,000.00 with revenue of $5,400,000.00, which we will have other revenue coming in during the year from other sources.

It is my opinion that we should use some of these tax dollars to improve our present facilities, to include upgrading our courthouse, museum, library, fire protection for rural residences, better roads, etc.

If we do not keep our present facilities up as time goes along it will cost a great deal more to replace them later on.

I welcome any comment which you have regarding any and all matters concerning our county affairs.

When elected to serve as your next County Commissioner of Precinct 3, it is your right and privilege to express your opinions with me.

I welcome your comments and views regarding these matters. Call 267-5955 or come by and talk with me. My residence is on Driver Road and my door will be open to you.

Signal class to present play

By CAROL BALDWIN
Staff Writer

A walking, talking computer, a forgetful princess and two detectives will take to the stage March 22 when members of the Signal English classes at Runnels Junior High School present two one-act plays to the public.

Seventh and eighth grade students in the Signal classes will perform at 7 p.m. in the Big Spring High School Auditorium.

Signal instructor Richard Victor is directing the students.

The plays, both comedies, are called "A Case for Two Detectives," presented by the seventh grade, and "Hamelot," by the eighth grade. The latter is a takeoff of Hamlet and Camelot.

There will be no admission charge.

The Signal English program is composed of gifted and talented English students. Sixth grade Signal students will work as hosts.

The Signal program was established four years ago and the group often does plays. Victor said he chose comedies this year "because you can only do Shakespeare so often. I decided to choose something more enjoyable."

Victor said "these kids need to have experience in theater and drama." The students will be assisted by Jimmy Smith of the Big Spring High School drama department and members of the high school drama classes.

Victor is being assisted by Judy Tereletsky and Vickie Stewart. The women designed and painted backdrops for the show.

Students began rehearsals for the program the second week in January and have now memorized their lines and are working on staging. Work on the plays is interrupted by other studies and projects under way in the Signal program.

Students taking roles in "Hamelot" are Taff Wennik, Rusty Patrick, Eric Atkins, Shamir Caplin, Kathryn Dawes, Tami Burnsed and Rebecca Read.

Others are Laura Ogburn, Kelly McCormick, Aricia Grant, Lara Cunningham, Laura Ainsworth, Dede Durst, Amber Logback and Shawn Meredith.

Students in "A Case for Two Detectives" are Jay Carr, Shanette Johnson, Erin Kelly, Shawna Adams, Ben Fritzier, Kasandra Keyes, Amy Carroll, Al Cox, Christy Alexander, Thane Russey and Joel Jennings.

Dallas adjusts ambulance policy

DALLAS (AP) — Fire department officials have their first adjustments in the city's ambulance policy since they learned that a nurse dispatcher Jan. 5 delayed sending an ambulance to a dying woman.

Nurse dispatchers have been instructed to tell callers immediately if they have sent an ambulance of the scene of an emergency, said Assistant Fire Chief Mike Freeman.

Some dispatchers previously continued to ask callers questions after an ambulance had been sent without informing the caller that it was on the way, Freeman said.

Man showers street with life savings

NEW YORK (AP) — Pennies from heaven it wasn't — instead, a "depressed" man showered the sidewalk outside his bank with more than $26,000 in cash he had just withdrawn from his account.

George Thomas of New York told police he "was depressed" when he decided to throw his savings to the wind Friday afternoon at the Atlantic Bank of New York, Detective Thomas Pinder of the 114th Precinct said.

The bank's manager and two customers began frantically picking up the blowing bills, assisted by passers-by, said Ralph Albano, vice-president for public relations at the bank.

A total of $22,422.75 was recovered, he said. Albano said he wasn't surprised by the number of Good Samaritans who helped gather and return the money.

According to Albano, Thomas walked into the Astoria branch around noon and asked for his $26,654.77 savings account in cash, refusing the efforts of bank employees to get him to accept a check.

Country doctors Young physicians choose small town settings

ATHENS, Texas (AP) — The man in the black bomber jacket and mustache wheels his silver BMW past the chickens pecking on the courthouse lawn.

But he is no big-city interloper in this small East Texas town. People stop and wave to him. He is their doctor.

Doug Curran and his three colleagues — Jim Cox, Ken Lemmon and Gary Williamson — are among many young doctors who are rejecting specialized, big-city practices to put down roots in rural Texas as family physicians.

"My patients are my friends that I jog with in the morning, the guys I play racquetball with and go to church with," said Curran, lunching with his partners at a restaurant featuring the local favorite, black-eyed peas.

"When that arm you set doesn't come out straight, you get to look at it every Sunday morning in church," said Williamson.

Small-town practice means making house calls, the doctors said, though they do most of their work in a shiny, new clinic, financed by local banks.

"When you know grandma, you know mom and dad and all the problems at home, it's a little easier to understand those aches and pains sometimes."

— Dr. Ken Lemmon

Curran and Lemmon said they went to the tiny home of an indigent kidney dialysis patient to see how the machine was working. Every appliance in the house, including the kidney machine, was plugged into a single bare light socket.

"I tripped over a wire and everything in the house went out," Lemmon said.

"When you know grandma, you know mom and dad and all the problems at home, it's a little easier to understand those aches and pains sometimes," he said.

Dr. William Ross, chairman of the family practice division at Southwestern Medical School in Dallas, comes from a line of doctors who practiced in Mount Pleasant beginning in 1834. Ross, who practiced in San Benito in the Rio Grande Valley for 22 years, preaches the joys of being a small town's doctor.

"You share the tragedies and triumphs of a community," he said. "There's no way for me to sit here and describe these things. They don't build up your bank account or stature, and the tragedies bring us back to the ground and remind you of what you can and cannot do."

With the technological revolution of the '60s, Ross said, specialization became the rage of the medical community. The old doctors were dying, the younger, experienced family practitioners were heading back to the cities "in hordes" to study up to specialize, said Ross.

"It was getting worse by the minute," he said. "Nobody out there was seeing people on an everyday basis."

He said when he set up his practice in 1955, he was the 14th doctor in San Benito, and there were six others in nearby communities. By 1963, Ross said, there were three doctors serving the entire area. Few medical students would even consider rural family practice.

"We were equated with Vietnam and Appalachia," Ross said.

Spurred by concerned physicians like Ross, former head of the Texas Medical Association, the Legislature began in the 1970s funding family practice programs around the state to encourage medical school students to consider rural family practice.

In 1970 there was only one family practice residency program in Texas. Now there are 21.

In 1950, 40 percent of Ross' graduating class went into family practice. By the 1960s, Southwestern was lucky if one out of its graduating class of 100 did. Now the figure is back up around 20 percent and the size of the graduating class has doubled, Ross said.

The Texas Medical Association published a study of physician distribution in 1982 that showed 46 percent of Texas' family and general practitioners were in the six most populated counties. Ross said the TMA is in the process of a new count.

But he is convinced that the programs have worked and quickly reels off a list of two dozen or so recent graduates who have moved to small towns like Cuero, Marfa, Kilgore, Weatherford, Whitney, Ennis, Corsicana.

Cox, Lemmon, Curran and Williamson met through their common residences at John Peter Smith Hospital in Fort Worth, about 100 miles from Athens.

The four have also brought two other physicians to Athens from John Peter Smith.

"That residency program has had a big influence on Athens, Texas," Lemmon said.

Susan Morrey, who also did her residency in Fort Worth, ranged a little farther. The Austin native practices in Fort Stockton in far West Texas.

At the end of her first year of medical school, she visited Fort Stockton under MECO (Medical Education with Community Orientation), a national program designed to acquaint medical students with rural practice.

"I really liked it out here. I got along with everybody," she said. "The following year, the people, the community here, got together a fund and offered me financing for my last two years of medical school for my agreement to practice out here for at least two years."

300 forced to evacuate Las Vegas hotel casino

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Fire erupted in the casino of the Continental Hotel Saturday afternoon, forcing the evacuation of more than 300 people from the two-story gambling area and dining room, officials said. No injuries were reported.

"Flames were coming out the windows," when the blaze was reported at 3:55 p.m., city fire communications specialist Mark Hawkinson said. Casino patrons left gambling tables after the fire broke out.

Hawkinson described the Continental as "one of the smaller hotels off the strip."

The fire started in a casino's dining room grill, and grease from the grill flue appeared to fuel the blaze, sending flames shooting upward and out the roof, said Clark County Battalion Chief Paul Hicks. The grill fire ignited a smaller fire in a wall, but Hicks said both were extinguished by 4:25 p.m.

"What we have is a fire in one of the flues in the main kitchen," Hicks said. "The dry chemical extinguisher did go off, but the fire extended upward, doing a lot of smoke damage."

Hicks said between 300 and 400 people were evacuated.

A stewardess for Global Airlines on a stopover at the hotel, Vickie Fischer, also said the fire started on a grill while she was in the casino dining room. But Hicks emphasized the exact cause was unknown.

The three-story Continental Hotel is just behind its two-story casino at the intersection of Paradise and Flamingo roads, away from Las Vegas' main strip of towering hotels and casinos.

The Continental hotel and casino are attached by a walkway, but only the casino was evacuated.

The scene was three blocks from the 26-story MGM Grand Hotel, where 85 people died and 700 were injured in a Nov. 21, 1980, electrical fire that began in its casino and trapped many people in smoke-filled upper hotel rooms.

Lawsuits subsequently filed by 1,357 plaintiffs concluded last year in a $140 million settlement that attorneys called the largest compensatory damage recovery in U.S. history.

Radio reporter Steve Herman said he saw people who appeared to be stranded on the hotel's roof, but Hicks later described those people as hotel personnel who were not in danger, but rather were waving at firefighters to guide them toward where flames were emerging.

Global Airlines pilot Jamie Farahmand of Washington D.C. was among evacuees milling around the hotel's parking lot. He said the smoke "smelled like a chicken kebab, steak and everything. I just left my room and walked down the stairs."

Metro Police Lt. William Gilbert said nine police squads sealed off hotel entrances and were conducting traffic around the area.

Earlier fires at Las Vegas hotels, especially the MGM fire and a blaze at the Las Vegas Hilton 2½ months later, prompted Nevada fire safety laws that state officials have called the toughest in the nation.

A fire safety panel formed after the two fires recommended sweeping changes for every building in the state over two stories tall. The Nevada legislature adopted most of the findings and high-rise owners were given until June 1984 to install the new safety gear.

Under the law, all buildings over 55 feet must have sprinklers in corridors and rooms, voice communication from a command center into the rooms, alarms, smoke detectors and emergency lighting.

300 forced to evacuate Las Vegas hotel casino. LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Fire erupted in the casino of the Continental Hotel Saturday afternoon, forcing the evacuation of more than 300 people from the two-story gambling area and dining room, officials said. No injuries were reported. "Flames were coming out the windows," when the blaze was reported at 3:55 p.m., city fire communications specialist Mark Hawkinson said. Casino patrons left gambling tables after the fire broke out. Hawkinson described the Continental as "one of the smaller hotels off the strip." The fire started in a casino's dining room grill, and grease from the grill flue appeared to fuel the blaze, sending flames shooting upward and out the roof, said Clark County Battalion Chief Paul Hicks. The grill fire ignited a smaller fire in a wall, but Hicks said both were extinguished by 4:25 p.m. "What we have is a fire in one of the flues in the main kitchen," Hicks said. "The dry chemical extinguisher did go off, but the fire extended upward, doing a lot of smoke damage." Hicks said between 300 and 400 people were evacuated. A stewardess for Global Airlines on a stopover at the hotel, Vickie Fischer, also said the fire started on a grill while she was in the casino dining room. But Hicks emphasized the exact cause was unknown. The three-story Continental Hotel is just behind its two-story casino at the intersection of Paradise and Flamingo roads, away from Las Vegas' main strip of towering hotels and casinos. The Continental hotel and casino are attached by a walkway, but only the casino was evacuated. The scene was three blocks from the 26-story MGM Grand Hotel, where 85 people died and 700 were injured in a Nov. 21, 1980, electrical fire that began in its casino and trapped many people in smoke-filled upper hotel rooms. Lawsuits subsequently filed by 1,357 plaintiffs concluded last year in a $140 million settlement that attorneys called the largest compensatory damage recovery in U.S. history. Radio reporter Steve Herman said he saw people who appeared to be stranded on the hotel's roof, but Hicks later described those people as hotel personnel who were not in danger, but rather were waving at firefighters to guide them toward where flames were emerging. Global Airlines pilot Jamie Farahmand of Washington D.C. was among evacuees milling around the hotel's parking lot. He said the smoke "smelled like a chicken kebab, steak and everything. I just left my room and walked down the stairs." Metro Police Lt. William Gilbert said nine police squads sealed off hotel entrances and were conducting traffic around the area. Earlier fires at Las Vegas hotels, especially the MGM fire and a blaze at the Las Vegas Hilton 2½ months later, prompted Nevada fire safety laws that state officials have called the toughest in the nation. A fire safety panel formed after the two fires recommended sweeping changes for every building in the state over two stories tall. The Nevada legislature adopted most of the findings and high-rise owners were given until June 1984 to install the new safety gear. Under the law, all buildings over 55 feet must have sprinklers in corridors and rooms, voice communication from a command center into the rooms, alarms, smoke detectors and emergency lighting.

Famous scene almost cut

LOS ANGELES (AP) — One of the most famous bits in movie lore, the scene in "Now Voyager" where Paul Henreid lights two cigarettes and hands one to Bette Davis, was hated by the director and very nearly cut from the film.

Henreid, who just turned 76, is probably best remembered for "Casablanca," and is the only surviving star from that classic film.

Duran Duran thanks MTV

LOS ANGELES (AP) — They're filling huge arenas with screaming girls, their "Seven and the Ragged Tiger" LP is in the Top 10 and their pouty, youthful faces peer out from teen fan magazines everywhere.

To some observers, the commotion surrounding Duran Duran's current U.S. tour recalls the Beatlemania of two decades ago, and the band has been jokingly dubbed the Fab Five.

And if rock critics are wrinkling their noses at the band's brand of techno-pop music, lead singer and songwriter Simon Le Bon couldn't care less.

"I think critics in the music business are different from theater critics," he said in a recent interview with the Associated Press, settling into an overstuffed chair in his Westwood hotel suite. "They don't have that much power."

But there is a compelling media force behind Duran Duran, and it can be summed up in three letters: MTV — Music Television.

Scarcely noticed by radio and the public in two previous visits to the United States, Duran Duran saw its following slowly but surely mushroom after the Warner-Amex cable rock video channel began frequent airings of what at the time were highly distinctive videos.

In "Hungry Like a Wolf," the strapping, blond Le Bon donned pith helmet and khakis to chase an exotic maiden through the jungles and bazaars of Sri

SIMON LE BON

Lanka. "Girls on Film" is a soft-porn salute to the soft-porn film industry. "Save a Prayer," also shot in Sri Lanka, is a hauntingly romantic travelog.

The response to the videos is credited for convincing radio to start playing the band's "Rio" LP, which became a best seller about six months after its initial release.

Le Bon said the band deliberately set out to make waves with video after making a modest splash as one of the brighter lights of Britain's New Romantic movement, which brought costumes and dance music back into style after punk rock's grim reign.

Le Bon, at 25 the band's oldest member, recalls a meeting with managers Paul and Michael Berrow and fellow band members Roger Taylor, Andy Taylor, John Taylor (none of them related) and Nick Rhodes.

"We were sitting and talking and saying, 'Look, we need something like Pink Floyd had stereo ... They had this new device at their fingertips, and they were the first to really use it to its full extent."

"And we thought the same thing was happening in video — that so far, you've got this medium, and all that people were doing with it was either recorded live shows, or showing bits of old black-and-white silent movies or cartoons which have nothing to do with music."

"Nobody had ever really taken a band out into a setting, out into anywhere exotic or exciting — a mountain or under a waterfall. And we thought, let us go, let us be the first people to do it. Let us go try and pioneer video."

Le Bon doesn't mind the band's predominantly teen following, and he acknowledges that "Rio" was bound to attract the adolescent crowd.

But he believes the new "Seven and the Ragged Tiger" LP has established Duran Duran as something more than a teen band.

Building A Better Howard County For The Future

My name is Clayton McKinnon, Republican Candidate for County Commissioner, Precinct 3. I would like to take this opportunity to introduce myself to the people of Howard County. I have become acquainted with or familiar to many Howard County residents for 3 reasons: (1) my parents, Ray and Charlene McKinnon are long time residents of the Elbow Community; (2) I attended Forsan schools, (3) I have been involved in several community projects. Graduating from San Angelo State University, I taught school in Lynn County for two years and in Glasscock County for two years. Having lived and served in these counties gives me a better insight into the operation of a county. For the last five years I have been employed by Cosden Oil & Chemical Company. I have a lovely wife, ReeAnn, and two small children, Annie, 2 and Julie, 5. My wife is a teacher's aide. We are members of Hillcrest Baptist Church. My family comes second only to my God. I would like to see Howard County continue to grow and prosper. With a background in education, a desire to give back to the community, and a knowledge of the precinct I would represent, I feel I could make this growth possible. The most important issue in this election is the County Commission's salary. If elected, I will do everything possible to lower this salary. We are paying full time wages for a part time job. I would like to urge everyone to vote in the May primary and to be assured that when you vote for Clayton McKinnon, you vote FOR A BETTER HOWARD COUNTY.

Thank you, Clayton McKinnon

It's time LA had its own song

LOS ANGELES (AP) — There's "I Left My Heart in San Francisco," "New York, New York" and "Chicago," but let's face it, Los Angeles is an unsung city.

Fred Travalena, a comedian who plays Las Vegas and Tahoe and does imitations of singers, including Frank Sinatra, is out to change that. Travalena has written "L.A.'s Spot" and sings it the way Sinatra does "New York, New York." He even had the late Don Costa, who arranged "New York, New York," do the arrangement.

Travalena sings the virtues of Sunset and Vine, the Hollywood sign and Mulholland Drive. He's recording the song and marketing it along with a bumper sticker, button, poster and lyric sheet.

"I've spent tens of thousands of dollars on this," said Travalena. "I'm putting up all the money because I believe in the song."

Duplicate bridge

Big Springers enjoy game of skill

By RHONDA WITT
Lifestyle Writer

About 24 duplicate bridge players, sitting four to a table, were deep in concentration over their cards at the Country Club Wednesday afternoon. It was serious business and not a time for talking. During bidding, a few words were heard like "One Diamond," "Pass," "One Heart," and "Pass."

Bridge players in Big Spring are serious about the game. "It's a big operation all over the world," says Sue Wasson. "You just don't operate one of these clubs because you want to. You can't award points, unless you have a franchise (with American Contract Bridge League), which has to be renewed once a year."

Mrs. Wasson and Mrs. E.L. Powell organized and franchised the Big Spring Country Club Duplicate Bridge Club, July 3, 1959.

Duplicate bridge, unlike regular bridge, is a game of skill, not luck. Each foursome gets identical pre-dealt cards to play. After each group plays that set of cards, scores are tallied to see who played the best hand. The team with the best score for that game receives points.

"BRIDGE IS THE ONLY card game that has a code of ethics," Mrs. Wasson said. "It's the most fascinating game in the world."

During the last round of play, Mrs. Wasson and her partner Sue Corson were matched against the team of Nova Scudday and Joyce Ellis. Since she had made the highest bid, Mrs. Corson was "declarer" and her partner was "dummy". As dummy, Mrs. Wasson laid her cards on the table for all to see. When it was dummy's turn, the declarer told the dummy what to play.

To make sure players at each table receive the exact same hands, each player keeps her cards as she plays. The direction each team player places cards on the table after playing indicates who won the hand. After a game is completed, the cards are passed to the next table. The players who sits in the same direction as the previous player will play the exact same cards.

Duplicate bridge players play an average of 27 games each session. Each group of players is allowed 7½ minutes a game. "It knocks out all the time for gossip, because you've got to play the hand and move on," Mrs. Corson said. "We are serious players."

"To show you don't have to be the best player in the world, my daughter, Mrs. James Duncan, and Mrs. R.H. Weaver went to Midland when they were teenagers. They didn't have one master point between them and those kids won the open pairs. (The girls were playing life masters from throughout the country.) That is when their love for the game began," Mrs. Wasson said.

PLAYERS ARE RANKED sub master, junior master, master, national master, senior master, advance senior master and life master. Life master is the highest rank.

'I never think about them being young or old, just whether they are good or lousy players.'

Life masters are players who have attained the ranking by amassing 300 or more points with a certain number of red and gold points which have to be won at regional and national tournaments. Fourteen local people are life masters.

A new category, golden age master, has been started for people 70 years old or older, "because they are at that stage in life that they probably won't become life master," says Mrs. Corson.

"There is no age limit on the game. I never think about them being young or old, just whether they are good or lousy players," said Mrs. Wasson.

Several local men also enjoy playing duplicate bridge. "It's the kind of competition men find interesting once they get started," Mary Cowper said.

"It's hard to get men into a bridge game, but they are becoming more interested in it. My husband (Ed Corson) loves it," said Mrs. Corson.

Exercise makes childbirth easier

By RHONDA WITT
Lifestyle Writer

Fitness during pregnancy helps ensure a baby's health, helps keep the mother-to-be feeling well, and helps speed recovery following childbirth.

"One of the most important times for a woman to be in her top physical condition is during her pregnancy," said Debbie Churchwell, an aerobics instructor who taught pre-natal exercise classes and gave birth to her first child Chelsea, Oct. 29, 1983. Mrs. Churchwell taught six hours of aerobics a week and exercised until the day prior her daughter's birth.

During pregnancy, fitness is crucial because of the extra work and weight the woman must deal with. Before exercising, the first thing a pregnant woman should do is get her doctor's approval, Mrs. Churchwell says.

PEOPLE USED TO THINK a pregnant woman had to lay around and be lazy for nine months, but that's not true, she said. "A woman can carry on with a normal activity as long as her doctor permits it and she feels okay."

The three most important things to remember while exercising are warming up adequately, exercising correctly, and breathing properly. "If a person is already in shape, they can usually continue what they are doing, whether it's aerobic dancing, jogging or horseback riding," she says.

Exercise during pregnancy can increase strength, endurance and flexibility. It also helps with problems associated with pregnancy, like lower back pain and leg cramps. Exercise helps prevent varicose veins by improving blood circulation.

"A mistake some women make is that they think as soon as they get pregnant, they have to start exercising. If a woman hasn't been exercising, she shouldn't jump right into an exercise program the day she finds out she is pregnant. However, it's fine for her to start, but she needs to start out slower."

For a person who hasn't done any exercises for years, swimming and walking are best, Mrs. Churchwell said. "Once it is okay with the doctor, a woman needs discipline. The majority of women will have better discipline if they go to a studio."

"During a pregnancy, a person needs to be realistic about the condition her muscles are in. A lot of women don't think their bodies change during pregnancy, but they do. Each person's body reacts differently during pregnancy and a person needs to listen to her body. The condition of the muscles and the cardiovascular system, not how far along you are into your pregnancy, should determine what (exercise) you do and the number you do," she said.

A PREGNANT BODY takes longer to warm up than others. As pregnancy progresses, certain ligaments will begin to pull more as the woman exercises.

"If a particular exercise hurts, they (pregnant women) need to check to make sure they are doing it properly. If it continues to hurt and they are doing it correctly, they need to stop doing that exercise," Mrs. Churchwell said.

"A woman will have good days and bad days, but she shouldn't be lazy. She needs to adjust how much exercise she does according to the amount of energy she has."

Mrs. Churchwell also recommends, "if a woman is involved in an aerobic class, she does not want her heart rate over 160 beats per minute, because the fetus' heartbeat reacts off of hers, and that is just too much for the baby."

Exercise during pregnancy is not for weight control, Mrs. Churchwell says. "During pregnancy, you should never exercise on an empty stomach because you don't want to burn off calories." Nutrition and adequate rest also are important.

Weight gain during pregnancy differs. An exercise program does not guarantee that you will loose the weight immediately after having the baby.

"I thought if I exercised I wouldn't gain, but I did, and I thought the weight would fall right off, which it hasn't," Mrs. Churchwell said.

EXERCISING DURING a pregnancy helps the woman with childbirth. "I do not (believe) being physically fit means you are going to have a shorter labor. The difference between the fit and unfit woman is the fit woman doesn't tire as easily during labor. The fit woman also seems to recover and to bounce back faster after having a baby," she said.

Although exercising after giving birth helps in losing weight, it primarily helps the mother recover and feel good about herself. A woman can do some abdominal exercises in bed 48 hours after having a normal delivery, Mrs. Churchwell says. "The abdominal muscle has been stretched to capacity and the sooner she begins (abdominal exercises), the sooner she will strengthen and tighten those muscles and regain her figure."

Women can begin exercising again when the doctor releases them. "Some women feel well enough after two weeks to start exercising again. However, most women don't go back to a full exercise program until after six weeks."

Regular duplicate games are held at the Country Club every Wednesday from 10:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., every Thursday at 7:30 p.m., and every Friday at 1 p.m. A novice game is held at the country club from 10 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. on the second and fourth Fridays of the month.

"You don't call a bridge game off unless you have a good reason, because you are responsible to ACBL," Mrs. Wasson said. "We operate under franchise of ACBL and have to send a monthly report into ACBL."

DURING THE EARLY 1960S, Polly Mays and Sybil Smith suggested the club start a novice game in addition to the regular game. The novice group was named "Las Gallinas" (The Chickens). "We were too chicken to play with the big girls (the experts)," Mrs. Wasson said. Players can move from the novice game to the regular games when they believe they are ready.

The novice game is for people who want to learn to play duplicate bridge. A new novice group began Jan. 13. Before each novice game, the finer points of the game are discussed. Any person who doesn't have more than five master points registered with ACBL can play in the novice game. They don't have to be a Country Club member to play.

Novice players Janet Wolfe and Pat Moore says, duplicate bridge "keeps your mind agile and keeps the cobwebs out." While another novice, Carolyn Brown says "It's a nice past time that stimulates your mind."

More than 32 local bridge players will participate in a charity tournament at the Country Club, March 14, with proceeds designated to protect children from neglect and abuse. Donations from more than 200,000 ACBL members and other players will benefit the National Committee for Prevention of Child Abuse.

The event is one of the two annual benefit games sponsored across the country by the ACBL Charity Foundation. Identical hands will be played at more than 500 sites, almost simultaneously.

"All bridge players are welcomed," said Mrs. Wasson and Mrs. Corson. "It's a great opportunity for those not acquainted with playing identical hands dealt by a computer, and for experienced duplicate bridge players, to share their love of the game and help abused kids at the same time." Play will begin at 7:30 p.m. Winners will receive Master Point awards of ACBL. For information about the benefit or duplicate bridge, call Mrs. Corson at 267-6056 or Mrs. Wasson at 267-8362.

Home computer can be insured

By CHANGING TIMES The Kilinger Magazine Common sense, state law or the bank makes you insure the Chrysler and the Volkswagen. But what if you also drive computer disks — in an Apple, a Kaypro or an Epson?

Major insurance companies like Kemper and Safeco will add home computer endorsements to homeowner or renter policies. You can also buy coverage separately.

One such plan is Safeware, a policy underwritten by Fireman's Fund Insurance Co., sold by mail or phone from Columbus, Ohio, though some policies are not available in all states.

For about 55 cents to $1.50 a year per $100 coverage, depending on the insurer and the breadth of the policy, you get a promise to fix your equipment, replace hardware, software and accessories with equipment of similar function and capability, or settle in cash.

Don't sign up if the minimum coverage is far more than your system is worth. It's silly to pay $35 for a $2,000 rider on an inexpensive game player and a few programs.

But if your computer and associated software, printer, modem, and voice synthesizer are worth thousands of dollars, or if you use your equipment for business, it could pay to have computer coverage. Homeowners or renters policies often exclude property used to conduct business at home and in any event won't replace computer gear ruined by spilled coffee or sudden power surge.

In investigating computer insurance, make sure the policy pays on all kinds of accidental damage as well as theft or fire. Try to establish what replacement the insurance company will provide if your computer or its peripherals have to be replaced but the manufacturer has quit the business. Review warranties or guarantees to see whether you are already protected against various types of damage.

Don't expect the insurance company to buy any unfinished novels on disks that get destroyed. "There's no way we can pay for things of a creative nature," says Safeco's Ron Schlattman, vice-president of personal lines. "That's just too subjective."

Foundation names Maehl as campaign chairman

The Lone Star Chapter of the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation announced recently the appointment of Madeleine Maehl as spring chairman of its 1984 campaign in Big Spring.

The campaign will provide the community with information about cystic fibrosis, a genetic killer of children and young adults. It also will raise funds to support research, education and care programs.

Cystic fibrosis is difficult to diagnose and, at present, impossible to cure. Each day five babies are born with the disease which will clog and choke their lungs and inhibit their digestive process and growth. The disease takes the lives of three people each day.

For additional information about the campaign, call 267-2789.

1 1/2 million audited by IRS last year

Last year about 1 1/2 million Americans were audited by the Internal Revenue Service, according to money management expert Barbara Gilder Quint.

The odds of being audited increase if you are in business in which cash payments are common — for example, if you're a dentist, waitress, private-care nurse or taxi driver.

In addition, the IRS often zeros in on tax returns claiming the following kinds of items: large casualty loss claims, tax shelters, such as oil or real estate partnerships, and itemized deductions that are much larger than the typical amount taken by others in your income bracket.

Dr. Donohue

Sprinting-resting ratio important

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: You've written so much about long-distance running, and I appreciate what you say. However, I'm a sprinter, not interested in long-distance running. I feel I must train differently, but how? I know I can't run at my top sprint speed for very long, of course. I just don't have the energy. How much rest should I need between my sprints? — G.P.

You've hit on an important sports medicine concept, and you've spotted the essential point of it — energy. A sprinter, unlike the marathon runner, has different energy needs and energy sources. The sprinter gets his energy from ATP and CP present in his muscles. Those letters stand for adenosine triphosphate and creatine phosphate, respectively. Once those two fuels are used the sprinter cannot move his muscles well and may suffer cramps.

The marathoner, on the other hand, going at a less intense energy-burning rate, keeps going because he's constantly producing energy chemicals as he runs, and even after he has used up the initial fuels. This is the difference between aerobic and anaerobic exercise. Sprinting is anaerobic exercise. After a sprint, your body has its opportunity to replenish those two fuels I mentioned above. And that doesn't take long.

The work/rest ration for sprinters should be on a 1:3 basis. If you sprint for 15 seconds, you should rest for 45 seconds before sprinting again. But the rest period doesn't mean sitting down. You keep moving so that the circulating blood can remove all the lactic acid made while you were burning the ATP and CP muscle fuels. When you keep moving that takes place more efficiently.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: After an all-out effort at getting a rebound in basketball, my shoulder started hurting, even though I didn't hit anyone with it or fall on it. I continued hurting for the next few days. Finally, I saw a doctor. He took X-rays. I couldn't believe what he told me. He's a sports medicine guy. He told me I had a broken rib. How could that have happened? — F.J.

This has been reported. Here's how it happens. The neck muscles attach to the first rib. When you went up for that rebound (and you must have really gone for it with a vengeance) you contracted your neck muscles to their maximum. It was during that supreme contraction of the muscles that the rib snapped (at its weakest point).

The two cases of this I have read about healed completely in six weeks. Believe your doctor. The X-rays weren't lying. And wait for the healing to take place before you try basketball again. The same doctor might want to have you do some special shoulder muscle exercises after that. (I don't know what your injury is called, but let's call it rebound rib.)

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I understand the role of stretching muscles before exercises, but can you tell me the best way to do them? I wonder if they are needed in warm weather? — A.A.

The purpose of warm-ups is to make ligaments and tendons more pliable. That's what prevents sprains. You get them limber when their tissue is heated to above body-temperature levels. They're ideally pliable at 102 degrees.

If stretching is part of your warm-up program, you want to start out easy. Get truly warmed up. You can feel when this is happening. You don't want to try to stretch anything to the limits when you first start, but you want to be able to do that before you finish the warm-up.

Yes, you should stretch in warm weather, too. The outside temperature is hot, but the inner temperature still needs to be raised a degree or two. Easy running is a good way to generate the inner heat. It's good to do that before you begin the stretches, in fact.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I am 74 and am taking swimming lessons. I can't get my feet off the bottom of the pool. The instructor says I have to wear a life jacket. Why can't I get my feet off the bottom? —

I don't know what's going on. Is there anyone who can help this 74-year-old tyro swimmer?

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

OBEDIENT CHILD RECOVERS BETTER

Years ago a famous children's specialist said "When it comes to a serious illness, the child who has been taught to obey stands four times the chance of recovery than the spoiled and undisciplined child does." Those words made a lasting impression upon me. Up to that time I had been taught that one of the Ten Commandments was for children to obey their parents. Never had it entered my mind that a question of obedience might mean the saving or losing of a child's life. — J. Adam Clark

Dear Abby

Wife's choice of doctor eases her husband's pain

DEAR ABBY: This is concerning "Upset in Baltimore," who was upset because his wife went to a male doctor. He said he didn't want any other man looking at his wife's body.

You assured him that the doctor's interest in his wife's body was strictly professional, and if he couldn't deal with it, he should seek professional help.

You are wrong, Abby. When my wife and I were first married, I told her that I didn't want any other man to see her undressed, and that included her doctor. She assured me that her doctor had no romantic interest in her undressed, and it was no big deal.

We discussed it and came to the conclusion that if granting one small favor could make such a big difference in a marriage, why not do it? So with that in mind, my wife agreed to quit her doctor, and now she's going to a woman doctor just to make me happy.

SATISFIED IN NEW ORLEANS

DEAR SATISFIED: Congratulations on resolving your problem so easily. If granting "one small favor" could make such a big difference in your marriage, why didn't you grant your wife the "small favor" of letting her continue with her original doctor?

DEAR ABBY: I divorced my husband six years ago. We have one daughter who is 9 years old. (I'll call her Lisa.) I have done everything in my power to see that Lisa has everything she needs, and that she learns all the proper ways of a young lady.

My ex-husband has never taken much interest in Lisa, but his mother has. Too much, I think. Last Christmas I allowed Lisa to spend the day with my ex-mother-in-law and her relatives. This grandmother loves Lisa, but I think she has overstepped her bounds.

She recently sent my daughter stationery, envelopes, postage stamps and the addresses of all the relatives on her side, requesting that Lisa write them all thank-you notes for the Christmas presents they gave her.

Abby, Lisa thanked these people on Christmas Day when she received their gifts, and she even gave them each a big hug.

Does my daughter have to send a written thank-you note, or is my ex-mother-in-law out of line?

TEED OFF IN TENNESSEE

DEAR TEED OFF: Written thank-you notes are a must, even after a verbal thank-you and a "big hug." Don't be critical of your ex-mother-in-law. Your daughter is lucky to have a grandmother who cares.

DEAR ABBY: I am doing a survey for The Advocate, a daily newspaper in Red Deer, Alberta, Canada. (We carry your column.) When two people kiss, where do they put their noses?

KATHLEEN ENGMAN

DEAR KATHLEEN: Wherever they fit.

DEAR ABBY: For "Cramped in Burbank," who didn't know what to do about people who dropped in when her place was a mess, put this sign on your door: "If You Didn't Bother to Call, Don't Bother to Knock." I did. It works.

Short cut to pressing flowers given

If you want to give a pressed-flower gift, but don't have six weeks to work on the design, take a tip from a Family Circle magazine article. For a shortcut method, place a linen pressing cloth on top of blotters. Set iron at low heat (wool setting) and press it down hard for 10 minutes. Transfer blotters to a book and leave the material overnight between the pages.

Wedding

Mantooth-Stewart

Jill Loree Mantooth became the bride of Michael Shawn Stewart during a candlelight ceremony, Saturday evening at First Baptist Church of Levelland. The Rev. Ernest Stewart, Baptist minister in Garden City, Ks. and bridegroom's grandfather, officiated at the double-ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ricky Mantooth, Ackerly. The bridegroom is the son of Brenda Stewart, Houston, and the late Ernest Stewart.

The couple was wed before a spiral candelabra entwined with flowers and greenery. Ricky Mantooth of San Angelo, bride's brother and vocalist, and Jane Stroud, pianist, provided music for the ceremony.

The bride was given in marriage by her parents. She wore a formal-length satin gown accented by Chantilly, Venise and French Alencon lace. The bodice featured a high neckline with stand-up collar of Alencon lace on the silk illusion yoke. A wide capelet of Chantilly was held at the yoke by Alencon lace. The capelet extended over the shoulders to the waist. Pearl buttons accented the back yoke of Alencon lace and the natural waistline. Fitted sleeves of illusion was adorned with Alencon lace. They ended in cuffs of Chantilly lace secured by pearl buttons. The A-line skirt flowed into a cathedral-length train. It was appliqued and edged with Alencon lace. A Chantilly lace accented the front of the illusion overskirt. Overskirt sides were defined by three-tiered rows of Chantilly lace. The skirt featured Venise lace and wide bands of Chantilly lace extending from the waist to hem. The skirt was edged in a wide ruffle of Chantilly lace.

The bride wore a silk illusion veil held by a halo of miniature white flowers of Venise and silk and silk pearls. She carried a cascade of stephanotis and dusty rose, gray and white flowers on top of a pearl-covered Bible, which was used in her parents' wedding.

Following tradition, the bride carried her great-grandmother's wedding ring and a hankie belonging to the bridegroom's great-grandmother for something old, her wedding dress was something new, her grandmother's jewelry as something borrowed, and her mother's bridal garter as something blue.

Serving her sister as matron of honor was Julie Pumpfrey of Lubbock. Bridesmaids were Melayne Hendley of Brownfield, Paige Harston of Tahoka and Danna Mantooth of San Angelo, sister-in-law of the bride. Melinda Pumpfrey of Lubbock, niece of the bride, was flower girl. The bride and bridegroom's mothers served as candlelighters.

Neil Cavanaugh of Levelland was best man. Groomsmen were Bobby Roberts, Mac Becton, both of Lubbock, and Jeff Stephens of San Angelo. Ushers were Gary Pumpfrey, brother-in-law of the bride, and Tim Smith, both of Lubbock.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the church's Fellowship Hall. A three-tiered cake adorned with roses, lace and silk flowers of dusty rose and gray was served. The cake was topped with a bride and bridegroom figurine. The bride's table was covered with mauve cloth and centered by the bridal bouquet.

The bridegroom's table was draped with a gray cloth edged in rose lace. It was accented with a floral arrangement centered by a hammered copper replica of a South Plains oil rig.

A rehearsal dinner honoring the couple was held at the Spot in Levelland, March 9.

The bride graduated from New Home High School, South Plains College in Levelland, and attended Angelo State University in San Angelo. The bridegroom graduated from Levelland High School and attended South Plains College and Angelo State University.

Following a wedding trip, the couple will make their home in Levelland.

On Turning Heads by Gary Don

It sometimes seems that it takes forever to grow out a layered haircut. However, there are some steps that can be taken to reduce this awkward stage. An in-between haircut consists of cutting the hair back to just barely shoulder length. Thick hair can be cut in four separate sections that differ in length by a mere 1/8". This will encourage the hair to turn under by itself. The side sections are cut in accordance with the back but in only two sections. Angle-snipped bangs are cut to the bridge of the nose while the top is combed forward and cut to blend.

In order to keep your hair and skin looking and feeling its best, regular visits to a hair salon are recommended. There is no substitute for the knowledge and skill offered by hair care professionals. At LA CONTESSA, our goal is concerned with providing the utmost in professional skin and hair care enabling your skin and hair to be at its healthiest and most beautiful. We are conveniently located at 1508 Marcy. We are here Tues-Sat. For an appointment, call us at 267-2187.

Beauty tips prevent bags under eyes

To avoid bags under your eyes, try these beauty tips.

* Skip heavy eye creams at night — they clog the pores and trap fluids. Instead, apply a light cream during the day, when lines are apt to form.

* Remove all traces of eye makeup before going to sleep to avoid clogged pores.

Q. Finding out you bought a lemon on four wheels is one thing, but when you've got a new three bedroom, two bath lemon with fractured foundation, that's a lemon of a different magnitude. Is there any protection for the homeowner who's found he's purchased a split level disaster?

A. At least 34 states have adopted what is known as an implied warranty of habitability, which is the home buyer's safeguard that requires all newly constructed houses to be free from defects caused by poor or sloppy workmanship, engineering miscalculations, substandard materials and the improper installation of plumbing, electrical work, heating and cooling systems. Your realtor can tell you if your state has adopted the warranty which, by the way, also applies to apartment dwellers.
