Teen dies in wreck

A 15-year-old Howard County boy died Sunday afternoon when the gocart he was driving wandered onto a roadway and was struck by a pickup truck about four miles east of Big Spring.

Services for Michael Dewayne Crenshaw of Route 2, a high school student, are pending at Nalley-Pickle Funeral Home.

Crenshaw was pronounced dead at the scene of the accident at 4:05 p.m. Sunday by Justice of the Peace Willie Grant of Coahoma

According to Department of Public Safety reports, the pickup was driven by Leonard Shane Slaton, 18, of 2509 Ann Drive. Slaton was not injured in the accident.

Both vehicles were travelling westbound on County Road 26, the old Airport Road, about two-tenths of a mile east of State Highway 350 when the accident occurred, DPS reports said.

Winds near 50 mph

Staff and wire reports Afternoon joggers and families out for a weekend drive were hit with blowing dust and high winds which brought near zero visibility on area roads Sunday.

A rapidly moving cold front which ripped through the state Sunday was blamed for the winds which kicked up dust on bare West Texas fields.

According to a spokesman at the U.S. Agricultural Research Service, winds gusted up to 49 miles per hour between noon and 3 p.m. Sunday. Winds subsided somewhat later in the day but dust remained in the air throughout the evening.

Although skies early this morning were clear and calm, the National Weather Service was forecasting northwesterly winds of 15 to 25 miles per hour by this afternoon. This afternoon should see a high in upper 50s or low 60s. By tonight temperatures should fall into the lower 30s. Winds tonight will be northwesterly at 5 to 10 miles per hour. By Tuesday, Big Spring should again see warmer temperatures with highs near 70 and westerly winds, 10 to 20 miles per hour. Sunday's cold front brought snow, hail, and tornadoes to other parts of the state.

North Central Texas was pelted by marble-sized hail from severe thunderstorms that produced a tornado late Sunday afternoon which overturned a mobile home and upended a radio tower. Possible tornadoes were also reported in a severe thunderstorms late Sunday in Zavala and Dimmit counties in South Texas.

Thunderstorms and showers continued to soak the coastal plains, and sections of Southeast and East Texas this morning as a cold front extended from the northeast corner of the state to the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

Meanwhile, snow fell overnight in the Panhandle, but accumulations were generally limited to one inch or less. Authorities reported roads in the area were open early today, although snow forced closure of some highways in the Oklahoma Panhandle.

Earlier Sunday, strong winds gusting up to 60 mph kicked up dust storms that buffeted West Texas.

Tornadoes touched down in Tarrant and Parker counties between 5:30 p.m. and 6 p.m., sheriff's spokesmen said.

A duplex in Keller was damaged when a tornado or strong winds toppled a microwave tower onto the structure, police said. No one was at home when the tower, owned by Blackhawk Cable Co., crashed through the middle of the building, blocking the street, investigators said

MoPac wants to close agency

The Missouri Pacific Railroad is seeking permission from the Texas Railroad Commission to close the Big Spring agency office, according to MoPac and commission officials. MoPac, which also has asked permission to close agency offices in five other Texas cities including

Odessa and Austin, is trying to consolidate its customer service operations through its Dallas office, a Dallas MoPac official said

The trainyard and other operations in Big Spring would not be cut, said Willard Schultz, regional director of public relations for MoPac in Dallas.

Oil mergers: Survival of the fittest

Congress investigates merger trend

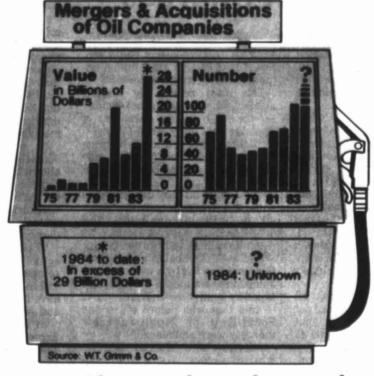

WASHINGTON (AP) - Alarmed by a gusher of oil company mergers, a half dozen congressional committees are launching investigations into the trend while lawmakers are pressing legislation that would put pending mergers on hold.

At least six congressional committees have scheduled hearings later this month and early in April, questioning whether the so-called "mega-mergers" concentrate too much economic power in major oil companies.

Meanwhile, a proposal to put pending oil company mergers on hold for at least six months was being readied for floor debate in the Senate, possibly this week. A broader proposal is expected to be introduced in the House later this week.

A measure of congressional distress over the mergers is the fact that the Senate proposal is being offered by Sen. Bennett Johnston, D-La., long one of the oil industry's staunchest allies in Congress. Ordinarily more inclined to sponsor pro-industry legislation, Johnston instead is complaining of "Wall Street cowboys" interested in no one but themselves.

The furor follows a string of merger announcements, including Standard Oil Co. of California's See Congress page 2-A

Fina, Champlin close deal

DALLAS - American Petrofina, Inc., and Champlin Petroleum Co. of Fort Worth, a wholly owned subsidiary of Union Pacific Corp. of New York, said Fina has purchased 171 Champlin service stations in 11 southwest and midwest states.

Fina owns the Cosden Oil & Chemical Co. of Big Spring.

The undisclosed purchase price consists of a cash payment by Fina and various undivided interests in Fina's Gravevine, Texas, and Tampa and Port Everglades, Fla., petroleum product terminals.

Fina also announced the opening of a new district sales office in Sioux Falls, S.D. The newly acquired stations are located in Oklahoma, Texas, Louisiana, Kansas, Missouri, Iowa, Illinois, Nebraska, North Dakota, South Dakota and Minnesota.

Fina spokesmen said the company plans to mail Fina credit cards to all valid CHamplin credit card holders.

Many of the more than 650 Champlin identified stations supplied by independent Champlinbranded jobbers will be switching to Fina.

NEW YORK (AP) - America's oil giants are on a match-making spree like none before. Three of the best-known names - Texaco, Mobil and Chevron - have shelled out a combined $29 billion to sweep competitors off their feet already this year.

This joining of corporate hands is arousing antitrust passions in Congress, but many energy analysts believe the merger trend raises more pressing questions:

Does the combining of big oil companies make economic sense? Will it mean less money to spend on oil exploration? Will supplies be short as a result?

Daniel Yergin, president of Cambridge Energy Research Associates in Cambridge, Mass., said it was too early to know the answers. But it is clear already, he said, that traditional antitrust fears about oil mergers miss the point.

An estimated 40,000 U.S. companies are involved in the exploration, production, transmission, refining, distribution and marketing sides of the oil business. Although three-quarters of the nation's gasoline is refined by the top 25 oil companies, none currently holds as much as 8 percent of the market.

"The more important question is whether there will be a narrowing of geological ideas," Yergin said. Will fewer oil giants roaming the oil frontier mean fewer ideas about where to find new deposits - and thus fewer exploration successes?

"I don't think there is a clear answer there yet," he said. Some in Congress disagree. Sen. Bennett Johnston, a Louisiana Democrat usually considered an ally of the oil industry, is pressing for a six-month ban on takeovers of domestic oil companies with more than 100 million barrels of proven reserves. That means the 50 largest companies would be off limits to buyers.

Johnston's proposal would halt, at least temporarily, the largest proposed takeover in corporate history: the $13.3 billion buyout of Gulf Corp. by Standard Oil Co. of California as well as Mobil Corp.'s proposed $5.7 billion takeover of Superior Oil Co.

Since the ban would apply only to oil industry mergers announced after Feb. 28, it would not affect Texaco's recently completed $10.1 billion takeover of Getty Oil Co., which was announced in early January

Johnston contends that the big oil companies, by burdening themselves with billions of dollars in debt to buy competitors, will have less to spend on oil exploration

"For the consumer, that will mean reduced supplies and higher prices," he said. "For the country, it will mean more oil imports. ... For the economy, it will mean increased pressure on credit markets and a threat to the economic recovery.'

Few economists or energy analysts think the consequences would be so grave, but most agree the outcome will depend partly on how well the merging companies fit together.

George Keller, the chairman of Standard of California, said shortly after announcing his company's bid for Gulf on March 5 that the merger would permit more efficient oil refining and marketing. As a result, he said, gasoline and other fuel pro-

PET PROTECTOR - Vicky Downey, 22, strokes her pet rat, Yentl, who is credited with saving her owner from a bedroom fire.

Rodent saves owner from fire

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) - Until a year ago, Vicky Downey had no time for rats. Now the 22-year-old nurse's aide says she owes her life to one.

Ms. Downey said she was awakened early Saturday morning by the licking and pawing of her pet rodent, Yentl, warning her of a fire.

An electric blanket on Ms. Downey's bed was smoking, and firefighters said a smoldering mattress beneath her would have been engulfed in flames within minutes.

"My room was filling up with smoke. In a normal situation, most animals run from fire. I don't know why she didn't freak out. But she woke me up,' Ms. Downey said.

The fire was restricted to the blanket and a mattress. Ms. Downey was treated for smoke inhalation but was otherwise unharmed. The credit, she said, goes to Yentl.

"I don't think she could be trained to do what she did. I think it was a natural reaction. In my own mind, I feel she has a respect for me as her owner,' Ms. Downey said.

But firefighters were skeptical of the story, Ms. Downey said.

"When I told them, they looked at me as if to be saying 'What kind of drugs is she on?' ''

Fire Lt. James Beauregard said it did not appear that Yentl had chewed cords in the electric blanket, nor were there any indications the rodent had been burned. Damage from the fire was estimated at about $400.

"I was in a fire a few years ago and I was burned. All of that came back to me Saturday," Ms. Downey said.

She said Yentl was in a cage at the foot of her bed when the fire began.

said.

The cage was covered with a blanket to keep the animal warm because Yentl has been suffering a respiratory ail-ment. But the cage door was unlatched, since Yentl is allowed to run free most of the time, she said

After being awakened at about 5:30 a.m., Ms. Downey said, she grabbed her pet, unplugged the blanket and called firefighters.

The woman said she bought the Norwegian black-hooded rat from a pet store about five months ago for $2.65 because she wanted a furry companion.

'They usually don't sell them as pets. They're usually sold as snake food. I had a friend who had a rat and I saw how good they could be as pets. So I got one. I've had snakes and frogs as pets before," she said.

"Hamsters and gerbils are untrainable and they bite," Ms. Downey said. "Rats like this won't. She's very affectionate and stays where I tell her.'

Yentl got her name from the movie starring Barbra Streisand, in which the actress pretended to be a boy.

"Rats are misunderstood like that. Most people have a distorted impression of them," Ms. Downey said. "They can be good pets, very affectionate and they can be trained.

As a reward for heroism, Ms. Downey gave Yentl part of a steak and baked potato dinner Saturday night. For dessert, Yentl was treated to her favorite - peanut butter candies.

"Rats don't have a long life span," Ms. Downey said. "When she dies, I'm thinking about having her stuffed. She saved my life.'

The Reagan administration has not taken a public position on proposals in Congress to block oil company mergers. But Donald Hodel, the energy secretary, said last week he was not concerned by the merger trend. "It seems to me that the new, merged company now has a larger resource base, and if it does not wish to deplete that resource base, it will have to go out and explore at a faster rate," Hodel said. It is not clear, however, whether the huge cost of these mergers will allow the companies to spend as much on oil exploration together as they would have separately.

But it also said that of all the oil industry acquisitions since 1970, only one resulted in clearly greater efficiencies. While Metzenbaum's proposed five-year ban fell by a wide margin, Johnston's six-month moratorium failed by a narrower margin - 52-42 - and that was before either the Socal-Gulf or Mobil-Superior mergers were announced.

'What we're seeing, unfortunately, is the survival of the fittest,' said Urvan Sternfels, president of the National Petroleum Refiners Association mission, the likely target of the antimerger bills.

In offering his amendment, Johnston noted that "I am not known to be a senator who is anti-oil company." But he said the reason for his industry support "is getting wells drilled, getting production" and mergers don't move toward that goal.

"The end result of this (merger) activity will be fewer and bigger oil companies," Johnston said. "They will be much more in debt, and will have less money for finding new oil

Singer kicks the horse

NEW YORK - Singer Sam Moore, who rose to fame wih soul hits in the late '60s when he and Dave Prater performed as Sam and Dave, is back on stage again - free of a cocaine and heroin habit that he says cost him up to $400 a day. Moore, now 48, credits for his recovery an experimental drug treatment program using naltrexone, an anti-opiate, and the "tough love" of his manager and companion, Joyce McRae.

"The decision to get off drugs is so lonely," says Moore in an interview with People magazine in his Encino home. "You need love and help from somebody who's willing to play hardball with you for your life."

Of the days he was "hooked," Moore tells of "hanging out in hit houses."

"My hair was falling out, my skin was like elephant hide," he says. "But you don't really care.'

"It changed when I met someone who cared and had the guts to get into the mind-bending battle you have to fight to help an addict."

Sam and Dave, known for "Soul Man," broke up in 1981. Now, free of drug dependency for the first time in 15 years, Moore is working again - in Las Vegas, in Europe and in the recording studio. Dave, meanwhile, is still performing, with a new Sam. "When I sing, I can 'feel' it again," he says.

Justice enters Meese probe

WASHINGTON - The Department of Justice is investigating whether a special prosecutor is needed to probe Edwin Meese's finances, but the candidate for attorney general says he'll fight to win confirmation despite the "baseless insinuations."

The Justice Department decision came after top officials, participating in an extraordinary series of weekend meetings, said they would open an inquiry to determine if a special prosecutor should investigate a $15,000, interest-free loan Meese received from a former White House aide. EDWIN MEESE Meese had failed to list the loan on his 1981 and 1982 financial disclosure statements, as required by the Ethics in Government While Reagan said through a spokesman that he was "solidly behind Mr. Meese," Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., immediately agreed with Meese's request to postpone Senate hearings into his nomination.

This effectively stalls any Senate vote for several weeks at least.

Meese had been scheduled to testify at a second round of hearings set to begin Tuesday before the committee.

2 AWACS sent to Sundan

WASHINGTON - The United States has sent two AWACS radar planes to Egypt following charges by neighboring Sudan that Libya was responsible for bombing Sudan's largest city, a Pentagon spokesman confirmed today.

The spokesman, Lt. Cmdr. John Woodhouse, said the sophisticated surveillance jets "landed in Egypt this morning." He said the AWACS, along with "a number of support aircraft," will be based outside Cairo.

'The Egyptian and Sudanese governments have requested our assistance to bolster the capability of Egyptian and Sudanese air defense systems

The United States last year dispatched AWACS aircraft to Egypt and Sudan to help counter a perceived Libyan threat against Sudan as well as to monitor fighting by Tripoli-backed forces in Chad.

In addition, four of the big surveillance planes have been flying regular patrols in strategically vital Saudi Arabia.

Sudanese officials have charged that Friday's bombing raid, which killed five people in Omdurman, was conducted by a single Soviet-built Tu-22 owned by Libya. The fighter dropped five bombs on Omdurman, a city of 300,000 across the Nile River from Khartoum, according to the Sudanese Foreign Ministry.

The bombing raid, which damaged two houses and an administrative building of the state radio, pro-mpted Sudan to order a full military alert, Sudanese officials said.

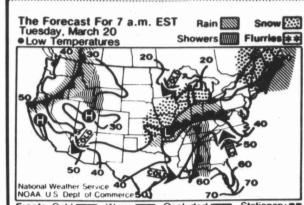

Egypt has sent troops to Sudan under the terms of a 1976 mutual defense pact, the officials said. Egyptian newspapers said the soldiers sent to Sudan included officers to serve at the military operations center.

Hart leads in Illinois

CHICAGO - Walter F. Mondale and Gary Hart scoured Illinois for last-minute votes in the state's the Democratic rivals joined the Rev. Jesse Jackson in a direct appeal for support from black voters. One public opinion poll pointed to a narrow Hart lead in Illinois's Tuesday primary, the biggest prize so far on the campaign calender. Another poll taken nationwide and released today showed Hart with a narrow lead over President Reagan, while Mondale badly trailed the president in a two-way matchup. Mondale easily won the Puerto Rico primary on Sunday, taking 99 percent of the vote. Hart did not contest Mondale in Puerto Rico. Both Mondale and Hart were campaigning today in downstate Illinois. For his part, Jackson said his campaign has placed him at the "apex of the triangle" in the three-way nomination fight, assuring that the Democratic Party will not take his supporters for granted at its nomination convention this summer.

Winter's last hurrah

A massive storm system moved out of the Rockies on this last full day of winter, spinning off thunderstorms across Texas and the lower Mississippi valley and piling snow on the southern Plains.

Heavy snow piled up in the mountains of southern Colorado and the high plains of Kansas and Nebraska

Up to 18 inches of snow fell at Rye, Colo., and 11 inches at Grand Island, Neb., while La Junta, Colo., was covered with 7 inches and Lincoln, Neb., with 5 inches

Freezing rain coated trees and power lines in Kansas City, Mo., causing widespread power outages

A least five deaths were attributed to the weather over the weekend. Three people drowned in Missouri Sunday when a pickup truck was swept off a bridge by a flood-swollen stream. A woman was killed in Nebraska Sunday when her car spun out of control on a snowy road. A skier was killed in Colorado Saturday when an avalanche swept him away

Winter snow storm warnings were issued today for parts of Colorado, Oklahoma, Nebraska and all of Kansas. Missouri, Iowa and central Illinois were covered by travelers advisories.

The same storm spewed thunderstorms across northern Texas into Arkansas and a half dozen tornadoes touched down north of the Dallas-Fort Worth area with high winds and hailstones, some the size of baseballs.

Two mobile homes were overturned at Stephenville, Texas, and at Dallas, 1.6 inches of rain fell Sunday.

Flash flood watches were set up for southern Missouri and northern Arkasnsas.

Light snow continued to plague most of the lower Great Lakes and New England.

Today's forecast called for snow to spread across the Central Plains into the mid Mississippi valley while thunderstorms erupted at scattered locations over the lower Mississippi valley and western Ohio River valley.

Light snow was expected to linger over the northeastern corner of the nation while rain showers moved across the Pacific Northwest.

Cold temperatures were expected to persist over the northern states with highs in the 30s stretching from the Plains through the Great Lakes to New England. Readings in the 50s and 60s will stretch from the northwestern states into the Southern Plains and then across the country to the mid-Atlantic states.

Southern California was expected to remain in the 70s while the Gulf coast states were to basked in the 70s and 80s.

Peace talks enter 2nd week

LAUSANNE - Sharp disputes over political powersharing proposals were reported today as Lebanon's rival factional leaders entered the second week of their national reconciliation conference.

A formal session of the conference broke up after 15 minutes Sunday night, followed by a round of informal consultations involving President Amin Gemayel and chief delegates of rival Moslem and Christian factions.

A new plenary session initially was scheduled for midday today, then rescheduled for late afternoon. There were conflicting predictions about whether the talks would stall or produce at least the outlines of an agreement.

Syria's observer to the talks, Vice President Abdul Halim Khaddam, who is said to be playing a key role in efforts to reshape the Lebanese government, held private talks today with leftist Druse leader Walid Jumblatt and his fellow opposition leaders in what observers suggested was an effort to coax more flexibility from them.

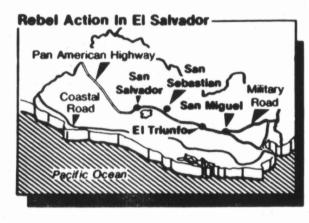

There have been persistent reports that Gemayel, a Maronite Christian, had received fresh assurances of Syrian backing for a government proposal billed as a 'historic compromise.'

Sources said Khaddam was pressing for a compromise plan that would contain at least a broad outline of political reforms as well as steps designed to consolidate a cease-fire agreement reached a day after the conference began last Monday.

However, widespread fighting was reported continuing in Beirut today between Christian and Moslem militiamen. Police said two people were killed and 13 wounded overnight as the combatants fired rockets, mortars and grenades in and around the capital.

Over the weekend, police said at least 15 civilians were killed and 45 wounded.

The reconciliation conference was reported to be stalled by the reluctance of pro-government Christian leaders to yield to opposition demands for changes in the power-sharing formula under which public offices were allocated on a religious basis for the past four decades

Elections held amid war

SAN SALVADOR - The presidential election campaign entered its final week today after the main candidates held large rallies and tried to depict their rivals as extremists.

The Christian Democratic nominee, Jose Napoleon Duarte, said in a speech to 2,000 supporters Sunday that he is the only candidate who can stem the country's violence because his two main opponents lack the will to control death squads.

Duarte said he was referring to Roberto d'Aubuisson and Francisco Jose Guerrero, rightists representing different parties in the March 25 balloting. D'Aubuisson, who is with the Republican Nationalist involved with death squads.

Alliance, has repeatedly denied allegations that he is

Let businesses be own guides

Another big oil company merger is in the works.

Standard Oil Co. of California (Chevron) proposes to buy Gulf Oil Corp. It would be a $31.2 billion takeover - largest in corporate history.

The Chevron offer follows on the heels of three other major deals in the petroleum industry. Texaco Inc. recently bought out Getty Oil Co; U.S. Steel Corp. bought Marathon Oil Co.; Du Pont purchased Conoco Inc., and Occidental Petroleum Corp. bought Cities Service Co.

The Chevron-Gulf merger would combine the nation's biggest gasoline marketer and third-largest oil company. And, if it is approved by government anti-trust experts, it will probably set off a series of other takeovers in the industry

There are those who say these mergers are not good for America, that they mean oil companies are spending their cash flow for buying each other out rather than exploring for new petroleum reserves. They say big companies are finding it cheaper to buy oil reserves than to search for them

Oil experts deny that exploration has been neglected. They say the executives of the oil companies are in a better position to know what is good for their companies than politicans

Nevertheless, there are signs political opposition to big oil mergers is mounting. Sen. John F. Seiberling, D-Ohio, recently introduced legislation that would place a moratorium on mergers among the top oil companies. The issue was described by observers as made to order for an election year. It is always popular to campaign against big oil.

We don't believe any punitive legislation is necessary. The anti-trust laws on the books since the days of Teddy Roosevelt are entirely adequate to cope with any threat of monopoly in the oil industry, if there is any such threat.

As long as there are at least two separate oil companies in true competition, consumers will be protected.

The deregulation of the airline industry is a good example of this sort of free competition. Deregulation may eventually reduce the number of airlines but travel costs will be cheaper because of increased overall efficiency. The fat is being rendered out of airline operating budgets by the fires of competitive pricing.

We hope Congress doesn't panic. We would like to see the government keep out of these transactions, unless there is evidence of collusion to interfere with free trade. Let the businessmen make the business decisions. Business decisions made within the parameters of a free, unmanaged; unregulated market system are likely to be better for all of us than business decisions made in the context of politics.

Labor official blows whistle

WASHINGTON Edward J. Bergin is a senior Labor Department official who has chosen a unique way to challenge his superiors in the federal government. He has written a book excoriating several agencies, and the Reagan administration in general, for failing to protect the American public from pollutants in the environment.

"How to Survive in Your Toxic Environment" is being published in June by Avon Books.

"I'm expecting trouble, and I know I'll be subjected to tremen-dous pressure," he told my associate Indy Badhwar. "But I'm sick and tired of our government agencies continuing to act as if chemicals have more rights than people.'

Bergin, 42, is currently a senior policy adviser in the Occupational Safety and Health Administration. earning about $58,600 a year. He could continue his career and retire comfortably, but he has decided to fight to revive programs, which were canceled by the Reagan administration but which he believes are essential for the public's safety.

In 1980, Bergin participated in an exhaustive study of workers disabled by harmful chemicals. The 138-page report to Congress

nearly 2 million Americans are totally disabled by worksite chemicals, gases and dust.

"The amazing thing we found," Bergin said. "is that only one out of 20 people suffering from occupational diseases received anything from the state workers' compensation system which is supposed to take care of work-related injuries and diseases. When we looked closely at the compensation system, we found that while it may pay for a broken leg on the job, it is designed not to pay for occupational diseases.

Yet most state laws preclude workers from suing their employers for diseases contracted on the job. "The only thing they can get is workers' compensation, but the laws are rigged to prevent them from collecting," Bergin said. He was appalled at the widespread ignorance about the compensation program, not only among workers but among physicians and lawyers who had little or no training in toxic chemical cases.

With the Labor Department's blessing, Bergin and his colleagues teach workers in seven selected states about toxic substances and workers' legal rights

The Reagan administration killed these programs, abolished Bergin's job and transferred him to OSHA.

'My experience convinced me that the American people were genuinely concerned about birth defects, chemicals in drinking water, toxic waste dumps and food additives," Bergin said. "I had also seen enough in my 12 years in Washington to convince me that the government was not doing its job in protecting people or the environment. I wrote my book to give people who have problems with chemicals the information they need to help themselves until the government gets its act together."

The book is a veritable training manual for workers, telling them how to make the government respond to their requests and how to find helpful information buried in government files.

Footnote: A detailed treatment of Bergin's story will appear in the April issue of Family Circle DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I would like to get married, but I had a very bad experience with a broken engagement with my boyfriend a year ago and I am paralyzed with fear that it might happen again. How can I get over this fear and get on with my life? - J.C.T.

DEAR J.C.T.: I do not know your full situation, of course. However, first of all it might be helpful for you to analyze as carefully as you can what went wrong in your engagement. For example, some people have a deep hunger to be loved by someone else — so much so that their emotions take over and blind them to the realities of the situation. Other people have a very unclear idea of what they expect from a future husband (or wife) and from marriage, and need to think this through more carefully.

But the most important thing I can tell you is that God has a perfect plan for you, and you can trust him to lead you. We sometimes feel like it is all up to us when it comes to the big decisions of life - such as the question of our marriage partner. But God has his will in these matters, and we need to trust him and let him guide us. Listen: If God leads you to your future husband, you need not fear. God knows your needs better than you ever could, and his choice will be exactly the person that you need. "So do not fear, for I am with you; do not be dismayed, for I am your God. I will strengthen you and help you; I will uphold you with my righteous right hand" (Isaiah 41:10).

That is why I urge you to give your life to Christ. Commit yourself to him — including your future, whatever it may hold for you. I Then seed God's will in everything - including your marriage (if it is God's will for you to marry).

How will God lead you to the right husband? First of all, if you know Christ you will want Texas.

The area south of Interstate 10, encompassing the towns of Balmorhea, Marfa and Marathon, is the real frontier. Stoney, thorny, scruffy and intimidating, the land just fits the image called up when one refers to West Texas.

There are no malls, no 7-Elevens, javelinas scurry across the roads even the hearty Dairy Queens fear to venture into that part of the state.

To me West Texas is unconquerable, and in that part of the state, that opinion stands up well. Here in our part of Texas, we have relative convenience, farms and an occasional oasis to break up the land's dominance. But try to find that south of I-20 and one won't have any luck.

After pulling out of Chicken Charlie's fabulous restaurant in Balmorhea, a traveler will find little grace or forgiveness among the cacti, rocks and yucca plants. One can tell the land easily has won And I find that appealing.

Even though the land lacks utility and is hardly prime property, it does command respect because man has not been able to ruin it or deface it. East of Dallas acres of unfinished condominiums stand rotting because of a bank failure. They're ugly and man caused it. One won't find that happening near Marathon.

The land there is still wild - and free. There is something romantic and utterly right about that. I wish the "real" West Texas a long and happy life.

Today in History

By The Associated Press Today is Monday, March 19, the 79th day of 1984. There are 287 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History: On March 19, 1920, the Senate, for the second time, rejected the Treaty of Versailles, setting the stage for a decade of U.S. isolationism. On this date:

In 1831, the first bank robbery in the United States occurred when $245,000 was taken from the City Bank in New York.

In 1925, the Warren G. Harding 11/2-cent stamp went on sale in Washington, D.C.

In 1942, men between the ages of 45 and 64 were ordered to register for non-military duty as White House news secretary and the following day announced he was running for the U.S. Senate from California.

In 1964, Pierre Salinger resigned

And in 1981, during a dress rehearsal for launch of the space shuttle Columbia, one worker was killed, another mortally injured and four others were nearly asphyxiated when they entered a compartment filled with nitrogen.

Ten years ago: Sen. James Buckley, R-C-NY, called on President Richard Nixon to resign in the wake of the Watergate scandal.

Five years ago: Speaker Tip O'Neill announced that "history was being written" with the first telecast of a House session.

WASHINGTON - The latest numbers show the economy overheating rapidly. It would be appropriate for the Federal Reserve Board to hit the boom over the head with an unambiguous warning.

But foreign connections and political considerations make it risky to use such crude measures. So Chairman Paul Volcker must try to achieve large effects by subtle signals. We are back to fine-tuning. The rapid decrease in unemployment is perhaps the most striking sign of economic takeoff. The jobless figure has come down from 10.6 percent in November 1982 to 7.7 percent last month. That drop is much faster than the norm for previous recoveries, and exceeds expectations by far.

By the middle of this year, labor markets will be tightening. Unions will be in position to bid up wages in such basic industries as autos. Thus any rise in living costs will be transmitted throughout the system. Such rises are most inevitable. Food and petroleum prices have been firming as demand picks up all over the industrialized world. More important, final sales in this country have been outpacing inventory growth.

An inventory explosion, to keep stock abreast of demand, is likely either this guarter or next. There lies the explanation for the expectation - voiced recently by Chairman Martin Feldstein of the Council of Economic Advisers - that growth in gross national product would soar from a rate of 4.9 percent in the fourth quarter of last year to 6 percent in the first quarter of this year.

The classic way to deal with such a spurt is a warning shot from the Fed. A slight hike in the rediscount rate, which the Fed charges to banks for covering their loans, is almost ideal for that purpose. It slows down the economy by raising the cost of credit to business and

Dr. Donohue

Two kinds of esophagus spasm

Dear Dr. Donohue: I've been diagnosed as having a spastic esophagus. It started with difficulty in swallowing water. There was no pain. My doctor inserted some kind of disc down my esophagus in order to stretch it. He said the problem was with a muscle. I feel better. Can you tell me just what I am suffering from? - N.M.J.

I can tell you about two kinds of esophageal spasm. One is achalasia, spasm of the lower esophageal sphincter. Food is pushed down the esophagus by movements of the muscular wall.

Right at the point where it enters the stomach lies an especially strong ring of muscle. That's the lower esophageal sphincter. It alternately relaxes to permit entry of food into the stomach and closes to stop stomach acid from being squirted upward to irritate esophagus tissue. In achalasia, this band of muscle fails to relax, goes into spasm and stays closed. Food sticks there, so there is difficulty in swallowing, even water, as you mention. One treatment for this is the one your doctor tried, stretching the sphincter with a special instrument introduced into the lower esophagus area.

A second kind of esophageal spasm (I hope F.L. is reading) is called diffuse esophageal spasm. Here the entire length of the esophagus goes into painful contractions causing knife-like or crushing pain when swallowing. Unlike achalasia, where spasms are intermittent, in diffuse esophageal spasm the problem is more chronic.

The diffuse spasm problem can be treated with medicines like probantheline or nitroglycerine - the same nitroglycerine used for angina pain, although here for a different reason. Good success has been reported in use of the inflatable instrument used for sphincter dilation, frequently affording years of relief from sphincter muscle spasm.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I am constantly very tense and when I bought a herbal supplement called Valerian root, it helped. I wonder why medical science has overlooked drugs from plants. For example, Rauwolfia, which has calming effects also. But most doctors won't prescribe it. They are biased against plants. What do you think of this? - R.M.

I don't think doctors are the least bit biased against plants. If they were they'd have to toss out most of the medicines they prescribe almost daily. The Rauwolfia you mention is the basis for the drug reserpine, which is used to control high blood pressure. They even use bark; the bark of the Chinchona tree gives us quinine. Antibiotics like penicillin and cephalothin are products of molds. It's hard not to find a drug which wasn't first extracted from some living matter.

Medical science does look askance at some of the extravagant claims made for certain herbals, even in cases where they may provide the basis for perfectly legitimate drugs. If claims can be substantiated by rigorous tests they would be accepted. I cannot comment on Valerian root. I don't know of any specific drug derived from it, although my dictionary does identify it as having medicinal properties. I like the name. It's nicely euphonious. If I find out more about it I'll let vou know.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters.

"From what the research tells us about what an infant is sensitive to, is attentive to, responds to, you, the parent, are ideal. You have physical characteristics that babies like to look at. So that you really are a 'supertoy'," he said.

Finally, he said, parents shouldn't be overly concerned if their child doesn't fall within the suggested guidelines for development, although they should check with their baby's doctor if they have any questions or worries.

I have never refused my husband, but he knows how I feel about sex and he doesn't bother me very often. I thank God for such a kind and understanding husband.

I offered to give him a divorce, but he said he loves me and doesn't want one. He also said he didn't want to take a chance on another woman - she might deny him sex all the time.

He's not very demanding, so I try to accommodate him now and then. I really do love him

YOUR FAN IN ARIZONA

By CAROL DEEGAN NEW YORK (AP) - Today, many parents are concerned about their infant's mental development. There is talk of the "superbaby" - the bright, advanced child — and the use of such things as flash cards to promote early reading and mathematical skills.

But few children will turn out to be true geniuses, says Robert McCall, a child psychologist who specializes in infant and early child development.

He is a senior scientist at the Boys Town Center near Omaha, Neb., and is the author of "Infants: The New Knowledge About the Years From Birth to Three."

A parent cannot make a "superbaby" out of any child by training alone; intellectual skills, like athletic prowess, require both training and natural ability, he explained in an interview.

However, he said, there are things that a parent can do to help a child's mental development.

As to the use of flash cards, McCall said that while flash cards "in and of themselves are not good or bad," it's better for parents to respond to their children, rather than trying to stimulate them.

"Studies of children who do learn to read and calculate very early show that their parents spent a great deal of time engaged in good, old-fashioned play They responded to their babies' actions, played a variety of mental and social games, and provided different experiences and opportunities," McCall said.

He said histories of very precocious individuals showed that their parents were intellectually oriented themselves and spent a lot of "baby only" time, doing things with their infants.

McCall noted that roughly half of the parents of these precocious individuals said they had not planned programs and been deliberate about encouraging their child's development, while the other half did have a deliberate strategy.

"But in either case," he added, "the parents provided an enormous amount of 'baby only' and 'child only' time. They did not just throw toys at the babies."

McCall said the relationship between a parent and a child came first, and from that relationship came the opportunity to encourage and teach.

The Big Spring High School Theatre Department went to one-act play competition Friday and for awarded the Best Technical Crew honors in District 4-5A.

The group was selected as alternates for regional competition.

AUSTIN (AP) - When John Duncan was an assistant professor of economics at Texas Tech University in 1968, he attended his Democratic precinct convention in an affluent section of south Lubbock.

He had several resolutions he wanted to pass. The first one demanded the withdrawal of American troops in Vietnam. His second asked for legalized abortion.

"I got torpedoed twice in a row," Duncan said. "So I introduced a third one."

It read: "Be it resolved that Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech or of the press or the right of the people peacably to assemble and to petition the government for a redress of grievances."

Delwyn Jones, who was then a state representative immediately moved to table. It was the First Amendment of the U.S. Constitution.

Soon after that Duncan became state director of the Texas Civil Liberties Union, determined to do what he could to safeguard the Bill of Rights and the individual freedom it guarantees.

Now, after 11 years in an often lonely, sometimes thankless job, he has announced his resignation. He is no less committed, but at 47, he is weary of the fight.

In terms of popularity with legislators, the TCLU ranks somewhere between communists and homosexuals. State representatives have been known to doom legislation by simply saying it was endorsed by the TCLU.

As its chief lobbyist, Duncan often had to stand in the path of law-and-order legislation close to the hearts of powerful politicians.

When he won, he said, he did it by being unpopular. 'The best technique with a bad bill is to get in early and make it so controversial that other members are less likely to commit to it," Duncan said. "You have to be there, be willing to make yourself personally unpopular and don't give an inch.

In 11 years of lobbying, he never so much as bought a legislator a cup of coffee. TCLU didn't have the money. And he killed a lot of bills, a process that tends to anger the authors.

"I always found it stressful," he said. "It doesn't come naturally to me to be an S.O.B. I was very aloof. I couldn't cultivate friendships because it limited my ability to stand on principle."

But it was a stance that won him the respect of his adversaries.

Tom Krampitz, executive director of the Texas District and County Attorneys Association, wrote Duncan when he heard of his resignation. In part, the note said: "I doubt that many people, including your own the fourth year were members, realize what an excellent and responsible advocate you have been for the interests you represent, often in a political climate which was anything but receptive to your views."

> Of course, there were losses. In 1981, Duncan became a casualty of the War on Drugs. Guided by Dallas computer executive Ross that authorized wiretaps, outlawed the sale of drug paraphenalia, set heavy penalties on drug trafficking and required records of prescriptions from doctors and pharmacists.

Texas civil liberties boss resigns

"That was the major loss - wiretap," Duncan said. "There was a lot of legislation I opposed that passed, but the major loss was electronic surveillance. By now, (Department of Public Safety Director) Jim Adams has probably hung a wire on every pole that will take a nail."

None of his battles was as bitter as the War on Drugs. Duncan called Perot and Clements "advance men for a police state." Perot replied that he'd been called worse things. "I'm hardly intimidated by the TCLU," he said. "Duncan is an insignificant gadfly. He's like one mosquito at a big picnic.

Duncan waged a media war around Texas, conducting news conferences everywhere anyone would listen to his concern that the anti-drug bills would erode basic liberties.

One day in March in Amarillo, weary from his solitary crusade, he lost his temper.

"They assigned the business editor to interview me, and he asked me two dozen hostile questions without taking a note," Duncan recalled. "I could see it wasn't any use. I was getting ready to leave and he fired one more question that started with 'Ross Perot says that ...

"If Ross Perot thinks that, he's dumber that s--," Duncan retorted, exasperated.

my picture. But I was embarrassed by that," he said last week.

During his tenure in Austin, Duncan has defended the Ku Klux Klan's right to march, struggled to save the lives of those sentenced to death and battled the University Intersholastic League over arbitrary rules. "We probably touched the lives of more people who wouldn't have anything to do with TCLU when we beat the transfer rule," he said. "Our phone used to go crazy with people who had just moved to Texas and found their children were ineligible to compete in athletics.'

A TCLU lawsuit resulted in a Supreme Court decision that the law violated family privacy and a family's freedom to travel.

"These rules exist so those people will have something to enforce," Duncan said. "In terms of basic unfairness, UIL makes me boil all the time.

Duncan also tried to get action against San Jacinto County Sheriff "Humpy" Parker, recently convicted of violating civil rights after a trial revealed he had tortured motorists who ran afoul of the law in his jurisdiction.

'We sued him several years ago for stopping people on the road, but the FBI and the Texas Rangers whitewashed it then," Duncan said.

Denounced by his opponents as a radical, he sees his mission as classically conservative. Most often he seeks to limit the power of government to intrude in people's lives.

"Free speech, free press, freedom of religion, procedural rights and the right against cruel and unusual punishment, that's what we spend our time on," he said.

What is discouraging is the number of people he can't help.

'You never get to enjoy your successes because there are so many other things to do. So many poor and pitiful people for whom there is no legal recourse. I find it emotionally draining to deal with people whose problems have no solution.

"And if I'm not talking to them, I'm talking to people who think we're all communists. With this telephone on my desk, I'm just one buzz away from some half-crazed fruit loop."

To get away from that he runs. He smoked three packs a day five years ago. When he started jogging, he could barely finish a halfmile. Last year, he ran the New York Marathon, finishing a respectable 29 minutes behind the winner.

Duncan didn't set out to be a professional civil libertarian. Born in Haskell, son of an insurance agent, he was a high school football player and president of his college fraternity. He was well on his way to an academic life at Tech when he went to an American Civil Liberties Union meeting.

That was in 1967. Soon afterward, he was defending the right of Tech students to publish an underground newspaper and to stage antiwar marches.

Tech administrators banned the newspaper and got an injuction against rallies in Memorial Circle. The ACLU chapter won the newspaper battle easily enough, but the in-junction against the rallies held fast.

Reserve force

Does the Big Spring Police Department have a reserve program; and if so, how can I get involved? Yes, we do have a reserve force made up of citizens who go through extensive training to qualify as reserve police officers.

Once certified by the state of Texas, you donate a minimum of 16 hours a month working with regular officers. Before becoming a reserve officer, you must meet the following requirements.

An application[°] must be submitted; these are available at the personnel office in City Hall. Then you will be given a written test and a physical agility test.

If you satisfactorily complete these tests, you will go before an interview board. If you pass, a complete background check, a polygraph examination, a psychological examination and a complete physical by a physician are done.

After completing these requirements, you will be interviewed by the chief of police for final approval. If approved, you will attend 100 hours of extensive training at the Big Spring Police Reserve Academy.

After completing all requirements, you will be certified by the state as a reserve police officer. The Big Spring Police Department is sponsoring a Howard County 4-H and Future Farmers of America chapter members sold cattle they exhibited in state stock shows for thousands of dollars recently.

Shauna Richardson, daughter of county extension agent Don Richardson, sold her Houston Livestock show Angus breed champion for $25,000, at $21 a pound. Ron Brooks sold his San Angelo Stock Show and Rodeo grand champion steer for $11,200.

Other award-winning steers sold by Howard County residents at the Houston Livestock Show include: Andrea Ray's sixth place Chianina, at $1.60 a pound; Russ Billingsley's fifth place Santa Gertrudis at $1.70 a pound; and Mike Griffith's seventh place Santa Gertrudis at $1.50 a pound. All the steers weighed more than 1,000 pounds, according to extension agent Don Richardson

 A Martin County youth also scored with his entry at the Houston stock show.

Eleven-year-old Coby McMorries of Lenorah sold his reserve grand champion Hereford at the Houston Junior Livestock Show for $14 a pound. The 1,130-pound heavyweight was bred by Tommy Newman of Stanton.

The Catch-It-Calf show is open to the heifers captured in the previous year's calf scramble.

NEW YORK (AP) - Someone who placed a $1 bet on the New York state lottery has won what is believed to be the biggest lottery prize ever in the United States, but so far hasn't gotten around to collecting the $10 million.

Saints for sale

NEW ORLEANS (AP) - Businessman Tom Benson said today that he wants to buy the New Orleans Saints, and his attorneys are trying to get in touch with John Meco Jr., owner of the National Football League team.

Benson owns several automobile dealerships in Texas and Louisiana, interests in several banks, plus a racing stable and part of the San Antonio Spurs of the National Basketball Association.

That impasse prompted Indianapolis businessman Robert Welch to explore buying the Saints for his city.

'He is ready to be traded," Landry said Sunday. "He thinks it's best for him and I do, too." But Landry added. "It doesn't necessarily mean it will turn. out that way. Sometimes circumstances don't allow you to do what you want to do.'

Landry also said that Gary Hogeboom should challenge Danny White strongly for the starting quarterback position next season.

"It's not any different from last year except that Hogeboom is a year older and the team fell back and didn't achieve last year what it achieved the three years before (reaching the NFC championship game), so everything will be looked at more closely," Landry said.

Landry also said that tight end Billy Joe DuPree, who announced his retirement last week, could be back in uniform by the beginning of the season.

"He could be back for one of two reasons," Landry said. "He's in the construction business and if the economy goes bad he might have some extra time because he won't be building as much.

Parsons makes up lost time with Coca Cola 500 victory

HAMPTON, Ga. (AP) - Benny Parsons was far away from anybody's Victory Lane a year ago.

At that time, the 42-year-old driver from Ellerbe, N.C., was thinking about developing his new auto parts business, or finding a job as a television commentator.

But, Sunday, the well-liked Grand National stock car driver found himself in Victory Lane at Atlanta International Raceway after fending off Dale Earnhardt and Cale Yarborough to win the 25th anniversary Coca Cola 500.

Parsons started the 1983 season without a regular ride, having been fired by Harry Ranier the previous year.

He did get a few races in different cars, but didn't really have a solid opportunity until car owner Johnny Hayes came to him with a deal for both Parsons and his younger brother, Phil, midway through 1983

"I said in 1982, when my ride went away and I started looking at possibilities, that I would not be part of building another team." Parsons said with a grin. "But that's exactly what I did. I guess I made a good decision.

"I really felt we had a racing team after the National 500 (at Charlotte, N.C.,

"It's been a long time," Parsons said. 'There were a lot of personally dismal times, times I felt I should have won and didn't. Sometimes I wondered if I'd ever win again.'

But the 1973 Winston Cup champion did it in style Sunday, leading the 328-lap race six times for a total of 150 laps.

He won a career-high $51,110 from the total purse of $359,315, and set a track record for a 500-mile race of 144.945 mph, breaking the old mark of 144.093 set in March 1977 by Richard Petty.

To get it done, he had to outduel the aggressive duo of Earnhardt and Yarborough, both of whom led several times during the race.

Parsons had built a two-second edge late in the race, but wound up in a tense 13-lap sprint following the third and final caution flag. When the green flag fell on lap 315, Parsons found himself sandwiched between Earnhardt and Yarborough after all three made their final pit stops.

'Before the last caution flag. I had highs and lows the likes you've never seen in about five minutes," Parsons said. "Leo (engine builder Leo Jackson) told
