How's that? Trek Trivia

Q. Was Mr. Spock originally supposed to be from some other planet besides Vulcan?

A. Yes. According to "The Making of Star Trek," Gene Roddenberry first created Mr. Spock as a half-human, half-Martian for the original pilot that was later incorporated into the series show, ''The Menagerie.'' Incidentally, Leonard Nimoy and Majel Roddenberry, Gene's wife, were the only actors in both the pilot and the series; Nimoy's Spock was the only continuing character from the pilot.

Off the wall: Mind game

CHICAGO (AP) - It's not whether you win or lose, the saying goes, it's how you play the game. And truer words were never spoken to a small but devoted band playing — and los-ing — the Museum of Science and Industry's "Mind Game."

The museum came up with Dr. Krypton's Mind Game 18 months ago to help publicize its 50th anniversary. Solve 20 riddles and win $5,000 in gold and a $5,000 computer system - it was as simple as that.

But, so far, no one has won. The Rev. Gregory P. Holicky has submitted 2,237 entries, more than one-quarter of the total. Sixty-one people have entered, but 27 submitted only one entry. That means the other 34 players are responsible for an average of 239 entries each.

Sherry Goodman, in charge of the contest, said she's on a firstname basis with many contestants by now. They tend to come by her office to grouse, she explained.

Spring Witness tells of cocaine deals

By RICK BROWN

Staff Writer ABILENE — Pat Gray of Big Spring testified today in Abilene Federal Court that Harold Gaida 'Guy" Talbot told him in July 1983 "you'd have to rig a case to ever catch me selling anything.'

The reference to cocaine dealing came while Gray, a body shop owner, was working as an informant for the federal government in building a case against Talbot, 37, a former chief probation officer and district attorney's office investigator in Howard County.

Talbot, president of Talco Inc. an electronics security firm at 701 FM 700, is on trial charged in a five-count indictment alleging both distribution of cocaine and conspiracy to distribute cocaine between Nov. 10, 1981 and May 1983. Assistant U.S. Attorney David Stephens of Dallas is prosecuting the case before federal Judge Hal Woodward.

Talbot's reference to cocaine use came while Gray was wearing a "body wire," used to record the discussion at a Fourth Street used car dealership, he said.

"...you'd have to rig a case to ever catch me selling anything,' Talbot told Gray, according to a transcript of the government's tape of the conversation introduced into evidence by Talbot's defense attorney Ed Paynter of Abilene.

The conversation was prompted by a comment from Gray that "the prosecutors had a case against him," according to the transcript. "Things don't look very good. He (Gray's attorney) is telling me there's no way I can get out of this," Gray told Talbot. Gray also told Talbot that prosecutors "had something" on Talbot. At the time the conversation took place, Gray had agreed to be an in-

April 1981 gun show in Big Spring at a party sponsored by Fiberflex Inc. at a city park.

Talbot, according to Gray, later became one of Talbot's suppliers, with Gray making purchases starting at 1 gram of cocaine - about a thimble full - and increasing to one-quarter ounce and 2 ounces.

"Eventually I was selling part (of what I bought) to pay for what I wanted," Gray said.

Gray testified to selling cocaine in Howard County, saying he sold to Talbot but he was not sure how many sales he had made. He did specify several sales to David Hanson of Big Spring for more than a Monday that he and Talbot first us- gram each. He said he had made ed cocaine together following an one sale to David Wrinkle, eight to 10 sales to Kay Farrell and three or four sales to Russ Rutledge. He identified his drug supplier as a man named Al Renteria.

> Names of the buyers Gray testified about were given in open court Monday, but additional identification was not revealed in testimony.

> Gray said he and Talbot also planned to buy a larger amount of cocaine — 8 to 10 ounces — from a Midland man with whom Gray had made contact at an October 1981 air show at Midland Regional

> Gray said Talbot gave him about $5,000 in cash for his half of the purchase but Gray returned the money

a month later after the deal "just didn't work out."

Gray, who pleaded guilty on Nov.

3, 1983, to one count of using the telephone to facilitate a narcotics transaction, said under crossexamination by Paynter that he agreed in June 1983 to work undercover for the FBI investigation of drug trafficking in Howard County. According to testimony, provisions of the written agreement between Gray and the FBI included his wearing a concealed tape recorder when talking to suspected drug users and sellers. In return, Gray was granted immunity from prosecution in drug-related cases other than the "telephone" charge which carries a maximum fine of $300 and four years in prison.

FBI agents told Gray before the agreement was negotiated that if he did not cooperate he would be charged with three counts of conspiring to distribute cocaine, Gray testified. Altogether, the three counts carried a possible penalty of 'something less than 50 years" in prison, he said

Gray said his last purchase of cocaine from Talbot was in late summer or early fall of 1982 - he said he could be no more precise - at Talbot's office in the Citizens Federal Credit Union building.

Gray said Talbot mentioned the FBI investigation and was concerned about selling to Gray. "He (Talbot) wished he didn't even have it to deliver," Gray said.

Earlier Monday, jurors heard testimony from Dan Patterson, a farmer and rancher from south of Big Spring, who admitted using cocaine between 1981 and 1982. "During that time I was getting it from Guy Talbot," he said.

Patterson's testimony centered on a Feb. 5, 1982, cocaine delivery in Abilene of about 4 grams he made at Talbot's request to former Big Spring resident Donnie Reagan.

Patterson said under crossexamination that he did not exactly recall when Talbot gave him the See Trial page 2-A

Man pleads in other case

ABILENE - Caitano "Tano" Chavarria, 35, pleaded guilty today in Abilene Federal Court to a federal charge of distributing 21/2 grams of cocaine on April 19, Kay Jimenez, 22, pleaded not guilty before Judge Hal Woodward to a two-count indictment alleging distribution of cocaine.

Neither a sentencing date for Chavarria nor a trial date for Jimenez was set by Judge Woodward.

Both Chavarria and Jimenez were indicted May 8 by a federal grand jury meeting in San Angelo. Their cases bring to 14 the number of drug-related indictments stemming from FBI probes of drug trafficking in Howard County which span three years.

Chavarria, of 3703 W. Highway 80, pleaded guilty to one count in exchange for dismissal by federal prosecutors of two other cocaine distribution charges: onequarter ounce on April 22, 1983 and one-quarter ounce on June 28, 1983.

He faces a possible maximum sentence of 15 years in prison and/or a $25,000 fine.

Jimenez pleaded innocent to a two-count indictment charging her with distribution of onequarter ounce of cocaine on April 4, 1983 and again on April

The appearance of the two before Judge Woodward came at 9 a.m., one hour before testimony was to resume in another Big Spring drug case.

Oilfield worker killed in mishap

Another injured at drilling site

SEMINOLE (AP) - A 27-yearold man was killed at a drilling site and another man remained hospitalized today after a piece of heavy equipment broke loose and went out of control, officials said.

Clarence Patrick "Pat" Brady of Lovington, N.M., was killed Saturday when he was struck by heavy equipment on the drilling platform of the Cactus Drilling Co. rig four miles northwest of Seminole.

Another Lovington man, 22-yearold James Peppin, remained hospitalized Monday following the accident, the official said.

Brady was pronounced dead at the site at 4:15 p.m. Saturday by peace justice Mary Parrot of

PAUL ALLEN ...crucial budget

County previews 'crucial' budget

By KEELY COGHLAN Staff Writer

Howard County commissioners began the budget review process Monday afternoon for what one commissioner called a "crucial"

Commissioners said they were particularly concerned about expenditures this year, because according to estimates by County Auditor Jackie Olson, county revenues are expected to decrease

"Right now, we have to watch the budget as close as we can. It's the most crucial budget we've ever had to face," Commissioner Paul Allen said.

When questioned by Commissioner Louis Brown on why this year's budget was so crucial, Allen cited a "two-year's downslack in

"We don't want to get into the shape Ector County did," Allen said

Fellow Commissioner Bill Crooker agreed with Allen, and said it was necessary for commissioners to guard the county surplus in funds "as much as we can" so the county can pay for possible additions or remodeling of the courthouse and a new jail.

Allen and County Judge Milton Kirby exchanged words over whether the county should purchase and pay for cleaning of uniforms for the entire Roads and Bridge Department, as requested by County Engineer Bill Mims.

The county provides uniforms for employees working with asphalt and for mechanics, Mims said. He

State skies stay cloudy

By The Associated Press

Low clouds covered much of South, Central and North Central Texas before dawn today as an area of light showers dampened southern portions of the state.

High clouds were observed over Northwest Texas. Otherwise, mostly clear skies dominated the state's horizons

Pre-dawn temperatures were generally in the 70s, although the mercury had dipped into the upper 60s in the northern Panhandle. Readings at 4 a.m. ranged from 68 at Amarillo to 77 at Corpus Christi.

Southerly winds at 10 to 15 mph dominated most of Texas, although a light southerly breeze was noted in East Texas.

The forecast called for considerable early morning cloudiness over South and Central Texas early Wednesday. Otherwise, fair to partly cloudy skies were expected through Wednesday. A few showers and thunderstorms were possible over Central and South Texas, as well as over the mountains of far West Afternoon highs were expected to climb into the 80s and 90s with a few readings topping out near 105 in the Big Bend valleys of Southwest Texas.

Along the coast, the forecast called for southeasterly winds 15 to 20 knots through Wednesday along with a chance of widely scattered showers or thundershowers.

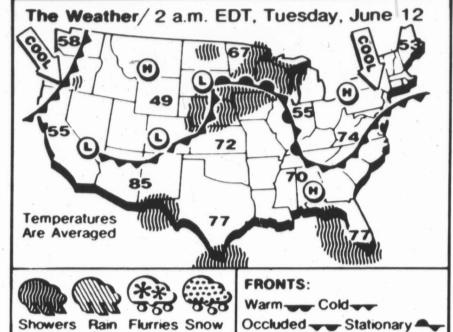

Violent thunderstorms pounded the Midwest today after hurling two dozen tornadoes across Kansas. Nebraska and Iowa, while Northeast residents were still looking for relief from nearly a week of recordbreaking heat.

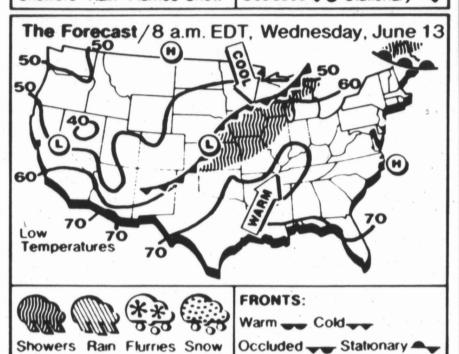

Near Goodland, Kan., a farm family made it to their basement just in time as a twister turned the house to rubble but injured no one, police said.

Numerous other farm buildings across the Midwest were damaged by the flurry of tornadoes Monday, but no injuries were reported. At least 24 twisters touched down in Nebraska, Kansas and Iowa, the National Weather Service said.

A thunderstorm also spawned a tornado Monday afternoon which damaged seven houses near Tampa, Fla., the weather service said.

Tornadoes weren't the only problems for the Midwest. Winds gusted to 65 mph at Cozad, Neb., and 4 inches of rain washed across Wauneta and Cairo, also in Nebraska.

Attorney Paynter then entered into evidence a Feb. 5, 1982, edition of the Big Spring Herald with a headline that read: "Snow, arctic blast ices roads in area." The story said travelers advisories were posted for Interstate 20 from Dallas to El Paso.

A flustered Patterson responded by saying he had forgotten about the snow storm and he did not recall how fast he had driven or when the snow storm began. 'How often do you get moisture in that area? And you are a dry land cotton farmer?" Paynter asked over the objection of the prosecutor.

Both Gray and Patterson testified they had cut, weighed and the 1981-82 period. Patterson, who said he occasionally used the drug with Talbot, said they ingested it by "laying it out on a flat surface and dividing it into small lines."

Gray, during his testimony, rolled a dollar bill into a small tube to demonstrate for jurors how he and Talbot ingested the drug by sniff-ing it through the tube. "It makes you feel good basically," Patterson said, adding that the effects "for a small line" last for 35 to 40 minutes.

LOS ANGELES - Actor Herve Villechaize has reached an out-of-court settlement with Hustler magazine in a $3 million defamation lawsuit he filed over a cartoon story depicting his 'Fantasy Island' character as sex-crazed deviant, an attorney Alan Isaacman, the magazine's attorney, said Monday that Hustler will print a statement in its September issue noting that the February 1980 cartoon was not intended as an attack on the 3-foot-11-inch actor.

Villechaize, who played Tattoo in the TV series from 1978 to 1983, will receive no money from Hustler, Isaacman said.

Battle for Beirut

Capital shattered after bloody street battles

BEIRUT - Prime Minister Rashid Karami's Syrian-backed coalition government received a a crucial vote of confidence from Parliament today following 12 hours of shelling that police said killed 84 people and wounded 216 in and around the capital.

Seventy-one of Parliament's 90 members showed up for the session in the no man's land between Christian east and Moslem west Beirut.

The legislators planned to vote on the government's program for ending the nine-year civil war if speakers finished their addresses by the afternoon. Otherwise, the vote would be taken on Wednesday.

About 60 rounds of machine gun fire cracked in the distance shortly before Speaker Kamel Assad opened the session at 11:10 a.m. Later, the city echoed with loud blasts that police said were rocketpropelled grenades fired in the air for the funerals of some of the victims of Monday's bombardment.

The six-week-old Karami government needs a majority vote of the attending parliamentarians to be formally installed.

The Cabinet includes four leaders of the nation's principal warring factions, but only one showed up for the session that followed the worst bombardment of residential neighborhoods in four months.

Pierre Gemayel, the father of President Amin Gemayel and leader of the rightist Christian Phalange Party, joined Karami and four other ministers on the government bench shortly after the session opened.

Absent were Finance Minister Camille Chamoun, a former president and head of the Christian Lebanese Front coalition; Public Works Minister Walid Jumblatt of the Druse and Shiite Moslem militia commander Nabih Berri, the minister for Southern Lebanon.

A statement by Christian Lebanese Forces accused Berri of ordering his gunners to unleash multiple rocket launchers Monday as part of a drive to "dictate his will on other sects.

Berri had earlier said the Lebanese Forces command was responsible for the shelling, charging that the Gemayels were unable to rein in the pro-Israeli

The shelling began before a Parliament session started just before noon Monday. It went on intermittently during the debate and escalated into random bombardment of neighborhoods after the legislators adjourned in the afternoon.

Mortars, 155mm howitzer shells and hundreds of Soviet-made Grad rockets from truck-mounted multiple launchers rained on both sectors of the capital, the suburbs and Jounieh.

The bombardment began easing an hour before dark, but continued in sporadic bursts through much of the night Police said that one Lebanese soldier was killed.

The rest of the dead were civilians, including three firefighters, nine civil defense rescuers and a photographer for the English-language independent Beirut newspaper, The Daily Star. Hospitals in both sectors of the capital appealed for blood donations to cope with the casualties. Police said 19 of the 216 wounded were in grave condition Police had no breakdown of casualties along sec-

Snake-oil sellers get renewed life

New federal studies indicate that Americans are being bilked of more than $10 billion a year by health frauds and quack remedies. While those perennial and lucrative rackets have always gulled susceptible people, often fatally delaying orthodox medical treatment, their resurgence was probably a predictable result of the Reagan administration's deregulation policies. The watchdog agencies, the Food and Drug Administration and the Federal Trade Commission, have reduced their monitoring and enforcement efforts to a fraction of what they used to be.

The House Select Committee on Aging has found that the new hucksters of quack remedies "are no longer quaint and comical figures," the snake-oil salesmen of yore, but have become well-organized, sophisticated, nationwide entrepreneurs running hugely profitable businesses. The committee estimates that the elderly now spend up to $5 billion a year on bogus cancer cures, $2 billion a year on questionable arthritis cures and at least $2 billion a year on worthless products claimed to counteract the effects of aging.

Pointing a finger at the Food and Drug Administration, once the formidable foe of quackery, the committee reported that the FDA now spends less than 1 percent of its budget to ferret out health frauds. Likewise, the committee charged, the FTC's efforts to control advertising of phony remedies "have diminished to the point where they are almost non-existent."

Since cleverly contrived and misleading ads play a key role in the merchandizing of such fraudulent products, it's encouraging that the FDA at least has joined in a program with the Council of Better Business Bureaus to help newspapers and other publications screen misleading ads. It has sent a package of advisory guidelines to 9,500 publications, including all daily newspapers, to help advertising managers detect typically fraudulent ads. Most newspapers already scrutinize ads for truthfulness, checking with physicians and the Better Business Bureau on the safety and legitimacy of questionable health nostrums; the guidelines should help in that process.

Clearly, however, the major responsibility for protecting Americans from being preyed upon by quacks properly remains with the governmental regulatory agencies. If the FDA and FTC fail to do their job effectively, hucksters will always find a way to peddle their wares.

TV network program sonalities lately." schedulers are becoming more ingenious with each passing season.

The other day I walked into a TV production center and I saw a man sweeping up all kinds of videotape from the floor. I thought he was a janitor, but he turned out to be a vice president in charge of "Creative Programming."

"Why are you sweeping the floor?" I asked him.

"There are a lot of good shows here," he said. "I'm looking for TV bloopers and gaffes that I can put together for next week's special."

You mean mistakes people made that were left on the cutting room floor?

"You got it. The outtakes of the goofs have now become more popular than the shows themselves. The audience loves them and it doesn't cost us a dime. The trouble is that we've used up so many real goofs that we may soon have to start producing fresh ones just for our show."

"You mean you want people to purposely make mistakes when they're doing a straight program so you can use them on your program?"

"That's correct. We sent out a memo to our news departments and production companies to mess up as much as possible so we can use the foulups on our special. And we're now writing into our contracts that a TV performer has to produce three bloopers for every straight spot that can be aired."

'You've really come up with a cheap form of entertainment." "All the networks have gotten into the act. No one believed there was gold in all the screwups on anniversary of the greatest seaborne invasion in history, l want to relate a maritime exploit of somewhat more modest dimensions. It concerns the SS California, which may take its place with the HMS Pinafore and the Walloping Windowblind in the annals of seagoing jokes.

The California is a freighter that has seen better days. Built in 1946, it was mothballed for years, then refurbished in the 1960s. Perhaps anticipating a bargain because of its decrepitude, officials of the Agency for International Development contracted with the ship's owners to carry 18,000 tons of corn to Egypt to be used as livestock feed. But like generations of usedcar buyers, the AID officials found it's sometimes hard to drive a bargain - or, in this case, to sail

As the California was being loaded with corn at Norfolk, Va., last cable explained. October, Coast Guard inspectors gave the ship a routine check and 'discovered numerous deficiencies." So reads a State Department cable seen by my associate Lucette Lagnado.

A further hitch developed: The creaking California showed signs of keeling over - which would have blocked the harbor. A confidential cable from the scene gave the stark details:

So shy

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: How can I get over being such a shy person? I feel so frustrated, because I am lonely and want to make friends, but I find it easier to stay in my shell. - G.B.

DEAR G.B.: Don't spend all your time wishing you were someone else or comparing yourself with other people who may be much more outgoing; God loves you just as you are. At the same time, God also wants to help you become a more outgoing person. It may not happen all at once, but little by little, you can overcome your

Let me suggest, first of all, that you seek out some kind of activity where you will be helping, and working with, other people. I recall a young woman who was very quiet and shy, almost fearful of being with others. However, one day she volunteered to work with the young children in her church. She found out she was not nearly as shy around them as she was with adults, especially when she was helping the children with some of their activities.

More than that, she found that gradually she became more outgoing with the other adults who were helping with the children. When we reach out and help others, we often find it much easier to break out of our natural shyness

Then ask God to help you find other people who may be similar to you and with whom you can be friends. You may be surprised when you look around to discover just how many people there are who are shy to some extent. Often, they would deeply appreciate someone who would ask them to go shopping with them once in a while, or invite them to play tennis, for

Most of all, learn to make God your friend and ask him to help you begin to look at people the way he looks at them. God reached out to us, even when we were turning our backs on him. He sent Christ to reconcile us to himself, because he loves us. Commit yourself to Christ, and then ask him to help you love others as you should.

Some of the most effective witnesses for Christ I know are not necessarily people with outgoing personalities.

The other night she said she would like to get me high on pot just to see how it would affect me. I have never even tried pot and I told Sue I had no desire to.

She said she had smoked it occasionally with the guy she went with before she met me, and when she was high on pot, the sex was really terrific — not that she didn't enjoy sex with me, but it was incredible

I told her I didn't care to smoke pot, and if she did, she had the wrong guy. Abby, Sue had never mentioned pot before, and her sudden interest in it worries me. What do you make of this? And what

Polly Mays Civic Leader

Polly Mays describes herself as a Texan — and a Big Springer — "by choice," and when she moved here in 1948, she took her adopted city seriously. Her hobbies, particularly politics, local history and birdwatching, are a clue to her civic contributions. Polly was one of the three organizers of West Texas Republican Women over 30 years ago, and she has been vicechairman of the Howard County Republican Party. In the 1970's she served on the City Council and was a member of the Convention & Visitors Bureau; during this time she was active in the city's acquisition and restoration of Potton House, now listed on the National Register of Historic Places. She was honored in 1977 by the Chamber of Commerce as "Woman of the Year" for her community service. Polly continues to serve where needed in a quiet, totally committed manner. She's chairman of the Howard County Historical Commission, vice president of the Heritage Museum and president of the fledgling new Humane Society. Polly admits to having "too many interests," but says she has "always felt a responsibility to do the things that need to be done."

Baseball working on drug problem

In today's field of professsional sports in a time of great athletes and six figured salaries the question that arises is not who is the best player in his sport or if the league's MVP is worth a million dollars a year. Now the big question is – how many professional athletes have a dependency on

No I'm not kidding, it's really gotten to the point where the public and media closely scrutinize an athlete's every off the field move. It's a shame, but can you blame the critics? There has been an alarming rise in the number of athletes who have been busted or admitted to an addiction for drugs (mainly cocaine).

This has turned into a very scary problem. These guys make more money than the President of the United States and only their cocaine dealer knows for sure how many greenbacks a player shells out to support his habit.

ROLE MODELS These professional athletes are supposed to be the models that today's young athletes look up and pattern themselves after. It's a shame that the youth of today grow up thinking that they must feed their nose full of white powder or suck down 10 beers to be a good athlete. Baseball is currently the sport on center stage dealing with the most cocaine users — or at least major leaguers seem to get caught more often than other athletes. At least baseball is making a big effort to try to eliminate the problem as Major League teams have started an Employee Assistance Program to help rehabilitate problem players. In 1979 former LA Dodger Don Newcombe, a recovered alcoholic and now a professional drug-abuse counselor, convinced LA owner Pete O' Malley that pitcher Bob Welch was drinking himself to death. Welch was subsequently rehabilitated and O'Malley became the first owner to start a EAP program. Now many other clubs have started the program which allows players to get confidential counseling for anything from drugs to depression, and it seems to be working.

Since 1980 at least 16 major leaguers have been convicted for prossession and treated for use of hard drugs. That's just the ones on record. There is no telling how many players have been helped without the public getting a whiff of the news.

But the league hasn't stopped in simply helping the players. A plan by the Players Association, a management committee, and a retired drug physician could become a part of the current EAP program.

According to the plan a player can approach a club for help or the club can confront the player. If the player and club disagree on a course of action the problem goes to a three member medical panel selected by the clubs and Players Association.

The player would continue to receive his full salary during off-season treatment or the first 30 days of in-season care. Then he would get half-pay for the next 30 days' treatment and then be paid at a rate equal to the minimum $40,000 annual salary.

The standard treatment used to be for a team with a problem player to simply trade, ignored or coddle the player. Teams are actually trying to help players and not give up on them and put them out to pasture. A good example is St. Louis catcher Darrell Porter, a recovering alcoholic and drug addict. There was a time that critics didn't give Porter much of a chance of surviving his problem, not to mention baseball. Porter asked for help, received it and later went on to become MVP of the World Series.

Today's EAP program is designed to give the player an incentive to ask for help. Like in the 70's when the program involved nothing more that standardized punishments, the player wouldn't ask for help until it was too late.

Under the proposed program, the baseball commissioner retains the power to suspend players and the Players Association retains its rights to file grievances for committing felonies and misdemeanors, for distributing to other players and using drugs at the park.

That way if a player does not cooperate or won't get cured, he simply will be eliminated from the game. He has nobody to blame but himself because the league is making a gallant effort to help.

The real question is whether baseball can flush out drug users before they become addicts. The dilemma is that offenders routinely refuse to admit they have a problem. Drug counselors said the best cure for that is peer presure.

The 80's in sports will be remembered as the drug era. Whether an end is in sight remains to be seen, but at least professional baseball is making a legitimate effort to get rid of the problem — now only if the other sports would take

Yandell will carry Olympic torch

Rose Magers and Kelly Rogers move over!

The two Big Spring natives and Olympic hopefuls (Magers for the women's volleyball team and Rogers attempting to earn a berth on the shooting team) aren't the only folks from town with a stake in the Los Angeles Games.

Rocky Yandell, a salesman at Highland Chrysler Dodge, will be carrying the Olympic Torch either Wednesday or Saturday — the exact day is unknown right now — as part of its cross-the-nation relay. Yandell is scheduled to run the torch 1-kilometer (six-tenths of a mile) in Dallas on Wednesday, but he said late Monday, "We're trying to get my part of the relay changed to Lubbock since it's closer." Lubbock segment is scheduled for Saturday

Yandell's boss at Highland Motors, Bill Laster has pledged the maximum $3,000 per kilometer for his employee's race and while Yandell said, "There should be quite a bit of prestige in carrying the torch," he added the best part of the relay is that the $3,000 pledge goes forth to be used in local sports and recreation programs. The Big Spring YMCA will benefit from Yandell's run and Laster's pledge.

Yandell said the torch will be coming down fom Oklahoma should he receive it in Dallas while the Lubbock connection will be made via Fort Worth.

And while 1-K is not a long way, Yandell expects theb torch to weigh somewhere in the neighborhood of three to four pounds. To stay in shape, however Yandell bowls, lifts weights, plays
