How's that?
Bastille

Q. Why did the French revolutionaries storm the Bastille prison? Did they want to free some compatriots?

A. No. The Bastille was a minimum security prison where aristocrats lived quite luxuriously while serving their royal sentences. As such, the prison became an object of scorn with the lower classes, which was finally expressed on July 14, 1789 when the chaos of the revolution allowed the common man a greater opportunity for airing his views and anger.

Dog driver

HERMISTON, Ore. (AP) — Wesley Haskett doesn't usually leave the windows of his pickup truck rolled down, and it will probably be a while before he does it again.

Haskett, 68, stopped his small pickup in downtown Hermiston to do some shopping on Friday.

Later, while walking across the street, he saw a dog jumping against the side of the truck. After a few failures, the pooch made it through the window.

Haskett is a dog lover and has been looking for one to call his own, but this dog didn't belong to him. Besides, it didn't take much of a liking to Haskett — but apparently was quite taken with his truck, which it refused to vacate.

"C'mon," said Haskett to the dog. "Get out of here."

The dog just growled. Haskett opened both doors, but the dog stood his ground. As it stretched out on the seat, panting and growling, Haskett went for reinforcements.

"He growls at you when you open the door," he told police.

With order restored and his pickup showing only a few paw marks on the door, Haskett was positive about his Friday the 13th.

"Today's my lucky day," he said.

Trash bumps budget

Coahoma's new garbage rule causes a stink

By LUIS RIOS
Staff Writer

COAHOMA — Council members locked horns here Saturday afternoon over a proposed city trash ordinance and the accurateness of a prepared statement and audit showing the city's current financial condition.

All the council members were present at the emergency meeting at City Hall. However, what was considered to be a budget workshop turned out totally different, said one member.

The proposed trash ordinance, with several changes included, was approved during a council meeting Thursday. The council had decided the revised ordinance should be reviewed by the city's attorney.

But, to the dismay of three council members, it was the first item discussed at the meeting Saturday.

"You are making a personal issue out of it to cut the whole thing," said member Gary Roberts addressing several members.

Gerald King, who contracts out to Coahoma for trash hauling, was at the meeting. He said that because of the lack of a trash ordinance, residents are not required to pay for the service. Consequently, 32 Coahoma residents are not paying their trash fee.

Under the proposed ordinance, anyone not paying the trash fee will have their water disconnected.

Mayor Pat Harrison voiced her displeasure of the proposed ordinance.

"I want everybody on the council who pushed this through to be there when we have to cut off some old person's water," said Mrs. Harrison. "I want your promise to be there."

"If you look at that list (persons not paying their trash bill) there are very few who cannot pay for it," said member Steve New.

New also added that the elderly residents are ones paying for their trash-hauling bill.

Hance

Lame-duck lawmaker says he's not dead in the water

By the Associated Press

Kent Hance says the only thing that bothers him these days is sympathy.

"Some of my colleagues, you can tell they feel a lot of sympathy for me like my world's come to an end. Well, my world hasn't come to an end. There's a new venture out there waiting," the Lubbock congressman said.

"I guess that's the only thing that's upset me since it was over," Hance said. "There are some people that want to give me sympathy."

When Hance lost his race for the U.S. Senate this year, he also lost his House seat because he could not run for both.

He had surprised political pollsters, who figured him for a distant third, by finishing first in the tight three-man race for the Democratic Senate nomination. But it was state Sen. Lloyd Doggett who won the excruciatingly close June 2 runoff.

Instead of moving to the other side of the Capitol as he had hoped, Hance will be moving back to Texas at the end of the year.

Hance said he had expected to return to Lubbock, but is weighing "lucrative" offers from large law firms and investment groups in Dallas and Houston. Still, he said, the political arena beckons.

"I invested so much time and effort and money in it to walk away from it," Hance said.

"It's something I like and in a few years, if there's something that looks like it would be a good position to run for where you could accomplish a lot, well, I'll talk it over with my family and if it's all right with them, I'll be back."

Hance, a lawyer, former state senator and Texas Tech University professor, is popular in his district and could have counted on a long career in the House. Did he regret giving up a sure thing for a long shot?

"Not one minute. I wondered about that before I made the decision, whether I would. I made the right decision," he said. Otherwise, "I'd be sitting around today saying, 'What if, what if...'"

Hance was one of the House Democrats tagged with the nickname "Boll Weevil" for supporting President Reagan's economic policies. Fellow "boll weevil" Phil Gramm of College Station switched parties and now is the Republican nominee for Senate.

Hance said he is supporting Doggett, a liberal, though he thinks he would have had a better chance against Gramm. He said does not regret the times he supported Reagan.

Al Scott: Video king 'a bit of a ham'

By KEELY COGHLAN
Staff Writer

Al Scott is, in his own words, "a bit of a ham." A regular at the Saturday afternoon movies as a child, he grew up to play bit parts in West Texas movies like "The Midnight Cowboy" before making his own low-budget shows.

With the advent of video, his political parodies and humor have become cult classics on the Big Spring civic and business club meeting circuit.

His fascination with movies is documented throughout his store, Big Spring Video, on Main and Second. In addition to the regular stock of movies and video machines, the building houses his own recording studio and an office wallpapered with movie posters.

"I was a movie buff from way back in the 1930s and 40s. Errol Flynn and Tyrone Power... every Saturday afternoon, I went to the movies. You could get in the show for a dime then," Scott says.

The posters on the walls testify to his preoccupation with film. Such movie classics as "Gone With the Wind," Orson Welles' "Citizen Kane," Marion Brando's "Streetcar Named Desire," and a lesser known gem from Columbia Pictures, "Hellcats of the Navy," starring Ronald Reagan and Nancy Davis, stare back from the walls.

Looking like a modern-day cross between Samuel Clemens and Colonel Sanders minus the goatee, Scott appears like a movie character, as he shows off his "Barry Goodfellow" tape, a one-man presidential satire starring himself as a fictional composite commander-in-chief who has Franklin Roosevelt's cigarette holder, Col. Sanders' goatee, Harry Truman's gumption and a Southerner's charm.

The looks are no accident. He has played Mark Twain before in a community theater one-man show, and says that Sanders has the necessary charisma to be president. "I honestly believe Col. Sanders would have made a good president," Scott said. "He had the looks and the ability to sift through chicken manure."

In addition to the Goodfellow tape, Scott has created his own show for his grandchildren, "The Granddaddy Show," and is working on a feature-length space-adventure video "with UFOs and good guys. That's all I can tell you."

He was interested in videos from the beginning, he said. "When they first came out, I wanted one so bad I could taste it," Scott said. Later, he and his son came up with the idea to rent the machines and the movies. They have been so successful, he says, that his son now operates his own store in San Angelo.

Video, he says, has a lot of potential but won't replace the movie industry. "You've got a beautiful medium. All you need is a camera. Any screwball can be his own star," he said.

"Videos are not a threat to movies. People still like the wide screen. Kids are still going to go to the movies. A movie is a movie. You're not going to keep people away from the movies because of videos," he said.

Movies today "are better, of course," Scott says. "They have Dolby stereo sound and special effects. Still there are some movies that are still great. 'Casablanca' will never go out of style," he said.

His memories of the movies themselves are mixed. He enjoyed his small speaking role as the cafe manager in the opening scenes of "Midnight Cowboy" with Jon Voight, he said, but local citizens were outraged by the film at first.

"It just tickled me to death when he (Voight) got the Oscar a few years later for 'Coming Home.' He'd done two 'Gunsmokes' at the time of 'Cowboy'," Scott said. "He was real easy to work with. When we did our scene together, I was real nervous. I've forgotten what he said, but it calmed me down. It was a great experience."

The movie itself caused an uproar in Big Spring because of its "X" rating, Scott said. "People in town were mad and angry. Finally it got an 'R' rating (after some scenes were cut). I was a little chagrined myself when I found out it was X-rated," he said.

Scott and other locals who worked on the movie "went all the way to Fort Worth to see the movie when it first came out," he said.

Scott would like to see the local cable company provide a public access channel for viewers' use.

Now, however, he says he's looking for scripts for one-act or full-length plays for videotaping that community theater groups could become involved in, he said. "I'd like to do something with the Hawk Players (the Howard College theater group)," he said.

About the only subject Scott says he won't film on videos are weddings. "I won't do them. You go out with your camera, and you can never find a place to stand. And the lighting's always bad. They always want to do them under candlelight."

Otherwise, videos are great, he said. "If you've got any ham in you at all, you'll love getting in front of the camera."

favors a trash ordinance, said the council was doing the people a disservice by not proceeding with the ordinance.

"It was supposed to have been typed up and it wasn't," Jensen said. "The mayor is bound by what the council decrees."

Mrs. Harrison said she would present the proposed ordinance with the changes to the city's attorney.

"You're going to have to work with us on this," Roberts said addressing Harrison and Lawrence Aberegg and Jerry Brockman, two members who voted against the changes in the proposed ordinance Thursday.

The city's worsening financial condition, which was revealed several weeks ago, has not prompted any serious action by the council. In a surprise announcement July 2, Mrs. Harrison told the council Coahoma was $100,000 in debt.

Following the meeting, Jensen said the council did not know where the city's money was going, because of what he termed "a poor system of bookkeeping."

"We need to get somebody who can operate books and set up books," said.

The council studied the audit for the past fiscal year and also a financial statement of the city's current status but did not make any recommendations for the 1984 year.

The audit was not detailed enough, said New, since some of the accounts were combined and they did not reflect each department. Therefore, it is difficult to make a comparison to the financial statement provided by the city, he said.

with (former President Jimmy) Carter," Hance said. "I just don't want to ever in politics get in a position that some other official thinks that they own me."

Politics aside, Hance says, he has left his legislative mark.

"In 1981, I passed the largest tax cut in the history of the country. It was the Conable-Hance bill. It has my name on it," he said proudly.

It was the "Hance amendment" that kept the Carter administration from instituting withholding on savings accounts, Hance said. In the tax bill passed last month was a Hance-sponsored provision that reduces the capital gains holding period to six months.

Some members who lose elections "lose interest," he said, but he expects to be involved in trade legislation and farm and environment policy before he leaves.

Last month, as he was hearing that a recount had not changed the results of the runoff, Hance was plotting strategy for defeating the immigration bill.

Just before the May 5 primary, Hance had run television commercial touting his opposition to amnesty for illegal aliens. He credited the spots with propelling him into first place.

The House narrowly passed the immigration bill, 216-211, on June 20, amnesty provision included.

"If I get involved in a fight, I don't walk away from it," Hance said. "This is something I've felt strongly about for the last couple of years. But it just didn't reach a point where I could do anything about it until it got to the floor."

He said the bill's sponsor, Rep. Romano Mazzoli, D-Ky., "thinks the bill would have passed by large margins if it hadn't been for my campaign. He said it made people stop and think how explosive the amnesty thing was."

All but three representatives in the 27-member Texas delegation opposed the bill.

Complaining that there was no organized opposition the first time around, Hance is trying to put together a coalition he hopes will defeat the bill when it comes out of a House-Senate conference.

"Even though I might be a lame duck, I'm certainly not a dead duck," he said.

George gets a real kick

CLEARWATER — A band of youthful Scottish soccer players think New York Yankees owner George Steinbrenner is a "jolly good fellow" since he helped them get home after they were stranded by Air Florida's grounding.

"I won't soon forget. The kids never will," said soccer club leader John Kelly as his boys, garbed in plaid kilts and New York Yankee baseball hats, headed for Scotland penniless but happy.

He was talking about their trip to the United States — an odyssey that had them worrying whether it would ever end after the airline they expected to fly quit flying.

The 27 soccer players and 16 family members were short $11,000 to ferry the contingent of 43 to Edinburgh, Scotland.

But there was a happy farewell Wednesday at the St. Petersburg-Clearwater International Airport for the Portobello Thistle Boys Soccer Club.

Steinbrenner, principal owner of the Yankees, footed the bill after reading of the team's plight in the Tampa Tribune last week.

"I didn't want them to go away with an unpleasant feeling about the United States," Steinbrenner said about the team that had come for an exchange with a soccer team in Land O'Lakes, 25 miles north of Tampa.

The boys already had bought their Air Florida tickets for a trip to London, but were left hanging when the Miami-based carrier stopped flying and filed for bankruptcy protection and other airlines refused to honor them.

At the airport, the boys turned toward Steinbrenner, tossed their baseball caps into the air, and let out a chorus of "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow," and "Flower of Scotland."

MALIBU — Actor Jan-Michael Vincent, who plays the taciturn pilot of an attack helicopter on CBS-TV's "Airwolf," turned himself in and was charged in connection with a bar fight that left a man unconscious.

The 38-year-old actor, accompanied by his attorney, was booked for investigation of misdemeanor assault Thursday at the Malibu sheriff's station, Los Angeles County sheriff's Deputy John Broussard said.

Vincent was released on his own recognizance.

John Bogosian, 42, of South Pasadena, hit his head on the floor and was temporarily knocked unconscious during a late-night fight June 3 in a Malibu cocktail bar, Broussard said.

Bogosian was hospitalized and later released, he said.

Vincent lives in Malibu, the exclusive coastal enclave 30 miles west of downtown Los Angeles.

The fresh-faced actor, whose numerous film credits including co-starring with Burt Reynolds in "Hooper" and Charles Bronson in "The Mechanic," currently plays Stringfellow Hawk on "Airwolf," an action drama.

TROOP REVIEW — President Francois Mitterrand and Gen. Alban Barthez review the troops mustered on the Champs Elysees in Paris Saturday morning before the Bastille Day parade.

Bastille Day

Women, vets and tax cuts, plus a little Bourbon

PARIS (AP) — President Francois Mitterrand used the occasion of Bastille Day to announce Saturday that taxes on investments and wage payments by corporations would be reduced by 8 percent in 1985.

Later, Mitterrand rode in an open car escorted by 300 horsemen down the Champs Elysees to review a huge military parade and launch a day of patriotic displays, fireworks and dancing in the streets.

The annual celebration marks the July 14, 1789, storming of the Bastille prison in Paris during the French revolution.

Mitterrand, in an interview with several newsmen on state television, described the corporate tax cut as "the largest tax reduction since the liberation" of France in World War II.

Businessmen have complained that the tax works against two of the socialist government's own goals — increased investments and employment.

Reductions in personal income taxes are expected to be announced before the 1985 budget is formally introduced this fall. The government expects that the increased growth will not make up for the lost tax revenues, and it is planning to reduce government spending also.

Mitterrand suggested that the defense budget may have to absorb some of those cuts.

In his Bastille Day speech to the armed force, he called on the military to "support our efforts to adapt to the economic situation."

After Mitterrand arrived at the Place de la Concorde, 5,200 men and women from the three branches of the armed forces paraded down the Champs Elysees past the reviewing stand.

More than 300 military vehicles rolled past while 70 warplanes and 22 helicopters flew over.

Tens of thousands of people lined the street despite overcast skies and occasional rain.

In the only incident reported by police, 15 people wearing anti-government slogans were stopped for identity checks after whistling in derision as Mitterrand's limousine passed. All were released, police said.

Formations of fighter jets screamed overhead, some trailing blue, white and red vapor trails, and France's most advanced military jet, the Mirage 2000, made its first public appearance.

Other firsts were the increase in the number of female members of the armed forces in the parade and the inclusion of World War II veterans and three World War II planes to mark the 40th anniversary of the liberation of France.

Among those awarded the country's highest civilian award, the Legion of Honor, were singer Juliette Greco, composer Michel Legrand and "Nazi hunter" Beate Klarsfeld, who has been credited with tracking war criminal Klaus Barbie to Bolivia.

Barbie, the former gestapo chief of Lyon, was expelled from Bolivia and is awaiting trial in Lyon for crimes against humanity.

U.S., Cuba discuss immigration

WASHINGTON (AP) — Representatives of Cuba and the United States met in New York City Thursday and Friday but reached no resolution to the pressing immigration issues between the two countries, the State Department said Saturday.

Although the two nations maintain low-level diplomatic contacts in each other's capitals, the meetings marked the first time in years that the two sides have sat down in formal talks.

News in brief

Militias trade artillery fire

BEIRUT — Sporadic artillery exchanges threatened to rekindle a war for dominance between pro-Syrian militias in north Lebanon Saturday.

Syrian President Hafez Assad personally intervened late Friday night to halt four days of fierce battles between the Marada militia, loyal to former Lebanese President Suleiman Franjeh, and fighters of the Lebanese Syrian Social Nationalist Party in the northern farming districts of Koura and Zgorta.

Assad's Soviet-equipped army controls northern and eastern Lebanon. He threatened military action against both warring groups unless they heeded a cease-fire he called at 1 a.m. Saturday.

Saudis step up air patrols

BAHRAIN — Saudi Arabia and Kuwait intensified joint air reconnaissance patrols over Persian Gulf waters Saturday, hours after Iraq said its warplanes attacked two ships south of Iran's Kharg Island oil terminal.

Arab diplomatic sources said the Saudis and Kuwaitis were bracing to confront a possible Iranian reprisal raid on commercial shipping in the southern sector of the gulf.

They said that air and sea patrols by the two countries were limited to territorial waters, and did not cover international sea lanes south of the Iraq-Iran war zone.

Mine kills 2 UK soldiers

BELFAST — A landmine planted by IRA guerrillas exploded Saturday on a country road near the border with the Irish Republic, killing two part-time British soldiers, one an unarmed woman, police said.

The outlawed Irish Republican Army claimed responsibility for the attack in a statement sent to Belfast news organizations.

Labor sweeps N. Zealand

WELLINGTON — The Labor Party led by David Lange ended Prime Minister Robert Muldoon's nine-year tenure with a landslide election victory Saturday. The conservative defeat was seen fueled by voter discontent over Muldoon's economic policies, confrontational style and close U.S. defense ties.

It appeared Labor would win 57 of the 95 seats in Parliament and Muldoon's National Party 36 seats, New Zealand television said. The Social Credit Party would probably win two seats.

36 die in train collision

YUGOSLAVIA — A freight train smashed into the rear of an idling holiday express to the Adriatic coast Saturday, killing 36 people.

There were about 1,500 people on the overnight passenger train, the official Tanjug news agency said.

Railway station officials said all those killed were Yugoslavs.

Manatt dumped as Demo boss

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Walter Mondale moved to take charge of the Democratic Party structure Saturday by dumping Charles Manatt as party chairman and naming Georgia party chief Bert Lance as general chairman of his presidential campaign.

The possibility that Lance would be named to Manatt's post sparked stirrings of rebellion among Democrats in this convention city.

At a news conference in the yard of a vacation home in Lake Tahoe, Mondale commended Manatt for his "superb leadership of our party" but said that nonetheless he would exercise his option as the presumed Democratic presidential nominee to replace Manatt by the end of next week.

FITNESS FACTS

By Laurie Churchwell

The Caloric Cost of Exercise

There are several excellent reasons to include exercise in any weight loss program. One is that exercise can be costly in terms of calories. Notice I said "can be" costly rather than "is costly." The reason is that not all forms of exercise are useful for weight loss. Weight lifting, for example, is not particularly useful for elevating one's caloric expenditure. Walking, jogging, running, bicycling, swimming — are all activities especially useful for elevating caloric expenditure. Why these particular activities? Because they can be done at relatively low intensity for long periods of time. The duration of exercise is a far more important factor in weight (fat) reduction than is the intensity of exercise. It is far better to walk a mile than to lift weights for 30 minutes. Aerobic dance — exercise can also be useful if the routine used is of low to moderate intensity, & is performed continuously for 20 to 30 minutes. To enhance the caloric expenditure of aerobic dance, the exercise should emphasize moving the entire body from one place on the floor to another... not just things like neck circles, arm circles & body bending. These latter movements are good for flexibility and possibly some general "muscle toning" but are not very costly in terms of caloric output.

The Dance Gallery & Fitness Center offers floor Aerobics and Aqua-Aerobics five days a week. Call 267-3977 or come by 2303 Goliad for a schedule of classes.

Opinion

Wrong approach on air bag safety

If a challenge to the re-election of President Reagan makes enroads this year, it may not turn on unemployment, interest rates or breast-beating with the Russians. It may be much more obtuse: the perception that Reagan's White House is bent on beating the states into line while broadening the scope of federal control.

It will be ironic if that comes to pass, since the Democrats are traditionally the party of Big Brother federalism.

For a man who promised to keep the federal government on a shorter leash, Mr. Reagan seems to be hard at work doing just the opposite. The most recent examples are the federal threat to cut the states' highway funds unless they comply with a 21-year-old drinking age mandate and using the states as a lever in the air bag issue.

The reasoning on air bags boggles the mind. The federal transportation department has ordered air bags phased in as standard equipment in automobiles. But, the order will be stayed if states representing two-thirds of the U.S. population legislate seat belt requirements.

It probably took only a few minutes for automaker lobbyists to pencil in the most-populous states — like Texas — as targets of massive pressure to enact seat belt legislation. Automakers don't like an air bag requirement because it means bumping the sticker price of autos. First, that might hurt sales; second, that might draw down demand for convenience items on which Detroit makes the highest profit.

The federal rules are designed to pit the states against their own people, with the Reagan administration moves safely to the role of benevolent uncle. No need to get the federal hands muddled.

The biggest problem with legislating seat belts is that it once more broadens the definition of "crime. Law enforcement officers are asked to police insurability of drivers. They soon will be writing citations for parents who fail to restrain their children in safety seats. And if seat belt legislation passes, it'll be a crime for adults to make a personal decision — affecting no one else — that they'll risk driving without benefit of seat belt. Will the day come when police will be asked to incarcerate housewives found guilty of forgetting to put nonskid pads on the floor of the shower stall?

If the federal government believes air bags are a solution to highway carnage, then they should be ordered at the source, as standard equipment in automobiles; the same reasoning as applies to ordering three-pronged plugs to ground electrical cords. But that solution seems too easy for Mr. Reagan's White House — and much too messy.

Playing the obvious with Ferraro

Rev. Jesse used his time to ex-coriate Ronald Reagan. And Buchanan fussed and fumed about Ferraro lack of qualifications.

To debate whether Walter Mondale picked a woman as a political gambit is to debate the obvious. To assume he incurs some liability for choosing "the best candidate" is ludicrous. Yet there was old Pat, just a huffing because Mondale resorted to — gads — politics in the vice presidency. Of course he did.

Question No. 1 is whether Mrs. Ferraro is a competent choice, not whether she is "the best" candidate. Question No. 2 is whether it will be to Mr. Mondale's political fortune or misfortune that he made the unprecedented decision that a woman can be popular as a vice president.

If the criterion for top office in this country is a set of competency ground rules — (Question No. 1: Have you ever negotiated a treaty with a foreign power? If your answer is yes, please elaborate on whether the treaty was A. a nuclear treaty, B. a trade agreement, or C. a reciprocal defense pact...) — then we need to rewrite the rules of office. The Constitution says only that a president or vice president must be a U.S. citizen, 35 or older, with at least 14 years U.S. residency. The litmus test for holding the highest and second-highest posts in the land is whether the voters think you are the worth their vote.

Geraldine Ferraro is a lawyer and a two-term U.S. representative. Jimmy Carter was a career military man, a peanut farmer and a one-term governor. Ronald Reagan was an actor and a two-term governor. If we are to set up a standardized test to qualify candidates for office, would any of the three pass?

Alternatives get youth off streets

To the editor:

On behalf of the Alternate Student Activities Task Force of the Chemical People, I would like to say "Thank you" to everyone who helped make our first activity a success: Highland Pontiac, the people who volunteered to be "dunked," the sponsors of our car wash and all the generous people who donated their time and money. I was thrilled at the number of people who showed interest in our city's youth.

A survey at the high school last year indicated the students wanted a Teen Center in Big Spring. This successful event will be a good start toward that goal. It is important that our kids know we are behind them and that the community wants to give them the best we have.

Mayor Angel has declared the week of July 22-28 "Teen Appreciation Week." Our teens will perform in talent shows in Downtown Big Spring all day on July 28 as part of the "Heart of the City" event. There will be a street dance that evening. Here's a chance for everyone to come down and see what our kids can do!

I believe a lot of adults in Big Spring would like to help find Alternative Activities for our young people. I can't think of a better investment in our city than to work for our youth. How can we teach them that there are better things in life than drugs, alcohol, running up and down Gregg or gathering in parking lots if we don't provide them with alternatives?

Come on Big Spring — support our youth!

Dumpsters are for use by all

To the editor:
I am writing in regard to the dumpsters that have recently been put out. We live on Stadium street and do not have an alley so I'd like to know if we have to have the dumpster even if we are opposed to them.

They are an eye sore to our street (or will be) and all our neighbors prefer putting our garbage in plastic bags and setting them out, as we always have. Do we have a choice or do we have to have the dumpsters when they are put out on our street? We like the plastic bags best. Please answer in your paper.

C. F. WHITTINGTON
1022 Stadium
P.S. They haven't been set out as yet on our street — but they may be soon.

Editor's note: The city's decision to adopt the new trash collection system was made on behalf of all the residents. Because the method of collection is being changed, everyone will have to use the new containers if they want their trash picked up.

Four words of fear

The most frightening words in the English language are, "Our computer is down." You hear it more and more as you go about trying to conduct your business.

The other day I was at the airport attempting to buy a ticket to Washington and the attendant said, "I'm sorry, I can't sell you a ticket. Our computer is down."

"What do you mean your computer is down? Is it depressed?"

"No it can't be depressed. That's why it's down."

"So if your computer is down just write me out a ticket."

"I can't write you out a ticket. The computer is the only one allowed to issue tickets on the plane."

I looked down the counter and every passenger agent was just standing there drinking coffee and staring into a blank screen.

"What do all you people do?"

"We give the computer the information about your trip, and then it tells us whether you can fly with us or not."

"So when it goes down, you go down with it."

"That's very good, sir. I haven't heard it put that way before."

"How long will the computer be down?" I wanted to know.

"I have no idea. Sometimes it's down for 10 minutes, sometimes for two hours. There is no way we can find out without asking the computer, and since it's down it won't answer us."

"Don't you have a backup computer, when the main computer goes down?"

"I doubt it. Do you know what one of these things costs?"

"Let's forget the computer. What about your planes? They're still flying, aren't they?"

"I couldn't tell without asking the computer, and as I told you...."

"I know, it's down. Maybe I could just go to the gate and ask the pilot if he's flying to Washington," I suggested.

"I wouldn't know what gate to send you to."

"I'll try them all," I said.

"Even if the pilot was going to Washington, he couldn't take you if you didn't have a ticket."

"Why don't I give you the money and you could give me a receipt and I could show that to the pilot as proof that I paid?"

"We wouldn't know what to charge you. The computer is the only one who keeps track of air fares because they change every hour."

"How about my credit card?"

"That's even worse. When our computer is down it can't notify the credit card computer to charge the fare to your account."

"Is there any other airline flying to Washington within the next few hours?"

"I wouldn't know," he said, pointing at the dark screen. "Only 'IT' knows."

"And at the moment, 'IT' don't know nothing."

"IT knows it," he said defensively. "IT just can't tell me."

By this time there were quite a few people standing in lines. The word soon spread to other travelers that "the computer was down."

A man in a red blazer came out. "Please don't get excited. Wichita has been notified."

"That's where our main computer went down. But as soon as it gets over its glitch, it's going to buy everyone who missed his plane a free drink."

Around The Rim

By KEITH BRISCOE

Na sdarovy

Let's give the Russians a break. That's what the Public Broadcasting System has in mind with the airing of a television series produced in the Soviet Union. Titled "The Unknown War," the programs feature Soviet military action during World War II.

This is John Wayneski at his best. Peasants downing Stuka bombers, proletarians pulverizing a Mark II tank, Slavic citizens protecting the Politburo from the onslaught of fascist fiends.

Some of this footage is staged hype. The rest of the reels are the real stuff: burning flesh, dead babies, destroyed cities.

With this series, the Soviets have a point to make, and they make it well.

The Motherland bore the brunt of fighting during World War II. Pearl Harbor, Midway, Normandy, Sicily and Rome were all side-shows compared to the slugfests at Moscow, Stalingrad, Kursk and Leningrad.

What the Soviets are trying to tell us is that they know what war is. Not one family in the USSR escaped the horrors of Hitler's mad plunge eastward. The war remains a living memory for all Soviet citizens today, and they shall not forget.

The Russians learned hard lessons from that war. They had signed a pact with Germany in 1939 that they believed would ensure peace. When Der Fuehrer double-crossed them, they were unprepared for the surprise attack of the vastly superior Wehrmacht.

After the victorious Red Army raised the hammer and sickle over Berlin, the Soviets counted 20 million dead, countless cities demolished, and several cultures (gypsy and yiddish to name two) lost to history.

The war inflicted a deep wound on the Soviet mentality, and the scar has yet to heal. They have resolved to never enter again into an uncertain peace treaty and to forever be prepared for war.

From the ruins of that great war the Soviet Union made a dramatic resurgence. Today the country rivals the U.S. in military and economic power, a remarkable achievement by any measure.

The Russians are proud of their battle record and post-war achievements. But this experience they do not want to repeat.

In the PBS series, the Soviets are asking not for our acceptance, only our understanding.

The Soviets know war, devastation, genocide. They know flimsy treaties and polite diplomacy won't prevent invasion, destruction, holocaust.

They want us to know they want peace. Genuine peace. The kind of peace based on mutual respect.

The Germans didn't respect the Soviets' right to exist or their will to fight. The Germans lost.

Ronald Reagan should watch this series.

A Closer Look

By JIM DAVIS
Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau

SAN FRANCISCO — A reporter once went to a coastal city to cover a hurricane only to find beautiful weather as the capricious storm headed in another direction. He then wrote a first-person story about how disappointed he — as a newsman — was about missing a story.

Understandably, the people of that town were relieved that a potential catastrophe had passed them by and were not sympathetic. Some opined that a lynching might be appropriate for my friend.

I chuckled at the time over my young colleague's public relations problem, remembering a similar feeling under almost exactly the same circumstances back in the 1960s. But at least I had sense enough not to write about it.

Perhaps I had better sense back then, because here I now sit in another coastal city ready to reveal my disappointment over Walter Mondale's vice presidential selection.

It's nothing personal, mind you. I'm sure

U.S. Rep. Geraldine Ferraro is a fine person and would make a good vice president.

And I know most reporters are going gaga over the expected nomination of a woman for the nation's second-highest office.

Mondale's running mate selection generally will add spice and interest to the 1984 campaign against Ronald Reagan and George Bush.

But from the purely professional standpoint of a Texas political reporter, it's a downer. It's not the nominee's sex that bothers me, it's her geography.

According to various reports from the Mondale camp, campaign strategists were divided between those who favored a Northeast-Midwest strategy and those who argued for a South-Southwest strategy. As part of the former, Mondale would pick someone philosophically compatible with his own progressive leanings and use a Frost Belt sweep as a key to victory.

The latter strategy focused on picking a Southerner or Southwesterner to add geographical balance to the ticket. Many of its supporters also favored a philosophical balance, someone who might appeal to party conservatives. At the heart of this strategy was Texas.

Two Texans, U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen and San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros, were among the six or seven top contenders for the vice presidential nomination. Each would have brought something special to the election.

Bentsen offered both geographical and philosophical balance. His campaign organizational abilities are awesome. In 1982 he put together an organization that pulled out every form of traditionally Democratic voter. Gov. Mark White and many other current Democratic officeholders were helped tremendously in '82 because Bentsen was on the campaign trail.

According to some reports, Bentsen's failed as a prospect because polls showed Reagan-Bush carrying Texas even with him on the ticket. But it should be remembered that two years ago polls showed Republican Bill Clements easily defeating White despite Bentsen's help.

Like that hurricane mentioned earlier, the 1984 campaign has swung away from Texas and headed in another direction.

Geraldine Ferraro is no hurricane

Officials trek to Valley to sign bill

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, Speaker Gib Lewis and at least a dozen state legislators will gather on Friday in the Rio Grande Valley for the signing of the farmworkers compensation bill.

Rep. Juan J. Hinojosa, D-McAllen, said Thursday the ceremony will take place at 3 p.m. July 20 outside the Virgin de San Juan Shrine, at San Juan near McAllen.

The ceremony will be open to the public, said Hinojosa, the House sponsor of the measure.

"Many of the people who help put food on our tables are from the Valley," Hinojosa said. "After 71 years of being excluded, it is only fitting that the workers and their families be able to see this bill signed into law."

Explosion kills deranged mother

GRAPEVINE (AP) — An unemployed mother of three who had a history of mental problems posed as a contractor and bought five pounds of explosion before dying in an accidental blast, authorities say.

Karen Wheat Sams, 31, bought ammonium nitrate, a tube of nitromethane and about a dozen blasting caps from a Lewesville explosives company on Tuesday, Grapevine Police Sgt. Don Armstrong.

Armstrong also said police think Mrs. Sams's behavior was part of a deteriorating mental condition. "It looks like she was just having some real problems," he said.

Her body was found Wednesday morning next to a 3-foot crater at a remote construction site about 4 miles north of the Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport County.

Police said she was apparently experimenting and the charge went off prematurely.

Hightower plows FDR fame to harvest Mondale votes

By the Associated Press

Standing at his antique oak post office desk recently, Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower penned a memo to Walter Mondale in which he gave the Democratic candidate advice on beating President Reagan out of the farm vote.

He advised boldness. He did not urge halfway measures to avert what he believes will otherwise be a farm crisis.

Included among his recommendations were a moratorium on farm foreclosures, price supports tagged to production costs and targeting benefits to family farmers.

"What I'm saying to Mondale (is) this is the one to take risks on. This is the one to be the bold Mondale on. There's a mess out there that's only getting worse," Hightower said.

"He wants agriculture to be a centerpiece of his campaign. For the first time, agriculture is going to be in the top 10 category of issues. It's usually number 47."

Hightower, 41, was elected agriculture commissioner in 1982 and has been a prominent voice in Democratic farm policy this year.

He headed the Democratic Agriculture Council and was a vice chairman of the platform committee for the upcoming national convention.

The council conducted hearings around the country and the platform, Hightower said, probably will include "the basic guts of what we were saying," although not all of his specific recommendations.

"They agreed with my assessment of the problem ... But in terms of what the Democratic Party will do, it is still not a concise, sharp statement of what I think we need to campaign on, that we can tack on the grain elevator walls and say, 'Here's the Democratic manifesto,' and farmers can say, 'Yeah. We're for that and let's go.'"

Hightower, who allows that his politics include some "populist" leanings, is convinced that today's farm problems rival those of 1932. He wants Mondale to follow former President Franklin Roosevelt's example.

"I'm saying it's a crisis and you've got to take a Franklin Roosevelt stand — we are going to save the family farm, and here is what we're going to do. Mondale is cautious. I'm urging him to be less cautious."

If Reagan is re-elected, Hightower predicted the Farmers Home Administration and government lending agencies will "continue to pursue their course of moving people out."

Banks that are holding three- to five-year notes "are going to flush those farmers because they know the Reagan administration is not going to put in a program to save them. When I say flush, I think we're talking about a third of what I call the commercial farmers."

Hightower, who delights in poking fun at administration officials, says Reagan's appointees are "people who argue there is no crisis."

Agriculture Secretary John Block, who also farms, "used to argue that, until his bankers started calling. He's taken to singing at the Grand Ole Opry. He's taken up night work," Hightower said.

"Reagan has fallen flat on his face on this one. His program has been a disaster. He has neither the time, nor the inclination, nor the ideological maneuvering room, nor the foggiest notion of what to do to deal with this matter," Hightower said.

"He is very uncomfortable. He has no grasp of the issue. He's a Gucci rancher."

Hightower's analysis is that Mondale must agree the farm economy is reaching disaster proportions and react accordingly.

"Mondale's got to do more than say, 'Let's tinker with the knobs and make some adjustments,'" he said.

"You've got to have a bold program that includes a moratorium on farm foreclosures ... a grace period during which good farmers are not thrown out of business and during which the president and Congress develop a restructuring of the farm debt."

Hightower said a Mondale farm bill should include minimum price protection pegged to the actual cost of producing commodities. It should include mandatory supply management that covers large farm operations, he said.

Demos at bay in San Francisco

Harte-Hanks News Service
SAN FRANCISCO — If a political storm is on the horizon for Texas at the four-day Democratic National Convention beginning here Monday, seasoned political observers and delegates can't see it coming.

Calvin Guest, a former director of the Texas Democratic Party, generally can predict which direction political winds will blow. He foresees an "almost routine" party get-together.

"If it boils out into a bloodbath, we don't know where it's going to come from," said Guest, a Bryan resident attending his fourth national convention.

Former Vice President Walter Mondale, expected to win his party's presidential nomination during the convention, took the wind out of many Texans' political sails before the convention by shunning suggestions from state party leaders that he tap a Texan as his running mate.

That issue settled, Guest's political prognostications for a hothouse convention are being echoed by many other state officials and delegates who will be among the 200 delegates — and 67 alternates — representing Texas.

The Texas delegation will be the third largest at the convention, which will draw 3,933 voting delegates from across the country.

Those Texas delegates are a diverse group. Of the 200 voting delegates, 51 percent are female. Fifty-seven percent of them are white; 23 percent are black; 20 percent are Hispanic. Seventy-nine percent of them are at least 36 years old.

Ninety-four of the delegates are

Harte-Hanks election coverage pledged to Mondale; 40 to U.S. Sen. Gary Hart and 35 to the Rev. Jesse Jackson. Thirty-one are unpledged delegates.

Some are political veterans; some political neophytes. All appear excited about the convention and the host of social events that dot their schedules.

The only delegate attending the convention from the Big Spring area is U.S. Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Stamford, elected as a so-called super-delegate. Stenholm is not officially pledged to any presidential candidate.

Die-hard Democrat Leighton Cornett of Paris, an experienced national delegate, is excited about the chance to hobnob with other party loyalists. The 67-year-old attorney said Democratic conventions are like revival meetings.

"You get together. You get enthused and revitalized," Cornett said. "The social life of a convention to me is real attractive."

Cornett and other delegates proudly noted the piles of mail and invitations that arrived before they left the blistering temperatures in Texas for the breezy climate of San Francisco.

"They have deals scheduled all week. A brunch here, a lunch there," Cornett said.

Get-togethers include a Monday morning breakfast with Sen. Lloyd

"If it boils out into a bloodbath, we don't know where it's going to come from."
A Texas delegate

Bentsen, a brunch with Gov. Mark White, a City Hall reception hosted by San Francisco Mayor Diane Feinstein, a fireworks party, a wine country tour, and a boat cocktail party with U.S. Rep. Mickey Leland, D-Houston.

Many delegates said they will have a sister, wife, husband or friend along for the fun. While Maxine Molberg of Fredericksburg, a dress shop owner, is bringing a friend, there will be another very familiar face in the crowd. Her son from Dallas also is a delegate.

But Ms. Molberg said she and her son, who is bringing his wife, tend to go their separate ways.

"I never have followed around behind him," she said.

Ken Molberg, 32, said people would be surprised to know how little he and his mother know about each other's politics.

"We rarely see each other" at party conventions, he said. "We may have lunch or dinner together."

Some delegates said they are a bit taken back by all of the attention, especially Ms. Molberg, whose unique mother-son situation has caught the fancy of some journalists.

"More things have happened to me than I expected. I have received so many invitations. People are interviewing me. A camera crew is coming tomorrow," she said.

Dragons, genies, princesses, magicians and even a unicorn appeared Thursday at the Howard County Library for the closing party of the Magical Mystery Summer Reading program.
The characters participated in a costume contest, a popular part of the party.

Vickie Hollingsworth's unicorn won the prize for best looking costume. Other winners were Gena Grizzard, most original as the rabbit from Alice in Wonderland; Peter Watson, most interesting, detective; Mary Loya, most unusual, a sorceress; and Jamie White and Elisa Hinojas tied for fanciest.

Judges were Bill Slagle, Virginia Sweeney and Jackie Olson.

Reading awards went to Kelly King, first place, 240 books; and Blake Chilcott, second, 110 books.

Toni Chester, Theresa Grier, Teri Chester, Jason Tingle and

Philip Wood also read 100 or more books during the six-weeks program.

Participants who earned unicorn T-shirt decals may bring their shirts to the library to have the decals pressed on.

Program members also can pick up their certificates from the library. Coloring contest pictures, reading logs and star squares will be available within the next two weeks.

Entertaining at the party were Jack Wilson, Kelly Draper, DeeDee Cauley and Joe Reed.

Other volunteers in the program included Bill Slagle, Virginia Sweeney, LaRue DeViney, Zane Rutledge, Gail Reinert, Denise Salazar, Elie Stoval, Christy Alexander, Brian Stoval, Kim Shaffer, Doug Jackson, Victoria Logan and Laura Ramirez.

Sponsors were the Howard County Rodeo Association, The Ritz Theater, Big Spring Athletics and McDonalds.

An itch to ride the train

NEW YORK (AP) — Commuter railroad workers at Grand Central Terminal are itching to get rid of a pack of "wild cats" that brought fleas to their corner of the aging station.

Workers fumigated an underground Metro North Railroad maintenance shop and locker room at Grand Central over the weekend after about 15 employees were sent home complaining of flea bites, railroad spokeswoman Renee Hassell said Saturday.

"A number of the men were having serious problems with the fleas," Ms. Hassell said.

The problem stems from a pack of "wild cats" that have taken up residence in underground catacombs of the cavernous terminal, she said.

Q.: What is a chain of title and why must I have a title search before buying a house?

A.: A chain of title is simply the legally recorded history of the ownership, encumbrances, liens, etc., which affect a specific piece of property, usually beginning with the original source of the title, as recorded. And, that definition explains, to some extent, why it is important to have a title search before buying property. The search is for your protection. If there are any liens or encumbrances against the property, even from 50, 75 or more years ago, you are responsible for them once you assume ownership and title. Simply put, you certainly don't want to become responsible for someone's debt from 35 years ago. The purpose of the search is to find out if anything of that nature exists, and to inform you about it before you sign on the dotted line.

Joy to the World

Do young people have Sunday clothes like we had when we grew up?

I had Sunday dresses and everyday clothes. The second we got home from church we took off our Sunday best and put on our "feed sack" clothes. Yes, I really do mean they were made out of feed sacks. They used to put cow feed in beautiful cloth bags, and sometimes I was allowed to go along with my folks to the feed store where I got to select which bag I wanted for a new dress.
The clerk loved it when I selected the bottom one on the stack and he had to move several 100-pound sacks to get to mine. Usually, if it had any red in it, I liked it, and Mother would make me a beautiful new dress.

Many a night I went to bed and would wake up the next morning with a new dress completed and hanging on my bedroom door. I had slips and panties made out of flour sacks. Thank goodness the labels would bleach out or I would have had "Morrison Mills, Denton, Texas" on the seat on my panties.

All of this has brought to mind my cute Grandma. If we asked her to go anywhere with us, she would say, "Okay, but wait until I go put on my pretty slip in case we have a wreck." Maybe she is the one I got my philosophy from about not saving back things "for good."

I had a friend once who had a whole trunk full of pretty gowns, robes, towels, sheets, pillow cases, silver, china and lace table clothes. They used their old towels until I would have been ashamed to hang them on the line. She always wore an old robe that looked like it had been pulled from the rag bag. I asked her one day why she didn't use her good stuff. She always answered that she was saving it "for good."

Saving back

One day I asked her, "How will you know when good gets here?"

If I get something new, I wear it. We use our silverware everyday. I wear my prettiest gowns, and I get to enjoy them. Of course, if I ever have to go to the hospital in a rush, they'll have to take me like I am. I won't have anything saved back "for good."

Besides, I don't want to save back my pretty stuff until I get old and senile. They probably won't let me wear them in the rest home.

Royal tea brews 400th blast

MANTEO, N.C. (AP) — After a visit by England's Princess Anne, a 70-boat flotilla led by former CBS-TV news anchorman Walter Cronkite on Saturday headed for this island to celebrate the 400th anniversary of British settlement in America.

The first of the private sailboats left Elizabeth City to the northwest at 8 a.m., with the fleet to arrive here Saturday evening.

On Friday, Princess Anne dedicated the $700,000 Elizabeth II, a replica of a 16th-century ship that brought the first English colonists to the New World, depositing them on the North Carolina coast.

Despite the failure of the voyage to establish permanent colonies, the effort "was a real act of bravery and faith," the princess told about 5,000 spectators.

Church defeats state

Historic building opened to worshippers

MENTONE (AP) — Members of the Mentone Community Church say they will proceed with their plans to improve their historic building, now that Texas Tech University has backed out of plans to move it 150 miles to a ranching heritage center on the university campus.

"We need to put some (ceiling) fans in there. One thing and another," Edna Dewees, chairwoman of the Loving County Historical Commission, told the Odessa American.

Loving County commissioners agreed nine months ago to donate the church to the Ranching Heritage Center after a group of West Texans proposed moving the building from Mentone, a town of about 20 people located 20 miles north of Pecos near the Texas-New Mexico line.

But about the same time, some of the people in Mentone and neighboring towns began regular church services in the building. Dewees said church members spent about $3,000 on improvements and secured another donation for a $2,250 piano.

Ms. Dewees and other community members argued that the church belonged in Mentone — not 150 miles away at the heritage center. "No ranch ever had a church," she said.

Texas Tech officials said the opposition of the state historical commission was a major factor in a decision to abandon any attempts to locate the church at the ranching center.

"Obviously, we had to have the historical commission's approval of it," John Darling, vice president for academic affairs, told the American-Statesman.

Study: More whites college bound

HOUSTON (AP) — May graduates of predominantly white Houston high schools were much more likely to go on to college than those from schools populated mostly by minority group students, a school district study shows.

At Kashmere High School, which has no white students among its 362 spring graduates, only 23 percent of the graduating class said they planned to go to college or continue their education at some other school, the study shows.

Only 18 percent of Reagan High School's graduates, of whom 208 were minorities and 46 were white, planned to go to another school.

But at Bellaire High School, where 399 graduates were white and 147 members of minority groups, 89 percent of the class of 1984 were planning to go to college.

Overall, 57 percent of the 9,103 students who graduated from the Houston Independent School District in May said they were going to college.

Seventy-two percent of the white students and 75 percent of the Asians said they would continue their educations, but only 52 percent of the blacks and 45 percent of the Hispanics had similar plans.

Gerl Konigsberg, spokeswoman for the Houston Independent School District, says she believes the difference is due largely to income levels and parental involvement.

Indians file suit over state tax policy on oil, gas profits

AUSTIN (A) — The Alabama-Coushatta Indians say Attorney General Jim Mattox is keeping them from enjoying a tax exemption that Indians on other reservations have.

The tribe filed a federal suit Friday asking that a decision by Mattox be nullified because "it threatens our traditional way of life and our reservation homeland."

Morris Bullock, tribal chairman of the Alabama-Coushattas, told a Capitol news conference that a 1983 opinion by Mattox said "our lands were no longer an Indian reservation."

As a result, Bullock said, the state comptroller has ruled the tribe must pay state taxes for oil and gas production, a major financial support of the tribe.

"This is the first time in history that the state of Texas has ever taxed the reservation," Bullock said. "If the oil and gas estate is taxable, then the land itself could also be taxed. And if our land can be taxed, then it might be subject to other claims."

Don Miller, an attorney for the tribe, said the tribe was billed for more than $17,000 for oil and gas severance taxes the first three months of the year.

Mattox's office said there would be no immediate comment on the suit.

Miller said the suit filed Friday did not include the Tigua Indians of the El Paso area.

Sports Nabourhood

By BILLY NABOURS
Sports Editor

What price victory?

Two subjects reared their ugly heads earlier this week, both of which offered up plenty of opportunity for taking a full advantage of a sportswriter's privilege — turkey shooting.

And while the turkeys in question are two of the biggest around it was decided instead to punch in a few lines in reference to something that hopefully will cause those folks a little closer to home to think long and hard about.

The turkeys are those who attempt to douse the Olympic Flame in the name of racism and one Mr. Cosell, who hopefully will really retire from the broadcasting booth after his latest hyperbole about "gutteral illiterates" (his own self excluded of course). Both would make wonderful fodder for the column indeed, but instead it's been decided to relate a story heard on a recent radio show.

The scene is Anywhere, U.S.A. where Little League Baseball is played and the game is the championship game. Scotty will be the youngster's name.

Scotty is slightly smaller and not quite as adept at the game as his more talented teammates. For that reason Scotty is confined to a substitute role or that more commonly referred to as a "benchwarmer."

A few days earlier, however the coach of Scotty's team told him he would guarantee Scotty some playing time in the big game. That was all Scotty needed to hear. He was one excited little boy during the days leading up to the game. He managed to convince his father to be at the game. His little boy was going to play.

The day of the game arrived and as usual Scotty was riding the pine when the game began. It shouldn't have started at all.

Before long the second inning was underway and already Scotty's team was behind 7-0, but Scotty continued whooping and hollering and yelling encouragement from the dugout bench.

In the third and fourth innings Scotty's team rallied and trailed by only a run, 7-6. As the team went to bat in the fifth Scotty said, "Now coach, now." The coach said, "Not now kid. We're still behind by a run and need our best bats at the plate. Just wait."

After his team tied the score in the fifth and took the field for the bottom of the inning, Scotty asked again, "Now coach. Do I get in?" The coach again replied, "Not yet."

Going into sixth and final inning with the score still tied, Scotty inquired a third time about playing and for a third time was told, "Not now."

Despite being put off, Scotty continued yelling encouragement and seemed to maintain his spirit.

After his team rallied for a 9-7 lead in the top of the sixth and prepared to take the field, Scotty tried once more by asking if now he could play. The coach told him, "Son, we've only got a two run lead. We really need to win this game. We just have to win it. I can't put you in. Don't you understand?"

Scotty may have understood and he may have not known, but with a sweat stained face and a tearful half-smile he replied, "Yeah, I understand."

Scotty's team went on to win the game and Scotty was one of the first players throwing up his glove in excitement as he rushed on the field to congratulate his fellow players.

And while the team did enjoy success and although Scotty did say he understood why he wasn't getting in the game one point should be made:

With all the stock put in winning it's sad to think that some victories are accomplished at the expense of youngsters like Scotty. Living all season for just one moment means a lot to many youngsters in youth sports activities like Little League, or soccer or pee-wee football and the like and when a situation like Scotty's arises it's much, much too sad. Think about it.

CAN'T GET TWO — Greg Luzinski of the Chicago White Sox upends Baltimore Orioles second baseman Rich Dauer preventing Dauer from getting off a double play throw to first base as the game winning run crosses home plate. The action happened in the ninth inning of Chicago's 3-2 victory Saturday.

Pearson dims Cowboys star

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Dallas Cowboys wide receiver Drew Pearson said Saturday that his professional football career is over and he would not report to training camp here Sunday.

Pearson, who was injured in an automobile accident earlier this year, made the announcement from Dallas in a telephone conversation with Cowboys coach Tom Landry.

"I'm not going to play any more football," Pearson said.

The 11-year National Football League veteran suffered a lacerated liver last March 22 and underwent surgery after the automobile accident. His 27-year-old brother was killed in the mishap.

The Cowboys' all-time leading receiver had hoped to recover in time to play a portion of the 1984 season. But Pearson said doctors convinced him he would risk severe, possibly life-threatening injury if he played football this year.

Toronto tops puny A's bats, 2-1

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Dave Collins drilled a run-coring double down the left-field line after fouling off several pitches from Oakland's Bill Caudill with two out in the ninth inning to give the Toronto Blue Jays a 2-1 victory over the A's Saturday.

Dave Stieb, 10-3, tossed a six-hitter to win a pitching duel that was settled by Collins' clutch hit.

Caudill, 8-2, relieved A's starter Steve McCatty in the eighth. He retired the first batter in the ninth before Ernie Whitt singled to right. Tony Fernandez pinch ran for Whitt and went to second on a drag bunt single by Alfredo Griffin.

After Damaso Garcia flied out to center for the second out, Caudill got ahead on the count 1-2 against Collins. Collins fouled off seven pitches and took one pitch for a ball before delivering the game-winning hit.

The A's had only four hits off Stieb through six innings and got their fifth in the seventh when they tied the score 1-1.

Bruce Bochte walked to open the A's seventh. Rickey Henderson, out of the starting lineup because of a bruised thumb, went in as a pinch runner and beat Stieb's throw to second when the pitcher tried for a force play after fielding a bunt by Mike Heath.

Mike Davis' bunt single loaded the bases, and Donnie Hill delivered a sacrifice fly to deep center field.

Toronto scored in the second inning on Griffin's one-out single. George Bell walked to open the inning and went to second on a single by Rance Mulliniks. Griffin singled to center field after Whitt popped out.

McCatty, who allowed seven hits, was relieved by Caudill after Willie Upshaw opened the eighth with a single.

Stieb faced a starting batting order including four players with averages under .200. Oakland regulars Henderson, Tony Phillips and Carney Lansford were out of the lineup because of minor injuries.

BALTIMORE (AP) — Julio Cruz and Harold Baines homered for two of the three hits off Mike Flanagan, and Tom Seaver won the pitchers' duel by hurling the Chicago White Sox to a 3-2 victory over the Baltimore Orioles Saturday.

Seaver, 8-6, yielded seven hits, walking one and striking out seven. He retired 11 in a row until John Lowenstein hit his sixth homer with one out in the ninth.

Franklin Stubbs and Marshall in the sixth inning. Stubbs homered into the right-center field stands to lead off the eighth inning.

MONTREAL (AP) — Charlie Lea pitched a six-hitter to become the major league's first 14-game winner and Mike Stenhouse knocked in three runs with a single and a homer in the Montreal Expos' 6-2 triumph over the Cincinnati Reds Saturday night.

Lea, 14-4, struck out six and walked one in pitching his team-leading sixth complete game. At one point Lea had retired 17 of 18 batters until a one-out single by Gary Redus in the eighth.

The Expos, who have won four straight and moved above the 500 mark for the first time since June 1, scored their sixth run on Pete Rose's RBI single in the fourth off Soto.

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Art Howe belted a two-run homer and added a run-scoring single in a five-run sixth inning as the St. Louis Cardinals defeated the San Diego Padres 7-6 Saturday night.

Winner Dave LaPoint, 7-8, and the Padres' Tim Lollar, 7-7, were locked in a scoreless duel until the fifth, when San Diego scored on a triple by Luis Salazar and single by Bruce Bochy, batting just .154 at game time.

But the Cards went ahead 2-1 in the bottom of the inning as David Green hit a one-out single and one out later, Howe homered over the left field wall. The homer was the first since the 1982 season for Howe, who sat out all of 1983 recovering from surgery to his ankle and elbow.

Flanagan had retired 13 in a row when Carlton Fisk led off the ninth with a single, and the White Sox eked out what proved to be the winning run on a fielder's choice grounder by Dave Stegman.

Berenyi, 7-9, pitched the first seven innings and allowed just two singles. He struck out three and walked four in posting his fourth victory in six decisions since being acquired by the Mets in a trade with the Cincinnati Reds on June 15. Gorman wrapped up the victory with two innings of perfect relief.

Craig McMurtry, 7-10, took the loss.

The victory broke a seven-game losing streak for Berenyi against Atlanta. He lost twice to the Braves with the Reds earlier this season.

The Mets took a 2-0 lead in the first. Hernandez doubled home the first run, took third on the throw to the plate and scored one out later on George Foster's single.

The Mets added a run in the second when Hubie Brooks, Ron Gardenhire and Junior Ortiz opened the inning with consecutive singles.

Danny Heep's two-out single in the fifth led to another New York run. Heep advanced to second when Hernandez walked, and scored when Darryl Strawberry singled, chasing McMurtry from the game.

Hernandez' eighth home run of the season, a drive over the right field fence in the seventh against reliever Gene Garber, produced two more Mets runs. In the ninth, Hernandez scored from first on a single by Strawberry and an error by Claudell Washington in right.

CHICAGO (AP) — Orel Hershiser pitched a two-hitter, and German Rivera doubled and hit a two-run homer, leading the Los Angeles Dodgers to an 8-0 victory Saturday over the Chicago Cubs.

Hershiser, 5-3, who has allowed only one run in his last 35 2-3 innings, struck out nine and walked one as the Dodgers snapped a three-game losing streak. The Cubs had won three in a row.

Hershiser allowed only two singles and did not give up a hit after the third inning. The only hits off the rookie right-hander were by Jay Johnstone in the first and Bob Dernier in the third.

Mike Marshall doubled in the second inning off loser Scott Sanderson, 5-2, and scored on Mike Scioscia's single. One out later, Rivera hit his first major league homer into left-center field bleachers to give the Dodgers a 3-0 lead.

Pressure, excitement mounting for Big Spring's Olympic spike hopeful

By BILLY NABOURS
Sports Editor

LOS ANGELES — Although track and field is admittedly the glamor sport of every Summer Olympics, the progress and gold medal chances of the U.S. Women's Volleyball Team have made it a sport that will be closely watched during the 1984 Los Angeles Summer Games.

And Big Spring will be watching with as much concern and interest as any community in America because one of its very own will be among the U.S. delegation vying in one of sport's biggest fishbowls.

Rose Magers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ellihue Magers and a 1978 Big Spring High School graduate, is a member and starter on the team that begins its "Go for the gold," Monday, July 30 in a match against West Germany.

Rising to the top in a sport usually reserved as the domain for Asian and East European teams will be a difficult task, but according to Magers, a 6-2 blocker for the U.S., "Although the pressure is on to do well, the excitement is just as intense. We have been working on our strengths and as the time for the Olympics gets closer I think our team gets closer as well." Magers added that the pressure from the media is very intense.

But the goal of a gold medal is something Rose has been working for since 1982 when she made the trip to De Casa, California where tryouts were being held. She was fresh out of the University of Houston and Louisiana State University where she was regularly a starter on nationally ranked and contending teams.

So while Magers is used to winning she knows that the Olympics are something special.

"Going for the Olympics is a big change. I'm seeing more things done," she said in reference to International rules under which the team will play. "International rules are a little looser and volleyball at the Olympic level is more of a power game," Magers added. She also commented that, "I'm practicing more than ever, but it's got to pay off somewhere though."

At first glance it appears Magers and her countrymen are in the toughest bracket. The U.S. has been placed in Group A which also includes first round opponent West Germany, Brazil, China, Canada, Japan, Peru and Korea (North and South Korea are sending a joint team to the Games). The Chinese and Japanese are two of the top ranked teams in the world with the United States being the other. The U.S. contingent faces Brazil on Aug. 1 and then takes on China Aug. 3.

"China and Japan are our two biggest challenges in our own group," said Magers. She is confident that who ever wins Group A will be the 1984 gold medal winner in light of a Soviet backed boycott that has some of the world's remaining toughies looking in from the outside.

Among them is Cuba which Magers calls, "a powerhouse," and East Germany which also fields a competitive bunch.

The loss of the Soviet Union, "doesn't really matter," according to Magers since America's team is 15-0 against the Soviets in international competition so far.

Pressure, practice and boycott aside, Magers concluded, "The Olympics are the greatest thing that can happen for an amateur athlete and I'm thankful that the opportunity has come my way."

Once the Olympics are over Magers said she hopes to return to LSU and complete her degree in health and physical education.

Church defeats state

Historic building opened to worshippers

MENTONE (AP) — Members of the Mentone Community Church say they will proceed with their plans to improve their historic building, now that Texas Tech University has backed out of plans to move it 150 miles to a ranching heritage center on the university campus.

"We need to put some (ceiling) fans in there. One thing and another," Edna Dewees, chairwoman of the Loving County Historical Commission, told the Odessa American.

Loving County commissioners agreed nine months ago to donate the church to the Ranching Heritage Center after a group of West Texans proposed moving the building from Mentone, a town of about 20 people located 20 miles north of Pecos near the Texas-New Mexico line.

But about the same time, some of the people in Mentone and neighboring towns began regular church services in the building. Dewees said church members spent about $3,000 on improvements and secured another donation for a $2,250 piano.

Ms. Dewees and other community members argued that the church belonged in Mentone — not 150 miles away at the heritage center. "No ranch ever had a church," she said.

Texas Tech officials said the opposition of the state historical commission was a major factor in a decision to abandon any attempts to locate the church at the ranching center.

"Obviously, we had to have the historical commission's approval of it," John Darling, vice president for academic affairs, told the American-Statesman.

Study: More whites college bound

HOUSTON (AP) — May graduates of predominantly white Houston high schools were much more likely to go on to college than those from schools populated mostly by minority group students, a school district study shows.

At Kashmere High School, which has no white students among its 362 spring graduates, only 23 percent of the graduating class said they planned to go to college or continue their education at some other school, the study shows.

Only 18 percent of Reagan High School's graduates, of whom 208 were minorities and 46 were white, planned to go to another school.

But at Bellaire High School, where 399 graduates were white and 147 members of minority groups, 89 percent of the class of 1984 were planning to go to college.

Overall, 57 percent of the 9,103 students who graduated from the Houston Independent School District in May said they were going to college.

Seventy-two percent of the white students and 75 percent of the Asians said they would continue their educations, but only 52 percent of the blacks and 45 percent of the Hispanics had similar plans.

Geri Konigsberg, spokeswoman for the Houston Independent School District, says she believes the difference is due largely to income levels and parental involvement.

Indians file suit over state tax policy on oil, gas profits

AUSTIN (A) — The Alabama-Coushatta Indians say Attorney General Jim Mattox is keeping them from enjoying a tax exemption that Indians on other reservations have.

The tribe filed a federal suit Friday asking that a decision by Mattox be nullified because "it threatens our traditional way of life and our reservation homeland."

Morris Bullock, tribal chairman of the Alabama-Coushattas, told a Capitol news conference that a 1983 opinion by Mattox said "our lands were no longer an Indian reservation."

As a result, Bullock said, the state comptroller has ruled the tribe must pay state taxes for oil and gas production, a major financial support of the tribe.

"This is the first time in history that the state of Texas has ever taxed the reservation," Bullock said. "If the oil and gas estate is taxable, then the land itself could also be taxed. And if our land can be taxed, then it might be subject to other claims."

Don Miller, an attorney for the tribe, said the tribe was billed for more than $17,000 for oil and gas severance taxes the first three months of the year.

Mattox's office said there would be no immediate comment on the suit.

Miller said the suit filed Friday did not include the Tigua Indians of the El Paso area.

What price victory?

Two subjects reared their ugly heads earlier this week, both of which offered up plenty of opportunity for taking a full advantage of a sportswriter's privilege — turkey shooting.

And while the turkeys in question are two of the biggest around it was decided instead to punch in a few lines in reference to something that hopefully will cause those folks a little closer to home to think long and hard about.

The turkeys are those who attempt to douse the Olympic Flame in the name of racism and one Mr. Cosell, who hopefully will really retire from the broadcasting booth after his latest hyperbole about "gutteral illiterates" (his own self excluded of course). Both would make wonderful fodder for the column indeed, but instead it's been decided to relate a story heard on a recent radio show.

The scene is Anywhere, U.S.A. where Little League Baseball is played and the game is the championship game. Scotty will be the youngster's name.

Scotty is slightly smaller and not quite as adept at the game as his more talented teammates. For that reason Scotty is confined to a substitute role or that more commonly referred to as a "benchwarmer."

A few days earlier, however the coach of Scotty's team told him he would guarantee Scotty some playing time in the big game. That was all Scotty needed to hear. He was one excited little boy during the days leading up to the game. He managed to convince his father to be at the game. His little boy was going to play.

The day of the game arrived and as usual Scotty was riding the pine when the game began. It shouldn't have started at all.

Before long the second inning was underway and already Scotty's team was behind 7-0, but Scotty continued whooping and hollering and yelling encouragement from the dugout bench.

In the third and fourth innings Scotty's team rallied and trailed by only a run, 7-6. As the team went to bat in the fifth Scotty said, "Now coach, now." The coach said, "Not now kid. We're still behind by a run and need our best bats at the plate. Just wait."

After his team tied the score in the fifth and took the field for the bottom of the inning, Scotty asked again, "Now coach. Do I get in?" The coach again replied, "Not yet."

Going into sixth and final inning with the score still tied, Scotty inquired a third time about playing and for a third time was told, "Not now."

Despite being put off, Scotty continued yelling encouragement and seemed to maintain his spirit.

After his team rallied for a 9-7 lead in the top of the sixth and prepared to take the field, Scotty tried once more by asking if now he could play. The coach told him, "Son, we've only got a two run lead. We really need to win this game. We just have to win it. I can't put you in. Don't you understand?"

Scotty may have understood and he may have not known, but with a sweat stained face and a tearful half-smile he replied, "Yeah, I understand."

Scotty's team went on to win the game and Scotty was one of the first players throwing up his glove in excitement as he rushed on the field to congratulate his fellow players.

And while the team did enjoy success and although Scotty did say he understood why he wasn't getting in the game one point should be made:

With all the stock put in winning it's sad to think that some victories are accomplished at the expense of youngsters like Scotty. Living all season for just one moment means a lot to many youngsters in youth sports activities like Little League, or soccer or pee-wee football and the like and when a situation like Scotty's arises it's much, much too sad. Think about it.

CAN'T GET TWO — Greg Luzinski of the Chicago White Sox upends Baltimore Orioles second baseman Rich Dauer preventing Dauer from getting off a double play throw to first base as the game winning run crosses home plate. The action happened in the ninth inning of Chicago's 3-2 victory Saturday.

Pearson dims Cowboys star

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Dallas Cowboys wide receiver Drew Pearson said Saturday that his professional football career is over and he would not report to training camp here Sunday.

Pearson, who was injured in an automobile accident earlier this year, made the announcement from Dallas in a telephone conversation with Cowboys coach Tom Landry.

"I'm not going to play any more football," Pearson said.

The 11-year National Football League veteran suffered a lacerated liver last March 22 and underwent surgery after the automobile accident. His 27-year-old brother was killed in the mishap.

The Cowboys' all-time leading receiver had hoped to recover in time to play a portion of the 1984 season. But Pearson said doctors convinced him he would risk severe, possibly life-threatening injury if he played football this year.

Toronto tops puny A's bats, 2-1

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Dave Collins drilled a run-coring double down the left-field line after fouling off several pitches from Oakland's Bill Caudill with two out in the ninth inning to give the Toronto Blue Jays a 2-1 victory over the A's Saturday.

Dave Stieb, 10-3, tossed a six-hitter to win a pitching duel that was settled by Collins' clutch hit.

Caudill, 8-2, relieved A's starter Steve McCatty in the eighth. He retired the first batter in the ninth before Ernie Whitt singled to right. Tony Fernandez pinch ran for Whitt and went to second on a drag bunt single by Alfredo Griffin.

After Damaso Garcia flied out to center for the second out, Caudill got ahead on the count 1-2 against Collins. Collins fouled off seven pitches and took one pitch for a ball before delivering the game-winning hit.

The A's had only four hits off Stieb through six innings and got their fifth in the seventh when they tied the score 1-1.

Bruce Bochte walked to open the A's seventh. Rickey Henderson, out of the starting lineup because of a bruised thumb, went in as a pinch runner and beat Stieb's throw to second when the pitcher tried for a force play after fielding a bunt by Mike Heath.

Mike Davis' bunt single loaded the bases, and Donnie Hill delivered a sacrifice fly to deep center field.

Toronto scored in the second inning on Griffin's one-out single. George Bell walked to open the inning and went to second on a single by Rance Mulliniks. Griffin singled to center field after Whitt popped out.

McCatty, who allowed seven hits, was relieved by Caudill after Willie Upshaw opened the eighth with a single.

Stieb faced a starting batting order including four players with averages under .200. Oakland regulars Henderson, Tony Phillips and Carney Lansford were out of the lineup because of minor injuries.

Pressure, excitement mounting for Big Spring's Olympic spike hopeful

COACH OF THE STARS — USFL Coach of the Year James Mora (far right) talks to his Philadelphia Stars at the end of their final practice Saturday on the eve of their championship game Sunday against the Arizona Wranglers. It is the second consecutive year Philadelphia will be in the title tilt.

Wranglers don't expect to let Stars get in their eyes

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Oddsmakers consider Arizona six-point underdogs in Sunday night's United States Football League championship game against the Philadelphia Stars, but running back Kevin Long says that's exactly where his Wranglers want to be.

"If people are counting on us to lose, that's their guess and their loss. I think we're going to be six-point winners," Long said. "I know it's hard to predict, but I know it's going to be a hard, hard game. There's a lot of hard feelings."

Arizona has yet to beat the Stars in three meetings over two seasons with Philadelphia winning all of them thanks to fourth-quarter rallies.

Long said the most bitter loss came last July 9 when the Stars beat the then-Chicago Blitz 44-38 in overtime in the first round of the USFL playoffs.

Chicago switched franchises with Arizona last Sept. 30 and Long said, "We've been waiting to meet Philadelphia again in the playoffs since the season started. We kind of knew it would come to this."

"They're one of the best teams in the league and we know we're one of the best. I think we match up pretty well and it should be an excellent offensive battle. But those past games will help us because it motivates us more to get even."

Most of the pre-game media hype has been directed toward the teams' two top rushers — Philadelphia's Kelvin Bryant and Arizona's Tim Spencer.

"That's fine with me. They deserve it," Long said. "Kelvin's a great athlete and I admire his talent. He's in a bigger media market and gets more national exposure just because he's in the East."

"And if they want to key on Tim Spencer, that's fine with me, too. It might make me that much more of a factor. I've been kind of overlooked most of the year anyway."

The 6-foot-4, 214-pound Long compiled 1,010 yards and 15 touchdowns on 225 carries — reaching the 1,000 mark on June 23 in the regular-season finale.

He and Spencer now are the only two running backs in pro football history to ever each rush for 1,000 yards in consecutive years while on the same team.

"I ran for 954 when I was in the NFL with the New York Jets one year (1978) and had over 1,000 last year with the Blitz (1,022). But this is really exciting," said Long. "Me and Tim complement each other real well and we're fortunate to be the first to do it back-to-back. It might not stand up long, though. But I hope it lasts a while so we can enjoy it."

Now 29, Long said he has "waited seven years to reach a championship game" and considers himself "very fortunate to be playing in one now considering guys like (Wrangler quarterback) Greg Landry is playing in his first after 16 years. This is my Super Bowl."

Arizona Coach George Allen said, "Kevin will play in a lot more of them if he keeps playing like he has for us the last two years."

Long, a veteran of five National Football League seasons with the Jets (1977-81), said he has no intention of leaving the USFL although two of the Wranglers are making the switch after Sunday night's game.

"At this point, I'm enjoying myself too much. I'm staying," he said. "The USFL is only 2 years old. I'd like to grow old with it."

Kinney Invitational gets relay records

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — American record holder Steve Scott held off 1976 Olympic champion John Walker of New Zealand and won the featured mile Saturday in the Kinney Invitational track and field meet, while three United States relay teams turned in sizzling times.

Scott, who had predicted that the winning time would be under 3 minutes, 50 seconds — the fastest ever on American soil — was far off in his forecast, despite the help of "rabbit" Peter Churney, who set the pace for nearly the first three laps.

Scott, after taking the lead with about 300 meters remaining, was clocked in 3:56.40, far off his American mark of 3:47.69.

Coming down the final straightaway, it was a battle between Scott and Walker, two of the premier milers in history. But Walker, who tried making his big move with less than 100 meters left, couldn't catch the fast-moving Scott.

Walker finished second in 3:56.77, and the next four finishers also were timed in four minutes or less. Walker was followed by Richie Harris (3:58.98), Mark Fricker (3:59.25), Tony Rodgers of New Zealand (3:59.8) and Agbert Guimaraes of Brazil (4:00.00).

Earl Jones, the American co-record holder in the 800, finished seventh in the mile in 4:01.6.

Meanwhile, the United States' 1,600-meter relay team of Willie Smith, Alonzo Babers, Ray Armstead and Walter McCoy was clocked in a sparkling 3:00.11, the second-fastest in the world this year, behind only the 3:00.07 posted by an East German team.

The Americans' time also broke the track record at the University of California's venerable Edwards Stadium. The old mark was 3:02.9, by a U.S. team in 1971.

The U.S. men's 400-meter relay unit of Sam Graddy, Ron Brown, Calvin Smith and Harvey Glance also smashed the stadium mark, clocking 38.91. The previous record was 39.1 by a United States team in 1966 and matched by an international team in 1971.

Graddy, Brown and Smith are scheduled to run in that order in the Olympic Games, with Carl Lewis replacing Glance on the anchor leg.

Lewis, also competing in the 100, 200 and long jump in the Games, skipped Saturday's meet in order to concentrate on his training for the Olympics.

His absence drew criticism from some of his teammates.

"I just feel being part of the team that all of the athletes should be here," Smith said about the first dress rehearsal for the U.S. squad. "It would be nice to have the four of us here."

Brown said Lewis "definitely" should have run Saturday.

Brown also won the 100, rallying in the final 15-20 meters to overtake Glance and Graddy. Brown was clocked in 10.26, Glance in 10.32 and Graddy in 10.33.

HARD WOOD — A leader through the first two rounds of the Busch Golf Classic, Willie Wood can lay claim to the third as well after completing play today with a sizzling 66 that was five under par. For more on the tournament see page 3B.

Transition common game plan for Oilers

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Oilers will report to training camp this week to face a new system, new head coach and new coaching staff but there should be no added confusion among the veterans who check in Friday.

Isn't this the way all Oiler training camps begin?

For the Oilers in recent years, transition has been the norm.

The Oilers started last season with Ed Biles as head coach, finished with a 2-14 record and Chuck Studley at the helm and begin anew under Hugh Campbell Wednesday when rookies report to the campus of Angelo State University in San Angelo.

"The hard part in a period of transition is to have the lines of communication open so that everybody knows what is expected of him," said Campbell, the Oilers' 12th coach in the franchise's 24-year history. "We've been impressed with the amount of people working out on their own and getting ready.

"If the sampling of the team that is here in town is true of the team as a whole, their conditioning will be such that our main efforts will be toward the education experience of training camp rather than the conditioning aspects."

The new hope for a better season lies in the arrival of quarterback Warren Moon, making his National Football League debut after playing for Campbell in the Canadian Football League.

Another new face will be former Dallas Cowboys wide receiver Butch Johnson, traded to the Oilers in the offseason for wide receiver Mike Renfro. Johnson had his best season as a Cowboy last season with 41 catches.

The rookie crop is headed by Nebraska offensive lineman Dean Steinkuhler, the second player chosen in the NFL draft.

Running back Earl Campbell also returns, happy that his contract squabbles are behind him.

Cotton growers: save bucks and beneficals.

DIPEL® helps protect the high-yielding bottom crop from bollworms. And, because DIPEL leaves beneficals in the field, you reduce the chances of getting locked into a regular-interval spray program. Net result: your overall insecticide costs are likely to be reduced.

Since DIPEL costs less per acre than most conventional insecticides...and beneficals continue working your fields...bottom-line profits should be greater!

DIPEL is a natural, biological worm killer. One bite of treated foliage and worms stop feeding almost immediately...then die within a few days. DIPEL has not shown worm resistance build-up, won't affect boll maturity, and has not shown harmful affects on man or his environment.

DIPEL 4L is the only microbial insecticide which is registered for use with cotton seed oil. DIPEL may also be tank mixed with ovicides such as chlordimeform or methomyl if significant eggs are present at time of treatment.

Apply DIPEL when the majority of worms are less than 1/2" long, and scouting reports show light to moderate (up to 15,000 worms per acre) populations.

This is the year you need to save bucks and beneficals while controlling bollworms. DIPEL does it all!

Angry scenes mar Davis Cup doubles

By The Associated Press

John McEnroe and Peter Fleming turned back Jose-Luis Clerc and Martin Jaite 7-5, 4-6, 6-3, 6-1 in the doubles Saturday to give the United States an insurmountable 3-0 lead over Argentina in a best-of-five quarter-final Davis Cup match.

In contrast to two singles matches Friday night, Saturday's contest became an emotional battle. McEnroe and Clerc argued at the net, and McEnroe became so enraged by two line calls he bellowed, "America" at the officials.

With the match even at one set each, the Americans went ahead by winning a third set filled with service breaks.

The third set also featured a long verbal exchange between McEnroe and Clerc, bringing French referee Patrick Flodrops onto the court to restore order.

McEnroe apparently accused the Argentines of hitting at the Americans.

Earlier, McEnroe had appeared to drive a ball at Jaite, and then waved a finger at the teen-ager.

The Americans took charge in the fourth set, breaking Jaite's serve in the fourth game and Clerc's in the sixth. Fleming served out the match, and McEnroe put away a volley on match point.

McEnroe defeated Clerc, and Jimmy Connors defeated Jaite in singles play Friday night.

In other World Group quarter-final action Saturday, host Czechoslovakia took a 2-1 lead over France as Tomas Smid and Pavel Slozil teamed to beat Henri Leconte and Pascal Portes of 6-2, 5-7, 7-5, 4-6, 6-2 in the doubles event.

Wood knocking hard at Busch title door

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — Wee Willie Wood, a slightly-built, soft-spoken little fellow, set still another seasonal record and took 4-stroke command going into Sunday's final round of the $350,000 Anheuser-Busch Golf Classic.

His closest pursuers, Wayne Levi and host pro Curtis Strange, the men he played with in Saturday's third round and the men who will be his partners again Sunday, agreed the tournament is in his hands, that it's his to win or lose over the last 18 holes.

"In golf," said Strange, "you can't play defense against his offense."

"If he shoots more than two under par, he's gonna win. For me to have a chance, I'm going to need some help from him."

Levi agreed.

"If he plays fair to good, it's gonna be tough to beat him," Levi said, and indicated it was all up to the rookie who has led all the way.

"If he's around par, if he lets us get within one or two, then it's going to be tougher on him."

"I'm going to try to keep the same strategy, try to play aggressive, keep firing at the pins, not back off," Wood said.

Wood, 5-foot-7 and 135 pounds, reeled off a string of four consecutive birdies on his way to a third-round 66 and completed three trips over the 6,746 yard Kingsmill Golf Club course in 197, 16 under par and the lowest 54-hole total on the PGA Tour this year.

Wood also set the seasonal mark of 131 for 36 holes after Friday's play.

Only his two playing companions on this muggy day on the banks of the James River, Levi and host pro Strange, could stay within striking distance of Wood, the low qualifier in last year's PGA Tour Qualifying School.

Levi, winner of six career titles, scattered seven birdies across his card in round of 68 and finished 54 holes at 201, including a bogey on the final hole after the national television cameras had ended their coverage for the day.

Strange, whose home is on this golf course, bogeyed the first three holes, but rallied with an eagle and three birdies for a 69 and 202 total.

Ronnie Black was next at 66-204. Lanny Wadkins, Mike Reid and Gary Hallberg followed at 205, a distant eight shots off the pace.

Wood, with rounds of 63, 68 and 65 has led by margins of two, two and four strokes in the chase for the first title of his short career.

"I was a little nervous when we started today," he admitted, and got away to a rather uncertain start.

He missed a birdie putt of about four feet on the first hole, then missed the second green and bogeyed the hole.

"I tried to relax, settle myself down. I took a couple of deep breaths, got a drink of water," he said in his Oklahoma drawl.

Then, he got on a roll.

He punched a sand wedge to four feet and birdied the third. He hit a 4-iron second shot to six feet and birdied the fourth. He used the 4-iron again, this time from the tee on the par-3 fifth and came within one foot of making a hole in one. The tap-in was routine. And on the sixth, he rapped in a 20-footer for his fourth consecutive birdie.

On the back nine, Wood holed from about 20 feet on the 12th hole and then coaxed in a wide-breaking 15-foot birdie putt on the 13th.

That gave him a four-shot lead. Levi cut it to three on two occasions, but bogeyed two of the last three holes.

One more drink to stir keeps 'Mr. October' coming around

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Reggie Jackson seems to be in excellent spirits these days.

For one thing, he's been swinging the bat pretty well lately. He has already had matched last year's home run total and is approaching a major milestone, 500 career home runs. Only 12 major leaguers have accomplished such a feat.

For another thing, his California Angels are involved in a pennant race, meaning he might get another shot at adding to his reputation as Mr. October.

And for a third, he feels very good about his recently released autobiography.

It all adds up to a dramatic improvement over last season's summer of discontent.

Jackson's book was released for public consumption on July 4 and has already hit some best-seller lists.

"It's a good book, it's an interesting story because the main character has had a lot of interesting and strange things happen to him," Jackson said in an interview this week. "The cast of characters makes for an attraction."

Jackson smiled as he rattled off some of those characters — Charles O. Finley, George Steinbrenner, Billy Martin, Earl Weaver and Graig Nettles.

"I had a great deal of help," said Jackson, who co-authored the book with New York Daily News sportswriter Mike Lupica. "I tried to make people feel what I was feeling."

"The most difficult part was trying to be objective. I tried to leave any bitterness I had out of it."

Fact is, more than a little bitterness showed through. Quite a bit of it involved racism.

"So many people seem shocked that I've dealt with so much racism," Jackson said. "I don't know why. I'm black, aren't I?"

"I think it's a great book for children to read, especially black children."

Jackson, now 38 and in his third season with the Angels, said in the book that he was told by his coach at Arizona State, Bobby Winkles, that he wasn't the first draft choice of the New York Mets in 1966 because he had a white girl friend. Jackson was drafted second, by the Kansas City A's, who moved to Oakland in 1968.

Finley, who owned the A's, was characterized by Jackson as a baseball genius. However, player and owner battled constantly, mainly over money.

"There was a lot of warmth in those eight years," Jackson recalled. "We (the players on the A's) grew up together. We were family."

Just before the 1976 season began, Jackson was traded to the Baltimore Orioles, where manager Weaver was described as "just plain wonderful every day."

Following the 1976 season, Jackson signed a five-year, $2.96 million contract with the New York Yankees, owned by Steinbrenner. His first season with the club was a nightmare, even though the Yankees won the World Series and he blasted three home runs in the final game of the Series.

"I couldn't discuss my first year with the Yankees for three years," he said. "The scars were too deep."

Jackson had an awful time getting along with most of his teammates and his manager, Martin. In the interview, he accepted some of the responsibility for those problems.

"I was cocky and carried an arrogance," he recalled. "When I first got there, I drove a Rolls Royce, which was not the thing to do. It was too flashy. By the middle of the season, I drove a Volkswagen. That didn't help. I didn't understand being humble."

In the book, Jackson said, among other things about Martin: "Billy really is a funny guy. He's nice, he's mean. He's good and bad. He's kind and cruel."

BASEBALL CARDS

About twenty years before the American League was organized in 1901, the first baseball cards appeared. Photographs were taken in an artist's studio. Action was simulated to approximate game conditions. For instance, the baseballs that the players apparently were hitting were suspended from the ceiling by a string. The bases that players were shown sliding into were actually set in a wooden floor. These early baseball cards were printed on paper with sepia tone and included in packs of cigarettes from the leading companies of that era. Bubblegum baseball cards originated in 1933 with cards made of heavy cardboard and averaging 2½x3 inches.

U.S. Women's Open gets new co-leaders

PEABODY, Mass. (AP) — Amy Alcott, who thrives on pressure and tough golf courses, and veteran Donna White, who is shooting for the moon, moved into a tie for the 54-hole lead Saturday in the U.S. Women's Open Championship.

Deadlocked at 218, two strokes over par, they will carry a one-shot lead into the final round Sunday. Alcott, who numbers the U.S. Open among her 19 championships since joining the pro tour in 1975, gave her rivals something to think about overnight.

"It's going to be a dogfight," the 28-year-old Alcott said. "I'm going to put the ball on the ground, tee it up and rip it. I'm going to play my same aggressive, go-for-broke game."

"To win the U.S. Open would be ecstasy, the ultimate," said White, the 1976 U.S. amateur champion with only three LPGA victories since she began the pro tour in 1977. "It's something most golfers dream about. I consider this the most important tournament we play all year. Amy has won it before, won a lot of tournaments, so maybe she has an advantage, but I'm not going to think about it."

Blistering heat, sun-baked greens and gusty winds plagued most players for the third day in a row, but White and Alcott didn't have much trouble. Then Alcott, the 1980 U.S. Open champ, came charging home to pull into a tie with just one round left in the $225,000 event worth $36,000, plus a ton of endorsement money, to the winner.

REACTS — Penny Pulz was all smiles after parring the 13th hole Friday on a day when she was even for both rounds and in a share of first place at the U.S. Women's Open. Saturday was disaster though for the former Ohio State standout as she blew up to a 78 and finished four strokes back after the third round.

Whitworth, winner of 84 tournaments but never the U.S. Open, had a 75 for 223. That tied her with Haynie, Bradley and Cathy Marino, who had a 73. Patty Sheehan, the LPGA cham-

Midland: From boom to bust to boomerang

MIDLAND — The skyline of this oil-dependent West Texas city — tall, sleek, concrete-and-glass buildings clustered in the middle of an often-forlorn part of the state — occasionally stuns first-time visitors.

The number of buildings, their size, and the money obviously needed to construct them is unexpected amid the dry plains of the state where the horizon is always visible.

"It takes many people aback," said Carolyn Ivy, executive secretary of the city's Chamber of Commerce. "But once they get to know the city, they understand. It's a great place."

And, apparently, many people are beginning to get to know Midland.

Though its growth rate is not as awesome as it was three years ago when the oil business was booming, Midland's skyline is expanding steadily, as is its population.

Midland officials say their city is experiencing a "steady growth rate."

And some outside analysts contend Midland, which serves as the center of oil production in the vast Permian Basin, is one of, if not the, nation's fastest-growing city.

One report, prepared by Dun and Bradstreet Corp. in New York, showed that Midland's population jumped 29.7 percent between the 1980 census and 1983.

Reports vary as to the exact size of Midland, but city officials say the population currently is close to 100,000.

Despite a devastating oil bust two years ago that left many people jobless and several companies faltering, Midland "has stabilized. We're definitely not going backwards," said City Manager James Brown.

New apartments and new office space also are signs of Midland's once-again healthy economy, officials said.

A study conducted in January by the Midland Chamber of Commerce revealed that Midland has more than 6.2 million square feet of leasable office space. That number is an 11.55 percent increase over nerve center of the West Texas business sector, is rebounding from an oil bust two years and is now leading all other cities in the nation in population growth.

TALL CITY SKYLINE — The Midland skyline, which surprises many first-time visitors to the Permian Basin, rises tall from the flat desert plains of West Texas. The predominantly white-collar community, the

1983 and exceeds the amount of leasable office space available in 1981 by more than 3 million square feet.

According to "Texas Facts & Figures," a report published by Texas Commerce Bancshares Inc., 60 percent of Midland's office developments has been built since 1979.

The city's boom in office space is in sharp contrast to several other Texas cities, such as Dallas, where the amount of leasable office space declined during the past year.

According to the business development section of the Dallas Chamber of Commerce, more than

'We're not the normal mix. Our economic foundation is not broad-based...Our blue-collar community is not large.'

City Manager James Brown

48 million square feet of leasable office space was available in 1983. Currently, the chamber said, the amount of office space in Dallas is about 38 million square feet.

Ms. Ivy said other construction in Midland also is "growing at an unprecedented rate."

In the past two years, 9,000 new apartment units have been built in Midland, bringing the number of apartments in the city to more than 13,000.

Across the board, in residential, retail, multi-tenant and commercial buildings, the vacancy rate stands at about 20 percent, she said. But she predicted that if Midland has a 3 percent growth rate this year, the vacancy rate will drop to a mere 6 percent.

"Midland is growing fast and really quite steadily," Ms. Ivy said. "There never has been a lull."

Yet despite the heavy influx of people, the unemployment rate in Midland remains relatively low.

At the end of May, Midland's jobless rate was 3.5 percent, according to the Texas Employment Commission.

Ms. Ivy said many of the unemployed people in Midland are those in the oil-service business who were affected by the 1982 oil bust.

"The service end of the industry was hurt the most," she said. "But, now, things are much better and all our growth stems from an expansion in the oil industry."

Midland, at the corner of western Texas near the New Mexico border, sits in the heart of the Permian Basin, which, as the largest single producer of oil in the United States, covers more than 100,000 square miles in 54 West Texas counties and four southeastern New Mexico counties.

Approximately 700 oil- and gas-related companies have established offices in Midland, which most of its residents describe as a city with a "small-town" atmosphere.

But Midland does have "many amenities that draw people to us," Brown said.

"Beside the fact that our economy is good and the unemployment rate is low, we have things now that big cities have," he said, pointing out that Midland is home for a community theater, symphony, several museums and nightclubs.

And with the highest per capita income among all urban areas in the nation, Midland attracts people "who want to try and be a part of it all," Brown said.

"We're not the normal mix. Our economic foundation is not broad-based," he explained. "Our blue-collar community is not large."

Midland is generally an "administrative and technical" community, he said. "That is a big attraction."

Brown said he does not believe Midland ever will experience the rapid all-at-once growth it did three years ago when people flocked to the Permian Basin to try their hands at the oil industry.

But, he said, it's obvious the steady growth will continue for several years.

"That kind of growth is better," he said. "It's easier to plan for, easier to absorb."

DRY BONES — A Baylor University archaeologist examines skeletal remains of mammoths unearthed from a field near downtown Waco. The animals died together about 17,500 years ago.

Prehistoric mystery

'Nursery' of mammoths discovered near Waco

WACO (AP) — In a field only five miles from downtown Waco, Baylor University archaeologists have unearthed the skeletons of 10 mammoths who apparently died together about 17,500 years ago, the school announced Friday.

The evidence suggests a "nursery" herd of mostly female and baby mammoths. How they died is a mystery, experts say.

The real detective work is trying to determine if these animals were the targets of predators — either human or animal," said Calvin Smith, director of the Strecker Museum at Baylor. "At this point we are unable to determine the exact cause of death."

Smith said the mammoths may have been trapped in a swamp or bog or they may have been drowned together in a sudden flood. Smith, who is overseeing the excavation, said it is unclear whether the animals died at the site or if they were washed there by flood waters.

"Early man often trapped herds of animals by stampeding them into adverse situations," he said. "It will help if we discover any man-made artifacts, such as fleshing tools or scrapers that they might have used to dismember the animals."

The bones were first discovered in April 1978 by two men who were renting property in the area. They told Strecker Museum staff about finding some large bones protruding from the sides of the drainage ditch.

"Originally, I looked on it as a routine identification," said David Lintz, assistant museum director. "I knew it was a mammoth by the size of the bones. I started looking around and found more bones, some feet away from those shown me by the two men. Then I discovered some teeth and an upper jaw with tusk fragments attached."

It was not until Lintz found the third thighbone that he realized more than one animal was involved, he said.

"Pretty soon, we had uncovered four sets of teeth," he said. A fully developed adult bull mammoth of this type would have stood about 14 feet high at the shoulder, but the remains found at the site appear to be from smaller animals — suggesting a "nursery" herd of mostly female and infant mammoths, researchers said.

The remains were recovered from a drainage ditch near where the Brazos and Bosque rivers join. Today, the land contains shrubbery, and cedar and mesquite trees, but it still forms part of the Bosque River flood plain.

Excavation is continuing at the site, a semi-round area about 30 feet in diameter and 12 feet deep at one end of the ditch. Two large parachute silks are strung between trees to shade diggers from the scorching Texas sun.

THIS IS MY HOME — David Stroppa (left), 16, shows Bert Patterson, 15, where he lives in Italy. David stayed with Bert and his family for a month. Bert returned to Italy with David today.

Boys visit foreign lands

By KIM KIRKHAM
Lifestyle Writer

Living with Bert Patterson and his family for a month has given David Stroppa, a foreign exchange student from Italy, the chance to learn about America, Texas and Big Spring.

David, 16, and Bert, 15, became involved in the Foreign Exchange Program through their local Rotary clubs.

David says he hasn't felt any homesickness. "I stay only a month (here), so there isn't a reason for missing Italy. I think it is also a very good thing to travel around the world, seeing new countries and meeting new people.

David's favorite thing about Big Spring is "the way of life. (It's) simple, better than way of life in Italy." David explains that Texas is "like a country...I like also the place — the land, trees (and) cactus." He has also enjoyed the Rodeo, Summer Fest, cowboys and hamburgers.

"HERE PEOPLE ARE more friendly, but also they love very much their state. They like very much tradition and their country. In Italy it's not so patriotic. I think it's a good thing to like the state where you live," he said. "In Italy sometimes people like only the country where they live. They don't respect other people coming from other parts."

The main reason David chose America is "for learning English and to know another country and other people," he said, "but the most important is to learn English."

David is striving to conquer the English language because "at the present, English is (the) most important language in the world. I think (in) every work you need to speak English, because it's an international language," he said. Dialects have proven an obstacle to this goal, however. People in America "don't speak the language with the same pronunciation," he said.

David studied English for two years in the private school he attends, but last year he had to learn it on his own because his school did not offer a third year of English.

David explained that schools in Italy are different from schools in America. In Italy, students are required to attend five years of elementary school and three years of middle school. Students then decide either to attend technical school or to attend a school where they advance in subjects such as Latin, Greek, history and English. David chose the latter and is attending a private school, which he has attended for two years. He will attend the school for three more years and then attend a university for five years.

David is from the Milan region of Northern Italy. He lives in Serano d'adda, population 17,000. His father is an independent petrochemical salesman. His mother is a housewife. He has an aunt and uncle who live in New York and import books and newspapers from Italy to the United States, Canada, Australia and several other countries.

BERT PATTERSON, son of Dr. and Mrs. Robert Patterson of Big Spring, left today for Italy with David. They will spend a month skiing and traveling to places like Venice, Florence, and the Mediterranean Sea. David's family plans to show Bert "how we live in Italy."

"I want to learn some of their language, geography and their ways of life. I also want to go to it because it's a real old country and I want to learn some of their history," said Bert about his travel plans. "I think it will be fun to go to other countries, meet new people and just see their different life styles."

Troy Fraser, a member of a local Rotary Club, informed Bert about the Rotary Foreign Exchange Program, and recommended Bert to his Rotary Club for the program. David's father is a member of a Rotary Club in Italy.

To be eligible, students must be in the top one-third of their class and be good representative of their country, Fraser said. The boys had to apply for the program and be interviewed. Then the Rotary made arrangements for the exchange. The boys were matched with each other based on similar interests and age.

According to Fraser, a club can sponsor as many students as eligible. The local district sponsored approximately 40 students this year, and two of those students were sponsored by the Big Spring Rotary clubs. The clubs are planning to sponsor three students next summer.

Patty Schuelke, 27, was "very surprised," when she was crowned the First Lady of Martin County at the Gala Centennial Ball held in Stanton, July 7. Mrs. Schuelke's court includes Tere Garlington, first runner-up; Leigh Ann Graves, second; Gwen Sawyer, third; Mary Prudie Brown, fourth; Doris Bergeson, fifth; and Ruth Owen, sixth.

Mrs. Schuelke won $1000 in cash, two airplane tickets designated to Las Vegas, two tickets to a Texas Rangers game, 11 by 14 framed photograph from Dillard's, $75 gift certificate from Midland Park Mall and $25 gift certificate to Cattleman Steakhouse. Runner-ups also were given several prizes.

Being crowned First Lady is "about the most exciting thing that has ever happened to me," Mrs. Schuelke said. "It is a wonderful feeling to be able to represent the people of Martin County. I'm very glad I won." As First Lady, she reigned over the Centennial pageant and attended several Centennial activities.

Besides being First Lady of Martin County, Mrs. Schuelke was a principal actor in the Centennial Pageant and a member of a Belle Chapter. "Working with the people in the play is an experience I will never forget."

Mrs. Schuelke, who lives in the northern part of Martin County, was nominated as a First Lady candidate by Lynn Smith. Mrs. Schuelke said she received a call informing her of the nomination and was asked to accept the nomination. She and other First Lady candidates attended a tea, June 5 to learn how the contest worked and what the prizes were.

First Lady candidates competed for the title by telling me to sell tickets that last week, I wouldn't have won. I was tired," she said. "My family made a special effort to help me the last week." The Schuelkes have two children, Tarah, 5, and Clint, 17 months.

Martin County in center stage

By RHONDA WOODALL
Lifestyle Writer

The action back stage at "Centennial: A Story of Martin County" pageant, this week, was as fast paced as that on stage. About 375 people were involved in the pageant which was held at Stanton High School Stadium.

Cast members dressed in various costumes arranged extra costumes and props they would need, then settled back to wait for their cues. Some families spreaded blankets on the ground and enjoyed a picnic. Indians munched on potato chips and drank soda pop. Disco dancers talked to pioneers. Men tended to the horses and antique cars to be used in the pageant.

"It's been the most fun I've had in a long time," said Peggy Creech who plays a pioneer in the production. "The whole thing is so impressive — the opening ceremony, the religious ceremony, and the finale. It's beautiful."

Several families participated in the Centennial pageant including the Charlie Pinkerton family. Billie Pinkerton, mother, said "There's something about us all working together as a family. It's something we've never done before." The Pinkerton children, Rita and John, danced together in the pageant.

Another family who participated in the production was the Gary Reid family. Reid as Adam Konz, one of the original founders of Martin County, starred in the production. Reid, wife Ruth and sons Jake and Casey "try to stay involved in community activities, and this was one that was hard to miss," Mrs. Reid said. "We love it (working in the pageant.) It's an experience that has really pulled the whole county together. We are all one big family."

Not all the performers were from Martin County. Melissa Trinaystch from Kerrville danced in the pageant. The high school student is staying with relatives in Martin County. "Grandmother said it would be interesting to be in the pageant, so I got in it," she said. "I love it. I've met a lot of people, and made a lot of friends."

The cast had been practicing for three and half weeks for the production. "I'm very pleased with the production," said Ronnie Treece, director. "The cast has been excellent. I think they are doing a really super job."

"We've had real good attendance so far," said Lance Hopper, Thursday. Treece expected larger crowds for the weekend performances. More than $19,000 of advance tickets had been sold, Treece said.

The pageant, also written and staged by Ronnie Treece of Rogers Co. in Pittsburgh, Penn., told the history of Martin County from the conquistadors to the present. The pageant featured dramatization, comedy and dancing. The production ended with the entire cast carrying United States flags and singing. Following each performance, the sky was filled with fireworks.

The pageant featured scenes about the Indians; Martin County history of education; the Texas and Pacific Railroad; the history of churches; the Gay 90s; World War I; War World II; and a man on the moon. During foreign war scenes, Martin County men who had gave their lives for their country were honored.

The show was narrated by Mary Prudie Brown, Dwayne Owen, Bonnie Witt, Wayne Mitchell, Karen Graves and Jerry Neal.

THE NEW ORIENTAL LOOK — Joni Avery, 20, poses for a picture for the Herald before her departure to Hong Kong and Japan as part of a three-week trip sponsored partly by Texas Christian University where Ms. Avery is enrolled. She left for the Far East Thursday morning and is scheduled to return Aug. 5.

Joni Avery to study oriental business practices during trip

By LUIS RIOS
Staff Writer

It is a West meets the Far East adventure for hometown girl Joni Avery as she embarked Thursday for a three-week trip that will take her to Hong Kong and Japan as part of a program sponsored by Texas Christian University.

Ms. Avery, 20, daughter of Jerry and Johnnie Lou Avery of Big Spring, will complete work on her BBA degree from TCU's M.J. School of Business May 1985, she said.

"It will be a total removal of what I am used to," said Ms. Avery about her trip. "I'm really nervous and scared. I'm apprehensive about the trip because I've never been overseas."

Ms. Avery is one of 17 students selected for the trip, sponsored in cooperation with the American Chamber of Commerce in Hong Kong and the International House of Japan, Inc.

The tour will expose the students to finance, marketing and management practices in Hong Kong and Japan, she said. An industrial tour of the Peoples Republic of China also is planned.

"I have done so much research," Ms. Avery said. "I've read and studied a lot, especially about their culture."

'I have done so much research. I've read and studied a lot, especially about their culture.'

"I want to see it first hand," she said concerning the diverse business concepts of Japan and Hong Kong. "Maybe we can take some of their philosophies and views and rearrange them to adapt to the U.S."

Miss Avery said she was very excited about the idea of getting to meet so many different cultures and lifestyles in the oriental countries on the tour.

"I want to soak up the sights and sounds, meets as many people as I can and see as much as possible," she said.

Joni Avery travels to Japan

JONI AVERY left Thursday for her trip to Japan with 16 Texas Christian University business students. She dropped by the Herald Wednesday and seemed very anxious to begin her trip.

The REV. AND MRS. GEORGE REUBEN HARRINGTON have returned from a McDonald family reunion at Chicot State Park in Chicot, La. More than 50 people of four generations attended the week-long gathering. Eight states were represented including: Texas, Louisiana, Georgia, South Carolina, Virginia, Mississippi, Florida and California. Mrs. Harrington's new book, Down Memory Lane was published just in time for the reunion.

Pardon me, but FELECIA FORD did not sign with a modeling agency in Lubbock as I mentioned in a previous Tidbit column. However, she will be modeling for local stores in the Lubbock area.

The lucky travelers are: NANCY KOGER, ADDIE BROWN, HEIDI BROWN, CRAIG FISCHER, MIKE RAMEY and CHRIS WALKER. Traveling with the Big Springers are PEGGY ROGERS and SUZI CLAWSON, both of Amarillo. They will be gone about 19 days.

Today they will depart from Florence, Italy to drive to Leysin, a Swiss resort high in the Alps above Lake Geneva. En route they will stop in Pisa to see the famous Leaning Tower. Sounds exciting, doesn't it? Among the many places they will visit and learn about are: Amsterdam in the Netherlands (where they will stay with Dutch families); Heidelberg, Germany; Innsbruck, Austria; Venice, Rome, Florence, Pisa, all in Italy; Leysin, Switzerland; Beaune, Paris, Versailles, all in France; and London, England.

Dear Abby

Grandson raped by homosexual

DEAR ABBY: A 19-year-old male homosexual molested and forcibly raped my 11-year-old grandson recently. There has been a preliminary hearing on this, and the judge who presided determined that a crime had been committed and a trial is now pending.

My grandson is now wondering if this criminal act committed upon his person has made him a homosexual.

CONCERNED GRANDFATHER
DEAR CONCERNED: If your grandson was a heterosexual before he was raped, he is still a heterosexual. Example: If a lesbian is raped by a heterosexual man, it will not cause her to become heterosexual — she will remain a lesbian.

It should relieve your grandson's mind, and yours, to know that this singular unfortunate experience has not made him a homosexual.

DEAR ABBY: The letters from all the "forgotten mothers" following Mother's Day cause me to comment on the other side of the coin. For years I remembered my mother on Mother's Day, dreading her reaction to my gift because I knew I could never please her.

Let me share a few memories from the past: There was a time I spotted a rhinestone cross in a display case, so I bought it for Mother's Day. It wasn't exactly the Hope Diamond, but I thought it would be a fine gift. When Mother opened the package she said, "My God, when are you going to develop some taste?" Several months later she asked if I would mind if she gave the cross to her beauty operator for Christmas.

There was the evening of her birthday when I delivered her birthday gift. I had called her earlier to wish her a happy birthday, but she chastised me for not bringing the gift earlier since her birthday started in the morning and was almost over by the time I arrived.

Now we come to this Mother's Day. On several occasions she had said she wanted a nice set of breakfast dishes because her pottery set was chipped. I selected a lovely breakfast set. A month later it was still unopened. I'm sure somebody's daughter is going to receive it at a bridal shower.

Last week was Mother's birthday, so after pondering about what to buy her, I finally asked her what she would enjoy. Her reply, "You can't afford anything I want." She laughed when she said it, but it hurt me because I think she really meant it.

So, sing me no sad songs, mothers. Children are not arbitrarily thoughtless. Sometimes we just give up.

Lifestyle policies

We will be pleased to announce the news of your engagement, wedding, silver or golden anniversary in the Lifestyle section of the Big Spring Herald. We try to use the story on the date you request, but sometimes space does not permit this.

The information must be submitted to us on a form available at the Herald no later than Wednesday noon before the Sunday it is to be published. The form must include a name and telephone number of a person whom we can reach during the day for more information.

We will use a picture of the couple in the announcements. Or in the case of engagement announcements where a picture of the couple is not available, we will use one of the bride-elect. The picture must be a professional quality studio photograph. We prefer a 5 x 7 glossy black and white print. We ask for this kind of photograph so that it will reproduce well in the newspaper. Following the picture's publication, it may be picked up at the Lifestyle department.

The information for the story may be brought to the Lifestyle department of the Herald, which is located at 710 Scurry. Or it may be mailed to Lifestyle Department, Big Spring Herald, P.O. Box 1431, Big Spring, Texas 79720. Call us at (915) 263-7331 if we can help with more information or clarification of our policies.

If the bride-elect, prospective bridegroom or their parents do not now or have never lived in our area, we need to know why you are submitting your engagement to the Herald. If only grandparents live in our area, please, give their names and addresses.

WEDDINGS
If a wedding writup is submitted to the Herald after the wedding has occurred, the space allotted to it will diminish according to the length of time that has passed since the wedding.

Parents are advised to read to their children

SANDIEGO, Calif. (AP) — It's important to read aloud to children of all ages, and parents should revive the practice, says Dr. Lambert "Buzz" Baker, a professor at United States International University here, who teaches children's literature classes in the School of Education.

Baker reports that a study of three north San Diego County schools done by a USIU graduate student in 1983 revealed that only 13 percent of the parents had ever read or told stories to their children.

He points out that reading aloud has multiple benefits for children. Not only does hearing a well-read story motivate children to read on their own, but it can also make children want to write their own stories and poems.

"The sound of words is completely different from the sight," Baker says. "The word is the same word; it means the same to me. But I can play with those words when I read out loud to you, I can emphasize them."

One reason parents read to children less is that television is readily available now to provide entertainment, he notes.

But Baker believes television is a mediocre substitute for good children's literature. It's also unfortunate that once a child reaches age 11 or 12, even parents who read aloud when their children were younger seem to abandon the practice, he adds.

Baker is also a fan of story telling, which he considers another lost art, because the story can be tailored to meet the needs and interests of the audience. Although he has not written children's books, he frequently tells stories he has written to groups of children.

"They are all my stories and every one of them was made for a very specific purpose, to tell a very specific thing without preaching," he explains.

When looking for good books to read aloud or for books a child can read by himself, Baker suggests parents seek books based on true stories. "Good children's literature, like good adult literature, is all based on truth."

Children in their preteen years read more than they will during any other period of their lives, he says. Because children learn values by reading, Baker says, there is a need for books for older children which deal with subjects such as divorce.

Although he admits there is a controversy surrounding books such as those by author Judy Blume, he argues they provide information to children who are searching for help in dealing with just such real problems as those portrayed in the books.

"Most people are totally unaware of the fact that what they believe as adults is directly related to what they read as children,"

Baker says. "What I believe now in terms of value structure, I got from children's stories that were read to me or children's stories that I read myself."

Additional evidence that Baker cites to support his belief in the power of what children read is his collection of literature that was read by children in Germany at the time of Hitler's Third Reich. The books showed what the Hitler Youth Movement became, Baker said.

"Kids are not born believing anything," he says. "They get what they believe from us and the simplest and most subliminal way to give it is through literature."

In terms of the literature that

American children read today, the professor says we have to ask questions like "Do truth and justice prevail in the end?" when we are evaluating a book for a child.

"You and I both know that truth and justice do not always win out. But that's not the question. The question is do we believe in truth and justice, do we believe in the Bill of Rights, do we believe in 'give me your tired, your poor?' If we do, then our children should get that in literature," he said.

But just because books for children and young people need to have a message, that does not mean they should moralize, Baker warns.

Understanding terms makes shopping for jewelry easier

Any gold necklace may be a good purchase for you, depending on the quality and durability you want. You can make your choice more easily if you understand the terms used to describe gold quality and durability.

KARAT GOLD JEWELRY

Guidelines established by the Federal Trade Commission in cooperation with the jewelry industry state that the word "gold," used by itself, means 24 karat (24K) gold. But because gold is a very soft metal, it is usually mixed with base metals to increase its hardness for jewelry.

The "karat" marking will tell you what percentage of gold is mixed with the other metals. If fourteen parts of gold are mixed with ten parts of base metal, the combination is called 14 karat (14K) gold. In the United States, 10K and 18K are other typical marks on gold jewelry. In these compositions, the karat gold is uniform throughout. The higher the karat rating, the higher the percentage of gold in the object. Durability is influenced by the jewelry design, its resistance to wear and corrosion, and the condition and frequency of its use.

SOLID GOLD

"Solid gold" is not the same thing as pure gold (24 karat). Solid gold means that the inside of the jewelry is not hollow. The proportion of gold in the piece of jewelry is still determined by the karat mark.

GOLD FILLED

Gold filled jewelry is made from a base metal that has had layers of karat gold mechanically bonded to both sides like a sandwich. Such jewelry may be marked with the karat of gold used, plus the abbreviation for gold filled ("12K GF," for example). Unless it is marked otherwise, the gold alloy constitutes at least 1/20th of the total weight of the object. If there is less gold alloy, it must be so marked (1/40th 12K GF). Gold filled jewelry usually lasts a long time, but depending on use, its coating can eventually wear away.

This mechanically gold clad base metal also may be called "gold overlay" or "rolled gold plate."

GOLD ELECTROPLATE

Some jewelry has gold deposited on its surface electrolytically. The FTC's jewelry industry guidelines state that this deposit should be termed "gold electroplate" if the thickness is equal to at least 7 millionths of an inch of fine gold. Any coating thinner than this must be described as "gold wash" or "gold flash." If the coating is at least 100 millionths of an inch thick, it can be called heavy gold electroplate. For watches, which usually are required to withstand more wear, there is a higher standard.

Watches should have a gold coating of 750 millionths of an inch to be described as gold electroplate and a coating twice as thick to be called heavy gold electroplate.

MICRONS

Advertisers sometimes use the term microns to describe the thickness of electroplate. (A micron is known in the scientific community as a micrometer.) One micron is equal to about 40 millionths of an inch. This is approximately the same thickness as the reflective coating on a mirror. In order to be termed "gold electroplate," jewelry must have a coating that is .175 microns thick, and watches must have a coating that is 19 microns thick. This may be practical information to use in comparison shopping.

QUALITY MARKS

No gold jewelry is required to bear a karat quality mark, but most jewelry does. If there is a quality mark, the National Stamping Act requires it to be accurate.

The Act also requires the maker or seller who puts the item in interstate commerce to place its U.S. registered trademark beside the quality mark. The purchaser can then determine who manufactured the item.

MORE INFORMATION

The local consumer protection agency or Better Business Bureau may be able to provide information about jewelers or dealers in the area. The Jeweler's Vigilance Committee, an industry association, is another source of information. Their address is: 1180 Avenue of the Americas, 8th Floor, New York, NY 10036. Although the FTC monitors the jewelry industry for unfair or deceptive trade practices, it does not intervene in individual disputes.

For other information about jewelry, write for "Bargain Jewelry" or "Guides for the Jewelry Industry," Federal Trade Commission, Public Reference Office, Washington, D.C. 20580.

It is possible that problems you may be having with your nails may be the result of some medication that you are taking. If nails begin to change color, chip, if transverse lines appear or if you begin to actually lose your nails, then you should consult a doctor. Recent research has shown that the antibiotic, tetracycline, widely used for acne and skin infections, can produce a sun-sensitive reaction, causing nails to loosen from their beds. Other dermatological and certain arthritic medications can cause nail defects as well. Your doctor may be able to change your prescription, continue to treat your condition, and still save your nails.

Dr. Donohue

The logic behind the warming up

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Please discuss the therapeutic values of applying heat prior to exercise and ice afterwards. — J.S.

This is a recommended treatment, especially for those who have soreness problems at the start of their training season.

There are many ways to apply heat prior to exercise. As the name implies, heating muscles is what lies behind the athletic warmup itself. Warmed muscles and tendons are more flexible and less likely to be pulled. Warmed muscles also have better circulation. And as you warm muscles you call more of their fibers into action. This is the famous recruitment effect. The warming also helps spread nerve signals.

There is more than one way to warm up muscles and tendons. You can apply heat directly with a hot towel, for example. Using a sauna or hot whirlpool is another way. And perhaps the best of all warm-ups is calisthenics, especially the kind you go through utilizing the same motions involved in the sport itself. But you do this in a relaxed, easy manner.

Yes, ice can be used afterward, especially if you have had a previous injury from the activity, for example if you suffer chronic tennis elbow. It's not a bad idea to ice the elbow after a match, even when there is no immediate pain obvious at that time. Otherwise, when there has never been any difficulty or pain, you still can cool down the muscles gradually by using the same exercises you used to get them ready. If you do that you might prevent muscle soreness, for the cooling down process keeps blood circulating to the tired muscles and carries away the lactic acid that may have built up as part of the process of muscle use.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I am told that one of the adverse effects of using the male steroids for body building is a rise in blood cholesterol. Is this true? — R.P.Y.

This is thought to be true. As you know, there are two main types of cholesterol in the blood — HDL (high-density lipoprotein type) and LDL (low-density lipoprotein type). The HDL kind is often referred to as the good cholesterol because it is more easily removed from the blood than is the LDL type. Hence, the chance of developing cholesterol buildup on artery walls is reduced by having more of the HDL type present.

In one study of athletes who were using the male steroid preparations, there was a rise noted in the numbers of LDL and an accompanying drop in the HDLs (the good cholesterol).

Other studies will have to be done to confirm the suspicion that the anabolic (body building) male steroids will do this in everyone using them. But there are plenty of other established bad effects from steroid use to prompt great caution by those tempted to try them to build their muscle strength.

There's an old saying — if your feet hurt, you hurt all over. Dr. Donohue's booklet, "Relief and Care of Your Feet," shows you how to avoid and take care of foot problems. To get your copy, write to Dr. Donohue in care of the Big Spring Herald, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, IL 60611, enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and $1.00.
