PORTSMOUTH, Va. (AP) -When attorney James C. Hawks' car was missing from his parking space last week he reported it stolen. Now he wishes it really had been.

The police department began its investigation. Hawks' insurance company provided him with a rental car.

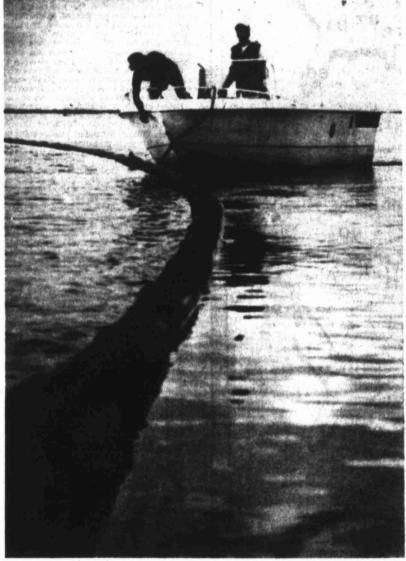

"I kept expecting it to turn up," Hawks said of his 1977 Mercury Cougar. It did.

Wednesday afternoon, as Hawks was driving his rental car, he found someone else had parked in his parking spot. So he pulled the rental car around the corner to the city municipal lot.

"I pulled in right beside my car," he said. "Suddenly it all came back to me."

According to Hawks, he had parked his car in the city lot on the evening of July 26 — and forgot about it. It had been there ever since. "Now I wish it had been (stolen) and saved all this embarrassment," Hawks said.

OIL CONTAINMENT — Kevin Floyd, right, and Tommy Lemoine, left, of Simson Environmental Service of Port Neches, check the floating containment boom deployed at the entrance to East Bay at Rollover Pass. Workers have placed an 800 foot containment boom across the pass in an attempt to keep the oil spill from reaching the environmental ck hits shore

GALVESTON (AP) - A smelly the slick will bypass environmenmass of oil stretched for 85 miles off the Texas coast on Friday and began oozing onto shore as scientists and state officials braced for potentially devastating effects on estuaries, fishing and a lucrative tourist trade.

"It's like planning for an inva-sion," said Gov. Mark White, who surveyed the slick from the air and was briefed by officials at the scene.

The 1.2 million gallons of oil, leaked from a British tanker grounded Monday off the Louisiana coast, formed a film 10 miles wide on the Gulf of Mexico and was expected to hit Galveston Island on

'Galveston Island could get hit tomorrow morning, but maybe not at all if the wind is right, if we get a good blow from the west," said Jerry Galt, a National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration oceanographer.

"Unless there are stong winds, it's going to keep dragging along shore," said Roy Hann, head of the Texas A&M University oil spill assistance team.

The oil was thick and heavy as tar. Patches stuck together like the burnt top of a pudding around the Texas A&M vessel Quest about six miles offshore Friday evening.

"In the lab, we had to cut it with a knife," Hann said, taking a sample in a plastic tube. He predicted it would sink in relatively salt-free water of bays and estuaries — bad news for oyster beds and shrimp.

'The good news is that most of Galt said.

tally sensitive Galveston Bay. But the bad news is that it is going to come ashore on the beaches south of the bay," Hann said.

He said the sludge could creep ashore for weeks, fouling beaches from High Island south to Corpus Christi, about 200 miles away.

The oil slick followed the same path as a 1979 spill that washed ashore from Matagorda to Port Mansfield, Hann said.

By Friday, the sludge had split into two "arms," with the thickest mass poised a mile off Galveston Island, Hann said. Balls of tar two to three inches in diameter from the thinner section began showing up on Bolivar Peninsula on Friday morning

Coast Guard Capt. Tim McKinna said "hundreds of people" were divided into three salvage groups - from the Sabine Pass between Louisiana and Texas to the southern tip of Galveston Island.

Highway Department crews built dikes on inlets along the peninsula, and the Coast Guard stretched containment booms across sections of Galveston Bay.

Officials said strong currents made it impossible to seal off the entire bay, and had predicted that the oil would wash up inside. Hann said about 40 to 50 percent of the spill already had passed around the jetties at the bay's entrance. The fear was a high tide at 8 p.m.

CDT when any oil in jetties would get pulled into the bay, Galt said. 'It gets pulled in and fans out," going to have enough suck" to pull the goo all the way into the bay. "That's one thing we'll be looking for at first light.

The next point of concern was San Luis Pass at the west end of the island, where the oil was expected sometime Saturday.

'There's a tremendous tidal exchange and it's impossible to boom off," Hann said. By Friday, tourists appeared to be avoiding Galveston and the prospect of dirty beaches. Jack Bushong, director of the Galveston Convention and Visitors Bureau, said hotel and motel reservations were down about 20 percent. Officials feared hotel business might fall another 15 percent this weekend, he said.

Choice fishing grounds also are threatened, scientists said.

"There are a number of shellfish beds in the bay under private lease, and if they go under oil, you can't harvest them," said Dr. Edward Ibert, pollution control director at the Galveston County Health District in La Marque. "If it does (enter Galveston Bay), probably no more oyster harvesting will be allowed."

Texas A&M marine scientists said they were concerned about commercial fishing areas rich in shrimp, crabs and oysters.

Salt water "will remove most of the toxic components from the oil,' said Dr. Steve Alexander, assistant professor of marine biology at Texas A&M. He said marine organisms that come into contact See Oil slick page 2-A

Involvement in conspiracy denied

By KEELY COGHLAN Staff Writer

Fiberflex Products Inc. director know about, any conspiracy to defraud company patent attorney Guy Matthews in a stock deal.

Matthews' attorney, 'John Skrhak of Dallas, is trying to convince jurors that Matthews was defrauded of his stock by former OIL manager and owner Charles "Chris" Christopher, who was attempting to buy a controlling interest in the company, and others. Among the alleged co-conspirators are six unhappy company directors, including Massingill and West Texas banker Sam Spikes, and a Hobbs, N.M., bank.

According to Massingill's Billy Massingill of Lubbock testimony, he joined Spikes and testified Friday in 118th District Christopher in flying to Houston on Court that he did not enter into, or Feb. 27, 1984, to buy 20,000 shares of Matthews' Fiberflex stock, which allegedly would have given control of the company to Christopher. Ownership of the stock, a major issue in the trial, could decide whether Christopher or corporate management - Tom and Russ Rutledge, John Freeman and Fred Morrow - control the company.

In a series of meetings the week of Feb. 21, 1984, Christopher convinced Spikes, Massingill and other dissatisfied directors and shareholders to aid him in his corporate buy-out.

Spikes, Massingill and other tors to the board to regain control of the company. Spikes, Massingill and four other directors in their group are contesting the addition of the new directors as illegal and a violation of the corporate bylaws.

As part of Christopher's attempts to become the company's majority stockholder, Massingill, Spikes and Christopher agreed to buy 20,000 of Matthews' shares in a disputed deal in which both Matthews and Christopher accuse each Asked by Christopher's attorney, dissatisfied shareholders first met Tom Thomas of Dallas, about the with Christopher Feb. 21, 1984, the deal, Massingill testified, "We told day of a special shareholders' him (Matthews) we needed his note for Spikes from a Hobbs bank. meeting in which corporate shares to get control. He (Mat- Spikes was to have paid off the management added five new directies) said, 'It's Sam's (Spikes'). note, Matthews testified. Do whatever you want to.

Matthews testified earlier in the trial Christopher told him the night of the sale that Christopher already controlled a majority of the stock, thereby defrauding Matthews because Matthews did not know the shares were control stock. Christopher claims Matthews committed fraud by not informing Christopher that Matthews had already granted the stock's voting rights to the Rutledges.

Matthews bought the stock Sept. 17, 1983, from Spikes. As part of the deal, Matthews testified he agreed to use his name to get a $400,000

Massingill also disputed other parts of Matthews' account of the sale, testifying Matthews told the group he favored changes in the board of directors.

Asked what Matthews had to say about the Rutledges, Massingill testified, "He (Matthews) didn't say anything good about them.' However, he said he could not recall specific negative comments about the Rutledges by Matthews.

Media predicts Labor win

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) - President Chaim Herzog is expected to announce his choice to form Israel's new government early next week, and the country's news media predicted Friday he will choose opposition Labor Party leader Shimon Peres.

Herzog may decide as early as Sunday whether Peres or incumbent Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir will be named prime minister-designate, Israel televi-sion and radio said. Politicians' statements after meeting with Herzog made it clear that Peres had greater support, the radio said.

Herzog spokesman Ami Gluska gave no hint in a telephone interview if Herzog would pick Peres or Shamir, but he said Herzog "doesn't intend to delay his decision too long."

Shamir and Peres met for a total of eight hours Wednesday and Thursday after Herzog persuaded them to try to reach agreement on forming a national unity government. This would break a stalemate resulting from the inconclusive July 23 general election. But the two failed to agree which one should be prime minister.

During the talks, Shamir, the first to call for a national unity government, proposed that whichever party did not get the premiership should fill the defense and foreign affairs ministries. Peres refused to talk about this and instead limited the talks to economic and social issues

Contests, fiddlers highlight reunion

By CAROL BALDWIN Staff Writer

The Old Settlers Pavilion had standing room only Friday afternoon as some of the area's finest fiddlers got down to some serious fiddle playing.

And when the competition was over, Jody Nix had won the approval of Judge Don Tolle and the first place title out of a field of seven. Other top participants were Bob Kendricks of San Angelo and Lindy Durham of Hobbs, N.M.

The fiddling contest was only one of several events enjoyed by a crowd at the Old Settlers Reunion, which began at Comanche Trail Park and ended early this morning at the Dora Roberts Community Center with a dance.

Gertrude McCann, secretarytreasurer of the Old Settlers Association, said 255 people over the age of 70 received a free barbecue lunch during the festivities. Anyone under 60 had to pay to eat. More than 600 people had registered by early afternoon. Mrs. McCann called the turnout "the greatest I've seen in several years, and we've been with the association for more than 10 years. The weather is good and we've had more participants (in contests)

Mrs. McCann said she believed people kept returning to the reunion each August "because some of them have told me this is the only time they get to see their old friends. They enjoy visiting and listening to the music."

Mrs. McCann was also grateful to area merchants who provided prizes for contests.

Mrs. Jeannie Cauble, 96, won the prize as the eldest lady at the reunion. Taking the honors as the eldest man was Clay Bedell, 90. Nine-month-old Shann Hunt was the youngest participant this year.

The native traveling the greatest distance to be at the reunion was Michael Magee of Colorado Springs, Colo. The person traveling the greatest distance who was not a local native was Mrs. Leonard C. Weihert from Lake Mills, Wisc.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Sundy, married 62 years, won the award as the couple married longest to the same spouse. There was a tie for the couple with the most children. They were Mr. and Mrs. R.X. McNew and Mr. and Mrs. Keith Crawford, each with nine children

Mr. and Mrs. R.X. McNew also won the prize as the couple with the most grandchildren, 35.

Mrs. Myrtle True was the most authentically dressed woman. Runners-up were Mrs. Raymond Ferguson, Mrs. R.H. McNew and Mrs. Bunt Jones. Clay Bedell was the most authentically dressed

In the horse-shoe pitching contest, first place was Jimbo Yanez, second place was Virgil Garcia and third place was Hilario Garcia.

In the washer-throwing contest, first place was Liza Yanez, second was Mrs. R.X. McNew and third was Frank Alcanter.

Coy Joe McCann spit tobacco 20 feet to win the tobacco spitting contest. Mrs. R.X. McNew came in second with a distance of 10 feet, eight inches.

Storms cover state

Thunderstorms rumbled across portions of East and West Texas Saturday as an upper level storm system centered over Arkansas continued to trigger scattered storm activity.

The showers in West Texas extended from near Guadalupe Pass northeast to the South Plains. Other scattered thunderstorms developed from north of Longview to near Shreveport, La.

High clouds hovered over Central and far West Texas while low clouds dotted northeastern sections of the state and the Lower Rio Grande Valley. The rest of the state reported mostly fair skies.

The forecast called for partly cloudy skies with widely scattered thundershowers through Saturday. Most of the shower activity was expected to end late tonight, followed by scattered showers Saturday in Northeast Texas and southern portions of West Texas.

Along the coast, scattered thunderstorms, along with southeasterly winds near 15 knots, were possible through

Thunderstorms packing heavy rain soaked much of the nation Friday from the Dakota hills to the Florida Keys, while flash flood watches were posted in southwest Alabama and a thick, warm fog enveloped parts of the Northeast. A surge of tropical moisture from the Gulf of Mexico was blamed for another night of torrential rain in the Gulf Coast states and much of the South, with high seas and intense lightning reported Friday in the Florida Keys.

The National Weather Service posted flash flood watches for 11 counties in southwest Alabama and four counties in the Florida Panhandle following several days of heavy rainfall.

A flood watch was canceled late Thursday in Montgomery, Ala., where 2.51 inches of rain fell in a six-hour period earlier in the day.

Scattered thunderstorms, some of them heavy, also were reported today in the Middle Atlantic states, New Mexico, western Texas and from the western Great Lakes to the northern Rockies.

Mountain lion attacks boy

(AP) — An 8-year-old Garland boy who was attacked by a mountain lion after he pushed his younger brother from the lion's path was transferred Friday to a Dallas hospital, authorities said.

It was the first known injury resulting from a lion attack since the Big Bend National Park opened in 1941, said Bob Huggins, a National Park Service officer.

David Vaught received severe cuts, scratches and puncture wounds to the head, face, back leg and arm in the attack. He was transferred to Parkland Hospital where he underwent the first stage of surgery.

The boy's stepfather, Cris Brown, also was bitten on the leg when he pulled the lion away from the boy. The two were attacked about 6 p.m. Thursday while they, the boy's mother, brother and cousin were walking along a trail behind the Chisos Mountain Lodge in the basin of the park. The two were taken to the Big Bend Memorial Hospital in Alpine. "We were walking along this trail when suddenly there appeared a cougar right in the middle of the path," Kimetha Brown told the San Angelo Standard-Times. "He tried to attack my 4-year old son, but David pushed him out of the way and the cougar attacked

Park rangers and professional trackers, using dogs and aircraft, were still searching the park Friday night for the mountain lion.

and other agreements.

"I'd say he read every word of all of them," Massingill testified. He also testified that Matthews, not Christopher, initiated the changes in the sale agreement.

According to Massingill's testimony, Christopher, Spikes and Massingill also argued with Matthews over dinner because Matthews refused to sell an additional 11,500 shares of stock he had bought prior to the purchase of the 20,000 shares from Spikes. The day after the Matthews-

Christopher stock sale, Feb. 28, Massingill, Christopher and Spikes met Hobbs banker Scotty Blymn to try and complete the purchase of the stock, since the stock was collateral on Matthews' note, Massingill testified.

The four men called Matthews, then in Louisiana, to discuss the Christopher earlier in the day that the deal was off, but Matthews "hung up" on them, Massingill testified. who represents Massingill, Spikes and four of the other directors, testified about his attorney's fees, which he is asking be paid by the opposing directors if he is successful.

Jones testified his rate is usually $115 an hour, but that his firms charges would increase by 150 percent if he wins the case. If he wins both claims — the directors' suit and the Christopher-Matthews dispute - his firm will charge more than $162,000 in legal fees through the end of July. Trial costs are $1,150 a day, he said. Expenses will total about $7,200, excluding costs for depositions, which will be more than $5,000.

"Ordinarily, we literally skim the sand off using bullozers, trac-tors or even by hand," said Jim Kosch, a senior U.S. Coast Guard chief in Port Arthur. "The problem is how long it continues to hit."

The oil spill came from the 609-foot British tanker Alvenus, whose owners have assumed responsibility for the cleanup.

McKinna said that by Friday afternoon the ruptured No. 2 tank, which had contained 48,000 barrels, had drained into the sea and attempts had begun to pump 38,000 barrels out of the No. 1 tank in the bow. From 48,000 to 53,000 barrels in the No. 3 tank behind the ruptured tank also would be pumped onto barges and taken to "the

Cosden notes safety record

At approximately 5 a.m. Thursday, the employees at the Cosden Oil and Chemical Company Refinery accomplished 1 million manhours without a lost time accident, officials said.

Reaching the number was a joint effort between the employees and the company.

Ross Westbrook, manager, industrial relations, said, "We at Cosden feel that safety awareness programs, routine safety inspections and safety incentives are a vital part to a good, safe place to work, but the real key is the employees themselves.

"It is the intent of everyone at the Big Spring refinery to stress safety both on the job and at home. We are proud of this record, but the -real achievement is that no one was seriously hurt during this period of time.

Rene Brown, vice president of American Petrofina in charge of refining, was in Big Spring Thursday to congratulate employees.

Inmate holds one hostage

HUNTSVILLE (AP) - A Texas prison inmate held a female guard offered to take Ms. Bates' place as hostage at knifepoint for four hours Friday before his mother and the prison director, who offered to take the hostage's place, persuaded him to surrender.

The incident at the Ramsey II Unit, located near Rosharon, was one of a series of violent episodes that have hit the Texas prison system within a 24-hour period.

Two other units reported stabbings on Thursday and inmates were confined at two units because of incidents.

Prison officials said inmate Richard Joseph Sisto, 35, used a pocket knife to seize and hold guard Carlene Bates, 27, about 1 a.m. Friday. The inmate locked himself and his hostage in a small room known as the "pill room," a place where medication is dispensed to inmates.

Sisto refused to talk to Ramsey officials and Texas Department of Corrections director Ray Procunier flew from Huntsville to the Ramsey complex on a prison

Procunier arrived at 3 a.m. and hostage, but Sisto refused. The director then talked with Sisto about his family. The inmate's mother was called and she. Sisto and Procunier had a threeway conference. Later, a prison chaplain, Jim Bonura, a Catholic clergyman, joined the negotiations. At 5:45 a.m., Sisto agreed to surrender. Bonura passed a set of handcuffs to him through a window and the inmate put them on, opened the door and gave up his pocket Procunier escorted Sisto to the

Labor won 44 seats to Likud's 41 in the 120-seat Knesset, or parliament, but neither was able to patch together a 61-seat majority.

Israel television reported that 60 Knesset members support Peres, while 54 members back Shamir.

The man Herzog chooses will have 21 days to form a government and present it to the Knesset for a vote of confidence. The nominee can ask Herzog for an additional 21 days. But the daily Maariv said that if Peres failed to form a unity government in time, Herzog would probably ask Shamir to try. Many Israeli commentators

The Blue Blazers, an all-female arm of the Chamber of Commerce, is coordinating the efforts to honor Rose and her family who will probably be back to Big Spring around Aug. 20. We are asking for help and suggestions from every corner of the city. Any individual or group who wants to help or contribute ideas should call immediately.

Among the ideas already put forth and being considered are:

• A "ticker-tape" parade; a giant public reception; renaming a street after Rose; a mayor's proclamation designating it Rose Magers Day; a special public showing of video tapes of the Olympic volleyball games; an exhibition volleyball game; a reunion of her high school volleyball team; an unveiling and hanging of a picture of the Olympic volleyball team signed by each member at Malone-Hogan Hospital where Rose's with all area news media (surrounding towns have been very interested in Rose's participation in the Olympics and are using phrases like, 'Our West Texas Olympian'; a tour by Rose to the Veterans Administration Medical Center and Big Spring State, Hospital to visit patients; the placing of Olympic-related mementos in the museum for posterity; NAACP ceremonies to recognize her contributions to the sports

The special day would also be a chance to remember her family and friends who nutured Rose, and, therefore, contributed in small ways indirectly to Rose's success. This would enable Rose to express gratitude to every person who touched her life, influenced her, strengthened and supported her.

Hot weather flowers

Look through the pages of any seed catalogue. Walk into any garden center in spring. You'll see dozens and dozens of marigolds in all sorts of different flower types: single flowers, doubles, crested types, carnation-types, even delicate lacy flowers.

Did you know you could continue to plant marigolds throughout the summer. They make excellent replacements for those cool season annuals that have passed out of the picture with the summer heat. They can be set out as started plants from your favorite nursery or garden center or you can purchase the seeds and plant them directly in well prepared beds. Once the seeds germinate it is essential to thin them out to the spacing indicated on the seed packet. Crowded plants never perform well.

How do you decide which of the multitude of varieties will be best for you? The following information may help you decide.

Marigolds are divided into four basic groups: the dwarf French marigolds; the taller African (or American) marigolds; the lacy, fern-like signets; and a new class, the triploids. Each group contains several different flower types crested, carnation, doubles, singles and other. Each variety, however, has special characteristics that make it easy to decide what's best

French Marigolds are dwarf, growing no higher than 12 inches. At one time, along with their small size, they bore small nondescript the double is "Tiger Eyes", a single marigold with just a trace of flowers. But plant breeders have cresting in the center. French marigold mentioned are

By far the most popular crested marigolds have a mound of petals in the center and long, broad guard petals along the edges. Petals are often attractively quilled or honeycombed.

"Bonanza" and "Boy" marigold series are crested types. New for 1984 are "Bonanza Harmony" with orange flowers and maroon col-lars; and "Sunny Boy", with golden yellow flowers Companions to the crested marigolds are carnation or anemone types with broad, flattened petals and solid, bicolor or speckled colorings.

"Red Cherry" is a popular carnation type with a red color truer than other marigolds. The 'Queen'' series is another popular carnation type. "Queen Victoria", the latest addition to the series, has the same, unique broadened petals in deep gold, lightly flecked with

The five-day U.S. gold medal total in swimming is 18, three short of the Olympic record of 21 golds won by the U.S. team at Mexico City in 1968. And Americans are favored in three of five events on the final day of competition Saturday

The only non-American gold Friday came when unheralded Jon Sieben of Australia upset favored Michael Gross of West Germany with a world record in the 200-meter butterfly.

Caulkins, of Nashville, Tenn., won her second individual gold medal by taking the 200-meter individual medley and added a third gold in the 400 medley relay, which the U.S. team won easily.

Hogshead, of Jacksonville, Fla., was second behind Caulkins in the 200 individual medley and won her third gold in the relay.

Other American winners Friday were Tiffany Cohen of Mission Viejo, Calif., in the women's 800-meter freestyle and Rick Carey of Mount Kisco, N.Y., in the men's 100 backstroke. It was the second individual gold medal for both.

Caulkins, who reportedly is ready to sign a lucrative commercial contract and end her successful swimming career that now includes 62 individual American records, won the 200 individual medley in 2 minutes, 12.64 seconds.

That surpassed by .14 seconds the American mark she set in the Olympic Trials in June. It also eclipsed the Olympic record of 2:14.47 she set in the morning qualifying, but was short of the 1981 world record of 2:11.73 set by Ute Geweniger of East Germany.

Hogshead, gold medalist in the 100 freestyle and 400 freestyle relay, won the silver medal in 2:15.17, or 2.53 seconds behind Caulkins. Michele Pearson of Australia was third in 2:15.92.

"Nancy was out there pushing me, and that felt good," Caulkins said of Hogshead. "I went onetenth of a second faster than at the Trials, so I guess it was alright. I wanted to go faster, but I felt strong the whole way.

Asked if her gold medals here were more important than the five golds she won at the 1978 World Championships, Caulkins said, 'They're a little more meaningful now because of the struggle of training over the years.'

Sieben, whose best 200 butterfly time before the Olympics was 2:01.17, deprived Gross of his third individual gold medal of the Games and also took away one of his three world records.

Sieben was timed in 1:57.04, just .01 seconds under Gross' world record set earlier this year. But it was .36 faster than Gross could manage in the Olympic final.

Sieben, 17, who has a scholarship to the University of Alabama, said, "I was not nervous because there was no pressure on me to swim

He said the four-second drop in his time "was in me, but it took a while to come out. I just went hell for leather for the wall.

Sieben said he had no idea he had beaten Gross — nicknamed "the Albatross" because of his height and wingspan — until he looked at the scoreboard after the race.

"The bloke beside me was the only person I saw," Sieben said.

Gross, who set world records in winning the 100 butterfly and 200 freestyle and won a silver medal in the 800 freestyle relay, captured his second silver medal, and Rafael Vidal of Venezuela won the bronze in 1:57.51.

Gross was in front until the final 10 meters, when Sieben nudged in

Cyclists bring in more gold

CARSON, Calif. (AP) — U.S. national champion Mark Gorski won a gold medal in the Olympic 1,000-meter sprint Friday as American cyclists bagged three more medals, adding to an un-precedented cache of seven in a sport dominated by Europeans for most of this century

Gorski, of Costa Mesa, Calif., defeated former New York City bicycle messenger Nelson Vails in the first-ever all-American final of the Olympic sprint event. Vails settled for the silver while Tsutomu medal by defeating France's Philippe Vernet.

The other U.S. silver came in the 4,000-meter team pursuit, in which an American foursome lost to Australia.

The United States has won four gold medals, two silver and a bronze in the seven cycling events contested, a spectacular performance compared with previous American efforts. The last time an American cyclist won an Olympic medal was 72 years ago.

Gorski gave his teammate Vails

"He forced me to three heats in the National Championships and won in the Pan American Games. It made me work extremely hard all fall and winter. It pushed me to a new level of ability," Gorski said.

"Without that push from Nelson, I wouldn't have been at this level right now.

Gorski won the first heat by a bike's length in 10.49 and took the second heat comfortably in 10.95 amid pandemonium at the Velodrome, packed to its 8,700

Lewis, Moses get opening wins in first day of Olympic track

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Carl Lewis and Edwin Moses, the leaders of the United States track and field team, led the powerful Americans through an impressive first session of the Olympic Games' blue ribbon event Friday.

The swift, strong Lewis, expected to be the No. 1 hero in this XXIII Olympiad, opened his quest for four gold medals by sweeping through the first two rounds of the men's 100-meter dash before a near-capacity crowd at the 92,514-seat Los Angeles Coliseum.

The limber, agile Moses, unbeaten in seven years, stretched his winning streak to 103, including 89 in finals, by winning his firstround heat in the men's 400-meter intermediate hurdles.

Lewis, seeking gold medals in the men's 100- and 200-meter dashes, the 400-meter relay and the long jump, got off to a brilliant start in the shortest dash. He began by winning his first 100 heat in 10.32, then turned on the speed in the second round and blazed to victory in 10.04, the fastest time of the semifinals were Ron Brown of Phoenix, Ariz. and Sam Graddy of Atlanta. Both won their openinground heats, while Graddy also captured his second-round race and Brown finished second in his heat, limping slightly afterward. Graddy, the NCAA champion frmm the University of Tennesse, had the second-fastest clocking, 10.15.

Scotland's Allan Wells, the 1980 Olympic champion, also reached the semifinals, but Hasely Crawford, the 33-year-old 1976 Games' gold medalist from Trinidad-Tobago, failed, finishing fourth in his second-round heat.

Moses, captain of the American men's team, took control at the outset of the 400 hurdles and skimmed to victory in a relatively slow

Moses has not lost since August 1977, when he was beaten by Harald Schmid of West Germany at Berlin. Schmid also won his opening heat, in 49.34, a tick slower than Moses.

The other two American hurdlers, Danny Harris of Perris, Calif. and Tranel Hawkins of Dayton, Ohio, also won their opening-round heats. Hawkins was timed in 49.51 and Harris, the freshman from Iowa State University, in 49.81.

One of the top U.S. performances was registered by Mike Conley of Chicago in the triple jump qualifying for Saturday's final. The NCAA champion from the University of Arkansas leaped 56 feet, 111/2 inches, equalling the fourth-best in U.S. history.

Meanwhile, Glynis Nunn, a 24-year-old physical education teacher from Australia, smashed the Olympic record in the women's 100-meter heptathlon hurdles, with a time of 13.02 seconds. The previous mark was 13.25. Judy Simpson of Britain also went under the old record, with a time of 13.07 in the same heat as Nunn.

The three American entrants -Jackie Joyner of East St. Louis, Mo., Jodi Anderson of Chicago and Cindy Greiner of Lebanon, Ore. were in the same heat as Nunn and Simpson.

Joyner finished fifth in 13.63 Greiner was sixth in 13.61 and Anderson, nursing an injured hamstring, was eighth and last in

He reportedly was signed to a five-year contract worth $1.1 million a year.

Think automatic water ... but better yet think Haig Ultra Woods, Irons and Bag.

Golfers are out in droves selling donation tickets for the Comanche Trail Automatic Water System.

Ducats go for a mere $2. Three drawings will be made Aug. 19 for the equipment — the final day of the Comanche Trail Partnership

All proceeds from the sale goes into a special fund set aside strictly for the automatic water system.

Arnold Palmer in his book states that the prettiest places generally in a town is a golf course. So naturally why not have residents and guests enjoy the best. Big Spring is blessed with two fine golf courses which all of us are proud of. So golfers and non-golfers dig down and get some of those donation tickets.

The Comanche Trail Partnership tabbed for Aug. 18-19 is filling up rapidly. Area golfers wanting to join in on the festivities should call in their entry as soon as possible. Highland Dodge is putting up a new Dodge Ram Pickup for a hole in one. Haig Ultra Woods and Irons and Bags are the prizes for the five flights. By the way, Haig Clubs were used by Texan Ben Crenshaw when he captured this year's masters championship.

Buck Buchannon recorded his fourth hole in one Tuesday at Comanche Trail on 160 yard first hole. Buck used a four wood into a stiff breeze. The feat was witnessed by Don Osborne and Eddie Acri. The Chicano Golf Association will host a two man Louisiana Draw this Sunday. Two flights are scheduled. All players wishing to play should call in for reservations. From the lesson tee ... ever have a fast down hill putt? Or a long

Try this tip next time you have this problem:

Fast, down hill putts should be struck on the toe of the putter. The toe of the putter blade is dead, so when the ball is tapped in it will not roll as fast. Up hill putts are just the opposite. Strike the ball back toward the heel.

This will cause the ball on up hill putts to roll with more authority. Give both a try and with practice you may find yourself becoming a fine putter.

Airport officials said the bomb may have been meant to go off during a one-hour flight between Madras and Colombo, the capital of Sri Lanka, or at the Colombo airport.

The blast destroyed the Madras airport arrivals lounge Thursday night, collapsing the ceiling and blowing out one wall. It wrecked the customs section and adjacent areas; reduced to rubble a nearly 100-foot-wide portion of the building, and blew debris almost to the edge of a runway.

C. Hussain, 26, told United News of India the bomb went off with "a thunderous sound" as he was in the waiting lounge with some friends - "the next minute we were hurled

It was the most devastating single terrorist act in southern India in recent memory.

Government officials, speaking on condition their identities not be used, speculated privately that the bomb was the work of Tamil terrorists supporting the struggle by Sri Lanka's Tamil minority for a separate state.

Many of the Indian Tamils, who comprise most of the population in this southern region, are strongly sympathetic to the Sri Lankan Tamils' cause, and many separatist organizations have offices here.

Officials sealed off the airport and suspended all international flights to and from Madras, a port city, industrial center and capital of Tamil state on the Bay of Bengal. Madras, with a population of more than 3.2 million, is 1,000 miles southeast of New Delhi.

The explosion followed three anonymous telephone calls warning about a bomb, unofficial but reliable sources said.

Two sanctions targeted

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The United States' decision to drop some sanctions against Poland was cheered by Solidarity leader Lech Walesa Friday, but the official Polish government spokesman demanded the lifting of two severe economic restrictions still in effect.

"We demand the lifting of all restrictions without any conditions," the spokesman, Jerzy Urban, said in a prepared statement read to Western correspondents.

Reagan on Friday officially approved a resumption in scientific exchanges with Poland and lifted the prohibition on regularly scheduled flights to the United States by LOT, the Polish national airline. The decision followed the Polish government's recent granting of a general amnesty to hundreds of political prisoners.

But the United States left in force a freeze on new credits, which are crucial to revitalizing Poland's troubled economy, and the suspension of Poland's most-favorednation trading status with the United States, U.S. Embassy officials said.

The Reagan administration will also continue to oppose Poland's application to the International Monetary Fund. But an administration official who spoke on condition he not be identified said the United States may drop its opposition to Polish IMF membership

Soviets attack U.S. Marine

MOSCOW — Soviet policemen assaulted a U.S. Marine assigned to the consulate in Leningrad while he was walking along a street, and then detained him at a police station for two hours, a U.S. Embassy spokesman said Friday.

The Marine was attacked Thursday by six plainclothes and uniformed police, three of whom held him while the others kicked and punched him, said an embassy source who spoke on condition he not be named.

Jarosiav Verner said the Marine officially was withheld pending notification of relatives, but sources identified him as Sgt. Donald Campbell.

The sources said he is in his early 20s, but they did not provide his hometown

Verner said U.S. officials "vigorously protested" the incident, reported to be the third assault on an American in Leningrad this year.

Trainee handles near-miss

LINTHICUM, Md. - One of three near misses over Baltimore-Washington International Airport this week involved planes directed by an air traffic controller being trained for a new job, an official said Friday.

But the official disputed a published account of the incident.

The air controller in the incident last Monday was called a "trainee" in The Washington Post Friday. It quoted unidentified sources as saying the trainee was distracted from radar, which was tracking the two passenger planes that nearly collided, because a third plane was simultaneously sending radio signals on an incorrect frequency.

Louis Achitoff, spokesman for the Federal Aviation Administration in New York, said the controller actually was a woman with four to six years experience but was being trained for a new position in the BWI control tower. Achitoff did not know the nature of the new assignment compared to the woman's previous experience.

Achitoff also confirmed that the woman was handling a third plane's radio signals on an incorrect frequency, but he would not conclude that the radio mixup distracted the controller.

"That will be part of the investigation. We don't know," Achitoff said. "A controller is accustomed to handling more than two targets at a time.

Rebels release 63 hostages

SOYAPANGO, El Salvador -Four leftist rebels surrendered Friday at a bank where they had held 63 hostages for nearly a day following an aborted holdup. Negotiators had been unable to find a country that would offer them refuge.

"Diplomatic negotiations failed totally and the terrorists have agreed to surrender to the authorities," said Col. Rinaldo Golcher, commander of the Treasury Police.

Golcher said the rebels would be taken to Mariona Prison, where political prisoners are held, after making declarations to a local iustice of the peace.

The rebels left the bank at 10 a.m. (noon EDT) in two jeeps of the International Red Cross. They crouched in back to avoid being photographed.

Their former hostages then left the bank building and were escorted home by the Red Cross.

The insurgents shot and killed a guard when they stormed a branch of the Banco Agricola at 11:30 a.m.

Tiny patient still critical

LONDON — The mother and father of the world's youngest heart transplant patient touched their only child Friday for the first time since surgeons gave her a new heart.

Two-week-old Hollie Roffey, who underwent transplant surgery Monday, showed "slight improvement" Friday. But she was still in critical condition after emergency surgery Wednesday to repair a hole in her bowel, said Paul Haigh, deputy administrator of the National Heart Hospital in London. The baby's parents Anthony, 26, and Janet, 24, donned surgical gloves Friday morning and reached through portholes in a germ-free incubator to touch their daughter.

"They were gowned up and wore surgical gloves, but very fine ones, so they could get a real touch when they put their hands on the baby,' said the hospital's chief administrator, Tom Cosgrove.

The infant, he said, "is still on the critical list because of reaching the point where the problem of rejection can occur.'

He referred to the possibility that Hollie's body might reject the donated heart, which was taken from a Dutch baby that died of brain damage. Hollie needed the transplant because the left side of her heart was missing.

The problem of rejection has largely been solved by the use of new drugs that suppress the body's immune system.

Woman, 103, attacked by burglar

BIRMINGHAM, England (AP) A six-foot burglar beat up a 103-year-old woman, ransacked her house and stole $211 she had put aside to pay bills, police said Friday.

Rosina Titmus, a greatgrandmother who is partially deaf and needs a walking frame to get around, was punched and kicked by a man in his late 20s who broke into her home Wednesday night, police said.

She was found Thursday morning and taken to a hospital, where she was treated for cuts and "I hope I will get over this trouble," Mrs. Titmus told reporters as she recuperated at her northern England home. Police said the burglar forced open a downstairs window as Mrs. Titmus was preparing for bed. She said she confronted the intruder when she went into the kitchen to get a drink of water.

Mrs. Titmus, who is five feet tall, said the burglar grabbed her around the shoulders, shook her violently and threw her to the floor. She said she put up a struggle, but it was useless.

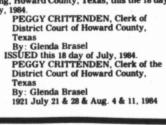

She said the man kicked her as she lay on the floor, and she recalled trying to pull herself up by clinging to the kitchen table.

Mrs. Titmus, who lives alone, crawled into the living room after he left and waited until welfare workers found her the next morning while on a routine visit.

Police Detective Superintendent John Fraser said, "Words cannot describe the sort of person could do this to such a defenseless person.
