How's that? Eyesores

Q. Why are burned houses, like the ones on 13th and Scurry and in the 1500 block of Main, left standing? Is there some kind of action the city can take to clean up these houses?

A. According to city manager Don Davis, structures destroyed by fire should not be left standing. The property owner has the responsibility to take care of the problem. Sometimes a delay is caused by delays in insurance settlements. Also, if a building was not insured, the owner may not be able to afford demolition of the building. The city is working with the property owners to lessen the problem, Davis said.

Calendar: Open late

TODAY

• The Howard County probation office in the courthouse will be open late, until 8 p.m., for the convenience of probationers who work.

TUESDAY

• The Coahoma City Council will discuss personnel and sewer rates at their 7 p.m. meeting.
• Overeaters Anonymous will meet at Dora Roberts Rehabilitation Center at 7 p.m.

Tops on TV: Surprise

Loni Anderson, Valerie Harper, Wilt Chamberlain and novelty dancer Carol Doda join Allen Funt in providing surprises for unsuspecting people on "Candid Camera Special" at 9 p.m. on channel 13.

At the movies: Conan

Arnold Schwarzenegger stars in "Conan the Destroyer" at the Cinema. Also showing at the Cinema is "Karate Kid". "The Jungle Book" is showing at the Ritz. "The Corsican Brothers" starring Cheech and Chong is also at the Ritz.

Outside: Cloudy

Tonight, expect lows near 70, with a 20 percent chance of rain. Winds will be southerly 10 to 15 miles per hour. Tomorrow, look for partly cloudy skies with a 20 percent chance of isolated afternoon thunderstorms. Highs will be in the mid 90s with winds southerly 10 to 20 miles per hour.

Absentee ballots

Absentee balloting for next Saturday's charter amendment election to decide if Big Spring should have an elected chief of police today reached above the 460 mark, City Secretary Tom Ferguson said.

Absentee balloting for the election closes at 5 p.m. Aug. 7. Persons who are 65 years or older or have plans to be out of town for the Aug. 11 election may cast absentee ballots at City Hall.

Ferguson said the ballots will be divided by precinct and given to each polling place's election judge prior to Aug. 11. The judges will count the ballots along with those that are regularly cast in the election, he said.

Polling places Saturday are as follows: Northside Fire Station and Airport School for residents in District 1; Kentwood Elementary School and Dorothy Garrett Coliseum for residents in District 2; and 18th and Main Fire Station and Wasson Road Fire Station for residents in District 3.

Polls Saturday will be open from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m., Ferguson said.

ON THE BRINK OF DISASTER — Seven passengers aboard this private passenger plane were brought to the brink of disaster as the plane skidded off the runway at Rio de Janeiro's Santos Dumont airport. The plane ended up partly submerged in Guanabara Bay. No one was hurt in the accident.

Plane scans Gulf for oil

GALVESTON (AP) — A special transport plane equipped with oil detection gear was to scan the Gulf of Mexico today for any traces of the slimy oil spill that washed ashore and nearly blanketed the tourist beaches of Galveston Island, Coast Guard officials said.

The C-130 transport plane, which uses a side-looking radar to peer into the water, was to leave the Coast Guard Air Station in Houston at 1 p.m. today for its flyover, said Coast Guard Petty Officer Joe Gibson.

"We want to make sure that there is no oil at all in the water," Gibson said.

Gibson said the plane had been used in other oil spill operations but was being used for the first time off the Galveston coast.

Late Sunday, oceanographers said most of the 1.4 million gallons of heavy Venezuelan crude that gushed out of the grounded British tanker Alvenus July 30 had either washed ashore or dissipated. Lighter oil on the edge of the crude evaporated, reducing the problem somewhat, Coast Guard officials said.

"From what we've seen so far, the worst is over. That's not to say some more isn't going to come on shore," said Debbie Payton, an oceanographer with the National Oceanographic and Atmospheric Administration.

Clean-up of the beaches, which were tar-dotted in some places and covered with a gooey sheet of oil in others, could take two weeks, Gibson said.

About 60 workers, manning bulldozers and other earth-moving equipment, hit the beaches for a third day today, he said.

Bob Pavia, a NOAA scientific coordinator, said officials were examining wetlands and estuaries near San Luis Pass and Port Bolivar to determine if sheens of oil had damaged wildlife sanctuaries.

"Even if you harm an individual animal or whole group of animals — if the habitat is there — they can recover," Pavia said. "If the habitat isn't there, it makes it difficult for them to recover."

At least 10 birds and one turtle were treated at a special cleaning facility at Sea-Arama Marineworld Sunday, Pavia said.

"Any effects we see are going to be subtle kind of effects," Pavia said.

"Any type of damage would be difficult to determine. We certainly didn't see anything catastrophic."

Officials were unable to determine how many tons of tar and oil were swept onto the approximately 30 miles of shoreline, Pavia said. Anywhere from 5 to 30 percent of the oil would not wash ashore because of "natural weathering processes," such as evaporation, he said.

Joe Cochran, a state parks superintendent, estimated 200 people, using road graders and shovels, cleaned up the beaches Sunday afternoon. The polluted sand being removed would be used in road construction, he said.

Cochran said the cleanup would cost "several million dollars."

The island's multi-million dollar resort industry was "looking a lot better now," said Jack Bushong, executive director of the Galveston Convention and Visitors Bureau.

"The hotels ran 100 percent (of occupancy) last night (Saturday night)... with a few isolated exceptions," Bushong said.

Cleanup efforts on Stewart Beach, located on the island's east end were about finished at midday Sunday, Bushong said.

Most of the canceled vacation reservations involved condominiums on the west end, he said.

However, few swimmers ventured into the water Sunday.

Jim Dugan, a lifeguard with the Galveston County sheriff's beach patrol, said there were "a lot less (sunbathers) than usual." Dugan was patrolling at the Seawall Beach, located on the east end of the island, where debris was light.

Only a handful of swimmers braved the Seawall Beach surf around midday — compared to the usual 300 or so bathers expected on a normal day, Dugan said.

"I'm just surprised to see them in the water," Dugan said, pointing to a couple of swimmers. "I think it's stupid to get in. Every now and then you see a big old sheet of tar rolling on the beach."

A Galveston police officer, who refused to be identified, said about 100,000 people will line the beaches on a normal day. On Sunday, only less than 1,000 showed up, he said.

Director recalls deals

By KEELY COGHLAN
Staff Writer

Fiberflex Products, Inc. director Billy Massingill testified today he was "in pretty deep" in stock deals with west Texas banker Sam Spikes in late 1983 and early 1984, when the company's shareholders were fighting each other for control of the corporation.

Massingill testified he was involved in a $1 million dollar deal with Spikes and former company director Bonard Stice. In the deals, Massingill agreed to pay off Spikes' loans to get the stock which was serving as collateral on the loans.

Massingill testified his deal with Spikes was similar to Spikes' controversial sale of 20,000 shares of stock to Fiberflex patent attorney Guy Matthews. In return for the stock, Matthews would obtain a $400,000 note at a Hobbs, N.M., bank, and give the proceeds to Spikes, Matthews testified earlier.

According to Matthews' earlier testimony, Spikes told Matthews he would pay off the $400,000 note before it became due in March, 1984.

Fiberflex trial

The only difference in the two deals, Massingill testified, was that "He (Spikes) kept his end of it," referring to his own deal with Spikes.

Massingill's deals with Spikes also were never in writing, Massingill testified. "We deal a little differently in West Texas than in Houston," Massingill said referring to Matthews, who is from Houston. Matthews' deal also was verbal.

Massingill also testified he was looking for buyers of his stock in January and February of 1984 so he could get off his $1 million loan. Massingill met former O.I.L. owner and manager Charles Christopher in February 1984, when Massingill agreed to try and get a majority of company stock for Christopher's control in return for Christopher's assumption of

Massingill's loans.

Massingill was present at the Feb. 27, 1984, sale of Matthews' 20,000 shares of stock to Christopher. The 20,000 shares were the same shares Matthews had purchased from Spikes.

Massingill's testimony has contradicted Matthews' testimony on several points about the Feb. 27, 1984 deal.

In the disputed deal, Matthews claims Christopher failed to tell him the shares were control stock, and Christopher claims Matthews failed to inform Christopher of two voting rights Matthews had executed prior to the stock sale.

Ownership of the stock is one of the main questions to be determined in the complex legal case in the 118th District Court, and could determine whether Christopher and a group of unhappy shareholders, including Massingill and West Texas banker Sam Spikes, or corporate management — Tom and Russ Rutledge, John Freeman and Fred Morrow — control the company.

Peres urges unity

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister-designate Shimon Peres met with his chief political rival, Yitzhak Shamir, today in an effort to persuade Shamir's Likud bloc to join a national unity government led by Peres' Labor Party.

Likud officials made clear that Shamir had not given up the idea of being prime minister, even though President Chaim Herzog has asked Peres to form a government and appealed for a national coalition to break the stalemate caused by last month's inconclusive elections.

The Likud officials suggested the least Shamir would settle for was a premiership rotating between Labor and Likud leadership.

Shamir and Peres met in a second floor suite at the King David Hotel in Jerusalem, where the leaders of the two major parties held eight hours of exploratory talks on a joint government last week.

Peres met for more than three hours today with representatives of the National Religious Party, a key faction which won four seats in the 120-member Knesset.

The party agreed in principle to join a national unity government led by Peres, Israel radio said. But the party has not agreed to join a Peres-led government which did not include Likud, saying all efforts must be made to achieve a bipartisan agreement.

Prayer of thanks

WAILING WALL — Israel's Labor party leader Shimon Peres prays shortly at the Wall of Mourning in Jerusalem Sunday. Peres was asked by the country's president, Chaim Herzog, to attempt to form the next government.

Richard Burton, 58, dies in Switzerland

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — Richard Burton, a Welsh coal miner's son who fascinated the public as much with his turbulent private life as with his acting virtuosity, has died from a brain hemorrhage. He was 58.

A renowned Shakespearean stage actor and the star of more than 40 movies, Burton lived high, drank hard and pursued a highly publicized love life that included two marriages to Elizabeth Taylor.

Burton's wife Sally Hay, 36, personally called Miss Taylor "to spare her the media shock" after Burton's sudden death Sunday, said the actor's agent of 34 years, Valerie Douglas.

"He was a born actor but he was a bit wild and chose a rather mad way of throwing away his theater career. He was awfully good to people and generous," actor Sir John Gielgud said of Burton.

Burton was taken ill Sunday morning at his villa in Celigny outside Geneva and rushed to a Geneva hospital, said one of his brothers, Graham Jenkins, in Portsmouth, England. He died at the hospital late in the afternoon.

Ms. Douglas told reporters that the actor's villa that he will be buried at Celigny. She said further details, such as the time and place of the funeral, had yet to be arranged.

She said memorial services would be held in South Wales and London but that no dates had been fixed.

When told of the actor's death, Miss Taylor was in California with two of her children, including Maria, the daughter she and Burton had adopted during one of their two marriages, said her publicist, Chen Sam.

"They are extremely, extremely upset," said Ms. Sam, weeping. She said Miss Taylor was too shocked to make a statement on Sunday.

RICHARD BURTON

Laurence Olivier was said to have once told Burton: "Make up your mind. Do you wish to be a household word or a great actor?" Olivier, who was to soon make a movie with Burton, called him "a very fine actor and his early death is a great tragedy to the theater world, the film world and the public."

Burton's splendid baritone renderings of Shakespearean lines invariably electrified audiences and his piercing blue eyes and commanding presence riveted screen audiences of such works as "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" "The Spy Who Came in from the Cold" and "Becket." But critics called several of his other 50 films mediocre or terrible.

Oil

 said the Port Bolivar area, located across the channel from Galveston Island, was "well under control." He said cleanup efforts there were "pretty much completed" Sunday afternoon.
 Rusty Swafford, a marine biology major working with the Texas A&M University oil spill assistance team, said the island's west end was suffering from a "marbling affect" in which the sand had layers of oil both above and below the surface.
 At Jamaica Beach, a community of about 800 homes located on the island's west end, police officer Andy McLane said he expects the spill "to ruin a lot of stuff."
 "Of all times — we didn't need this," McLane said. "We're just getting over the hurricane (Alicia). This is going to be a plague for four or five years."

Peres

 The radio reported that the National Religious Party disagreed with Labor's proposal to freeze settlements in the occupied West Bank and develop only existing ones. But both sides agreed that their negotiating teams would meet Wednesday to discuss guidelines for joining forces.
 Likud insists that the leadership of a national unity government is a matter for negotiations.
 Labor, however, insists that Peres will head the government because Herzog assigned him the task of forming a coalition, and party Secretary-General Chaim Bar-Lev today flatly ruled out possible negotiations on the leadership.
 "If Likud insists on discussing the question of who will be prime minister there is nothing to talk about," Bar-Lev told Israel radio.
 Shamir's deputy, David Levy, said in a television interview that Peres could not form a coalition even with other partners, and that there would be nothing to talk about with Likud unless the premiership was negotiable.
 "If Mr. Peres wants to talk with us, he will announce that this subject is also open to discussion," Levy said. "If he says it is taboo and let's not talk about it, he is slamming the door ... and will not be able to form any government, neither broad nor narrow."
 A Likud official who spoke on condition he not be identified said his party was unlikely to settle for less than rotation of the premiership.
 Labor's third-ranking leader, Yitzhak Navon, stressed that, "The president assigned the job to Mr. Peres," but other party officials said they were studying the rotation idea seriously.
 Labor won 44 seats to 41 for Shamir's Likud bloc. But the distribution of the other 35 seats among 13 small parties did not give Peres enough firm supporters to establish a 61-seat majority in the Knesset.

Meanwhile, the pilot of the Alvenus said Sunday his vessel hit nothing and he doesn't know why it wrecked.
 "I'm still trying to figure it out myself," 41-year-old Malcolm Gillis said.
 The oil tanker cracked across its bow in a ship channel leading up to Cameron, La.
 "She didn't hit anything. We've brought bigger and deeper draft ships in since then, right after, with no problem at all," Gillis said.
 "They're going to have to wait until they get that ship in dry dock and can take a good look at her and figure out just what happened to her."
 Coast Guard Capt. Tom McKinnis, head of the Marine Safety Office in Port Arthur, said divers and boats using sonar have been unable to find anything the tanker might have hit.

Prince Edward in the can

LONDON — Prince Edward says he escaped the harsh punishment meted out at the military-style high school he and his two brothers attended, but that doesn't mean he was a "goody-goody."

"But that's always the sign of a good criminal — if you get away with it," Edward said in his first television interview. "Everybody thinks I was a proper little goody-goody, but they don't really know, do they?"

In the BBC documentary on Gordonstoun, the school in northern Scotland attended by Edward and his brothers, he recalled that he was rarely subjected to the school's unusual punishments, such as cross-country jogs or long, solitary walks on the Scottish heath.

"Just because I wasn't on punishment doesn't mean I was on the straight and narrow," said the 20-year-old prince.

The prince said corporal punishment is sometimes necessary.

It's "a sort of last resort, really," he told the British Broadcasting Corp. "A beating or a thrashing, if used in the right context, is I think very valuable."

Writes his own reviews

NEW YORK — Jimmy Cagney's wife of nearly 62 years says the veteran actor is his own harshest critic.

"He's always saying that whatever he did was just a job," said Frances "Willie" Cagney. "Even today it is a terrible struggle to get him to watch any of his old pictures."

"When I watch one, he'll say something like, 'Why did I walk like that? God, I look like I'm hitting the walls on both sides of the hall!' I like to tell him that he's just looking at one scene and not getting the whole picture."

JIMMY CAGNEY

In an interview in this Parade Magazine, the wife of the 85-year-old actor said their marriage has lasted so long because they had the sense "to get out of Hollywood as often as possible."

Cagney is recovering from a heart attack he suffered two months ago.

Popping back for encore

BOSTON — Composer John Williams, who quit as the Boston Pops' conductor when he reportedly became upset by the orchestra's behavior and poor morale, has decided not to give up his baton after all.

JOHN WILLIAMS

Williams, best known for the movie scores of "Star Wars" and "E.T., The Extra-Terrestrial," has resigned the resignation he tendered in June when members of the orchestra jokingly hissed at one of his compositions, associate conductor Harry Ellis Dickson said Thursday.

The Pops' musicians received the news enthusiastically. "Everyone applauded and everyone was happy," Dickson said.

Williams was said to be angry over the behavior of musicians during rehearsal and orchestra morale, Dickson said when Williams resigned.

"John Williams is a very sensitive man. Conducting is rather new to him, as he himself will see. You have to be a little bit hardskinned to conduct an orchestra," Dickson said.

THOUSANDS STRONG — A crowd of nearly 5,000 people march through downtown Los Angeles Sunday en route to MacArthur Park where they celebrated "Survival Day," a commemoration of the anniversary of the bombing of Hiroshima. According to a Los Angeles police spokesman, the event was the largest demonstration since the Vietnam War era.

Thousands join anti-war rally

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Five thousand peace activists rallied to mark the 39th anniversary of the first U.S. atomic bombing of Japan, and to make sure the post-war generations remember the attack.

Although dwarfed by the crowd of 90,000 attending Olympic events at the Coliseum a few miles away, the attendance at Survival Day '84 in MacArthur Park on Sunday was the largest in more than a decade for an anti-war event in Los Angeles, police said.

"In sheer size, this is one of the largest I've seen," said Deputy Police Chief Lew Ritter.

Like the Olympics, Survival Day had a flame — an "eternal torch of light" carried into the park by Kenichi Yasui of Hiroshima, who was a child when his city was bombed during World War II.

"The survivors in Japan are getting older, and the people who survived the Nagasaki and Hiroshima bombs are getting smaller (in number)," Yasui, 46, told the crowd through an interpreter. "The younger people don't know what happened, and I feel we must get this message to the younger generation."

A crowd marched to the park from downtown and then observed three minutes of silence at 4:15 p.m. — 39 years to the moment, 8:15 a.m. Tokyo time, after the bomb was dropped on Aug. 6, 1945.

An estimated 118,000 people died immediately, while 60,000 died within five years.

Blues-rock singer Bonnie Raitt and other musicians performed, and vendors hawked a variety of wares including frozen juice bars called Nuclear Freezes.

The march was sponsored by the '84 Mobilization for Peace and Justice.

Meanwhile, in San Francisco, about 100 people attended a vigil for peace at the University of California at Berkeley. A prayer service was planned at an Alameda church today.

On Saturday, hundreds of people placed folded paper cranes on a makeshift altar in San Francisco's Japantown Center Peace Plaza during a 2 1/2-hour memorial honoring the Hiroshima dead.

To the accompaniment of crashing symbols and a mournful flute, Buddhist monks burned incense at the altar, which bore the inscription "Repose Ye in Peace, for the Error Shall Never be Repeated." A similar inscription is on a stone monument in Hiroshima.

The event was sponsored by Eastbay Asian-Americans and endorsed by 50 churches and Bay area organizations.

In Walled Lake, Mich., about 500 marchers marked the anniversary of the bombing with a Saturday demonstration at the Williams International Corp. plant, where cruise missile engines are built.

There were no arrests, Oakland County sheriff's dispatchers said.

Girl dies from apparent poisoning

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — An 11-year-old girl died and six of her brothers and sisters became seriously ill in an apparent poisoning from an insect-killing chemical, officials said.

Sonya Murphy of Tunika, Miss., died Saturday night at LeBonheur Children's Medical Center shortly after she and her five sisters and one brother were brought to the hospital, said spokesman Scott Kent.

An autopsy was scheduled to determine the source of the poisoning, Kent said.

Pamela Murphy, 4, and Theresa, 5, remained in critical condition Sunday, Kent said. Jerome, 9, and Lavelle, 8, were in serious condition, and Monica, 7, and Samantha, 2, were in satisfactory condition Sunday, he said.

The children apparently ingested or inhaled an organic phosphate contained in either an agricultural pesticide or insect spray, Kent said.

"The poison could have been from an agricultural chemical sprayed near their home, or from a bug spray in the house. We just don't know at this point," he said.

The hospital has contacted the Mississippi Department of Health to investigate, Kent said.

The children were brought to the hospital's poison center by their mother, Gannie Murphy, from their home in Tunika, about 40 miles from Memphis, he said.

Escapes shot by trooper

SOMERS, Conn. — Two bank-robbing prison escapees hit a dead end after five violent weeks when the state trooper they asked for directions recognized them, setting up a shootout that left one convict dead and one critically wounded, officials said.

A third convict from Tennessee's Turney Center prison remained at large today, and authorities, believing the trio had traveled together, mounted a search in north-central Connecticut.

Their escape had already cost the lives of three searchers in Tennessee who were killed when their helicopter crashed shortly after the breakout.

William R. Prentice, Michael Hartsock, and Lohman R. Mays dashed for freedom through the pre-dawn fog July 1 after picking the locks on their cells at the prison in Only, Tenn., authorities said.

Shortly after noon on Sunday, Prentice and Hartsock pulled up to a police car on a northern Connecticut highway to ask directions to the home of Prentice's relatives, state police said.

Trooper David Waddell "realized who they were, and they realized that he knew who they were," said Sgt. Edward Dailey, state police spokesman.

Waddell began a chase, and on a dead-end road, Prentice, 29, was killed by gunfire.

Hartsock, 26, a convicted double murderer, was wounded in the chest and abdomen. He was in critical condition today after surgery at Johnson Memorial Hospital, said spokesman Michael Helechu.

A police officer and a teen-age girl riding in a passing car were also injured.

Panda cub is stillborn

WASHINGTON — Ling-Ling, the giant panda at the National Zoo, gave birth late Sunday to a stillborn cub, zoo officials announced today.

Dr. Robert Hoage, special assistant to the zoo director, said the infant panda appeared to be normally developed, but that its sex and the cause of death were not known. A necropsy was scheduled for later today.

The tiny cub was the result of a mating on March 19 between Ling-Ling and the zoo's male panda, Hsing-Hsing. It was only their second mating in nine years of trying.

The first, last year, produced a 4.7-ounce male which died of a respiratory infection three hours after birth in July 1983.

Hoage said the delivery took place at 10:34 p.m. EDT Sunday in a bamboo nest Ling-Ling had built in a corner of her den and "appeared to be more characteristic of a panda birth than last year's abrupt ejection."

"Even though the cub failed to move or emit the loud cries that characterize baby pandas, Ling-Ling repeatedly licked and cradled the infant, demonstrating once again that she could be an excellent mother," the zoo said in a statement.

Ling-Ling appeared in excellent health after the birth, Hoage said. She had been receiving low-level antibiotics for more than eight months to avert any possible genitourinary infections.

Population meet begins

MEXICO CITY — The United States, promoting a new policy that suggests poor nations can cope with population growth through economic progress, joins 139 other countries at a U.N.-sponsored population conference opening today.

The U.S. policy paper prepared for the conference says too much government control and planning in Third World countries held back economic growth that could have led to a birth rate decline. It emphasizes "sound economic policies" over population policy.

However, Rafael Salas, secretary general of the week-long conference, said there is a worldwide consensus that governments should intervene to affect population growth.

Economists say price jump not likely to become trend

By the Associated Press

Grocery prices jumped 3 percent in July, according to The Associated Press' monthly market-basket survey, but economists called the rise "an anomaly" and said it was not likely to become a trend.

Most of the overall increase came from large jumps in pork chop and butter prices and despite a continuing decline in the price of eggs.

"It's an anomaly," said Michael K. Evans, an economist who heads an economic forecasting firm in Washington, D.C. "I would still look for inflation to remain fairly moderate for the second half of the year. I would not expect sustained increases," he said.

Donald Ratajczak, an economist at Georgia State University in Atlanta, said: "I don't think this is a trend. I'd be surprised if you don't register a decline next month."

He added, "I do not think you'll see this reflected in the CPI (the government's Consumer Price Index). I think in the CPI there will be very moderate increases in food prices."

The marketbasket bill rose in 11 cities an average of 4.4 percent. It declined in only one city, Los Angeles, by 8.8 percent. In Salt Lake City, the bill was unchanged.

In the previous month, the overall bill rose 0.65 percent.

A look at the overall number of items in the AP survey showed more items rose during July than during June.

Pork chop prices jumped an average of 14.9 percent.

Chuck Levitt, a livestock analyst with Shearson Lehman-American Express Inc. in Chicago, said, "This year, the decline in slaughter seasonally was one of the sharpest in recent years because of the liquidation of hogs that occurred in the aftermath of last summer's drought."

The drought raised the cost of feed, prompting farmers to slaughter their livestock, he said, and by June 1 the national inventory of hogs and pigs was down 9 percent from a year earlier. The number of hogs slaughtered in July was down 14 percent from a year ago, he said.

The price of butter jumped an average 4.6 percent.

Levitt explained: "The government at the end of last year devised what they call a paid-diversion program on dairy. What this program did was tell the dairy farmer that, 'If you slaughter your cows, don't milk them (beforehand). We will pay you for the milk they would have produced if you didn't slaughter.'"

He added: "They started to slaughter their dairy cows and what it did was cut into the production of dairy products through the spring into the summer period. If they have less milk they may keep it as milk."

The price of milk tended downward during July after tending upward in the previous month. Levitt said the recent decline might be seasonal, with less people drinking milk in July. Ratajczak said milk prices might increase next month.

Egg prices, continuing their decline, fell an average 3.8 percent, not including Detroit, where the price of eggs has been abnormally high. They fell an average 2.9 percent in the previous month.

The Associated Press drew up a random list of 15 commonly purchased food and non-food items, checked the price at one supermarket in each of 13 cities on March 1, 1973, and has rechecked on or about the start of each succeeding month. One item, chocolate chip cookies, was dropped from the list several years ago because the manufacturer discontinued the package size used in the survey.

No attempt was made to weight the AP survey results according to population density or in terms of what percentage of a family's actual grocery outlay each item represents.

The day of the week on which the check was made varied depending on the month. Standard brands and sizes were used when available. If the requested size and brand was not available on March 1, 1973, a comparable substitute was selected. Items temporarily out of stock on one of the survey dates being compared were not included in the overall total.

The AP did not try to compare actual prices from city to city — to say, for example, that eggs cost more in one area than another. The only comparisons were made in terms of percentage increase or decrease — saying a particular item went up 10 percent in one city and 6 percent in another.

The USDA marketbasket issued each month is based on a complex set of statistics. It is used to keep track of changes in the proportion of the food dollar received by the farmer, wholesaler and retailer and does not correspond to actual family spending.

Acting morally toward animals

By DEBRA DAY

Many people dump dogs for one of two reasons: They think that it can fend for itself, or that someone will feel sorry for it and pick it up. These are both examples of faulty reasoning.

In the first place, most dogs cannot fend for themselves. Man's controlled breeding of canines has created many breeds — most of which physically cannot catch sufficient food. Also, hunting skills are generally learned from adults in the pack; they are not instinctive. This means there are three things which can happen. A) The dog starves or is killed. B) The dog joins a pack, which lives by running down livestock, by tearing into trash and sometimes even tearing into pets and children. C) Someone feels sorry for the dog and picks it up.

This brings us to the second "reason" for dumping dogs: "Someone will take it in." Few dogs are this lucky. For example: Last week, I saw a stray on W. 10th. It was wandering in the middle of the street in such a stupor that it barely noticed my honking.

I knew the pup was in trouble and I couldn't drive on leaving her to suffer. She was barely able to stay on her feet and collapsed in my arms as I picked her up. She was perhaps 5 months old and a walking skeleton with a thin coat of leather. Her hip bones and ribs were painfully visible, and her heartbeat was visible between the ribs. There were hundreds of ticks on her body, clustered thickly in her ears and between the pads of her feet. She was crawling with fleas.

In the few hours I had her, the most she could manage was to raise her head a little, look at me and weakly thump her tail, twice. Her head then sank to the floor, and she steadily grew worse. When I took her to the pound, she was no longer aware of her surroundings.

The officer at the pound did the only remaining humane thing — she put the pup to sleep. So even though the pooch did finally get picked up, it was too late. In most cases, the end result is the same: between the lack of hunting skills, the parasites, diseases, traffic dangers, and exposure to the elements, most meet an untimely death.

To the person who dumped that hopeless pup, I say this: When you dumped her, you began to torture her, for weeks on end until she died.

Everyone who owns a pet or is thinking about it, please be aware that your moral responsibility to the animal goes beyond providing food, water, shelter, and annual shots. It's also your responsibility to control its reproduction. That means either 1) having the animal spayed or neutered, 2) preventing females from breeding when in heat (which, unlike spaying, is cruel and difficult), or 3) taking responsibility for the litter by keeping them yourself (expensive), finding homes for them all (often difficult) or taking them to the pound (unfair, if the pound can't find them homes).

With so many alternatives, there is no excuse for dumping an animal. No matter what his socioeconomic level, the person who does so is nothing but trash.

New maxim: Let seller beware

WASHINGTON — When high rollers come to Washington hoping to buy influence in high places, the operative principle is "caveat emptor" — let the buyer beware. If an honest politician is one who stays bought, then an honest influence peddler is one who actually pays off the people he's supposed to.

Since 1961, when Basil Tsakos came to town to promote a dubious plan to run an oil pipeline across Central Africa from the Red Sea to the Atlantic Ocean, the Greek arms dealer has had occasion to ponder these cynical rules of the Washington game.

He spent a bundle, and lived to regret his reliance on a former intelligence agent who was supposed to be paying off well-connected government officials. At least some of the payoffs apparently were never made.

My associate Corky Johnson has been investigating this bizarre scheme for six months. Here are some of the highlights:

Tsakos started off in the grand manner by purchasing a $500,000 condominium in the Watergate complex, and spreading the word that he had $200 million to spend on promotion of the pipeline project.

Tsakos made a believer of Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., who saw the trans-Africa pipeline as a worthwhile way to assure access to Middle East oil without military action. Tsakos paid at least $40,000 to Hatfield's wife, Antoinette, for real estate transactions while the senator promoted the pipeline.

But Tsakos had less success in his dealings with the ex-intelligence official, Joe Rosenbaum, a "venture capitalist" and old friend of CIA Director William Casey. As evidence that Rosenbaum had good Washington connections, Tsakos was shown a personal letter Casey had written to Rosenbaum. The two men's friendship dated back to their days in the wartime Office of Strategic Services, predecessor of the CIA.

According to court documents and other sources, Tsakos paid Rosenbaum $250,000 over the next couple of years "to pave the way" for the pipeline project, as Tsakos put it. The first payment of $100,000 was delivered on Feb. 12, 1961.

That same day, Rosenbaum set up a meeting among Tsakos, Casey, former Navy Secretary William Middendorf and Carl Shipley, Middendorf's attorney and a former member of the Republican National Committee.

Middendorf reportedly said he liked the pipeline idea, but couldn't get involved personally because he anticipated getting a post in the Reagan administration. (He is now ambassador to the Organization of American States.)

Casey also responded favorably to the plan, and vouched for Rosenbaum as the man who could carry it out.

Rosenbaum and Tsakos then set up the Trans-African Pipeline Co. with Shipley as president. Shipley promoted the project with government and congressional officials. Over Christmas of 1961, Shipley and his wife were Tsakos's guests at a ski chalet in Gstaad, Switzerland. "He loved it. He loved it. He kissed my bottom," Tsakos said of Shipley, according to court records.

But Shipley withdrew when he learned from intelligence documents of Tsakos's criminal record in Greece and his arms deals. Shipley said he was never paid by Tsakos.

Rosenbaum drew up a ledger of influential people he supposedly had on the pipeline payroll. One was Fred Biebel, a deputy chairman of the Republican National Committee and its liaison with the White House. The ledger listed a total of $10,000 in payments to Biebel for "services in connection with dealing with the White House and State (Department)."

Biebel told my associate he was never paid any money in connection with the pipeline deal, and said he was "shocked" when he learned he was on Rosenbaum's list of supposed payoffs. Biebel said he was paid $2,500 a month by Rosenbaum during the same time period, however, on a matter involving the sale of railroad boxcars in Connecticut.

The ledger of big shots' names gave Tsakos the impression — as it was obviously intended to — that he was getting a lot for the money he was giving Rosenbaum. In fact, some of the people on the list were working on the pipeline project. And the CIA was definitely interested.

EAST TIMOR UPDATE: When I first exposed the true horrors of Indonesia's genocidal "annexation" of East Timor more than four years ago, the Jakarta government stoutly denied my charges of slaughter, starvation and suppression. Because Indonesia is a U.S. ally, and had what it assumed to be President Ford's tacit approval for the 1975 invasion, neither the Carter nor Reagan administration did anything to pursue the issue.

But at long last, there are signs of action on Capitol Hill. Reports of continuing atrocities in East Timor have produced separate House and Senate appeals to the White House urging "humanitarian intervention" on behalf of the suffering Timorese.

Around the Rim

The F team

By TIM APPEL

I normally like to write humorous columns, but I'm still lamenting over the recent loss of a close family member: my camera equipment.

Unlike most professions and the tools of their trade, photographers and their cameras are extremely close. While the photographer is the brains behind the operation, the camera is responsible for the proper functions to let the correct amount of light hit the unexposed film. The camera and photographer must be one entity in order for the best results.

My first experience with the F-1 was during my freshman year in college. This was no amateur's plastic toy, but a tank, rugged enough to take the punishment given out by the daily use of a professional. So after a brief courtship at the camera display counter, I purchased it with money saved up from working at the daily paper during my senior year at high school.

The functions on it were awesome; 4 1/2 frames per second motor drive, a shutter speed at 1/4000 of a second. I kept that baby spotless, cleaning the outside of it everyday after a tough day at the college paper. But all good things must end, as it finally received its first scratch after a month of use.

As time went by, the camera and I became very close, having gone through many adventures. Whether it had been shooting Oregon State football in a downpour, or the -60 degrees (including wind chill factor) of an Ohio winter, the camera survived. So trustworthy was it that it had only been in the repair shop once after I had accidentally spilled a glass of chocolate milk into the camera (don't ask me how).

When it was time to put together my portfolio of best shots for job interviews, every strip of film chosen for printing once ran through the heart of this light-tight box. Through good or bad, that devoted F-1 and I were a team.

But as of recent, the outdated titan had begun to show its age. The light meter started to give out false readings, making proper exposure difficult, and the once faithful motor drive now worked less than 20 percent of the time. But like every other night such as that fateful Tuesday, I left it sitting on the back seat of my car, waiting for some late-breaking spot news assignment that it will now never see.

So to my friend that so loyally served with me, I say "thank you" for all you have done.

You should see my new friend coming in the mail soon. Six frames per second, motorized rewind, all electronic metering...

Gold fever

WASHINGTON — The Democrats roared out of San Francisco talking up "equality of sacrifice" and "playing by the rules." But is that what the country really wants?

No poll can answer the question because most of us are liars when it comes to declaring the nobility of our intentions. But abundant evidence suggests that Americans are in a mood to grab it now and not worry much about what happens later to those left behind.

The Olympics in Los Angeles offer the best evidence of the spirit of the times. Rarely has winning — enshrined in that vulgar cliché "going for the gold" — counted more. Rarely has "how the game is played" counted less. Paying ridiculously large sums to "amateur athletes" makes the hypocrisy visible. Charging $60 for a ticket to a track meet shows how little the great celebration is for Everyman.

Lotteries provide another case in point. Many states now have them. Since revenue is generated for the house, those who play have to work against the odds. No survey is required to know that most of the addicts are in the lower income brackets, not the posh precincts. But no cry of protest is heard in the land. On the contrary, day after day those who strike it rich are glorified in the press and on television. "Forget Michael Jackson," the New York Daily News put it the other day. "The state's Lotto game is the hottest ticket in town."

A commercial equivalent of that spirit is the leveraged buy-out. In the LBO, investors take over a company by using the company's assets as collateral for loans. Those who manage such deals make millions overnight. But the companies are burdened with heavy debt. The corporate structure of the country as a whole is thus drastically weakened.

Banks making loans for such deals are clearly improvident. One banker, indeed, acknowledged that while he would loan money to people contemplating a leveraged buy-out, he would not lend money to the company that emerged. But such thoughtlessness among bankers is not exactly news these days.

On the contrary, the imprudence of the bankers finds daily expression in the news from Latin America. The billions of dollars in debts that Mexico, Brazil, Argentina and the others have so much trouble paying were practically forced down their throats by energetic loan officers under instructions to lend out the huge amounts put on deposit by the oil countries. "Country risk assessment" teams turned a blind eye to the process and were genuinely surprised when the risks turned bad. Leading bank officials justified the loan on the grounds that sovereign countries would not go broke.

Governments, including the U.S. government, tended to encourage the process. Now that the time of reckoning has come, their hands are tied. A nice case in point is the rescue of Continental Illinois, the eighth-biggest bank in this country, by various regulatory agencies, including the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. The FDIC guaranteed all accounts with Continental Illinois, although it was obligated to guarantee only up to $100,000. Even as the regulators were saving Continental Illinois, they let several smaller banks go bust.

Nasty questions can be asked as to why a big Chicago bank is saved while smaller institutions go down. Also as to whether the FDIC was actually authorized to take the action it took. But congressional leaders, mindful that the whole system is shaky, have put off hearings. Smart people don't want to rock the boat until they're sure it isn't sinking.

Politics in these conditions is inevitably mean-spirited.

Still paying more for gas

To the editor:

Almost daily, news reports announce that gasoline prices are decreasing. At least twice daily I observe that gasoline prices in Big Spring are not decreasing and, in fact, have recently increased. It makes one wonder if there is collusion among suppliers or retailers.

On the front page of the July 30 Herald I read that gasoline prices are going down. On Aug. 1, I stopped to fill up and not only has the five-cent tax been added on, the distributor or station owner has added another penny. Now why could I buy Texaco unleaded in Amarillo on Aug. 26 for $1.11 and pay $1.16 in Big Spring. I hope someone doesn't think transportation costs, because north, east, south and west of the refinery in Big Spring the prices are less. It's a gouge!

It's the same with groceries. The cost has decreased according to the news releases but it seems to me that everything continues to cost more. Gordon Cavnar Sterling City Route

Today in history

By The Associated Press Today is Monday, Aug. 6, the 219th day of 1984. There are 147 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On Aug. 6, 1945, the United States dropped an atomic bomb on Hiroshima, Japan, during World War II. An estimated 80,000 people died in the first wartime use of nuclear weaponry.

On this date: In 1806, the Holy Roman Empire went out of existence as Emperor Francis I abdicated.

In 1926, Gertrude Ederle of New York became the first American woman to swim the English Channel. She left Gris-Nez, France, and arrived on the English coast some 14 1/2 hours later.

Dr. Donohue

Nerve damage

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I broke my wrist several months ago. I was in a cast for six weeks. Since that time my fingers and wrist have been very stiff. I have had therapy, which has helped slightly. The orthopedic surgeon said I had "sympathetic dystrophy." I wonder how common this condition is. — D.O.R.

It's common enough that the possibility sends a shudder through every doctor who confronts such an injury. But most broken bones heal without this dreadful complication.

The word sympathetic here means the sympathetic nervous system, that part of the nerve network that isn't under voluntary control, the part that keeps your heart beating regularly, your lungs pumping, your blood vessels expanding and contracting. The injury caused a malfunction in that system.

A symptom is a persistent burning pain as the blood vessels contract and stay that way. The word dystrophy refers to a shriveling of the muscles in the injury area, for all muscles need the constant nourishment afforded by a finely-tuned vessel system.

Your physical therapy is the cornerstone in treatment of sympathetic dystrophy, and many make a full recovery with that alone. But other treatments may be used. For example, novocaine or other similar agents can be used. For example, novocaine or other agents can be used to block the sympathetic nerve cells. Transcutaneous neural stimulators are also helpful. It's a box about the size of a package of cigarettes, which is attached to the area and which emits electric current to block pain, if that is present.

I know your unasked question is when you can expect recovery. I can't give you a timetable, because it varies widely. I do encourage you to give 100 percent effort in your therapy during the difficult time.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: The doctor tells me I have high potassium. It's at 4.9. How bad is that? — E.S.

If the laboratory doing the testing is using the measuring system most labs use, your potassium level is high normal, and I think this is what your doctor meant. The normal potassium value is between 3.5 and 5.0. Your present level will not harm you.

Unless properly treated, both glaucoma and cataracts can lead to blindness. If you are afflicted with either of these ailments, or know someone who is, write to Dr. Donohue, in care of the Big Spring Herald, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, IL 60611, for his booklet, "Cataracts and Glaucoma." Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 50 cents.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Dear Abby

Woman learns being chaste means not being chased

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 54-year-old financially independent professional woman who has had many suitors. The list includes a film producer, a psychiatrist, a novelist, a banker, and a chief of staff in a large hospital. I enjoy the company of men, but I am celibate. My problem: These relationships end when I tell them I'm celibate.

These men and I have found each other mutually interesting. I wonder why they don't continue seeing me and get their sex elsewhere. I'd like to meet some gay men or celibates like myself, of equal social position, who enjoy female companionship. Where do I find them?

NOT FRUSTRATED IN L.A.
DEAR NOT: Try the Gay Community Services Center or the Catholic clergy. But why not give sex another chance? You could wind up happily married to a film producer, a psychiatrist, a novelist, a banker, or a chief of staff in a large hospital.

DEAR ABBY: I see by your column that the U.S. Postal Service goofed when it put the wrong colors on the rump and tail feathers of the American bald eagle. However, it doesn't make a whole lot of difference if the feathers are dark or white.

Now let me tell you about a more serious mistake made by our government that has yet to be corrected on a national scale: I wonder how many people know that the first battle of the American Revolution took place on Oct. 10, 1774, at Point Pleasant, which is now in the state of West Virginia. This was six months and eight days before "the shots heard 'round the world" were fired at Lexington and Concord.

I am very much annoyed that our history books still state that the opening battle of the American Revolution took place at Lexington and Concord on April 19, 1775.

Can you help me and other proud West Virginians to set the record straight once and for all?
FURIOUS IN WEST VIRGINIA

DEAR FURIOUS: This historical gaffe is strictly "for the birds." (Here we go again!) May I respectfully suggest that you enlist the help of your U.S. senator, Robert C. Byrd.

Miss James honored with bridal shower

Donna James, bride-elect of Steve Bib of Rising Star, was honored recently with a shower at the home of Mrs. Steve Dick of Coahoma.

Hostesses were Clarinda Harris, Fern Roberts, Tye Renfro, Linda Dick, Darlene Gressett, Dale Ferguson, Mary Anderson, Wanda Bristo, Minneve Cranfill, Lorene Barbee, Peggy Snell, Martha Hall, Ann Bingham and Twylia Roberts. They presented the honoree with a multi-purpose electric skillet/cooker and an etched glass covered cake stand.

Pink carnation corsages were presented to Miss James, her mother Mrs. Ovis James and mother of the prospective bridegroom Mrs. Kenneth Bib of Rising Star.

Special guests were Marilyn Isom of Brady, sister of the prospective bridegroom, and Ovis James, father of the bride-elect and the prospective bridegroom. Bib assisted his bride-to-be in opening the gifts.

Guests were served from a table covered with a floor-length, lace-edged white cloth, trimmed with white tulle swags that were accented with dusty rose silk flowers and ribbons. The table was centered with a gold seven-branch candelabrum decorated with a rose and mauve bridal bouquet cascade, matching candles and ribbon streamers.

Carla Westfall, David Hodnett honored at pre-nuptial events

Carla Jane Westfall and David Craig Hodnett were honored at pre-nuptial events July 26 and 27. The couple was wed July 27 at the home of the bridegroom's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. R.H. Boykin, 613 Highland.

The couple was honored at a rehearsal dinner at K. C. Steakhouse, July 26. The event was hosted by the bridegroom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. David L. Hodnett.

Miss Westfall was honored at a bridesmaids' luncheon July 27 at the home of Betty Wales. The home was decorated with apricot and white flower arrangements on each of the tables, which were covered with apricot-colored cloths. The bride's attendants were presented gifts at the occasion.

Women shine at Olympics

Ashford burns field in 100 meters final

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The often-injured Evelyn Ashford sped to victory in the women's 100-meter dash in 10.97 seconds, smashing the Olympic record of 11.01 set by Annetre Richter of West Germany in 1976, ending a 16-year drought of Olympic gold for U.S. women in the event.

In winning, Ashford, of Roseville, Calif., led another 1-2 American sweep, as Alice Brown of Altadena, Calif. finished second in 11.13. Merlene Ottey-Page of Jamaica grabbed the bronze medal, with a time of 11.16, edging Jeanette Bolden of Compton, Calif., fourth in 11.25.

The 27-year-old Ashford, who was considered one of the fastest women in the world when the U.S. boycotted the 1980 games; finally got her chance to prove it so, even with the absence of the Soviet Union.

Ashford's start out of the blocks were not one of her bests, teammates Brown and Bolden burst out of the blocks first and led for the first 40 meters. Then Ashford made her move and blew by the field winning by three meters.

"I was stunned at first," said the excited Ashford. "I didn't realize at first what I had done... until they said, 'new Olympic record.'"

"I was just so happy," she added. "I won — and I was under 11 seconds. I wanted to be under 11 seconds."

Ashford owns the world record of 10.79 seconds, but she lost her bid for the world title last year, when she suffered a severe hamstring injury during the final of the 100 in the World Championships at Helsinki, Finland.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Sunday night Edwin Moses ran his incredible victory string to 105, cruising past the rest of the field at the Olympic Games to the thunderous cheers of a nearly packed house at Los Angeles Coliseum.

"I'm just happy enough to win," said Moses, who wanted to break the Olympic record but finished just off it at 47.75 seconds. "It's the kind of race where you go in and you want to concentrate on winning first and everything else, second."

Moses, who will turn 29 years old Aug. 31, knows a lot about winning. He hasn't lost since 1977. The man who last beat him, Harald Schmid, won the bronze medal here Sunday night.

Moses' time was one-tenth of a second slower than his winning effort in the Montreal Games of 1976.

"Overall it wasn't the most demanding race I've had," he said. "But I realized with the other guys inside I had to get out fast and establish myself."

For a long time, his competition has been at least a step behind, but Moses, who lives in nearby Laguna Beach, has maintained his motivation.

SMOOTH STRIDING EVELYN — U.S.A.'s Evelyn Ashford of Los Angeles, California strides toward the finish line as she wins the 100 meters in the Olympic finals. Ashford's time of 10.97 was a new Olympic record and was the U.S.'s first gold in the event since 1968 when Wyomni Tyus won in Mexico City.

U.S. Volleyballers in championship tilt

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — The U.S. women's volleyball team is just one victory away from an Olympic gold medal. Standing in the way of the Americans is 1982 world champion China.

As expected, the Americans reached the championship match by defeating Peru 16-14, 15-9, 15-10 Sunday night before a capacity crowd of about 12,000 at the Long Beach Arena.

China, which lost to the United States 15-13, 7-15, 15-12 in the final match of pool play last Friday night, then overwhelmed Japan 15-10, 15-7, 15-4 to earn its shot at the gold medal.

It was the first time a Japanese women's volleyball team has been beaten in the Olympics by any team other than the Soviet Union.

The United States and China will square off Tuesday night at 8:30 p.m., PDT. The loser will receive the silver medal.

Japan and Peru will battle for the bronze medal earlier in the day.

The Americans scored 12 straight points to take a 12-2 lead in the first game of the match, but Peru battled back, eventually earning a 14-14 tie.

However, the United States won by scoring two straight points with Julie Vollertsen serving.

The USA led throughout the second game. It was 13-4 when Peru scored five straight points, but that was as close as the Peruvians could get.

Peru led through much of the third game. It was 10-7 when the Americans exploded, rattling off eight straight points to finish the match.

China, which blew substantial leads in all but one of its games against the United States last Friday night, had no such problems against Japan. To punctuate their victory, the Chinese scored the final 10 points of the 80-minute match.

Canada and Brazil will meet for seventh place in the tournament Tuesday morning at 10 a.m. West Germany and Korea will play for fifth place at noon.

Pool play in the men's competition finishes today — Argentina was to meet Korea and Canada was to face Japan in the morning session and Egypt takes on Italy and the United States battles Brazil at night.

The Americans lead Pool A with a 3-0 record. Italy and Korea are both 2-1, Argentina is 1-2 and Tunisia, idle today, is 0-4.

Japan leads Pool B with a 3-0 record. Italy and Canada are both 2-1, Egypt is 0-3 and China, idle today, is 1-3.

The medal round for men is scheduled Wednesday night.

American takes first women's marathon

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Joan Benoit won the most important women's marathon in history. Three months ago, she didn't think she'd be in it.

It was her knee. It's tough to run 26 feet on a bum knee let alone more than 26 miles. So 17 days before she would have to try and qualify for the U.S. Olympic team, she had arthroscopic surgery.

Could she recover in time? She was determined but doubtful.

In the mail she had received photos of a mural near the Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum depicting her. When she had surgery, she thought, "They've put it up for nothing at all. I won't even be there."

She was wrong. She won easily at the U.S. women's marathon trials on May 12.

"It took me about four weeks after the Olympic Trials to realize what I had done," she said. "To this day, I still don't know how I managed to qualify."

It also might take a while for her to realize the magnitude of her breakaway victory at the Coliseum Sunday in the first-ever Olympic women's marathon.

"I don't know how to express it. It was something very, very special, something I've dreamed about," said the durable runner from Maine. "I can't believe I won this marathon."

"It wasn't as emotional as qualifying for the Olympic team because of the special circumstances preceding the Olympic Trials but it was indeed very special."

Her time of two hours, 24 minutes, 52 seconds was the third fastest marathon ever run by a woman and the fastest in an all-female marathon. Benoit also holds the world record of 2:22:43 set on the hillier Boston Marathon course in 1983.

Her slight frame belies her spirit and desire to overcome injury and win races.

"I don't know where my competitiveness comes from. I often ask myself that and I haven't found the answer yet," said Benoit, who once dreamed of earning a spot on the Olympic ski team.

"I grew up in a family of three brothers and it was survival of the fittest so I always played with boys (and) had to hold my own from the start."

She did that Sunday from start to finish.

The 27-year-old Benoit said she wasn't hampered by the heat and smog. She took command during the third mile and opened a lead of 1 minute, 12 seconds just before the halfway point of the 26-mile, 385-yard race. Her winning margin was 1:26. Grete Waitz of Norway won the silver medal in 2:26:18, and Rosa Mota of Portugal took the third-place bronze in 2:26:57.

EXHAUSTION — Switzerland's Gabriela Anderson-Scheiss reaches the finish line of the first-ever Olympic women's marathon Sunday in total exhaustion at the Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum. The 39-year-old Sun Valley, Idaho teacher was caught at the finish line by medical attendants who had followed her along the last lap of the course and she was taken from the field on a stretcher.

Hoopsters one win from Olympic gold

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Cheryl Miller and Anne Donovan led the unbeaten U.S. women on an 18-2 spurt opening the second half Sunday and the Americans went on to crush Canada 92-61. The victory moved the United States within one game of clinching a gold medal in Olympic basketball.

That five-minute burst, both coaches agreed, settled the outcome.

The U.S. women have been so overwhelming that their smallest victory margin has been 28 points.

Miller and Anne Donovan each scored three baskets in the first five minutes of the second half and helped the United States to a 59-33 lead.

The Americans used their revolving-door substitutions to wear down Canada, 2-3.

A fifth consecutive triumph in the preliminary pool moved the United States to within one decision of the country's first gold medal in the women's sport.

The Americans will face South Korea for a second time at 7 p.m. PDT Tuesday in the Forum.

Even though the Americans swept into a 6-0 lead in the first two minutes, the Canadians refused to wilt. The Canadians were down only 36-31 when Alison Lang sank two free throws with 1:27 left in the opening half.

The 6-foot-3 Miller, considered the world's best forward, sat out the last nine minutes of the first half, but still watched her teammates mold a 41-31 halftime lead.

Then the Americans parlayed their man-to-man defensive pressure and fast break into a second-half rout.

The United States held Canada to one field goal in the first five minutes. Misty Thomas' basket was the Canadians' only answer to the big U.S. run.

Donovan led the Americans with 14 points, 10 of them coming in the second half. Miller had 12 points and a team-leading seven rebounds. Lynette Woodard and substitute Cindy Nobel hit 10 each.

South Korea, an 84-47 victim of the United States in their first meeting last week, qualified for the championship game by whipping China 69-56.

Canada will face China for the bronze medal at 5 p.m. PDT Tuesday. Australia's lone victory in five games, a 62-59 decision over Yugoslavia Sunday night, gave the Aussies fifth place. The Yugoslavs also were 1-4.

In the men's quarterfinals Monday, the unbeaten Americans take on West Germany. Italy meets Canada, Yugoslavia draws Uruguay and Spain battles Australia.

Johnson's pinch-hit homer sinks Orioles

Cliff Johnson's pinch-hit homer off Tippy Martinez in the eighth inning and snapped two ties. It broke a 3-3 tie with Baltimore as well as the tie that existed between Johnson and Jerry Lynch, who hit 18 pinch homers for Cincinnati and Pittsburgh from 1957-66.

AL Roundup

Johnson, who also has played with Houston and Chicago in the National League and New York, Cleveland and Oakland in the AL, hit five pinch homers in 1974, one in both 1975 and 1976, three in 1977, two in 1978, one in 1979, three in 1980, one in 1981 and again last year.

"There wasn't any doubt about that one," Johnson said of his long homer. "I had all of it. I had time to admire it a little bit."

Twins 4, Angels 2

Tom Brunansky drove in three runs, two of them with his third home run in as many games, and Ken Schrom scattered six hits over 7 1-3 innings to lead Minnesota to a half-game lead over California. Brunansky tagged Ron Romanick for an RBI single in the first inning and slammed his 20th homer in the third.

"I'm a streak home run hitter and right now I'm in a streak," said Brunansky. "The homers I'm hitting this year mean more because we're in the race."

White Sox 7, Brewers 0
Greg Luzinski ran his RBI streak to eight consecutive games with two run-scoring singles and Richard Dotson pitched 7 1-3 innings as Chicago closed within two games of the West lead and handed Milwaukee its eighth straight setback.

Luzinski's first RBI triggered a three-run first inning off Mike Caldwell, who hasn't won since April 27 and tied a club record by losing his ninth successive game. Luzinski also singled a run across in the second inning while Julio Cruz contributed a two-run double.

Red Sox 4, Rangers 2
Rookie Al Nipper allowed three hits over eight innings and Tony Armas and Rich Gedman belted solo home runs as Boston won for the 20th time in 29 games. The Red Sox scored twice in the third off Charlie Hough on Jim Rice's double, Armas' RBI single and Mike Eastler's double. Gedman homered in the fourth and Armas, who leads the majors, hit his 30th in the seventh.

Yankees 4, Indians 0
Ray Fontenot pitched hitless ball for 5 1-3 innings before Brook Jacoby's scratch single and Mike Armstrong and Phil Niekro completed the one-hitter as the Yankees posted their eighth consecutive victory. Fontenot left after 5 2-3 innings with stiffness in his left shoulder. Rookie Vic Mata hit his first major-league homer and Brian Dayett drove in two runs with a double and sacrifice fly.

Athletics 5, Mariners 4
Mike Heath, Carney Lansford and Jim Essian homered while Larry Sorensen recorded his first victory since July 8 as Oakland completed a four-game series sweep. Ken Phelps homered for Seattle, his 19th.

One of the Seattle runs came when Sorensen wasn't looking as catcher Essian returned the ball following a pitch and it sailed past him with a runner on third.

"I've never seen that happen before," said A's Manager Jackie Moore. "Larry has a habit of walking out in front of the mound to take the throw. This time he walked out there and hung his head."

PUBLIC NOTICE

Notice is hereby given that there will be a Public Hearing on the proposed budget of the Big Spring Independent School District for the fiscal year beginning September 1, 1984. The hearing will be at 5:15 p.m., August 16, 1984, in the Board Room of the School District in the east wing of the Senior High School Building at 701 11th Place. Fiscal matters to be acted upon at this meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Big Spring Independent School District include the official adoption of the aforementioned budget and the official adoption of the tax rate for 1984 school taxes.

HORSEBREEDING HAVEN — Sandy Scharn-Inghausen looks after two horses at Stallions Unlimited, a Washington county breeding and training stable near Brenham. More than 15 breeding farms are nestled in the rolling hills of the county.

Horsebreeding big business for new horse capital of state

BRENNHAM (AP) — Horsebreeding, the controlled process of advancing the best possible genetic trait among horses, has become a multimillion-dollar business in Washington County.

Hidden between the rolling hills, on both sides of U.S. Highway 290, more than 15 commercial breeding stables in the county — said to be Texas' new horse capital — quietly generated an estimated $7.5 million dollars in 1982, said Bill Thane, Washington County extension agent.

Due to the downturn of the economy, horsebreeders here reported only a $3.5 million gain in 1983. Thane, however, believes this figure to be "just a little on the conservative side."

"Of course this is just a fairly conservative estimate. The total income could easily exceed the $10 million mark," he acknowledged.

The extension agent explained the dollars have not always flowed as freely here as they do now. Only during the past 10 to 15 years has Washington County really been discovered as a haven for horsebreeders.

Large commercial breeding stables, such as Stallions Unlimited on State Highway 36 North or Caldwell Stables — specializing in Arabians — on FM 332, have been established only recently. One of the newest stables in the county is Moreau-Sipier Arabians Inc., founded only four years ago near Greenville.

"This county here has the perfect climate for horsebreeding. It's relatively warm — which makes for a long breeding season — and it's centrally located," said Jim Daniels, one of the largest commercial breeders here.

Daniels, a native, has been in the horsebreeding business for 20 years. He said his most successful venture to date was breeding the late Gay Bar King. Jack Benson and Brad McCamy, co-owners of Stallions Unlimited, agree with Daniels' assessment. For them, the long breeding season translates into hard cash.

"We get horses in here from all over Texas and from all over the United States. Some come from California, others from Montana or even New Jersey," Daniels said.

"All of these are, of course, females to be bred to our stallions for an advertised fee," he explained. Depending on the stallion's recorded value, its bloodline and its winnings, the breeding fee often amounts to several thousand dollars.

"We charged between $750 and $1,500 stud fee last year and had approximately 250 horses here during the breeding season," said Daniels.

"At the same time we bred 30 to 40 mares of our own, so we could raise and sell their offspring at a later date," he said. In fact, horse sales account for an estimated $2.5 million in additional yearly income, explained Thane.

Horses with excellent pedigrees, like Jim Daniels' Gay Bar King fillies, easily net between $10,000 and $15,000 at a sale, said Thane.

Recently the syndication of stallions has become an increasingly popular means to enter the horsebreeding business.

At Stallions Unlimited the prime studs are syndicated, meaning that the horses belong to a group of shareholders who often breed their own mares to the syndicated animals.

"If we have any open breedings for a horse like 'The Investor,' we would advertise our prize in a trade magazine. On the average we do handle about 250 brood mares during the breeding season here," Jack Benson said.

Daniels said that horsebreeders here, "like most other commercial breeders, do guarantee a pregnancy and if a foal should die, our customer is entitled to a free breeding."

Breeding season in Washington County starts in early February and lasts until July 1, even though it is generally early September when all mares are finally picked up by their owners, Daniels said.

Until this happens, breeders keep in close contact with their veterinarian, since diseases or other mishaps can endanger large concentrations of horses.

Benson explained that without the veterinarian at hand, the chances of communicable diseases greatly increase.

"We are very fortunate that we've got several good veterinarians in this county and that we're so close to Texas A&M (University). The vet is a very, very important part of this business," said Benson.

Veterinarians check their clients' animals at least once a week, but more often than not the vet stops by every day to make sure "all is in order" with the horses.

Benson and McCamy, who come to Washington County six years ago, are astonished at the great variety of horsebreeders here.

"The diversification of horsebreeders in the county is surprising. We probably have more variety here than anywhere else," said Benson.

Even though the largest amount of money is still to be made in breeding quarterhorses, many breeders have specialized.

In addition to MacNeil, medals went to:

—Henry Calvin Hackler, 37, a truck driver whose widow lives in Jonesboro, Ga. He entered a septic tank on Sept. 8, 1983, to rescue a worker who had been overcome by fumes. Hackler was also overcome and died 12 days later of respiratory failure. The worker suffocated in the septic tank at Moultrie, Ga.

—Griffin W. Holtzclaw, 46, an air traffic controller. He died saving two teen-age girls from drowning April 28, 1984, after their raft was upset off Laguna Beach, Fla. He swam about 200 feet to the nearest girl, then left her to wade ashore in shallow water and swam to the other girl. He supported her until a raft arrived and took them back to shore, where Holtzclaw could not be revived. His widow lives near Headland, Ala.

—Frank I. Baine, 60. He died July 26, 1981, after helping save two teen-agers from drowning in Georgian Bay, Ontario, Canada. Despite having a heart condition, Baine rowed a dinghy to the two as they clung to their overturned boat. Baine hoisted one into his boat and, with the other holding a rope, he rowed against current and wind until a power boat reached them. Baine, whose widow lives in Burlington, Ontario, suffered a fatal heart attack before he could leave the dinghy.

—Kristine R. Milanovic, 40, a teacher. She died saving Kenneth R. McGregor, 7, from drowning after the boy stepped off a sand bar in Bosk Lake, British Columbia, July 28, 1982. Mrs. Milanovic swam to the boy and supported him, but lost consciousness when he began struggling. She could not be revived.

—Police officer Harvey T. Armstrong, 27, of Bellevue, Fla., and water department foreman George J. Morgan, 64, of Ocala, Fla. They were severely burned Feb. 28, 1983, near Ocala when an explosion stopped their attempt to rescue a traveler caught in a fiery, 22-vehicle traffic accident. Armstrong had already pulled two elderly women from a window of another burning car.

—Blaine M. Chetwood, 47, a paramedic in Blue Ash, Ohio. He entered a burning house three times on Nov. 30, 1983, to rescue sisters ages 5 and 3. The bodies of two younger brothers were found later in the house.

—Daniel R. Corey, 25, of Sterling, Ky. A non-swimmer, he dove into the swollen Kentucky River at Irvine, Ky., on May 14, 1983, and saved 11-year-old Darren M. Graves. The boy was being carried away by the current after a boating accident. Meanwhile, Gary L. Freeman, 30, also of Irvine, swam 300 feet across the river to reach the bank and extend a tree branch to save Pamela A. Graves, 35.

—Timothy G. Diakis, 11, of Newport News, Va.,

First Waco residents were 'original people'

WACO (AP) — The original inhabitants of Waco lived perilous lives. A distinct part of the Wichita nation, the Waco Indians share common culture and language with the Wichitas, as well as their warlike habits. And in the end, their fighting skills could not save them from the flood of white-skinned immigrants from the East and a paralyzing series of forced marches that reduced a once-proud people to virtual extinction.

In pre-civilized times, the Wacos — who called themselves the Kitkiti'sh, or "original people" — were a classic hunter-gatherer people, roaming Central and North Texas, following the buffalo migrations, living in temporary shelters. There were four major Waco Indian settlements, the largest being an ancient site between the old Waco High School and Indian Spring Park in downtown Waco.

Some historians, including the late Dr. Robert T. Hill, claim that Waco is the site of the oldest permanent settlement in North America. Spanish maps show a settlement here as early as 1541 — called "Guasco" — 23 years before St. Augustine in Florida was founded.

Wacos and their allies the Tawakonis (sometimes called Tehuacanas) fought continuous battles with marauding bands of Osage and Cherokees to the north and the blood-thirsty Lipas to the south, and occasionally even scaped with Comanche and Apache war parties. While many often were injured, few were killed during the forays since their weapons had progressed little beyond the Stone Age.

That all changed in 1541 with the intrusion of European explorers, most notably Vasquez de Coronado. The Spanish conquistador unwittingly introduced the Wacos and Wichitas to horses and — later — guns. This drastically changed the Waco lifestyle and in a few short generations, the Wacos became accomplished horsemen, riding and shooting with deadly abandon.

In time, the Wacos and Wichitas even defeated a small Spanish army in pitched battles in 1749 at the Taovaya Spanish fort and in the destruction of the San Saba mission. But the Wacos never were able to barter (or steal) enough rifles to compete effectively with the larger tribes to the west and north.

That lack of firepower proved deadly in the largest battle ever fought on what now is Waco soil. Wilbarger's "Indian Depredations in Texas" records that a roving band of Wacos stole all the horses of two Cherokee villages in northeast Texas in late 1829. The Cherokees were well-equipped with the latest rifles and even had Negro slaves and modern wagons. Infuriated, they made a forced march to the main Waco village, located near the old Waco High School.

The Cherokees attacked at dawn, firing a volley from their rifles that killed dozens of Wacos. The Wacos were particularly low on rifles at the time, but fought back stubbornly with bows and arrows under the leadership of chief Illah-Tong before withdrawing behind their crude fortifications. Wilbarger claims that the Cherokees were planning an all-out assault to finish the village when they heard the noisy arrival of 200 Tawakonis from the East, summoned by an alert Waco runner.

Though the Tawakonis did not have rifles — and remained prudently beyond rifleshoot — the Cherokees melted into the Brazos River bottoms and quietly withdrew, without their horses, but with 55 Waco scalps.

Relations between the Wacos and encroaching white settlers were little better. Sporadic fighting broke out, and Sam Houston once stripped a Waco chief named Narhashtowey "Lame Arm" of his rank of chief for an alleged depredation. The Cherokees continued to harass the Wacos and by 1837, drove the Wacos from the village on the Brazos. That same year, the Texas Rangers built a temporary building upriver on the Brazos to control the Indians, but even the Rangers soon were forced to withdraw.

Most Texas Indian tribes signed an agreement with the Texas Republic the following year at the mouth of the Washita River in Fannin County that permitted the Indians much freedom, so long as they submitted to state supervision. The Comanches and the Wacos never accepted Texas' jurisdiction and often fought on alone.

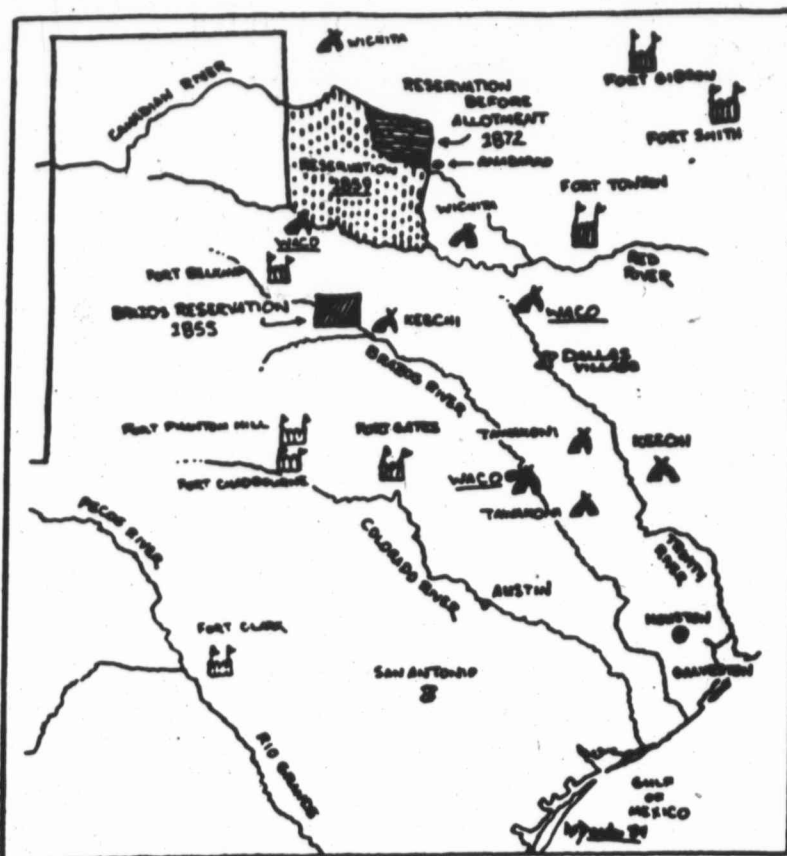

The situation continued to deteriorate until 1843 when a three-day council was held on Tawakoni Creek (about four or five miles east of Waco near Highway 6 in the vicinity of Harrison Switch), when the last great chief of the Wacos, Acaquash, urged the Wacos to sign a treaty with Texas. It took him two years to convince the Wacos to sign.

It didn't work. Warfare between the settlers and Indians simmered continually, occasionally breaking out in open war. Contemporary accounts claim that the Wacos were superb horsemen and often got the better of their white enemies. But the tide of settlers threatened to overwhelm them and farmers simply killed the Indians and took over the land assigned to them by the treaty.

In 1855, Texas, by then a member of the United States, rounded up all of the smaller tribes and a few of the Comanches — who continued to harass the invaders for years to come — and forced them to resettle on a reservation on the Clear Fork of the Brazos in North Texas, near Fort Belknap in Young County. Four years later settlers were greedily claiming that land as well and the harried Wacos suffered badly at the hands of the better-equipped immigrants.

When the state government tacitly approved "open season," the Indians including the remaining Wacos, were forced into the Indian Territory, to a tiny reservation on the Washita River, on land leased from the Choctaws and Chickasaws.

When the Civil War broke out, the confederacy made overtures to the Indians, and some frustrated Wacos even joined the so-called "Caddo Battalion." Others simply were forced from their lands and scattered throughout southern Kansas, where many died of disease and starvation during cruel winters on the poor land.

WACO INDIANS — This map shows Waco Indian villages and reservations. The Wacos — who called themselves the Kitkiti'sh, or "original people" — were a classic hunter-gatherer people, roaming Central and North Texas, following the buffalo migrations. Also pictured are various U.S.-Army forts.

After the Civil War, the powerful, seasoned armies of the United States subdued even the onetime mighty Comanche, Kiowa, Cheyenne and Arapaho bands, gathered the few remaining Wichitas and Wacos together — now numbering about 800 — and forced them into yet another reservation in central Oklahoma. Their children were sent to boarding houses on the East Coast and the Wichitas were forced to submit to an intensive Americanization program supervised by federal agents that forced them to become subsistence farmers on poor land. Their language and customs were vigorously eradicated.

The surviving Wacos and Wichitas eagerly embraced the Ghost Dance movement of the 1890s, a Native Indian restoration movement initiated by Wovoka, a Paiute Indian in Nevada. The government bloodily crushed the movement and punished the adherents who dreamed only of a land before the white man came.

In 1900, even this semblance of a nation was denied to them when the government abolished the reservation system in Oklahoma and broke up the plots into 160-acre allotments, despite vigorous, capable lobbying from their chief, Tawakoni Jim. Tawakoni Jim later brought a number of Wichitas who could boast some Waco blood to the original Cotton Palace Pageant in 1912.

Jim confirmed what historians had discovered earlier: the Waco area always had been sacred to the Indians. There was a sacred grove of cedars that grew on the east bank of the Brazos — in what is now the Steinbeck Bend area — that were prized greatly by the Wacos and Wichitas. Frank H. Watt, of the Central Texas Archeological Society once wrote:

"Lying directly towards the star of the north, a short journey up the great stream from their village on the opposite bank, stood a small grove of cedars, wherein grew the tallest, the slenderest and straightest trees from which they were to fashion their tepee poles: The gift of the Great Spirit of the Waco Indians."

Carnegie Commission honors 18 for bravery

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A 36-year-old engineer who died after entering a gas-filled manhole and saving a man was among 18 people in the United States and Canada who were awarded the Carnegie Medal for heroism today.

The medals, awarded by the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission, honor people who have risked their lives in attempts to save others. Five of the 18 cited today died in their efforts.

The 80-year-old commission, founded by industrialist Andrew Carnegie, has given more than $15.3 million in one-time payments and continuing support to 6,841 heroes or their survivors.

George Kenneth MacNeil, whose widow lives in St. Andrews, Nova Scotia, entered a manhole in Antigonish County, Nova Scotia, on Oct. 22, 1982, to save John J. Smith, 55. Smith had been overcome by sewer gases and fallen into seven feet of raw sewage.

MacNeil positioned Smith so his head would remain above the sewage and climbed toward the top of the manhole, where he lost consciousness and fell into the sewage.

Smith was removed by other rescuers and revived. MacNeil drowned. Today's awards brought grants totaling $45,000 to the rescuers or their survivors, but the foundation did not give a breakdown on individual awards.

—Henry Calvin Hackler, 37, a truck driver whose widow lives in Jonesboro, Ga. He entered a septic tank on Sept. 8, 1983, to rescue a worker who had been overcome by fumes. Hackler was also overcome and died 12 days later of respiratory failure. The worker suffocated in the septic tank at Moultrie, Ga.

—Griffin W. Holtzclaw, 46, an air traffic controller. He died saving two teen-age girls from drowning April 28, 1984, after their raft was upset off Laguna Beach, Fla. He swam about 200 feet to the nearest girl, then left her to wade ashore in shallow water and swam to the other girl. He supported her until a raft arrived and took them back to shore, where Holtzclaw could not be revived. His widow lives near Headland, Ala.

—Frank I. Baine, 60. He died July 26, 1981, after helping save two teen-agers from drowning in Georgian Bay, Ontario, Canada. Despite having a heart condition, Baine rowed a dinghy to the two as they clung to their overturned boat. Baine hoisted one into his boat and, with the other holding a rope, he rowed against current and wind until a power boat reached them. Baine, whose widow lives in Burlington, Ontario, suffered a fatal heart attack before he could leave the dinghy.

—Kristine R. Milanovic, 40, a teacher. She died

saving Kenneth R. McGregor, 7, from drowning after the boy stepped off a sand bar in Bosk Lake, British Columbia, July 28, 1982. Mrs. Milanovic swam to the boy and supported him, but lost consciousness when he began struggling. She could not be revived.

—Police officer Harvey T. Armstrong, 27, of Bellevue, Fla., and water department foreman George J. Morgan, 64, of Ocala, Fla. They were severely burned Feb. 28, 1983, near Ocala when an explosion stopped their attempt to rescue a traveler caught in a fiery, 22-vehicle traffic accident. Armstrong had already pulled two elderly women from a window of another burning car.

—Blaine M. Chetwood, 47, a paramedic in Blue Ash, Ohio. He entered a burning house three times on Nov. 30, 1983, to rescue sisters ages 5 and 3. The bodies of two younger brothers were found later in the house.

—Daniel R. Corey, 25, of Sterling, Ky. A non-swimmer, he dove into the swollen Kentucky River at Irvine, Ky., on May 14, 1983, and saved 11-year-old Darren M. Graves. The boy was being carried away by the current after a boating accident. Meanwhile, Gary L. Freeman, 30, also of Irvine, swam 300 feet across the river to reach the bank and extend a tree branch to save Pamela A. Graves, 35.

—Timothy G. Diakis, 11, of Newport News, Va.,

who entered a burning apartment Jan. 21, 1984, to awaken 83-year-old Sarah G. Sherman and help her into a hallway, where they collapsed from smoke and heat. Firemen rescued both.
