How's that?
Garbage

Q. Are those large metal garbage dumpsters that are located in alleys and around apartment buildings and stores for private use? Or can anyone use them to dispose of garbage such as kitchen garbage? Are they owned by the City?

A. Tom Decell, public works director, said, "First of all, wet garbage is required to be put in plastic bags prior to being put in the dumpsters."

"We quasi-assign" the dumpsters, which are all city owned, to businesses and residences, he said.

Around apartment complexes, "they're there for the use of the residents because apartment management is paying for their use based on the number of units they have," Decell said.

"If somebody has an excess of trash, they should take it to the land fill as opposed to putting it in their neighbor's dumpster," Decell said.

Calendar: Pre-register

TODAY
• A free blood pressure screening will be held from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the Malone-Hogan Clinic lobby at 1501 W. 11th Place.

WEDNESDAY
• Big Spring Area Jaycees will meet at 7:30 p.m. at Golden Corral Restaurant.

THURSDAY
• The Texas Tech Ex-Students Association of Big Spring is sponsoring an ice cream supper at 7 p.m. in the Texas Electric Reddy Room. Game films from the 1983 football season will be shown.

• The Coahoma Band Boosters will meet at 8:30 p.m. at the band hall. An ice cream supper will be served.

• All elementary students must register today and Friday from 8:30 a.m. to noon and 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. at the campuses they will attend this fall. Registration includes students who pre-registered last spring for Bauer Magnet School. First graders not attending a Texas kindergarten must present a birth certificate and immunization record. New students should bring school records.

• All full-day and half-day kindergarten students at Kentwood, Lakeview and Marcy who did not attend spring round-up should register today and Friday from 8:30 a.m. to noon and 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. at campuses they will attend this fall.

• All senior high school students new to Big Spring must pre-register between now and Aug. 17 at the high school office between the hours of 9 a.m. to noon and 1 p.m. to 3 p.m.

Mining called 'success'

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — A group claiming responsibility for the mining of the Red Sea has threatened to prove its strength "once more" and warned against intervention by the United States, Britain and France.

A caller claiming to represent Islamic Holy War, which earlier had said it was responsible for the mining, telephoned the French news agency Agence France Press bureau in Beirut, Lebanon, on Monday and said the mining operation "was crowned with success."

"To those who doubt our capability of mining the Red Sea," the organization "will prove once more in the very near future that it is the strongest and it will remain so," the caller, who did not identify himself, was quoted by the news agency as saying.

Lloyd's of London Shipping Intelligence Department says 16 vessels have struck mines in the Red Sea in the past month.

The caller warned Britain, France and the United States, which are helping Egypt search for mines in the Red Sea, against interfering in the Middle East. "It's time that the Islamic nation sees that the fleets of these countries are destroyed," the caller said. The Soviet Union, Iran and leftist Persian gulf newspapers on Monday accused the United States of exploiting the explosions to expand its military presence in the region.

The caller was quoted as saying neither Iran nor Libya had "anything to do" with the mining. Egypt's President Hosni Mubarak last week voiced suspicions against both Libya and Iran, but said Monday he thinks Libya laid mines in the sea lanes and expressed hope that Iran was not involved.

There was no official explanation for his changed stance toward

County OK's $50 pay hike

By KEELY COGHLAN
Staff Writer

County employees will receive a $50-a-month raise starting Oct. 1, Howard County commissioners decided late Monday afternoon.

The raise, according to Commissioner Paul Allen, who suggested the $50-a-month flat rate but did not make the motion, will pay for increases in employees' costs for insurance and social security taxes. Commissioner David Barr, who made the motion to grant the employee raises, had said repeatedly that he would like to give employees more, however, the current economic climate in oil and agriculture made the cost prohibitive. The raise commissioners granted to employees will cost the county more than $100,000 in costs and benefits, they said.

The only commissioner voting against the raise was Commissioner Bill Crooker, who said he withdrew his second of the motion because the increase would include commissioners. Crooker, the only local candidate who faces opposition this November on the ballot, was criticized by challengers in the Republican primary for a several thousand-dollar increase in commissioners' salaries.

Commissioners also approved a motion by Barr to reserve an amount equal to 3 percent of the payroll for use as some type of raise if the economy improves and the cost of living rises in January. The motion was approved unanimously.

In response to requests Monday by county officials to reconsider their earlier decision not to grant raises, Commissioner Louis Brown made at least six motions for increases that died for lack of a second. Brown asked commissioners three times to approve a flat-rate, $100-a-month raise, but the motion died all three times — with and without increases in longevity pay, currently $8 a month each year after the first three years of county employment.

Commissioners also failed to approve Brown's motions for a $99-, $98-, and $95-a-month salary increases.

Commissioners also failed to act on a request by District Clerk Peggy Crittenden to raise the levels of her deputy clerks. And they took no action on a request by County Judge Milton Kirby for an additional secretary, so his current secretary could work only on papers relating to commitments to the Big Spring State Hospital.

In other action, commissioners agreed to "enter into membership" of a Howard County-Big Spring Public Health District with the city of Big Spring. The motion was reworded after some commissioners said they did not know whether they could vote for a motion saying they would enter into a contract with the city.

A bill by the legislature required the county form its own health district. Previously, it had been part of a district including Ector and Midland Counties.

Commissioners decided not to increase 1985 funding of the Heritage Museum to $10,000 from its current $7,500 level, although the Big Spring City Council had approved the increase in matching funds. Commissioners agreed to retain funding at its present level and to continue being responsible for maintenance and repairs to the

Hospital policies draw complaints

By LUIS RIOS
Staff Writer

COLORADO CITY — A standing-room crowd of 250 citizens gathered here Monday night to voice their discontent of hospital policy during a meeting of the Mitchell County Hospital Board.

Several county residents including a former mayor and a hospital philanthropist voiced their displeasure of the board, Root Memorial Hospital administrator Ray Dillard, and one of the hospital physicians.

Much of the controversy surrounds the hospital's recent Medicare decertification. The hospital was decertified after a Texas Department of Health survey in April uncovered two discrepancies in meeting standards for federal funds. Approximately 50 percent of the hospital's patients receive Medicare funds.

The deficiencies outlined in the survey have been corrected, said Dillard. The hospital has also applied for recertification, he said. State officials will survey the hospital for recertification Sept. 4.

Colorado City Mayor Elmer Martin, who spoke on behalf of a citizen's group, said, "We all share the concern to have our hospital recertified."

"We all share as common concern that all parties involved be treated fairly and with respect. We encourage the involved look very seriously at efforts to bring about a reasonable compromise.

"Physicians that are unmovable will not lead to solve our problems."

Hospital board president Bobby Lemons introduced Marion Bassham as a speaker.

Mrs. Bassham, who is also a

Complaint filed against Rutledges

Permanent peace bond sought

By KEELY COGHLAN
Staff Writer

Former O.I.L. president Charles "Chris" Christopher has filed a complaint against Tom and Russ Rutledge, the corporate president and vice president of Fiberflex Products Inc., and asked that they be placed under a permanent peace bond.

The complaint, filed in Justice of the Peace Lewis Heflin's office Monday, stems from a Sunday night incident at the Big Spring County Club in which witnesses say the Rutledges threatened Christopher.

Heflin today said he had issued temporary peace bonds for $2,500 each against the Rutledges based on statements by Christopher and three other persons who were not involved in the incident.

Heflin said he set a hearing at 10 a.m. Aug. 27 to determine whether the Rutledges should be placed on the peace bonds permanently.

The Sunday night incident apparently was an outbreak of the long-simmering fight for control of Fiberflex, a multi-million dollar oilfield-related industry that its proponents say could revolutionize the oilfield business. Last week, Christopher announced he controls 53 percent of Fiberflex stock, and filed a civil suit against the Rutledges on issues regarding ownership of voting rights to stock Christopher has purchased from shareholders.

According to records at the Howard County sheriff's office, the office was called by Bill Chrane at 7:05 p.m. Sunday about a disturbance at the country club. Sheriff A.N. Standard today confirmed the incident involved the Rutledges and Christopher, and that threats were made.

According to Standard, Deputy Jimmy Wallace answered the call, but the Rutledges were gone on his arrival. Wallace informed Christopher of possible action he could take, including placing a peace bond on the Rutledges, Standard said.

According to a person present at the Sunday night incident at the country club, a tray and a steak were thrown during the incident.

Storms, hail rake state

By The Associated Press
Hail raked parts of North Texas today, accompanied by heavy rains, while a tornado damaged several buildings in the far southern portion of the state.

An unstable air mass combined with a weak upper-level disturbance to produce the widely scattered showers and thunderstorms late Monday. The National Weather Service said a tornado touched down in McAllen at 6:50 p.m. Monday, but no injuries were reported.

A McAllen policeman reported the first sighting of the twister, which destroyed one building, tore the roof off a structure and partially damaged a second roof. Police reported a car was lifted off the ground by the twister.

The weather service said up to 2 inches of hail accompanied the storm, breaking numerous car windshields. Small hail was reported in the Mission and McAllen vicinities.

A nearly stationary thunderstorm in Fannin County brought hail and heavy rain for several hours overnight. More than an inch of rain fell at Alice, the weather service said.

The weak surface trough meandered from Lufkin to Wichita Falls and southward to Temple and Del Rio. Temperatures west of the trough hovered in the 60s under fair skies.

Weak pressure differences produced only light and variable winds.

Widely scattered afternoon thunderstorms were developing in the northern High Plains, with scattered thunderstorms from East Texas southward to the middle coast.

Heavy rains were possible in Southeast Texas. Highs should be in the 80s and 90s, with near 100 degrees expected in parts of South and Southwest Texas.

Thunderstorms raged from the Appalachians to the Eastern Seaboard on Monday, with some streets wallowing in neck-high floodwaters, while strong thunderstorms also plagued the Gulf Coast states and New Mexico.

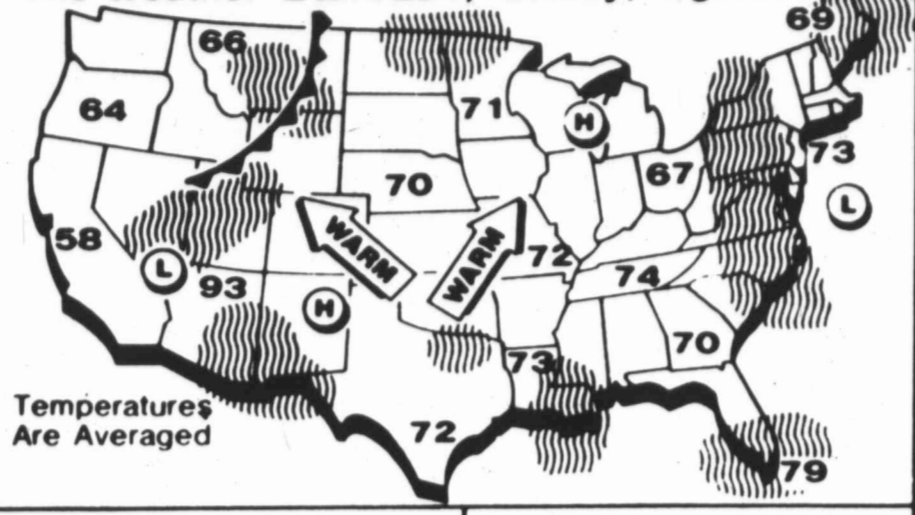

Fair weather stretched across the Midwest to the Pacific Coast, the National Weather Service said.

Three inches of rain closed several roadways in southern sections of Cleveland, and officials said water was three feet deep at one intersection in that city's Brookpark area. A police spokesman said water stood five feet deep in some places.

In the southwestern corner of Pennsylvania, thunderstorms poured 3 1/2 inches of rain at Wittenburg, where a small-streams flood warning was in effect.

WEST TEXAS — Widely scattered thunderstorms in southwest regions on Thursday and again in the mountains on Friday. Lows in the mid 40s to low 70s. Highs in the 90s to near 100 along the Rio Grande.

Sheriff's Log

Residents report burglaries

Two people reported burglaries to the Howard County sheriff's office Monday.

Howard County Commissioner Paul Allen of Coahoma and his wife told deputies that someone broke into their house between 7:45 a.m. and 8:30 p.m. Monday.

Taken, according to the sheriff's report, was a sterling silver tray valued at $400 and two 35-mm cameras, valued at $189. A glass window on the east side of the house was broken, according to the report.

Michael Fernandez of Jeffery Road told deputies someone entered their house from the rear between 6:45 a.m. and 5:30 p.m. Monday. The inside screen of the back door showed signs of tampering, according to the sheriff's office report.

Fernandez told deputies that someone had taken a cassette recorder with speakers, a Winchester 30-30 rifle. All three items were recovered in the house, according to deputies.

Deputy Robert Puente recovered a 1979 Chevrolet van reported stolen to the police department Sunday night.

Jeffery Hart, 24, of 1603 E. 13th was released Monday from Howard County jail where he had been held on charges of revocation of probation for burglary. He was released on the authority of the 118th District Chief Probation Officer.

Deputies Monday arrested Paul Gomez, 34, of Ackerly on a county court judgment for theft. Gomez, fined $100 and $86 court costs, will lay out the total cost, according to sheriff's office records.

Deputies Monday arrested Maria Guadalupe Baeza, 23, of 1302 W. Second on a Bell County warrant for theft by check. She was released after paying $130 to Bell County authorities through the sheriff's office.

Deputies Monday night arrested an illegal alien found jumping in front of cars on the north service road of Interstate Highway 20 in Sand Springs, and transferred him to the border patrol.

Two Fort Worth women were transferred Monday to the sheriff's office from the police department on suspicion of forgery by passing. Retha May Cook, 48, and Marilyn Elkins, 43, remain in county jail in lieu of $5,000 bond each set by Municipal Judge Melvin Daratt.

Salvador Trevino Jr., 19, of 204 N.E. Eighth was transferred Monday to the sheriff's office on suspicion of burglary. He was released on $15,000 bond set by Justice of the Peace Lewis Heflin.

Police Beat

Two injured in 2-car collision

Two area people were treated and released at local hospitals following a late Monday morning two-vehicle crash near the intersection of 10th and Scurry.

Nicholas Hise, 4, of Sterling City Route was taken to Malone-Hogan Hospital by private vehicle following the accident that happened at 11:31 a.m. Monday, police reports said.

Another person, Viola Motley, 80, of Knott was taken to Hall-Bennett Hospital by Shaffer Ambulance after the accident.

Witnesses at the scene told police the two vehicles, a 1979 Chevrolet Suburban driven by Sally Hise of Sterling City Route and a 1983 Ford LTD driven by Mrs. Motley, collided at the intersection of 10th and Scurry after Mrs. Hise ran a stop sign, police reports said.

In other police reports: Hazel Morris of 3707 Caroline told police at 5:30 p.m. Monday that at about 12:30 p.m. Monday someone she knows threw eggs at her 1982 Buick, causing damage estimated at $700, police reports said.

Isidoro Trejo Galan Jr., 32, of 808 Nolan was arrested at 11:45 p.m. Monday near the intersection of 10th and Nolan on suspicion of driving while intoxicated, police reports said.

Museum building, owned by the county. Maintenance and repairs, they said, would offset the requested increase.

Brown, the main opponent of the increase in funding, said the Museum did not preserve everyone's heritage, but just specific portions of the population. "Hell, Bill (Crooker), we're a portion of the community. We need representation of all the community, not just the railroads and the cowboys," Brown said.

Commissioners also agreed to purchase a plaque honoring Big Spring native Rose Magers, a member of the U.S. silver medalist Olympic women's volleyball team, and place it in the courthouse. And they talked of getting together with the city to rename a city street after Ms. Magers.

"The board has been lax, and they admit it," she said. She also described Dillard's appointment as hospital administrator as "a misfavor" to the man. Dillard was not present due to an illness. She said the hospital needed a "more forceful man."

A petition bearing more than 400 names calling for Dillard's resignation was presented to the board during the July meeting. No action was taken on the issue Monday night.

Mubarak brushed aside claims of responsibility by Islamic Holy War, known as Islamic Jihad. Some Western intelligence sources have linked the group with Iran, but others have said more than one extremist group may be using the name as a cover.

The organization also has claimed responsibility for the bombing of the U.S. Embassy in Beirut in April 1983, the destruction of U.S. Marine and French paratrooper headquarters in Beirut last October, and embassy bombings in Kuwait last December.

Mubarak conferred today with Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa. Specter, speaking to reporters later, ridiculed suggestions that the United States was behind the explosions, saying "we have good evidence on who is responsible for terrorism in the area."

The U.S. Defense Department has labeled the charges against the United States "preposterous."

Following a meeting with Mubarak today, Adel Ezzat, Suez Canal Authority chairman, told reporters: "The world is beginning to realize the true size of this matter which is damaging to the world's economy — and to Libya and Iran as well — since world trade passes through the Suez Canal."

He said the canal itself was free of explosives and navigation through the 100-mile-long waterway had been only "very slightly affected" by the explosions in the Red Sea.

He said 62 ships were transiting the canal today. This was higher than the average of 57 ships daily. There were days earlier this month when traffic dropped below 50 vessels.

Firemen battle Airpark blaze

Big Spring firefighters were called to the southern portion of Big Spring Airpark yesterday afternoon to douse a blaze that caused an estimated $40,000 loss to a wood and cinderblock house.

"I was squirting water on it and all of a sudden the whole damn ceiling fell in," said house occupant Bob McClure, referring to how he fought the fire before firemen arrived. "It was a hell of a blaze, then," he said.

Three pumping units of the department were called to the scene near the old Webb Air Force Base golf course at about 2:30 p.m. yesterday to find the house completely engulfed in flames, department reports said.

The popping sound of ammunition contained in the house and ignited by the blaze could be heard as firemen poured water on the flames.

Cause of the fire in the house owned by the City of Big Spring remains under investigation. Fire Investigator Burr Lea Settles said this morning.

McClure said he arrived at the scene at about 2 p.m. yesterday to find the fire confined to the house's living room area and three passers-by fighting the blaze.

Although one of the passers-by called in the fire at about 1:50 p.m., no firefighting units arrived at the scene until about 40 minutes later, Fire Chief Jim Ryals said this morning. Ryals said the man, who was from Midland, had mistakenly called that city's fire department using a 911 emergency number. He had assumed that Big Spring also had such an emergency number, Ryals said.

According to fire department reports, a Texas Electric service truck was also called to the scene to remove a "hot" power line that was downed as a result of the blaze.

After dousing remaining "hot spots" at the location, Big Spring Firemen returned to quarters at about 5:10 p.m. yesterday, reports said.

No injuries were reported as a result of the fire.

Mitchell County ok's budget

COLORADO CITY — Mitchell County Commissioners approved a $2,129,356 1985 budget Monday, an increase of $169,121 over last year's budget.

Included in the budget is a five percent increase in pay for county employees. The commissioners also approved a 29.87 cent tax rate per $100 valuation in personal or real property for 1985.

The budget included the elimination of a secretary for Justice of the Peace Charles Ray Watlington, Precinct 3, due to a lack of workload.

Slip-up investigated

LOS ANGELES — While Democratic presidential hopeful Walter Mondale criticized President Reagan for joking that the Soviet Union was about to be bombed, White House officials sought to learn the cause of the slip-up that allowed the joke to be recorded by news networks.

CBS and NBC aired their recordings of the President's remarks on Monday evening's news programs, two days after Reagan told the joke while testing a microphone prior to his regular Saturday radio address from his ranch near Santa Barbara.

As recorded by CBS, the President said, "My fellow Americans, I'm pleased to tell you today that I've signed legislation that will outlaw Russia forever. We begin bombing in five minutes."

A White House official, who spoke only on condition that he not be identified, confirmed the President had made the statement, but said it was merely a joke by a man who likes to tell jokes.

"It's unfortunate that it got out," he said. He added that the White House is investigating to see how the slip-up occurred and to make sure it didn't happen again.

But Mondale, speaking in Minneapolis, said of the joke, "I don't think it is very funny."

Top secret wedding

LOS ANGELES — Most details about this afternoon's wedding of President Reagan's youngest daughter, Patti Davis, were given the state-secret treatment, but a minister said a traditional service was planned.

"It will be very worshipful, meditative, and it will be a traditional Christian wedding service," said the Rev. Donn Moomaw, pastor at the Bel-Air Presbyterian Church, where the Reagan family worshipped when Miss Davis, 31, was a child.

The wedding of Miss Davis and yoga instructor Paul Grilley, 25, was set for 5 p.m. PDT in the wooded gardens of the secluded Bel-Air Hotel. Security there has been so tight that photographers trying to take pictures of the hotel lawn have been asked to leave in recent days. Only regular hotel patrons are being allowed to stay there.

Hotel officials have declined to discuss plans for the ceremony and reception dinner, referring all queries to Nancy Reagan's press secretary, Sheila Tate.

Ms. Tate said 130 guests will attend, including members of Grilley's family from his home state of Montana; the Reagan family housekeeper, Anne Allman; former actress Colleen Moore, who is Miss Davis' godmother; Miss Davis' childhood dentist Dr. Paul Shick; and producer A.C. Lyles, who was the first visitor to see Miss Davis after she was born.

De Lorean trial resumes

LOS ANGELES — Jurors in the John De Lorean cocaine-trafficking trial were not told about a bomb threat that caused the evacuation of the U.S. Courthouse as they deliberated for a fourth day, officials said.

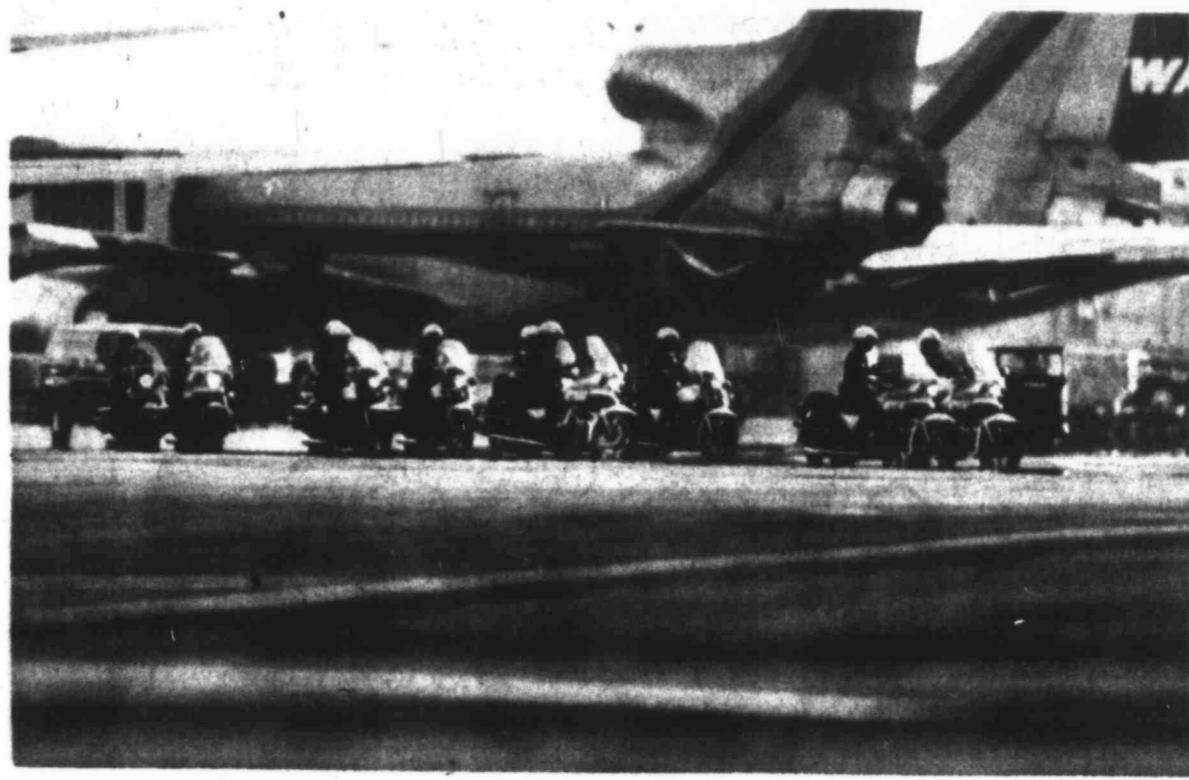

The jurors were to return today to decide whether the former General Motors executive is guilty of conspiring to distribute cocaine worth $24 million.

If convicted, De Lorean could face a maximum sentence of 67 years in prison and $180,000 in fines.

The six men and six women on the jury were taken out to an early lunch Monday while some 1,500 people were being hustled out of the courthouse after the bomb threat.

No bomb was discovered and jurors eventually returned to the courthouse with everyone else. By the time they recessed for the day, they had deliberated a total of nearly 17 hours over four days.

U.S. District Judge Robert Takasugi, presiding over the trial, ordered evacuation of the 17-story building after he was informed of the phoned bomb threat from a man who demanded legalization of marijuana and cocaine.

MOVING IN — Members of the Los Angeles Police Department motorcycle unit move on to the taxiway after an explosive device was discovered and later detonated on a bus carrying Turkish athletes to the airport.

Cop called 'real hero', lauded for disarming bomb in airport

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A "real hero" policeman who spotted a ticking bomb on a bus carrying Turkish Olympic athletes' luggage disarmed it by pulling out the right wire, the police chief said, but authorities were left wondering how the bomb got there.

Officer James Pearson discovered the bomb as he checked the bus while it was unloading at Los Angeles International Airport about 5:45 p.m. Monday, minutes after Turkish athletes and officials had left another bus at the airport.

The 52 members of the Turkish delegation were among thousands of athletes and officials who poured out of the city a day after the Summer Olympics ended.

No one was injured, and "no one has taken any credit" for planting the bomb, said police Chief Daryl Gates, although immediate speculation centered on Armenian terrorists who had threatened to attack the Turkish athletes. Such an attack was a chief worry of Olympic security planners.

Publicity about the incident touched off a spate of telephoned bomb threats, Gates said, forcing the evacuation of about 6,000 people from three terminals of the one of the nation's busiest airports.

And at Dulles Airport outside Washington, D.C., authorities herded U.S. medalists and their guests off buses as a "purely precautionary" measure, said airport spokesman David Hess. The buses were searched, delaying athletes who were in the capital for a parade today, about 1 1/2 hours.

Los Angeles police said it was not known how the bomb was planted in the wheel well, evading a security network that law enforcement officials said was particularly aimed at protecting high-risk nations like Turkey.

The Turkish delegation had traveled to the airport on two other buses to board an Air France jet and were already inside the terminal when the bomb was found. But there were "several people," possibly Olympic security guards, aboard the baggage bus when Pearson found the bomb, Gates said, and it could have caused "severe damage" had it gone off.

Gates said Pearson, 40, and a nine-year police veteran, "spotted something that shouldn't have been there."

The bomb was ticking and as Pearson grabbed it, an alarm went off, "indicating the bomb was ready to blow," Gates said.

"He reached up and pulled out what he thought was the right wire" and then "raced about 60 yards" to carry the bomb away from the bus, Gates said. The bomb squad was then called, and the bomb was neutralized, Gates said at the airport.

He called Pearson "a real hero."

Police Officer John Weick, who saw the bomb, said it was dark and metallic-looking and was about 8 inches long and 5 inches in diameter.

Gates denied that security was lax after the Olympics ended Sunday and said: "I wouldn't even want to begin to speculate" how the bomb got on the bus. He acknowledged that attacks on the Turks had been a chief worry for police.

Gates said he thought the three buses carrying the Turks and their bags had been inspected before they were loaded at the Olympic Village at the University of California at Los Angeles for the 10-mile trip to the airport.

The bomb was by far the most serious breach of security at the Olympics. During the Games, police helicopters hovered over or near the competition sites and SWAT teams were visible on high buildings around some of sites.

One of the biggest worries was Armenians terrorists, who want Turkey to acknowledge slaughtering 1.5 million Armenians during World War I. Turkey has refused to admit the deaths occurred.

On Aug. 5, Turkish boxer Cemal Oner was the target of threats by a group calling itself the Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia. Security was extremely heavy for his bout with Argentina's Pedro Ruben Decima, which Decima won.

Because more than a dozen threats were made, Turkish athletes weren't allowed to leave the Olympic Village, said Togy Bayatli, press attache for the Turkish Olympic Committee.

Armenian terrorists claimed responsibility for the 1982 killing of Turkish Consul General Kemal Arkan, gunned down on a West Los Angeles street. Two other Turkish diplomatic officials were killed in 1973 near Santa Barbara, about 100 miles to the northwest, and Armenian terrorists claimed credit.

Strike anniversary noted

GDANSK — Solidarity founder Lech Walesa walked silently to the monument to workers at Lenin Shipyard today and knelt in prayer as he placed flowers to mark the fourth anniversary of the strikes that spawned the outlawed union.

Walesa was surrounded by about 200 supporters and shipyard workers as he made his way to the monument, which was built in 1980 because of pressure from Solidarity to commemorate scores of workers who died nearby in a 1970 clash with security forces.

The Nobel Peace Prize winner told reporters he decided to mark the anniversary quietly because the government amnesty for political prisoners had created a new situation in Poland.

"The amnesty is a step" in the right direction by Communist authorities, Walesa said. "Let's not disturb the second step."

"People left prison and we have to let them join in."

Walesa placed flowers at the foot of the memorial last year, but riot police sealed off the area and prevented supporters from joining him. Police were in the streets near the shipyard today, but did not block access to the shipyard.

Attacks increase

TEL AVIV — Ambush teams and sappers, striking while Israel is paralyzed in political debate, are stepping up their attacks on Israeli soldiers in southern Lebanon.

Israel's occupation army was attacked at least 70 times last month, a one-quarter increase over the 55 incidents in June, Israeli military and news media reports shows. And in the first 13 days of August, there have been at least 25 attacks.

The escalation coincides with an Israeli election whose results have left this country with no clear Lebanon policy as it tries to sort out power blocs and decide who will be its next prime minister.

An Israeli military source suggested that Shiite Moslems, south Lebanon's largest population group and most powerful paramilitary force, were taking advantage of Israel's uncertain political situation to expand their guerrilla offensive against the Israelis.

"I think it is an attempt by some Shiite elements to show that they have to be reckoned with in whatever arrangements are made for the south," he said, speaking on condition he not be identified.

With no end in sight to the military occupation that began more than two years ago, the Israeli army is attacked two, three and sometimes four times a day — on remote mountain roads, on the well-traveled coastal highway and in the narrow streets of Shiite towns.

At least half the actions are ambushes, by automatic rifle fire and rocket-propelled grenades. Most of the others involve the detonation of remote-controlled roadside bombs. It is believed that few attackers are ever caught.

Violent mistake

BELFAST — The top British official for Northern Ireland said today his government's attempt to ban an American IRA sympathizer from the province was a "bad mistake" that led to violence at a weekend rally in Belfast.

"Sometimes your judgment is correct and borne out by events; sometimes it goes wrong," Northern Ireland Secretary James Prior told reporters in London.

Prior's comments came a day after a crowd officially estimated at 5,000, but judged by reporters to be twice that figure, marched in predominantly Catholic west Belfast to protest the killing of a Belfast man and the wounding of 20 people by police trying to arrest IRA supporter Martin Galvin on Sunday.

"I have to say in this case some mistakes have been made for which I take full responsibility," Prior said.

Olympics labeled a success at closing

LOS ANGELES (AP) — They said the Olympics would be too commercial, jam the freeways, create choking smog, become a terrorist target, be unimpressive without the Soviets and perhaps be too serious an undertaking for the city with a laid-back reputation.

But as the signs of the Olympics' 16-day stay were being torn down today, it was apparent that they had worked.

Athletes were checking in for flights home and America's medal winners, after President Reagan's congratulations, were launching a coast-to-coast victory tour that included a ticker tape parade Wednesday in New York City.

Except for a scare Monday, when police found and dismantled a pipe bomb aboard a bus carrying the Turkish team's luggage, the Olympic fortnight passed with little incident.

So when Juan Antonio Samaranch, president of the International Olympic Committee, declared the Games officially closed Sunday night, many of the nearly 100,000 people at Memorial Coliseum shouted "Oh No! No!"

The American crowd, basking in a record 83 U.S. gold medals and addicted to the thrills of the first Summer Games in this country in half a century, didn't want it to end.

"It's hard to put in words the feelings of the last two weeks," said Ellen Randall of Los Angeles. "My husband and I keep saying, 'What will we do' without the Games to watch?"

While the opening and closing ceremonies came right out of Hollywood, the human drama in between, seen by 5.7 million people in the stands and 2 billion more on television, couldn't have been conceived on any movie backlot.

A few outtakes: —A tearful Mary Decker, blaming South African Zola Budd for ruining her dream of a gold medal, concluded: "Maybe I'm just not meant to win an Olympic gold medal."

—And Ms. Budd, who was running for Great Britain, disclaimed responsibility for their collision. But, she added, Ms. Decker had long been her idol "and this hasn't changed anything."

—Carl Lewis, matching the four-gold 1936 performance of his boyhood idol Jesse Owens, dedicated his last race to Owens' widow, Ruth. "Jesse Owens is still a legend to me," Lewis said.

Mondale loses musical chairs

Even though the dust has settled over the Bert Lance fiasco, several questions abide about the manner in which Walter Mondale bungled the affair. Fresh doubts are raised about the judgment of one who aspires to be president of the United States.

Mondale, remember, decided several days before the San Francisco convention that he wanted Lance to become the next Democratic National Chairman. His intent was to mollify Southerners distressed by the selection of Rep. Geraldine Ferraro as his running mate.

But the prospect of a full-scale party rebellion forced Mondale to back off and decide instead to relegate Lance to the general campaign chairmanship.

Still, party regulars weren't satisfied. They balked at having to defend Lance during the coming campaign. After all, he had left the Carter administration in 1977 under a cloud of bank-fraud accusations. Labor leaders considered Lance a liability because of his lukewarm attitude toward their legislative agenda, and Jews were leery of his connections with Arab financiers. The clincher, however, came from Southern Politicos who were chagrined that the Georgian took credit for delivering several states to Mondale during the Democratic primaries.

Thus it was that Mondale waffled once again. Lance was simply frozen out of the campaign at its very inception. The man who was supposed to cement the solid South for the Mondale-Ferraro ticket wasn't even consulted, let alone invited, to accompany the candidates on their first foray through Dixie. So, by mutual consent, Lance quietly resigned and went home.

The real loser in this musical chairmanship is Walter Mondale, whose decisions were dictated by every passing political breeze.

Red Sea parting

The atom bomb has overshadowed global politics since 1945, freezing the superpowers into an uneasy peace based on deterrence. But small bombs detonated on the fringes of superpower boundaries are causing damage to this delicate balance, making it more likely that The Bomb will someday be used.

When threatened, it is human nature to reach for a weapon. But it is foolhardy, when threatened by a wild-eyed fanatic with a bomb, to reach for an A-bomb. We must match the response to the threat.

The Iranian hostage crisis and the car-bombing of the Marines in Lebanon are two examples of American vulnerability to terrorist attack. Now Islamic Jihad, a group which claimed responsibility for the massacre of U.S. Marines, says it is responsible for mining the Red Sea. Several ships have been damaged, and the Suez Canal is threatened.

Egypt requested U.S. aid to sweep the mines. The Reagan administration sent mine-sweeping helicopters and 200 U.S. military personnel to clean up the Red Sea. This is an appropriate response. The helicopters are equipped to detonate the mines or cut them free of their moorings and disarm them. We hope they accomplish their mission.

But involvement of U.S. personnel means risk. If we have learned anything from Beirut, it is that our servicemen can become a target. Protection of our men is vital to avert personal tragedy and national humiliation.

Lead poisoning claim disputed

Dear Editor:

In your editorial of August 12th, you indicate that leaded fuels fouling the air are the prime source of lead poisoning. This is not entirely true. In the centers of some large cities exhaust fumes containing lead tend to concentrate forming a smog which does contain lead. However, most of the cities in the United States have a natural ventilation which dissipates the exhaust fumes so that smog does not occur.

An important source of lead poisoning which has been overlooked by the EPA is the lead alloy solder used to seal food and beverage cans. Some cans have a plastic liner supposedly intended to prevent direct contact by the lead to the contents of the can. Many cans do not have even that. The lead in the can reacts chemically with the acidity or alkalinity of the food to form lead compounds which dissolve into the food. Ingestion of this lead is a much more direct source of poison than exhaust fumes.

Another source of lead is from our tap water. The copper lines used in plumbing are soldered together with lead alloy solder. In fact the word "plumbing" comes from the Latin word for lead, "plumbus." The lead in the soldered joints comes in direct contact with the water in the pipes. If the water is a bit alkaline, which often is the case, lead compounds can form and dissolve into the water. Lead can also react with the chlorine used in our water to form water soluble lead compounds.

Another source of lead poisoning is paint. In many homes, furniture and woodwork have been painted with a lead-based paint. As bit of paint chip or peel off they can be ingested by small children. Even bits that small are harmful.

Arms merchant has pipe dream

WASHINGTON — Basil Tsakos, a Greek arms dealer who entangled Sen. Mark O. Hatfield, R-Ore., and other Washington power brokers in a $15 billion trans-African oil pipeline scheme, was up to his collar in deals. For example, he tried to sell U.S.-made attack helicopters to the Iranian government from his Washington, D.C., office last February in apparent violation of U.S. law, according to an intercepted cable.

The sale of arms to Iran has been forbidden since that country was officially declared a terrorist-supporting nation. Eight people were arrested a year ago for trying to sell similar helicopters to Iran.

Besides trying to peddle arms to Iran, Tsakos reportedly dickered with Iraq over the purchase of Soviet-made weapons. Why was he dealing with both sides in the 4-year-old war between Iran and Iraq?

Aside from the historic greed of arms merchants, the shipments might help to prolong the Persian Gulf War. This would lend credibility to the bizarre plan for a trans-African pipeline, which would enable Saudi Arabian oil to reach the United States and its Western European allies without passing through the exploding Persian Gulf.

It's obvious that Tsakos didn't want his American friends to know that he was trying to fuel the Persian Gulf War to make his pipeline project more appealing. So he tried to keep his arms dealings with Iran and Iraq hidden from the Washington crowd.

My associate Corky Johnson has obtained an intercepted cable to Tsakos that indicates that United General Enterprises, the Greek arms dealer's Athens office, got an agreement with Iran for the purchase of 25 Cobra attack helicopters, each with eight rockets. The Iranians were willing to pay $8.45 million for each gun ship.

This was $50,000 less per chopper than Iran had paid for an earlier purchase of Cobras from Brazil, according to the intercepted cables. Brazilian officials have steadfastly denied selling any arms directly to Iran.

The documents do not show whether Tsakos ever completed the helicopter deal with Iran. But they make clear that he would have made a bundle on the transaction: roughly $400,000 on each helicopter, or a total of about $10 million. The payment would have been funneled to Tsakos through a European bank.

Iran was also looking for spare parts to keep its armada of U.S.-made weapons in working order. Ayatollah Khomeini's regime has been critically short of spare parts since relations with the United States ruptured during the hostage crisis.

The Iranian deal was only the latest in a long line of questionable munitions transactions negotiated by Tsakos. According to documents and other sources, the Greek arms merchant has also tried to sell Soviet-made tanks to Argentina from his office in downtown Washington.

According to knowledgeable sources, Tsakos' modus operandi almost invariably involved bribes to officials of the purchasing governments.

"There was always talk of bribes," one source said. "You can't make an arms deal without it."

Countries identified by the sources as places where Tsakos bought cooperation by greasing official palms include Morocco, Egypt, Saudi Arabia, Sudan and Tunisia. Usually, the sources said, Tsakos would offer a key official 10 percent of the purchase price once the deal was completed.

One of Tsakos' biggest reported arms sales was to Morocco, which bought 150 armored personnel carriers after a high official allegedly was bribed.

There were similar alleged payoffs in the sale of small arms to Saudi Arabia and the Sudan in the late 1970s. An aide to Sudanese President Gaafar Nimeiri was the reported recipient of Tsakos' payoff — but he didn't get the full payment he had been promised, the sources said.

But this hasn't hurt Tsakos' chances on the trans-African pipeline project: Sudan, one of the three central African countries through which the pipeline would run, recently signed a right-of-way agreement with Tsakos.

Mental illness is no obstacle

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I have had some problems with mental illness from time to time. Do you think it is really possible to have a firm faith in God even in the midst of mental problems? I worry about this very much, as I would like to know God cares for me. — Mrs. M.V.T.

DAER MRS. M.V.T.: God does care for you very much, and he is with you even in the midst of any problems you might have — physical or mental. God has promised, "Never will I leave you; never will I forsake you" (Hebrews 13:5). Or again the Bible urges, "Cast your cares on the Lord and he will sustain you; he will never let the righteous fall" (Psalm 55:22). You can depend on these promises of God, because God cannot lie.

The ultimate proof of God's love for you is that he allowed his only son to die on the cross for you, so you could be forgiven of your sins.

Olympicitis

Have you found yourself extremely energetic lately? I've noticed people playing basketball, volleyball and riding bikes all over town, and I wonder how many are victims of Olympicitis.

Olympicitis hits every four years and is associated with an over-dose of televised sport. It's contagious to watch well-executed moves in sports, followed by cheering crowds and medal ceremonies.

I'm a victim. The Olympians make it look so easy that they inspire the rest of us to try our hand at sports. For instance, after the bicycle races I ran out to the storage room, kicked away empty boxes and old garden hoses, and pulled out my old 3-speed bike.

I dragged it out onto the patio and discovered it to be in pretty good shape. I jumped on and pedaled to the end of the street, then turned back huffing and puffing and sat down in front of the television in search of more inspiration.

My husband and I decided we needed to have a world-class bike if we were going to be serious. We scanned the advertisements and found a good deal on a 10-speed racing bike. We hurried down to the store to purchase the $100 bike, but fortunately, they had to give us a raincheck.

Maybe we'll come to our senses before the bike come in.

My husband has a more serious case of Olympicitis. He's participated in international track competitions and can identify with the athletes in the Olympic track events. He knows that running track is not as effortless as the Olympians make it appear. He noted their times carefully and compared them to his own, plotting ways to become faster and cut those precious seconds off his workouts.

But armchair athletes like me are just as stricken by Olympicitis as anyone else. During the last two weeks I've played basketball, volleyball and gone swimming. Although my skills are lacking, Olympicitis inspires me to keep on trying.

A dark side to Olympicitis is withdrawal. It begins with the closing ceremonies. Then the realization that the Olympics are over hits you all at once. You lose your daily inspiration. There are no more cheering crowds, no more smiling athletes and no more medals ceremonies.

But there is hope because another Olympiad is always on its way. I'd better keep in shape for my next bout with Olympicitis.

Today

By The Associated Press

Today is Tuesday, Aug. 14, the 227th day of 1984. There are 139 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On Aug. 14, 1945, Japan announced it would surrender, ending World War II.

On this date: In 1900, international forces, including U.S. Marines, entered Peking to put down the Boxer Rebellion, which was aimed at riding China of foreigners.

In 1917, China declared war on Germany and Austria at the start of World War I.

In 1932, the Los Angeles Summer Olympics came to a close, with the United States placing first in total points scored.

In 1935, the Social Security Act became law.

In 1941, after meeting on board a ship off Newfoundland for four days, President Franklin D. Roosevelt and British Prime Minister Winston S. Churchill issued the Atlantic Charter, a statement of principles concerning war and peace.

In 1951, newspaper publisher William Randolph Hearst died. In 1973, the U.S. bombing of Cambodia came to a halt, marking the official end to 12 years of American combat in Indochina.

Ten years ago: The Cyprus peace talks broke down, creating the threat of new fighting between Greek Cypriot and Turkish troops on the island.

Arms race brews behind bars

TENNESSEE COLONY (AP) — Some officials and inmates of the Texas Department of Corrections' Coffield Unit blame a surge in prison violence on racial tensions, lack of guard staff and the ease of getting material for knives, but others attribute it to sexual frustration.

Last month, a guard was almost killed, two others were attacked and 11 inmates stabbed, prison officials say. A search of half the prison later turned up 489 hand-made weapons.

Warden Jack Garner says one problem with Coffield is its design, which resembles a crumpled wagon wheel. While other TDC units allow one guard to monitor an entire hallway, Coffield's design requires more guards and it takes months to learn the layout well.

Those problems can foster too much privacy, officials say, giving prisoners the opportunity to make weapons or battle among themselves.

The metal that's required by the prison's major industries can easily be converted into knives, Garner said. And even a shard of porcelain can be sharpened into a sharp edge.

As a result, Garner said, there's an arms race behind bars.

One inmate makes a knife and another sees it and decides, "I'll make me my own knife." We couldn't protect them," Garner told the Houston Post.

Another problem is deciding the prison's mission: Prison guard Major A.D. Caskey says the public must decide if Coffield and the other TDC prison units should be warehouses for criminals or places where inmates are rehabilitated.

Either way, it will take more money and staff, he said, but "society just wants to forget."

There has been some progress, Garner says, and the confiscation of knives and an additional 100 officers have helped.

"Things are more comfortable than they were three months ago," said Garner, who believes morale is better now among guards and inmates. The warden said the addition of more senior officers also has helped.

"If there are not enough people to talk to them (inmates) about their problems, they'll solve the problems themselves," Garner said.

Until recently, the public was not aware of the amount of violence behind prison bars, the warden said.

"We didn't report all the stuff," he said. "It looks like we are having a stabbing everyday somewhere — and we are — but it's nothing new."

For years, the Texas prisons used a building tender system in which trusted convicts were used to control other inmates. Officials halted that system after it was abused in some places, leaving a transition problem.

Garner noted that inmates "don't change overnight. When for so long they're told when to get up, to go eat, to go to work, they keep doing it a while before they realize: 'We don't have to do this.' And it's going to take a while before they figure out they don't have control — we have control."

A number of inmates gave their views in interviews with the Post.

Jose Nava, an 18-year-old in prison on a manslaughter conviction, said he stabbed another inmate to protect himself.

The stabbing victim tried to collect money for protection, Nava said.

"He just thought I was young and he'd take advantage," said Nava. Another inmate, William Leftwich, wants to be placed in protective custody, a special area of cells for inmates who likely would be victimized by stronger inmates.

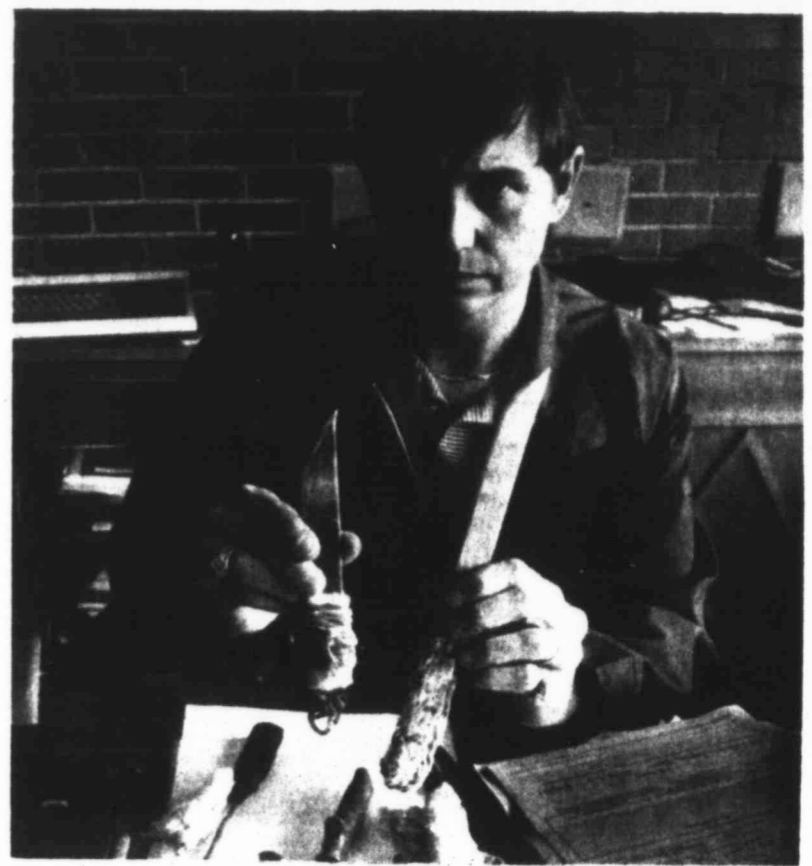

Leftwich, who is small and doesn't have a weapon, said Coffield needs "enough security bossmen who know what's going on and can handle the situation. The younger ones are less likely to really do anything. Some of the older ones are afraid they'll get stabbed."

Ricky Meals, another inmate, was asked what could be done to reduce the violence and weapons in the prison unit.

"Nothing," he replied. "They can do a shakedown (weapons search) every day and come back and find just as many (weapons)."

Harassment by guards over little things — such as using a comb in the hallway — have made chances of an uprising "very high," said Meals.

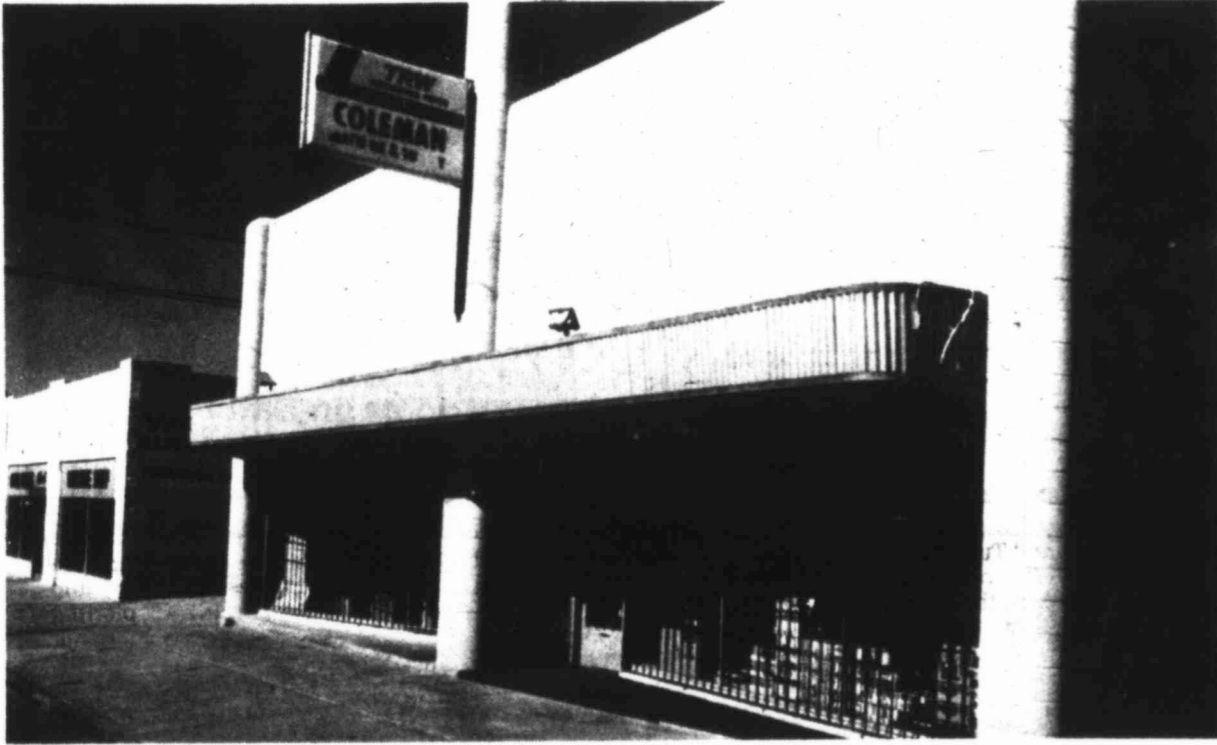

Barry Frank, who hopes to finish his sentence for theft in seven months, said racial differences are a factor in the violence.

HOMEMADE — Warden Jack Garner of Texas' largest prison, the Coffield unit, displays some weapons turned up in a search, where 11 inmates have been stabbed since the search began.

Scholarships to aid mature women

Women 25 or older seeking assistance for studies in the health-care field now have a new source of financial aid.

The establishment of a scholarship program for women in the health professions has been announced by the Business and Professional Women's Foundation.

The program will be funded with an annual grant of $50,000 in each of the three years by the New York Life Foundation. To qualify, applicants must be 25 years of age and older and be enrolled in vocational or academic programs of study which will enable them to improve their chances for advancement, train for a new career, or enter/reenter the job market in the health care field.

The scholarships will range from $250 to $1,000 and can be used for tuition, books and education-related expenses such as child care.

To obtain additional information and an application write to: New York Life Foundation Scholarship; Business and Professional Women's Foundation; 2012 Massachusetts Avenue, N. W.; Washington, D. C., 20036.

Dr. Donohue

Breathing disorders may vary

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I am a 63-year-old male with emphysema. It seems as though very little is known about this problem. My sister had the very same symptoms I had. She's had this for the last 10 years, and all they tell her is she has bronchitis. We've had the same tests.

How can a doctor tell the two apart when the symptoms are so alike? Are they just making an educated guess? Maybe you have something to ease our minds. At least we'll have the facts. — N.B.

educated guess about is that if a person has one of these ailments he usually has the other. They very often occur together.

Emphysema means that the air sacs, those ends of the lung "tree," have been destroyed. Because it is through these sacs that oxygen passes from the atmosphere into the blood, breathlessness is a prime symptom. It's like being in a room devoid of oxygen or severely deficient in that vital substance.

Bronchitis means that the breathing tubes, the bronchi (or air passages) have been irritated. Coughing because of that irritation is the chief symptom. Smoker's cough is nothing less than bronchitis.

Beyond these differences, other parts of the examination help differentiate the two problems. A person with emphysema has a barrel chest. It sounds like a drum when you tap on it.

A bronchitis patient, on the other hand, has a normal-sized chest, but when you listen to him with a stethoscope you hear all sorts of harsh sounds. That is because of the excess mucus inside being stirred up by the air passing through. There are other, more sophisticated tests, but these I've mentioned are often sufficient to make better than an educated guess.

While the same person may have both conditions, one may be more severe than the other. In that case, the doctor might choose the most severe condition to call the major one. This might be part of your confusion. You can find out easily. Ask your doctor. And have your sister ask hers.

Dear Abby

Spouses don't see eye to eye

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I, who have been married a little less than two years, recently had a frank discussion about our sex lives. He told me he loves me, is always aroused around me and wants sex at least three times a week. I told him I love him, too, but I am not constantly aroused in his presence and once a week is enough for me. I lied. (The truth is twice a month would be enough for me.) He has told me that he doesn't want me to fake how much I am enjoying it. He would be horrified if he knew how much faking I have done.

This is the first major conflict to come up in our marriage, and I don't know what to do. I think a good compromise would be once a week, but sometimes I cringe when he touches me because I'm usually not interested.

Help! Thanks for being an impartial party.

MISMATCHED IN NEW MEXICO

DEAR MISMATCHED: It's apparent that sex is far more important to your husband than it is to you. That is not to say that are "wrong" — or he is. You put it well when you sign yourself "mismatched."

In order for a marriage to endure, it must be based on honesty (no faking). A marriage counselor could direct you to a competent sex therapist. Ideally, you and your husband should see a counselor together. But if he refuses, go alone.

DEAR ABBY: This is serious. We are senior citizens who visited a Catholic church in a nearby town. A nice young man and an older man took up the collection. We sat in the last row by the stairs. The young man finished collecting downstairs and started to go up into the choir to collect. As he was going up the winding stairs, he put his hand in the collection basket and took a handful of money, which he transferred to his own pocket!

My husband saw him take the money, poked me to look, and we both saw him pocket the money. We could not believe what our eyes had seen.

We wonder how much he took, and how long this has been going on. What should we do?
EYEWITNESSES

DEAR WITNESSES: Tell the priest what you saw. And be prepared to confront the alleged thief should it be necessary.

Parents can help child develop good self-concept

Self-concept is the way we think about ourselves and the feelings we have about ourselves. These thoughts and feelings can be positive or they can be negative. The person who has positive thoughts and feelings is said to have a healthy self-concept.

As adults, we can control and influence our feelings about ourselves. We can accept or reject others' opinions. We can monitor the events in our lives that cause us to feel one way or the other about ourselves.

A young child's self-concept, though, is determined mostly by the "messages" he receives from others, particularly his mother and father, according to a monthly child development newsletter Growing Child. These messages can be deliberate or unconscious, verbal or non-verbal.

Sometimes the message the child receives is not what the parents really intend. For example, a parent may insist on doing everything for the child, even the most simple things the child could do for himself. The parent thinks he or she is sending the message: "I'm doing all these things for you because I love you."

But really, the unconscious, non-verbal message the child may be getting is "Always rely on Mom and Dad to do everything for you because you're dumb and helpless."

To understand a child's self-concept you have to try to see the world from his perspective. Even very young children are very occupied with developing competence, that is, learning to do things themselves. It is this continued striving for competence that pushes children to try new challenges and lead them from one stage of development to the next.

The parent can watch for the David Larsons announce birth of daughter Ashley things a child can do for himself and encourage him to do them, even if he cannot do them perfectly. The more he learns to do for himself, the more positive his self-concept will be.

One of the most important factors in the development of self-concept is the parent's attitudes towards the child's successes and failures. If the most important people in his life view him as "dumb" or "helpless," it will be almost impossible for him to develop positive feelings of self-worth. Mockery and sarcasm are like the hot sun that causes a flower to wither. But praise is like the nurturing food that helps the self-concept develop and blossom, the newsletter said.

A Big Spring WINNER!

Rev. Tim and Bev Winn Foster Parents

This young couple has taken neglected and abused children into their home for 10 years — a total of 31 in all. They took all ages, but most were teenagers "the children nobody wanted to take." Bev admits it's emotional but rewarding work. "You always want the children back. Usually you can give them up because you feel they're going on to something better. Our own children (Rusty, 8 and Brian, 6) enjoyed having Big Brothers." Tim was one of those who worked to establish the Rainbow Project and served as president the first year. The Winn's have lived at Knott for 4½ years since Tim became pastor of the First Baptist Church there. This is a bi-vocational church where Tim spends half his time with the church and the other half at another profession, in Tim's case a building contractor. They feel "the Lord has purposely placed us in a small church. Working on the outside I am able to be with people at their own level. In a farm area, the community likes to see their minister work." Bev does church bulletins, writes letters and "keeps the preacher going." The Winn's have worked with the Chemical People program in Knott. Bev is also trained as an emergency medical technician in the Knott area. Tim is now working on his master's degree in counseling from UTPB.

Organizers of LA Games give Olympics new look

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Sound the trumpets. Raise the flag. Play the anthem. It is time to award the final gold medal of the 1984 Olympic Games and it goes to Peter Ueberroth, president of the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee.

The man pulled off a full-blown miracle, easily an administrative match of Carl Lewis' athletic feats. He took an orphaned Olympics, an overblown extravaganza that nobody — not even Los Angeles — wanted, and made it a smash hit. He maneuvered it around a Soviet boycott that could have put a large dent in his show, and produced the most widely attended, best-run Games of recent memory.

Mexico City's legacy from the 1968 Olympics was the medal-stand demonstration of two American runners — a testament of those troubled times. Munich in 1972 will be recalled for the terrorist attack on the Israeli team and the callous decision to continue the Games in the wake of the horror, as if nothing had happened. Montreal will still be paying the enormous bill for its 1976 Olympics well into the next decade. Moscow's Games were boycotted by 62 countries, led by the United States.

Clearly, the Olympic spirit was taking a pretty good beating and it is completely understandable that the world's cities weren't exactly knocking down the International Olympic Committee's doors, begging for a chance to play host in 1984.

When Los Angeles surfaced as a possibility, the idea was put to a vote and the city's citizens said, "Sure, go ahead. Just don't try using any of our tax money for it." That was the birth of the world's first private sector Games, and Ueberroth was the man who pulled it all together against enormous odds.

He needed help and he got it from a cross-section of American industry, which paid hefty rights fees to be designated everything from the official snack food of the Olympics (M&M's and Snickers) to the official rental car (Budget), the official airlines (United) and the official gasoline (Arco). The building budget was kept small with existing facilities used as venues. USC and UCLA dorms provided the athletes villages, a capital project that helped break the bank for the Montreal Games. The only new construction was a $3 million swimming pool paid for by McDonald's Restaurant Corporation and the $4 million cycling velodrome, underwritten by the Southland Corporation.

ABC pitched in with a tidy $225 million to broadcast the Games, and the Organizing Committee, in a burst of goodwill, even tossed in the rights to press conferences as part of the package.

Fifty thousand citizens volunteered to work on the Games. Their payoff was two gumdrop colored pastel uniforms, a daily box lunch and access to the venues.

School buses were commandeered to provide transportation. The weather cooperated with perfect conditions from Day One. The smog seemed to go on vacation for the duration and many Californians may have decided to do the same thing because the anticipated traffic jams never really developed.

Watson hopes to slam PGA

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Tom Watson wants this one, the title in the PGA national championship, more than any other.

"That's my goal. Until I win it, it will continue to be my goal," Watson said.

"I want the Slam." And Watson, the outstanding player in the game for the past decade, needs only the title in the 66th PGA, which begins Thursday, to become the fifth man to score a career sweep of golf's Big Four titles: the Masters, U.S. and British Opens, and the PGA.

He won the Masters in 1977 and 1981, the U.S. Open with that historic chip shot at Pebble Beach in 1982 and was denied a sixth British Open crown last month at St. Andrews, Scotland, by Seve Ballesteros.

Only Gene Sarazen, Ben Hogan, Gary Player and Jack Nicklaus have won them all, with Nicklaus the last to complete the sweep in 1966.

"That's pretty good company," observed Watson, who comes into this one as the probable favorite. He's the only three-time winner on the American tour this season (Tournament of Champions, Match Play Championship, Western Open), was a runner-up in both the Masters and British Open and holds his customary position as the game's leading money-winner with $426,959.

Although he has not competed since the British Open, his game is nearing a peak, his confidence is up and his interest is aroused. Not only does he have the chance to join the four men who hold membership in golf's most elite and exclusive club, a Watson victory almost certainly would provide him with a record sixth PGA Player of the Year title.

With the season heading toward a close, he now leads the complicated point list from which the Player of the Year is chosen. A victory here would all but clinch it.

He and the other 149 players in the international field chasing $700,000 in total prize money will be facing a golf course being played in professional competition for the first time. Shoal Creek is a Nicklaus-designed layout that stretches 7,145 yards over rolling hills and through dense forests 14 miles south of Birmingham. It opened in 1977.

Watson declined to make an early visit to the site and saw it Monday for the first time. He is scheduled for three practice rounds.

"If I come in the week before, I get burned out before the tournament starts," he said.

Portions of the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday will be televised nationally by ABC.

POTENTIAL FOR ANOTHER RUMBLE — Boston red Sox designated hitter Mike Easler (right) yells at Kansas City Royals pitcher Bud Black after Easler was hit by a pitch during the third inning Monday night. Both players were restrained as both dugouts were cleared during the argument.

Battle in Atlanta gives black eye to baseball

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer
The Atlanta Braves and San Diego Padres were playing a game of baseball, and a hockey game broke out.

It was as tasteless a display of prepubescent petulance as ever has been witnessed on a ball field. It made the thugs of the National Hockey League look like renascence men.

It was bad enough when two managers, two coaches and nine players were ejected for their parts in a beanball war and series of bench-clearing fights, but then the fans at Atlanta also became involved, resulting in five civilian arrests.

Invectives were hurled, bats were wielded, beer mugs and beer were thrown, arms and fists were swung, bodies hurtled like missiles from scattered corners of the stands — and it never seemed to stop.

It started with the first pitch of Sunday's game when Atlanta pitcher Pascual Perez hit Alan Wiggins in the back. A mistake, he said. The Padres didn't believe him.

Three San Diego pitchers then took four tries at Perez until Craig Lefferts finally hit him in the eighth inning, spurring the first of two riots. And, when Atlanta's Donnie Moore hit Graig Nettles on his hindmost portion in the ninth inning, the benches cleared again in uncontrollable fury.

Even Bob Horner, who is on the Braves' disabled list with a broken right wrist, was on the field in the ninth inning, wearing his cast and an Atlanta uniform after starting the day in the press box wearing street clothes.

John McSherry, chief of the besieged umpiring crew, could not have assessed the damage more succinctly when he said: "It really set back the game." All the way to the Dark Ages.

Analysis

After it was over — with Atlanta winning 5-3, by the way — the name-calling began. It wasn't much prettier than the scene on the field.

Braves Manager Joe Torre called Padres Manager Dick Williams an idiot "with a capital 'I'" and likened the San Diego skipper to Hitler. Williams accused Torre of orchestrating a plot of intimidation, "but we can't be intimidated. We won't be intimidated." It sounded like grade school stuff.

Perez said the pitch that hit Wiggins slipped out of his hand. "It would be stupid to hit the first batter," he said.

It was only the first of a succession of stupid acts that day, and Braves owner Ted Turner had his SuperStation cameras trained on the whole mess.

We saw San Diego's Champ Summers, who already had been ejected, charge onto the field like a madman in the ninth inning, only to wind up right in Horner's arms as beer showered from the stands.

We witnessed a fan trying to grab a bat out of the hands of one of the Atlanta players, presumably to use as a weapon, and another spectator hitting San Diego's Kurt Bevacqua in the head with a beer mug.

At least Bevacqua, a seldom-used reserve, was able to maintain a sense of humor. "That's the longest I've been on the field in a long time," he said.

And was there ever a more ridiculous sight than Lefferts, who had been ejected, standing in the San Diego dugout, bare-chested and bug-eyed, hollering and gesturing as players from both teams rolled in the dirt?

Summers and Lefferts could be in big trouble with the National League for returning to the field after being ejected, and even if they're fined or suspended, the incident might not be over.

"They haven't heard the end of it," Atlanta's Bob Watson said. "If they want to, let's go."

"If they want to play baseball, that's fine," San Diego's Bobby Brown said. "If they want to fight, we'll fight."

Haven't we heard this at recess on the schoolyard?

McSherry called it "the worst thing I've ever seen in my life. It was pathetic." It was that, but even "pathetic" doesn't seem like a strong enough word.

Travesty would be a good word. Mockery isn't bad. Insulting might be better yet. And some even better words might be best left unsaid.

Ex-Steeler takes front office job

By The Associated Press While National Football League teams made wholesale cuts to reach their roster limits of 70 players, the NFL office increased its staff by one. Mel Blount, who retired prior to this season after starring at cornerback with the Pittsburgh Steelers for 14 years, was named Monday as the league's director of player relations, replacing the late Buddy Young, who died in an automobile accident last September.

"I'm anxious and excited about this opportunity," Blount said. "I am approaching it with the same attitude I had when I came into the NFL. I'm determined to make the player relations job work and be successful at it." Blount, 36, played on four Super Bowl championship teams with the Steelers and was selected to the Pro Bowl five times. His 57 interceptions tie him for seventh place on the NFL's all-time list. "One area I would like to concentrate on is finding off-season jobs for the players to make sure they are ready for a career after football," Blount said. "Playing professional football is a short-lived career. Not everyone is as fortunate as I was to play 14 years." One of those who may not even start an NFL career is quarterback Bruce Grant, the son of former Minnesota Vikings Coach Bud Grant. A free agent from the University of Minnesota-Duluth, Bruce Grant was one of three players cut by the Vikings. His father resigned as coach of the Vikings last winter after 17 years in the job. Several other players were placed on various exempt lists to enable the Vikings to reduce their roster to 70, with former New York Giant linebacker Brad Van Pelt put

Yesterday's Puzzle Solved:

8/14/84

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY, AUG. 15, 1984

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Upsets taking place early in the day are fine since they are at once followed by an opportunity to extend your interests into new fields that are particularly beneficial to you.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You are anxious to make progress in some personal endeavors but need to change an advised plan if you are to be successful.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Maintain your equilibrium when some situation may arise at home that is not to your liking.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Be more willing to help a friend who may come to you for assistance, and also make sure you keep a promise made to an associate.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Give full attention to outside affairs that can bring in fine benefits today. You may receive a message that is not pleasing.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) You are anxious to get some new enterprise working nicely and can do just that through sheer will power.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Plan how to get your vocational affairs working more efficiently so that you will feel more secure in the days ahead.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Change your attitude with partners and they will become more cooperative. Don't permit some private worry to deter your progress.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Try a new tack where your job is concerned and become more efficient and enjoy your work more.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Get arrangements improved so that you can enjoy entertainments you have planned much more.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You are enthused about getting your life on a more secure basis, so do just that. Think along more constructive lines.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You get fine ideas about making your routines more productive. Don't permit an unimportant responsibility to deter you.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Plan how to gain more assets so that you can have an abundance in case of later emergencies coming up.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will understand exactly how to make current conditions fit in nicely with New Age ideas and by combining the two can come up with something new, charming and workable. So slant the education along modern lines that can be helpful to your progeny. A very inquiring mind.

"The Stars impel; they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!
