

State hospital wants to expand

Staff and bureau reports
AUSTIN — With mounting pressure from the federal courts and state employee groups, the Big Spring State Hospital hopes to improve care by increasing its staff by 153 employees and hiking its budget request by $10.6 million for the 1986-87 biennium.

The budget request was unveiled Tuesday by hospital Administrator A.K. Smith and other hospital officials during a presentation before state budget analysts.

The 1983 Legislature gave the Big Spring State Hospital $29.4 million for the current two-year period. However, hospital officials want $40 million during the 1986-87 biennium beginning Sept. 1, 1985.

At that level of funding, Smith said, the 458-bed hospital would not only conform with a federal court settlement on mental health and mental retardation care in Texas but also provide "optimal treatment" to its patients.

With the additional funding,

Smith said he would add "direct care workers and professionals" who would deal directly with the needs of patients at the hospital.

A slightly lower level of funding — $35.9 million or a 10 percent increase over current funding — would allow the hospital to operate at present levels and still make some initial progress at meeting terms of the court agreement, he said.

A decision to stick with a $32.9 million, no-growth budget — allowing only $3.1 million for pay raises and travel budget increases — would mean a cutback in the hospitals outreach programs in Abilene, San Angelo and Lubbock, according to the hospital's budget proposal.

Some staff shortages would result and chronic patients would have to be returned to the hospital from their community-based programs.

If asked to cut the budget by 10 percent to $29.9 million, the hospital would have to close the outreach programs, cut staff, live with the loss of Medicare certification, provide "minimal care," and experience an increase in violent behavior problems, according to the proposal.

State budgeting guidelines require agencies to submit no-growth budgets, as well as requests assuming a 10-percent cut and a 10-percent increase.

Smith said BSSH was the only mental care facility for a 46-county area in West Texas. "We operate 12 outreach clinics."

Should the clinics be forced to close, "We would not have the ability to relate to the needs of people who are totally dependent on this hospital."

Smith said the outreach clinics are "vital. There are simply not any psychiatrists or psychologists" in outlying communities who can work with patients and law and community officials. Communities

Counseling

Q. Is there a support group in Big Spring for parents who have lost children?

A. A check with several organizations in town showed no such group. However, a counselor at the Big Spring State Hospital said counseling is offered to individuals and families at the hospital Outpatient Clinic and through the BSSH Family Services program.

The clinic offers counseling for "any problems" families may encounter.

J.R. sells Southfork goes in deal

DALLAS (AP) - J.R. has sold Southfork Ranch. But no, it's not some new exotic plot for the season opener of the popular "Dallas" television series.

J.R. Duncan, who owns the ranch that is featured on the CBS nighttime soap opera, sold the 200-acre ranch north of here near the suburb of Murphy to Terry Trippett, a Dallas real estate developer, for an undisclosed price.

Trippett said in announcing the sale Wednesday that the sale price was more than $1 million, but would not disclose the exact amount.

The ranch, one of the most popular tourist attractions in the Dallas area, will be turned into a corral for Dallas parties and out of town tourists, Trippett said.

The fictional Ewing family will not be evicted, Trippett says. The show can continue to be filmed there, he added.

Trippett said he plans to remodel the 8,000-square-foot home into a "very exclusive" three-bedroom hotel that, starting this fall, will be rented overnight to guests for a minimum of $2,500 per night (more on weekends).

He also plans to add a 20,000-square-foot party building on the site for parties and dinners for up to 2,000 people. Construction of that building is scheduled to start in 10 days and be finished in November or December, Trippett said.

No long-range planning was involved in the purchase, the developer said.

"A friend of mine told me that Joe (J.R. Duncan) was interested in selling. I came out, looked at it, and I bought it," Trippett said.

The Duncan family, who lived at the large ranch home, first objected to the ranch's popularity with tourists. Cars lined the roads in front of the ranch on weekends and during the tourist season.

Charles Hays: from college to cars

By CAROL BALDWIN
Staff Writer

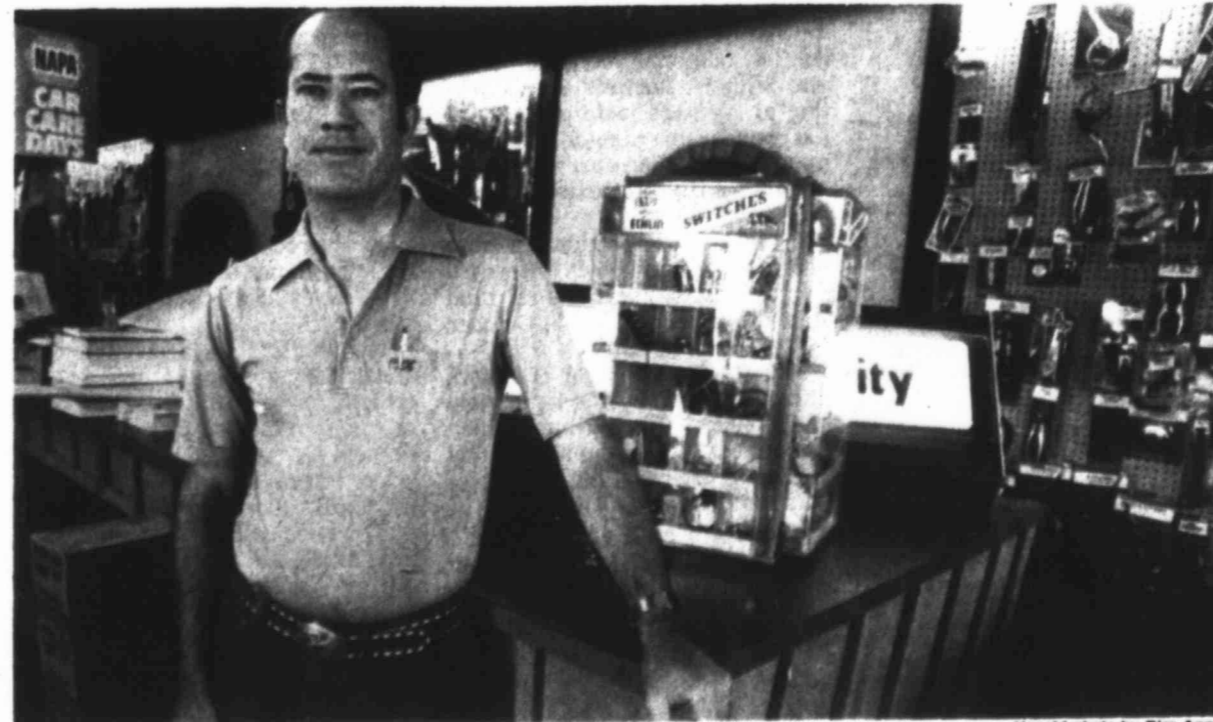

The small office inside Big Spring Automotive Parts is a distinct change from the carpeted hallways and polished wood interiors of the administrative offices of the Howard County Junior College District.

Charles Hays recently resigned as the HCJCD president and is making the change from the life of a college president to the rigors of running his automotive parts business. Sitting in his comfortable, cluttered office, Hays, dressed in casual clothes, strikes quite a contrast to his usual attire of suits and ties.

Hays was the HCJCD president for 10 years. He weathered a number of controversies and his administration was marked by student protests and battles with faculty members.

"I have been controversial, but not by design," he said. "If I think I'm right, I'll go ahead and do it that way."

While in office "there was only one year I took a two-week vacation, just because I didn't feel I had time," he said. "Normally I would take a week. I enjoyed my job, and I felt I owed the (district) board and the people of Howard County."

CHARLES HAYS...a new business

Hays said: "Look at my track record. We haven't been wrong a whole lot of the time. We haven't been right all the time, either. "I had a job to do" and if there were those who disapproved, "I had to go ahead and do it anyway."

He admits that it was disheartening at times to go against those who questioned his decisions.

"It was kind of like petting your dog and he bites you," he said. "But time heals most things. In retrospect, I can see why people thought the way they did."

Hays entered college administration with the idea that "the college

did good things."

"I was accused of a number of things, but when the smoke cleared, with no exception have they found I'd done anything the way they said. I've made mistakes, but to sum up, the positive things far outweighed any negative things."

Leaning back in his chair he adds, "I feel good about my experiences. I think the people here (in Big Spring) are good people. If I didn't feel that way, I wouldn't have bought a business here."

Hays and his wife, Jackie, have three children, Mitchell, 17, Kelly Jon, 11, and Toby, 6.

Hays was raised in Levelland, the son of a farmer who spent most of his life renting land from others.

"A lot of young men had the opportunity" to farm their father's land, Hays said. "Dad sold all of his equipment" and retired. "There wasn't anything for me to go back to."

Hays had the option of working on his father-in-law's farm. Mrs. Hays also grew up in Levelland. Hays graduated from Levelland High School in 1959. Mrs. Hays graduated in 1960.

Instead of farming, he decided to go to college. Both Hays and his wife attended Texas Tech, but

Lakeside chat drowns taxes

LAKE COLORADO CITY — At least one Big Spring city councilman said he does not foresee a tax increase for the coming fiscal year.

"Based on what we see now, we're not contemplating a tax increase at this time," said Bob Fuller here today.

The comment came during a budget work session here today that involves Fuller, other councilmen, City Manager Don Davis and all city department heads. Blue jeans, shorts and T-shirts were the order of the day, as the group discussed budgetary ins and outs in a trailer owned by councilman Larry Miller on the banks of Cherry Creek.

Fuller estimated the council would need two more work sessions to hash out the 1984-85 expenditures and income.

Almost all councilmen and Davis arrived here last night for review 1984-85 budget. Department heads from personnel, public works, police, fire and the Airpark arrived this morning.

"We're going over the big picture, but anytime anybody wants to pull something out we look at it line by line," Fuller said.

Among details discussed by the council this morning were the purchase next year of 10 more police vehicles, a word processor for the city manager, and insurance for city employees. Councilmen are considering a benefit increase that would be presented to employees "cafeteria style." Employees would choose how they want to "spend" their increase from an array of benefits.

Although optimistic that a tax increase would not be necessary, Fuller was not prepared to say there would be no increase.

"We'll probably know something by the end of the day," Fuller said.

Cold front triggers rain

By The Associated Press

A weak cold front triggered shower and thunderstorm activity along the Red River and in extreme Northwest Texas.

The front was located early today along a line from near Texarkana to just north of Dallas-Fort Worth southwestward into the Permian Basin just south of Midland.

Very heavy thunderstorm activity was reported before dawn over an area of the northwest Panhandle near Dalhart extending westward into New Mexico.

A high pressure system aloft was reported over Northwest Texas.

Elsewhere around the state skies were mostly clear to partly cloudy.

Winds were light and southerly over most of the state except winds were from the east and northeast behind the weak cold front.

Early morning temperatures were mostly in the 70s and 80s with cooler readings in the 60s in the Panhandle. Extremes ranged from 61 at Marfa in the Davis Mountains of Southwest Texas to 85 at Meacham Field in Fort Worth.

Other readings around the state early today included 66 at Amarillo, 75 at Wichita Falls, 78 at Waco, 77 at Austin, 76 at San Antonio, 75 at Corpus Christi, 72 at Brownsville, 70 at San Angelo and Lubbock and 76 at El Paso.

Forecasts called for widely scattered showers and thunderstorms across northeast and northwest sections of the state and along the coast today.

Highs today were to range from the 80s in the Panhandle and along the immediate coast to the 90s over most of the rest of the state. The mercury was expected to reach or go slightly above the 100-degree mark in the Big Bend area of Southwest Texas.

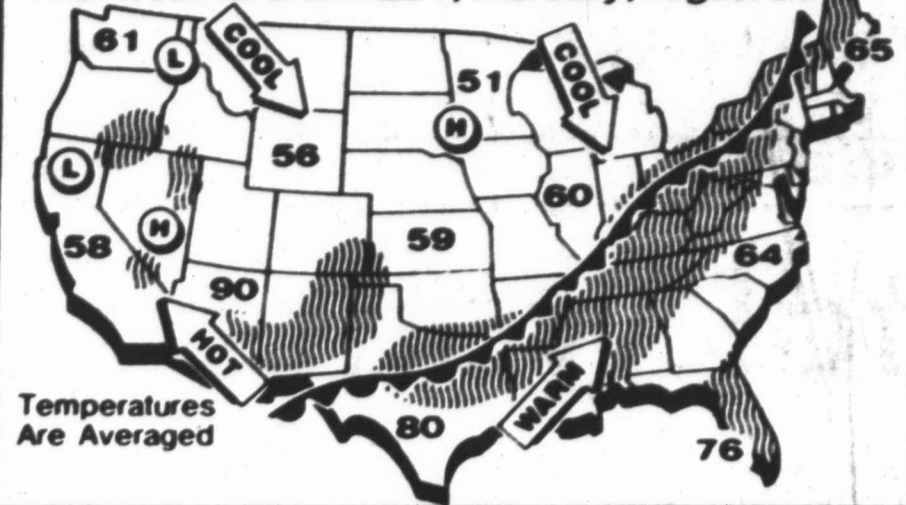

A powerful summer storm caused flash floods in California on Wednesday, while heavy rain drenched portions of Arkansas and western Tennessee.

Thunderstorms were scattered along the entire Gulf Coast, the Carolina and Georgia coasts, western New York and the Ohio Valley, while showers dotted the Intermountain Region and the southern Rockies in waterlogged Colorado.

About 50 residents of Keeler, Calif., about 170 miles northwest of Los Angeles, were rescued by helicopters after they were forced to their rooftops by high water.

West Texas - Partly cloudy, very warm and isolated to widely scattered thunderstorms. Panhandle and South Plains lows upper 60s and highs mid 90s. Permian Basin and far west lows near 70 and highs upper 90s. Concho Valley lows in lower 70s and highs mid to upper 90s. Big Bend country lows near 60 mountains to low 70s lowlands and highs upper 80s mountains to near 100 valleys.

City fires entire police force

NEEDVILLE (AP) — The city council in this rural Fort Bend County community has fired the entire police force for lack of confidence. The dismissals came one week after Mayor K.P. Otto resigned from office. Otto was the third mayor to quit in two years because of police problems. The Needville City Council voted Wednesday night to fire Police Chief Paul de la Rosa, three full-time officers, four reserve officers and even the department secretary. Council members declined to explain their reasons. The sheriff's department will patrol this community of 2,200, located about 35 miles south of Houston, until a new police force can be hired, said Mayor Pro Tem John Stern. Residents have long complained that the police department was spending too much money — about half the city's budget, said former Municipal Court Judge John Bosse, who quit his post last year in a dispute with police. Officers complained Bosse dismissed too many traffic tickets. Residents also complained to the City Council and the district attorney that police harassed residents who opposed increased police expenditures, stopped them for no reason and refused to watch their homes.

Hospital

Continued from page 1-A would be forced to commute to Big Spring to get that assistance. Smith said the BSSH is also seeking a $4 million request for capital construction. The hospital wants to build an activity building locally that would house therapy programs "not done on the wards." Areas of use would include recreation, religious activities, education areas, "rehabilitation and job vocation. Hearing the hospital's proposal were representatives of Gov. Mark White and the Legislative Budget Board. Their recommendations will help form the basis of new state budget proposals that will go to the Legislature in January. The Legislature has the final say on state spending requests. House Speaker G. Lewis and other state leaders are calling for no-growth budgets because of shortfalls in state revenues, but agencies under court order are expected to receive special consideration. Without such consideration, officials with the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation say they cannot adequately meet all the requirements of the federal court settlement requiring increased staffing in Texas' state mental health facilities. The Texas State Employees Union also is pushing the federal courts to do something about what they say is the lack of proper staffing at the state hospitals. "MHMR signed a settlement to agree to a minimum of two mental health workers per ward per shift," employee union organizer Jim Pearson said in a recent press release. "But they didn't request any new staff to meet the requirements." Instead, he said, they are using nurses and social workers as mental health workers in order to meet the requirement. A large portion of the hospital's proposed budget is needed to boost staff levels from the 1985 budgeted number of 666 to 819 for the next biennium. However, Smith acknowledged that if the average daily population does not increase, the hospital could get by with as few as 85 to 100 more employees and still conform substantially with the federal court agreement. He also said that although he doesn't agree with everything in the court agreement, "it's time to...make an honest effort to comply and get on with our efforts."

Valley cotton farmers predicting record crop

WESLACO (AP) — Last winter's prolonged freeze which devastated the citrus industry and ruined crops could prove to be a boon for Rio Grande Valley cotton growers, who are predicting a record harvest this year. With about 95 percent of the cotton harvested in the Valley counties of Cameron, Hidalgo, Starr and Willacy, farmers are predicting an average yield per acre of 650 pounds, according to John Norman, a cotton specialist with Texas A&M's agricultural extension service in Weslaco. A yield of 614 pounds per acre two years ago still holds the record as the biggest harvest until final statistics are compiled in October for this crop, he said. Experts say a number of factors influenced this year's high yield and several "long-time Valley growers have said the same thing happened after the big freezes of '62 and '51," Norman said. "We don't really know what, if any, correlation exists between freeze and cotton yields, but its worth looking into, doing a little research," he said.

Norman said cold temperatures aided yields by helping control cotton pests. The freeze killed harvested cotton stalks where the main pest, the boll weevil, lives from year-to-year. Other factors that may have contributed to yield were hot temperatures early in the year and an adequate, well-timed amount of rain. Most of the approximately 265,000 Valley acres planted in cotton yield slightly more than one bale of cotton per acre. But Norman said he has heard of several producers growing two or three bales per acre this year. "If that's true, it's amazing," he said. In 1982, cotton accounted for about $68 million of the $465.7 million of agricultural revenue poured into the Rio Grande Valley economy. Dr. Tom Jones, extension economist for management, said that while final figures on this year's crop will not be out until late fall, "it looks like area farmers will be making more money than expected."

Phony cops kill illegal alien

HOUSTON (AP) — Two gunman posing as lawmen broke into a southwest Houston apartment and killed one of eight illegal aliens living there, police said. Officers investigating the killing found a badge and card stolen seven years ago from a Harris

County deputy constable. The victim, Francisco Perez, 18, was pronounced dead at the apartment at about 3 a.m. Tuesday, said police spokesman Raul Correa. Eight illegal aliens lived in the one bedroom apartment, the spokesman said.

Policeman receives top honor

Big Spring Police Sgt. Bill Price was awarded a certificate of appreciation Wednesday from the U.S. Marshal's service for the northern district of Texas. U.S. Marshal Richard Jones said the certificate was awarded for services above and beyond the call of duty. Jones was in town Wednesday to make the presentation. Jones serves as marshal to 29 counties, he said. He has offices in San Angelo and Abilene. "We gave a certificate of appreciation to Sgt. Bill Price of the Big Spring Police Department for helping the U.S. Marshal service on investigations and actual arrests," Jones said. Jones said Price assisted him on several cases throughout the last six months. He said Price was always willing to offer assistance and came in several times on his days off to help with a case. "He was always available to help. He did more than the usual person would do," Jones said. Jones said, "I'm out here by myself covering 29 counties. When we see this happen, we always try to get them some recognition." The certificate originates out of the director's office in Washington, D.C., Jones said. Jones added that he receives a lot of assistance from Big Spring and Howard County law officials. "It was hard to single out one person."

SW Bell forms crime watch

The local office of the Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. in cooperation with the Big Spring Police Department has added a new twist to the company's slogan of "Reach Out and Touch Someone." The police department and the phone company have instituted Operation Crime Watch, a joint effort designed to curtail crime in residential areas of the city, said Tom Woolverton, a cable technician for Southwestern Bell. Southwestern Bell currently has approximately 30 vehicles with mobile radios, Woolverton said. These radios can be used to call in from anywhere in the city, he said. Woolverton said he approached Sgt. Fred Pace of the police department with the proposal. Woolverton said the police department "loved the idea" and later acquired a slide presentation to show the local Bell employees. The project was later handled by the Southwestern Bell Telephone Community Relations Team, Woolverton said. The idea for Operation Crime Watch came from a similar program used in Fort Worth, he said. One advantage the Bell employees have is they have been trained in first aid, Pace said. "The program is complimentary to the Neighborhood Crime Watch," Woolverton said. "We are all over town in the neighborhoods where people are at work." Woolverton said the response time on accidents could be improved because the Bell employee has access to a radio. The program went into effect Wednesday, he said.

Teens held in double slayings

HOUSTON (AP) — Two teenagers are being held in the slayings of a man and a woman who were robbed while they tried to buy cocaine, police said Wednesday. Steven Wayne Figueroa, 17, was charged with capital murder and held without bond Wednesday in the slayings last week of Raynell Muskwin, 17, and 20-year-old David Lopez. A 16-year-old turned himself in to police early Wednesday, shortly after Figueroa was arrested at his apartment. Police found the couple's bodies and their car sunk in Brays Bayou last week. Homicide Sgt. Danny James said they were sitting in the back seat of the vehicle and each had been shot in the head. James said detectives received a tip through a crime fighting program and tracking down witnesses and other people who knew the victims and the suspects. Lopez and the suspects had gone to school together, he said. Police said Lopez and Ms. Muskwin drove to Figueroa's home in northwest Houston Aug. 14 to buy some cocaine. James said Lopez was carrying more than $2,000 when he was killed. Muskwin's mother, Gilda, could not be reached for comment. The slain couple was buried side by side Saturday at a northside cemetery. The 16-year-old suspect will be turned over to juvenile authorities until a hearing is held to determine if he will be certified to stand trial as an adult.

Convention crowns Reagan king of the GOP

DEEP IN THE HEART — President Reagan gives either a 'hook'em Horns' sign or an Italian gesture as he speaks at a rally in Dallas Wednesday.

Harte-Hanks News Service
DALLAS — Their perfunctory nominations for re-election behind them, Ronald Reagan and George Bush prepared Thursday for their convention's final sendoff for battle with the Democrats.

In a Wednesday night roll-call vote among a series of colorful and carefully planned floor demonstrations, President Reagan received all but two of the 2,235 delegate votes. Vice President Bush won all but four.

The roll call of states ended shortly before midnight. Missouri set off a surge of cheers by putting the GOP team over the 1,118 votes needed for nomination.

The roll call continued alphabetically through the states to the end, however, and Martha Weisend of Dallas announced that Texas gave all 109 votes to Reagan-Bush "to continue the economic recovery." She is co-chairman of the Reagan-Bush Texas campaign.

Texas again broke into their traditional cheer of "Viva. Ole." with the announcement of the vote.

Earlier, delegates were almost buried in red, white and blue balloons that dropped from the ceiling after U.S. Sen. Paul Laxalt of Nevada nominated Reagan as "a leader who's not afraid to lead."

California Gov. George Deukmejian nominated Bush, an adopted Texan, with a stress on experience. He described Bush as a "businessman, congressman, naval officer, ambassador, diplomat, director of intelligence and vice president—no one in the United States can match that experience."

'We need religion'

Reagan says government, church compatible

DALLAS (AP) — President Reagan, testing his re-election themes as he prepares to accept renomination from an adoring Republican convention, branded opponents of school prayer today as intolerant and said that politicians "need religion as a guide."

In remarks prepared for a prayer breakfast only hours after all but two of the 2,235 delegates voted to renominate him Wednesday night, the president said he was frustrated by people who say they oppose school prayer "in the name of tolerance and freedom and open-mindedness."

"I submit to you that those who claim to be fighting for tolerance on this issue may not be tolerant at all," he said.

The president told the prayer breakfast of ecumenical Christians that "religion and politics are necessarily related."

"We need religion as a guide; we need it because we are imperfect," he said. "And our government needs the Church because only those humble enough to admit they are sinners can bring to democracy the tolerance it requires in order to survive."

White House aide Jim Baker said today it was "quite appropriate" for Reagan to be involved in prayer breakfasts because religion is one of the "traditional values" the president was seeking to restore to American society.

Reagan's schedule also included a meeting with Hispanics and a $1,008-a-plate fund-raising luncheon.

Reagan didn't wait for the convention to act to launch his campaign against Mondale. He had campaigned in the Midwest earlier in the week and upon arriving at his convention hotel Wednesday, told a rally that the Democrats had come to stand for "defeatism, decline, dependency, doom and despair."

While the president passed up the convention session at which he was nominated, Mrs. Reagan was there briefly, along with daughter Maureen and son Ron. Sitting with the Reagan and Bush families was James Brady, the White House press secretary, severely wounded in the assassination attempt on the president in March 1981.

Missile payment delayed

TUCSON — The Pentagon is suspending payments to the Hughes Aircraft Co. for three of the military's primary missile systems because of "serious deficiencies" in manufacturing and quality control, military officials said. The payments, amounting to $30 million a month, are for the Army's TOW antitank missile, the Navy's Phoenix air-to-air missile and the Air Force's Maverick air-to-ground missile. All are made at the Hughes plant at Tucson, Ariz.

Inmate admits jail fraud

NEWARK — A federal inmate has admitted defrauding a national brokerage house out of $14,000 while he was serving a 10-year term at a U.S. penitentiary in Kansas on a similar charge.

Johnnie Ray Johnson, 31, pleaded guilty to wire fraud Wednesday in U.S. District Court. The Atlanta man admitted using a series of interstate telephone calls in August and September 1983 to convince the Denver office of Paine, Webber, Jackson & Curtis to transfer funds by wire to a New Jersey bank account he controlled.

U.S. Attorney W. Hunt Dumont said that Johnson, who has served seven years of a 10-year term at Leavenworth, Kan., for a previous wire fraud conviction, impersonated bank officers and used fictitious names to pull off the scheme.

Cats dog club members

MIAMI SHORES — The Village Council has unanimously approved an ordinance aimed at ridding this Miami suburb of nuisance cats.

The ordinance was prompted by complaints from Miami Shores Country Club members and residents upset over wandering strays and noisy cats, said Village Manager Les Forney, who has a pair of cats himself.

The law makes it a misdemeanor to have more than four adult cats or to "harbor" strays or abandoned felines. The ordinance also forbids a cat that "engages in frequent or habitual crying and meowing."

D.C. aide wins fame as 'crime buster'

BOSTON (AP) — A congressional aide who went to a bank to get a cash advance on his credit card was credited by police with helping to capture a man who allegedly had just robbed the bank.

Jeffrey Pryce, a foreign affairs adviser to Rep. Edward J. Markey, D-Mass., came to Boston from Washington about 10 days ago to help in Markey's re-election campaign.

"I've never been a crime-buster before, but you do what you can," he said.

Pryce went to the State Street Bank and Trust Co. office in Government Center on Tuesday afternoon and saw a man leaving the bank with "a bundle of cash."

Education reform timing was right

Public schools made an astounding jump in American esteem in the past year, according to a new Gallup Poll. Grades of "A" and "B" were awarded to the schools by 42 percent of respondents, up from only 31 percent a year ago.

It's not because public schools have improved so much, not in one year. And even if they had, it's unlikely that public awareness of the improvement could spread so fast.

A more plausible, if ironic, explanation is that the flurry of critical reports on public schooling from a variety of sources in 1983 made Americans far more knowledgeable about their schools. And, as Robert Cole, editor of the education journal Phi Delta Kappan, notes, "Past polls have always shown that the closer people are to public schools, the higher they rate them."

If that's the case, then Texas broached the issue of more money for education at just the right time. A broad package of legislation passed in the Texas Legislature this summer, although it's still too early to assess how well the legislators did their jobs.

Whatever the reasons for the public upgrading of education, the Gallup Poll shows American attitudes are more favorable toward public schools than at any time in the past decade, and the proportion willing to pay higher taxes for education has jumped in the past two years from 30 percent to 41 percent.

That's an encouraging sign, and an indication that other states may follow Texas' lead in readdressing education while the public mood is right. If states don't take steps now, they risk a difficult task later when education is no longer before the public eye, or when the public grows disillusioned and therefore unwilling to finance the necessary improvements.

An ARM and a leg

An "insidious evil" is threatening Americans, says House Majority Leader Jim Wright of Texas. He refers not to the obvious menace, namely Walter Mondale's tax proposals, but to adjustable rate mortgages, which allow the interest rate on homebuying loans to fluctuate with market rates. Wright wants them banned, and there is an effort afoot on Capitol Hill at least to restrict them.

An adjustable rate mortgage works simply. It carries a lower initial interest rate than a fixed-rate loan. But if rates rise, the rate charged on the loan may also rise, subject to mutually agreeable limits. If interest rates fall, the rate on the mortgage also falls. The borrower assumes that market rates will fall or that his income will rise enough to match any increase in his payments.

Critics of the adjustable rate mortgage (ARM) are appalled that some borrowers, having gambled that interest rates would fall, have been strapped when they rose. Some, unable to make their payments or sell their homes, have had to default.

That, of course, is a shame. But in the absence of ARMs, these unfortunate borrowers wouldn't have been able to qualify for a mortgage in the first place. So they'd be in the same position either way — not owning a home. If interest rates had dropped, though, an ARM would have left them better off.

ARMs arose in response to conditions that threatened to make the traditional fixed-rate mortgage obsolete. In a period of chronic inflation and high interest rates, like the late 1970s, a lot of homebuyers were unwilling (or unable) to lock themselves into paying high rates. Making the rate variable was one answer to the problem.

Banks and savings and loans, meanwhile, were suffering from getting low fixed rates on their old mortgages, while having to pay higher rates on deposits to compete with money market funds and other new savings instruments. Many of them went out of business. ARMs promised to protect thrift institutions from being stuck with old, low-yield loans in times of soaring inflation and interest rates.

They've proved themselves in the marketplace. The Federal National Mortgage Corp. says about half of all new mortgages carry an adjustable interest rate. Most restrict how much the rate can rise in any one year and over the life of the loan. A typical arrangement is to allow an increase of up to two percentage points per year (if a specified market rate rises by at least that much), but no more than five points in all.

Banning this innovation would hurt not only would-be homebuyers, but thrifts, too. In periods of high interest rates, they will be unable to find mortgage customers willing to commit themselves to a fixed rate. In periods of low rates, they will be able to find borrowers — but the loans will turn unprofitable if rates rise again. Either way, they lose. So do homebuilders and their suppliers.

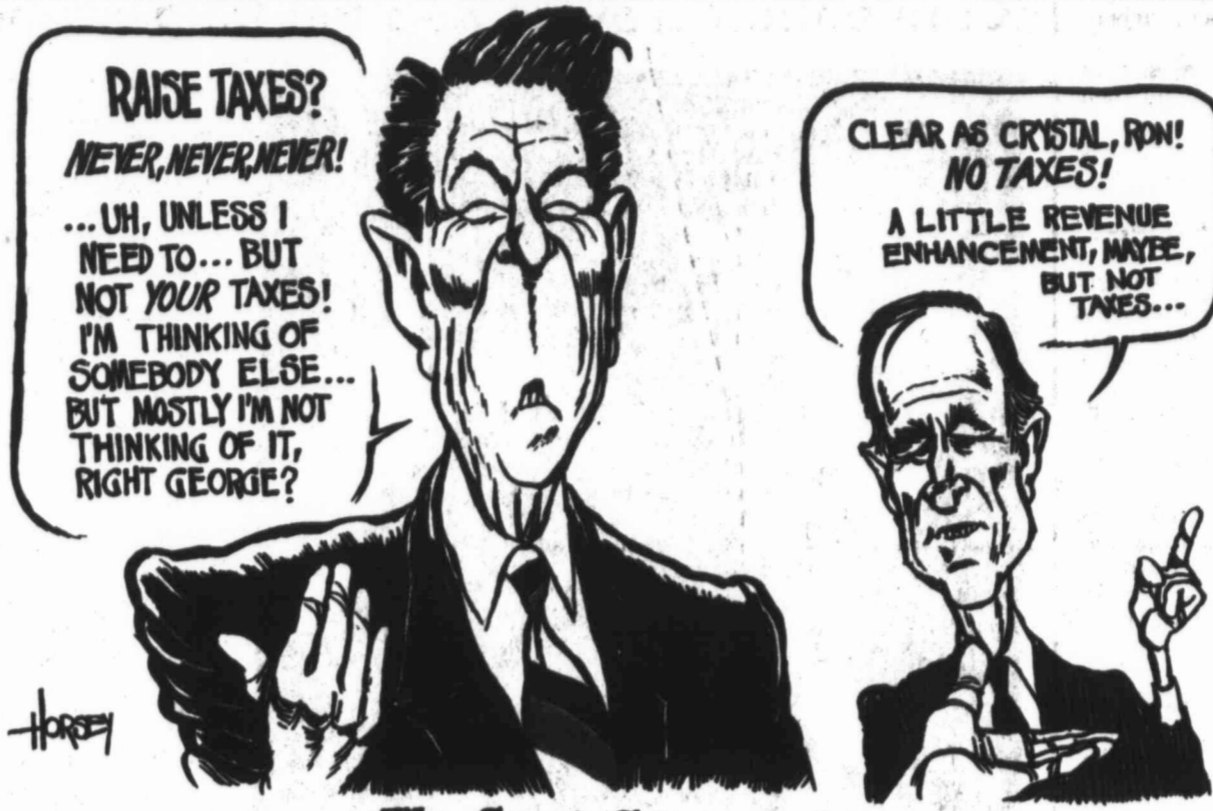

One complaint about the ARMs is that some banks use low "teaser" rates in the first year or so, with rates rising steeply later — even if market rates fall. That leaves some unwitting borrowers in the lurch. "I suggest to you," Wright told Congressional Quarterly, "that you don't do a person any favor if you lure him into a debt he can't pay."

True. But Wright doesn't consider why a lender would make a loan he doesn't expect to be repaid. The main reason in this case is that a lot of mortgages are federally guaranteed, which means the bank gets its money no matter what. And deposits are insured without regard to the risk of their assets, which means banks pay no insurance penalty for making dubious loans.

If banks are behaving irresponsibly, Congress can induce them to straighten up by removing these perverse incentives. It can also repeal the interest deduction, which favors mortgages with adjustable interest rates over those with adjustable monthly payments, including interest and principal.

All this could be avoided by government policies which promote stable prices and interest rates. Then fixed rate mortgages would be perfect for everyone. In the meantime, Congress ought to leave the fate of innovations like this to the judgment of consumers.

Inside the Hatfield controversy

WASHINGTON — At about the time that Sen. Mark O. Hatfield, R-Ore., apparently was poised to go to the Sudan to discuss a proposed trans-African oil pipeline, the Greek arms merchant promoting the pipeline was making clumsy efforts to bribe Sudanese officials here to support the project, sources have told my associate Corky Johnson.

Payments by the Greek citizen, Basil Tsakos, to Hatfield's wife, Antoinette, totaled $55,000 (Hatfield originally said the amount was $40,000). The payments were made during the period the senator was using his influence on behalf of Tsakos to get high-level U.S. support for the pipeline.

Mrs. Hatfield said last week that she earned all the money she received from Tsakos for real estate and consulting work she did for him and his wife. But the senator admitted it had been a mistake for him to help Tsakos while his wife was being paid by the Greek. The Hatfields have donated the $55,000 to charity.

Sources who disclosed Tsakos' alleged payoff attempts said there was no evidence that Hatfield knew about them. Here are the details: Last August, Tsakos met in Washington with Sudanese Ambassador Omer Eissa and Gen. Umar Tayyib, Sudan's minister of security. Tsakos wanted the Sudanese to grant him a right-of-way for the pipeline across Sudan.

According to the sources, Tsakos discussed paying the two Sudanese officials for their help in securing the right-of-way. A Tsakos associate who was present tried to quiet Tsakos, but he persisted in talking about payoffs, the sources said.

Tsakos allegedly told the ambassador and the security minister he was prepared to take care of "any special financial problems" they might have.

According to the sources, the ambassador was offended and said, "We don't want any of that on this project." Eissa denied there had been any talk of payoffs. The ambassador's brother-in-law is a paid consultant to Tsakos' pipeline company, and Sudan recently signed the right-of-way agreement.

Sources have also told me that Tsakos offered a bribe to the visiting Sudanese minister of energy, Sharif el-Tohami. The approach was made at a dinner in Tsakos' Watergate apartment last December, following a reception for Sudanese President Gaafar Nimeiri at the Sheraton Washington Hotel. The Hatfields were reportedly at the dinner.

After the party at the Watergate, sources said, el-Tohami reportedly complained to a Tsakos aide in a lengthy conversation, saying he was "furious" at the bribe attempt, and calling Tsakos a "strange man." The Sudanese official reportedly brushed aside Tsakos' offer of money before any exact figure was mentioned.

Tsakos and el-Tohami had gotten into an argument at the earlier reception for Nimeiri, according to witnesses. Tsakos reportedly tried to pin down an exact date when the right-of-way agreement would be signed, and when el-Tohami stalled, Tsakos raised his voice. "I want it signed quickly; I want it signed quickly," Tsakos said, according to those present.

Tsakos' associates hurried over to shush their boss, and the Greek apologized to el-Tohami. Later he persuaded the Sudanese official to come to the Watergate for dinner.

Several weeks later, when Hatfield was in London on a Senate trip, Tsakos phoned him several times — once while the senator was aboard an Air Force jet. Tsakos asked Hatfield to detour to Khartoum and discuss the pipeline project with President Nimeiri.

The sources said it appeared that Hatfield would have gone to Khartoum if a Tsakos associate dealing with the Sudanese had not convinced Tsakos and the senator that the timing was wrong.

Woman 'can't help' jealousy

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: My husband is a very successful and outgoing person, but whenever I see him talking to another woman at a social event I get very jealous. My husband says he loves me alone and that I shouldn't feel this way, but I can't help it and don't know how to fight it. — Mrs. O.W.Y.

DEAR MRS. O.W.Y.: Jealousy can be very destructive, and you need to do all you can to trust it out of your life. The Bible says,

"Anger is cruel and fury overwhelming, but who can stand before jealousy?" (Proverbs 24:4). The jealousy of Joseph's brothers made them hate him and sell him into slavery (Genesis 37). Jealousy is one of the "deeds of darkness" that the Bible commands us to put aside (Romans 13:12-13).

Have you ever tried to analyze the reasons why jealousy is such a problem for you? It might help, for instance, to realize that jealousy and envy are often very closely related. We become jealous and envious of other people when we feel they are better than we are — and that points to a basic reason for much of our jealousy. These feelings occur because we are not comfortable with our own selves — we lack self-confidence and are afraid we are not attractive or personable enough to win the love and respect of others.

Conversations say much about talker

To the editor: Listening to television I'm reminded of a quote I heard. "People with brilliant minds talk about history, people with average minds discuss events and people with simple minds talk about other people."

Something else I'm reminded of as I listen to television and everyday conversation. A very dear friend of mine who was an elderly retired school teacher said a man was using foul and profane language in her presence. Another man told him he shouldn't use that kind of language in the presence of Miss M. and she said I quote, "Oh, that's all right, his vocabulary is so limited that's the only way he knows how to express himself."

Routine stuff

By LUIS RIOS

Every morning millions of people follow an age-old American routine of getting up, eating breakfast, and going to work.

All in all, it is pretty much routine stuff. It is one of the many things Americans don't give much thought to ...

It's funny how we still swear by the rock-hard John Wayne and the image he portrayed through his films and struggles in real life. Even the Russians and the Chinese feared him more than they feared any American general or president.

Wayne permeated the American belief that the United States is omnipotent, all Communists are whatever we wish to call them and the Supreme Being is always on our side because we are Americans.

People have grown old and gray knowing what their role and this country's destiny is in the scheme of things.

However, despite this seemingly unshakable belief, more people are becoming leery of the many certainties of life.

However, people are so sure that John Wayne was a straight, honest, down-the-line guy, it would create havoc if it were revealed (erroneously, of course) he sexually preferred men over women or he was a communist spy.

Maybe Errol Flynn ... but to say such things about John Wayne is blasphemy.

Certainly it is — Everyone knows John Wayne bled red, white and blue, not pink.

We all don't know any of this, which is really beside the point.

What matters is the certainty we have in matters we don't know that much about.

"But you have to believe in something," many will retort. Something, but not everything.

Hundreds of people followed Jim Jones to Guyana, millions thought the charismatic Adolph Hitler was the key to a bright future.

Both were given a chance to change history in some form or manner. Unfortunately, it was a chance that people let them have. It isn't a fact that Jones' followers accepted death without question or that all Germans felt a deep hatred for Jews. It was the underlying emotional current that created the mass confusion.

This strong sentiment aroused in people is caused by uncertainty not certainty. After people have been thoroughly confused, they decide 20 or 30 million people can't all be wrong. And they make themselves believe it.

I'm not suggesting the American people can be led like World War II's Germans. But, people, unaware and uncertain of their own wants, can easily be put in a category under the heading "American sentiment." That's because to too many millions of Americans, current events, and the country's future, is pretty much routine stuff.

Big Spring's Christopher at GOP 'pep rally'

By CAROL BALDWIN
Staff Writer

Charles "Chris" Christopher, a delegate at the Republican National Convention, says the atmosphere on the convention floor in Dallas is more like a "pep rally" than a political meeting.

CHRIS CHRISTOPHER

Christopher is representing the 17th Congressional District at the convention as an alternate. He arrived in Dallas Friday and has commuted back and forth to Big Spring since that time to deal with ongoing litigation with the Fibertex Inc. trial.

Christopher was planning to attend a reception for President Reagan Wednesday night and a luncheon Thursday.

He said Wednesday the convention "has been more of a ratification of our support for the Reagan-Bush administration and our desire to see this administration go forward on their very successful program."

He has been alternating with district delegates on the convention floor. Christopher is also a "Republican Eagle," a title earned because he donates more than $10,000 a year to the Republican party. As an "Eagle," he is allowed privileges such as special seating and entrance into meetings and receptions denied other delegates.

Christopher said, "There are very few issues to be dealt with by delegates" at the convention. Instead, the feeling on the floor is "let's get together and have a pep rally for our candidate. It's nice to be in that position for a change. It's been many years since Republicans had an opportunity to do that."

Christopher said most delegates he has talked to feel, "Reagan has made great progress" during his presidency.

He called the Dallas convention "very well organized."

In answering a question about the conservative platform of the Republicans this year, Christopher said, "Generally, that's quite often all in the eyes of the beholder. There is no doubt that this is more conservative than you've seen in the Democratic platform. But we believe people are more interested in hearing what is good for the country. They are more interested in hearing the positive than in hearing what is wrong."

Republican delegates have agreed that "anyone can raise taxes," Christopher said, referring to Walter Mondale's claims that Reagan has a hidden tax plan. In response to Democratic claims that Mondale is "courageous" in telling Americans that taxes must be raised, Christopher said the word on the convention floor is, "With Mondale, that's a habit, not courageous."

Christopher said he believes that "we probably can accomplish everything in the next four years. (The platform) is certainly laid out in the right direction. This is the direction we want to go. We want to try and achieve these goals."

Christopher said there is a "great rising of Americanism as a result of the Olympics. This convention is the same way. Everyone is positive and enthusiastic, and we see hope for more progress. That is exciting."

Christopher said most delegates he has talked to have been so enthusiastic about the convention that they've had little time to watch what is happening with Mondale and Geraldine Ferraro.

He added, however, and many delegates "Look at Ferraro and are a little sympathetic" with the troubles she has encountered over tax questions.

Delegates have said, "We believe Mondale has more success in his choice of a vice president than Carter did." Mondale was Carter's vice president while in office.

Christopher said he has sat in on every session at the convention, either as a delegate or as a "Republican Eagle."

Christopher has been an "Eagle" since 1978. Since Reagan has been in office, Christopher said he travels to Washington, D.C., three or four times a year to sit in on "special private briefings" designed to collect input from people across the country.

Christopher said the convention has given him a chance to meet with people from all over the nation. "We live in our own little world and forget this is a big country made up of people who believe the same," he said.

Christopher said the Texas heat "has not been that bad. It's extremely hot, but Dallas has rolled out the hospitality. The only time anyone is in the heat is when they walk outside to get into an airconditioned bus or vehicle which will take them to another airconditioned building."

Christopher said he especially enjoyed a speech by Jeanne Kirkpatrick. He said he had "the opportunity to have dinner with her. She was impressive to see. She was a marvelous orator and is a fine stateswoman. It was exciting to listen to her talk."

Christopher said delegates begin their morning with breakfast session about 7 a.m., followed by morning sessions. The convention resumes each evening from 8 p.m. to 10 p.m., and receptions usually follow until 1 or 2 a.m.

Christopher was looking forward to the Reagan's arrival Wednesday.

"In the 1976 campaign, my personal aircraft flew Nancy (Reagan) on a large portion (of her campaign) throughout the south and western states. I sat with Nancy in Kansas City during the counting of the votes in Kansas City...We knew we'd lost. I was reminiscing about that last night with other delegates."

Christopher said the depression of 1976 has given away to a 1984 convention of optimism. "Last night (Tuesday) we decided 1976 was worth it, because here we are today."

Christopher recalled a 1976 floor demonstration for Reagan which lasted for more than two hours, "the longest demonstration for a candidate ever held on television. We captured a lot of prime time. We were trying to tell the public that Reagan would be back."

Christopher said, "I was responsible for having run that floor demonstration. We had smuggled 42 radios into the arena (to muffle commands from security within the arena.) As they tried to order people back into their seats, we kept it going."

Christopher said he doubted he would have the opportunity to meet personally with the Reagans while they are at the convention.

"There is too much going on. There won't be many small receptions," he said.

Factors important in landscaping

When making landscape plans for property, it's important to consider the width and depth of the property, as well as the height of the house and trees. Knowing the height, width and depth is crucial to the planning process, but there's one more important dimension that can't be neglected: time.

The passage of time will reflect the changing needs of a family. Interests change, and a landscape can be designed to change as needed.

Another element of time to keep in mind is the sequence of construction — which landscaping project should be done first? Again that depends on needs, wants and affordability. It's really a matter of personal choice. But the very act of choosing ahead of time — setting priorities — is a vital part of landscape planning processes.

Now's a good time to plan ahead for next spring's landscaping projects. Contact a nursery or landscape firm for guidance in assessing landscape needs. Remember, spring is not the only time to plant.

Surgeon redirects blood 'traffic'

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I have a son who suffers from cirrhosis of the liver. He has been advised to have a shunt operation. Could you please explain this procedure? — Mrs. F.L.D.

Here's a situation in which the surgeon acts like traffic officer, redirecting blood traffic. If you can sit still for just a smattering of anatomy, I'll give this a go for you.

There is a large vein that brings blood from the digestive tract to the liver. It is called the portal vein. When it gets past the liver it joins up with another vein that empties into the heart. That vein is the inferior vena cava.

That's the normal traffic pattern, but when the liver is cirrhotic (scarred) this normal flow of blood from the portal vein through the liver and on to the inferior vena cava (as explained above) is blocked. Blood seeks an alternate pathway, and one of those routes leads it to veins in the esophagus. It's a bad choice, as it turns out, because those veins are not equipped to handle so great a blood volume.

You know the picture if you've ever had to take a detour off an expressway and use side roads. Blood slows down in these esophageal veins. The veins also become stretched. Their walls become thinner and that makes them bleed easily. And lots of blood can be lost when esophageal veins bleed.

The answer, and this gets us to your question, is a shunt. The surgeon hooks up the portal vein directly to the inferior vena cava. The blood no longer has to go through the esophageal veins and the bleeding threat is ended.

You want the name of the procedure? It's called a portacaval shunt, and I think this is the one to which you refer. There is another kind, though, in which a plastic tube is put into the swollen abdomen to drain fluid and put it back into a vein. That's a different story, and I think we've had just enough of all this for one day.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: My wife had to be put on antibiotics for extended periods this year and soon noticed her nails separating from the fingertips. She was wondering if this was from the drugs. Have you heard of this happening? Will the nails return to normal? — R.L.

Some antibiotics, particularly the tetracycline drugs, can cause this. The problem resolves as new nail grows out from the beds when the medicine is discontinued. I think your wife will find this true in her case.

I am sending you the booklet you wanted, "Solving Your Nail Problems," which other readers may order by writing me care of the Big Spring Herald, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope and 50 cents for printing and handling.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I've been so tired for so long. Doctor, I think I must have been born tired. Is being tired some kind of disease? I'm reluctant to go to a doctor because I don't want to hear the diagnosis of it being in my head. I think I lead a normal life. I'm not bored (just tired), and I'm not depressed. What do you think? — K.T.

There is almost no illness that isn't associated with fatigue. No, it's not a disease. No, you're not born with it. You have to start at the basics.

Are you sure you are getting adequate rest? And that's not as mundane an observation as it may seem to be. If you're not getting eight hours' sleep a night, you may be a person who needs that amount, or more. Don't let your mate's sleep needs dictate your sleep habits. Too much coffee (yes), too much alcohol, or even medications can cause tiredness.

Then there are illnesses. Many occult infections (the kinds concealed from observation) can cause fatigue.

Trucker advised to get off road

DEAR ABBY: A few words to "Lonely in Dallas," the 30-year-old truck driver who wants a wife:

Supposing you do get married. Your wife will go along with you for maybe two years, then a baby comes along, and guess who is sitting home alone for two or three months waiting for you to come off the road? Only now she has the responsibility of running a home and raising a child because you can't do it over the telephone.

Her social life is almost nonexistent because it's easier to stay home alone than to be lonely at a party.

You miss out on all the joys of fatherhood because you're not there when the baby takes his first step, says his first word, etc. Meanwhile your wife sleeps alone in a big double bed for two and three months at a time, and envies her friends whose husbands come home from work every night.

And what are you going to do for sex while you're away from home? And what is your wife supposed to do?

When your son is 4, he will feel abandoned because his daddy is never home to take him to the beach, ball games, etc.

My advice to you is get off the road if you want a wife and family. I should know. I've been married to a long-distance trucker for 14 years. Sign me...

LONELY IN NEW YORK

DEAR ABBY: I like your definition of "bedroom eyes." When I was a young girl dating, men used to tell me I had bedroom eyes. Now that I am a grandmother, they say, "You look sleepy."

Expert attacks burying radioactive waste

AUSTIN (AP) — A federal expert on toxic wastes says "common sense tells us" that there are better ways to dispose of nuclear waste than burying it in a hole in the ground.

Hugh Kaufman of the Environmental Protection Agency said if landfills could be built that would not leak, oil companies would not need storage tanks.

"They would put it (refined oil) in the land, because it would be cheaper for them. They don't do that. They still build storage tanks," Kaufman told a House subcommittee.

Kaufman was on a panel of four expert witnesses who testified Wednesday before the House Subcommittee on Low-Level Nuclear Waste Disposal.

Subcommittee chairman Gary Thompson and others said Texas may be moving too fast for its own good in searching for a site to dispose of wastes. "In Texas we're proceeding much faster in site selection and that places some very special pressures on Texas and raises some very special legal questions," said Thompson, D-Abilene.

He also said Congress "in all likelihood" would extend a Jan. 1, 1986, deadline for forming regional compact to dispose of nuclear waste.

Rather than forming a compact, the Texas Legislature in 1981 took the option of creating the state Low-Level Radioactive Waste Disposal Authority to develop a site for handling nuclear wastes. Bot King of the Texas Agriculture Department said the presumption was the agency would seek "the best darn landfill man has ever seen."

Since then, however, "techniques have grown by leaps and bounds," said King.

Nevertheless, the agency has concentrated on trying to buy land to bury wastes. Only recently, after a storm of protest, it ruled out a possible burial site in Hudspeth County in far West Texas.

Rep. Larry Don Shaw, D-Big Spring, whose district includes several counties considered for a nuclear disposal site, said the authority "has an extremely difficult job. No one in the state — statistics in our part of the state are 10 to 1 against a disposal site in the area. No one wants to dispose of this in their backyard — that's understandable."

Kaufman said, "It has been my experience that landfills, in general, for any toxic materials, are not satisfactory to protect the public health and environment."

Kaufman, assistant to the director of EPA's Hazardous Site Control Division, said government should not subsidize waste generators, because it removes the incentive to do a good job.

"I think that if industry is kept on the hook financially for managing their own waste, they will use the best methods, they will use the most efficient methods," he said. "As government gets more involved, it can only mess up the system."

High tech, top health care take back seat to curandero

DALLAS (AP) — In an age of high technology and state-of-the-art health care, many members of Dallas' Hispanic community still rely on the ancient rituals of folk healing — or curanderismo.

Nearly every day, Hispanics go to Juan de Dios' house seeking help for spiritual and physical problems. De Dios, whose given name is Juan Campos, is a "curandero" or faith healer.

Although he says God is the one who does the actual healing, he believes he has received a "gift from God" and is able to heal people, perform exorcisms, predict the future and break evil spells.

That is why he calls himself Juan de Dios — "John of God."

"It is God who does the healing. We are instruments of God," says de Dios, 51, a native Texan.

Members of the Dallas Hispanic community say perhaps several hundred men and women practice the ancient techniques of curanderismo, a complex folk tradition claiming the power of physical and spiritual healing.

Curanderismo combines elements of herbal medicine, Christian prayer and primitive Indian rituals. Yet, they are so involved in the life of the state's Spanish-speaking communities that even officials of the Texas Medical Association have recognized the role they play.

Dr. Ivan Kuhl, chairman of the association's Public Health Education Committee, said most curanderos shy away from administering serious medical treatment for fear of prosecution.

As community counselors "they serve a need in the Hispanic culture," Kuhl said.

The Rev. Justin Lucio, priest of St. James Catholic Church in the Oak Cliff section of Dallas, estimates that 70 to 80 percent of his mostly Hispanic congregation have sought the help of a curandero at some time in their lives.

"There are some segments of the Hispanic community that are isolated. Outside contact remains minimal, so you have the old ways being preserved, including curanderismo," said Estevan Flores, director of Mexican-American studies at Southern Methodist University.

Flores said he remembers his mother taking him to a curandera — a female faith healer — when he was young.

"We're basically a hybrid people of Spanish and Indian blood," said Domingo Garcia, a Mexican-American lawyer who lives and works in Dallas' Hispanic community. "Because of this mixed heritage, people can feel comfortable going to church on Sunday and then the next day going to a curandero."

With the Hispanic population in Dallas increasing, various stores sell accoutrements for the faith healing process. Popular items include votive candles, holy waters, spiritual incense and oils.

Store owner Francisco Diaz said there are no guarantees any of the holy oils or spiritual articles will work.

"I say yes, everything is good — but no guarantee," Diaz said.

Hays

Hays dropped out after his first year to marry and work.

He was drafted, joined the National Guard, served six months of active duty and six years in the reserves.

He later returned to Tech and got his bachelor's degree in education in 1965 with a minor in English. The young couple headed back to Levelland, where Hays took a job as an English teacher with the Levelland school district. At night he commuted to Lubbock to get his master's degree.

A year later he joined the staff of South Plains College in Levelland as director of student finances and physical education and English instructor.

"I did that one semester, then I was promoted to director of special services." He was in charge of adult education and the evening college program.

It was his first taste of college administration. He enjoyed the work.

Hays later moved to Midland College. "I stayed there and helped get that school off the ground. I hired all the faculty members and helped many of them write their course syllabi. I did a variety of jobs."

"After a year, it was obvious that I had to have my Ph.D. Jackie and I moved to College Station." At Texas A&M he completed his doctorate in higher education.

"I was 30 years old, I had my Ph.D., and I was ready for action," he said with a smile.

In August 1971 he came to Howard College. He was hired as an administrative dean and was promoted to vice president.

He later moved to Panola Junior College as president, but returned to Howard College within two years when offered the presidency here.

Hays remembers, "I thought Howard College was the ugliest place. There were no plants and grassburrs and chuck holes were everywhere. The grounds were not well cared for."

His top priorities were improving the grounds and upgrading the instructor's salary scale.

Looking back now he can name several projects that were most important to him.

"At the top of the list is the SouthWest Collegiate Institute for the Deaf," he said. "Few presidents have ever had the opportunity to be involved in something that has that kind of effect in someone's life."

One of the most trying problems of his career was "the closure of Webb Air Force Base. Howard College lost 27 percent of its enrollment. That was a real hard time for us, but we were able to come through it with as little trauma as possible."

He is proud of the landscape improvement at Howard College made with "no tax money. We raised private funds, close to $1 million," for landscaping.

Other highlights of his administration include the addition of the Dorothy Garrett Coliseum and a new industrial building; enlarging the district automotive fleet and strengthening the maintenance departments; expanding the district associate degree in nursing program to Lamesa, Snyder, San Angelo and Del Rio campuses; and implementing a new baseball program.

"We've seen our athletic programs revived. Our baseball team competed in state competitions, our rodeo team went to national competition and our basketball team missed national competition by one point."

"We've been able to give decent raises" to faculty members. In answer to rumors that the district has run dangerously low on reserves, Hays answered, "the district 'is not' in financial straits...We've maintained healthy reserves."

Hays is also proud of the Presidential Classics, a new flag corps, the revitalization of the agriculture program and the drama program.

Hays is quick to add, "All the good things are not because of Charles Hays. We have a good, strong board, community, faculty, staff and students."

Hays is interrupted by an employee asking him if he can help in the store during the lunch hour. He agrees, then explains, "I bought this business 34 years ago, thinking...I could run the college and my business. I found I couldn't do both."

Hays said, "I had an obligation to the college. I could not in my own conscience put the district in second place. I let my business coast. It won't work that way."

Hays found himself facing a decision. He chose to leave the district.

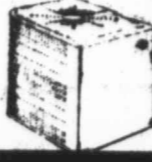

"I think I've proven to myself I can be an effective college administrator. I haven't proven to myself I'm an effective manager of a business. It's a new challenge, and one we'll approach with vigor."

But Hays has not abandoned the HCJCD. "I've been appointed to the Foundation Board," he said. "I feel a big part of me is in the district, and I want to help anyway I can."

Thursday Notes

By BILLY NABOURS
Sports Editor

During the annual washer tournament sponsored by Big Spring's ALSA Car Club, Jimmy Yanez and Raul Hernandez brought Big Spring the third place trophy. Odessa claimed first place while second went to a team from Midland in the event held last weekend at Comanche Trail Park.

Howard County continues to make itself known in shooting circles around the state — namely the State Shoot held recently in San Antonio.

Howard County's delegation to the state affair, held Aug. 9-11, brought back 40 trophies ranging from third to first (no shooter finished below third for Howard County) place.

Senior Division trap shooters, Dean and Darrell Hodnett, Shon Parker, Greg Parrish, and Todd McKinney captured first place in that division's five-man team competition. The five also took high-overall honors in the same division.

Shane Kemper won the sportsmanship award.

Other shooters making the trip to state included: Greg Newton, Todd Farris, R.C. Thomas, Kerry Fryar, Scott Farris, Brandon Riddle, Brent Ainsworth, Darrell Spears, Klint Kemper, Leslie Fryar and Amanda Anderson.

In another youth related activity, the Howard County Youth Horseman Club held a competition recently where Lee Rebeck of Big Spring was the adult high point winner.

Other first places going to area horsemen included: Christy Bennett of Big Spring aboard Buttercup in the shetland division.

Rebeck on Plaudit Skip-A-Bee in 1983 Fillies competition and riding Mr. Straw Quest in the Open Trail Class and again in OpenWestern Riding.

Colorado City's Sue Guelker in 1982 mares riding Sporty Ruff; first in 1981 mares aboard Declared Good. She also claimed reserve champion mare honors aboard Declared Good and won the open showmanship award riding Andy's Boogie Man.

Roy Stice of Colorado City on T-Representative during 1982, 1983 gelding competition and again riding T-Representative in taking reserve gelding honors.

Pat Bennett of Big Spring atop Dusty in action for 1981 geldings.

Coahoma had a triple winner when Colleen Fowler rode Karmel Candy to a win in the 14-and-over age group youth showmanship, again in Youth Poles and in 14-and over Youth Barrels.

In Youth Trail Class demonstration, Denya Brewer of Big Spring rode to first place on Dunny Walls.

King O'Roan carried Dana Richman of Big Spring to high honors in Open Reining.

Stanton's Kerri Kirby topped the field in 13-and under Youth Barrels and also in Open Barrels while riding Tiny Man.

Summer fishing is still pretty good despite lower and lower water levels at area lakes.

One of the catches made during the week at Lake Thomas was by Jerry Metcalf of Big Spring. Metcalf brought in a 26-pound yellow cat to top two others brought in during the same period.

Wacey Cathey is still riding high among the bull riders on the PRCA circuit.

As of Aug. 13, Big Spring's bull rider had earned over $30,000 — good for 11th place among the PRCA's top 20 and just behind the "Bronx Cowboy," Bobby Del Vecchio. Don Gay of Mesquite is continuing to wow folks with almost $50,000.

HIS SEASON HIGH — Nolan Ryan, Houston Astros righthander, fires a pitch towards a Chicago Cubs batter at Wrigley Field in Chicago Wednesday where he struck out a season-high 12 batters. The Cubs went down in defeat on five hits, 8-3, with seven Astros runs coming in the second inning.

Friday scrimmages slated

and
STEVE BELVIN

The remaining sub-5A teams in the Howard County area will see how well they have learned the ropes during two weeks of practice when they lineup in Friday scrimmages.

Klondike and Coahoma will scrimmage Smyer and McCamey respectively tonight. In game-simulated action set for Friday:

STANTON is at COLORADO CITY where coach Dale Ruth's Buffaloes will test its running game against Colorado City's already vaunted passing attack as both teams get a chance to hit on somebody other than their teammates.

Both teams have had over a week in pads with Colorado City mentor Tom Ramsey reporting no injuries for his troops. Ruth reports his squad is also physically fit.

Show time is 6 p.m. with the junior varsities starting off the action.

WHITHARRAL is at BORDEN COUNTY in a six man skirmish and Coyote head coach Doug Frisbee said his team will get a good test against the state's tenth ranked team.

Frisbee said, "workouts have been going pretty good. The kids have been hitting real well. We've got six positions and at least 10 kids who have come to the front and are battling for a spot." One of those is 5-10, 205 defensive end Manuel Zapata who has currently displaced one of last year's starters and all-district picks for Borden County.

Except for a few assorted bumps and bruises, Frisbee has pronounced his team physically fit for the scrimmage that starts at 6 p.m.

ROBERT LEE is at SANDS and Mustangs head coach Jim White echoes Frisbee's sentiments by saying, "We've been having some good practices." Jim White added that his team is ready for the chance to go against someone other than teammates.

"We've had a few groin strains, but nothing major. We've been keeping everyone healthy," said White.

Scrimmage action will start at 6:30 p.m.

STERLING CITY is at FORSAN where the Buffaloes will be scrimmaging without a vital cog in their offense when hitting commences at 6 p.m.

Forsan's All-District running back Mitch Hays will miss the contest with a broken jaw. Hays' head coach Jan East said other than Hays' injury the squad is in good shape. "We have been having some pretty good practices," said East. "We should be able to get Mitch back in about four weeks."

RANKIN will be in GARDEN CITY at 6 p.m. as Bearkat boss Tony Stricklin sizes up his first group at the school.

Stricklin said, "So far our attitudes have been great. We will be competitive because the kids have that attitude." The Bearkats will test their wing-T attack against Rankin's 27-defense and counter with a 52-monster against Rankin's version of the wing.

Two Bearkats, wide receiver Doug Jost and wingback Trey Wiley, will be out with a hyperextended knee and pulled hamstring respectively. Both are expected back in time for Garden City's next scrimmage slated for Sterling City next week.

Stricklin did get some good news though with the return of all-star guard and linebacker Larry Lopez. "The key to our success will be keeping the kids from coming down with any serious injuries," said

Stricklin.

WELLMAN invades GRADY at 6:30 p.m. for another six man scrimmage and Grady's new coach Currie McWilliams said, "Some kids are looking better and some are not."

McWilliams did say, however that the Wildcats have picked up his ideas and football philosophies quickly and that has left more time for learning other aspects.

One thing Grady fans won't see is the spread formation. "We won't run it (the spread). We'll probably go more with a slot, split-T, the wing or I-formation," said McWilliams. The new Wildcat boss also indicated he will not hesitate to "throw the ball, but we won't live and die by the pass."

Defensively, Grady will work on it 2-3 or 2-2 zone against Wellman's single wing lineup.

Luis Gonzales is the only doubtful Wildcat for the scrimmage due to a groin pull. Wade Miller, at 5-10, 135 is one of the standouts according to McWilliams and will see action at both a runningback slot and linebacker.

Price gunning for WSG win

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Nick Price still pinches himself over winning the World Series of Golf in his first attempt.

"This tournament has made my career. In this game, there are no guarantees. But now I have a 10-year exemption. It has opened a lot of doors. I can play around the world," the 27-year-old South African said.

Price, the defending champion, led a field of 42 international players into the first round today of the $700,000 NEC World Series at Firestone Country Club.

Price came here a year ago just trying to make a good showing — to prove to tournament sponsors that he belonged in the field.

"I wanted to show the people here that we had good quality players in South Africa," he said. "I did that. Hopefully, we have secured our invitation here."

Price admitted he was confused last year. "I didn't have a feel for America," he said. "This year I feel so much more relaxed, more comfortable."

He still has a problem dealing with the huge crowds that attend U.S. tournaments.

"We'll have 15,000 to 20,000 people in a week for a tournament in Europe. You get that in one day here. It takes time to adjust," he said.

Still, he led wire-to-wire in 1983, assembling a 72-hole total of 270 that beat five-time Series winner Jack Nicklaus by four strokes.

Can Price duplicate that upset in the race for the first prize of $126,000?

"I think so," he said after a nine-hole tuneup Wednesday before rain swept the 7,173-yard Firestone South course. "It's the kind of course I feel I can win on. I've built up a little bit of confidence."

Price believes his junior career on a Rhodesian course laid the foundation for his Firestone showing. "I grew up a course that was 7,300 yards long. There was a premium on driving, almost identical to Firestone. I've always seemed to play the long courses better than the easy ones," he said.

The best in the sport, with few exceptions, had gathered for the 23rd Series. The most notable absentees were U.S. Open champion Fuzzy Zoeller, out with a back injury; U.S. Amateur winner Jay Sigel; British Amateur titleholder Jose Maria Olazabal of Spain; West Germany's Bernhard Langer and Tommy Nakajima of Japan.

Smithson Valley griddier dies

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A 17-year-old high school student who collapsed during a football workout died late Tuesday of a ruptured aneurysm, doctors said.

An autopsy was scheduled for Wednesday on Smithson Valley High School student James Worthey Jr., but football coach Stan Irvine said his death did not appear to be football-related.

Irvine said Tuesday that Northeast Baptist Hospital doctors and family members told him it was a "deep imbedded aneurysm that might not have been detected with a brain scan."

Two brain scans Saturday showed no brain waves. Worthey was kept alive on life support devices.

Irvine said doctors have assured him the aneurysm could have ruptured anytime. "It was a non-football related injury," he said. Worthey had played football for six years in the Comal School District. He had received a clean bill of health after a physical examination before the start of practice last week.

USFL owners figure time is right for fall

CHICAGO (AP) — United States Football League owners voted Wednesday to conduct one final season of spring football in 1985, but will shift to the fall in 1986 in direct competition with the older, more established National Football League, USFL Commissioner Chet Simmons said.

"I think they (the NFL) really hoped we'd stay in the spring and slowly drip away," said Simmons. The decision, he added, reflected a great "amount of belief in this product, a belief in this league."

After the announcement, Myles Tanenbaum, owner of the league-champion Philadelphia Stars, said he would move his franchise to Baltimore in 1986 rather than compete against the NFL's Eagles and baseball's Philadelphia Phillies for use of Veterans Stadium.

"Personally, I'm distressed to say goodbye to the fans who gave their hearts to this team," said Tanenbaum one of six of the original 12 USFL owners. "It's the wrong thing to do."

Tanenbaum said he would retain ownership of the team, adding he already had conducted "extensive discussions" with Baltimore city officials about a move. The NFL Colts, who played in Baltimore for 30 years, moved to Indianapolis this spring.

Philadelphia was one of several cities where scheduling fall games conflicts with an NFL or professional baseball team, presenting clear problems of survival to USFL franchises.

Donald Trump, owner of the New Jersey Generals and one of the league's strongest advocates of a fall season, conceded the USFL likely will shrink, "possibly to 14 teams in the very near future."

Three USFL teams — Los Angeles, Washington and Chicago — ran into serious financial problems last season and several others are said to be facing a cash crunch.

The USFL began in 1983 with 12 teams and expanded to 18 for 1984. But failing franchises have prompted rumors of mergers, the most prominent being the consolidation of the Oklahoma and Oakland franchises.

Also left in doubt after Wednesday's announcement was the fate of the league's television deal with ABC. That network carried USFL games in both of the league's first two seasons, but retains broadcast rights only from the months of January through July.

A $15 million package with that network already is in place for 1985.

Chief defends Dallas police

DALLAS (AP) — In an effort to defend the Dallas Police Department against verbal attacks from minority groups over police shootings, Police Chief Billy Prince has released statistics showing that members of minority groups are to blame for shooting 11 on-duty police officers since 1979.

A total of 13 police officers have been shot in the last five years, Prince said Tuesday.

Three of the 13 were killed. One was killed in 1981 by an Anglo and two were killed in 1983 by Hispanics, according to a spokesman for the police department.

"We've avoided trying to bring any kind of racial statistics into this, but the only way we can defend ourselves is to point this out," Prince said.

Prince's announcement came in the wake of a meeting by minority leaders Tuesday to criticize the police department.

Dallas police have fatally shot 10 people this year. Five were Hispanic and four were black.

"The perception within the minority communities is that we have less to fear from the criminal element in the streets than we do from the criminal element within the Dallas Police Department," said Adelfa Callejo, organizer of a coalition of Hispanic groups protesting police shootings.

"(City officials) are very image-conscious," said Domingo Garcia, a member of the League of United Latin American Citizens and president of a local Hispanic organization, "and they want to make it seem that even in Dallas there is justice. But we're not going to let this get by us."

"Dallas is a safe city," he said, "but you have to be a little concerned if you're brown or black."

On Monday, Prince fired Sgt. Jack Ross for violating the department's policy on deadly force and code of conduct when he shot an unarmed man who was fleeing the scene of an attempted robbery on Saturday.

"The atmosphere in the department is one of concern ... and the feedback I get from officers indicates concern and compassion and a strong desire to get some support from the leadership that attacks us," Prince said.

Ross's lawyer maintains the officer's action was justified and said he expected to file an appeal of the officer's dismissal.

Fire torches Schoolbook Depository

DALLAS (AP) — A five-alarm fire erupted early today in the former Texas Schoolbook Depository Building from which Lee Harvey Oswald allegedly fired the shots that killed President John F. Kennedy.

The fire, first reported at 3 a.m. and declared extinguished at 4:54 a.m., began in the basement and spread to the first and second floors, sending smoke throughout the building, Fire Chief Dodd Miller said.

The Warren Commission, which investigated the assassination, concluded that Oswald fired the fatal shots from a sixth floor window of the seven-story, brick building on Nov. 22, 1963.

Lindalyn Adams, president of a historical foundation that plans to put an exhibit on the sixth floor, said she had not been to the basement in the past couple of years, but she believed it contained some newspapers from the time of the assassination, books about Kennedy, and panels from a Hertz rental-car sign that was atop the building at the time of the assassination.

Miller said it was his understanding that materials in the basement could be reproduced. Fire Marshal Jim Badgett said he was told there had been reprints of Kennedy assassination photographs in the basement.

Badgett said heavy smoke made it difficult to determine the cause of the fire, but said that heat was intense in two areas of the building, suggesting that the fire's origin might be suspicious.

Miller, asked if arson was suspected, said, "Sure. We always suspect arson. We'll look for it."

Badgett estimated at $250,000, he said. No injuries were reported.

Houston must meet Rozier's demands

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Oilers would like to sign Mike Rozier, now under contract to a USFL team, but the running back will have to back off his current salary demands for that to happen, Oilers general manager Ladd Herzog says.

Herzog told the Houston Chronicle Wednesday his club plans to offer Rozier a contract in the range of those signed by the first two players selected in the 1984 draft, Irving Fryar and Dean Steinkuhler, Herzog said.

Fryar, Steinkuhler and Rozier played at Nebraska last year, when Rozier won the Heisman Trophy. But Rozier's agent, Art Wilkinson, said at a news conference in Pittsburgh that talk of his client leaving the Pittsburgh Maulers of the United States Football League is premature.

"There has been a tremendous amount of recent press about Mike Rozier leaving the Maulers," Wilkinson said. "The Oilers saw fit to make what amounts to an open proposal in the form of a press release, issued (Tuesday) at their training camp."

"To set the record straight, we have not discussed in any formal setting any contract proposal or engaged in active negotiations about Mike becoming an Oiler before his contract with the Maulers ends after the 1986 season," he said.

Wilkinson also said that if the Oilers are really determined to limit Rozier's salary to what Steinkuhler and Fryar make, "Mike Rozier most certainly will remain a member of the Pittsburgh Maulers."

Fryar signed a four-year, $3.1 million deal with the New England Patriots and Steinkuhler signed with the Oilers for $2.6 million over four years.

Wilkinson, is seeking a $5.5 million to $6 million deal. Rozier's current contract is worth about $3.1 million over three years.

"The thing they have to understand is that Fryar and Steinkuhler have set the precedent as to what the market value is for a high first-round draft choice in 1984," Herzog said. "Right now, Rozier's value has to be somewhere in the Fryar-Steinkuhler range, but he doesn't have as much value in 1984 as Fryar or Steinkuhler because he's missed so much time."

Rozier and Wilkinson were Herzog's guests at Saturday's Houston-New Orleans exhibition football game in the Astrodome.

Rozier, who had a disappointing rookie pro season with the Maulers, has two years remaining on a personal services contract with Maulers owner Edward DeBartolo Sr. Because of that, he is not subject to the USFL's waiver procedures.

Herzog said it would be important to sign Rozier soon in order for the former All-American to help the team this season.
