How's that? Daylight savings

Q. I remember a period when the clock remained on daylight savings time year round. When was that?

A. Congress put most of the nation on year-round daylight savings time Jan. 6, 1974, to Oct. 26, 1975. Another bill, signed in October of 1974, restored standard time from the last Sunday in October to the last Sunday in February. At the end of 1975, Congress failed to renew this bill.

Remember that we "fall back" one hour at 2 a.m. Sunday.

Gramm cites Reagan as ally

By KEELY COGHLAN
Staff Writer

U.S. Senate candidate Phil Gramm Rep. Phil Gramm, R-College Station, told Big Spring voters Thursday he would be an effective senator because he had access to the president and his philosophy better matched theirs.

"I believe the people of Big Spring want to send someone to work with Ronald Reagan, someone who has access to the administration," the Republican U.S. Representative from College Station said.

Gramm is locked in a bitter battle with state Sen. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin, for the U.S. Senate seat being vacated by Republican Sen. John Tower.

A former "boll weevil" Democrat who ran as a Republican in a special election after he was stripped of his House Budget Committee position for relaying information from the Democrats to the Reagan Administration, Gramm said he could deliver that access.

"I have worked with the president on a daily basis for the last four years. When I knock on that door, someone answers it," he said. "My opponent could knock on Reagan's door and his knuckles would get bloody. And no one would answer that door."

Questioned about his support among the Hispanic and minority communities, Gramm said he "has not (polled) below 30 percent in the statewide Hispanic vote in almost a month. I'm going to do better than any Republican candidate has ever done."

Referring to an ABC poll taken three weeks ago, Gramm said he is leading Doggett by a 12 to 14 percent margin. "But I don't expect to win by that margin. I expect it to be a lot closer," he said.

"Obviously, everybody with an axe to grind and everybody who wants to go back to the Mondale-Carter policies" will vote, Gramm said. But the key to the election, he said, will be the turnout, which he said would be "the largest ever."

Asked why he hung up on Doggett in a phone conversation after a talk show in Victoria in which Gramm was a guest, Gramm said he hung up because Doggett "wouldn't get off the script."

According to Gramm, Doggett called him up with a proposal that both candidates stop running negative, mud-slinging campaigns — but the offer was contingent on another debate.

He then found out Doggett had taped the conversation — "it's not illegal, but it's unethical," Gramm said — and released it to the media.

"This is the same Lloyd Doggett who voted against a major anti-drug bill that authorized the use of court-approved wiretaps on kingpin drug pushers," Gramm said. "He's more interested in his political career than protecting our children."

Gramm also said he supported a national water plan that would develop cooperation between the federal agencies such as the Army Corps of Engineers and states.

"The people in Washington and East Texas don't recognize our nation has a water problem," Gramm said. "Even the people in East Texas will ultimately have water problems."

Discussing the Simpson-Mazzoli immigration bill, Gramm said he opposed it because "I am opposed to blanket amnesty," which he said Doggett favored.

"It would make 4.5 million people eligible for public welfare. They would be competing with citizens for jobs," Gramm said. "We need to expand trade with Mexico, not people. We need to change the welfare laws to provide incentive to (U.S. citizens to) take jobs that go untaken."

Federal deficit tops $175.3 billion

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government posted the second worst deficit in history in 1984, outspending income by $175.3 billion. While the Reagan administration predicts a slight improvement for 1985, many private economists expect the tide of red ink will only get higher.

The 1984 deficit, released Thursday by the Treasury Department, compared to the record $195.4 billion run up in 1983 and $110.6 billion in 1982.

All three deficit totals surpassed the old deficit high of $66.4 billion set in 1976 during the Ford administration.

Democratic presidential candidate Walter F. Mondale has tried to make an issue of the huge deficits under President Reagan, charging that the president is mortgaging the country's future and inviting another recession by driving interest rates higher through massive government borrowing.

Reagan, who had promised in 1980 to balance the budget by 1983, has countered that Mondale's only answer to the flood of red ink is to raise taxes. The president says that economic growth along with further trimming of government programs is all that is needed to reduce the deficits.

The administration, in its most recent forecast, predicted the deficit for 1985 would be $174.2 billion with that figure dropping to $161.7 billion by 1989.

However, the non-partisan Congressional Budget Office has projected the 1985 deficit will be $178 billion and will swell to $263 billion by 1989.

A recent survey by the National Association of Business Economists was even more pessimistic in the near future, predicting the 1985 deficit would total $180 billion.

But Allen Sinai, chief economist for Shearson Lehman-American Express, said Thursday he saw a glimmer of hope in recent interest rate declines, predicting they could trim the 1985 deficit by around $10 billion by reducing the government's huge borrowing costs.

Indeed, the cost of borrowing money is the fastest growing segment of the budget — increasing almost 20 percent in 1984, compared to a 5.8 percent growth in all government spending.

Interest payments on the national debt — which now totals $1.6 trillion — came to $153.8 billion in 1984, making debt servicing the third largest government spending category.

The final deficit for the fiscal year which ended Sept. 30 was only $1 billion higher than a projection made by the administration in August. However, it was $8.4 billion lower than the figure the administration was using in February. The administration credited the improvement to more robust economic growth in the first half of the year coupled with lower than expected inflation.

The final report showed that government revenues totaled $666.4 billion in 1984, up 10.9 percent from 1983. Government spending totaled $841.8 billion, up 5.8 percent from 1983.

It marked the 43rd year out of the last 50 in which the government has operated in the red. The last surplus was posted in 1969.

The deficit is even worse when off-budget programs such as federal loan guarantees are taken into account. With all government spending measured, the deficit for 1984 totaled $185.3 billion, compared with $207.7 billion in 1983.

Mondale has come up with a plan

Major banks lower prime lending rate

NEW YORK (AP) — The nation's major banks today began lowering their prime lending rates to 12 percent today.

Morgan Guaranty Trust Co., the nation's fifth largest bank, led the move, lowering its rate from 12.5 percent, effective Monday. Ninth-ranked Bankers Trust Co. immediately followed, dropping from 12.25 percent, effective immediately.

had cut their prime lending rates by a quarter point to 12.5 percent last week, but Bankers Trust had adopted the 12.25 percent rate.

The 12.75 percent rate had been set in September.

The prime rate is the base upon which banks compute interest charges on short-term business loans. The most credit-worthy customers often borrow at below the prime rate. Small businesses typically are charged more than the prime rate.

The prime rate doesn't directly affect the price of consumer loans but it is an indicator of the direction of interest rates charged generally.

At the start of the year, the prime rate stood at 11 percent. It climbed to 13 percent in June.

The prime rate's all-time high was 21.5 percent, set in December of 1980.

Meanwhile, a key short-term interest rate, the federal funds rate, today was trading at 9.5 percent, the same as Thursday, and well below the double-digit levels that prevailed for most of the previous four months.

Analysts watch the federal funds rate in determining the banks' cost of funds. It is what banks charge each other for overnight loans of excess reserves.

TWISTED METAL — Big Spring Police Sgt. Troy Hogue bends over a wrecked motorcycle on the Gregg St. bridge Thursday afternoon, while patrolman Joe Russell watches. The motorcycle driver, Ronnie Ray Rayos, 24, of 200 N.E. Seventh remains in critical condition at Medical Center Hospital in Odessa.

Man seriously injured in collision

A 24-year-old Big Spring man fractured his skull when his motorcycle collided with a car Thursday afternoon at the intersection of Gregg and W. First Streets, near the south end of the viaduct.

Ronnie Ray Rayos of 200 N.E. Seventh remains in critical condition in the intensive care unit of Medical Center Hospital in Odessa, according to a hospital spokesman.

Rayos was transferred to the Odessa hospital from Malone-Hogan Hospital in Big Spring where he was initially taken by Shaffer Ambulance after the accident, a Malone-Hogan spokesman said.

The Malone-Hogan spokesman said Rayos had suffered a fractured skull in the accident.

The driver of the car with which Rayos collided, Delores Ornelas Garcia, was uninjured, according to police reports.

According to police, both Rayos and Garcia were traveling south on Gregg Street coming over the bridge when the accident occurred.

Garcia was slowing to turn east on W. First Street, and Rayos was driving his 1980 Honda motorcycle behind her 1977 Monte Carlo, the report stated.

According to the report, Rayos was following too closely and "traveling at a high rate of speed" when Garcia was slowing for the turn. His motorcycle then collided with the right rear of the car.

Police Lt. Jerry Edwards said investigators were unsure whether Rayos was wearing his helmet at the time of the accident. The helmet was found 100 feet away from Rayos.

Other items, like one of Rayos' gloves, were strewn along the pavement from the force of the impact.

Rains drenching Texas

By The Associated Press

Flash flood watches covered a vast area of the eastern half of Texas, covering areas from the Red River to South Texas as heavy rains continued to drench much of the state.

Flooding remained at Houston early today where many people were forced from their homes, numerous roads were closed because of high water and a woman was missing and presumed to have drowned following a traffic accident. More than nine inches of rain fell at Houston Thursday.

Drizzle, rain and thundershowers were scattered early today across southern and central portions of Texas and isolated thundershowers are being reported in Northeast Texas.

Fog, some of it described as dense, reduced visibilities over much of North Central Texas and East Texas. Most of the state has a cloud cover.

A flash flood warning was issued early today for Red River and northern Franklin counties in North Texas. The fire department at Bogata reported flash flooding over Farm Road 909 near Clarksville and over portions of Texas 37 and Texas 69.

A flash flood watch was in effect for the eastern two-thirds of North Texas through tonight. The area of the flash flood watch was east of a line from the Red River northeast of Gainesville to Weatherford and to Gadsdenville. The watch area did not include the Dallas-Fort Worth area. Forecasters warned that a heavy upper level storm is expected to pass over the area late today and tonight and heavy rains could cause flash flooding.

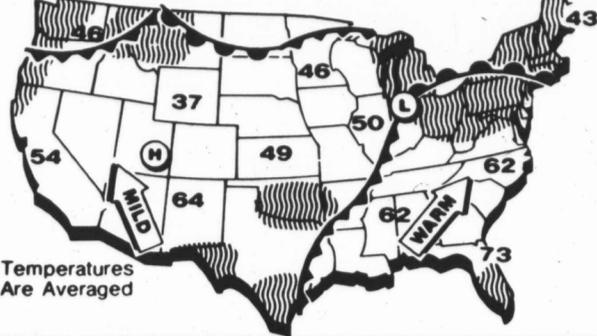

A flash flood watch issued Thursday for the Hill Country, South Central Texas and portions of Southeast Texas was extended through today. The area was bounded by a line from Huntsville to Houston to Palacios to Cotulla to Junction and back to Huntsville. It included the cities of Houston, Bryan-College Station, Victoria, Austin and San Antonio. Forecasters warned the possibility of four inches of rain in portions of that watch area.

Early morning temperatures were mostly in the 50s, ranging from the upper 40s in far West Texas to the 70s along the lower Texas coast and deep South Texas. Extremes ranged from 48 at El Paso to 74 at Brownsville.

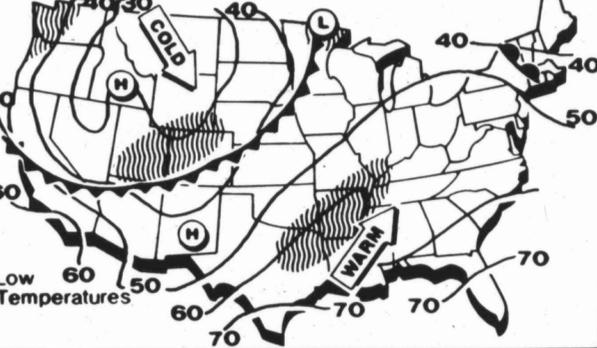

Other temperatures around the state included 50 at Amarillo, 57 at Wichita Falls, 53 at Dallas-Fort Worth, 61 at Waco, 62 at Austin, 73 at Corpus Christi, 70 at Houston, 61 at Abilene, 53 at San Angelo, 49 at Lubbock and 51 at Midland.

WEST TEXAS — Rain and drizzle and a few thundershowers likely through tonight. Becoming partly cloudy and warmer Saturday. Lows tonight low 40s mountains and Panhandle to mid 50s extreme south. Highs Saturday 60 mountains to 68 Panhandle to 78 Big Bend.

Gramm

"I do not accept the fact that we can't stop the flood of illegal aliens," Gramm said.

On social security, Gramm said television ads by Doggett depicting him as wanting to cut Social Security were cited as unethical by Advertising Age magazine.

Contrary to the image portrayed by the ad, Gramm said he helped author the proposal that "returned Social Security to the black."

"My perspective is a little different on Social Security. My opponent is a millionaire," Gramm said. Doggett was born to rich parents, Gramm said.

"But my mama worked 39 years as a practical nurse carrying dependents so she can make $333 a month in Social Security. I'm never going to let them take that away from her," Gramm said.

Gramm denied a Doggett charge that Gramm was "in the pocket" of the nuclear power industry because of Gramm's receipt of large campaign contributions from the special interest group.

Gramm said his workers had counted the contributions from employees of all utility companies

— phone, electric, water, natural gas and nuclear — and found that they comprised less than 1 percent of all his campaign contributions. Gramm said. He also said he did not accept corporate campaign contributions.

And, contrary to Doggett's statement last week to a Stanton audience, Gramm said he authored a clause in the bill that gave Texas a veto power on whether a national nuclear waste site would be placed in the state.

That bill, Gramm said, required the agency to take into account local opposition to becoming a site, unlike the state bill Doggett co-authored. According to Gramm, the state bill — authored by Rep. Larry Don Shaw, D-Big Spring — does not give counties authority to prevent dumps from being placed in their jurisdiction.

"It (the state law) provides no protection whatsoever. It's a case in point where my opponent didn't do his job. South Texas faces a real danger," Gramm said. "The bill I helped write guaranteed local citizens and the state would have a veto."

Deficit

he says will trim the deficit by two-thirds by 1989 through a combination of raising taxes and cutting spending.

Mondale has said the deficit is not only driving interest rates higher but also giving the country its worst foreign trade deficit in history. Mondale and many private economists link high interest rates to the strong value of the dollar, which hurts exporters including farmers while opening the country to a flood of cheaper foreign goods.

Mondale has challenged Reagan to come up with his own deficit reduction plan, charging that Reagan has a secret plan to raise taxes which will be revealed after the election. Reagan has denied that charge and said he will raise taxes only as a "last resort."

The Treasury Department provided these details on spending and revenue for 1984:

—Government revenues included $296 billion in individual income taxes, up 2.4 percent from 1983; $212.2 billion in Social Security taxes on workers and employers, up 14 percent from last year; and $56.9 billion in corporate income taxes, up 54 percent from last year.

—Government paid out $292.2 billion through the Department of Health and Human Services, a 5.7 percent increase from 1983. The department, which administers the Social Security, Medicare and various welfare programs, is the biggest spending program, followed by the military and then interest on the debt. Military outlays totaled $220.8 billion, up 7.7 percent from 1983. The $153.8 billion spent on interest compared to payments in 1983 of $128.8 billion.

HC enrollment drops; college figures down

Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Texas college and university enrollments this fall showed the smallest increase in almost 20 years, with about half the schools revealing a decline, state officials say.

The Howard County Junior College District was in step with that trend, posting a 40-student loss. According to preliminary figures, the district's enrollment fell from the fall 1983 total of 1,301 to 1,261 in fall 1984. That is a 3.07 percent drop.

A total of 777,013 students enrolled in the state's 139 public and private institutions of higher education, according to preliminary fall figures. This represents an increase of 5,688 students over fall 1983, or less than 1 percent.

Some 66 of the 139 Texas public and private higher education institutions showed declines.

The preliminary enrollment figures are based on twelfth class day reports submitted by the schools to the Coordinating Board, Texas College and University System.

Federal officials expect nationwide college enrollment to dip slightly. After a period of rapid growth, community college enrollment in particular is expected to begin declining or leveling off in most states.

Absentee voting underway at Howard Co. Clerk's office

If necessary, you can vote on Saturday.

The Howard County Clerk's office will be open from 2 to 8 p.m. in the Howard County Courthouse for absentee voters.

You must be prepared however to have a reason for not being able to vote on Nov. 6.

Howard County Clerk Margaret Ray said voters will be required to fill out an application for an absentee ballot if they vote by personal appearance.

The application lists seven different reasons for absenteeism. Those reasons are: expected absence, 65 years of age or older, religious belief, sickness or physical disability, election clerk or poll watcher, confinement in jail and administrator of elections.

Of the 658 Howard County absentee ballots mailed out, 195 had been returned as of Friday morning.

"We have a lot of students and people in the military," Mrs. Ray said. 195 people have voted by personal appearance as of Friday morning.

Mrs. Ray said the "over 65" and "physically not able" have been the most numerous reasons among the personal appearance voters so far.

Absentee voters who vote by appearance must present their voter registration card.

"It helps a lot if they (voters) have a blue card," Mrs. Ray said.

If voters have lost or mislaid their registration card (blue card), they will be required to sign and swear on an affidavit. The county clerk's office will check the registered voters list for the voter's certificate number.

Mrs. Ray said the county office has not required written proof from a certified physician for a sickness or physical disability reason.

"It says on the application that any false information given is a crime, so we're trusting the information given," said Mrs. Ray.

Doggett schedules local stop

U.S. Senate hopeful Lloyd Doggett, a 10-year state senator from Austin, will speak at a Monday luncheon at Alberto's Crystal Cafe in Big Spring, less than a week before the election in the hotly contested race.

Doggett, the Democratic nominee, is opposed by Rep. Phil Gramm, R-College Station, who was in town Thursday afternoon.

The lunch will begin at noon, and Doggett is scheduled to begin speaking at 12:30 p.m.

The lunch will be a "pay-for-your-own" affair, said Kay Burns, a Democratic Club official. Doggett is also seeking donations, Mrs. Burns said, but everyone is invited to hear the candidate speak.

Ag officer seeks state aid

ORLANDO, Fla. — Agriculture Commissioner Doyle Conner says he will ask the Legislature to pay the state's share for seven canker-infested citrus nurseries and producers who were forced to burn seedlings.

U.S. Agriculture Secretary John Block on Thursday widened an "extraordinary emergency" declaration to include the citrus producers that bought seedlings at the seven infested nurseries. Burning is the only way to stop canker.

U.S. Sen. Paula Hawkins, R-Fla., said Block told her he hoped the cost of destroying the estimated 7 million seedlings would be no more than $10 million, split 50-50 by the state and federal governments.

'Quake rocks California

LOS OLIVOS, Calif. — A moderate earthquake rocked a 50-mile area from Santa Maria to Santa Barbara, shattered more than 150 bottles at a winery and knocked a woman from bed, but no injuries were reported, authorities said.

The 3:36 a.m. quake Thursday also was felt at President Reagan's ranch about 10 miles from here, said assistant foreman Karl Mull, adding, "I slept through it. The Secret Service notified me."

The quake measured 4.7 on the Richter scale, a measure of ground motion recorded on seismographs.

Commander set for liftoff

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — The commander of space shuttle Discovery's second journey says officials are "looking forward to a liftoff" Nov. 7 after a successful rehearsal of the countdown.

"We had a superb countdown test," mission commander Rick Hauck said Thursday. Other members of the crew are pilot David Walker and specialist Dr. Anna Fisher, Joseph Allen and Dale Gardner.

Yale pupils sue university

NEW HAVEN, Conn. — Yale students are claiming a $10 million lawsuit that the university has failed to deliver services for which they have paid since white-collar workers went on strike month ago.

Yale and its officers have "breached their agreement ... been unjustly enriched ... destroyed the atmosphere of collegiality and intellectual inquiry ... and have engaged in unfair trade practices," the suit said.

Papal plot

7 indicted in pope's failed assassination plot

ROME (AP) — A judge today indicted three Bulgarians and four Turks on charges of complicity in the attempted assassination of Pope John Paul II in 1981, and charged for the first time that a second gunman, who is still at large, also shot the pope.

"We must believe without question that there was an international plot to kill the pope," Judge Ilario Martella said after submitting to court officials the results of a three-year investigation into the case.

Martella also issued a new indictment against jailed assailant Mehmet Ali Agca. Agca, who is serving a life sentence for shooting and wounding the pope in St. Peter's Square on May 13, 1981, was indicted today on a charge of illegally bringing a pistol into Italy.

However, Martella said Oral Celik, a suspected member of a right-wing Turkish terrorist group, fired one of three shots that wounded John Paul.

Witnesses, including American tourists, said Celik was standing next to Agca in St. Peter's Square. The judge said the testimony, ballistics tests and a study of the trajectory of the shots clearly showed a bullet that hit the pope on the finger and arm was fired by Celik. The bullet was never found.

Celik is being sought by Italian police, and he was one of the seven people indicted by Martella today in a 1,243-page document turned over to court officials.

A prosecutor who reviewed Martella's evidence earlier this year told The Associated Press in June that he was convinced Bulgaria, possibly with Soviet aid, masterminded the assassination attempt to stop social unrest in the pope's native Poland.

When asked by a reporter whether the Soviet Union was behind the indicted Bulgarians, Martella said: "I have not addressed that issue. It was not part of my job."

Bulgaria denies the allegations, saying they are part of a plot by Western intelligence agencies to smear the Soviet bloc.

Martella said the Bulgarians indicted were Sergei Ivanov Antonov, 37, former Rome station manager of the Bulgarian state airline and the only one of the three held in Italy; Todor Aivazov, former cashier at the Bulgarian Embassy in Rome; and Maj. Zhelyo Kolev Vassilev, former aide to the military attache at the Bulgarian Embassy in Rome.

The Turks named in the indictment were Celik; Bekir Celenk, a reputed head of the Turkish Mafia who is in custody in Bulgaria; and Omer Bagci and Musa Sedar Celebi, both held in Italian prisons.

No trial date was set. Martella said the indictments were based mainly on circumstantial evidence and Agca's testimony.

FOZ DO IGUAQU, Brazil — Presidents Joao Figueirdo of Brazil and Alfredo Stroessner of Paraguay, surrounded by their top Cabinet ministers, formally opened the Itaipu Dam, the world's largest hydroelectric plant.

Two of the dam's planned 18 turbines now are generating power from this border point on the Parana River to Asuncion, the capital of Paraguay, 212 miles east, and Sao Paulo, Brazil's biggest city and main industrial center, 1,050 miles northwest.

Top party leads elections

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka — President Junius Jayewardene's United National Party today scored convincing victories over a divided opposition in two parliamentary by-elections which the opposition parties had hoped would show that the government was becoming unpopular.

The results gave the United National Party 19,744 votes in Minneriya to 6,250 for former Prime Minister Sirima Bandaranaike's Sri Lanka Freedom Party and 10,568 for the Sri Lanka People's Party. In Kundasal the UNP candidate polled 26,280 against a combined total of less than 10,000 votes for his two opponents.

Leftist leader voted out

LONDON — Tony Benn, leader of the extreme left wing of Britain's Labor Party, lost his bid to win a leadership spot among the opposition party's legislators in the House of Commons.

Another left-wing lawmaker, party chairman Eric Heffer, also was excluded when votes were tallied Thursday for the 15-member "shadow cabinet" for the new session of Parliament, which started Monday.

Workers stage walkout

PARIS — Public employees, dissatisfied with a 2 percent wage hike due next month, staged a one-day nationwide strike that affected transportation, gas, electricity, telephone and postal services throughout France.

Train service was reduced by as much as 75 percent Thursday and no planes took off from Paris' two major airports during the morning, officials said.

Officials witness six Iraqi POWs killed

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — Iranian guards killed six Iraqi prisoners of war and wounded at least 35 in a riot witnessed by Red Cross officials visiting a detention camp northeast of Tehran, according to Red Cross headquarters.

It was the first such incident documented during the 4-year-old Iran-Iraq war, and the statement issued Thursday by the International Committee of the Red Cross was a rare departure from its policy of strict confidentiality on reports about POW camps.

Earlier this year, the Red Cross accused Iran and Iraq of grave breaches of the Geneva conventions and of "flouting the fundamental principles" of humanitarian law.

That memorandum mentioned "serious accidents in some camps" in Iran and said "some of the Iraqi prisoners of war registered and visited on several occasions in the camps by Red Cross delegates have later been reported 'killed in action'."

Red Cross spokesman Jean-Jacques Kurtz said Iran had informed him of the casualties that occurred in the Oct. 10 riot.

He said the shootings were witnessed by three Red Cross representatives who were visiting the camp when the riot broke out. The next day, he said, the Red Cross representatives visited wounded prisoners in hospitals.

He said that no weapons were used by the rioting prisoners and that he had no estimate of the number of prisoners in the camp.

Kurtz said the rioting occurred during the Red Cross representatives' first visit to the camp, which he said was about 50 miles from Iran's border with the Soviet Union. "The visit was interrupted after the incident," he said.

The Red Cross spokesman said he did not know how many POWs were interviewed by the Red Cross representatives. Under the Geneva convention, such interviews must be conducted without witnesses.

The Red Cross communicated with both governments after the shootings. Kurtz did not say what the communications were, but said there had been no response. Iran had no official comment on the report.

Earlier, a report by the official Iraqi News Agency quoted Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz as saying Iranian guards "opened fire indiscriminately on Iraqi prisoners of war in the Korcan detention camp, killing some of them and injuring others."

The Iraqi News Agency reported from Baghdad that Aziz had written the secretary-general of the United Nations and leaders of other international organizations to inform them of the shootings.

When first asked for comment on the Iraqi report, Kurtz declined, citing the confidentiality of Red Cross reports. He acknowledged, however, that Red Cross representatives in Iran were encountering "some very serious difficulties."

About 30 minutes later, he called back to say he was authorized to release information on the incident at the POW camp.

Also Thursday, the Red Cross announced the repatriation earlier in the day of 72 wounded and sick Iraqi POWs. The prisoners were handed over to Red Cross representatives by Iranian officials at the airport in Ankara, Turkey.

A Red Cross communique said that "following this repatriation, the ICRC is waiting to see the Islamic Republic of Iran allow, in the near future, the repatriation of all the seriously sick or disabled Iraqi prisoners of war who have not yet been released."

Texas must cope with popularity

Texas is a dynamic state. The population numbers, and the level of enterprise prove it. But population growth is not without its problems, among them distribution of people and revenue needs. How Texas copes in the coming years with its new size will affect how it fares in opportunity and quality of life.

Census Bureau projections put Texas as the second most populous state in the nation by 1989, passing New York and second only to California. By 2000, nearly 8 percent of all Americans will be Texans. After the 1990 Census, Texas should gain 4 seats in the U.S. House of Representatives, for a total of 31.

Sun-belted and well-oiled, Texas traditionally has been the location of choice for many Americans, and especially in the last decade. In 10 years, 2.2 million people moved in. According to a report by the state comptroller's office, that growth is slowing, for two reasons: First, the decline of oil prices reduced the growth rate in that industry, lowering the number of new jobs being created. Second, the nation's baby-boomers — those born between 1947 and 1965 — have for the most part merged into the job market, and no longer are migrating to the state in search of jobs.

The comptroller's office reports that in the past decade, Texas created 180,000 jobs in the oil industry (up 2½ times from 1974), 200,000 jobs in manufacturing, and almost 1 million jobs in retail trade and service industries. Most who came were accommodated.

It would seem that the taxes paid by newcomers would keep pace with population growth, thus maintaining Texas' healthy economic climate. That isn't the case, though. Twenty percent of the state's revenue comes from taxes on oil and gas. That income isn't increased by rising population. It was oil and gas income, propelled upward by rising prices, that accounted for fat budget surpluses in Texas until early into the 1980s.

Falling oil prices coupled with rising income exacted a toll on state — and local — treasuries. This year, the first significant tax increase in recent memory came to pass. It may not be the only tax hike the state faces.

There is something intrinsically grating about paying higher taxes as a price for popularity. Yet if we fail to reckon with reality, to look ahead to ensure stability in this state, we will pay a much higher price in the future. The lesson of a bankrupt New York is a chilling microcosm of what can happen elsewhere. Our approach to the future should be with the eyes of Texas wide open.

It's Jimmy's fault

"Mr. President, I'm updating your biography for the final weeks of our campaign, and I just have a few questions to ask you, if you don't mind."

"Go right ahead."

"Okay, when you grew up you were quoted as saying your father was never a financial success, and while you didn't live on the other side of the tracks, you were in hearing distance of the train whistle. Can you explain this?"

"I would say it was all President Jimmy Carter's fault. You know his irresponsible fiscal policies brought on the 1929 stock market crash and the depression."

"Yes, sir. But you were a boy before the stock market crash and the depression."

"That's correct, but Carter got us into World War I, and when the boys came home there was inflation and high interest rates that led to the crash and the depression."

"Let's go on. You decided to go to Eureka College in Illinois. Why Eureka?"

"I really wanted to attend the University of Illinois. But there was this admissions officer who turned me down."

"Can you remember his name?"

"Wait a minute, it will come to me. Now I've got it. His name was Carter... J. Carter."

"So you went to Eureka, played on the football team and majored in dramatics."

"I would have made all American, except one guy on the committee voted against me."

"Do you recall who it was?"

"I don't remember his name, but I think he was a peanut farmer from Georgia. He never voted for any player above the Mason Dixon line."

"You were a very good actor in school and your biggest desire was to go into the theater. Why didn't you?"

"It was pretty hard to break into the business then because all the theaters in the Midwest were controlled by the Carter Brothers. I became a radio sports announcer instead. I was good at it but I really wanted to become a movie star. So I went to Hollywood. I applied at one studio for a job, but a casting director, a guy named Carter, told me I had no talent. Fortunately the Warner Brothers saw it another way and hired me for $200 a week."

"Now let's go on to the war years. You spent all of it in the Air Force in Hollywood making films."

"I tried desperately to get assigned overseas. But I had a chicken commanding officer, a General Carter, and he wouldn't transfer me. I never forgave him for that."

"Moving along. After you were discharged you were made the head of the Screen Actors Guild, and became disenchanted because the Communists were trying to take it over."

"That's correct. I'll never forget one union leader who got control of the electricians, the musicians, the grips and the painters, and turned them all into Reds. You want his identity?"

"Don't tell me. I think I can guess. Were you prevented from getting good roles because of your anti-Communist stand?"

"Well, Carter didn't make it any easier on me."

"I have all the stuff on you working for GE and then going into politics and finally becoming governor of California. One last question..."

"Mr. President, excuse me for interrupting, but we have just received word from Beirut that our embassy was blown up by a suicide truck loaded with dynamite."

"Darn, I knew something like this would happen when my predecessor dismantled the CIA."

Air Force audit hunts liquor link

WASHINGTON — Fans of "McHale's Navy" and "Sgt. Bilko" may be pleased to learn that the fine art of "scrounging" still goes on, in even the most elite military units. But Air Force auditors weren't pleased to learn it at all.

In 1983, the bookkeeping bloodhounds at the Air Force Audit Agency started sniffing along a paper trail of liquor ordered by the First Military Air Squadron. This is the outfit that runs the vice president's plane, Air Force Two, and other VIP flying taxis out of Andrews Air Force Base in nearby Maryland.

It wasn't long before the auditors were baying at the heels of Master Sgt. Thomas L. Fontaine, a veteran steward on Air Force Two. They found that he had personally paid for 30 cases of tax-free booze delivered to the air base.

The account Fontaine opened at a local liquor store looked impressively official. But the liquor was not exactly what one would expect to be served aboard a presidential aircraft. One $260.50 lot, for example, included two cases of King Crown scotch and a case each of McCall's vodka, McCall's gin, Old McCall's bourbon and Ron Pablo rum.

My associates Tony Capaccio and Donald Goldberg have reviewed the audit reports.

"Since the purchase was not related to the presidential mission or aircraft," the auditors wrote, "this abuse could be of potential embarrassment to the Air Force and higher government levels, particularly considering the potentially unlawful actions."

The auditors noted that the first invoice was made out to "Andrews A.F.B. Hangar 6, Air Force 1." That's the hangar where the president's plane is housed. Actually, an Air Force spokesman said, "the delivery had been made to an area between Hangars Six and Seven." He said, "The driver apparently used the delivery location to address the bill."

The technique worked smoothly enough. Five separate deliveries totaling $1,100 were made to the area between the two hangars over a period of about two years, in 1981 and 1982.

While the auditors and subsequent reviewers couldn't find any federal rap to pin on Fontaine, they noted that the purchases "apparently violated Maryland state alcoholic beverage laws," because the stuff was consumed away from the base, but had been sold tax-free for use on federal property.

The untaxed liquor was used at the stewards' Christmas parties in 1981 and 1982 and at a Hawaiian-style bash on July 1982.

Fontaine and his fellow stewards were clearly prepared for some Homeric boozing at the 1982 luau. The auditors noted that the $228 worth of liquor purchased "was clearly in excess of the party's needs."

They calculated that "2,029 ounces of liquor were purchased for the party at which about 115 people attended," and pointed out that "this equates to consumption of about 17.6 ounces of liquor per person, which is obviously doubtful."

And they didn't even figure a keg of beer and a case of Lambrusco wine into their calculations.

Adding to the auditors' displeasure was the fact that one of the stewards catered the affair as part of his moonlight catering business. He sold drinks at the party for a buck a throw, and took away four cases of leftover liquor, the auditors estimated.

"While the (squadron) commander indicated the steward did not make a profit on the liquor, this seems highly unlikely, considering bar sales plus the income derived from the considerable amount of leftover liquor," they wrote.

As for Fontaine, he was verbally reprimanded for his role in the liquor-buying operation, but has since been promoted to chief master sergeant in charge of all the squadron's stewards. He declined to comment.

Footnote: Congress was assured last month that "aggressive command" action has been taken that will eliminate further abuse.

STRICTLY PERSONAL: This is a story I had assigned to the wastebasket. But then the mayor of Elizabeth, N.J., Thomas Dunn, bought an ad in his local paper to announce: "I'll always carry my head high, no matter what Jack Anderson writes."

Although I hadn't written a thing about Dunn, I now feel compelled to explain what it was all about.

My associate Tony Capaccio learned that in 1964 Dunn was overheard by FBI surveillance experts in a meeting with reputed underworld boss Sam "The Plumber" DeCavalcante. My associate called Dunn for comment.

The mayor is a prominent member of "Democrats for Reagan-Bush." And, since the press had recently dug back 20 years to try to link Geraldine Ferraro's late father-in-law to a mobster, Dunn's long-ago conversation seemed fair enough.

But I decided to let the ancient history gather more dust — until Dunn issued his pre-emptive strike. Here are some excerpts from the 1964 FBI transcript:

"It appeared that Dunn's visit to Sam was to complain that at a 'debate' the night before he was charged with being connected to gambling interests in Elizabeth.

"Tom: If you have any way of getting to (an opponent) to tell them to keep their lousy mouths shut. ... Because you know better than I do that I have no — because this thing could cream me at the last minute.

"Sam: It's a lot of talk. He couldn't come out with a thing like that with no proof.

"Tom: Well, just by association, Sam. So if you have any way of getting to (the opponent) ...

"Sam: I sure will."

Dunn, incidentally, says that was the only time he ever met DeCavalcante, whom he knew as "Sam Rizzo."

Around The Rim

True Texans

By SCOTT FITZGERALD
How do you know if someone is a true Texan or not? It's not by the cowboy boots or 10-gallon hat he or she may wear.

No — it's not whether someone living in this state owns oil or not. You need not live in Texas for that matter.

I take myself as an example. For 14 years, I lived in other states of the Union, yet I'm as much a Texan as J.R. Ewing.

If you claim to be a Texan, you must have a deep and reverent passion for the game of football.

Nothing else suffices to being a Texan except maybe being born in the state of Texas.

You need not be an ardent fan of the conglomerate of individuals who form a football team within our state boundaries.

In simpler words — you don't have to root for the Dallas Cowboys or Houston Oilers.

But you must know the present state of each and every team that is important to you. Aside from memorizing pertinent information such as team records or statistics, you must exercise your deep wisdom by providing an analysis of what the team ought to do.

Talk as though you could coach the team. It'll raise eyebrows at the cocktail party and enhance your standing in the community.

Use the term "the football," often in your discourse. When discussing a hypothetical team at that cocktail party for example, talk in descriptive terms of the team moving "the football."

You can pick a team from the high school, college or professional level. A good source to beef up on is Dave Campbell's Texas Football magazine that comes out every summer.

After you absorb knowledge from print material, make time to watch football on television.

Watch games that are totally meaningless such as I did last Sunday when I wasted a good 2½ hours watching the Denver Broncos blast the Buffalo Bills, 37-7.

Buffalo remains winless. Denver is out of state. Who cares? Nevertheless, I'm a better man for having watched the contest.

And look to the recently retired George Allen as your inspiration. Allen, who coached the Los Angeles Rams and Washington Redskins of the NFL and Arizona Wranglers of the USFL, provided analysis for CBS's National Football League telecasts in 1978.

After listening to Allen intellectually dissect each action on the gridiron in no-nonsense football lingo, you realized just how much catching up there was to be done.

A friend of mine from New York made a casual remark to me in 1979 while we watched the Pittsburgh Steelers snatch a disheartening victory from the Dallas Cowboys in Super Bowl XIII.

My friend said something to the effect that he had spent too much time watching and following football. It was time to move on to other things.

My answer was short, dramatic and truthful.

"Football is life," I said. My friend thought I was joking. I was not.

Only a Texan would understand.

Bleeding nose is common child problem

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: My little brother gets bleeding nose and it's hard to control. When it bleeds it is long and much. I, on the other hand, am quite the opposite. It has to be a severe cut for me to bleed much.

My question is, would a blood transfusion from me to him aid the coagulant in his blood system or would bone marrow transplant be more feasible? Let me add that although we are four years different in age, he is almost my exact double. If we would have been born just one year apart, people would say we are twins. — J.B.

Your concern for your little brother is touching. But let me add that clotting problems are not too common, even though bleeding noses in children are. I wish I knew a little bit more about the background of all your concern. Your brother doesn't need a transfusion from you. Nor does he need a bone marrow transplant.

He does need someone to find out if he has a bleeding tendency and to find out why. Bone marrow transplants are not given to correct a bleeding problem. They are needed only to restore the red- and white-blood-cell-making capacity of the person whose own marrow isn't doing that job well. I think you can understand that.

Bleeding disorders (and I'm not saying your brother really does have one) are so varied that you have to define exactly what's going on, which of the clotting elements is missing. In some such disorders, clotting factors and platelets, substances involved in clotting, are given.

Often, bleeding in youngsters has much simpler causes, for example, from trauma, as picking at the nose. An allergy that causes inflammation of nasal tissue can cause bleeding. Very dry weather or inside environments can be involved.

Dear Abby

Woman is curious about husband's past

DEAR ABBY: How important is it for a woman to know all about her husband's past? This is the second marriage for both of us. I'm 51 and he's 59, and we're happy as a pair of teen-agers. I've talked and talked about my past, and there is nothing he doesn't know about me.

Hi, Dad? Or worse yet, one or more wives?

After all, I am his wife. LIVING WITH A MYSTERY MAN

DEAR LIVING: If you're happy and being treated like a queen, don't question his past. As his wife, however, you should be made aware of a few facts: Is he wanted by the police? Does he have any large outstanding debts? Does he have any illegitimate children who might come out of the woodwork and say, "Hi, Dad"? Or worse yet, one or more wives?

If he can answer no to all of the above, cover him up; he might catch pneumonia.

Parents, It's Time To Talk

The Parent Support Task Force (Chemical People), in conjunction with the March of Dimes, the County Extension Agency, and the Texas Department of Human Resources, will present a seminar entitled "Parents, It's Time to Talk."

This seminar promises to enlighten parents on how best to communicate with their children during all phases of adolescence. Subjects to be covered will range from active listening to peer pressure, with special emphasis on boy and girl sexuality.

Dr. Rick Stafford, a clinical psychologist, will be present to answer questions and to aid in group discussions.

If you, as a parent, have ever found it difficult to talk with your children, to communicate with them, or to honestly answer some of the pressing adolescent questions all children have, this seminar is highly recommended for you.

The seminar will be held on Saturday, October 27, 1984, from 9:00 a.m. to 12:00 noon at the Goliad Middle School cafeteria. Admission is free. Coffee and doughnuts will be served.

Yard owners stage battle with state mascot

DALLAS (AP) — Armadillo fighting is a seasonal thing, much like kite flying in spring, except that kite fliers enjoy what they do and most armadillo fighters would prefer not to battle the little critters to protect their yards.

"I feel sorry for people that get them," said Agnes Johnson of Mesquite. "Anybody who has real nice grass, it'd be a shame." Ms. Johnson says she doesn't have much lawn for armadillos to damage but "they just come dig up all by flower beds."

And Ricky Sramek, Dallas County wildlife control specialist, says he gets calls about armadillos in late summer and early autumn every year.

Sramek says it's because armadillos like to eat cutworms. And when the untamed countryside has been baked hard and dry by the relentless summer sun, armadillos come to dig up the cutworms in homeowners' soft, watered lawns. And dig they do. Experts say they can tunnel at speeds up to 12 feet per hour.

Virginia Miles lives in Kessler Park, only five minutes from downtown Dallas, and yet she, too, often suffers from apparent armadillos. Apparent because she hasn't actually seen them at work.

But, she says, "I have some trenches in my yard. I stood out there and almost cried. One of them is 18 inches long and 4 to 6 inches wide and 6 inches deep. Another one is in two sections, but it takes up about as much space."

Like many homeowners, Ms. Miles takes pride in her lawn. Works at it.

"I've sat up nights watering it to keep it alive."

"And then along comes an armadillo in the dead of night and...What's a person to do?"

Well, not much, actually, Sramek says.

"They're so dumb they are hard to trap. They may walk up to the back of the trap and smell the bait but not be smart enough to go around to the front of the trap."

So that doesn't work too well.

"If you live out in the country you can get them with your shotgun."

Municipalities, however, have strict laws about discharging firearms, so that's out.

"You can spotlight them and club them if you stay up that late."

Armadillos are nocturnal, and they may not come around where you're guarding until the wee hours.

Said Ms. Johnson, "I'm 65 years old, and I don't feel like going out PEST — The armadillo often becomes the state's pest in the fall. Experts say armadillos can tunnel at speeds up to 12 feet an hour, in their search for a meal.

there all night and trying to hit them with a shovel."

Can this be? Shoot them; club them; hit them with a shovel?

Amazing. This is the same nine-banded armadillo (Dasyypus Novemcinctus) that is the loved and lauded official state mascot. He's proudly displayed on T-shirts and posters throughout Texas. He's come to mean something, symbolwise; like the Alamo means something; like Tom Landry means something. The armadillo stands for good times and rednecks and longnecks and country music and chili.

Texans weren't the first to elevate the armadillo to lore status. The creature is found frequently in folk art and handicrafts in Latin America. In Brazil, where there are 10 species of the creature, ranging in size from a tiny six inches up to a hefty 100 pounds, some natives believe the first humans came to earth when they fell through a big armadillo hole in the sky.

Union member sues Valley grower

SAN JUAN (AP) — A member of the United Farm Workers of America filed suit Thursday charging Bannworth Inc., a large Rio Grande Valley grower, with retaliating against her for engaging in union activities.

Isidra Tovar said she was fired from her job as a field worker after 13 years with the farm because of her affiliation with the United Farm Workers union.

She said Bannworth farms owners Harold and John Banworth also fired her in retaliation for complaining about possible violations of the federal minimum wage-law.

Mrs. Tovar, whose husband was also fired from the company, earned $4,000 a year before she was terminated.

The suit, filed in Hidalgo County court at law, seeks restitution of her job and $6,000 in back wages.

Mrs. Tovar joined the union in 1982 after a co-worker, Maria Guadalupe Vasquez, was fired for reporting Bannworth to state officials for failing to provide toilet facilities in the field as required by law.

Texas A&M to take gay issue to higher court

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Texas A&M University, ordered by an appeals court to extend official recognition to a homosexual student group, will take the case to the U.S. Supreme Court, a staff lawyer said Thursday.

Jerry Cain, Texas A&M's associate general counsel, said he received a letter from the state attorney general's office Wednesday authorizing the school to hire its own attorney for the appeal. He said no one had been hired by mid-day Thursday.

Attorney General Jim Mattox has previously refused to represent the school any further in the suit. The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals handed down an opinion in favor of the Gay Student Services Organization in August.

H.R. "Bum" Bright, a Dallas businessman who is chairman of Texas A&M's board of regents, said the regents "do not think that a gay students organization is a proper organization to have the status of university recognition."

Such recognition entitles organizations to use university facilities and to receive funds from profits of the Texas A&M bookstore, Bright said in a telephone interview.

"Morally, I do not think it is proper to officially recognize a group of homosexual students," Bright said. "That's the opinion of the board of regents. I concur with the board."

The Gay Student Services Organization filed suit in 1976 after the school first refused to grant it recognition.

School officials originally cited a state law against oral or anal sex between people of the same sex. That law has since been overturned by U.S. District Judge Jerry Buchmeyer, whose 1982 decision was upheld Sept. 21 by the 5th Circuit.

Judge rejects pleas

Girl sent to detention facility

FORT WORTH (AP) — A judge rejected defense pleas Thursday and ordered a 12-year-old girl sent to a state juvenile detention facility for killing her friend with a shotgun blast.

Juvenile Court Judge Scott Moore opted to put Patricia Dempsey in the custody of the Texas Youth Commission for the Sept. 8 shooting death of Kerry Thomas, 11.

The TYC, which operates the state's juvenile detention system, will decide how long the girl will remain in custody. She could be held until her 18th birthday.

Defense attorney Harold Ray called the decision "absolutely repugnant" and immediately filed notice of appeal. He said the girl's family was "devastated" by the decision.

Moore's sentence followed the recommendation from prosecutor Dave Purcell, who said afterwards that "we're quite satisfied."

A jury ruled Oct. 12 that Patricia did not intentionally kill her best friend, but that she "recklessly" caused the girl's death with a shotgun blast to the face — a verdict roughly equivalent to involuntary manslaughter.

Patricia had insisted the shooting was accidental, and that she allowed the body to remain hidden for four days only because she was afraid "I might get put in jail."

"We don't feel it (the decision) is in the girl's best interests and do not feel it's in accordance with the decision of the jury," Ray said Thursday. "There were 10 or 11 other places possible, all of which were more amenable to the best interests of this child."

Moore said he considered placing the girl in 11 other facilities ranging from girls' ranches to psychiatric institutions.

But he specifically rejected Ray's proposal to have the girl placed on probation and live with relatives in Oklahoma because "she needed placement away from her family."

After delaying a decision on her fate Oct. 15, Moore said he "submitted her to a psychiatric examination and decided psychiatric placement would not be appropriate" either.

He said the girl would probably be taken Friday from a juvenile center in Fort Worth to the TYC reception center in Brownwood, where she will spend two to three weeks and undergo testing before being assigned to another juvenile facility.

Ray said two psychiatrists have said incarceration would be detrimental to the girl and added that "to place a child, in light of (the jury's) finding, as if she were a hardened criminal, is absolutely repugnant."

Peggy Thomas, the dead girl's mother, said she was comforted by Moore's decision.

"Our system does work. I just feel relieved that it's over," she said. "I prayed so hard this morning the judge would do justice by my Kerry. I feel he did ... If he would have placed her where she could come and go freely, that would have hurt because my Kerry can't come and go."

Prosecutors said Patricia intended to kill when she loaded and fired a 12-gauge shotgun into her friend's face as she sat in the Dempsey's suburban Benbrook home drinking milk and watching television.

Director hits high note with congregation

By KIM KIRKHAM
Church Editor

What's all that jazz at First Christian Church? The congregation is off on a high note with Art Castetter, its new choir director. "I think music is definitely a meaningful part of the worship experience," says Castetter. Besides, "I'll probably do more composing along this line of work."

Castetter has been with the church one month. "When I find what they have for goals and they see what I have for goals in music, it's going to be good," he said.

Castetter is a private teacher and composer, as well as choir director. He gives lessons in piano, organ, voice and all band and orchestra instruments except guitar from his home.

Castetter moved to Big Spring six years ago. He and wife Shirley have a son Allen of Kermit, daughter Susan Tankersley of Odessa, and Alex of the home. They also have two grandchildren which are "primarily my reason for coming down to this part of the country," he said.

"I enjoy it down here (Big Spring)," said Castetter. "When I moved down here (from Streator, Ill.), they told me I would not like the sandstorms. But I tell you, I never had to shovel sand."

Castetter, 52, has written a book titled "Playing Popular Piano." The mini-text is written for soloists, accompanists, sidemen, teachers and students.

At five, Castetter began studying music. "I had to practice about an hour a day, and then I ended up playing a concert for everyone," he said. "That was before there was television."

Castetter began commuting by train to the American Conservatory of Music in Illinois when he was 12. By the time he was 14, he was playing professionally and teaching privately. His private music teacher had taken Castetter as far as he could; when the teacher retired, he gave his students to Castetter to teach.

Castetter's high school band teacher was an influence in his career. "He got me involved in the public school teaching part of it," he said. Castetter helped him with arrangements and assisted with conducting.

Some of Castetter's students have attained national reputations as successful teachers and performers. One is a performer at the Metropolitan Opera in New York City.

Castetter also has performed with many famous people during his career. In the late 1960s, he played at a beach resort with Louie Armstrong. While playing in the house band, Castetter filled in for Armstrong's piano player who had become ill. Castetter also grew up with Bobby McGrath of Sesame Street. "I'd play piano and he'd sing," said Castetter of the time they spent together in their youth.

Castetter has a bachelor's degree in music education and a master's degree in music theory, composition, piano and woodwinds from Cosmopolitan School of Music in Chicago, Ill. He has done post-graduate study at the American Conservatory of Music, Western Illinois University, DePaul University and the University of Chicago.

For 10 years, Castetter served as chairman of fine arts at Highland College in Freeport, Ill. He also served as a surgical technician in a

M.A.S.H. unit in Korea when drafted into the war. While in Korea, he performed professionally with the Armed Forces Radio and Special Services. He also has served as music advisor and adjudicator for the Miss America and Miss U.S.A. Pageants.

Castetter served as music director at Howard College four years, worked at Angelina College in East Texas two years, and taught in several public schools for 12 years.

"I think music is a communication," he said. "And no matter what the type of music you're playing, it has to communicate with the people you're playing for."

"The fun part of music is when you can get very involved in it. Ideally it should become such a big part of your performance that it's inseparable," Castetter said. "You're always trying to do better anyway."

Castetter also says he could not take 24 hours of one kind of music. "They are all a challenge to do well. You can't say that one is better than the other," he said. "You have to be the best in all of them. With music, the literature is always new, but the concept is always the same."

Castetter's philosophy is similar to that of a great composer. "There is no such thing as a bad type of music...only bad songs."

'AfterMASH' gets canceled

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "AfterMASH," a postscript to television's long-running, popular comedy about the Korean War, is a casualty of TV's ratings war.

The show, which followed the characters of "MASH" after the war ended, was canceled by CBS in its second season, with four of this year's nine episodes yet to air, executive producer Burt Metcalfe said Wednesday.

"I think ultimately there was this inevitable comparison with "MASH," and, naturally, by those standards, we were going to suffer," Metcalfe said.

"MASH," a sardonic situation comedy set in a Korean War Army hospital base, ran for 11 years.

The final 2½-hour episode on Feb. 23, 1983, was one of the most widely viewed television shows in history, with CBS estimating the audience at 125 million people.

"AfterMASH" was the first show canceled this season by CBS, which did not immediately announce a replacement.

Metcalfe said CBS told him that one of the four remaining episodes will be shown Tuesday, and the other three in December, after the important November ratings period.

An estimated 100 million people watched the first show last October, making it the most successful premiere since "Laverne and Shirley" in 1976.

But ratings slid, and the show, scheduled opposite from NBC's hit "The A-Team" on Tuesdays this season, ranked 66th among the 72 prime-time shows of the three major commercial networks.

In "AfterMASH," Harry Morgan reprised his role as Col. Sherman Potter, Jamie Farr was Cpl. Maxwell Klinger and William Christopher was the former base chaplain, Father Francis Mulcahy.

Reagan, Nixon masks hot Halloween items

BOSTON (AP) — Forget ghouls and goblins. This Halloween, the owner of the country's largest costume shop says Reagan and Nixon masks are selling like crazy, along with Michael Jackson gloves at $14.95 a shot.

Mr. T and his gold chains are very popular, but remarkably few customers want to look like Walter Mondale or Geraldine Ferraro.

"Reagan is a very, very big seller. I say we sell about 12 a day, even more than that," David Bertolino said Wednesday at his store, Little Jack Horner, Inc. "The other day someone from Mondale headquarters came down and bought a Reagan mask. Don't know what they plan to do with it."

"And Nixon is hot. Easily as popular as Reagan," Bertolino continued. "I guess people still love to hate him. Sometimes they come in and buy the Nixon mask and then buy handcuffs or a ball-and-chain to go with it."

This year is Little Jack Horner's 50th year in business in downtown Boston. As usual, says Bertolino, political costumes are making him money. The masks of President Reagan and former President Nixon sell for $25 to $40, depending on the amount of detail in the disguise.

The store has sold out its 1,200 masks of Massachusetts Sen. Edward Kennedy, but still has a few John F. Kennedy masks available.

On Wednesday, one went to a professional-looking young man who refused to identify himself. He told Bertolino he planned to spend Halloween as "Jack Kennedy for Reagan."

"I got the idea while I was watching the news last night," the man said, referring to a recently publicized letter from Reagan to Nixon written in 1960. In the letter, Reagan compared Kennedy's ideas to those of Karl Marx and Adolf Hitler.

"I'm going with two friends who are dressing up as Marx and Hitler," said the man. "It's a joke — get it? Kennedy for Reagan."

"Oh, yes, I see. Very funny," said Bertolino with a shrug. A Republican himself, he has grown accustomed to the gamut of political persuasions.

Queens down Chihuahua in exhibition game 81-68

By BILLY NABOURS
Sports Editor

The Howard College Hawk Queens overcame a rash of turnovers down the stretch in the first half to rally past the University of Chihuahua Mexico in a special exhibition basketball game at Dorothy Garrett Coliseum Thursday night.

The Queens took the contest 81-68 mainly behind a 55 percent field goal showing in the second half (20 of 36) that allowed Howard College to break open a 38-38 tie.

The streak actually started during the final three minutes of the first half when Sue Van Hooser scored all seven of her points. One of last year's returning starters, Debbie Hall, complimented that with four points as the Queens rallied from a 36-29 deficit.

Until their seven point handicap, the Queens led most of the first half, although never by more than 11 points. Starting at the 4:53 mark, however Chihuahua converted three straight errant passes into baskets to take its largest lead, 36-27.

That was about as exciting as the game got though. The Queens utilized former post player Alex Provencio outside at a point position for most of the game and in the second half Provencio, another of last year's starters, seemed to really get a feel for her new place on the floor.

The 6-0 El Paso sophomore proved too much for the smaller Chihuahua defenders, ripping the nets for 13 of her game high 15 points in the second half. Queens coach Don Stevens said, "I was very pleased with Alex's performance outside. She's been working there since the first day of practice and I'm sure we'll get some mismatches out there at several points in the season."

Stevens was also pleased with the performance of his freshmen on a night when practically every member of the team contributed points.

Houston freshman Joyce Boudreaux had an outstanding showing by scoring a 13 points and pulling down an even dozen rebounds. Hall followed with a dozen points and. Provencio had seven rebounds and dished out six assists. Vicki Wade, a freshman from Carthage, scored 10 points.

The next action for the Queens will come Oct. 31-Nov. 2 in Waco when they compete in the McLennan Community College Classic.

QUEENS (81) — Barry 1-2-4; Alex Provencio 7-1-15; Joyce Boudreaux 6-1-13; Van Hooser 2-3-7; French 4-4-8; Wismann 2-0-4; Eitner 3-0-4; Debbie Hall 6-0-12; Vicki Wade 5-0-10; D. Dickson 1-0-2.
CHIHUAHA (68) — Contera 6-3-15; Corral 2-3-7; Reyes 2-0-4; Benites 2-0-4; Jordan 8-2-18; Vargra 2-0-4; Valenzuela 1-1-3; Olivias 2-1-5; Gonzales 4-0-8.
Halftime: Queens 38, Chihuahua 38.

Lady Steers finish season in third place after Central loss

By STEVE BELVIN
Staff Writer

SAN ANGELO — School history was at stake and the San Angelo Central volleyball team was not about to let the Big Spring Lady Steers get in the way.

The Bobcats ended regular season play at 34-0 and lived up to their second place state ranking by drilling the Lady Steers 15-3, 15-6 here Thursday night. The victory enabled the Bobcats to become the first Central volleyball team to finish the season with a perfect record.

Coach Susan Sharp's Lady Steers finished third in District 4-5A at 8-6 and a 16-14 season slate behind playoff bound Abilene Cooper's 10-4 mark.

In front of a very vocal home crowd the Bobcats showed Big Spring at the start what was in store the entire game. After Lady Steers Debbie Holguin failed to score, the Bobcats led off with six points with Pam Klepac serving. Five of the points came from spikes and blocks by Shawn Sweeten and Anita Allgood.

The Bobcats lead quickly grew to 12-1 as Central played near-flawless ball. Big Spring picked up its final two points on a kill by Trel Clemons and a double block by Shelia Chatman and Clemons.

Sweeten and Allgood simply took charge in both games, hitting fierce shots at a diving Lady Steers defense. As a team Central was awesome in the first match, downing 11 of 16 kill attempts. Sweeten was five five while Allgood was five of eight.

The Lady Steers were playing so much defense that they managed only four kill attempts, led by two from Clemons.

Big Spring took the lead only once in the second match. That being 1-0 when Holguin hit a winner on her first serve. After that it was all Central as the Bobcats rallied for six unanswered points. The Bobcats stretched the lead to 10-2 before the Lady Steers rallied by cutting the count to 10-5.

After Clemons ended the rally with a kill, Chatman recorded an ace and the Bobcats committed two errors. Big Spring's final tally of the night came when Tab Green served a point.

Allgood and Sweeten had superb games. Allgood, a 5-8 junior, downed seven of 12 kill attempts and registered seven blocks. Sweeten converted 12 of 15 kill attempts. Teamwise the Bobcats converted 58 percent of their spikes (25-43).

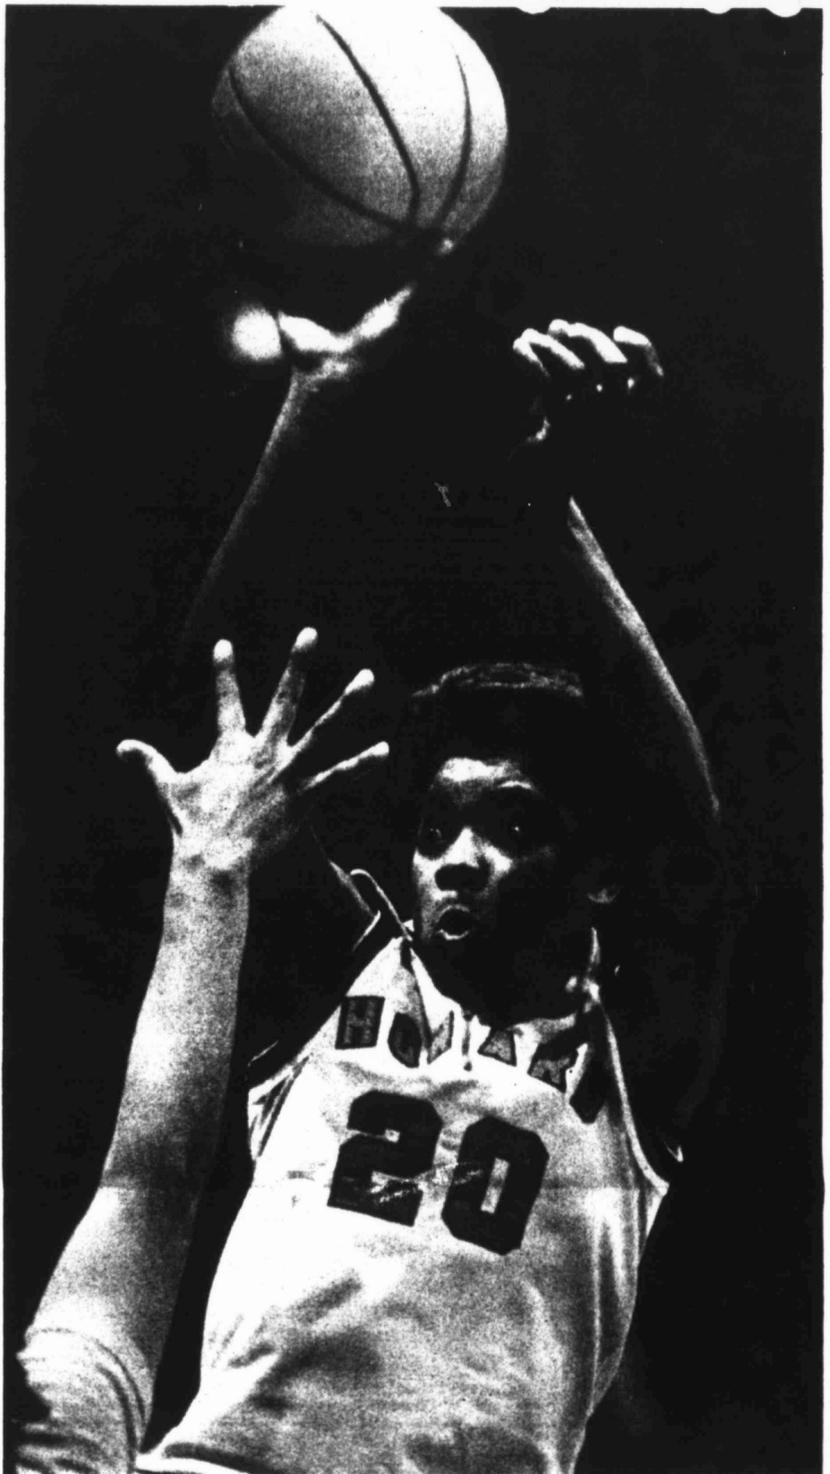

Clemons was the only Lady Steer to make her presence known at the net, converting three of eight kills. Big Spring had 29 percent kill percentage (five of 17).

After the contest Sharp labeled Central a strong contender for the state title, and said, "We simply got beat. They (Central) are a much improved team from the last time we played them. I am proud of both the varsity and JV teams. I think we both had successful seasons."

JV ENDS SEASON IN SECOND
Coach Elaine Stone's junior varsity saw its hopes for a district championship go down the drain as they lost to Central 7-15, 15-2, 6-15.

With the loss the Lady Steers ended the season in second place, tied with Central with an 11-3 slate. Odessa finished first with a 12-2 record. The Lady Steers ended the season with an overall slate of 21-11.

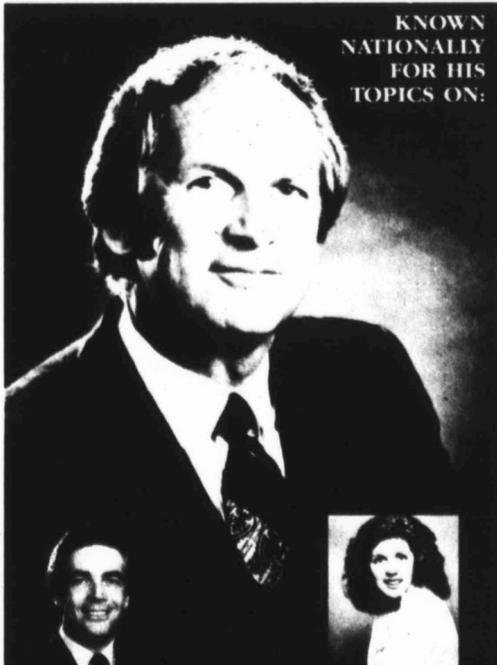

Big Spring's only show of brilliance came in the second match when the Lady Steers simply dominated Central, paced by the spiking of Taylissa Cork and Sheri Myrick. Sonja Evans, Connie Swinney, Katrina Thompson, Lisa Hale and Priscilla Banks also had outstanding second matches.

GOOD GAME — Joyce Boudreaux (20) goes high in an attempt to score during the Hawk Queens 81-68 exhibition game win over the University of Chihuahua Thursday night at Dorothy Garrett Coliseum. Boudreaux, a freshman from Houston, scored 13 points and pulled down 12 rebounds.

Emergency surgery will force late start for Early

Molly Early could not be with her teammates when they beat the University of Chihuahua in Thursday's special women's exhibition basketball game.

One of three starters who returned for the Queens this season, Early is confined to Spring Branch Memorial Hospital. As to when the 5-6 sophomore wing returns to action is simply a day to day question.

Early was forced to miss the contest and could be out the next month or so because of emergency surgery performed Thursday. Doctors removed a grapefruit-sized tumor from her lower right abdominal area. According to Queens head coach Don Stevens, however, the tumor, "is an isolated growth and the doctors are 99 and one-tenth sure it is not malignant. It was not affecting any vital organs."

Early's situation came about after practice Tuesday afternoon. According to Stevens and trainer Dave Lammers, Early complained of pain in her abdominal area. "Molly never complains about anything so we knew it had to really be hurting," said Stevens.

First thoughts concerned Early's appendix, but upon examination Lammers said, "something just didn't feel right."

Wednesday morning Early was examined by Dr. Bruce Cox who gives physicals to most Howard College athletes. Cox discovered what felt like a tumor. After several telephone calls to Early's mother and doctor in Houston it was decided that the young lady be transferred to Spring Branch.

Early flew home late Wednesday evening, was admitted Thursday morning and had surgery done almost immediately.

"Our first concern is that Molly is alright and that things look okay," said Stevens. The outlook is for Early to miss the first three or four weeks of the season before returning to the lineup. All things considered, however Stevens added, "It's possible she can not comeback until the second semester."

MOLLY EARLY

As the "stabilizing factor" for the Queens according to Stevens, Early averaged 13 points per contest during 1983-84 and totaled 73 steals and a 75 percent free throw shooting mark. Those latter marks led the Queens who went 24-9 last year.

Perkins won't start in opener

DALLAS (AP) — Prized rookie and first round draft pick Sam Perkins will not be in the starting lineup Saturday when the Dallas Mavericks meet the Houston Rockets in a nationally televised National Basketball Association game, Mavericks coach Dick Motta says.

Motta said Thursday he will hold the 6-9½ former North Carolina star out of the starting lineup because Perkins' two-week contract holdout put him too far behind the rest of the players.

"Sam has missed two weeks, and no matter how you cut that up, he has missed it. A year from now his holdout will not seem important, but right now it is setting him back," Motta said.

Motta had said about two weeks ago, after Perkins' first practice with the Mavericks, that Perkins would likely start at center for the Mavericks when the season opened.

Motta said Kurt Nimphius will start at center. Other starters, he said, will include Jay Vincent at power guard, Mark Aguirre at forward and Brad Davis and Rolando Blackman at guard.

4-5A runners to gather in city

For the first time since 1978 Big Spring will host a District 4-5A athletic meet when runners from across the district gather for the 4-5A Cross Country Meet Saturday at the Big Spring Airpark.

Starting time is 10 a.m. in the first race of the day — junior varsity girls. Varsity girls, JV boys and varsity boys will follow. The top two teams and first five individuals in both varsity groups will advance to the Region-I Meet to be held in Lubbock. The state meet will be held in Georgetown.

Running for Big Spring in the varsity boys division will be Jamie Baldwin, Preston Harrison, Bobby Madigan, Dax McCracken, Roland Montana, Johnny Rengel and either Rusty Martin or Gary Boyd as the seventh member of the team. Five runners constitutes a full team and seven is the maximum a team can consist of. Harrison is Big Spring's brightest hope for advancing.

Anita Flores, Nissa DeLoss Santos, Lisa Bacon, Nelda Saldivar, Lisa Dominguez and Diane Arnold make up the Lady Steers varsity although Saldivar has been bothered by quadric (thigh muscles) problems and Arnold has been slowed by illness. DeLoss Santos and Flores both have good chances of reaching Lubbock.

Coach Randy Britton said teamwise, "Abilene's girls are tough. They have won two meets this year." If Abilene falters Britton thinks last year's co-champs Central and Permian could step to the front again.

Britton sees Midland Lee as the class in the boy's division although Lee's top two runners, Arthur Cantu and Mike Garza, have had to work at staying eligible. If the two can not run in the district meet Britton said he sees Lee's chances tailing off somewhat. A school's top five finishers determine point totals and final standings.

Ready to take up Lee's slack, should it come to that, are Midland High which was second last year and Central, last year's champion.

"We've got to be mentally prepared to run in bad weather," said Britton in reference to Saturday's two mile (girls) and three mile (boys) runs. There is no day on the calendar for a makeup and the only way Saturday's meet will be postponed is in case of lightning. "It will be a sloppy course and could slow down some of the faster people in the district. I like to think we have an advantage since we workout on the course," Britton added.

Running in junior varsity competition for the boys will be Bryan Boyd, Albert Ortega, Calvin Hill, Scot Owen and either Gary Boyd or Rusty Martin. JV Lady Steers tackling the course include Jill Wells, Kimberly Duffy and Ida Porros.

JV, Soph Steers drop games

It was a bad night for the Steers junior varsity and sophomore teams as they fell to Odessa High in Memorial Stadium action Thursday.

The junior varsity fell, 37-6, losing for the sixth time in eight games. It was a case of poor tackling and turnovers that proved the Steers downfall, according to coach John Velasquez.

The Broncos got jumped on Big Spring early and never looked back. By the half Odessa had grabbed a 23-6 lead.

The Steers lone touchdown came in the second quarter when James Johnson scored from two yards out. The score capped off a 66-yard drive.

Two of the Broncos TD's came on short drive following Big Spring turnovers. Meanwhile Big Spring's punting game suffered, leaving the Broncos in good field position for most of the night.

The Steers averaged just 18 yards per punt in five punts.

"We missed a lot of tackles," said Velasquez. "We were getting there but we weren't wrapping up."

Velasquez added that the following players did have good defensive games: Linebacker Vance Cole; 14 tackles, noseguard Jerry Freshour; 12 tackles and end Kim Anding was in on 11 stops. The Steers mentor also praised the play of safeties Joe Hillario and Stacy Kilgore. Cornerback Hugo Hernandez came up with an interception.

Offensively, Hernandez at quarterback and Johnson turned in good offensive performances while tight end Randy Hayworth played well also.

The junior varsity plays next week against Abilene High in Abilene at 1 p.m.

SOPHS ALSO FALL TO BRONCHOS

Big Spring scored first, but Odessa scored more in taking a 27-7 win over Big Spring.

The Steers lone score came on their second series of the game. Deeg Young went in from five yards out and Paul Decker kicked the point after. But from then on it was all Odessa High School.

The Steers had a bad case of moving the ball up and down the field, but never managing to get it into the endzone, prompting coach Roland Atkins to say, "We moved the ball well between the 30-yardlines," indicated by almost 300 total offensive yards.

"If I had done a better job of preparing, we would have won," concluded Atkins.

Atkins lauded fullback Harry Marcus for his tough running. He also credited cornerbacks Phillip Matthews and Albert Garza, linebacker Robert Summer, end Ronnie Miller and tackle Danny Wise for having good defensive games.

The Steers sophomore team is now 4-4 for the season.

The team will be in action again next Saturday in Abilene when they take on Abilene High at 11 a.m.

Bulldogs record shutout wins

It was a god night for Coahoma sub-varsity football teams as both the junior varsity and freshmen Bulldogs claimed wins Thursday evening.

In a junior varsity contest played at Coahoma, the Bulldogs blanked Forsan, 43-0, but lost a quarterback in the process.

Starting quarterback Craig Wallace guided the 'Dogs to a 28-0 halftime lead before suffering a broken arm on Coahoma's first offensive series of the second half. Ray Yuranga stepped in and did an admirable job according to coach Kim Nichols.

Paul Gonzales scored two first quarter touchdowns and Randle Crawford added another while Wallace kicked a pair of extra points in gaining a 20-0 Coahoma advantage.

Brannon Henderson ran in six and Wallace passed to Frank Galaviz for two points to make for Coahom'a bulge at halftime.

Alex Jones scored on a short run and Chris Wilson went 58 yards to paydirt in the fourth quarter while Jimmy King booted one extra point and Yuranga ran for two more to end the scoring.

Mike Sepeda, David Wood, Ismo Ontiveras and Andy Griffith were singled out on the offensive line while defensive citations were awarded to Scott Earnest, Rodney Gee, Ben Bennett, Mike Duckworth, Chuck Martin and Will Doyle.

Coahoma, now 5-2-1 for the season, and Ozona will clash in a JV battle Saturday, Nov. 3 at 11 a.m. in Ozona.

Meanwhile in Garden City, Coahoma was getting another shutout, this time from its freshmen team which beat Garden City's JV, 13-0.

Brad Engel had one of the scores with a 20-yard romp in the second quarter. Anthony Hernandez kicked the point after.

Wins, draw notched by Mavericks

In junior high football action Thursday night the Goliad A team downed Lamesa 22-6, upping their record to 5-1. Chris Cole scored two TD's for Goliad.

Meanwhile the Goliad B tied with Coahoma 6-6. Goliad's lone TD came in the last play of the first half when Mike Hillario connected with Lupe Rodriguez for a 35-yard score. The B teamers also had a TD called back in the last quarter. Goliad is now 5-0-1 for the season.

The Goliad C team dropped a 6-0 decision to the Lamesa B team. Terry Sandridge, Sabino Delgado, Robert Haro, Alfredo Garcia, Keith Renteria and Martin Yanez all had good games. Goliad C closes its season out at 2-3.

RUNNELS A ROMPS
The Runnels A team won its third games in the last four tries with a 22-8 trouncing of Lamesa. Rodney Brown scored two TD's for the winners, one coming on a 63-yard kickoff return. Jose Tovar caught a 23 yard scoring pass from Kiley Jones. Brown finished the game with 116 yards on 13 carries. Runnels is 3-4 for the year.

The Runnels B team fell to the Coahoma A team 22-0 despite a 60-yard kickoff return by Tony Lewis that carried inside the Coahoma 10. Runnels fumbled three plays later. John Sotelo, Mike Calvio, Dusty Reeves and Fred Reid all had good games.

The Runnels C team fell to 0-2-1 by virtue of its 6-6 tie with Lamesa B team. Dennis Hartfield scored the Yearlings TD on a 68-yard kickoff return. Brad Burnett, Jerry Rushin and Doug Yanez all had good games.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY, OCT. 27, 1984

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day and evening to consider whatever your finest ideas are and to expand present activities. Make the acquaintances of people with varied backgrounds and positions.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Figure out what is best to do in order to become more prosperous. A little trip could be helpful, so plan for it.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Become a more successful and happy person. Show more affection for your loved ones and gain much personally.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Plan how to put across your new idea to a partner. Treat to a fine dinner and be happy in the evening.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Stop wasting time and tackle the tasks ahead of you. Show co-workers your finest ability. Don't neglect domestic chores.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Plan early for recreations that you like the most and be punctual for all plans. Bring your talents to the attention of bigwigs.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Invite a good friend into your home who also can be enjoyed by kin. Prepare a nice dinner and enjoy the evening.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Be more direct with partners and allies for better results. Pay a compliment or two to those you want to know better.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) This is a good day to consult with a financial advisor. Be sure to follow suggestions given you for greater success.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You need to gad about more socially for good results in accomplishing your goals. Be broad-minded.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Plan a new campaign of action for your projects. Be more direct with your loved one and state your expectations.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) This is a good day to see as many persons as you can. Enjoy some group affair in the evening that you like.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You have some extra career work to do, so get at it early. Then you will be sure to achieve the right results.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be able to express self admirably and should have the benefit of a fine education. Spiritual training should be given early in life and good health habits taught also. Prepare progeny for some travel.

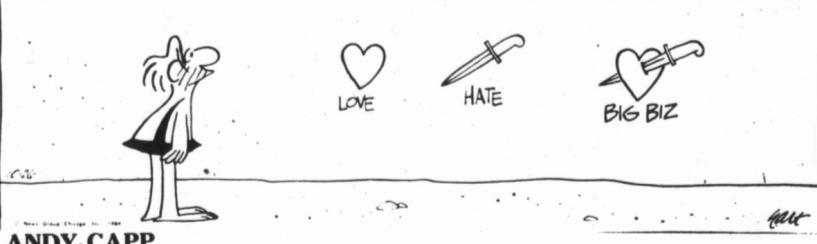

"The Stars impel; they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Discount tickets tabbed invalid

LONDON (AP) — British officials say more than 100,000 people in the United States and Britain who bought discount tickets from major carriers to fly across the Atlantic this winter will have to pay the higher, regular fares.
 The fares of the two trans-Atlantic discount airlines, Virgin Atlantic and People Express, are unaffected. But they each offer only one round-trip daily.
 The major carriers' tickets for flights starting Nov. 1 were sold pending government approval of cut-price winter fares, but last week Britain rejected all applications for cheap tickets in the latest escalation of the trans-Atlantic air fare war.

The Department of Transport said Thursday that the applications were reluctantly turned down because Britain had failed to get a guarantee from the United States against possible future antitrust prosecutions of British airlines for setting lower fares.
 The British government apparently feared that Virgin Atlantic, Britain's fledgling low-cost airline, might take action in U.S. courts to block the discount fares.
 In Washington, Alan M. Pollock, spokesman for the Civil Aeronautics Board, said the agency was "very disappointed that the British are not allowing consumers to take advantage of the low fares."

After last week's announcement, British Airways and several other major airlines said passengers who bought tickets at the discount prices would not have to pay the difference.

But Aviation Minister Paul Spicer said Thursday that some cheap tickets had continued to be sold, mainly in the United States, and he announced that all passengers holding tickets marked "subject to government approval" would either have to pay the difference or get a refund.
 Following a meeting here of most major British and American airlines, Spicer said Britain was acting to prevent "commercial chaos."
 "We will be checking at airports to make sure that airlines do not continue to sell tickets at fares which have not been approved as has been their practice in the past," Spicer said.

An estimated 70 percent of the round-trip tickets were sold to Americans for the discount price of 259 pounds, or $315.98, for tickets purchased in London. The same fare was offered in New York for $189 each way. The government's rejection means that the cheapest London-New York fares on major airlines will remain about 278 pounds, or $339.16.

The discount fare proposed by British Airways and matched by Pan American and Trans World Airlines was one pound, or $1.22, more expensive than Virgin's government-approved, regular 258-pound, or $313.76, round-trip fare.
 People Express, based in the United States, has a government-approved fare of $159 each way. Earlier this week, People Express threatened to move its European terminus from Britain to the Continent.

It's home improvement time

"Remodeling Fever" is a disorder that affects (or afflicts) nearly any homeowner every so often. You think something should be done with "this old house," but that can call for spending much money.

Do you need it? Do you need a new dormer? A new bathroom or kitchen? An exercise room? How do you decide?

It's easy. You interview yourself. Here are some questions to ask yourself in checking the adequacy of the old design and every "yes" answer cries out for change:

1. Have the children grown? If they plan to leave the household soon, it will ease the strain on bedrooms, den, kitchen and bath.

2. Has there been any change in family size, either departures or additions?

After all, grown children sometimes get divorced and return, or return because they lost a job. Or your family has grown with a new baby, or a relative might need living quarters. You might need an efficiency apartment in that empty bedroom.

3. Has there been a change in work habits, such as more family members out working, or fewer? This calls for changes in living patterns, possibly a whole new lifestyle, and the house will have to fit it.

4. Has there been a change in affluence? More money usually means more entertaining, putting new demands on kitchen, bathroom and other living quarters.

5. Has there been a change in family living, such as new interest in gourmet cooking, or in his-and-her sharing of kitchen activities, or a new awareness of health and fitness?

It could call for redesign of the kitchen, or conversion of an empty bedroom into a spa.

6. Are there things about the house that really bother you, such as a dishwasher door that cramps you at the sink when it is open, or a refrigerator door that swings the wrong way, or traffic cutting across the legs of your kitchen work triangle when you are busy, or things being in the way, or having to take the dishes way over "there" to put them away after washing? Or maybe you have a lack of lighting in the kitchen, bath or reading areas, or you are always bumping your elbows in the too-small bathroom. All of these problems call for some type of remodeling. How are you going to accomplish it?

You can try to do it yourself, of course, with the help of this section and several good books available at your library, home improvement center or book store.

Or you can go to a professional remodeling contractor who has a good showroom that shows you both products and ideas. If you do this, you can opt either for design, purchase and installation, or for design only, or for design and purchase only. But professional help on the design is worth paying for if your problem is kitchen, bath, room addition, major room change or finishing attic or basement.

Professional design help for a kitchen or bathroom usually will cost anywhere from $150 up to five percent of the estimated total cost of the job, and it could run much more for other rooms.

If you want to do it yourself, be realistic. Knowing how to do something doesn't mean your fingers can follow orders.

Even ordinary carpentry requires skill and the right tools. Plumbing calls for care and precision at every step.

Tips for building porch presented

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

A covered approach to the entrance to a house is called a porch, but over the years the term has come to include almost anything that kind of leads to the front door, even if the covered portion juts out only a few inches.

The best advice that can be given to anybody who adds a front porch to his house, whether he does all the work himself, hires a professional or does part of the job by starting with a special kit, of which there are several different kinds these days, is to be sure it looks somewhat like the house. Time and again, front porch additions seem exactly like what they are — additions. If it is attractive and special, it sometimes overshadows the house. If it isn't done properly, it sticks out like the proverbial sore thumb.

The subject of porches has been given excellent treatment in "The Outside Handyman," by John McGowan and Roger Du Bern. They call attention to the necessity of making the porch match the house and go into detail about building a porch from a kit or erecting your own.

Before making a selection, it is suggested that as many catalogues as possible should be collected and read carefully. Once you have made a choice, some careful measuring is in order to be certain the one you have picked will fit your requirements. In some cases, a company representative will visit your home to help you choose the right components. McGowan and DuBern point out, however, that nothing works as well as getting to see one of the finished porches made from that company's kit.

If the company seems reluctant to give you the names and addresses of some of their customers, proceed with great caution, since there is no reason why the firm shouldn't be proud to have you see examples of their work. If you do not do this, whatever the reason, at least see whether the company has display sites that can be visited.

You cannot be warned too many times about the need to get a permit before any work of this kind is contemplated. Within the last few weeks, I have heard of two cases where homeowners had to tear down installations because they neglected to get the proper clearances for their projects. Sure, people will tell you stories of non-permit construction work that has been up for many years without trouble, but that is generally because nobody has complained. One complaint and you have a king-sized headache.

Detailed instructions are given on building the porch yourself. It is pointed out that you can do every single bit of work or you can use prefabricated components such as window and vestibule frames, which combine door and window openings to speed up construction. Should you wish to build up a pitched-and-tiled roof to match the main roof of the house, this advice is given:

"Build up the walls as before and link them with joists to carry the porch ceiling. Then fit in pairs of rafters, cut a ridge board and assemble the porch roof structure, skew-nailing the components together like a full-scale roof. Add felt and battens, tile the roof and use lead or self-adhesive flashing to seal the gap between the porch and the house wall. Finish off by adding fascia boards and fill in the gable end with exterior-quality plywood, timber cladding and vertical tiles. Fix gutters to the fascia board, then decorate with a standard paint system.

Elements take toll on crawl space

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

The crawl space under a house can be a constant source of irritation. And usually is.

Although building codes usually specify how much space there should be between the bottom of the floor joists and the ground, it never seems to be enough when the times comes to fit in there. Even when entrance to the area is possible without too much trouble, things get very cramped when tools must be used in order to make a repair.

There are also regulations for the amount of ventilation that is required to prevent the crawl space from generating high humidity and excessive condensation, a combination that causes all sorts of problems. Generally, there should be one square foot of vent area for each 1,500 square feet provided there is a moisture seal, with one square foot of vent area for each 150 square feet if there is no moisture seal.

What's a moisture seal? Anything which helps to keep moisture out of the space. A ground cover, which will be discussed in a moment, would be classified as a moisture seal. There are other regulations covering insulation and the covering of openings to the crawl space with wire mesh that is corrosion resistant.

Trouble eventually occurs because the codes aren't always followed. Some areas have no codes affecting crawl spaces and, even when everything is done correctly in the original construction, time and the elements take their toll.

Houses that use crawl space, such as those without full basements or with additions over land which has not been excavated, are sometimes tormented by dampness, condensation, cold floors and foul odors. Add insulation, provide ventilation, block humidity, and the problems will disappear.

When vents are provided in the wall around the crawl space, try to install them in pairs so that they allow cross ventilation. If you put one 20 feet in from one end of the house on one wall, place another the same distance on the opposite wall. If you have a total of 12 vents, for instance, they should be in opposite walls — 6 directly across the way from the 6 others.

There should be insulation between the floor joists of the house, usually in the forms of batts that fit snugly. Added protection against dampness can be given by also using roofing felt. Both can be stapled in place, with some kind of mesh stapled or hammered to the floor joists to hold everything firm. In putting the batts in place, be sure the vapor barrier part of the insulation faces the upstairs rooms. That's something to remember any time you use insulation or anything else with a vapor barrier: The barrier always should face the heated or warm part of the building. It's the barrier which must stop the high humidity before it gets into the insulation and renders it ineffective.

Ground moisture is responsible for more of the dampness in a crawl space. The moisture can be kept in the soil if the ground is sealed. Two materials effectively do this, although there are probably many more that would accomplish the same purpose. One is heavy roofing felt, the kind that is called 55-pound felt. The other is polyethylene having a thickness of at least 4 mils. Either of these should be spread carefully along the ground, lapped 3 or 4 inches. The word "carefully" is used because even a single tear in the material can affect the result, since it will allow moisture to get through. Once everything is in place along a lapped seam, put enough sand on the overlap so that it will stay in place regardless of the weather. Continue the job until the entire ground has been covered, all the seams overlapped and the sand well distributed.

In cold areas, people sometimes make the mistake of closing the wall vents when the temperature drops. Don't. All you will do is to halt the cross ventilation.

Determine needs before landscaping

LANDSCAPING — Jim Joslin looks on as Terri Johansen and her dog, Betty Dog, plant pampa grass. Now is a good time to set out shrubs and trees. They can get an early start on spring during the winter.

"A vital functioning landscape transcends mere decoration to become a unique expression of your personality and lifestyle," says Terri Johansen of a local landscaping firm.

When deciding how to landscape your home's environment, whether you do it yourself or have someone do it for you, the homeowner must first determine his needs: privacy, recreation, entertaining, relaxation, gardening, work and storage, she said.

Before designing, the homeowner should ask himself a few more questions. How much time, effort and money is he willing to use? How much is he willing to give to make plans work. Can he work on his landscape project in stages? "A modest, low maintenance landscape will serve better than a neglected high maintenance landscape," Mrs. Johansen said. The person may not have time to work on and maintain a high maintenance landscape.

The homeowner needs to look at what he has to work with, she said. Factors to consider are: how is house placed on the lot, where is soil drainage and its depth, shady and sunny places, how windows and walkways are placed, how the wind blows, where are the gas, water, phone and electric lines placed, where are the boundary lines, views to block, existing plantings and slopes.

"Plan first, then plant," says Mrs. Johansen. "Remember landscaping principles."

• Unity — The landscape should look like its all in one piece and not disjointed groupings — a total look. It needs to all work well together and with the structure and colors. "You don't want something bizarre looking out there. Things should be complimentary," she said.

• Balance — This means the landscape should have symmetry — avoid lopsidedness. Balance a large tree on one side with a grouping of smaller trees on the other, for example.

• Proportion — Keep landscape in scale with the structure of the building and the lot it is on. "Keep in mind when you plant a new plant that it may suit your landscape now and in the short range, but it may grow out of proportion and overwhelm your house as it matures," Mrs. Johansen said. "It helps to look at some mature plantings."

• Variety — Select plants in various colors, shapes, shades, textures to keep from being monotonous. It's best to consult a plant professional when it comes to plant selection, she said. "They will have the knowledge of size, shape, color and our soil, and will give you instruction on how to plant and care for the plants."

"Plan, make plant choices, then plant," she said.

Create custom look with ready-made draperies

Admire a friend's decorator-installed balloon shades or a cluster pleated valance? You don't have to be a mechanical engineer, or even clever, to put up your own dramatic custom-looking window treatments. Such effects are available in all sorts or easy-to-mount, ready-made draperies.

Enjoy instant gratification — a new look in no time. No carpenter's tool kit necessary, just a tape measure to gauge the window width and height before you go shopping and a screwdriver, ladder and hanging instructions once you're back home.

Some ready-makes are packaged hanging on hangers so they don't need ironing. Even the hooks are in place, truly providing you with instant decorating. Look for hooks that are adjustable to minute variations for perfect fit.

Choose your style: formal or fresh country. And, check for decorator detailing — ruffles, ruching, tiebacks, valances and generous, weighted hems.

Let loose with your imagination. If you have a picture window to cover, try combining a woven drapery in a neutral tone with the same style in another color and alternate the panels. Check out the bedroom ensembles. Some of the draperies are perfect for living rooms and dens, and the accessories, such as decorative pillows or table scarfs, really pull a room together.

Don't be afraid of the work involved to layer draperies for insulation and instant drama. Thermal backed fabrics offer the best insulation and lined draperies are preferable to unlined.

Fall is for planting, Johansen says

"Fall is for planting," says Terri Johansen of a local nursery. She offers a few tips for fall planting and landscape maintenance.

• Fertilize the lawn, shrubs and trees now for winterizing, she said. "Use fertilizer you normally use at 1/2 the amount."

• "Trees respond to feedings in late fall about the time of the first frost date."

• "Plant bulbs for next spring," she said. Bulbs must have a cooling period before they can bloom. They can be planted until about the first of December.

• Watering this winter is very important, Mrs. Johansen said. "Last year's freeze was so devastating because it was a dry freeze." People believe that if you water in the winter, it will freeze the plants. Not so. Water acts as an insulator and the ground is an insulator. If a gardener doesn't water during the winter, the soil dries out and the frigid air gets to the roots and freezes them like freeze-dried coffee. "If you hear a cold spell is on its way and you haven't watered lately, get out there and water." Water at least once a week for the yard and every 10 days for trees and shrubs.

• Fall is for planting. It's still a great time for planting shrubs and trees, Mrs. Johansen said. In a normal winter, they will make it through the winter and will have a head start for spring.

"If you put everything on a 10-day schedule of watering, next spring it will reward you with health and beauty. And it won't make your labor seem so in vain," Mrs. Johansen said. "Mulch the soil up in the beds or also put on a layer of decorative bark. This will help insulate and protect through the winter."

help insulate and protect through the winter."

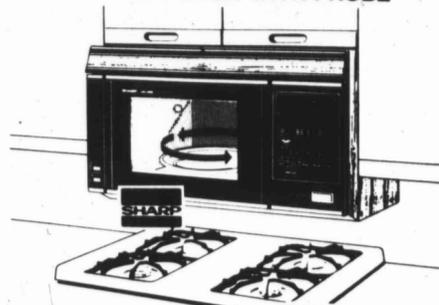

Questions and answers

Q — We have a long brick walk at the back of our house. It goes from the patio to a gazebo-like structure. A lot of moss has been growing between some of the bricks this summer. How can I get rid of it and why is it happening?

A — Moss usually grows only where there is no sun. Go to a local nursery and tell him what your problem is. He will sell you a chemical used for killing weeds and moss. Use it according to directions, because the chemical will kill other plants, too.

Plants make home warm

Working with plants and flowers is something that comes easy to local florist Kelly Draper, who has worked with plants most of his life. But few people have the florist's expertise with plants and flower arrangements.

Draper, 30, said he believes even one plant adds warmth to a house or apartment. A house with plants looks less stark, he said.

"Anything that is living adds warmth to an environment," Draper said. "Although they warm up a place, too much of a good thing can sometimes be bad. Of course, sometimes more is better."

Draper said plant and flower sales are about the same as they were several years ago. He added that people usually buy flowers or plants according to their emotions.

"Dried flower arrangements are very vogue right now," he said. "Dry and fresh flowers are more appealing to the modern buyer."

He also added that silk flowers, which are looking more and more life-like, will bring a change in the '80s.

Draper said he recommended a large plant to someone that was moving into a house or apartment for the first time. A larger plant would take up more space and make up for the lack of furniture, he said.

The type of plants or flowers to decorate a home or apartment would largely depend upon the individual, the young florist said.

"If someone has had a house for a while, the type of plant he would want or need would depend upon the decor and size of the house," Draper said.

Despite the type of plant a person chooses, it should be placed where it can get some sunlight, he said. "Since plants originated outside, all plants need some form of sunlight — some more than others," he said.

The amount of water a plant should have depends on the plant itself. If one isn't sure on how to water a plant, he should make sure the plant is never sitting in water, he said. The plant should also have good drainage to its roots. Over watering a plant is worse than under watering it, he added.

A misconception about flowers among buyers is that they all have to be expensive, Draper said.

GAME ROOM — This plant-filled dining and game room is ready to host a Saturday night card party or a late-night family snack. The plants give the room a more natural environment and warm atmosphere.

"Flowers have a reputation of being expensive," he said. "But that all depends on what and how much you want. You can pick up a handful of gladiolas or a handful of flowers and get out of the shop for less than $10."

"You can go home, throw these flowers in a vase and have the same arrangement you would see in a magazine. Another misconception about flowers is you have to buy an arrangement. You can make your own arrangement, you'd be surprised how easy it is."

The plants a person should initially buy are the ones that are the easiest to take care of and are the heartiest, he said. Such plants include Devil's Ivy, weeping fig and shefflera, Draper said.

"The climate here is not good for ferns," he said. "They grow well in the greenhouse but die after the are put in another area."

If a person takes a plant to his office he should make sure it is placed where it can get some sunlight, he said.

Some plant care tips he offered included: 1) Medium light locations are preferred by most green plants. This means near a window but protected from direct sunlight; 2) Moderately moist soil is best, avoid over watering; 3) Temperatures found in most homes are usually acceptable. Ideal temperatures are 70 degrees F. during the day and 55 degrees F. at night; 4) Use fertilizer only if plants are kept for an extended period of time. Use a house plant fertilizer at the manufacturer's suggested rate and frequency.

Imaginative renovation makes old homes new

The basic need to rebuild, remodel or improve is inherent in keeping up a house, but many consumers overlook the potential of making their investment an exceptional one by turning an ordinary dwelling into a spectacular home. In renovation, it just takes a little imagination.

A stone house, constructed in 1909, was considered a showcase for the craftsmanship of its hand-cast concrete blocks. In ensuing years, it served as a girl's dormitory and later housed a college professor who undertook massive renovations of the interior. The present owners bought it in 1981 and immediately set about exterior repairs which were long overdue.

Problems: Paint was peeling off the concrete and the home desperately needed insulation. Also because of the block construction, moisture was seeping in through the interior walls, and fungus and mold were appearing.

The decision to renovate was not a hard one, but the selection of products and a contractor required long hours. Before any permanent restructuring or remodeling is done any homeowner should evaluate all products and discuss design options with a contractor or architect.

These homeowners faced a fairly typical problem for many American families who own older homes. They wanted to preserve the architectural flavor of the house, but they needed a material that would be durable and insulating. They also wanted their home to look individual.

In this case the family looked into aluminum, steel and vinyl siding. And to give the impression of a basement, the siding begins three feet from the ground level. Since the house was a large one, to offer symmetry one type of siding was installed over the body of the house, but the gables were covered by solid eight-inch panels. This ability to select from a family of siding styles can offer unusual and beautiful effects in siding a home.

Homeowners can creatively mix patterns, coordinate trim and siding colors or mix vertical and horizontal patterns to make their house both beautiful and individual. As well as making economic sense, new siding can add architectural interest to any home.

SIDING — Eight-inch panels cover the gables while steel siding panels cover the body of the house, giving a symmetrical look to a large home.

Check roof often for repair, maintenance

It can start with a small ceiling drip, peeling wallpaper or discolored dry-wall, and it can represent the largest single expenditure a homeowner will make next to the price of the home itself — a new roof. With so much at stake, the National Roofing Contractors' Association offers advice on residential roof care.

Most roof work should not be do-it-yourself. Professional roofing contractors are trained to safely and efficiently repair or replace a roof. Novices can harm a roof with improper roofing techniques and severely injure themselves by falling off or through a roof in need of repair. Homeowners' maintenance should be confined to roof inspections in the fall and spring to check for cracked or curling shingles and to clean rain gutters filled with debris. A clogged drain can cause water to back up under shingles.

Ask the roofing contractor to provide a detailed written summary of the condition of the roof. A roof more than 15 years old is usually a candidate for replacement, while a roof less than 10 years old can often be repaired. The roofing contractor should be able to justify his decision.

If an older home is involved, it may have several roofs piled one on top of another. Local building codes dictate the maximum number of layers allowed, but you should know that multiple roofs can put stress on the roof supports, lead to uneven water drainage or cause shingles to warp or curl.

Make sure the home is properly insulated. A new roof on an improperly insulated home won't make much difference in home heating or air conditioning bills. Attic insulation or insulation blown under the roof should provide an R-value of 19. (Insulation effectiveness is rated by resistance or "R" value.) Most roofing contractors will be able to tell if a home is properly insulated.

Typically, you will receive two guarantees — one from the roofing contractor to cover labor and another from the manufacturer to cover materials. Warranty periods vary, but many contractors guarantee labor for two to five years, depending on climate, materials and the amount of abuse the roof will receive. Many manufacturers guarantee materials for 10 to 20 years. Keep in mind that a manufacturer's guarantee alone will not protect you if the system fails because of poor workmanship.

Check to see if liability insurance is covered in the contract or proposal. If not, the homeowner is liable for any injuries incurred by workmen or for any damage to the home during construction.

Verify that the roofing contractor is a professional, has a permanent place of business, a telephone number, a tax identification number and where, if appropriate, a business license. Request references, specifically from people who have had roofing work performed that is similar to yours.

Brighten your home's door

Your front door is the smile on your home, the first impression for visitors. That is why rich-looking, solid wood entrance doors are popular.

The best-selling wood entrance doors, according to a door manufacturer's spokesman, are those with deeply carved panels or leaded glass inserts, some with both. All wood doors are pieces of fine furniture and they need care, especially when exposed to the elements. The door should be checked at least once a year before winter hits.

Check the jamb first for needed repairs or refinishing, then check the threshold and the weather strip all around the door. Replace or repair where needed. Most heat loss occurs around the door, not through it, so money spent on good weatherstrip saves fuel bills.

Newer solid wood panel doors have done away with many problems of splitting, checking or separating at the joints. Laminated construction and new glues have done the trick. But the wood finish needs attention now and then. It's usually easy if the door has been properly finished originally.

If you go back to the original wood for refinishing, sandpaper and steel wool the surface to remove all marks, stains, oil and dirt. Do not use water or caustic or abrasive cleaners. Then use oil-base sealers, stains and finish coats (clear or paint), all from the same manufacturer to insure compatibility. Apply two coats of each, sanding between coats.

Doors sometimes begin to stick because of normal settling of the house. Solid wood doors have the advantage of being easy to plane or sand away the rubbing spots.

Turners renovate older home

Rick and Kat Turner were apartment dwellers until they decided to buy and renovate older homes.

"We like older houses. They have a lot of character," Turner said. Their plans were to buy one, fix it up, then sell it as an investment. However, since they see that the housing market isn't booming right now, they plan to hang on to it a little longer than originally planned.

The Turners bought their home at 609 Johnson from Frank Schoulty. It was a one-owner home owned by Schoulty's family. The home is about 45 years old.

"We like the construction of older houses," Turner said. "Plus I enjoy redoing it the way I want it." The Turners spent $10,000 to bring the home up to today's standards. They put on a new roof, blew acoustical material on the ceiling, refinished the cabinetry, added a breakfast bar and re-papered the walls. They plan to install central air and heating in about a month.

The Turners were impressed with the home's cabinetry. The kitchen cabinet had a bread drawer with a metal lining and a flour bin. The Turners are using the basement as a shop. Turner makes jewelry down there as a hobby.

"We're comfortable; we really enjoy it," Turner said. "When we sell this one we will buy another older house and remodel it. I enjoy doing stuff with my hands. It's fun. It's work."

"In addition to the intrinsic rewards you get, it's a cost effective way to get into a house, invest in a house," Turner said.

Turner is the police chief at the Big Spring Police Department. Mrs. Turner is studying court reporting.

RENOVATED HOME — Rick and Kat Turner were apartment dwellers until they decided to buy and renovate an older home. Shown above are the kitchen and dining room they remodeled. They re-papered the rooms, added a breakfast bar and refinished the original cabinetry.

Reminders help prepare your home for winter

Prepare your home and lawn for winter.

Close off rooms that are not used to save energy. Or keep the whole house cool and zone heat areas used by the family.

Zone heating, the use of small room heaters, is economical in large homes. A variety of supplemental heating sources are available. Price and needs dictate the type to purchase.

Fall is the most important season for many lawn and garden tasks.

Fall fertilizing is important feeding for grass. After a good final raking, fertilizing in the fall helps grass build more side roots or tillers and undergrown stems, which thicken the lawn.

Many trees and shrubs may also be pruned in the fall and early winter, including fruit trees and roses, which should be covered.

The faithful lawn care equipment used for summer clean-up should be prepared for winter hibernation.

Heating system should meet needs

Heating systems vary according to cost, efficiency and capacity. In choosing a heating system, it is important to choose the one that will best suit the needs and size of a house and save money.

All systems of heating are classified either in the space heating group or the central heating group. Fireplaces and electric-resistance heaters fall into the space heater group. Each heats the air directly and thus serves only individual areas.

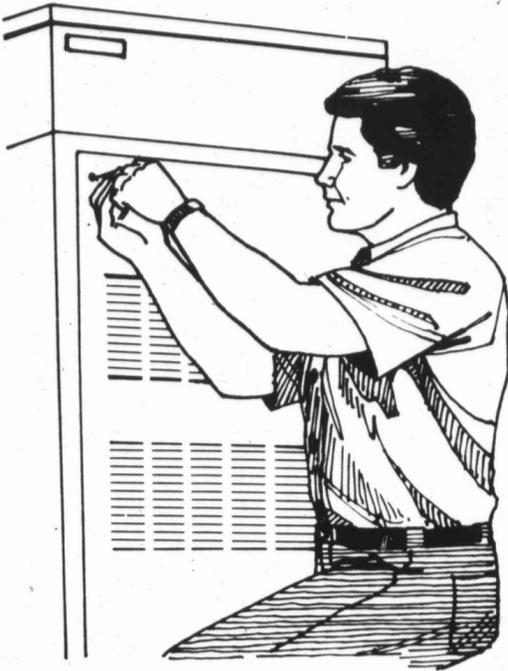

Central heat systems manufacture heat in one of several kinds of furnaces, then distribute it to all parts of the house via a heat-conveying network of pipes or ducts.

There are two kinds of gravity warm-air systems — the wall furnace and the central furnace. In the central system a single furnace is used to heat a number of rooms. The furnace usually is located in the basement, although some are designed for use on the main floor.

In wall-furnace space-heater systems, one or a number of small furnaces are used. These furnaces are located either under the floor or on the wall of the rooms to be heated. Each furnace serves the room or rooms in its immediate vicinity.

With an electric motor-powered blower to increase the air flow, the warm-air system has become the heating choice of modern home builders. The advantage of this system is that the ducting and blower of a forced warm-air system can also be used to circulate cold air from a central air conditioning unit during summer weather. The cost of this system helps to defray the cost of the other system.

Water is a better conductor of heat than air. It takes more time to absorb and release the heat of water than air. These features give it a slight advantage over warm-air heating systems where even-temperature whole-house heating is desired. There are gravity hot-water systems and there are forced hot-water systems, usually called hydronic systems.

However, it is not always economical to heat an entire home when only part of it has dropped significantly in temperature. With either of the previously described distribution techniques, heated water is circulated about the entire home whenever any part of it is cold. The reason for this stems from the fact that only one thermostat controls heating of the entire home in such a system. Thus, the home represents a single heating zone.

One solution is to provide more than one thermostat and individual piping arrangements, so that the home is divided up into two or more heating zones. Such an arrangement recognizes the fact that heat should be delivered only where it is needed.

Some homes that lack basements are built on concrete foundations with slab-type floors. This can be an advantage to heating since it allows easy installation of a special hot-water system called radiant heat. A network of small pipes is laid in the slab and convected to the circulating pump of the system. The network forms what is called a radiant panel when covered with a thin layer of poured concrete. This panel replaces the usual convectors and acts like one big low-temperature radiator. The radiant panel nowhere approaches the temperature reached by a radiator, yet the room is warm.

Not as common as floor systems, radiant wall and ceiling systems are space-saving answers to the problem of supplying heat to rooms where convectors would be unsightly or would consume too much wall space.

Water which is heated to 212 degrees at sea level becomes steam. Steam carries heat just as effectively as hot water and it is faster to get from source to radiator. Generally, too, steam delivers more heat energy to a radiator because its temperature is greater than the cooler 180 degrees that is the usual maximum in hydronic systems. Steam also circulates under its own pressure in a system, not by forced draft of a circulating pump or blower fan.

Central electric heating systems can be divided into three principal categories — electric warm-air furnace, electric boiler and central system with duct heaters. These three systems use a duct or piping system to distribute heat to the living area. They require a central fan or pump to move the heating medium through the system.

To keep bills from being costly when using electric heating systems, keep the filters clean. Dirty filters cause the equipment to work harder and use more electricity. Other features for the home that can cut electricity costs are weatherstripping and caulking around doors and windows, storm windows and doors, opening draperies or shades on sunny side of the house to let the sun shine in, and insulating ceilings, walls and floors.

Water is heated two ways in homes

There are two ways in which hot water is heated in most homes. Either the water is heated in a special water heater, or it is heated by the same furnace that heats water for hydronic heating systems.

Regular water heaters can be fueled with electricity or whatever fuel serves the house. Electric water heaters will cost more money to operate if exposed to outside temperatures. The water heater should be located as near as possible to the kitchen laundry area, because long pipe lines cause heat loss and cause increased operating costs. Texas Electric Service Co. also recommends setting the temperature on electric water heaters at 120 degrees, 140 degrees if using a dishwasher to save money on electricity bills.

In hydronic heating systems, the water that comes from the faucet is fresh and not part of that which circulates through the heating system. Even during the summer, when the furnace is not heating the house, the furnace heats the water.

With either system, there is usually a storage tank that holds enough hot water for typical usage and is constantly fed with heated water.

Questions and answers

Q. — Our basement floods two or three times a year. We have had all sorts of inspections and all sorts of suggestions, but what it all boils down to is that we need a sump pump to get the water out of the basement when the occasional flooding takes place. Is this a do-it-yourself job?

A. — It depends on your physical condition, age, knowledge of pipes and local plumbing codes. In short, no answer can be given that will cover everybody. The fact that you ask the question makes it fairly certain that the job should be done by a plumber. Different kinds of sump pumps are available, some of which cost more but work better.

Q. — We will soon have to get a part of our old plumbing system replaced. It is made up of iron pipes and fittings. Is it possible to have the new installation of copper?

A. — Iron and copper do not like each other. Because of what is called galvanic action, the iron will slowly deteriorate, although this may take many years. There are certain fittings that can be put between these two metals that will slow down or eliminate the galvanic action. Ask your plumber and take his advice.

Southwestern decor warms Brackeen home

WARMTH AND COMFORT — The home of Jackie and Travis Brackeen gives one the feeling of warmth, welcome, comfort and style. Pictured above is part of the large living room with its vaulted ceiling, heavy cedar beams and mica stone fireplace. The home's decor has a little bit of Indian influence and incorporates this with the couple's taste in furniture and design.

When walking into the Jackie and Travis Brackeen home one might get a feeling of warmth and welcome.

Also evident is the couple's love for Southwestern decor and art and their incorporation of the outdoors as part of their lives.

The home was built two years ago by the Brackeens, their son-in-law Larry Blossom, and Simon Correa Jr. Brackeen is an electrical contractor who also enjoys building homes.

Believe it or not, the home's decor was built around the kitchen sink. "Travis and I were in Lubbock and found the sink and liked it. It looks like it's warm and pottery." They found tile to match for the cabinets and went on to provide what Mrs. Brackeen calls Southwestern decor. The home has a little bit of Indian influence and incorporates this form of artwork with their tastes in furniture and design.

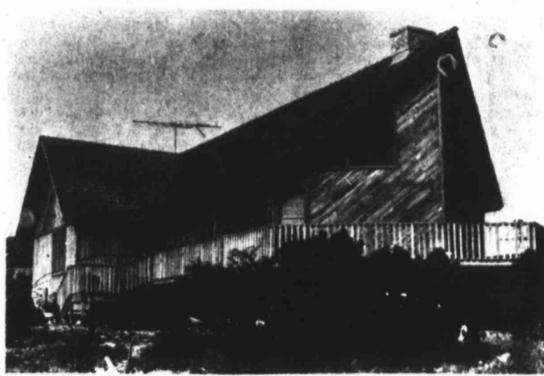

The Brackeens enjoy trying to make their home different so that it wouldn't be like everyone else's home. It's unique, Jackie thought.

Following the Brackeen's marriage three years ago, Brackeen decided he wanted to build a new home. When it was ready for them, about a year after they were married, Mrs. Brackeen sold her home and they moved in. "We built this at night and on the weekends."

The home has redwood and cedar construction and has a light, airy atmosphere, partially because of the many windows. The windows and window treatments were designed to incorporate the outdoors as part of the home's interior decor. The window treatments provide privacy as well as allow sunshine to come in.

When walking into the home, one comes into a large living room with a 28-foot vaulted ceiling and heavy cedar beams. The primary colors used in the room are navy, plum and white. The architecture features a fireplace of Mica stone that travels from the floor to the ceiling. It is flanked with wall units and windows. Several windows line the living room walls.

A seating area is directly in front of the fireplace. Off the side is a game table and behind the seating area is a pool table and another seating area. Behind the pool table is a spiral staircase that leads to an upstairs loft bedroom and bath. To the right of the staircase is the master bedroom and bath.

OUTDOORS — The home above was built by Travis and Jackie Brackeen, their son-in-law Larry Blossom, and friend Simon Correa Jr. two years ago. It has redwood and cedar construction, Mica stone from New Mexico and Saltillo tile from Mexico. It also incorporates the outdoor surroundings of the hills outside of Big Spring as part of the landscaping and interior Southwestern decor.

The flooring is Saltillo Mexican tile that the Brackeens hauled themselves from Mexico. The Mica rock, a translucent quartz-like rock, was dug from the side of a mountain in New Mexico. On the sidewalk outside the home, the Mica rock has a light underneath that shines through it at night. Inside the home, the Mica fireplace has a blue light that illuminates it.

The living room, as well as other rooms, is decorated with pieces of art the Brackeens have collected from trips they've taken. They chose things that looked as if they would blend in with the Southwestern atmosphere. Pieces are from Peru, Mexico, San Francisco, France, Hawaii, the Texas State Arts and Crafts Fair in Kerrville, and local artists. "We are collective. We like to surround ourselves with things from places we've been or seen."

The master bedroom features a full-length bay window, atrium doors, and another form of a vaulted ceiling. Indirect lighting is used in the room. The color scheme is navy, peach and tiger lily. Adjoining the bedroom is an open master bath architecturally shower, and vanity are of molded onyx.

Through the bedroom's atrium doors, the Brackeens can take a dip in their hot tub located on the back deck.

The upstairs room is approached by the spiral staircase. It is an open loft with vaulted ceilings fashioned in navy, mauve and white. The ceiling peaks in two perpendicular directions: parallel with the bedroom's direction and parallel with the adjoining bathroom. The bath ceiling is lined with fabric that coordinates with the shower curtain, window treatment, room divider, curtains, and bedspread.

The kitchen is to the left of the spiral staircase down stairs. It features a tile countertop, custom-designed cabinetry by Simon Correa Jr. — which is all drawers, two stained glass cabinet doors made by Bill Brooks, a Jenn-Aire range, walk-in pantry, utility closet, dining area and guest half bath.

When the Brackeens buy something to decorate their home, it has to be large. The openness and large size of their home make the items appear in proportion with the rest of the home. Items that are small seem to disappear.

Energy-saving storm windows save money

Storm windows are energy savers because they prevent the loss or gain of heat and the entrance of air through glass surfaces and windows, says the Texas Electric Service Company.

Energy gets through a window in one of two ways: infiltration (leaking through cracks) and conduction (heat or cold travels through solid objects such as a pane of glass or a window frame). A storm window provides a second barrier, raising the resistance to conduction and reducing infiltration. The two panes of glass also trap a layer of air between them which acts as a good insulator. Properly installed storm windows can save on total energy bills.

Pre-made storm windows which you can install yourself are available. There are several different types to fit your specific needs. You might also want to call a contractor and discuss installing storm windows.

But even if you're an unhandy person, you can make your own inexpensive wood frame storm windows if you prefer. All you need are some basic tools and readily available materials. The step-by-step directions below will explain how to use them. It's a good idea to read them thoroughly before you begin.

The tools you will need are a mitre box, saw, hammer, utility knife, stapler, tape rule and square. The materials you will need are good quality straight wood — 1x2-inches or 1x3-inches depending on window size, screen molding, 3/4-inch nails with head, clear 4-mil vinyl or mylar, corrugated fasteners and corner braces or other type corner fastener.

HOW TO BUILD

Measure the opening where your storm window will fit, either in place of your present screen or over your screen. If it is 3x4-feet or smaller, use 1x2-inch wood. If larger, use 1x3-inch wood. Buy enough to frame the opening. For our purposes, we'll use a measurement of 3x4-feet.

Cut two pieces of 1x2-inch wood about 1/8-inch shorter than the 3-foot width (35 1/8-inches). Cut two pieces 3 3/4-inches less than 4-feet (44 1/8-inches). This is because each 1x2 is 1 1/2-inches wide.

Set the pieces on your work surface the way they will fit together. Then, holding them in place so they will make square corners, fasten at each joint with a corrugated or other type corner fastener. Be sure the pieces don't spread as you hammer. Flip the frame over and put a fastener in the other side at each joint.

Place the screen molding on the frame about 1/4-inch from the inner edge and mark it for a corner joint (a 45 degree angle mark). Then using the saw and mitre box, cut the molding where you have marked.

If you are going to paint the frame, now is the best time, before you install the plastic. Starting at the middle of one end of the frame and working toward the ends, staple the plastic material to the face of the 1x2. Do the same with the other three sides.

Nail the screen molding over the plastic and staples, and trim off the excess plastic. Your storm window is now ready to put in place. You may replace your window screen with the storm window or cover your wood frame screen with it by attaching it to the window frame. Various types of screen mounting hardware are available from your building supply dealer.

Air conditioning use dictates purchase

Air conditioning is the control of temperature, motion, humidity, dust, pollen and soot in the air. There are several types of air conditioners and ways of using them efficiently, which should be considered when purchasing an air conditioning system.

The heart of any air conditioner is a self-contained refrigeration system. Air temperature and moisture content are reduced by circulating the air past a chilled surface. The air temperature drops and simultaneously, airborne water vapor condenses out of the air on the cold surface.

Air coolers are often used to lower air temperature in hot, dry climates. In these systems air is blown through a water soaked pad which causes rapid evaporation of the moisture. A substantial amount of heat is required to transform the water from liquid to vapor. This heat is taken from the air moving through the wet pad, lowering its temperature in the process. At the same time it is raising the relative humidity.

If the original moisture content is low enough, an evaporative air cooler can lower air temperature several degrees. However, the relative humidity must be less than 40 percent for an air cooler to work satisfactorily.

There are two categories in which all home air conditioners fall. Self-contained or unitary air conditioners include the complete mechanism in a single package. Window-mount, "through-the-wall" and attic-mount central units are unitary air conditioners.

Built-up air conditioners are composed of two or more interconnected sub-assemblies that may be located apart from each other. Many central air conditioning systems designed to cool an entire house are built-up units.

In general, built-up systems can be much larger than unitary air conditioners and have somewhat greater flexibility to adapt to different architectural requirements.

Most unitary room air conditioners have the capacity to draw uncooled outside air into the room at the same time they circulate cooled room air. Such ventilation supplements the infiltration to keep inside air fresh and free from stale odors.

Many portable window-mount unitary air conditioners are designed for 120-volt AC operation and can be plugged into any wall outlet. However, since the Electrical Code requires that plug-in appliances not draw more than 12 amperes of current, the cooling capacity of these small machines is limited to a maximum of 900 or 10,000 BTU/hour. Higher capacity units of both large unitary and built-up central air conditioners are designed to be powered by 240-volts AC and must be connected to the electrical service entrance panel via an appropriate circuit breaker or fuse.

Because an air conditioner must move large volumes of air through a room or house in order to provide cooling, filtering is necessary. It helps remove dust, lint and large particle of airborne pollutants that would otherwise be blown about the cooled room.

It is important to keep the filter clean because a clogged filter slows down air flow through the evaporator coil, greatly lowering cooling capacity. In a small unitary air conditioner, a clogged filter may also trap moisture next to the evaporator. This, in conjunction with reduced air flow, can cause a layer of ice to form on the coil, completely blocking air movement.

Filters should be checked at least once a month, because dirty filters cause the equipment to work harder and use more electricity.

When choosing a cooling system, it is important to buy the size and model that best suits the needs for the room or house. Central air conditioners that have a most favorable "seasonal energy efficiency ratio" may have a higher initial cost, but can save money on operating costs.

A window air conditioner which has the highest energy efficiency ratio may also have a higher initial cost, but can save money on operation cost.

Excessive cooling capacity can also lead to an uncomfortable cool and damp interior environment. A too-large unitary unit may cool room air so rapidly that the thermostat switches the unit off before enough moisture has been taken from the air to lower the humidity.

An air conditioner must overcome a variety of different heat sources in order to cool and dehumidify the air within a room or house. Weatherstripping and caulking around doors and windows will help prevent excessive hot air infiltration. Storm doors and windows can further help to reduce the needless entry of heat. Using awnings over windows or drawing draperies, blind or shades will help reduce heat in a room.

Felt protects roof from chemical, natural damage

Q. — I am having a house built and recently watched the roofer build what he called a structural deck to hold the roof shingles. He put some kind of felt over the deck. I meant to ask him what it was for, but he got a way before I could. Can you answer the question?

A. — There are several reasons. It insures that the shingles will be applied over a dry roof deck. It prevents the entrance of wind-driven rain in the event the shingles are lifted up, damaged or torn by unusually high winds. And it prevents direct contact between the shingles and the resinous areas of the wood which, because of possible chemical incompatibility, would damage the shingles.
