Webb base in toxic waste probe

Defense Department looking for groundwater contamination

Staff and bureau reports

The Department of Defense has scheduled an evaluation of the former Webb Air Force Base site in Big Spring for the presence of possible hazardous waste contamination or remnants of unsafe buildings, according to the project manager for the Defense Department program.

An inspection of the Webb base site, now the Big Spring Airpark, will begin in either 1985 or 1986 under the Defense Environmental Restoration Program, according to Frank Shearer, project manager with the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers in Huntsville, Ala.

Dave Palmer, an environmental protection specialist with the Defense Department in Washington, said the department is investigating almost 2,000 former military sites and that Webb is included in the next 600 to be evaluated.

However, the Department of Defense has already completed Phase I of the investigation of Webb for the location of possible hazardous waste sites, according to an Air Force spokesman at Randolph Air Force Base in San Antonio.

That record check was completed between Sept. 17 and Sept.

21, said 2nd Lt. Scott Thiel, with the public affairs department at Randolph. Results of the record check will not be released until some time in February, Thiel said.

However, Shearer said there was no apparent "urgency" to the examination of the Webb base.

Webb was "not identified to us as anything critical at this point" for immediate evaluation, said Shearer. "What we've tried to do is to address (most quickly) those that have urgency reported to us," Shearer said.

The next step in the inspection is the taking of core samples, Thiel said.

About 200 sites are under current evaluation, Shearer said.

The bases will be examined for three categories of possible problems, according to Palmer. See Webb page 2-A

Peace bonds

Truce or consequences

Some people fear for their lives. Threats of bloodshed hang in the air. Violence may have already been committed.

It may happen when relationships or marriages break up. Someone can't or will not accept a breakup. That person may believe a good beating of someone or something will take care of disgruntling matters.

How does a potential victims protect themselves and their property?

They may likely go before a magistrate and ask for a peace bond to be served.

"Peace bonds are a dangerous thing," said Lewis Heflin, a Howard County justice of the peace.

Heflin has issued 68 peace bonds so far in 1984. A majority of those have had to do with couples breaking up or marriages turned sour.

"Somebody gets mad at you — and offers to whip you — you can come up here and file a peace bond. It's a good way to get things quiet. We explain to them real thoroughly what's going to happen if they do bond," Heflin said.

When a peace bond is served the accused party under arrest can make arrangements to bond out of jail. After 10 days, he appears before the magistrate, who decides if the threat was serious enough to keep the bond pending. That results in the accused paying a fine and keeping peace with the party who requested the peace bond. If the accused breaks peace conditions, he will go to jail for a year.

"Some people don't care, but I hate to see a man lose a year of his life in jail and not doing much of anything," Heflin said.

How does Heflin decide whether to leave a bond on someone?

"Well, it depends if he's going to go out there and beat fire out of her again, I'm going to lock him up," Heflin said. "Some guys get a bang out of beating their wives up. They really do."

Heflin said he will only issue peace bonds if the couple has broken up.

"You can't have 'em living together and file a peace bond," Heflin said. "It's not going to work."

District Attorney Rick Hamby said Chapter 7 of the State Criminal Code, which defines and regulates the issuing of peace bonds, is unique because it is an action that someone can take before something happens — a procedure that the Constitution of the United States frowns on.

Shaw receives 'chili' reception

By CAROL BALDWIN
Staff Writer

Supporters of State Rep. Larry Don Shaw gulped down bowls of hot chili and tapped their toes to country and western tunes Thursday during the "sometime annual shindig, shakedown and schilli cookoff" fundraiser.

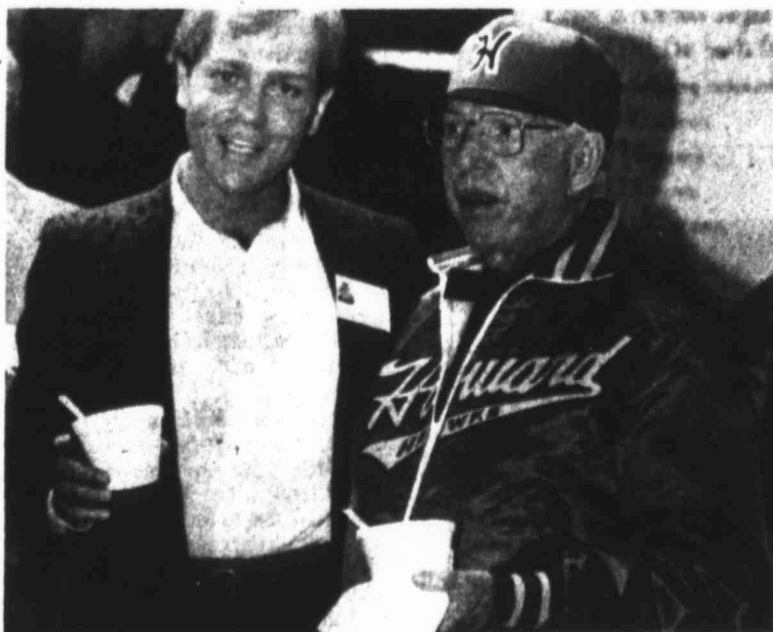

Eight teams of chili chefs set up booths around the Dora Roberts Community Center and dished out samples for judges and spectators. Chili prepared by the crew from Faye's Flowers took home first place honors for the best chili of the evening. Second were students from the dental hygiene classes at Howard College. The Howard College nurses took third.

The student nurses also walked away with the prize for the "best dressed" cooks in a room filled with zany costumes.

Winning the 'best booth' award was the Jailhouse team with Mary Thomas and Ann Weaver. Taking second were the Buzzard Breath's Chili Freaks from the SouthWest Collegiate Institute for the Deaf.

Stenholm mum on meeting with O'Neill

Harte-Hanks Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Rep. Charles Stenholm, who has announced plans to challenge Rep. Thomas P. O'Neill for the House speakership, Friday emerged from a meeting with O'Neill declining to say if he won any concessions for conservatives which would cause him not to make the challenge.

The Stamford Democrat, who is the leader of conservative Democrats known as Boll Weevils, left the hour-long session with O'Neill in his Capitol office to huddle with eight of his conservative colleagues.

Upon entering the second meeting, he declined to comment on the meeting with O'Neill.

As he began the session with his fellow Boll Weevils, however, an aide to the West Texas lawmaker handed Stenholm a draft copy of a letter he will send to his colleagues explaining the reasons for his challenge to O'Neill, should he go through with his plans.

The challenge would be made in a closed-door caucus of House Democrats next week.

To call off his challenge, Stenholm had said he wanted more moderates and conservatives on a few key House committees and assurances that several controversial bills will "get hearings, be marked-up and get voted on the House floor."

Stenholm charged that O'Neill, D-Mass., has single-handedly blocked consideration of such items as a constitutional amendment to balance the budget, school prayer and the creation of enterprise zones.

If Stenholm places his name in nomination, it would be the first such challenge against O'Neill since he became Speaker in 1977.

In declaring his candidacy last week, the West Texas conservative said O'Neill "is too far to the left" to continue as House Democratic leader.

Player tackles assailant

CLEVELAND — A would-be robber chose the wrong victim when he held up Cleveland Cavaliers forward Lonnie Shelton, police said. The 6-foot-8, 255-pound basketball player tackled the assailant before he could pull a gun and preached to him as well. The gun went off twice during the scuffle, but no one was hit, police said. Police said Gregory L. Smith, 24, of Cleveland, who is 6-foot-4 and weighs about 160 pounds, was charged with aggravated robbery. He was being held today in the Cuyahoga County Jail in lieu of $5,000 bond, and an arraignment was scheduled for Dec. 7.

The move threatens most construction. "The judicial branch cannot roll over and play dead," Judge Paul Garrity said Thursday.

SEOUL, South Korea — U.S. Army Gen. William J. Livsey presented America's Bronze Star medal today to the family of a South Korean soldier killed in a shootout with North Koreans in the demilitarized zone.

A U.S. soldier serving with the U.N. Command on South Korea's side of the dividing line was wounded in the shootout one week ago, and Livsey said the medal was given "on behalf of a very grateful United States of America."

MIAMI — The Associated Press Managing Editors Association adopted a resolution today calling on the Indian government to "cease all proceedings, under way and contemplated," against AP correspondent Brahma Chellaney.

Schroeder's condition changes to serious

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — William Schroeder could be out of intensive care in a matter of days, his doctor says, and Schroeder's wife says she is grateful that the artificial heart beating in her husband's chest has given her more time with him.

"Once we went down that aisle toward that operating room, I was relieved because I felt that my husband was fading away from me and now I feel that I have him back and that I have another chance with him," Margaret Schroeder said Thursday, when the family appeared at a press briefing for the first time since Schroeder's artificial heart implant on Sunday.

"A week ago he was in a lot of pain and short of breath," said oldest son Melvin, 30. "He's the old Dad again."

Today Schroeder is scheduled to test the Heimes portable driver, an 11-pound power supply for the mechanical heart that can replace the 323-pound, waist-high drive unit sitting on the floor at the foot of Schroeder's bed, said Dr. Allan M. Lansing, chairman of the Human Heart Institute International.

Although Schroeder's recovery has continued to amaze his doctors, Lansing said Schroeder's condition has not been changed from critical to serious.

"In my own mind I think he's serious," Dr. Allan M. Lansing said, "but he hasn't been upgraded from critical to serious on the books."

Lansing noted that Schroeder, a 52-year-old retired quality assurance specialist from Jasper, Ind., still faces many hurdles, including the possibility that infection will develop and blood clots will become lodged in the lungs.

"I apologize for being enthusiastic," Lansing said, but "I want you to know how everybody feels" at the hospital. Schroeder could be moved from the coronary intensive care unit to a private room as early as the beginning of next week if his recovery continues to go as well as it has been, Lansing said.

Mazda in the Motor City

DETROIT — Mazda Motor Corp. announced today it will build small cars in Michigan, becoming the fourth Japanese auto company to put an assembly operation in the United States.

Construction of a $450 million automobile plant in Flat Rock, Mich., will start in the spring, the company said.

Mazda, Japan's third largest automaker, said production is expected to start by late 1987, and the plant's capacity eventually will reach 240,000 units a year. The plant will employ about 3,500 people.

"Mazda should participate actively in the economic growth of the U.S.," said Hirota Iida, the company's managing director, at a news conference in Detroit.

Nation's foreign trade deficit tops $100 billion

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's foreign trade deficit narrowed to $9.2 billion last month, the government reported today, but that was still enough to push the yearly total past $100 billion for the first time ever.

Exports rose slightly from their September level while imports declined, the Commerce Department report said.

October's deficit, an improvement from September's $12.6 billion, was the smallest monthly

Still, for the first 10 months of the year, the value of imports flowing into the United States surpassed American companies' exports by $105.5 billion, the report said. That dwarfs the old deficit record for a full year — last year's $99.4 billion — and this year's total is now expected to nearly double the old mark.

The main reason for the increase, by all accounts, is the relatively high value of the U.S.

dollar in relation to most other nations' currencies, a situation which makes foreign goods cheaper for Americans to import and American goods more expensive for foreigners to buy.

"These continuing problems underscore the need to cut the budget deficit to reduce interest rates further to lower the dollar," Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige said in a statement released by aides.

"Since mid-year, deficits have averaged nearly $140 billion at an annual rate," he said. But he added that "the worsening trend should slow next year."

In October, today's report said:

Imports totaled $27.6 billion, up 1.2 percent from September, including increases for various kinds of machinery and some farm products such as corn.

U.S. Rep. CHARLES STENHOLM

Top Boll Weevil high in congressional cotton

Harte-Hanks Washington Bureau
 WASHINGTON — Rep. Charles Stenholm, as the leader of conservative Democrats known as Boll Weevils, may have reached the crossroads of a fast-paced six-year congressional career.

Stenholm, D-Stamford, is considered one of the most intelligent and hard-working members of the Texas delegation, according to a Harte-Hanks Washington Bureau opinion sample of several Texas congressmen.

However, he is an outsider in his own party. In the 98th Congress (1983-1984), Stenholm voted against his party's majority more than any other House Democrat.

And, now, he is leading a fight to topple House Speaker Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill, D-Mass.

What does he stand to gain from being such a blatant rebel?

"There are many of us in Congress who believe this is the time to begin rebuilding the party for 1986 and several feel that if we're going to do that, it's time to get started," said Stenholm, who helped House Republicans push across President Reagan's economic program in 1981.

But some Texas colleagues said the O'Neill challenge may be the last straw, offending scores of House Democrats and creating increased rancor between liberal and conservative Democrats.

"Charlie has every right to do it but it will just create a little hate and animosity," said Rep. Charles Wilson, the Lufkin Democrat who does not support Stenholm's bid to unseat O'Neill.

However, in light of President Reagan's 49-state victory, Stenholm said Democrats must have an open debate over the direction of the party. Stenholm, who repeatedly has discouraged suggestions he should switch parties, expressed hope that the party will come to the center.

A study of his voting habits showed Stenholm introduced 40 bills in his six years in Congress but not one has ever been passed into law.

Prisoner transferred to San Angelo

Tom Green County sheriff's deputies were enroute to Howard County jail this morning to transfer Richard E. Flores, 17, of San Angelo to county jail in San Angelo.

Flores was a passenger in a car that was involved in a shooting Monday morning on S. Highway 87 near Forsan. Howard County sheriff's deputy O.D. Majors shot and killed Joe Guadalupe Garza, 16, of San Angelo as he and Flores were fleeing Big Spring police in a stolen vehicle from San Angelo.

Deputy Majors had set a roadblock on Highway 87 after police requested help from the

Tom Green county sheriff Ernest

D. Haynes was not aware of Flores' transfer until he checked to see that one of his deputies was enroute to Big Spring.

Prison ministry full-time job for Whitten

By KIM KIRKHAM
Religion Editor

After serving as minister of music at First Baptist Church of Big Spring for 12 years, Joe Whitten has resigned to pursue his own business in a career that he began a decade ago.

Whitten began taking a youth group, "His Children", on contemporary gospel concert tours in prisons 10 years ago. They have performed in 40 prisons across nine states.

"One day it just came to me. I had an impression that ministering to prisons might be something unique that I'd like to try," Whitten said. "I had a desire to take a selected group of talented youth and develop a positive ministry whereby they could serve the unfortunate people of society. Little did I realize that it would grow into a full-time work."

"His Children" appeared in concert at the annual meeting of the American Correctional Association in San Antonio in August. Prison directors, wardens, chaplains and correctional officers from all over the nation as well as foreign countries attended the convention. "We have been invited for a repeat performance next year in Miami, Florida," said Whitten.

As a result of the appearance, "His Children" has been invited to prisons across the nation that previously had been closed to volunteer groups. Six states have given the group written permission to bring their ministry into any prison in their state. The head of the New York Police Academy also is trying to get Whitten to bring his group to city jails in the city of New York.

"It's almost unreal how the entire nation has opened up to this project, and it took 10 years to bring it to this point," Whitten said.

John Allman, retired superintendent of the Big Spring Federal Prison Camp, traveled with "His Children" last summer. He helped MOVING IN — Joe Whitten moves into his new office, room 203 of the Permian Building. Whitten, former minister of music at the First Baptist Church, and John Allman, retired superintendent of the Big Spring Federal Prison Camp, formed the non-profit, tax-exempt corporation — Joe Whitten Prison Ministries. The corporation will form a group of eight college-age students and give religious concert tours in various prisons across the nation.

the group gain entrance to prisons that never before allowed outsiders to enter.

Because of the growth and success of the "His Children", Whitten and Allman formed a non-profit, tax-exempt corporation — Joe Whitten Prison Ministries. The office is room 203 of the Permian Building. Whitten is executive secretary and Allman is chairman of the board.

Eight talented and dedicated college-age youth will be selected from applicants across the country for the purpose of presenting concerts in prisons for 20 weeks during the year. "There are enough invitations already received to keep a group such as this busy for three years," Whitten said.

Whitten's wife will help with the corporation. "She's gonna be a vital part of it," he said. Virginia Whitten, who teaches art to inmates at the Big Spring Federal Prison Camp, has been a sponsor of most "His Children" tours.

Mrs. Whitten also has worked on a personal one-to-one basis with women inmates in the field of self-improvement through color analysis and make-up application, leaving each a packet of cosmetics.

"This ministry is unique in the fact that the audiences that this group ministers to cannot donate money for their support," said Whitten. "Donations must come through grants and contributions from institutions, foundations, individuals and those who care. Funding will be enhanced because the organization is a non-profit corporation, religious in nature, and non-denominational."

"Our present plans are to stay in Big Spring and make this our headquarters, first because we have a lot of friends and we're buying our home, and second this is where our ministry began," said Whitten. "I want the people of Big Spring to be proud of this type of program," he said. "This is where it all started and I want to keep it here — a community project."

"Receptions and benefits to enlighten the community of Big Spring are planned for the immediate future, at which time a video tape will be shown of a live concert in a California prison," Whitten said. The Whittens and Allmans also will be available to speak and sing at civic clubs, churches and different organizations for programs telling about the new business.

The prison ministry is no longer connected with the First Baptist Church. However, "after I resigned (Sunday) night, as a vote of confidence to help me get started in this line of work, First Baptist Church voted to pay my salary for four months until I can get established and get the proper funding for this corporation," said Whitten.

The church also donated to the corporation the portable sound equipment Whitten has been using in his prison work through the church.

"There is somewhat of an insecure feeling stepping out of a permanent position," he said. "This is the first time in the past 33 years that I have not been employed full-time by a church."

Whitten will miss the youth that have developed in music under his direction. But "I will have this group of eight to work with in a choral setting that will somewhat satisfy that desire."

"I realize there are some people that think inmates should be locked up and the key thrown away, but the main purpose for our going is to help rehabilitate these people in prison," Whitten said. "Ninety-eight percent of these people will be coming back into society, and we're wanting to deal with them there (prison) so they will be better citizens when they come out."

Babysitting will be available for the dinner. The cost is $1 per hour per child. Each child needs to bring a sack lunch.

St. Paul's choir will present its annual Christmas program at 7 p.m. Dec. 23, under the direction of Suzanne Haney. Congregational singing will be a part of the program.

Children enrolled in Mid-Week School will present "Jesus, King of Love," at 6 p.m. Dec. 24. The program consists of songs and recitations by the children ages 3 to 8th grade.

Kohl will conduct a Christmas Day service at 10 a.m. Dec. 25 in the church sanctuary.

Four named 'Distinguished Students'

Four students from First Presbyterian Church of Big Spring have been accepted for membership in the Society of Distinguished American High School Students.

Tim Carroll, Kristie Grimes, Paul Kennemur and Rachel Tedesco were awarded membership. The Society also presented a National Appreciation Award to M. Keith Ross, the student's sponsor.

Founded in 1968, the Society has honored many outstanding high school students in the nation. To qualify for membership, a nominee must excel in academics, extracurricular or civic activities and be nominated by a local sponsor. Once accepted, members become eligible to compete for college scholarships through the Society's National Awards Program. This year 128 colleges and universities have earmarked scholarship funds for Society members.

The members' names and biographical accomplishments will be listed in the Society's 1984 Membership Registry.

Handmade crafts projects provide therapy for patients

Craft projects are being used effectively as a therapeutic tool for patients prescribed to psychiatric occupational therapy at Big Spring State Hospital.

Crafts skills are developed and used by patients in their therapy at the Rehabilitative Services department.

Occupational therapy (OT) students from Texas Tech University School of Medicine toured the department, Monday, to observe the application of occupational therapy in a psychiatric setting.

Occupational therapy, art therapy and the Sheltered Workshop in the Rehabilitative Services department serve two purposes: they provide rehabilitation for patients and means of support for the programs.

Occupational Therapy uses crafts as a therapeutic tool, says Nat Hart, registered occupational therapist at the Hospital. "If a patient has problems with depression then we will give them an activity to develop self-esteem." For patients with poor motor skills, working with the craft projects helps them develop some motor skills.

In OT, patients work on wood burning, ceramics, leatherwork and needlework projects. They make two of each; they keep one and the state keeps one. The state sells the craft items to the public. They are displayed at the Rehabilitation Office at the Allred Building. Proceeds help fund future projects the patients work on for therapy. Many people buy the handmade items for gifts or for themselves. Art therapy patients paint.

"We aren't in it for the money," Hart said. "It helps the state reimburse OT. It gives us that much more money to spend for therapy."

Patients usually spend one hour a day, five days a week at the shop working on projects for therapy. Chronic long-term patients continue this therapy as long as they're in the hospital, which could be years, Hart said. Admissions (or short-term) patients may be in the hospital two or three months and have occupational therapy during their stay.

Occupational therapy is not only used for psychiatric rehabilitation, Hart said, but also for physical dysfunctions with hand and arm injuries, in school districts and with children for sensory integration.

In sensory integration, it helps people who have problems with responding as quickly enough to their senses as a normal person. It improves motor judgement and reaction. Occupational therapy also provides geriatric patients with activities that will make them experience and react to things in their environments.

In the Sheltered Workshop, patients also receive occupational therapy by building wooden toys for children, bird houses, and cutting boards. They also assemble together plastic forks, spoons, and knives with napkins, sugar, salt and pepper into plastic bags for use at community meals that use the items.

The toys, bird houses and cutting boards made in the workshop are for sale to the public and are often in demand during Christmas time. They have been sold at the Howard County Fair, the Hospital's Rehabilitation Offices, and Handmade USA in Lubbock. Proceeds return to the workshop for additional therapy projects and production needs.

Originally, the Sheltered Workshop was set up as a form of patient therapy, as well as a method for patients to develop job skills, make and achieve goals, and a way to keep patient morale up. Patients produce the toys, bird houses and cutting boards from scrap lumber donated by community residents. They are paid for their work on a piecework basis. They use their earnings for shopping trips or the Canteen, the hospital's snack bar.

The pay is incentive, says Dorothy Stovall, production supervisor. The patients are not in the program to make money, but making money and producing toys gives the patients a goal to accomplish, she added. The Workshop is part of the total treatment of many patients.

Dear Abby

How much board for adult children?

DEAR ABBY: Please rush your answer, as there are five of us waiting for it.

How much board per week should children pay who have graduated from high school, have paying jobs (40 hours per week) and still at home?

One child might eat 21 meals per week at home, the other two. How do you figure this?

Would non-relative boarders pay the same?

US IN WORCESTER, MASS.

DEAR US: There is no flat fee. Much would depend upon the parents' finances. Are they well-to-do, or just getting by? How about the "working" child? What other financial obligations have they? Car payments? Insurance? Clothing? Laundry? Medical bills? Spouses?

Each family has its own set of circumstances to consider. Some parents expect their children to pay the same as any other boarder. Others do not. Word it out in a manner that will satisfy all concerned.

Dr. Donohue Couple preparing for disease's onset

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Parkinson's disease seems to be hereditary in my husband's family. His uncle had it and at a time when there was no medicine for it he deteriorated. Please tell us about the symptoms to look for and at what age they usually occur so we can be prepared. — Mrs. R.S.

You explains this important, and misunderstood, gland. To get a copy, enclose one dollar and a long, stamped and addressed envelope to Dr. Donohue in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, IL 60611.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

We don't know the cause of Parkinson's, so all we can say with regard to heredity is that there may be more of it in families who have a history of it. That is not strong evidence for hereditary transmission, I should add. I'll do what can about your other questions.

It usually occurs late in life, after age 60, the first signs being very subtle ones, like a loss of dexterity or a difficulty in starting a motion. Its course thereafter is unpredictable — for some slowly progressive, for some rapid advance to serious involvement. Other signs include tremor of fingers at rest, loss of normal arm swinging when walking, or loss of stability with a tendency to fall. Today there are effective control drugs.

Peace bonds

stopping someone who has threatened you or getting a disagreement aired and hopefully stopped before something or someone gets hurt," Hamby said.

"Lots of people get upset at us (law officials) because we can't act until a felony offense has been committed," Hamby said. Hamby said he has his doubts, though, on how effective a peace bond is.

Jake Glickman, former director of social services at the Big Spring State Hospital and a state certified social worker, sees peace bonds related to the idea of discipline.

"When someone such as a child misbehaves, he or she gets disciplined. Discipline works when it is used every time the misbehavior occurs," Glickman said.

Glickman remembers earlier in his career (when he practiced in Fort Worth) marriages in which violence was a way of life.

"Violence was a way to cope with things," Glickman said. "Jail was a very good solution for those individuals because it became a simple way of prevention."

Heflin sees the jail sentencing possibility as a good means of prevention before violence occurs.

"If they know they can get jail time, that'll change their attitude," Heflin said. "No one wants to stay in jail. There's nothing you can do."

"You can put them on adjudicated probation, but I don't do that very often," Heflin said.

Not all cases presented before a justice of the peace result in peace bonds being issued.

Heflin speaks from eight years of experience on deciding whether someone's story is valid enough to issue a peace bond.

"It's up to me. I've got to believe that person or not. Usually a woman may be out to get a man in trouble. You can tell after being here a length of time and by the way a woman talks and all. I guess some of them overreact," Heflin said.

"According to the law, if a magistrate such as Heflin decides the evidence is not good enough to issue a bond, he may take the person who made the initial complaint. Heflin said Howard County charges $32 in daily when the complaint is made. Bonds are usually issued at $1,000, Heflin said.

When a marriage or relationship shows signs of heading toward a peace bond truce, Heflin suggests couples go for counseling. He also advises troubled ones to "see the preacher."

Glickman is a strong believer in counseling. He sees counseling as an outlet for troubled people and an opportunity for a neutral third party to become involved.

"Counseling teaches people other ways to express themselves rather than beating each other up," Glickman said.

The Big Spring social worker said changes in our school system and societal traditions regarding marriage would help prevent violent marriages.

"Learning to live with one another should be offered in school curriculums along with getting students to learn about compromising," Glickman said.

Glickman said our present trends allow marriages or relationships to form too easily. Once the act of sharing one's life with someone has been committed, it's difficult to get out of. Divorce settlements or breakups become messy and traumatic affairs, Glickman said. The trend should be reversed, he said.

"I'd like to see it very difficult to get married, with requirements of pre-marital counseling for instance. It should be easy to get a divorce if the marriage goes bad. Our society has it different though," Glickman said.

Warren in again, out again, for Cowboys

DALLAS (AP) — Jhn Warren is the punter for the Dallas Cowboys — some weeks that is. Other times, he's unemployed.

Just this season alone, the former University of Tennessee player was cut on Aug. 21, during preseason drills; re-signed on Oct. 27; released on Nov. 13; re-signed on Nov. 20; and was tentatively scheduled for release again this week before coach Tom Landry changed his mind.

At one time, Warren had his own locker at the Cowboys' practice facility and a powder-blue nameplate like the other players. Now, he shares a locker with field goal kicker Rafael Septien. Instead of a nameplate, there is simply a strip of adhesive tape on which someone hastily scrawled with black magic marker, "Warren."

So often has he been a passenger on the Dallas-to-Knoxville, Tenn. flights that "I've become familiar with the names of an awful lot of airplane pilots."

"But that's part of being a kicker," he said in an interview with The Dallas Morning News.

This week, only seven days after Warren had been restored to the team for the third time in 1984, Landry said another offensive lineman was being signed to shore

Longhorns keep hoop slate clean

By The Associated Press

Mike Wacker borrowed the word from a certain well-known Southwest Conference football coach.

"Fantastic!" said the Texas forward after scoring 18 points in Texas' 87-52 thrashing of Northwestern State of Louisiana Thursday night in college basketball.

Wacker's father, Jim, is the Texas Christian football coach who used an adjective or two as he brought his team from obscurity into the limelight this year.

The younger Wacker's 8-of-12 shooting led the Longhorns to their biggest victory since 1978, when Texas beat Northern Montana 148-71.

Texas is now 2-0, while Northwestern is 0-1.

In other SWC hoop action Thursday night, Baylor beat Missouri 103-88, Texas Christian destroyed St. Thomas 100-41, and Texas Tech burned Utah 81-73.

Guards Eric Johnson, Carlos Briggs and Michael Williams scored 17 points each and center Paul Kuiper added 16 in Baylor's roll.

Missouri, now 1-1, allowed 100 points for the first time since March 8, 1975, when the Tigers lost 106-97 to Colorado.

"This was a great win for Baylor (3-0) and a great win for the Southwest Conference," Baylor coach Jim Haller said. "It was just a matter of pride and hustle. It was quickness and speed and hustle against height and muscle."

Carven Holcombe's 21 points keyed TCU to its second 100-point game this season as the Horned Frogs beat St. Thomas 100-44.

up a line riddled by injuries and that Warren would be released to make room for him.

A short time later, however, Landry said that veteran middle linebacker Bob Breunig might be put on injured reserve instead because of a persistent back ailment that refuses to heal. It wasn't until Wednesday afternoon that Warren learned for sure that he still had a job and that Breunig indeed was being placed on injured reserve.

Warren punted for the Cowboys last year until he injured his right knee, his punting knee.

A Big Spring man, suffered incapacitating injuries Wednesday evening when his car struck another vehicle on the South Service Road of Interstate 20, west of Big Spring.

According to Texas Department of Public Safety (DPS) records, Timothy Paul Decker, 22, of 2200 Warren struck the back end of a disabled truck-tractor and semi-trailer belonging to T&T Transport of Westbrook, Texas. The truck had run out of diesel fuel and was being attended to by a person from a third vehicle that was parked and facing south in a northbound traffic lane.

The DPS report said no warning flares were displayed at the time of the accident and that Big Spring police issued a traffic citation warrant to Robin Wheelhouse who was charged with improperly parking in a roadway.
