Governor: no taxes; raise fees

Gov. MARK WHITE

think there is not a person in this room — myself included — who intends to do that.

"Or, we can tighten our belts and bring our spending levels down to our income levels. And that is exactly what we are going to do. And I believe we can do it without major disruptions or undue hardships or layoffs or governmental chaos."

White is suggesting fee increases in a variety of areas. Most of them involve hiking fees for state services, such as inspection of gasoline pumps and oil and gas drilling permit fees.

White's budgetary measures will be discussed by the 1985 Texas Legislature as it strives to develop a 1986-87 spending plan in the wake of some dreary revenue estimates by state Comptroller Bob Bullock.

Bullock believes state revenues will be about $1.1 billion billion short of that needed to cover current spending as well as automatic increases for education, highways and retirement systems already written into law.

State lawmakers will labor under a state constitutional prohibition against deficit spending. Complicating the picture are federal court orders mandating expensive reforms in the state's prison and mental health systems.

A summary of White's major recommendations for spending general revenue funds shows that he would amend the lean two-year, $25.7 billion budget proposed by the Legislative Budget Board by:

- Increasing public education funding by $149.7 million.
- Retaining substantial cuts for Texas colleges and universities, although less than that proposed by the LBB's.

Under his budget plan, senior college operations would be cut $509.6 million — or 23.4 percent — from their current levels of spending, receiving about $13.8 million more than the LBB proposed. Public junior colleges would lose $92.4 million under White's proposal. The LBB made the

Oil tax

Proposal would strip deductions for independents

By the Associated Press
A bill that would eliminate some income tax incentives for independent oil operators shows Washington officials still don't understand how the oil business works, said the president of the Independent Petroleum Association of America.

Jon Rex Jones, also president of Jones Exploration Co. of Houston, said Monday an association study shows operators will do at least 25 percent less drilling as a result of tax changes proposed by the Department of Treasury.

"I think they simply don't understand the formation of capital in the oil business," he said.

Jones said the proposed tax law change would eliminate a number of business deductions that now make it possible for small operators to explore for oil and develop new petroleum reserves.

The tax bill, he said, will discourage investors from risking capital with oil exploration, making it more difficult for small operators to raise the money needed to drill.

In addition, said Jones, the tax bill provides a disincentive for wildcat drilling because operators cannot get tax deductions for dry holes as they have in the past.

He said that if an operator drills a new well in an old lease containing an operating well, he will not be able to deduct the drilling expense if the new well is dry unless he abandons the operating well.

"Often an operator could plug the producing well, expense the dry hole costs and come out ahead," he said.

Jones said the plan to do away with the percentage depletion deduction, which enables oil operators to reduce their tax bill by a set amount as reserves in an oil well are used up, would cause hundreds of stripper wells to be plugged and abandoned.

A stripper well is one that produces oil at the rate of 10 barrels or less a day. Such wells provide about 10 percent of the nation's oil.

"Once you plug those wells, they'll never be re-entered," said Jones. "That's oil that will be lost forever."

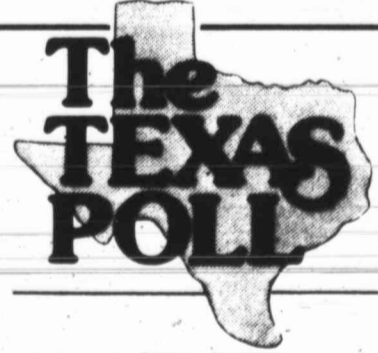

Often, he said, it is only the tax deduction that makes the wells profitable. If that deduction is eliminated, as proposed by the Treasury tax bill, then those stripper wells will be closed.

Another tax proposal would eliminate the current system of expensing intangible drilling costs, a system that now enables operators to deduct from profits over half of the cost of drilling a well. The plan also would forbid deductions for dry holes, unless the operator abandons the whole lease.

"This would take away income and capital that normally is spent on oil exploration," said Jones. "This will have a devastating effect on independent producers."

Why state's rich are so optimistic

The best-off Texans remain as optimistic about their personal finances as they were a year ago, but the worst-off don't see as bright a future in 1985, the Texas Poll has found.

"Looking ahead," the Texas Poll asked 1,020 Texans about a month before the November election, "do you think that a year from now you and your family will be better off financially, worse off or just about the same as now?"

Overall, 44 percent of the respondents to the most recent poll said they expect their families to be better off. Among those interviewed in a Texas Poll conducted in December a year ago, 47 percent had that response.

• Among Texans with family incomes of $30,000 and above, 57 percent think they'll be better off next year; a year ago, 55 percent said the same thing.

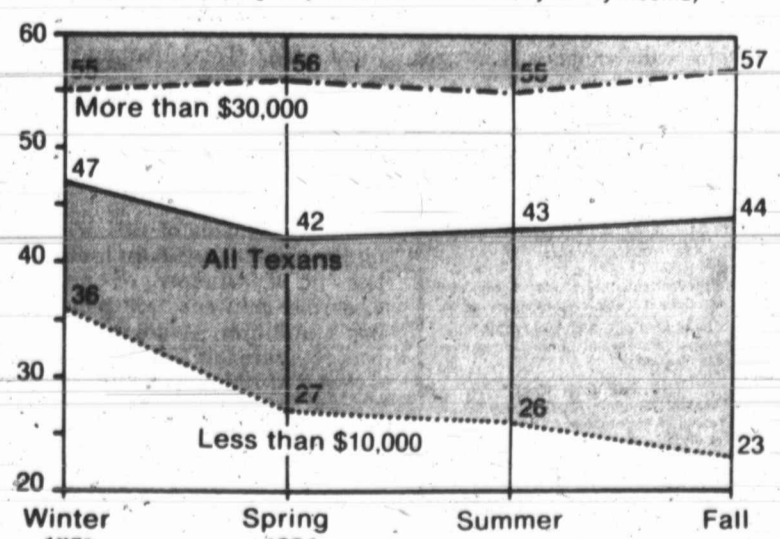

• But Texans at the other end of the economic scale had a different view: 23 percent of those with family incomes of less than $10,000 said they expect to be better off next year, down from 36 percent in December 1983.

• Middle-income Texans — those in families making between $10,000 and $30,000 annually —

Banks lower prime rate

NEW YORK — Chase Manhattan Bank cut its prime rate a quarter point to 10.5 percent today, the second large bank to drop the business lending rate to its lowest level in 17 months.

Manufacturers Hanover Trust, the nation's fourth largest bank, announced Monday that it was lowering its prime from the 10.75 percent level that had prevailed for about a month. Chase, the No. 3 commercial bank, followed suit at the opening of business today.

The last time a major bank had a prime rate as low as 10.5 percent rate was for about five months ending in early August 1983. The last time the prime rate was below 10.5 percent was October 1978.

VFW attacks U.S. policy

SAN JOSE, Calif. — A member of a Veterans of Foreign Wars chapter that criticized U.S. policy in Central America said he hoped the resolution would help prevent another Vietnam.

The statement by Bill Motto Post 5888 in Santa Cruz accusing President Reagan of increasing tensions in Central America was the first break by a post with the national organization on foreign policy, VFW spokesman Wayne LaDue said in Kansas City, Mo.

Dean Metcalf, one of 50 Vietnam veterans in the post, said, "I want the lesson that we paid for in blood to be learned."

Airlines fined $40,000

MIAMI — A federal official said $40,000 in fines paid by a Costa Rican airline for flying 11 Cubans with false passports to the United States was not as important as the good faith and the example it set.

The crew of the LASCA Airlines' Boeing 727 was charged with transporting the Cubans from Cancun, Mexico, to New Orleans Thursday.

Ed O'Connor, regional commissioner with the Immigration and Naturalization Service in Dallas, said LASCA promised to take steps to see that last week's incident was not repeated.

Mother gets son back

SAN DIEGO — A fundamentalist Christian woman cleared of criminal child-stealing charges for taking her son from his homosexual father can start a new life now that the court case is over, her lawyer said.

Betty Lou Batey is scheduled to be sentenced Feb. 15 on a charge of civil contempt for violating a court order placing the boy, Brian, in legal custody of his father, Frank. She faces a possible 15 days in jail and $3,000 fine.

"This will help Betty resume a normal life," Mrs. Batey's lawyer, Michael Farris, said of Monday's decision.

Israeli Troop Withdrawal Plan

WITHDRAWAL PLAN — The Israeli Cabinet approved a plan Monday for a three-stage withdrawal of Israeli troops from Lebanon.

Israelis go home

Plan calls for massive troop withdrawal

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Shimon Peres said today that all Israeli troops will be out of Lebanon this summer. But his deputy premier and chief rival in the bipartisan government said the plan failed to protect northern Israel against guerrilla attacks.

The Cabinet abandoned hopes of a negotiated settlement with the Lebanese government and approved a three-stage unilateral withdrawal by a 16-6 vote Monday. Deputy Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, who also is foreign minister, led the unsuccessful opposition.

Peres' defense minister, Yitzhak Rabin, said: "I believe that after more than 2½ years in Lebanon we have learned the hard way that Israel should not attempt to be the policemen in settling the wars between various groups in Lebanon."

The first stage of the withdrawal is to begin in five weeks, and Peres said succeeding stages would be "played by ear." Asked on Israel radio if the troops would be out of Lebanon this summer, Peres replied: "Yes, that is the basic plan."

Shamir told the radio the plan did "not make minimal security provisions for the northern settlements," and he vowed to do all he could before the pullout "to make sure that all that is possible will be rectified and the safety of the northern settlements ensured as much as is possible."

Rabin told reporters that the first phase would see Israeli troops retreat 17 miles from their current positions along the Awali River. The new line will parallel the Litani River from the Mediterranean coast inland to the Shiite Moslem town of Nabatiyeh.

Israeli troops, currently estimated to number 20,000, would leave the port city of Sidon and a large number of Shiite village.

Shiite militants have inflicted almost daily casualties in guerrilla attacks on the Israelis in southern Lebanon. The Israelis have lost 606 men since the June 1982 invasion of Lebanon.

The second phase of withdrawal was expected to come in the eastern sector where Israel now faces the Syrian army in the Bekaa valley. The final stage would see Israeli forces return to the international boundary.

The plan envisions three means of securing the border against attack: deployment of U.N. troops in the areas of south Lebanon Israel vacates, patrols of the Israeli-allied South Lebanon Army militia along the border area and a back-up of Israeli troops who will move into Lebanon if new guerrilla groups organize to attack.

The Cabinet decision was a political victory for Peres, leader of the leftist Labor Party who had made campaign pledges to bring home Israeli troops. Shamir heads the Likud bloc, which was in power at the time of the invasion. Despite his reservations about the plan, three Likud Cabinet ministers crossed party lines to vote with the majority.

4 Frenchmen go to prison

PARIS — Four Frenchmen convicted of trying to export banned equipment from the United States to the Soviet Union have been sentenced to prison terms.

The attempt to export equipment of possible use in missile guidance was foiled by U.S. Customs officials at New York's John F. Kennedy International Airport in December 1981. The equipment was said to be worth more than $2 million.

Robert Almori was sentenced to three years in prison, while Marcel Goldfarb, Jean-Michel Didat and Maurice Boquet each received two years. All were charged with forgery or complicity in forgery, and all were fined the equivalent of $11,000 in addition to the prison terms.

Police arrest protesters

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras — Police and troops evicted about 400 protesting former public employees from the Metropolitan Cathedral and arrested six of the demonstrators.

The discharged employees of the Public Works Ministry occupied the cathedral Monday, demanding that the government pay them benefits and wages they claim are long overdue.

The protesters, who were dismissed four months ago in a cost-cutting move, asked a priest to offer a Mass to President Roberto Suazo Cordova "so God will soften his heart," one of the demonstrators said.

Warrants out on terrorists

WIESBADEN, West Germany — The Federal Criminal Office says arrest warrants have been issued for four Germans suspected of links to recent terrorist attacks by the radical Red Army Faction.

It said a reward of up to 50,000 marks — about $16,000 — was offered for information leading to the capture of these "new members of the Red Army Faction."

Warrants were issued for Andrea Klump, 27; Thomas Simon, 31; Barbara Meyer, 28, and her husband, Horst Meyer, 28.

Ethiopia to export food?

NAIROBI, Kenya — Ethiopia says a pact to sell livestock to Egypt was an "agreement in principle" and it has not contracted to export food at a time when 7.75 million of its people are suffering from hunger.

Ethiopian state radio reported Sunday that a one-year trade agreement was signed Sunday under which Ethiopia would send livestock, meat and farm products in return for metals, fertilizers, medicine and construction materials.

But a government relief official, reached by telephone Monday in Addis Ababa, the Ethiopian capital, said the bilateral pact is "more political than economic."

Residents skeptical of N-dump

TULIA (AP) — Department of Energy officials held an informational briefing Monday to help Panhandle residents better understand the way they selected possible sites for the nation's first high-level radioactive waste dump, but only a handful of people attended and those who did remained skeptical.

"You can ask them a direct question and they just beat around the bush with you. You can't trust them," Tulia farmer and rancher Ernestine Barnes said of the nearly 30 DOE authorities and agency contractors who traveled to Tulia for the briefing.

Mrs. Barnes, one of about 25 area residents at the session, said she had studied the DOE reports since Texas first was mentioned as a possible contender for the waste dump.

"And each time I ask a question about something, I get a different answer from each person," she said.

Monday's briefing, the first of three to be held in Texas this week, was called to aid the public in deciphering DOE environmental documents and to allow "people to participate more effectively in the process," said Bill Bennett, deputy director of the office of geologic repositories at DOE's Washington, D.C., office of civilian radioactive waste management.

The two other briefings were scheduled for Tuesday night in Hereford and Wednesday in Austin.

A nine-square-mile area in Deaf Smith County has been selected by the DOE as a "preferred site" for the controversial waste dump. Two other sites, in Nevada and Washington, also have been named as preferred sites.

Although a final decision on the dump location is five years away, the DOE could begin construction on exploratory shafts at the three preferred sites within the next two years if the areas are approved by the president.

At Monday's meeting, Bennett explained to the Panhandle residents how to read the DOE's environmental assessments on the Deaf Smith County site and on why the area was chosen as one of the three preferred dump sites.

He also outlined the DOE's reasons for not selecting a site in Swisher County, where Tulia is.

After his 30-minute briefing, eight tables were set up so officials could answer specific individual questions.

Although Swisher County was not named as one of the three preferred sites, residents said that they still were concerned the area again might be considered.

They also voiced concern over Deaf Smith County being selected as a preferred site.

Formal public comment was not being taken at Monday's briefing, Bennett said.

GOING THROUGH THE MOTIONS — Bill Bennett with the Department of Energy explains the phases of selecting a nuclear repository site to the people of the Texas Panhandle in a meeting in Tulia Monday night.

Hightower: Irrigation gas needs state control

AUSTIN (AP) — There is a need for state control of natural gas sold to fuel irrigation pumps, which now costs some farmers up to $40,000 a month, Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower says.

The 1923 law that set up Texas Railroad Commission regulation of most natural gas left out irrigation gas. The omission now haunts some farmers, Hightower said Monday.

"Texas farmers are spending some $450 million a year to pay this piper. Yet the tune being played by these gas utilities is right out of a horror movie, as any farm irrigator will attest," he said.

About 40 percent of Texas farmers depend on irrigation. Hightower said they must deal with uncertain prices that sometimes change in the middle of irrigation season. The price of irrigation gas has increased up to 400 percent over the past decade.

Farmers pay up to $40,000 a month for the gas, Hightower said.

"Our legislation asks for absolutely no special breaks for farmers, no privileged rates, no extra procedural protection. All we seek is to be treated equally with other consumer and industrial users of natural gas," he told a Capitol news conference. An official for Amarillo-based Energas said her company opposes state regulation of irrigation gas "because we do not feel it is in the interest of the customer group using natural gas for irrigation."

Judith Kerr, an Energas vice president, said irrigation gas demand is a "fluctuating market" and it is best for prices to remain unregulated.

Diamond Shamrock

spokeswoman Kathy Stancheck said, "We are really not in a position yet to say anything."

A Texas Department of Agriculture report said the lack of regulation has left farmers in an untenable situation.

"Some utilities have even gone so far as to raise their rates, unannounced, after the crops were planted and when they knew the farmers were helpless to do anything about it," the report said.

Racial attitudes remain with us

A new study says child abuse is more likely to be reported when it occurs in poorer, non-white families. The reason is simply that doctors are reflecting their own biases in identifying child abusers. By extension, that suggests the statistics on abuse are unfairly skewed toward poor non-whites.

The study was published this month in the American Journal of Public Health. It uses hospital data as evidence that the principal difference between child abuse cases that were reported to authorities and cases that were not was the race and class of the family involved.

For children from households with incomes above $25,000 a year, only 36.7 percent of the child abuse cases were reported, the study said. But nearly 80 percent of the cases involving families with incomes below $15,000 were reported to authorities.

By the same token, 60.5 percent of the child abuse cases involving white families were reported. But the figure was 74.3 percent for black families and 91.2 percent for Hispanics.

The study was conducted by Dr. Eli H. Newberger of the Harvard Medical School Department of Pediatrics and Robert L. Hampton of the Department of Sociology at Connecticut College.

It compared hospital records with reports made to law enforcement agencies.

The study notes two consequences: First, it unfairly targets certain groups in society as more "evil" than others, which perpetuates racial myths. Second, it hides the seriousness of the problem among affluent white families. Doctors, the researchers say, are reflecting their own stereotype of an abuser when they make their determinations.

It is likely that distorted statistics will be self-perpetuating unless reporting procedures are changed to account for these biases. Studies such as this one will help toward that end. But this research tells us something else, too. Racism is a pervasive, persistent factor — working at subconscious levels — in our society.

Art Buchwald Driving is divine at respectable 55

I was driving down the highway the other day at a respectable 55 miles per hour when I got a call on my CB radio from the man in the car behind me.

"Come on, Chicken Little, speed it up. If you can't drive, get the hell off the road," he said.

"It might interest you to know that I am within the established speed limit as posted along this U.S. highway."

"No one pays any attention to the 55-miles-per-hour speed limit anymore," he said.

"That's where you're wrong. There are many God-fearing citizens who still observe the law of the land. It is people like you who are a menace to society."

"Get out of the left lane so I can pass you, you numbskull."

"If I did that, sir, you would only start speeding and I would become an accessory to a crime. Why are you in such a hurry to get to your destination anyway?" I asked him.

"What business is that of yours?"

"I'm curious to know what you're going to do with all the time you save going 20 miles an hour faster than I?"

"I'm trying to get to Culpepper, Virginia, to have dinner with my mother."

"What kind of mother do you have who won't give you dinner if you arrive 12 minutes late?"

"It's not just me. My brother-in-law and sister and their kids are also coming."

"I'm glad they're going to be there," I told him.

"You don't even know my brother-in-law and sister."

"I'm just happy your mother won't be alone when they come for her, after you hit the wall at 80 miles per hour."

"How do you know I'm going to do 80 miles an hour?"

"From the make of your car. People don't buy sports cars unless they can do 80 miles an hour."

"I never trust anyone who drives an automobile with only two seats. He tends to be spoiled by his mother."

"What does my mother have to do with your hogging the left lane?"

"I'm not just thinking of your mother, but of all the mothers who will suffer because of your disregard for the speeding laws. If it were only your life I wouldn't be concerned how fast you drive. But somewhere up ahead is an innocent family and I want them to get there in one piece."

"It's not the people who drive fast, but idiots like you who cause accidents on the highways," he shouted.

"Statistics show that the 55-mile speed limit has lowered the death rate by over 15 percent. Good heavens, man, if you don't care for yourself you could have some regard for the insurance companies. They have mothers, too."

"Pull over to the side of the road and we can discuss this like men."

"I know that trick. I'm wearing a safety belt and I can see in the mirror you're not. You'll probably start beating up on me before I can get mine unbuckled."

"One more time, will you pull out of the left lane so I can pass you?"

"I would, except that I could never enjoy my weekend if something happened to that lovely family up ahead. But I'll do you a favor."

"What's that?"

"If you give me your mother's number in Culpepper, I'll call her up on my cellular phone and ask her to hold up dinner until you get there."

Jack Anderson Court rules tilt toward CIA

WASHINGTON — Can someone who claims "the CIA made me do it" get a fair trial in a federal court? Or does the government's interest in protecting the CIA from embarrassment inevitably stack the deck against such a defendant?

Through years of overuse by busboys trying to impress their dates, the whispered words "I work undercover for the CIA" have become a hackneyed line. But to Ronald Ray Rewald, whose Honolulu investment firm was declared bankrupt in 1983 at an estimated cost of $11 million to hundreds of investors, the claim of a CIA connection is the very heart of his defense against 100 criminal counts of fraud and perjury.

Rewald insists that he set up and ran his investment company — Bishop, Baldwin, Rewald, Dillingham & Wong — as a front for CIA covert operations in the Far East, and that its operations were directed by agency headquarters in Langley, Va. His defense is that the CIA caused his company's financial troubles and is now letting him hang out to dry, disavowing any CIA responsibility.

Mr. associates Indy Badwar and Dale Van Atta have dug up evidence that Rewald's links to the spy agency were a lot more solid than the CIA is willing to admit.

Yet as I've reported, the judge in a civil suit against Rewald, Martin Pence, has kept defense attorneys from examining reams of the investment firm's documents, which they are confident would establish their client's CIA connections. And while expressing serious doubt that Rewald's claims of a close relationship with the CIA, Pence justified sealing the company documents on grounds of "national security."

Now the federal judge who will preside over Rewald's criminal trial, Harold Fong, is showing the same signs of cutting Rewald's defense off at the knees — and using the same innate contradiction to justify it.

Even before the trial has begun, Fong has declared that the CIA is not an issue in the Rewald case. Then, in a mind-boggling defiance of logic, he disqualified Rewald's defense attorney because the lawyer represents a man in Alexandria, Va., who, like Rewald, blames his legal troubles on his claimed employment by the CIA.

The Alexandria defendant says he took orders from a CIA agent who was on the board of directors of BBRD&W, the Rewald firm.

This, according to Fong, creates a "conflict" for A. Brent Carruth, the lawyer Rewald wants to defend him. Carruth is widely recognized as one of the few attorneys with experience in trials conducted under the tricky requirements of the Classified Information Procedures Act.

In an affidavit, Carruth argued that both his clients depend on the "common defense" that "BBRD&W was a CIA company store ... established by the CIA, run by the CIA and now covered up by the CIA." Far from creating a conflict, Carruth wrote, his dual representation would benefit both clients.

Carruth says that the judge in the Alexandria case ordered the CIA to turn over to Carruth classified information that related to Rewald's investment firm. If Carruth is allowed to remain Rewald's lawyer, this information would obviously be available to Rewald. That's what bothers the prosecution, he wrote.

"The CIA desires to handpick the Rewald defense attorney," Carruth charged, by disqualifying the defendant's choices "until magically their chosen successor takes the assignment." The "conflict" argument, he wrote, "is raised as a smokescreen ... to catch an ill-informed judge."

If anyone has a conflict of interest, Carruth argued, it's the government, which has brought in as a prosecutor Maj. John Peyton, former chief of litigation for the CIA. He will not only help to prosecute Rewald, but will be a witness in the Alexandria case, testifying about Rewald's investment firm. The presence of a CIA attorney on the prosecution team, Carruth argued, is "a classic conflict of interest" for the government.

MIGS FOR NICARAGUA: Why the hullabaloo over the possibility that Soviet MiG-21s are being shipped to Nicaragua? Simply this: Nicaragua would become the dominant air power in Central America overnight with sophisticated MiG-21s, threatening such U.S. allies as Honduras and El Salvador and endangering the Panama Canal.

Honduras currently boasts 30 combat aircraft to Nicaragua's 12, but the Honduran planes are mostly antiquated.

Even the 14 outdated MiG-17s, which I reported had arrived in Cuba in 1983 for shipment to Nicaragua, would alter the balance of air power against U.S. interests. The jets could be flown to Nicaragua in two hours or less, ready for combat.

AFRICAN ANOMALY: My intelligence sources tell me that Zaire's President Mobutu Sese Seko is one of the most competent, colorful — and corrupt — national leaders in the world. Through a combination of personal charm, propaganda and no-nonsense repression, Mobutu has defied all the odds and kept Zaire's 200 disparate tribes together as a nation through almost 20 years of autocratic rule. While promoting himself in the press as "Our Savior," "The Prophet" and "The Guide," Mobutu has encouraged just enough mutual tribal antagonisms to prevent a unified opposition.

And he has made it pay personally. His former prime minister, Nguza Karl-I-Bond, reckons that Mobutu has stashed away a fortune of nearly $4 billion, and his cronies have looted the mineral-rich country with only slightly less success.

Billy Graham Christ is cure for loneliness

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I am all alone in the world. All my relatives have died. I have had to work all my life and never took time to make many friends. But now there are days when I feel like life is not worth living because there is no one who cares about me. Is there a cure for loneliness? — Mrs. F.K.

DEAR MRS. F.K.: Yes, there is a cure for loneliness, and God wants to help us overcome loneliness — no matter what our circumstances are — if we will let Him.

First, realize you are never really alone if you know Christ. Christ cares about you, and when we come to Christ by faith God is always with us. Jesus declared, "and surely I will be with you always, to the very end of the age" (Matthew 28:20). God has also promised, "Never will I leave you; never will I forsake you" (Hebrews 13:5). Ask Jesus Christ to come into your heart today, and then you can know the job of His presence no matter what comes your way.

Then learn to reach out to others around you. The best place to do this is a church where Christ is preached. You see, when you come to Christ you not only become His child, you also become part of His family — along with all who put their trust in Christ. Jesus said, "Where two or three come together in my name, there am I with them" (Matthew 18:20). Don't just sit in a church on Sunday mornings, but get involved in a Bible study or other group. This will help you spiritually and will also help you get to know others.

In addition, ask God to help you do something good each day for someone around you. Have you ever realized there are many, many other people around you who are lonely just like you? "Therefore, as we have opportunity, let us do good to all people" (Galatians 6:10). This will not only help your loneliness, but God can use you to show His love to others.

Dear Abby

Sobriety's journey begins with hesitant steps

DEAR ABBY: Thanks for printing the letter from "Optimistic," the female college student who said she felt as though she had really accomplished something that day even though all she did was go to the mailbox. She said, "I didn't have the guts to go to a meeting of Alcoholics Anonymous, so I wrote and asked for some literature. I just read it, and I feel better already."

Abby, please print this message for "Optimistic": I, too, am a female. I'm now 43 and was in your shoes for eight long, wet, miserable years. I also sent for the Alcoholics Anonymous literature and prayed a lot. I even found the guts to attend a meeting about once a year, but I always arrived late, hid in a corner and left early, afraid of being recognized — then complained (to myself) that it was an "unfriendly" organization.

Last year I became so depressed that it was either treatment or suicide. Even in that state of mind I knew that treatment offered me more of a future.

I contacted the Jefferson Alcohol and Drug Abuse Center here in Louisville, and went into its 35-day treatment program last February.

It's been slow. Twenty-five years of drinking takes its toll, mentally and physically, but today I know I am a survivor. Eleven months of sobriety is nothing to brag about, but I feel better now than I have felt in years.

Contact A.A. again and tell them you don't have the guts to attend a meeting yet, and they'll send someone to take you, or have someone meet you outside the meeting place. (It's always easier to walk into a large group of people with someone else.) Go early and hang around the coffee pot and just smile. You'll meet a lot of nice friendly people who have been in your shoes. Once you make the commitment to try to work the program, your life will improve.

I know this can be said better, but never more from the heart. I'm still not strong enough to go public, so if you print this, sign me...

Dr. Donohue

Rheumatic fever less threat today

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: How common is rheumatic fever today? My mother had it when she was a child and has been having heart problems most of her life. Valves of the heart were affected at the time. Is that the usual symptom? Anyway, the immediate problem I have is mother's constant harping on our children when they have sore throats. She swears they are going to come down with the problem, just as she did. Can you give me a slight rundown on this. — Mrs. H.O.Y.

In areas where medical attention is not as available as in the Western world, rheumatic fever remains a chief cause of acquired heart disease in children. In our society, prompt medical attention for strep infections, as the strep throat, and the advent and use of penicillin have made the problem much less prominent. Rheumatic fever is a complication of strep infection.

Just what the connection is we aren't sure, but we think that the body's production of antibodies against the strep germ is at fault by attacking not only the germ but heart and joint tissue as well. The joint pain is not permanent. The worst complication is the heart-valve involvement. Permanent deformity of the valves may occur and with it resulting chronic heart problems.

I don't think you or your mother need be obsessed about the possibility of this happening. It is an acquired disease, not inherited. So long as you are diligent in obtaining medical attention for things like sore throats, the likelihood of this once prominent problem affecting your children is not great. And I should note that all strep throat doesn't pose this threat to the heart, even though each case should be investigated.

Burglars strike Herald offices

Big Spring Police today were investigating the theft of $450 in cash from the Big Spring Herald.

Chuck Benz, circulation manager of the Herald, said, "The best I can determine, $450" was taken from his office sometime Monday night.

Benz said the door to his office was pried open with what may have been a screwdriver and "someone pried open my desk and damaged a file cabinet."

Benz said although the money was taken, several other items, such as a cassette tape recorder, were left untouched in his office. "It's obvious they wanted money," Benz said. Big Spring Police checked the building today and took fingerprints from the circulation manager's office.

According to Bob Rogers, production manager of the Herald, several other office doors at the newspaper were pried open or tampered with during the night.

Rogers said doors to the circulation and composing room departments had been locked Monday night but were found opened Tuesday morning. Doors to offices in the business department, circulation department and composing room were tampered with and desks in several offices were damaged when attempts were made to pry them open.

Rogers said the door to publisher Tom Watson's office had also been tampered with.

Take domestic cars to Eason Bros. Garage

With so much emphasis being placed on service of foreign cars, it's refreshing to find a garage that specializes in domestic car repairs.

That garage is Eason Bros. Garage, located at 507 W. 3rd St. It was founded by Hershel and Carl Eason in 1947. In those succeeding 37 years, the Eason brothers built a solid reputation for quality repair service, always concentrating on American made cars.

H.L. Eason, Jr., is now manager of the garage, a second generation continuing in the founders' footsteps.

In addition to general repairs — brakes, tune-up and the like — Eason Bros. Garage features air conditioner sales and service. And it is an official State Inspection garage.

Eason Bros. Garage guarantees its repairs. It is the quality of its work — and the willingness to meet the customers' criteria — that have consistently caused one car owner to recommend the garage to other car owners. Many customers have been coming there for years.

ROSSELL, N.M. — The Howard Hawks lost their first conference since the Christmas break as they fell to New Mexico Military Institute 72-63 last night.

NMMI led the entire game but the Hawks stayed close throughout the contest. NMMI led 36-33 at the half as Howard stayed close behind Bruce Kimble's 8 first-half points.

The Hawks cut the margin to 59-56 at the 12-minute mark and that's when NMMI forward Johnny Wilson caught fire and gunned in 18 of his game-high 23 points.

Howard post player Marty Jenkins led Howard with six points in the second half and led all Hawks with 12 points. Kimble and Walt Reynolds added 11 points each. Howard leading scorer Michael Porter was held to 8 points, well below his 21-point average.

U.S. tracksters triumph in International meet

OSAKA, Japan (AP) — Gold medalists Al Joyner of the United States and Anisoara Staneciu of Romania led a field of Olympic medalists to triumph today in an international track and field meet.

Joyner, gold medalist in the triple jump at the Los Angeles games, took the event by jumping 56 feet, one-half inch.

Staneciu was the victor in the women's long jump with a leap of 21-4.

Another Olympic champion, Doina Melinte of Romania, far outpaced her competitors with a clocking of 2 minutes, 2.24 seconds in the 800-meter run.

In all, 135 athletes from Australia, Canada, China, France, Japan, Kenya, Romania, South Korea, the Soviet Union and the United States participated in the meet, the second of what is to be an annual event.

Eleven medalists from the Los Angeles games took part in the meet before 9,500 spectators.

Sprinter Ben Johnson led a Canadian sweep of the 60-meter dash in 6.56 seconds, followed by Desai Williams and Tony Sharpe. Johnson was named the competition's best male athlete.

Chandra Cheeseborough, silver medal winner at Los Angeles in the 100 meters, took the women's event in 7.39 seconds.

Canadian Mark McKoy took the 60-meter hurdles in 7.69 seconds, edging out American Sam Turner, who beat McKoy in the event at the Osaka meet last year.

Stephanie Hightower of the United States won the women's title in the same event, clocking 8.27 seconds.

Romanians split the 800 meters, with Melinte, the women's champion, and Petre Dragoescu covering the distance in 1:48.76.

The men's distance event, 1,500 meters, went to Australian Michael Hilliard in 3:46.43. Women went a distance of 3,000 meters, won by Ruth Wysocki of the United States winning in 9:04.84. She was named best female athlete of the meet.

Defending champion Jason Grimes of the United States leaped to victory in the men's long jump at 26-8.

Soviet high jumper Gennadi Avdeyenko outlasted Romanian Constantin Militaru and American Del Davis in a lengthy duel. All three jumped 7-4 1/2, but the winning order was determined on the basis of fewer misses. Militaru took second place.

Moses to plead innocent to charges

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Two-time Olympic gold medalist Edwin Moses was the victim of police entrapment and will plead innocent to misdemeanor charges of soliciting a prostitute and possession of a small amount of marijuana, his attorney says.

Moses' attorney, Harold Lipton, said Monday the world-record-holding hurdler never intended to engage in sex with a prostitute and that police targeted him after they saw his 1985 Mercedes that carries "OLYMPYNN" license plates.

"My feeling is that someone checked the license plates, found out that Edwin owned the car and thought he would be a good catch," Lipton said.

Police arrested Moses during a Hollywood prostitution sweep early Sunday morning. Officers reported 82 men were arrested during the weekend crackdown on prostitution and solicitation.

The 29-year-old hurdler, who won gold medals in the 400-meter hurdles in the 1976 and 1984 Olympics, was charged Monday with one count of soliciting prostitution and one count of possession of less than an ounce of marijuana, said Deputy City Attorney Mike Wilkinson.

Moses was released on his own recognition and is scheduled to be arraigned Jan. 29.

Meanwhile, the Congress for Racial Equality said Monday that its chairman, Roy Innis, has been trying to reach Moses to offer him legal assistance. The civil rights group recently offered such assistance to Bernhard Goetz, the man accused of shooting four youths in a New York subway train.

"We're really disgusted by the fact that when we really need police resources in our city, this is what they're doing — entrapping athletes," CORE spokesman Cyril Boynes Jr. said in New York. "Certainly, one thing is clear, that it's a waste of resources."

Moses' agent Gordon Baskin said Monday that his client may be guilty of a bad joke but not of the two charges brought against him for what occurred at Sunset Boulevard and Genesee Avenue in Hollywood.

Baskin said Moses was in Los Angeles on Saturday for a meeting of a division of the United States Olympic Committee and was driving back to his hotel from a discotheque when the incident occurred. Moses was at a stop sign when a woman across the street waved at him and walked to the window on the passenger side of his car, Baskin said.

The vice officer posing as a prostitute asked Moses what he was doing, Baskin said. Moses replied that he was out to have some fun and when the woman asked if he had money, Moses said yes and jokingly mentioned $100, Baskin said.

She then directed Moses to pick her up "over there," pointing to a spot, Baskin said, and Moses laughed and drove off.

"Had he picked her up and taken her, then someone would say yes... But to him it was a joke," Baskin said. "What happened in my opinion was that they ran a make on the car and saw that it was Edwin Moses and decided that this was a nice fish to fry."

Los Angeles police spokesman Sergio Diaz had a different version of the incident.

"After the conversation took place between Moses and the female officer, they apparently came to an agreement and she directed him to go around the corner," Diaz said. "And when he went around the corner he was stopped by a motorcycle officer and a (male) vice officer."

Baskin said the marijuana allegedly discovered in Moses' car could have belonged to a number of people who have been in the automobile recently, including parking attendants.

"He does not smoke marijuana. He does not use any drugs," Baskin said.

Baskin said Moses and wife Myrella were to appear at a press conference this afternoon. The couple lives in Laguna Beach 40 miles southeast of Los Angeles.

Moses hasn't lost a race in more than seven years and has won 109 consecutive events.

The 400-meter hurdles world record holder at 47.02 seconds, Moses received the Sullivan Award in 1983 as the nation's top amateur athlete. He received additional honors after his Olympic success last summer.

Moses, who took the oath for all athletes at the Los Angeles Olympics, has been a prominent figure in gaining financial rights for the "amateur" athletes. He has been one of the sport's highest-paid performers, reportedly having a chance to earn almost $1 million in 1984, and one of the sport's most outspoken opponents of steroid and drug use by athletes.

For the time being... White still with Pokes

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas Cowboys Coach Tom Landry said it will be several weeks before he talks to Danny White about his future as the team's quarterback.

"It will be awhile," said Landry who will be an expert commentator for ABC-TV at the Super Bowl on Sunday.

Landry won't be able to meet with White immediately after the Super Bowl because of National Football League tryouts in Phoenix.

"I'll go to Phoenix for the scouting combine so it will be several weeks before Danny comes to the office," said Landry.

Landry, who picked the San Francisco 49ers to win, has already met with quarterback Gary Hogeboom.

Landry said "it wouldn't be fair" to speculate on what might happen during the off-season.

"Danny indicated he wanted to talk when the season was over," said Landry.

"I'd like to see it come down to a decision where we have just one quarterback but whether it will work out that way I don't know," Landry said. "I'm sure (Los Angeles Raider) Coach Tom Flores would like for his problem to be solved. It's easier on the coaches. We'll just have to wait and see and do what's best."

Landry laughed and added "I know getting things settled would make it easier on me than last season."
