Ronda Fowler was named the first Miss Howard County and Debra Ann McCauley was named Miss SouthWest Collegiate Institute for the Deaf during a pageant Saturday night at Howard College. Runner-up for Miss Howard County was Catherine Annessa Jones, daughter of Glenn and Midge Jones. Runners-up for Miss SWCID were Maureen O'Keefe, daughter of

Mr. and Mrs. E.P. O'Keefe of Pasadena, and Linda Marie Hobbs, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Winford Hobbs of Hallettsville. Miss Fowler is the daughter of Kirby and Sharon Brown. As Miss Howard County, she will proceed to the Miss Texas pageant in July. Miss Fowler said she was "shocked" when her name was announced. The 19-year-old Howard College freshman "never thought I'd be going to the Miss Texas pageant."

Miss McCauley, the daughter of Walter and Carol McCauley of Austin, is a 20-year-old sophomore. After winning she said, "I was glad and shocked." She said she didn't have a clue that she would be the winner until her name was announced.

A talent category was added to the competition this year. Miss Fowler sang "To Me." Miss McCauley sign-sang "Let's Hear It For the Boy."

DEBRA MCCAULEY is crowned Miss SWCID.

JP rules

Q. Justice of the Peace officials are not medically trained as a rule. Why are they used in pronouncing people dead and ordering autopsies?

A. Justice of the Peace officials are required to hold inquests and determine causes of death in counties of less than 120,000 people, according to Article 45 of the Texas Code of Criminal Law. Counties of 120,000 or larger are required to have an office of the medical examiner.

Only 10 of the 254 counties in Texas have medical examiners who are medically trained personnel.

This does not mean that a JP does not seek assistance or advice from physicians or medical personnel.

Big Spring's Municipal Auditorium

The city's claim to grandeur

By KEELY COGHLAN
Staff Writer

The dream was conceived in the years of roaring plenty, when flappers and the Charleston were the craze of the country. Before its finish, the atmosphere of the town had changed; the Depression had arrived.

Fifty-two years ago, the Municipal Auditorium was hailed by the Big Spring Daily Herald a month before its opening in September 1932 as being able to "weather the century mark without serious deterioration. Explosion or a bolt from the heavens will have to crumble the structure if it is to decay within the knowledge of any living man."

Now the Spanish Gothic building sits empty. Dust covers mirrors in the dressing rooms and the seats. The high vaulted ceilings and ornate facades and iron windows are priceless reminders of the grandeur that once was.

Broadway touring companies stopped to play on the stage; pianists, who lugged their own expensive instruments with them, fell in love with the mahogany grand piano at the auditorium. Symphonies raved about the acoustics.

"It was definitely the center of the town. Nearly all of the social functions were held there," said Dewey Byars, a native Big Spring resident whose uncle helped haul the sandstone bricks from the railroad tracks with wagons and mule teams.

"If they didn't have it here, they had it in the Settles ballroom," Byars said. High school graduations took place on stage, as well as community shows.

"I was a star there," said Burr Lea Settles, now the arson investigator with the city's fire department. "I went to a private school (Betty Farrar's), this was about when I was 6. She used to have a skit every year, and all the little kids would sing and dance and we'd have costumes and we'd be up on the stage."

County historian Joe Pickle remembers the building of the town during the start of the Depression era; his father was mayor during the construction.

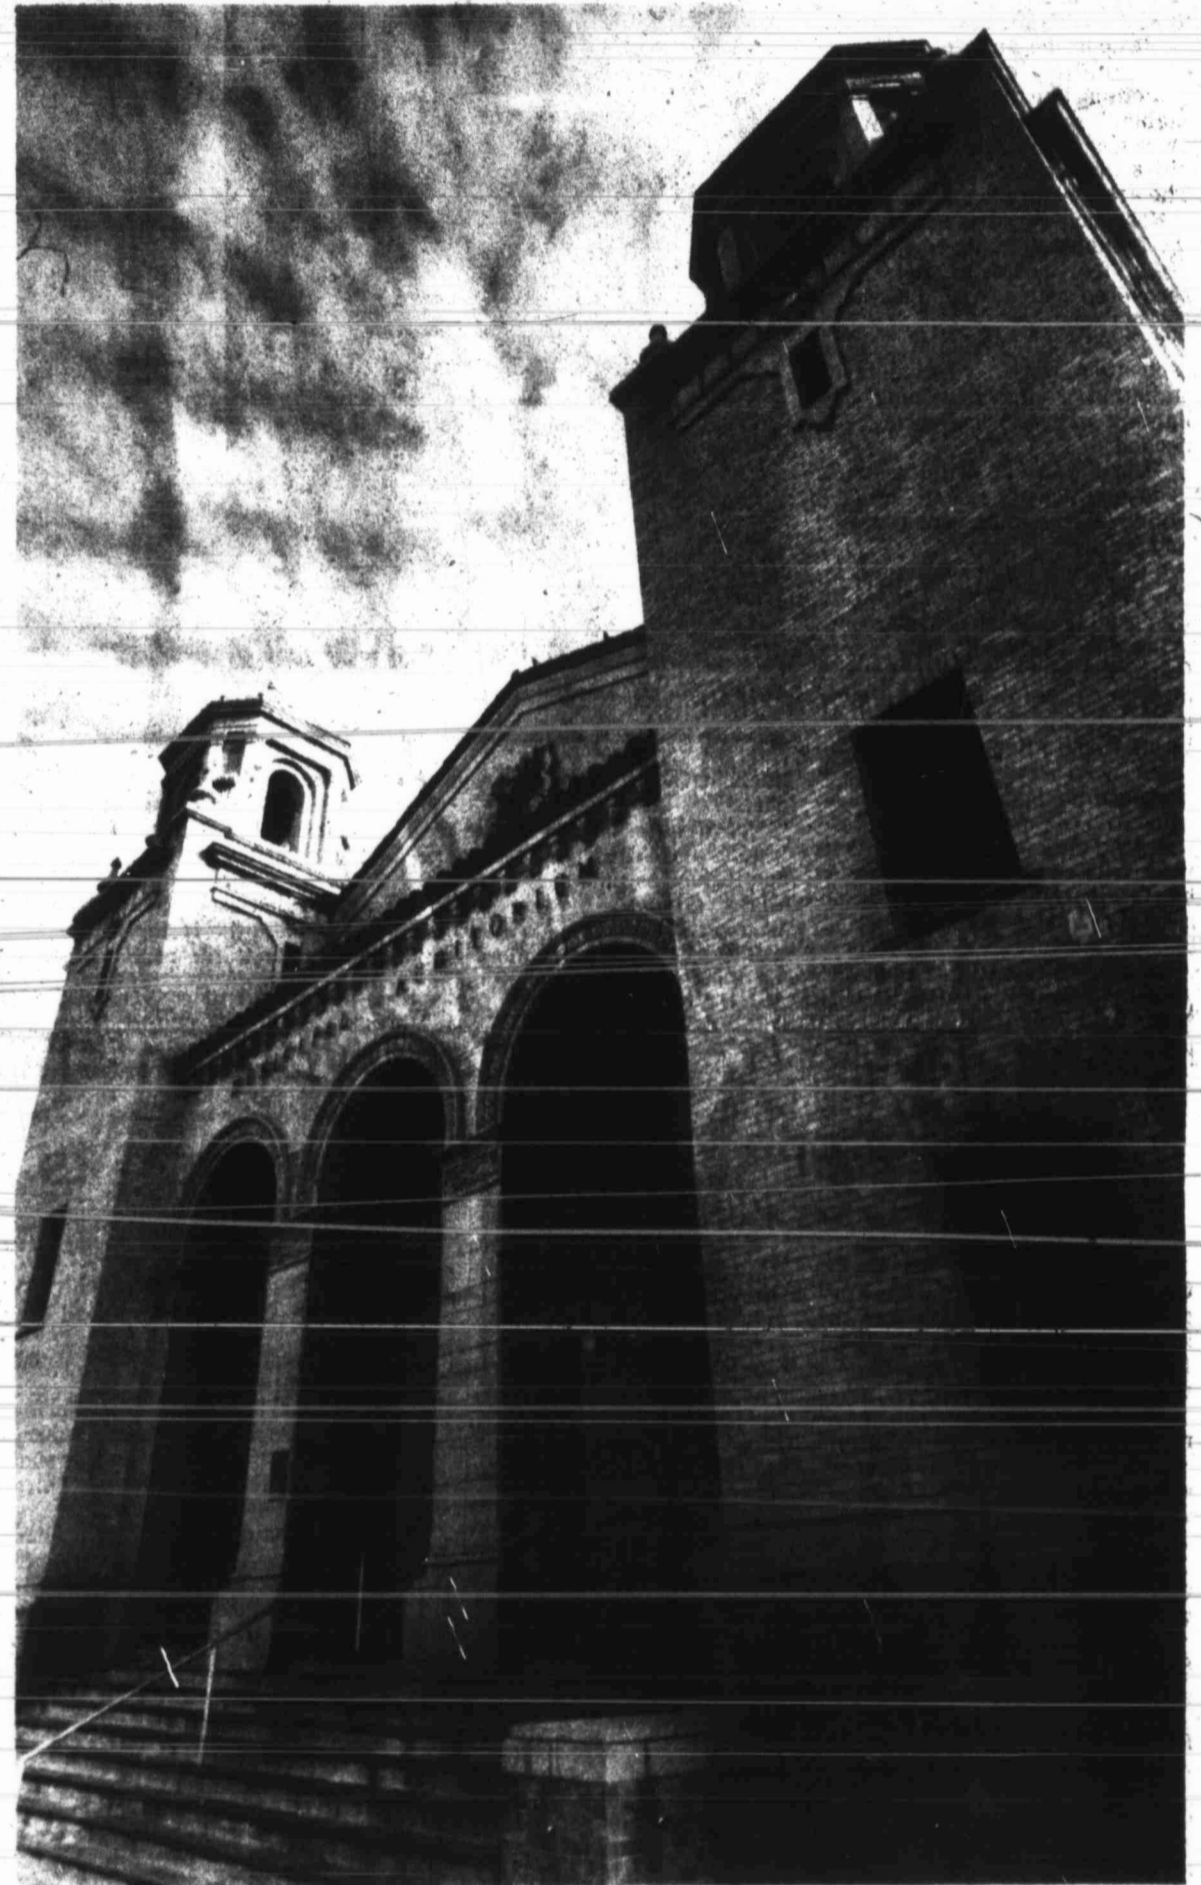

"At the time it was constructed, it was as fine an auditorium as there was west of Fort Worth," he said. Soon after it was built, the city hosted the West Texas Chamber of Commerce Convention, a big event at the time, Pickle said.

The present site of the auditorium was "a big hill," Pickle said. "They had to cut the hill down to the level of Fourth Street, and they built the auditorium forty feet higher."

When work on the building was completed, "they had a big celebration... opening ceremonies. The San Angelo Lions Club put on a big program," Pickle said.

Elvis Presley and Jerry Lee Lewis rocked on stage in 1956, but the city fathers, worried about the safety of their prized piano, made the Killer use his own, said Byars, who played in both men's backup bands at their performances here. More sedate performers were

Elbow bends over backward for school

By LUIS RIOS
Staff Writer

ELBOW — The push for quality education hasn't changed for 81 years in this community's rural school six miles southwest of Big Spring.

Crossroads country

What began as a 14-by-14, one room schoolhouse in 1904 has been transformed into a modern elementary school complete with a computer lab, an electronic fire detection system and innovative teaching methods.

Things have changed dramatically since Miss Ruth Gregg first taught class for seven grades at the school more than three-quarters of a century ago.

Looking back, long-time Elbow resident Jack McKinnon said he recalls going to school in the wood-frame box building his brothers John McKinnon, Smith McKinnon and friend John Leatherwood helped build. The McKinnon family moved to Elbow in 1904 from Comanche County, he said.

A winding creek that ran through Elbow gave the community and school its name at the turn of the century. McKinnon said the old farmers and ranchers in the area labeled the community Elbow because it stood at the bend or elbow of the creek.

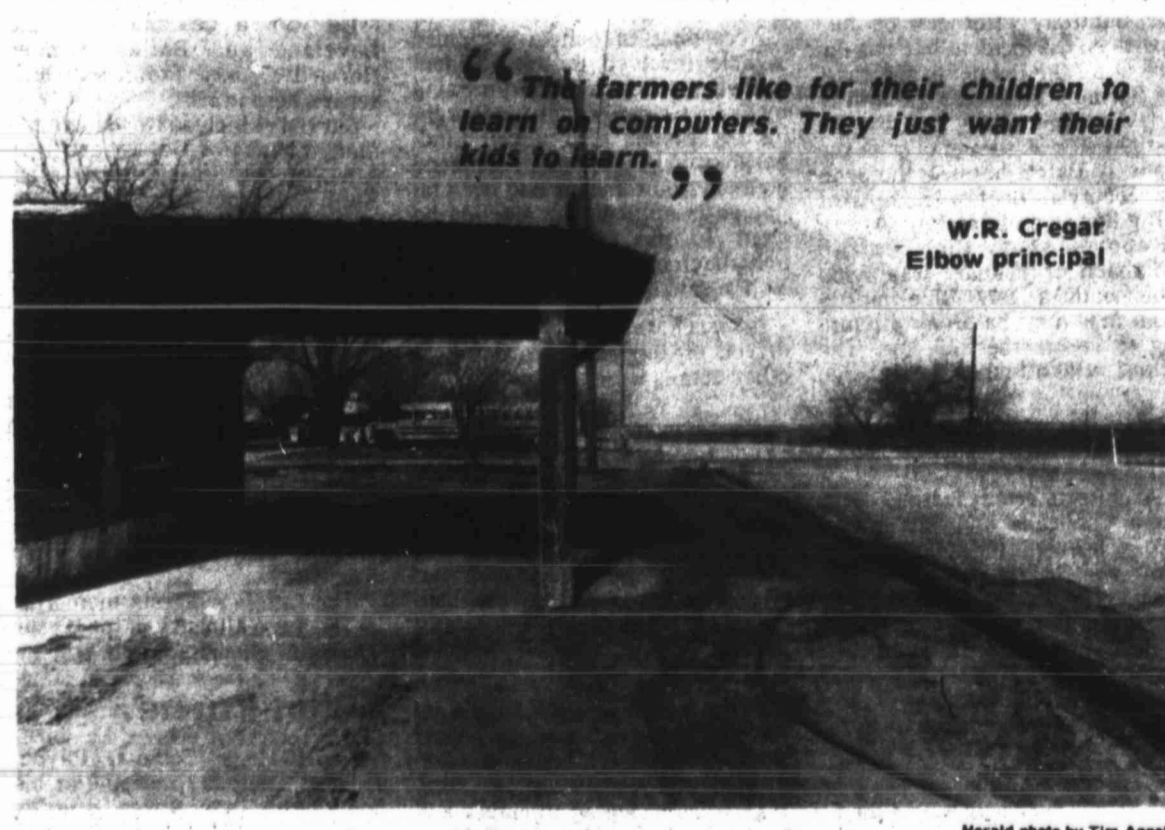

The modern elementary school of 240 students now stands three-quarters of a mile from where the first Elbow school was constructed. It housed only 10 students, McKinnon said. In 1910, a new school was built where the current school sits.

The school is currently under a renovation and building program, the fourth project in the last 20 years, said Principal W.R. Cregar.

The construction will mean the addition of a new computer lab, revamping the library, teachers' workroom, resource room and gymnasium, and the addition of six new classrooms, Cregar said. The school also will be completely carpeted and paneled. Estimated cost of the construction is $750,000 to $1 million, he said.

Camp survivors gather

OSWIECIM, Poland — Poles who survived the horrors of the Auschwitz concentration camp returned Saturday for official observances marking the 40th anniversary of the Nazi extermination center's liberation by the Soviet army.

More than 70 former Auschwitz prisoners gathered in the cold air to walk in a solemn procession through the camp's main gate, which still bears the inscription in German, "Arbeit Macht Frei," or "Work Makes You Free."

USSR names negotiator

MOSCOW — The three-man Soviet delegation to the arms control talks in Geneva, Switzerland, will be led by a top Kremlin negotiator who has been facing American envoys across the bargaining table since 1983.

Viktor P. Karpov, considered a formidable negotiating partner, headed the Soviet delegation at the previous round of talks aimed at curbing long-range nuclear missiles. Those talks broke down in late 1983.

Argentine quake kills 6

MENDOZA, Argentina — A powerful earthquake destroyed a 90-year-old adobe hospital and several homes in this Andean province Saturday, killing at least six people and injuring 110, authorities said.

The quake, which struck at 12:07 a.m., registered 5.8 on the Richter scale of earthquake magnitude, according to Russell Needham, a geophysicist at the National Earthquake Information Center in Golden, Colo.

U.N. head in Thailand

BANGKOK, Thailand — U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar called Saturday for negotiations to end the "suffering, destruction and agony" in Cambodia, and prepared to visit refugees from a Vietnamese offensive against rebel camps near the Thai border.

The U.N. chief, who will also visit Vietnam during his peace mission, said he would "do my utmost to bridge the differences and facilitate the search for a peaceful resolution" to the fighting between Vietnamese soldiers and Cambodian rebels.

Perez de Cuellar is scheduled to fly to the Thai-Cambodian border Sunday to tour the sprawling refugee camp of Khao-i-dang. About 62,000 Cambodians have recently been moved to the camp after fleeing the fighting.

Only sporadic fighting was reported along the frontier Saturday, but the non-Communist Khmer People's National Liberation Front claimed in a radio broadcast that a large, tank-backed Vietnamese force was preparing to attack the liberation front's last camp.

The broadcast said the Vietnamese were assembling about 5,000 troops as well as 40 Soviet-supplied tanks and 10 artillery pieces to attack Sanro Changan.

John Paul II in Venezuela on 25th trip abroad

By The Associated Press

CARACAS, Venezuela — Pope John Paul II arrived here Saturday, beginning his 12-day South American tour by becoming the first pontiff to visit Venezuela.

Soldiers with automatic weapons stood guard throughout the capital and along the 20-mile, flag-lined route the pope's motorcade was to travel from Simon Bolivar Airport to Caracas. The city was decorated with flags and red-and-yellow flowers.

About 12,000 police and soldiers were to provide security during the 72-hour tour, which will take him to Caracas, the oil center of Maracaibo, the Andean city of Merida and the southeastern steel town of Ciudad Guayana.

The Pope's 25th trip abroad — and his sixth to Latin America — also will take him to Ecuador, Peru and Trinidad and Tobago.

John Paul arrived here at 2:56 p.m. EST after a 5,192-mile flight from Rome. He is scheduled to return to Rome on Feb. 6.

On Friday night, a "dry law" went into effect, barring all sales of alcoholic beverages in the capital and in the three states the pope will visit. The Interior Ministry suspended permits to carry firearms throughout the country, except for those issued to private security guards.

Newspapers in Caracas carried color photographs Saturday of the pope with large headlines that read: "Welcome."

President Jaime Lusinchi, who along with members of his Cabinet was to receive the pontiff when arrived, announced Friday he would pardon 26 criminals. The presidential palace said in a statement that the pardon was "in homage to His Holiness."

Despite the plans for a warm welcome, church officials estimate that only about 10 percent of Venezuela's 16 million people are regular churchgoers. Disputes between church and state dating back to the 19th century have denied the church the influence it has in other Latin American countries. There are only 2,063 priests in Venezuela, or one for every 7,755 people. Half of those priests are members of foreign missionary orders.

Differences between church and state finally were settled in 1964, when the government signed an agreement with the Vatican.

Television news programs and newspapers outlined rules of behavior for the Mass the pope will celebrate Sunday morning in the Caracas neighborhood of Montalban, which sits below a hillside of slum dwellings. The site was turned over Friday to the military, which was responsible for maintaining order among the estimated 1 million people — one-fourth of the population of Caracas — who were expected to attend.

Men set up plastic chairs and armed soldiers helped women and children arrange the flowers and ferns lining the huge red-carpeted altar steps.

"The pope is the most important person ever to come to our country," said Elva Perez de Kasapis, who was arranging potted poinsettia plants.

In order to restrict movement among the crowd, the 130-acre field was cordoned off into sections.

2 kids die in house fire

EAST HANOVER, N.J. — The parents of two youngsters who perished in a house fire have been charged with endangering their children's welfare for letting the fire burn for half an hour without notifying authorities, police said Saturday.

Martin and Colleen Weddie, both 34, escaped unharmed from their split-level home after the early morning fire was reported by a neighbor.

Pronounced dead at St. Barnabas Hospital in Livingston were Jennifer, 6, and James, 3, who were pulled from their second-floor bedroom by firefighters wearing oxygen masks.

Twin orangutans born

NEW ORLEANS — An orangutan at the Audubon Zoo gave birth to twins Saturday.

The apes were born about 5 a.m., but zookeepers said an examination of the newborns would have to wait until their 14-year-old mother, Sarah, stopped cuddling them. The exam will reveal the babies' sex and other vital statistics.

Sarah is at Audubon on a permanent "breeding loan" from the Philadelphia Zoo, which will get one of the offspring.

Zookeepers were maintaining a 24-hour watch on Sarah to make sure she doesn't reject her youngsters. There are incubators and feeding bottles ready in such a case.

Reagan returns to radio

WASHINGTON — President Reagan, heralding 25 straight months of economic growth, said Saturday he will continue to pursue policies of reduced taxes and budget cuts during his second term in office.

Resuming weekly five-minute radio addresses that were suspended Nov. 8, Reagan also asked for bipartisan support from Congress to simplify the nation's tax code, a program he said would help keep the nation in sound economic health.

In the Democratic response to Reagan's address, Senate Minority Leader Robert Byrd of West Virginia cautioned that, in cutting federal spending, "we must do so in a way that is fair and even-handed ... We must do it with ... a heart."

Polish boy has surgery

STANFORD, Calif. — A 6-year-old Polish boy, whose life-saving heart surgery was made possible by $25,000 in donations, underwent additional surgery to stop internal bleeding Saturday and was in critical but stable condition, hospital officials said.

The surgery at 4:30 a.m. came about 13 hours after doctors at Stanford University Medical Center repaired Piotr Sternik's defective heart valve in a seven-hour operation. Physicians characterized the bleeding problem as minor and said the boy was doing well.

N.Y. subway vigilante may avoid prison term

NEW YORK (AP) — Bernhard Goetz, indicted for firearms offenses by a grand jury that declined to charge him with assault or attempted murder in the shootings of four youths on a subway, may avoid a jail term even if convicted, a prosecutor said Saturday.

Meanwhile, the city's two mass-circulation tabloid newspapers split in their opinions of Friday's grand jury action, with the Daily News calling it "outrageous" and the Post saying it was "a victory for common sense and self-defense."

Normally, New York law would have Goetz, 37, serve a minimum of one year in jail if convicted of the most serious of three weapons charges against him, third-degree criminal possession of a handgun, a felony. The charge carries a maximum penalty of seven years in prison.

However, the law allows judges to consider mitigating circumstances, especially when the defendant is a first-time offender.

"Under the law, if a person is found guilty, then the judge could possibly not send him to jail because of mitigating circumstances," said Bronx District Attorney Mario Merola.

"Whether a judge would call what Goetz (experienced) mitigating circumstances, I can't say," Merola said. Prosecutors with jurisdiction over Goetz's case in Manhattan could not immediately be reached Saturday.

Manhattan District Attorney Robert Morgenthau could not say whether Goetz should go to jail. "That's a matter for the courts to decide," Morgenthau said Friday, after the 23-member jury returned indictments on the third-degree possession charge, and two counts of fourth-degree possession.

The fourth-degree counts were for two guns — a .38-caliber revolver and a 9 mm semiautomatic pistol — allegedly found in a search of Goetz's apartment.

The third-degree charge was lodged against Goetz for allegedly carrying a loaded pistol Dec. 22, the day the youths were shot after reportedly confronting Goetz on a subway train and asking for $5.

Goetz, who had no previous offenses, had sought a gun permit after being injured by a mugger in 1981, but was turned down.

Morgenthau said the jurors considered — but rejected — four counts of second-degree attempted murder, four counts of first-degree assault and four counts of first-degree reckless endangerment.

Newsday reported Saturday that more often than not, sentences are reduced under New York's gun laws, which were said to be among the toughest in the nation.

Q: While visiting relatives, I've been reading your column. When I return home, we're going to sell our home. Could you offer some guidelines in choosing a real-estate agent?

A: There are a number of areas you should look at in selecting a real estate agent since this may be the largest single financial transaction you may make. Begin by investigating the agent's track record. Be sure the agent or the broker can advise you on all aspects of the real estate transaction. How is the agent's reputation in the community? Ask whether the agent belongs to national, state and local real estate boards, organizations or associations. The agent should be familiar with the community, its people, its movement and growth. Finally, the agent should exhibit a genuine concern for you and your goals.

BUSINESS TAX DEADLINES

Penalties for missed tax deadlines are annoying and sometimes very costly. Here's a reminder list you might want to cut and save covering the key filing deadlines (aside from the regular payroll tax deposit deadlines) for the next few months.

January 31 — Fourth quarter Form 941 for withheld income and social security taxes due. Filing deadline extended to Monday, February 11, if deposits were made on time and payments have been made in full.

January 31 — Employers must file Form 940 for federal unemployment tax (FUTA). Again deadline extended to February 11 if full taxes have been paid with timely made deposits.

January 31 — Employers must supply employees with W-2 forms (wage statements). The original W-2's must be sent, along with transmittal Form W-3, to the Social Security Administration by February 28.

January 31 — Businesses must supply Form 1099 to recipients of $10 or more of interest or dividends or $600 or more of rents, royalties, commissions, fees, and other payments to non-employees.

February 28 — Forms 1096 with accompanying 1099's and Forms W-3 with accompanying W-2's are due.

February 28 — Form 9027 reporting annual allocation of tips required from large food and beverage establishments.

March 15 — Due date for calendar year corporations' tax returns. Corporations that file for extension must pay any unpaid estimated taxes.

March 15 — Deadline for calendar year corporations to file Form 2553 to elect Sub S status for 1985.

April 15 — Deadline for calendar year partnerships to file 1984 income tax returns.

House lacks guts to cut the deficit

The House Republicans' new outline of policy goals provides little reason to hope for deficit reduction in the current term of Congress. Minority Leader Robert Michel, R-Ill., says the nation's economic growth is causing many lawmakers to conclude that the effects of the deficit aren't particularly drastic.

While the GOP policy does call for some cuts in domestic spending, including some that would be hard to defend, it uncritically supports President Reagan's overly ambitious buildup of strategic weapons and unwise advocacy of tuition credits for parents of private school students. The net effect: a deficit as large as before.

Well, if the House GOP leaders don't think the deficit matters very much, why do they propose any spending cuts at all? Why not turn the budget into a Christmas tree for everybody?

The truth is, we suspect, that they know better but lack the courage to deal with the problem.

A law of many colors

AUSTIN — Many years ago I moved from Texas to Little Rock, Ark., and found myself on a weird shift that put me off work at 2 p.m. on Sunday.

After work my first Sunday up there, I pulled my baby blue Ford Falcon into a stall at a drive-in eatery. When the car hop took my order (remember, I said this was many years ago), I requested a hamburger, fries and a Lone Star beer.

When the car hop replied that she couldn't serve me the beer, I assumed that Lone Star wasn't available in Arkansas and told her any brand would be fine. No way, she said, it's Sunday. But it's after noon, I argued. No beer sales at any time on Sunday in Arkansas, she replied.

Actually, I never was a big beer fan and could just as easily have ordered an iced tea, but being denied something just because it was Sunday angered me to the point that I remember the incident vividly even now.

That same anger and frustration must be felt by many newly adopted Texans the first time they run up against the state's Blue Law. Even we old-timers occasionally find it hard to live with the current law, which lists several dozen items that can't be sold by stores on consecutive Saturdays and Sundays.

Most of us have picked up an item only to be told at the counter that the store couldn't sell that on Sunday. That sort of thing doesn't happen much any more, however. Many cashiers just ignore the law and make us accomplices in breaking it.

From our personal experiences, few of us should be surprised that recent polls show strong support for abolishing or, at least, changing the Blue Law.

Remember that the polls were financed by a group organized to lobby for repeal of the law. And those polls may not have asked questions about whether people wanted to work on Sunday, or whether they're worried about repeal of the law hurting their local small merchants. But the results probably do reflect a majority opinion among Texans as they understand how the law affects them.

That doesn't mean that the repeal forces face an easy passage to victory through the legislative maze, however. Public opinion counts with politicians, but it's not everything, particularly when powerful lobby forces are involved.

The anti-Blue Law lobby appears to be much stronger and better organized than ever before. Grouped under Texans for Blue Law Repeal Inc. are such retail heavyweights as Zale's, Sears, Joske's, Target, Toys R Us and Eckerd Drugs. They have hired professional lobbyists to carry the message to the Legislature and obviously have money to back up their attack.

Another advantage for them is the agreement by Sen. Ray Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, to carry the repeal legislation in the Senate. A convert from the pro-Blue Law team, Farabee holds a high place with Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby's team in the Senate and is one of the most widely respected of the 31 state senators.

But the forces who have successfully preserved the status quo in the past still are powerful, and it's always easier to kill legislation than to pass it.

Both the Texas Retailers Association and the Texas Automobile Dealers Association are lobbying to preserve the Blue Law, and they have access to legislator's ears. Most legislators have automobile dealers and small merchants back home, and many of them are personal friends or financial contributors to their campaigns.

The pro-Blue Law forces have a communications network that can bring that personalized pressure to bear where it will do the most good. Almost every lawmaker will pay more attention to a call from one of the many small merchants back home than from the manager of the only Toys R Us in the district.

If you listen only to what both sides say, you may think that the pro-Blue Law forces are only worried about employee rights and the tradition of a day off to be with the family. The other side will say they are only pushing for repeal at the urging of their customers.

Another view will come from a few people who see the whole thing as a religious issue involving the biblical call for a day of rest. They will have little impact, however. Money and who will make it on what day are the key issues.

From one smoker to another

Not long ago a stick of a man shuffled into my office to ask a question about the newspaper. By the time he settled into a chair he had exhausted himself. "Excuse me," he said, his eyes averted, "but I need just a minute. Emphysema."

I was smoking a cigarette at the time. I put it out. He took a few seconds to get his wind back and said with a small smile: "Smoked too much, too long."

It was hard to tell his age because he was abnormally thin, his face gaunt, but probably he was no more than 50. He folded his hands over his knee. His hands were outstanding. They were large, with thin fingers, well-built. They were working hands.

For this man, the hands were all he had left with which to work. Gone was his lifelong vocation; gone was any kind of physical activity. He kept busy with his hands, but that was the limit of his endurance.

He barely made it walking a slow shuffle into my office. And then he felt the need to apologize.

I quit smoking a few weeks later. It took a shock to wake me from the notion that I enjoyed smoking tobacco, enjoyed it so much that the pleasure outweighed all the physical problems smoking created.

A cough that wouldn't go away, kept me awake at night, wore me out from lack of sleep, impaired my ability to work and eventually sent me to the hospital was that shock. The cough scared me.

If that nagging cough had come five years ago, I might not have been alarmed by it. I might have picked up a cigarette again the moment the oxygen came out of my hospital room. There was an ashtray in the bedstand. I thought about it.

I talked with a woman last week who had had the problem I had, only worse. Hospitalization and medication didn't resolve it. She was forced to endure a medical procedure to clean her lungs. Nasty business. She's still smoking.

Five years later, and that cough in the night might have come too late. I might have been across the threshold of my body's tolerance.

I quit smoking with the aid of a nicotine gum, recollection of awakening night after night with a cough no medicine could calm, and a memory of map old before his time shuffling into my office.

Last week I returned to the hospital for pulmonary function tests to determine whether nearly two decades of smoking had left permanent damage. The verdict? On a scale of 1 to 10, I'm an 8. The lungs aren't as physically fit as they should be for my age and physique, but I'm not crippled either.

I'd rather be a 10. But maybe the knowledge of lung damage, however minimal, will keep me committed to abstinence. That and the memory of a man with emphysema.

Don't mess around with love

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: About a year ago, I met this young man and we fell in love. Well, we both had been brought up to believe sex before marriage was wrong, but that didn't stop us. We broke up, but now I feel guilty and unclear and wonder if I will always make a mess of my life, like so many of my friends have done. — D.K.

DEAR D.K.: What you have done is wrong in the eyes of God — no matter how common it may be today. "Flee from sexual immorality," the Bible commands (1 Corinthians 6:18). Furthermore, you are right to be concerned about your future, for unless there is a radical change in your heart you will very likely fall into the same trap again — and never know the joy and security that God intended for us to have in the bond of marriage.

You need two things: forgiveness, and strength to live as you should. And although what you have done is displeasing to God, I want to assure you that God loves you and wants you to turn to him for forgiveness and strength. Wouldn't it be wonderful to go to sleep tonight knowing that all your sins — not just this sin, but every other sin you have ever committed — had been washed away by God?

And that is exactly what can happen if you will confess your sins to Christ and trust him for forgiveness and salvation. Christ died on the cross as a perfect and complete sacrifice for your sins. Now he offers you forgiveness as a free gift. All you have to do is turn to him in faith and accept his forgiveness.

Then God will help you live as you should. Get involved in a church where Christ is preached. Turn to God's Word, the Bible, every day to find out how he wants you to live. Then ask him to strengthen you so you "honor God with your body" (1 Corinthians 6:20). And trust him to lead you to a husband of his choice, so together you can serve Christ.

Comanche gets scalped

By KEITH BRISCOE

What can you buy for $4.56 billion?

You can purchase a membership in the Republican Party. Or you can get a small Latin American country. Or you can treat yourself to a boondoggle nuclear generating plant that will never see the light of atomic fission.

If you live in West Texas and buy power from the local electric monopolies, then you're going to pay out the nose for a monumental blunder that stinks to high isotopes.

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission once again has put the brakes on the Comanche Peak nuclear power plant at Glen Rose. Citing construction defects, lack of quality control and harassment of inspectors, the commission told Texas Utilities Electric Co. that the plant is woefully substandard and will not be licensed without major modifications. Total project cost: $4½ billion.

The director of the Trial Lawyers for Public Justice says Comanche Peak is beyond salvation. In other words, someone's going to get stuck with a big bill for a nuclear dinosaur in Glen Rose.

Are the giant utility companies going to cough up this cash for their mistakes? No, electric power customers are going to get doled by a massive fiscal fallout. Think you're paying high electric bills now? Just wait until this nuclear waste hits the fan.

I agree with the contention by these wealthy monopolies that nuclear power is needed for the future. But private companies, which exist only to make a profit, shouldn't be entrusted with public utilities, much less volatile nuclear power.

France, Germany, Russia and Israel maintain nuclear plants with efficiency and economy. That's because utilities in those countries are owned by government, which is charged with promoting the general welfare, not turning a private profit.

How can we take our utility companies seriously when they don't take our nuclear commission seriously?

It's time for the public to wake up and demand that utilities are nationalized — before we wake up in the night and find ourselves glowing in the dark.

Middle Ages at the middle school

By CAROL BALDWIN
Staff Writer

The Goliad Middle School gym was filled with a Who's Who of celebrities from the Middle Ages during the Medieval Fair Saturday sponsored by the Signal Classes.

Characters milling around included Richard the Lionhearted, Robin Hood, Ivanhoe, Merlin, Beowulf and Black Knights, royal ladies and kings.

But what appeared to be some of the period's big names were really students in the Signal class program disguised as their favorite characters from the Middle Ages.

The middle school was transformed into a Medieval village complete with a stockade, a jousting arena, castles and a time schedule on the wall outlining highlights from the invasion of Spain by the Visigoths in 416 through the Crusades and the end of the Middle Ages in 1453.

The costumes were made by kids in grades 6-8 enrolled in the advanced literary arts program, said Carol Gauer, instructor for the event.

Studying the Middle Ages was a major project during the first semester. Students based their projects on various units they studied throughout the semester, and some did outside research before choosing a character to portray.

Brian Stovall, 11, and Josh Rountree, 11, built a miniature arena with jousting performing before a king and queen.

Josh said, "Jousting was a big sport in the Middle Ages. It was real popular."

Brian "saw a film about jousting. It looked interesting so we decided to do some more studying to see what it was all about."

Studying the colorful time in history was almost as exciting "as Star Wars," Josh said, but not quite. Still, he admitted the period was more attractive because of the student's participation in it.

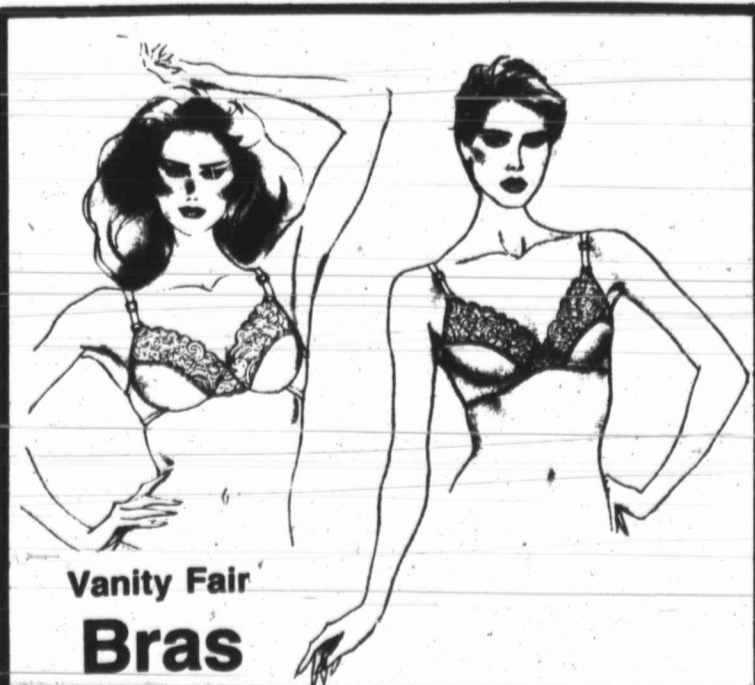

Amber Stroup, 12, set up a display outlining the lifestyles of nobles and monks during the Middle Ages. Amber shared information such as: A nobleman's great hall floor was filthy. Castaway bones and dropped food covered it. Some nobleman's floors possibly had not been swept in several years.

John Webb, 12, chose Richard the Lionhearted for his special project because he was intrigued with Richard's impersonation of a Black Knight who took part in a jousting tournament without revealing his true identity.

To complete his outfit, John, with the assistance of a neighbor, put together a black shield and armour.

"Black knights had magic powers. They were great warriors and it was thought that nothing could scare them," John said.

The Medieval village was scheduled to turn back into a middle school gym after 3 p.m., but the kids all agreed that the project gave a better understanding of a project they might have quickly forgotten had they not had a chance to actually portray the characters.

Elbow: high tech on High Plains

Forsan Independent School District. However, Forsan is seven miles from the elementary school.

Changes at this progressive school have been more than physical. In this community, where a family of farmers may stretch back as many as four generations, students have entered the age of advanced technology. These farmers' children begin learning on computers in the first grade.

And despite the construction push, the word around the school is computer talk.

"They (students) really like them," Cregar said. "It's a way of life for them. They have adapted to using the computers."

"We use the computers as a supplemental program. It's like having their own teacher. It tells you if you make a mistake, takes you through the steps and shows you where the mistake was made."

The computers serve as a tutorial tool and drill and practice tool, said teachers' aid Joan Rock, who supervises work in the computer lab. The 11 computers in the lab are on seven hours a day, she said. The separate classrooms are also equipped with computers of their own.

The Apple computers are used extensively in teaching mathematic fundamentals, Mrs. Rock said. However, the computers are also used to supplement English, spelling, typing and reading, she said.

"I think I would like for every child to be literate in computers," Cregar said. "We want to make sure they are prepared for later in life. "The farmers like for their children to learn on computers. They just want their kids to learn."

The Texas Education Agency chose Elbow as a demonstrator school for the Hawaiian English Program several years ago and is being taught by teachers and computers, alike. The aim of the program is to help students toward progressively greater language performance, Cregar said.

The teachers also are able to keep class and student progress reports by utilizing computer printouts.

Talk of bits and bytes and meteor mathematics may sound like high tech on the high plains; but to the students at Elbow, it's purely elementary.

Movement to resettle Central American refugees stalled

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — The movement to provide sanctuary in this country for Central American refugees has reached a crossroads, with activists meeting this weekend to discuss whether to turn their loosely organized humanitarian efforts into a polished political drive.

"It's very much like a kind of cake that has to get baked," said Daniel P. Sheehan, an attorney with the Christic Institute in Washington, D.C. "The question is, is it baked yet? What kind of cake is it going to be?"

The 3-year-old church-inspired movement that began here has been in the spotlight lately as a result of indictments, trials of movement members and a public symposium last week that attracted more than 1,000 people.

On March 24, 1982, the Southside United Presbyterian Church in Tucson publicly declared itself a sanctuary for Central American refugees.

Since then, an estimated 200 to 220 churches and synagogues from Burlington, Vt., to Berkeley, Calif., and an estimated 50,000 to 60,000

Americans have followed suit, opening their doors to people from El Salvador, Guatemala and Honduras whom many believe to be victims of civil war or oppression.

The movement has provided haven for 2,500 to 3,000 refugees using an "underground railroad" that brings Central Americans through Mexico, a small part of the estimated 500,000 Central Americans now in this country.

The activists say they are providing sanctuary on the premise that international and U.S. laws, including the 1980 Refugee Act, grant legal asylum to refugees who are fleeing political persecution and violence.

But the Immigration and Naturalization Service and the Justice Department contend that Central Americans entering this country without documentation do so for economic reasons. Those apprehended face deportation.

In the past two weeks, events have snowballed:

• In Arizona, 16 people were indicted, including six members of the clergy, on the basis of evidence the government says came through church infiltration by undercover informants and agents using recording devices.

• Religious leaders and groups have attacked the Reagan administration for such tactics and endorsed "the moral rightness of sanctuary." They include the heads of the National Council of Churches, the Lutheran Church in America, United Church of Christ, U.S. Catholic Mission Association, American Baptist Church in the U.S.A.

Boxing gets top bill

By Charlie Alcorn

This is a blissfully slow time of year in the sports world. After the media blitz of the Super Bowl, a little tranquility is much in order. Time to come in out of the cold and turn our attention to the collective mayhem known as indoor sports. Besides the untold thousands of basketball games and hockey brawls that are being played, there are a number of sports that beg for our attention in these winter months. Indoor track meets, Major Indoor Soccer League action, the Pro Bowler's Tour, and if your feeling eclectic, the box Lacrosse league might suit your needs.

My personal favorite is that most basic sport of all, boxing. Nothing like watching a couple of behemoths whale each other into the twilight zone to keep the blood circulating. I'd rather catch some of ESPN's Top Rank pugilism any day, rather than lapsing into a coma watching Earl Anthony roll 17 consecutive strikes to pull out the PBA's Alka-Seltzer Open in sunny Tenafly, New Jersey.

In an effort to raise my level of boxing knowledge, I found the latest issue of Ring magazine, the Bible of Boxing. On the cover was a lightweight contender (no pun intended) from the Virgin Islands named Livingstone Bramble. There was nothing unusual about this young barbarian at first glance, but upon closer inspection I realized that much of the color in Mr. Bramble's native garb was that of a large snake coiled around his head. I had forgotten what a true entertainment value boxing could be. I mean this was really great stuff. Made People magazine read like the backside of a Grape-Nuts box.

Inside I found Ring's picks for the best fighters in each facet of the boxing game. What a treat this turned out to be, with the winner of each category featured in a blowup picture of what he did best.

Some of the dignitaries included Thomas "Hitman" Hearns, shown wiping out some poor chumps face with the "Best Right Cross". Panamanian featherweight, Eusebio Pedroza was seen lifting an opponent a foot off the ground with the "Best Body Punch". They don't make film fast enough to catch Hector "Macho" Camacho, whose "Best Hand Speed" pictures were an appropriate blur. The most dubious category showed Syria's Mustafa Hamso during, and after taking one of Marvelous Marvin Hagler's uppercuts on his "Best Chin".

In the heavyweight division, Larry Holmes plans to retire after his March 15 fight with David Bey in Las Vegas. Seems like we've heard this kind of talk before from a guy named Ali. Perhaps Holmes will try talking to the ex-Greatest and realize that it is better to have a functioning brain than a few extra million dollars.

Local welterweight sensation, Donald Curry, of Fort Worth is quietly becoming one of the finest boxers around. At 23, Curry holds the World Boxing Association's title and is looking to fight WBC champion Milton McCrory, who hails from the famous Kronk Gym in Detroit, for the undisputed welterweight title. No plans have been announced for the fight as of yet, but after Curry's destruction of #1 contender Colin Jones of Wales earlier this week, the matchup is inevitable.

In what will probably be the fight of the year, Marvelous Marvin Hagler will battle Thomas "Hitman" Hearns on April 15, in Las Vegas for the world middleweight title. Hearns is the current WBC super welterweight (as opposed to a welterweight?) champion, having crushed Roberto Duran and Fred Hutchinson to reclaim the title. It will be Hagler's 11th title defense.

After the tragic death of the Korean lightweight Kim, in his title bout with Ray "Boom Boom" Mancini there were numerous appeals to shut boxing down for good. Whether that is a valid suggestion depends on how you view the morality of the sport. Nobody is forcing these men into the ring and many fighters have earned a decent living in the ring. But for the few who have earned riches with their fists, thousands of others have nothing more to show for their efforts than a mess of stitches.

I personally think that outlawing boxing would be about as effective as the Prohibition was. The underground boxing world that would develop as a result would probably be more dangerous than the current system. The boxing world is fairly shady any way (you don't ever hear about the FBI setting up "sting" operations for any other sport), so it would probably be best to keep the ring wars in public where boxers are protected by the various state boxing commissions. Besides, we have to have something to fall back on when the ice dancers take over our wintertime Wide World of Sports.

Top college teams upset St. John's nip Hoyas

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Chris Mullin scored 20 points including three key free throws and third-ranked St. John's withstood a frenzied rally by top-ranked Georgetown to end the Hoyas' 29-game winning streak with a 65-65 Big East Conference basketball victory Saturday.

The Redmen, who led by as many as 18 points early in the second half, were hard-pressed to extend their winning streak to 10 and raise their season record to 15-1. Georgetown made only 11 of 21 free throws, including two straight misses apiece by Billy Martin and All-American center Patrick Ewing after Georgetown had cut the lead to 59-51 with seven minutes to go. Ewing was held to just nine points but had 14 rebounds.

It was first loss for the defending NCAA champions since last Feb. 21, when St. John's beat them 75-71, also at the Capital Centre.

St. John's winning margin came with 25 seconds left when Mullin hit the second of two free throws to make it 66-61. Michael Jackson scored with 18 seconds left and again with six seconds left for Georgetown's final four points. Mullin then held the ball out of bounds before throwing it in just as time ran out.

When the Redmen beat Georgetown last year, they did not have Walter Berry, who was attending San Jacinto Junior College. But Saturday, Berry added 14 points and grabbed 13 rebounds as the only other St. John's player in double figures. David Wingate's 16 points paced Georgetown.

St. John's led by 14 points late in the first half and walked off with a 40-30 lead at intermission. Berry, a 6-foot-8 sophomore who had spent the last 13 minutes of the first half on the bench after picking up two fouls, contributed three field goals in a 10-2 spurt that gave the Redmen a 55-37 lead with 12:04 remaining in the game.

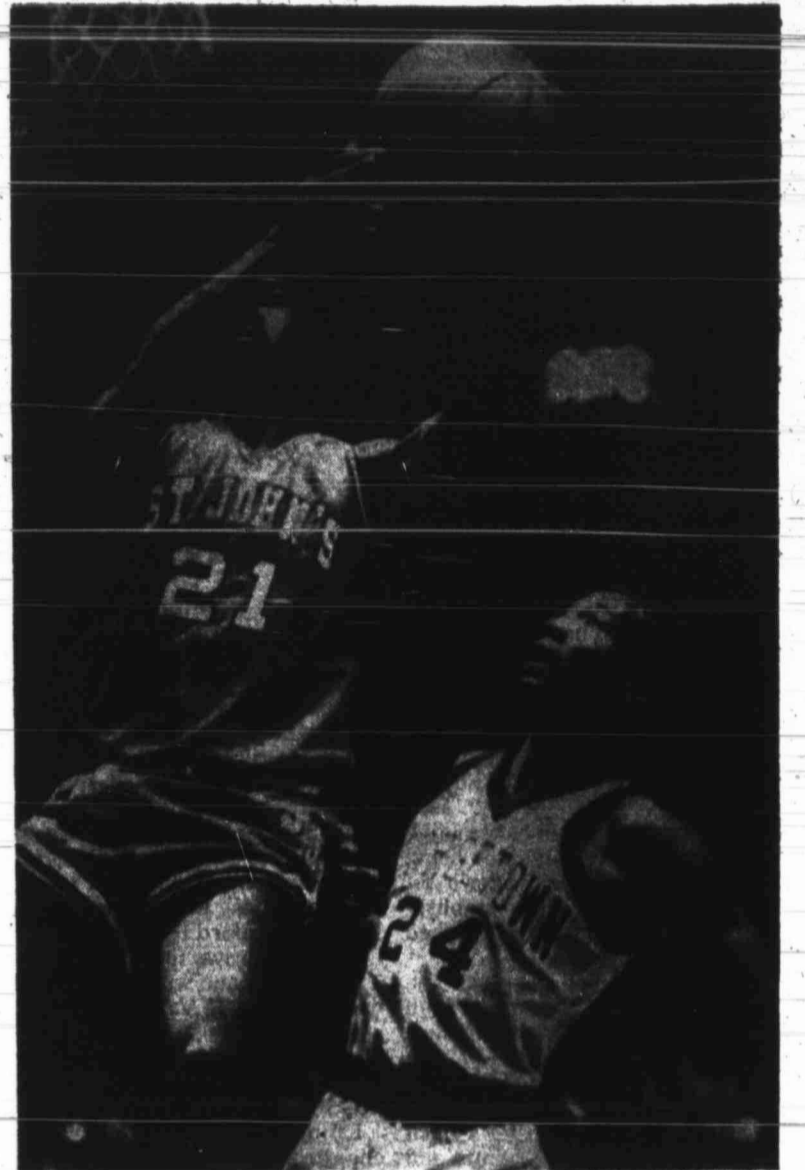

Wingate's three-point play then capped an 8-0 Georgetown run that reduced its deficit to 57-47. The Redmen went up again 59-47 on a jump shot by Mullin, but St. John's began to fold under Georgetown's relentless full-court defense and the Hoyas scored seven straight points to pull within 63-60 with 1:23 remaining on a basket by Wingate.

Mullin then scored on three foul shots, while Jackson got the Hoyas' last five points.

St. John's took over the Big East lead with a 7-0 record, while Georgetown dropped to 18-1 overall and 7-1 in the conference.

Willie Glass added 11 points for St. John's, while Jackson had 12 and Martin 10.

The game was played before a crowd of 19,085 at Capital Centre.

WALTER BERRY of St. Johns is fouled by BILL MARTIN of Georgetown in the Redmen's 67-66 upset of the Hoyas.

Tech over No.2 SMU

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Tony Benford's 10-foot baseline jump shot with three seconds left carried Texas Tech to a 64-63 Southwest Conference ambush of No. 2 Southern Methodist Saturday night.

The defeat was the first in SWC play for the Mustangs against six victories. It was only their second loss of the season with 15 victories.

The loss also cost the Mustangs a shot at the No. 1 Associated Press ranking after top-ranked Georgetown fell to St. John's earlier in the day. Benford's shot came after the Red Raiders had blown an 11-point lead late in the second half.

Carl Wright led the Pony comeback with a bucket and four free throws as SMU took a 63-62 lead with 47 seconds to play.

After Benford hit his shot, the Mustangs threw the ball away but Vince Taylor missed a free throw.

Larry Davis, who had 25 points for SMU, grabbed the rebound and hurled the ball the length of the floor and it hit the glass, bouncing harmlessly away. Bubba Jennings hit 13 of 15 shots for the Red Raiders to score a game-high 26 points as a sellout crowd of 8,174 jammed Lubbock Municipal Coliseum, watching Tech up its SWC record to 5-2. The Raiders are 12-5 for the season.

Seven-foot SMU center Jon Koncak fouled out with 7:34 to go in the game with only six points.

Tech ran up a 58-47 lead but the Mustangs came back behind Butch Moore and Wright. Tech scored only three buckets in the final six minutes of the game. Jennings was unstoppable in the first half despite a box-and-one defense by the Mustangs who had Butch Moore follow his every step.

Jennings hit eight of nine shots for 16 points as the Red Raiders built a 36-31 halftime lead.

Davis, who always saves his best games for the Red Raiders, kept the Mustangs close with 19 points in the first half on seven of 10 field goal shots and five free throws.

Pro Bowl showdown to feature NFL stars

HONOLULU (AP) — The National Football League, which reached its emotional peak last week when the San Francisco 49ers beat the Miami Dolphins in Super Bowl XIX, concludes its six-month season Sunday when AFC and AFC squads loaded with members of those teams meet in the Pro Bowl.

But the annual all-star game, to be televised nationally by ABC starting at 4 p.m. EST, figures as usual to be more a polite showcase for the NFL's most talented athletes than high-powered football at its best, an exhibition between two groups of athletes who have spent more time this week socializing than practicing to destroy each other.

Many of the 82 players have their wives and children here, and most have spent at least half of each day touring together, participating in golf tournaments or attending receptions.

"I think the exciting thing is that it's a game in the spirit of fun," said Brian Holloway of the New England Patriots, who will start at right tackle for the AFC, squad coached by Pittsburgh's Chuck Noll. "You get to meet players from other teams just like yourselves and meet them in a family atmosphere."

There is one new development for this year's Pro Bowl, which features 10 players from the 49ers and seven from the Dolphins, including quarterbacks Joe Montana and Dan Marino. That's a switch from the 4-3 defense to the 3-4 that most of the NFL's teams now use.

The rules also require that an outside linebacker must blitz on each play, which means that some of the NFL's most devastating athletes will be aiming at Montana and Marino.

They include the league's linebacker prototype, Lawrence Taylor of the New York Giants, and such up-and-comers as Rickey

Jackson of the New Orleans Saints, Andre Tippett of the New England Patriots and Mike Merriweather of the Pittsburgh Steelers. Among them, they had 57 sacks this season.

The 3-4 rule also makes alternating nose tackles of two of the NFL's best defensive linemen, Chicago's Dan Hampton and Dallas' Randy White, both of whom normally are defensive tackles in a 4-3. Hampton, the starter, has been particularly annoyed by at nose tackle and has tried to switch positions with New Orleans' defensive end, Bruce Clark.

"I'm basically a defensive end," said Hampton, whose coach for the NFC all-stars is the Bears' Mike Ditka. "It's kind of a shame to be put in a position like this, where they can slant down on you. I've been through three knee operations."

The main stars of Sunday's show, of course, will be Montana and Marino, replaying in a more sedate way their Super Bowl battle won by Montana.

Marino, the AFC starter who set season marks for touchdown passes with 48 and yardage with 5,084, will be throwing to his Miami teammates, the Marks Brothers, Duper and Clayton, along with Pittsburgh's John Stallworth and Seattle's Steve Largent. They may be going at times against the entire San Francisco secondary — cornerbacks Ronnie Lott and Eric Wright and safeties Dwight Hicks and Carlton Williamson.

But the AFC's running game may be hindered by the loss of the New York Jets' Freeman McNeil, who was ruled out of the game by doctors because of ribs bruised during the regular season. Marcus Allen of the Los Angeles Raiders will be one back with Denver's Sammy Winder moving into the starting lineup in place of McNeil.

Klondike: on the road to state

By STEVE BELVIN Sports Writer

PATRICIA — The movie soundtrack "Footloose" can be heard blaring from their locker room. Like the lyrics of the song, the Klondike Cougars have been running footloose over opponents this basketball season.

Their 21-1 record and No. 6 Class A state rankings has the tiny farming community of Patricia in a stir. "Klondike hasn't won a district championship in 10 years," said head coach Jimmy Thomas. "Now the community and the kids are talking about going to state."

The Cougars are not an awesome looking squad. They have only one player over six-foot tall with a meager seven-man roster.

What they do have is a team of seniors that have played together for 10 years. Add a coach that stresses defense, willpower to execute a precise game plan, and you've got a the makings of a state tournament caliber squad.

Defense is the name of the game in Cougar land, and Thomas wouldn't have it any other way. "We press, press and press some more," said the second-year coach. My philosophy is to make the other team work as hard as they as possible. The key is our endurance, I feel that we are in better shape than anybody we play and that is the key to a successful press."

Thomas realized quickly he was going to have a good team with six lettermen and all five starters returning. Klondike went 20-9 in Thomas' first year last season.

They finished second in district behind perennial powerhouse Greenwood and were eliminated in the area playoffs last season.

Every member of the squad agrees that longevity is one of the main keys to their success. "We've been playing together since the third grade," said Klondike's leading scorer Tim Cope.

Like last season, the 6-0 senior forward is having another banner year. His deadly jumper and quick drives to the basket enable him to maintain a 23 point, 8 rebound average per game. He's earned Most Valuable Player honors at the Garden City and Plains tournaments. "Tim is averaging three points less than last year, but his assists are up," commented Thomas. "He's a total team player."

Many of Cope's assists have been going to 5-11 guard Mitch Mitchell who's 11 point average is four more than last season. "A year's experience has helped my scoring," said Mitchell.

Mitchell and his teammates have been having lots fun this season with the lone exception of the Greenwood tournament. The Cougars suffered their only loss of the season, a 65-59 setback to Iraan. Ironically it was the only time they had to finish a game with four players.

Using a pressure defense one might assume that Klondike gets into foul trouble often.

"We don't worry about having only seven players," said 6-4 post Llane Turner, who has been "the force" underneath for the Cougars with his 16 point, 10 rebound average. "It's in the back of your mind, but if we do get in trouble we have confidence in our bench." The bench has earned the name the "dynamic duo". Guard-forward Robert Guera and post player John Cave have always come through under pressure.

Just how good are the Cougars? "I really don't know how good we are," said Thomas. "We've beaten some pretty good teams." That's putting it mildly considering Klondike has defeated such tough squads as Greenwood, and New Mexico basketball powerhouses Jal and Eunice.

The Cougars had one close call while winning the first half district title. That was an 83-81 victory over O'Donnell. A game which Thomas says his Cougar didn't play well.

The Cougars 15-point margin per victory can be attributed to their stingy defense. Brent Airhart, a 5-8 starting guard is Thomas' best defensive player. "Brent has quick hands and feet and excellent body control." He and his teammates have been drilled so thoroughly, defense comes natural. "We work a lot of defense in practice. It's fun playing defense," he laughed.

Thomas admits that three-fourths of their workouts emphasize defense. "We try to run fullcourt the entire practice which alleviates the need to run afterwards."

Thomas recently came up with a brainstorm off the court as well. He video-taped different segments of games and put it to songs such as "Footloose", "Let's Hear it For the Boys", and "Jump".

Before each home game the squad views the video. Ricky Webb, a 5-11 forward, says the video has worked wonders for the squad. "We all think it's a pretty neat idea. The video really pumps us up."

"The key to our success is experience. These boys have been playing together all their lives. They are an unselfish group that are gaining confidence. They believe they can do it," explains Thomas.

Are the Cougars looking toward post season play? "No", Thomas firmly stated. "The games are getting tougher now. We must be prepared every game. Everyone is out to knock us off."

MARTINA NAVRATILOVA rushes to the net Friday during her match against CARLING BASSETT of Canada. NAVRATILOVA won easily 6-2, 6-2.

Foster wins Millrose

NEW YORK (AP) — Greg Foster continued his mastery over Olympic champion Roger Kingdom since the Los Angeles Games, beating him decisively Friday night in the 60-yard high hurdles in the 78th Wanamaker Millrose Games at Madison Square Garden.

In posting his fourth consecutive victory over Kingdom since being upset in the Olympics, Foster burst quickly from the blocks, established a substantial lead and finished in 6.97 seconds.

Kingdom, ranked No. 1 in the world in the men's 110-meter high hurdles, just ahead of Foster, rallied to finish second in 7.07, just ahead of Henry Andrade, third in 7.08.

The triumph was Foster's third straight in the Millrose Games and his fourth overall in the meet.

Although Foster's time was far short of the world indoor best of 6.82, held by Renaldo Nehemiah, it was the first clocking under seven seconds in this young indoor season. He did it despite knocking over the final two hurdles.

Foster has downgraded Kingdom since the Olympics, saying, "He's no Nehemiah. He's very inconsistent. He ran one good race on one particular day. Unfortunately for me, it was in the Olympics."

In the Games, Kingdom set an Olympic record with a time of 13.20, three-hundredths of a second ahead of Foster, the silver medalist.

The women's Olympic hurdles champion, Benita Fitzgerald-Brown, also was beaten in the Millrose Games.

She wound up a distant fourth in the women's 60-yard hurdles, behind Stephanie Hightower, the American record holder.

Hightower, who failed by one-hundredth of a second to make the U.S. Olympic team in a controversial finish in the Trials, breezed to her fifth Millrose victory in 7.51.

Candy Young was second in 7.57, Rhonda Blanford third in 7.65 and Fitzgerald-Brown fourth in 7.74.

The men's and women's 60-yard dashes produced surprise winners.

In the men's 60, Albert Lawrence of Jamaica, a student at Abilene Christian University, led all the way in winning in 6.10 seconds.

Emmit King, the defending champion and the 1984 men's Mobil Grand Prix champion, was a close second in 6.12.

Among the disappointments were Sam Graddy, the Olympic silver medalist in the 100-meter dash, who finished fifth; Kirk Baptiste, the Olympic silver medalist in the 200, who wound up sixth, and Calvin Smith, the world record holder in the 100, who failed to qualify for the final.

In the women's 60, Jennifer Innis of Guyana nipped Angela Thacker of the University of Nebraska, 6.78 to 6.79.

Chandra Cheeseborough, winner of two relay gold medals in the 1984 Olympics, took third in 6.82, just ahead of Alice Brown, the Olympic silver medalist in the 100, who was fourth in 6.84.

Steers swimmers place at meet

MONAHANS — The Big Spring High School swimmers, treading against a strong tide of competition, placed out of the Top 10 in team standings Saturday at the Monahans Invitational Swim Meet.

The boys squad came in 12th among 13 teams, scoring 31 points in 22 events. The girls, scoring 37 points, logged a 14th place finish in a 16 team field. Team titles went to girls from San Angelo Central, who racked up 262 points, and the boys from Odessa Permian, who compiled 218 points.

Top performers for the Steers were Louis Morellon, fourth in boys diving; Cade Loftis, fourth in the boys 100-yard butterfly and seventh in the 100-yard backstroke; and Lisa Salazar, seventh in the girls 100-yard backstroke.

Other Big Spring swimmers placing Saturday were Rose Meier, 11th, 50-yard freestyle; Don DeFlich, 12th, butterfly; Hatley Newell, 16th, girls 100-yard freestyle; Scott Ferguson, 11th, 500-yard freestyle; Victoria Logan, 12th, girls 100-yard backstroke; and Mitch Houghton, 10th, 100-yard breaststroke.

In team performances, the Girls A team took 9th in the 200-yard medley, and the B team took 12th. The girls A squad also placed ninth in the 400-yard free relay.

Sutton shares lead in Los Angeles golf

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Hal Sutton fell victim to a three-putt double bogey on the 18th hole and handed Lanny Wadkins a 2-shot lead Saturday in the third round of the $400,000 Los Angeles Open Golf Tournament.

Sutton, whose last victory came on this same course in the 1983 PGA national championship, was tied for the top spot when he played his second shot on the difficult finishing hole at the Riviera Country Club course.

But he got it well up a hill on the left, pitched poorly to about 30 feet from the cup, then — with Wadkins watching from the scorer's tent — three-putted for the double bogey that finished off a round of 70.

Wadkins, playing in the group ahead of Sutton, had a 4-under-par 67 and completed 54 holes at 13-under 200.

Sutton's problems on the last hole dropped him back into a tie for second at 202 with Corey Pavin and

Gary Koch. Pavin, a hometown boy, said the ovation he received for his spectacular, 7-under-par 64 "is something I will remember a long time."

Koch, tied with Sutton and Larry Mize after 36 holes, also had a 70.

Mize, who shot a course-record 62 in Friday's second round, had to work hard to match par 71 in the mild, partly-cloudy weather. He was tied at 203 with Scott Simpson and Chip Beck. Beck and Simpson each had a 66.

That left seven players locked within three shots of the top going into Sunday's final round of the chase for a $72,000 first prize.

Jack Nicklaus and Tom Watson were well back. Nicklaus birdied the 18th for a 70 that left him at 206. Calvin Peete, winner of last week's Phoenix Open, also was 70-206. Watson, making his first start of the season, had an erratic 72 for 209.

LANNY WADKINS slumps over after he missed a putt on the 9th hole of Riviera. WATSON shot a course record 62 on Friday.

Bradley leads Mazda

DEERFIELD BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Pat Bradley fired a 4-under-par 68 and emerged from a back-nine battle with Jan Stephenson to take a one-stroke lead Saturday after three rounds of the $200,000 Mazda Classic at Deer Creek Country Club.

Bradley, who won this Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament in 1983, finished 54 holes over the 6,079-yard course at 8-under 208.

Stephenson, annoyed by a tournament marshal's order to speed her play, lost a chance to tie for the lead when she missed a 3-foot putt on the final hole. But despite her persistent putting problems, Stephenson turned in a 67 Saturday.

Ayako Okamoto, the second-round leader, shot her second 73 of the tournament to fall to third place at 211. Japan's top woman golfer, who shot a 65 one day earlier, struggled Saturday, double bogeying the 5th hole and adding bogeys at the 10th and 17th.

Donna White is at 212, four strokes back, while Jane Geddes, 1982 winner Hollis Stacy and Cindy Hill are tied at 213.

Stephenson's round included an eagle 2 at the seventh, where she holed an eight-iron shot from 130 yards. She rallied from four strokes behind to lead through a good portion of the round.

But her fortune's turned when she failed to sink several short putts. Stephenson placed part of the blame on the marshal who told her and playing partners Laurie Rinker and Kathy Postlewait they were behind time at the 16th hole.

Bradley, who has earned $1.4 million in her 11 years on the tour, was in much better spirits after her five-birdie, one-bogey round.

"I feel very satisfied," she said. "My round, to say the least, was quite good. It was solid; I had only one bogey. I made good putts and I was able to handle the wind."

Stephenson missed the green for a bogey 4 at the 11th, but birdied the 13th, 14th and 15th holes to go 8-under. Bradley birdied the 15th to deadlock Stephenson, took the lead with a birdie at the 16th but missed a six-foot par putt at the 17th to fall back into the tie.

Stephenson then had trouble at the 18th, when her ball rolled almost to the stands on the far side of the green. Although her chip from 60 feet settled within 3 feet of the cup, she missed the putt for par.

Budd makes comeback

COSFORD, England (AP) — Zola Budd, Britain's South African-born track star, won her first indoor race Friday, beating modest opposition to breeze into Saturday's final of the 1,500 meters at the British National Indoor championships.

The 18-year-old barefoot runner, competing in her adopted country for the first time in six months, pulled away from an all-British field to win her heat by 20 meters in 4 minutes, 21 seconds.

"I think I can run faster (in the final), but I don't know how much faster. I will do as much as I need to do. I didn't find running indoors much different from outdoors. I ran wide in the beginning because I've never experienced running indoors before," said Budd, who left South Africa to become a British citizen last year.

Budd took the lead after 500 meters on the hard sprung indoor track and never gave her four challengers a chance to catch her.

It was her first competitive race in Britain since her world record-breaking 2,000 meters run at Crystal Palace shortly before last year's Summer Olympic Games in Los Angeles.

In the Olympic 3,000-meter final, Budd was involved in a tangle of legs with her idol and the local favorite, Mary Decker. The American crashed out of the race while Budd continued amid a storm of booing and finished seventh.

Speculation about her future followed as she returned to her homeland and announced she would run competitively in South Africa. Because of its policy of racial separation, South Africa is banned from international sport and Budd's involvement in competition in her homeland would virtually have ended her international career. She was persuaded to reconsider and, after running in Switzerland last month, decided to continue competing for Britain.

The mall in Exeter, R.I., is really only one large store.

Miniature mall

Rhode Island claims smallest shopping center

By The Associated Press

EXETER, R.I. — Two battered gas-pump sentries stand guard outside a tiny wooden building. A solitary soda machine leans against the structure near a shaky bench and an American flag.

An easy place to miss — if not for the sign. "Welcome to the Exeter Mall," it boasts in a sunburst of yellow and blue.

Come one, come all. Step right up to a purely American curiosity.

On the edge of 200 acres going brown in the nation's smallest state is what its owner claims is the nation's smallest shopping mall.

By now, most people are familiar with malls: giant conglomerations of stores serving kids to kittens, selling everything from shoes to shingles.

The Exeter Mall is something quite different. "There's not too many stores like this left," 41-year-old "mall" owner Costas Papadopoulos said proudly. "I call it a mall because here you can find anything you want. You want cat food? I got. Work shoes? Diesel fuel? Anything you want."

Papadopoulos, a large balding man with a Greek accent, is close to the truth. He's got almost everything.

A stack of puzzles and games teeters next to a shelf of mustard, relish and apple sauce bottles. "Home-style" cookies share a spot with dog food, and work boots hang above cereal boxes. Wiffleball bats stand in a rack below post cards singing the praises of the Ocean State.

"People are always surprised at all I've got here," Papadopoulos said as he let fly with a booming laugh.

To get an idea just how small the store is, consider this: the Exeter Mall takes up about 1,700 square feet, including an old trailer Papadopoulos attached to the main building after he bought it in 1981.

The Danbury Fair Mall in Connecticut, which when complete will be New England's largest, covers 1.2 million square feet.

More than 700 Exeter Malls would fit into the one Danbury Fair Mall. That's a small mall.

Because of its size, or lack thereof, tourists who travel Route 2 through southeastern Rhode Island and pass the mall on their way to the beach are "always taking pictures of the sign to show their friends. They know they won't believe it."

But that won't always be the case. Papadopoulos has big dreams and an ambitious plan.

Someday, he and his wife, Pota, hope their 28-month-old son, John, will be the well-to-do owner of a major shopping center here.

Papadopoulos recently bought the 200 acres behind his store, and an architect has drawn up plans for a "real" mall.

Blueprints show the layout for a credit union, eight retail stores, a U.S. post office, a pizza house and restaurant, 246 parking spaces and, of course, Papadopoulos' own general store.

"People, my customers, don't like the idea too much," he acknowledged. "I guess people are reluctant to change."

Special classes are the signal for excellence

By TINA STEFFEN

The classroom is quiet, yet one can hear the concentration churning as SIGNAL students learn more about their world. Gone are the days when an above average student sat bored in his classroom because the subject didn't challenge him. During the last four years, Big Spring Independent School District has placed these students in the SIGNAL gifted program to meet their advanced educational needs.

According to curriculum coordinators Helen Gladden and Janice Rosson, the SIGNAL teacher doesn't teach language arts as a regular teacher does in the elementary schools. Regular teachers often have stated curriculum guides they use in planning lessons. SIGNAL teachers personally design the curriculum because there is no set curriculum they must follow. However, it must be advanced, cohesive and understandable to the students.

Presently, elementary SIGNAL students are studying aerospace, its history, future and impact on the world. Their study has taken them from learning about the early personalities of the flight world to predicting the future of aerospace technology in the year 3,000. They have written and illustrated tongue twisters, limericks, research reports and oral reports on the subject.

"Aerospace history was good," says Rue Ann Cox, their teacher. "They enjoy people. They are really interested in space. They know about Neil Armstrong. And there was a definite interest to work on space projects." Superintendent Lynn Hise, who happens to have a pilot's license, was a resource speaker to the class.

"I enjoyed the aerospace personality center where you learn about people who made flights and made airplanes and about their lives," said 11-year-old Eric Thurman of Kentwood Elementary.

"I found out that a whole lot of people like aviation and I enjoy talking about space," said Mary Kathryn Terrazas, 10 and also from Kentwood. "The Mission Control Cards tell you a lot about air and gravity and how a plane works." Mission Control Cards are reference tools used in research projects.

Fourth and fifth grade SIGNAL students are bused to Bauer Magnet School where they meet with students from other elementary schools for their class. This allows students to get to know other students of their age and intelligence level from other campuses. They will already be friends when they advance to the secondary schools.

Sixth through eighth grade SIGNAL students have the class as their regular language arts class in their school and are taught by Carol Gauer. The students get some instruction in basic English skills. However, since they are capable English students, they spend less time in practice and drills than other students and more time in creative writing and application of language arts skills.

Literature is selected around themes each year, and this year it is a comparison of feudalism at different places and times, and how it affected the people, lifestyles, land rights and historical events of the times.

The students studied Ivanhoe by Sir Walter Scott and worked on projects that were the culmination of all research they did on the middle ages.

Paul Chavez enjoyed learning about the feudal government of the middle ages. "They weren't orderly or truthful. They sentenced someone to death whether they deserved it or not," he said. "They fought to get what they wanted...I was interested in how they settled things out between two different kinds of people. We do a lot of things and have a lot of rights. Back then the high class were 'the people' and the others were peasants. The high class had the rights and privileges and made the laws."

Fourteen-year-old Janene Horton took an interest in how women were treated in the medieval cultural system. "Prior to the time of chivalry, if a man liked a woman (enough) to marry, the woman had to marry the man whether she liked him or not," she said. "But later the laws changed and it was decided it wasn't fair to women. Women had a voice in their marriage mate unless they had a relationship with a man. Then they were considered married to him."

Sir Walter Scott's books were popular in the South, said Mrs. Gauer. Historian John Hope Franklin believes that Scott's books led the southerners to duplicate the medieval life in the south, and that the Southerners' treatment of slaves was much like the treatment of serfs in medieval society.

With this basis and their study, the students will compare the feudalism of the middle ages with the feudal system of slavery in the South during the early 1800s and then move westward for a study of the beginnings of West Texas. With emphasis on language arts, they will study the people, the change of ideas, and how the environment affected beliefs and feelings, Mrs. Gauer said.

Many projects go on through the year in SIGNAL. However, the teachers are more concerned with the steps involved in the projects than with the finished product. The steps involved are what helps teach students the skills involved in higher level thinking, says Mrs. Gladden.

Big Spring's SIGNAL program follows state guidelines that require specific staff development annually for all teachers. Regular teachers are kept abreast on what is happening in the program. Close cooperation between the regular teachers and SIGNAL teachers is encouraged because the regular teachers recommend students for the program and support it through their teaching.

The program is locally and state funded. The local school district provides about three-fourths of the funding while the of application, analysis, synthesis and evaluation. SIGNAL teachers enhance reading, literature and composition instruction with activities that develop higher level creative and productive thinking skills. Each student also is given opportunities for independent and self-directed learning.

SIGNAL students are high achievers in the language arts area with high reading abilities and excellent comprehension skills. "These students look at subjects and problems more deeply and ask more thought-provoking questions than the average student does," says Mrs. Rosson.

"These students have a desire for learning any information," Mrs. Gladden said. "(What is taught) often spills over into other subject areas (besides language arts)." For example, the elementary SIGNAL students' study of aerospace ends up delving into math, science, art, health and history. "They go to other classes and have questions and are inquisitive about other subject matter when they get there," Mrs. Rosson said. Therefore, a close cooperation exists between the SIGNAL and other teachers.

The acronym SIGNAL stands for "Students Involved for Generous Nurturing of Academic Learning." The state-funded program is offered in the fourth through eighth grades. Other programs meet the needs of advanced third graders and high school students.

To select prospective students, Texas requires that identification must be based on multiple and specific criteria. A committee of teachers, counselors and administrators select students following a review of all student's records, tasks of commitment, creativity and willingness to work, commitment to working in SIGNAL (knowing it is more and advanced work) and teacher recommendations.

These children are capable of much more advanced curriculum and our program offers them that challenge, Mrs. Gladden said.

Observation is an education

Tuesday, I had the rare opportunity (for an outsider, that is) to watch microsurgery in action at Malone-Hogan Hospital. I was a little nervous about it at first and afraid it would be too much for me, but I found it fascinating.

Last year about this time, I wrote a story about a girl who had her right eye restored through microsurgery and DR. HARVEY DUBINER'S skills. Dr. Dubiner told me how microsurgery is done and promised to let me watch him do eye surgery some day.

My chance came through this week. Dr. Dubiner removed a cataract from an elderly woman's eye as I watched the surgery through a microscope. Prior to this surgery, I was able to watch DR. CARROLL MOORE begin his surgery on a man's elbow.

Both doctors and their surgical assistants were so kind to this outsider peering over at their work. They were like teachers, explaining what they were doing, why they were doing it, what the various pieces of equipment in the

Fielding to present writing workshops

MIDLAND — P.M. Fielding, internationally known teacher and writer, will return to Midland this spring and summer to teach at the Professional Writers Workshop.

She will teach "How to Write the Romance Novel" Feb. 9-10. One of her former romance writing students, Debby Camp, is now the author of 20 romance novels and no longer works as a newspaper reporter.

"Writers should write what they enjoy reading," Fielding says. "If you have no respect for the genre it will show in your work. It would be hard to make romance romantic if you think it is junk and can't stand to read it. You have to be familiar with the work and the field in which you write."

"A good writer can write anything," she said. "But, many writers have favorite categories and tend to stay with what they do best. Romances are a popular genre. I've seen many of my starting students break into print through the romance."

"How to Write a Romance Novel" is an intensive two-day weekend workshop in which the student will not only learn how to write the romance novel, but will also learn how and where to sell it.

Fielding will also teach workshops in "How to Write a Non-Fiction Book," "How to Write the Juvenile or Young Adult Book," "How to Write the Short Story," "How to Write the Magazine Article," and "How to Write a Novel" during the spring and summer.

For more information, call Ginger Rawlins at the Professional Writers Workshop (915) 685-3568.

Daughters to place book in county library

The Captain Elisha Mack Chapter of Daughters of American Revolution discussed plans of placing a book in the Howard County Library genealogical section during the chapter's meeting Saturday. The book is by Robert Ewell Greene and titled Documentation of Black Participation in the Revolutionary War.

Mrs. L.J. Jeter.

Mrs. John Cobean and Mrs. C.G. Barnett were elected delegates to the Continental Congress to be held in Washington D.C. April 15-19.

James Muncy were elected delegates to the State Conference in Fort Worth, March 21-23. The next meeting will be Feb. 24 at 2:30 p.m. in the home of Mrs. Jack Alexander.

Dear Abby

Drug abuse may harm future

DEAR ABBY: My husband is involved with drugs, and I want to have a baby. Will you please check with your medical experts and let me know if my involvement with drugs could affect the health of my baby?

I have never used drugs of any kind, but my husband has smoked marijuana for about 15 years, and he still smokes it daily. He also uses cocaine, quaaludes, amphetamines, etc.

Please let me know.

ANONYMOUS: You are wise to ask. However, no medical expert would venture an opinion without having examined your husband thoroughly.

Much would depend on his general health, the extent of damage he has already sustained, and the degree to which he is addicted to cocaine, quaaludes, amphetamines, etc.

If it is determined that the use of drugs could "affect the health of your baby," it may be nature's way of giving you an important message: A man who spends much of his time in an altered state of consciousness is a poor candidate for fatherhood. Think about it.

DEAR ABBY: I am a U.S. soldier stationed in the Republic of Korea. I work in an office with a 35-year-old technical sergeant named Harry. He's one swell guy, but he never gets any mail. He once said he would even welcome a bill rather than face another empty mailbox.

If some of your readers would like to cheer Harry up and send him a letter or even a postcard, it would make his day. His address is:

Harry Nevin, TSgt.
PSC Box 1576
APO San Francisco 96366-0006
Thanks, Abby. Sign me "Harry's Pal," or...

JOHNNIE DUDZIK:

DEAR JOHNNIE: After this hits print, your pal Harry will be so cheered up he won't be able to handle the mail, so please ask him to share it with some of his equally neglected buddies.

DEAR ABBY: First one grandma says, "Marriage is the price a man pays for sex, and sex is the price a woman pays for marriage."

Then another grandma says, "Men give love in order to get sex, and women give sex in order to get love — and marriage has nothing to do with it."

My lover and I cannot marry because we are both men. Our relationship is not based on the barter system. We're together because we love each other, and sex is a natural expression of that love — not a demand or a payment.

Are heterosexuals missing something?

GLAD I'M GAY: DEAR GLAD: Not all heterosexuals are missing something. Nor are all homosexuals together because they love each other. All generalizations are flawed. Including this one.

Dr. Donohue

Slow rehab needed for injury

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I am a female sprinter heading toward my final year on my college team. Last year I was diagnosed as having chondromalacia in my left knee.

I have fallen a lot on my knees. I was treated for this with a leg cast. Then I started rehab, emphasizing the hamstrings. The pain in my knee is incredible and cortisone hasn't helped. I ice it regularly and take arthritis medicine. Most of the pain is in the knee joint and cap in the morning or after sitting for a while, like a cold movie theater. I am not able to put full weight on it.

Exercise involving tucking my knee to my chest is painful. I have worn an elastic knee brace, but run with difficulty. I feel lost and afraid I'll do something wrong to my knee. Please comment. — S.T.

"Chondro" is a reference to cartilage, the material that lines the inside of the knee cap. "Malacia" is a crumbling of that substance, in your case of your left knee cap.

This is a common sports condition and usually due to overuse of the knee. Or it might be that the kneecap is slightly off line from where it should be. There are other factors that can contribute. But whatever the reason for it, rest is the treatment, to be followed by a gradual rehabilitation. You shouldn't stress the hamstrings only, but, more importantly, the quadriceps muscles on the front of the thighs.

Rehabilitation is not something to go about haphazardly, and I get the definite impressions that this is what you are doing. If you are serious about your running career, you can't take chances with anything but professional guidance about the kinds of exercise you need; the amounts of weight involved, etc. You still have time to prepare yourself, but getting into a rehab program that is causing the pain you describe is not going to do the job.

Constant icing, braces, and pain medicines, as helpful as they seem, are only temporarily masking your chronic cartilage problem. Please get a new evaluation of your knee joint and start again.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I am interested in learning about exercise as a way to tighten up one's skin. Can exercise actually do this for you? — Mrs. T.L.A.

Exercise of muscles by itself does nothing to the skin. The only effect on skin tightening would be secondary. If the exercise were to increase muscle size then that might make the covering skin more taut.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I am going to start a daily jogging program. I am tired of my sick-looking frame. But I'm the kind of guy who needs to have the carrot out there to motivate me. How long do I have to jog before I get a real difference in my body?

You should feel and maybe see the effects of your conditioning within six weeks.

In response to reader requests, Dr. Donohue's publisher now has a complete listing of all the booklets on various medical problems. Readers wishing this list can write him — P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, IL 60611, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for return mailing.

Jones presents program on Piney Woods College

Mrs. Gil Jones presented a program on the Piney Woods College in Jackson, Miss. to members of the 1948 Hyperion Club Jan. 17. The meeting was at the home of Mrs. Jerry Foresyth.

Mrs. Jones taught at the college in 1970. The college was built on 40 acres after the Civil War in 1909. The president, Dr. Lawrence Jones, with the help of the people bought the land and built the college.

Mrs. Jones told about some of her experiences in the classroom. She was the only white person that had ever taught in school from Texas.

The club donated $85 to the Rainbow Project. Mrs. Lois Webb and Mrs. Jackie Swinney were introduced as visitors. The next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Robert Stripling, Feb. 21.

THE MASK OF PREGNANCY

Skin discoloration, in the form of brownish spots and patches on the face, is fairly common during pregnancy. It is sometimes called "the mask of pregnancy." It results from an increase of pigment and is most common in brunettes and others with a considerable amount of pigment in their skin. The discoloration gradually fades after the baby is born. If the discoloration is bothersome, it may be concealed with a masking cosmetic. This type of skin discoloration may also occur in a small percentage of women who take birth control pills. Pigmentation caused by either pregnancy or oral contraception will be intensified by exposure to the sun. A sunblock is recommended to prevent this.

Judge gives Garden Club program

A program "Speaking on Flowers" was presented at the Rosebud Garden Club meeting by Mrs. Bill Edwards, national flower show judge, Tuesday.

She gave shortcuts such as using mulch. Mulched gardens require less water and have fewer weeds. To get a beautiful tiered garden, she said, plant low growing plants such as kale, cabbage, green onions and Alyssum for edging, medium plants such as Ranunculus, and tall plants in background.

To keep houseplants alive, don't over water. If you get a plant with foil wrapper, punch a hole in bottom of foil so that water can drain. The club will plant a tree in Coanche Trail Park as a beautification project for January. The Big Spring Council of Garden Clubs will host the District I Spring Meeting, March 19-20. Mrs. C.L. Sparkman of Odessa will be the key speaker.

The club presented awards to the winners of the youth environmental speech contest. Tammy Goodin, Dixie Shaw and Mary Moran, all of Coahoma, finished first, second and third place respectively.
