Cocaine bust worth '$90,000'

By KEELY COGHLAN
Staff Writer

Cocaine seized Saturday had an estimated street value of $90,000, making it "one of the biggest drug busts in Big Spring," according to Police Chief Rick Turner.

Nine persons were arrested on drug-related charges in the undercover operation that involved officers from four law enforcement agencies in a cooperative investigation.

Turner said as much as nine ounces of cocaine was confiscated in two separate seizures Saturday.

The arrests this weekend were part of a long-standing investigation of drug trafficking in Big Spring, Turner said. The Marquezes and Munoz had been investigated before, but the cases "didn't get until recently," he said. "They are the same old players."

Heading the undercover operation was the Midland Department of Public Safety narcotics division. The DPS office was assisted by the Midland office of the Drug Enforcement Agency, a DEA task force from Lubbock and the Big Spring Police Department, according to Turner.

The arrests stem from a "buy-bust situation" in the Big Spring Holiday Inn parking lot, where two men were arrested by undercover officers who bought six ounces of what Turner says is cocaine. Field tests show the substance to be cocaine, he said. The evidence has been turned over to the DEA.

Officers arrested Christino T. Munoz, 29, of Midland and Robert Marquez, 39, of Gail Route on federal felony charges of delivery of a controlled substance after the transaction was made, Turner said.

According to police records, Munoz is an electrician with Crow Electric of Midland. Marquez listed his occupation as housebuilder and employee of T. Marquez Jr. and Sons T.V. and Radio Repair. Both remain in jail in Lubbock on other drug-related counts listed in a Jan. 19 federal sealed indictment, U.S. Magistrate J.Q. Warnick Jr. of Lubbock said today.

The indictments charge Marquez and Munoz with one count of conspiring to distribute controlled substances, Warnick said. In addition, Munoz is charged with one count of distribution of cocaine to an undercover officer, Warnick said. He is also on federal parole in Arizona, Warnick said.

Robert Marquez, who is on state parole out of the Howard County office for felony theft, also is charged with distribution of cocaine in the indictment.

Robert Marquez' brother, Tony

M. Marquez, 30, of 1105 E. 15th, was arrested Saturday at the Big Spring police station on the same Jan. 19 sealed indictment, according to Warnick and Turner.

Tony Marquez, a satellite technician with the Marquez television shop, was indicted on one count of conspiracy to deliver and distribute cocaine, Warnick said.

Tony Marquez was arrested when he went to the police station to bail his brother out of jail, Turner said.

A detention hearing, to determine whether Tony Marquez will be allowed to be released on bail or detained under the federal controlled substances act, is set for 1:30

OPEC minister angered at oil cartel

Leaders may cut prices $2

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) - An emergency OPEC meeting appeared in danger of collapse today when a key Arab oil minister walked out of the conference and said he was leaving Geneva.

Mana Saeed Oteiba, the minister of the United Arab Emirates, told reporters his country's full delegation was leaving in protest of Nigeria's stance in the price deliberations.

"We have withdrawn" from the conference, Oteiba said. He left the meeting less than an hour after it began, while the other ministers stayed in session.

Oteiba indicated his country was angered by the support of Tam David-West, oil minister of Nigeria, for a substantial cut in the cartel's prices.

"He is stabbing OPEC in the back, and I am not going to stay with him in the conference," Oteiba said as he stormed out of the closed-door meeting.

Although David-West has refused to divulge his country's position on the price question, conference sources said he favored a cut of at least $2 a barrel from the current $29 level.

At the outset of the meeting, Ahmed Zaki Yamani, the oil minister of Saudi Arabia, said he expected agreement on a small reduction in oil prices.

Asked by reporters if oil consumers should expect a sharp drop in prices, Yamani said, "No, not really a sharp fall. If you take the weighted average (of prices), the adjustment will be just cents."

Yamani declined to be more specific, saying the 13-nation cartel was opening discussions on "two or three" different proposals for realigning the group's multi-layered pricing system.

On Sunday, conference sources said a majority of OPEC ministers had acknowledged the need to cut the price of Saudi Light oil, which serves as the benchmark around which prices for other OPEC oils are arranged.

The sources said some ministers favored a cut of $2.50 a barrel from the current price of $29.

But the Iranian oil minister, Mohammad Gharazi, told reporters this morning that "we will never agree" to any reduction in the benchmark price. Algeria also is known to oppose a price cut.

A cut of $1 a barrel in the price of crude oil would reduce the price of gasoline by about 2½ cents a gallon, if all the cut were passed through to consumers. A barrel equals 42 gallons.

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries called today's meeting as part of its efforts to prevent prices from collapsing under the pressure of diminished oil demand, especially by the United States and Western Europe, and aggressive competition from Britain and other non-OPEC petroleum producers.

On the open market, where the cartel has no control, oil is selling for at least $1 a barrel less than the official price for OPEC contract buyers.

In advance of today's meeting, at least three countries indicated they would oppose any price cut on the ground that it would not increase demand for oil and thus pinch OPEC even harder.

The dissidents were Iran, Algeria and the United Arab Emirates, the sources said. Sources in the Venezuelan delegation said their country doubted the wisdom of cutting prices.

As prices have fallen irregularly for more than three years with decreased demand for oil, non-OPEC countries such as Egypt and Britain have stepped up production.

OPEC's share of the oil being sold in the non-Communist world has plunged to about 22 percent of the total volume from its 1979 level, when it cornered about two-thirds of that market. The loss of income has severely hurt some OPEC members, notably Nigeria, Venezuela and Indonesia.

Soviet leader ill; could yield post

LONDON (AP) - Two British newspapers are reporting that Soviet President Konstantin U. Chernenko is so ill he may become the first Kremlin leader to voluntarily relinquish power.

In Moscow, however, there has been no indication of any impending change. Today's edition of the Communist Party daily newspaper Pravda carried on its front page the long text of Chernenko's foreword to a new French-language book of his speeches and writings. The foreword was written in November.

The Sunday Times in London quoted "unofficial reports" as saying Chernenko, who has not been seen in public since Dec. 27, is in an intensive care ward in a hospital, and the ruling Politburo has already approved a plan to replace him with Mikhail S. Gorbachev, 53, widely believed to rank second in the Kremlin hierarchy.

Another newspaper, The Express, said Chernenko "has become so ill he may be forced to resign." Neither newspaper gave its sources or indicated how it obtained the information.

Western diplomats contacted by The Associated Press in Moscow said they had not heard any such reports, although most said they believe the 73-year-old Chernenko is ailing.

A senior Western diplomat in Moscow said on Friday that Soviet officials have acknowledged Chernenko has been sick during the past four weeks.

The diplomat said he had no firm information about the exact nature of the illness. However, Chernenko is widely thought to be suffering from emphysema.

According to The Sunday Times, Chernenko's health has deteriorated sharply in the past week. "His respiratory illness, including emphysema, has now been complicated by cardiac deficiencies," the newspaper said.

"Observers reckon his illness is now irreversible and it is thought that this view has been firmly expressed by the doctor in charge of the president, believed to be an outstanding Czechoslovak specialist," the Sunday Times said.

Soviet President Konstantin Chernenko

It said a decision on transferring power would be made at a meeting of the Communist Party Central Committee next month.

Under the plan the Times outlined, "Gorbachev would take over the post of general secretary of the Communist Party, but would not necessarily assume the presidency — a mainly ceremonial title. Indeed some sources say Chernenko could continue to hold his job while stepping down as effective leader."

Chernenko's two predecessors, Yuri V. Andropov and Leonid I. Brezhnev, died in office after long illnesses. Rumors of their impending resignations also circulated in Moscow during the last months of their lives.

County hears ideas on new jail proposal

By SCOTT FITZGERALD
Staff Writer

Howard County Commissioners began listening to a series of presentations from jail building and planning firms this morning in a regularly scheduled meeting.

Bob Frisby and Jim Wiginton of Jail Planners Inc. appeared before the court to present their ideas and company's experience in building jails.

Sheriff A.N. Standard also appeared for the presentation.

Frisby said his 35-year background experience consisted of criminal justice study and jail consulting for other counties and cities.

"A majority of our jails have been in West Texas," Frisby told commissioners.

"I'd like to help you make some right decision or ideas. You are about to embark upon a very serious project," Frisby said.

Frisby told commissioners that Wiginton, another company's staff architect and he "had recently traveled around the country looking for ideas to build a better mousetrap."

Frisby said the firm conducts community surveys when doing its initial planning and also "builds to minimum Texas standards."

Frisby also complimented Standard's efforts of maintaining Howard County jail.

"That's one of the cleanest old jails I've ever seen, but it doesn't look safe to me," Frisby said.

He also reminded commissioners that the county jail had no recreational facility or area for prisoners.

In other action:

• Commissioners approved a motion made by Commissioner O.L. Brown for county employee Robert Stout to receive a $50 raise since he recently completed his six month employee probation time.

• Approved a motion made by Commissioner Paul Allen to amend the contract between the county and Retired Services Volunteer Program that would include county monies to cover costs of automobile maintenance and insurance besides fuel allowance.

• Approved a motion for James Parker and Mike Woolley of Employee Benefits Associates to make presentations before county employees and departments for additional life insurance benefits.

Fantasies of a sculptor

Nationally known artist mixes science with work

BEAUMONT (AP) — Oddly shaped creatures with cumbersome tails and unicorn-type horns exist deep in the recesses of Herring Coe's imagination. But sometimes one escapes in the form of a small figurine. Those that do depart Coe's subconscious now sit on a hallway shelf or hang on the walls of his home deep in the Old Town District.

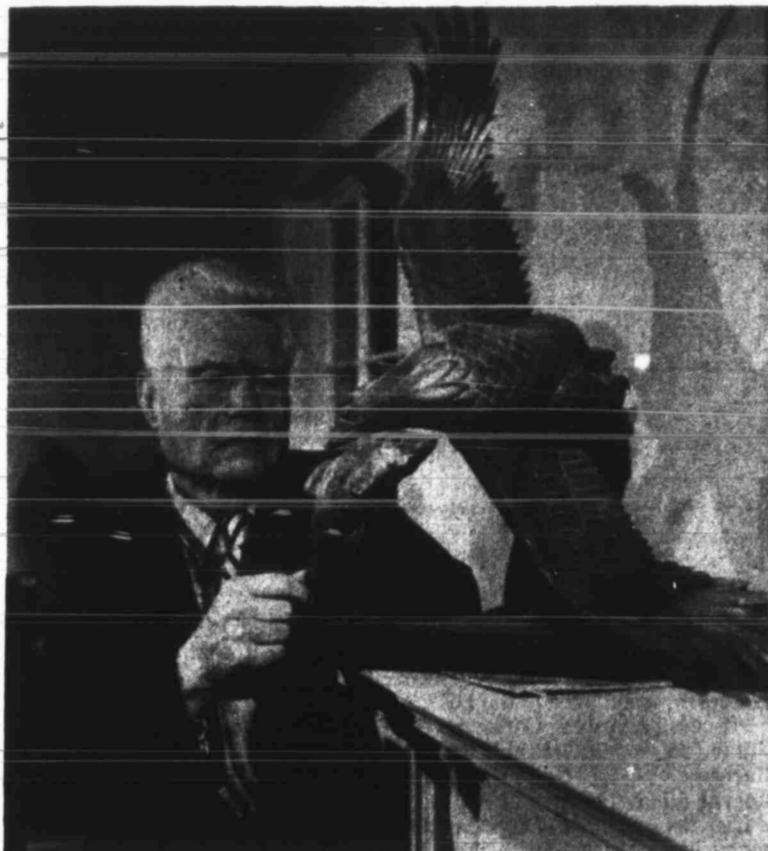

Coe, 77, a nationally known sculptor, calls these peculiar animals "might have beens," or "may yet be's."

He explains his terminology, saying that evolution could have molded these strange characteristics or that maybe these forms still could appear. Coe's intellect is that of a scientist, but critics term his work as sensitive and delicate art.

"I've been said to have a scientific mind, instead of an artistic mind," Coe says, as he sits on his couch surrounded by past works. "They (the concepts) are terribly different, but they're both creative."

Indeed, his home portrays this dichotomy of stark science and creative clutter. No curtains hang at the windows, allowing the sunlight to dominate the rooms, giving Coe the light he requires for his intricate carvings. His work is everywhere, covering his walls and tables. One room, almost entirely surrounded by windows, contains just an easel and used pieces of clay. In another room, old art books and pamphlets surround a design table. Any disorder, though, seems to be planned, and neatly in place.

Coe, best known for his bronze statue of Dick Dowling situated in the Sabine Pass Battlegrounds and his monument to the children and teachers who died in the New London, Texas, fire, says he originally wanted to be an astronomer. By the time he was graduated from high school, Coe determined his career would be electrical engineering.

He attended South Park College, forerunner of Lamar University, for two years, studying engineering. But one day, watching his two younger sisters construct mud pies, he picked up a piece of clay and shaped a small Buddha. From there, Coe says he worked for a quarry, creating stone figures for architects.

Eventually, he earned the commission for the Dowling monument

Society of Medalists chose to send to its members. A replica of the model sits on Coe's coffee table. On it, Coe carved mermaids and fishes. It reads "Beyond the sky, beneath the sea are known but to God and to fantasy," a saying Coe thought of to parallel flying saucers and mythical mermaids.

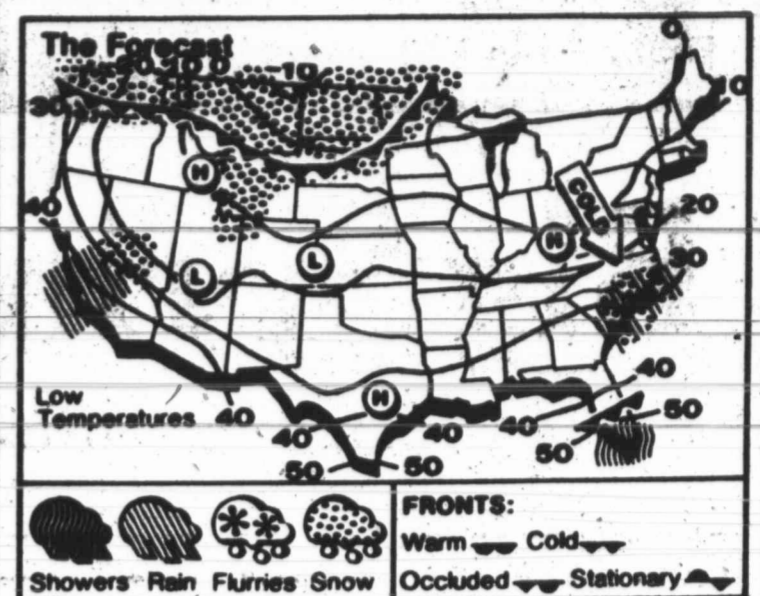

Coe also displays a small bust of what looks like a young woman, hands gripping her temples. But the other side depicts the face of an old wrinkled man. Coe calls this piece "Memories." "It's a man thinking of his sweetheart while he was young," Coe says. "It could be (a memory of his own), but doesn't everybody have memories?"

At an age when most people choose to retire, Coe is thinking of possible projects he could commission. Or, he works on his theory of cosmology, the creation of the universe. He digs out an old ledger book from one of his filing cabinets and reads from his own theory of the beginning of knowledge.

He begins with his concept of "being," then his idea of "being in time," followed by "being in a world outside myself." The papers of his composition book are old and worn, but Coe says he often thinks of more detail for his theory. "I've been working on the theory a long time, since before I was interested in sculpture," he says. "My intention was to have it as a rival theory to Einstein's theory of relativity. It can be, as far as I'm concerned."

Coe concentrates a lot on his scientific studies, maybe because he believes his art form is slowly ebbing because of the influx of modern architecture the type that emphasizes glass and chrome over chunks of stone. "There was more of it (sculpture) in those days than there is now," Coe says. "All these glass buildings, they just build glass boxes. Let's just say it (sculpture) is sick right now, I wouldn't say it was dying."

Weather

Although there were low clouds and fog early this morning, skies were partly cloudy most of the day. Temperatures are mild with high reaching the upper 50s. Light, easterly winds will become southerly, 5 to 15 miles per hour, by evening.

WEST TEXAS — Increasing cloudiness south central and southeast late tonight. Otherwise partly cloudy all sections tonight. Mostly cloudy south central and southeast and partly cloudy elsewhere Tuesday. Warmer north Tuesday. Lows tonight mid 20s Panhandle to upper 30s Big Bend. Sheriff's Log

Mischief heads sheriff's list

Howard County sheriff's deputies are looking into a criminal mischief incident that occurred early this morning at the Big State Roustabout, 1/2 mile east of Salem Road on the I-20 service road.

According to sheriff's reports, an unknown person(s) discharged from what appeared to be a shotgun, a "birdshot" that struck an office building side and window causing damage to the frame and four panels of glass.

The pattern of the shot indicated that it may have come from the edge of the roadway, the report said.

Estimated damage is $150 according to the report.

● Big Spring police transported Frankie Eugene Pennington, 17, of Route Two, Friday evening to county jail on a charge of driving while license suspended (DWLS). He was released on $500 bond.

● A sheriff's deputy arrested Angelita Solis, 44, 1208 Marjio, on a charge of issuing a bad check. She was released on $200 bond set by Judge Lewis Heflin.

● Clifton Blain Clinton, 27, of Sterling City Route, was arrested on a peace bond warrant issued by Judge Heflin. He was released on $1,000 bond.

● Big Spring police transported Robert Barry Gerardi Jr., 24, of Abilene, to county jail on charges of possession of marijuana and possession of a controlled substance. He was released on bonds totaling $7,500 set by Judge Melvin Daratt.

● Big Spring police transported Henry Rojo Valverde, 26, 613 NE Eighth, to county jail for a charge of failure to maintain financial responsibility. He was released on $500 bond set by the city.

● Val Verde County sheriff's deputies arrested Joseph Fredrick Perry, 21, 1012 W. Third, on a Howard County warrant charging him with revocation of probation for a previous assault charge. He was released on $1,000 bond.

● Big Spring police transported Juan Polanco Mata, 20, 2511 W. 15th, to county jail on charges of possession of a controlled substance and possession of marijuana. He was released on bonds totaling $7,500 set by Judge Daratt.

● Big Spring police transported Mary Ann Arney, 45, and Shannon Lynn Arney, 19, both of 706 S. Johnson, to county jail on charges of possession of controlled substances and possession of marijuana. They were released on bonds totaling $7,500 per person set by Judge Daratt.

● Big Spring police transported Pattie Davis Fincher, 31, 706 S. Johnson, to county jail on charges of possession of a controlled substance and possession of marijuana. She was released on bonds totaling $7,500 set by Judge Daratt.

● Department of Public Safety (DPS) troopers arrested Andy Ollie Gatson, 36, of Gail Route, for a charge of driving while intoxicated (DWI). He was released on $1,000 bond set by Judge Heflin.

● A sheriff's deputy arrested William Herrera, 18, of Knott, on charges of possessing no driver's license and unlawfully carrying a weapon. He was later transferred to Big Spring State Hospital for emergency committal.

● DPS troopers arrested Eric Allen Lin, 31, of Vail, Colo., for DWI and possession of a controlled substance. He was later released on bond.

● Jimmy Duane Latham, 28, 800 Nolan, Simon A. Yneante Jr., 40, 409 S. Owens, and Karen Lynn Rogers, 20, 2107 S. Gregg served one day sentences in county jail this weekend for their DWI offenses.

● Eric E. Smith, 23, Whip Inn Campground in Big Spring, was transported to county jail by Big Spring police after being arrested for DWI.

● Big Spring police transported Little Joe Leonard Stanhope, 20, 3305 W. Highway 80, to county jail on charges of unlawfully carrying a weapon and two fish and game warrants charging him for fishing without a license and failure to appear.

He was released on bonds totaling $1,400.

● Big Spring police transported Julian Acosta Bursiab, 20, 1104 N.W. Seventh, to county jail, for charges of DWLS and failure to maintain financial responsibility. He was released on bonds totaling $1,000 set by the city.

as part of the Texas Centennial celebration. His next major project consisted of memorializing the tragic deaths of 297 students and teachers who died when an explosion caused by a gas leak destroyed the school just 15 minutes before the final bell rang. "I showed the pupils going from one assignment to the other," Coe says. "One side showed them turning in their papers, symbolic of them leaving this world and going on to the next one. That's what most people want to think about death."

Police Beat

Locals report cars vandalized

Several cars were vandalized this weekend, according to police reports.

Bobby Caughorn of 1703 1/2 Lancaster told police someone put sugar in the oil tank of his white 1974 Pontiac Le Mans, causing an estimated $500 damage to the motor. The incident occurred Saturday.

● Chris Power of 2601 S. Gregg told police someone slashed all four tires on his green 1974 American Motors car between 10 a.m. Jan. 13 and 10 a.m. Friday, while the car was parked behind Rip Griffen's truck stop on Interstate Highway 20 and Highway 87. Damage was estimated at $250.

● Hoover Hu, the owner of Good Fortune Restaurant, told police someone broke the right rear window on his green 1973 Plymouth between 4:30 p.m. and 6 p.m. Sunday. Damage was estimated at $80.

● Lu Ann Burkhalter of SouthWest Collegiate Institute for the Deaf told police someone slashed two tires on her brown 1984 Chevrolet Monte Carlo between 2:30 a.m. and 12:30 p.m. Saturday. Damage was estimated at $200.

● Dolly Geiger of 1301 Lindbergh told police someone stole her black 1977 Mercury Cougar at 1 a.m. Saturday. The car was recovered.

● Police arrested Samuel Dean Jones, 26, of 1104 Runnels in the 1500 block of E. Third on a warrant for felony forgery with intent to pass. He also was arrested on suspicion of no liability insurance and no driver's license.

● Marcela Herrera of 101 Carey told police that a man she knew hit her with his fist on the head and shoved her into the television, bruising her left leg. She was taken to Malone-Hogan Hospital's emergency room for treatment.

● Police also arrested Frankie Pennington, 17, of Route 2 on suspicion of driving while license suspended. He was released on bond.

● Police also arrested Ronald G. Dickey, 28, of 203A Benton at 11:30 p.m. Saturday in the 1300 block of Circle on suspicion of driving while intoxicated.

Cocaine

A fourth man, Ynez Yanez III, 31, of 509 N.W. 11th, was arrested Saturday at 706 Johnson on federal charges of delivery of cocaine, according to Turner.

Warnick said he had not received charges stemming from arrests this weekend on Robert Marquez and Munoz.

According to Warnick, Yanez has not been indicted but was charged following his arrest on a complaint filed with the magistrate's office. Hearings for Munoz, Robert Marquez and Yanez, a barber at the Big Spring State Hospital, have been set for 9 a.m. Feb. 7, Warnick said.

Yanez also has been charged in state district court with possession of cocaine and possession of less than two ounces of marijuana, Turner said.

Law enforcement officials Saturday also arrested five other persons at 706 Johnson — where Yanez was arrested — on state charges of possession of a controlled substance believed to be cocaine and possession of less than two ounces of marijuana.

The arrest was made after law enforcement officials obtained "consent to search" the house, where they found between two to three ounces of what they believe is cocaine and less than two ounces of marijuana, Turner said.

According to police records, those arrested and their occupations are:

- Robert Barry Gerardi, 24, of Abilene, a truck driver with West Trucking of Abilene;
- Juan Polanco Mata, 20, of 2511 W. 15th, an attendant at the state hospital;
- Mary Ann Arney, 45, of 706 Johnson, a service assistant at the state hospital;
- Shannon Lynn Arney, 19, of 706 Johnson, a hairdresser at the Aladdin Beauty College; and
- Pattie Davis Fincher, 31, of 706 Johnson, a service assistant at the state hospital.

Aviators

NORFOLK, Va. — Aviators spent nearly a year, or for a safety record the safest year since 1964.

The 1984 crash destroyed 21 aircraft losses, 21 aircraft lost their record was set by a commander of Norfolk, said Lt. The Navy's goal per 100,000 flying hours is a record since 1980.

Roof cave-in injures 7

BUFFALO, N.Y. — Part of a discount-store roof, overloaded after nearly four feet of snow fell in a week, collapsed with the sound of "an explosion," injuring at least seven people while 20 to 30 employees and customers were inside, police said Sunday.

Seven people were taken to Millard Fillmore Suburban Hospital. Two apparently had been only shaken up were discharged immediately, and the five others were released after treatment, said Bill Collins, a hospital spokesman.

Subway holdups decline

NEW YORK — The number of subway holdups dropped from 145 a week in the weeks before Bernhard Goetz allegedly shot four youths to 83 the week after, but officials disagree over whether the events are related.

Transit Police Chief James Meehan said he doubted that the Dec. 22 shootings that led to Goetz' indictment Friday on weapons violations caused the drop in robberies because subway crime overall remained about the same.

Robert Panzarella, a professor at the John Jay College of Criminal Justice, said the decline indicated the shooting may have discouraged muggers.

William McKechnie, who heads the transit police officers' union, attributed the decline to a sweep of the most crime-ridden stations during the past month.

Firms to pay $5.15 million

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Two coal companies have agreed to pay the families of seven coal miners killed in an explosion $5.15 million because it "was the best thing to do," a company attorney said.

A lawsuit stemming from the 1981 blast at an eastern Kentucky mine had been scheduled for trial Feb. 4. The trial and probate judges must approve the settlement before it is final, lawyers said.

Island Creek Coal Co. and partners of Adkins Coal Co. agreed to a $2.15 million lump-sum payment to the families and monthly lifetime payments worth $3 million, Joseph A. Yablonski, a Washington, D.C., attorney for the families, said Saturday.

Aviators top safety mark

NORFOLK, Va. — Navy and Marine Corps aviators spent more than 2 million hours in the air last year, ending with 69 major accidents for a safety record of 3.31 per 100,000 hours, the safest year ever, an official said.

The 1984 crashes included 68 fatalities, 64 destroyed planes and $323.09 million in aircraft losses, 21 fewer fatalities and 19 fewer aircraft lost than in 1983, when the previous record was set, Commodore Jerry Breast, commander of the Naval Safety Center in Norfolk, said last week.

The Navy's goal for 1984 was four accidents per 100,000 flying hours. The 1984 figures keep intact a record of continuing improvement since 1980.

CONGRATULATIONS — The crew of the Space Shuttle Mission 51-C gets congratulated as they leave Discovery after being aloft for 3 days.

Mystery mission

Shuttle returns home after secret military flight

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Four more shuttle flights can proceed as scheduled this year after the success of Discovery's secrecy-cloaked military mission in lifting a spy satellite into orbit with a once-troubled booster, space officials said.

The mysterious mission ended Sunday afternoon with a perfect landing just three miles from the launch pad where the flight began Thursday.

Left behind in orbit 22,300 miles above the equator, south of the Soviet Union, was a $300 million satellite source say is capable of monitoring Soviet missile tests and eavesdropping on selected military and diplomatic communications in much of Europe, Asia and Africa.

The five astronauts, all military officers, flew back to their training base in Houston Sunday night for debriefing sessions today. In keeping with the secrecy imposed by the Air Force on much of the mission, they did not make the usual public departure statements.

The commander, Navy Capt. Thomas K. Mattingly, is hanging up his flight suit after three space missions to become space program director with the Naval Electronic Systems Command. The other crew members were Air Force Lt. Col. Loren Shriver, Marine Lt. Col. James Buchli and Air Force majors Ellison Onizuka and Gary Payton.

Throughout the flight, the astronauts' voices were not heard on the space-to-ground circuit normally opened for the news media. Their transmissions from space were encoded to prevent anyone from listening in.

Discovery was towed into a processing hangar to be prepared for its next mission in March — in which one satellite is to be deployed and a second recovered.

And because of the success of the just-completed flight, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration can proceed with launching Challenger on Feb. 20 with two communications satellites and a crew of seven that includes a French astronaut and U.S. Sen. Jake Garn of Utah.

One of Challenger's satellites is a NASA tracking and data-relay satellite to be boosted to high orbit by the same type of rocket stage that pushed Discovery's spy satellite to its lofty outpost.

A total of four space shuttle missions this year would have been jeopardized if the rocket, called an inertial upper stage or IUS, had failed like its predecessor.

In its only previous shuttle assignment in April 1983, an IUS propelled a communications payload into the wrong orbit. The trouble was traced to overheating in a second-stage motor that collapsed a flexible seal in the steering mechanism.

Major modifications were made and extensive testing was done before officials felt confident in flying an IUS on the secret mission. Because both NASA and the Air Force plan to use the stage many times, the Air Force removed its performance from the secrecy list and reported it "successfully met its mission objectives."

"We were confident we had checked and rechecked it all over, but the proof is in the flight demonstration," said Edward Bangsund, an official with Boeing Aerospace, the manufacturer. "We can now look forward to a successful operational program."

NASA now can return to its open information policy until the next military mission, scheduled in September. Full-scale briefings with flight directors, the astronaut crew and payload experts are scheduled this week for Challenger's February flight. That was not done before the Discovery launch.

Territory reimposes law

NOUMEA, New Caledonia — A state of emergency has been reimposed in this troubled French Pacific territory after a three-day suspension, although the curfew accompanying it was shortened by two hours.

The state of emergency, which by law can last until June 30, went into effect at noon Sunday after High Commissioner Edgard Pisani signed an order re-establishing it.

A state of emergency lasting 12 days was announced Jan. 12 following violence between native Melanesians seeking independence and European settlers who want the territory to remain French. Twenty people have been killed since mid-November.

The French Parliament voted Friday to extend the state of emergency as a means of restoring normal economic activity.

Australia bans imports

BRISBANE, Australia — An Australian state government has banned chocolate imports from New Zealand to protest New Zealand's refusal to admit U.S. nuclear-powered or nuclear-armed warships into its waters.

"I don't expect our action will make the New Zealand government change its mind but at least it will highlight their naive anti-nuclear policies," Queensland state's premier, Joh Bjelke-Petersen, said Sunday after the state impounded a shipment of New Zealand chocolates.

"It's no good running around saying don't use nuclear weapons and then pleading with an attacker. You have to be strong," the premier said.

China consecrates bishops

PEKING — China's Catholic church has consecrated its first two auxiliary bishops, both elderly graduates of Roman Catholic seminaries, the official Xinhua news agency reported today.

Consecrated in a ceremony Sunday in Shanghai were Stephen Li Side, 77, and Louis Jin Luxian, 69, Xinhua said.

China's government-supervised Patriotic Catholic Association observes most Roman Catholic rites but has no links with the Vatican and rejects the authority of the pope. Peking broke with Rome in 1957.

Men kill 2 missionaries

MANILA, Philippines — An Australian missionary couple were hacked to death in their house in the northern city of Baguio by unidentified men who left the couple's two small children crying in an adjacent room, a police investigator said today.

Chief investigator Lt. Frederick Salvador, in a telephone interview, identified the victims as Michael Shelling, 35, and Janice Shelling, 32. He said they belonged to a Protestant group called Youth with a Mission that was conducting Bible studies in Baguio, 130 miles north of Manila.

Video reports kidnap victims OK

LONDON (AP) — A television news agency today showed a videotape of U.S. Embassy official William Buckley, who was kidnapped almost a year ago in Beirut, Lebanon. Buckley said he and two fellow Americans were well.

The 56-second videotape, shown to reporters at the Visnews agency's London headquarters, gave no indication what group was holding Buckley and Jeremy Levin, the Beirut bureau chief of Cable News Network, and the Rev. Benjamin Weir, a Presbyterian minister.

"Today, the 22nd of January 1985, I am well and my friends Benjamin Weir and Jeremy Levin are also well. We ask that our government take action for our release quickly," Buckley said in the tape.

He was holding a copy of the Beirut French-language daily newspaper "l'Orient-Le Jour" dated Jan. 22.

Visnews' managing editor, Kevin Hamilton, said: "This is the first public indication certainly that Buckley is alive." He refused to say how Visnews obtained the tape, which he said was taken by an amateur, not by a Visnews camera crew.

Witnesses in Beirut saw Buckley and Weir kidnapped last year on, respectively, March 16 and May 8. Levin has been missing since March 7 last year and had been assumed abducted.

Buckley was the political officer for the U.S. Embassy in Beirut. On the videotape he is wearing a brown jacket and standing before a brick wall. He appeared pale but healthy, and his fingernails were well-kept and his mustache trimmed.

His brief statement indicated his captors had made some demand on the U.S. government in exchange for the freedom of the three Americans, but there was no elaboration.

Hamilton said Visnews had not received any demands with the videotape.

"We do not see ourselves as intermediaries or negotiators," Hamilton said. "We simply obtained the video."

The video made no mention of two other Americans who have been kidnapped or reported missing in West Beirut since February 1983, when Druse and Shiite Moslem militias took over from the Lebanese army in Beirut's Moslem sector.

The other two are Peter Kilburn, a librarian at the American University of Beirut who failed to report to his work last Dec. 3, and the Rev. Lawrence Jenco, a priest who heads the Catholic Relief Services office in Beirut. He was kidnapped on Jan. 8 this year.

Painful return to Auschwitz

Jewish twins recall experiments, concentration camp

OSWIECIM, Poland (AP) — Four sets of Jewish twins who survived the cruel experiments of Dr. Josef Mengele returned to Auschwitz to recall the day 40 years ago when the Nazi concentration camp was liberated.

Many of the twins wept Sunday as they stood on the railway ramp, remembering it as the spot where Mengele, known as the "Angel of Death," separated them forever from their parents, sisters, brothers and grandparents.

The relatives were sent to die in gas chambers, while the twins were subjected to painful experiments as Mengele tried to further the "master" Aryan race promoted by Hitler.

Of 750 pairs of twins, only 180 children survived Mengele's medical tortments.

In the weeks before Soviet troops arrived to free the prisoners, the Germans herded thousands out of the smaller camp at Birkenau, transferring them to the main camp two miles away at Auschwitz or to other concentration camps in Germany.

The Nazis attempted to destroy Birkenau to hide evidence of the camp. The Soviets arrived about midday on Jan. 27, 1945, and the Nazis fled, leaving several thousand emaciated prisoners at Auschwitz or marching on the road between the two centers.

On Sunday, the four sets of twins re-enacted the march, and snow fell on them as it did 40 years ago.

"Only half the people who began the march at Birkenau 40 years ago finished it," said Eva Kor, 50, of Terre Haute, Ind. "When we began in the middle of the night we could hear the explosions as the Nazis blew up the crematoria. It was snowing, very cold and they were shooting anyone who did not run fast enough."

For Mrs. Kor, Sunday was a time to draw close to the mother she never saw again.

"Mother, here I am with my sister and our children," she said, wiping tears from her eyes as she recalled the day in 1944 when she arrived with a transport of Hungarian Jews.

"We have finally come to say good-bye to you. We have never forgotten you, and we will never let the world forget what was here," said Mrs. Kor.

Two other marchers besides Mrs. Kor were from the United States. The other five, including Mrs. Kor's sister, Miriam Zeiger, were from Israel.

"I thought it was a wonderful feeling to walk the same streets, because I had never walked them before as a free human being," said Mrs. Kor. "Forty years ago I could never imagine that one day I would be singing Jewish songs in Auschwitz."

The marchers wore yellow Stars of David and carried a banner in Hebrew and French reading "I Accuse."

At Auschwitz, they marched under the main gate that still bears the inscription in German "Arbeit Macht Frei," — "Work Makes You Free."

The brick barracks of Auschwitz now serve as memorial to the 6 million Jews who perished in the Holocaust. An estimated 4 million people from 28 countries, including 2.5 million Jews, died at Auschwitz from 1940-45.

'Can't' Congress can if it desires

Congress is held in the grip of an all-encompassing negativism that prevents legislators from successfully tackling serious national problems.

The most obvious expression of this "can't do" attitude is seen in the non-response to the record federal deficits that will soar over $200 billion a year if Congress fails to act decisively. Leaders of both parties in Congress recite numerous reasons why Congress can't cope with the deficits. But when one analyzes the reasons given, none of them really hold up.

One of the excuses most often used is that more than 75 percent of the budget is "uncontrollable" because it involves commitments that already have been made by Congress. It sounds reasonable until one recognizes that there is no barrier to Congress undoing anything it has done, except its self-serving refusal to do so.

If Congress had the fortitude to face reality, it could eliminate entire programs without taking funds from the poor, the sick and the aged.

For example, there is no reason to have a federal Department of Education, especially one that is costing taxpayers more than $15 billion a year. It could be eliminated without any damage to education. As a matter of fact, it probably would improve education by removing an unnecessary federal bureaucracy and scores of programs that haven't helped improve the quality of learning in the nation.

There are a number of entitlement programs that have mushroomed out of control because Congress has failed to provide the proper controls or reviews. If Congress were dominated by lawmakers who were willing to face the budget crisis squarely and take intelligent actions to balance the budget, it could be done. Instead, members of the House and Senate have conditioned themselves to believe they really are prisoners of special interests and their own budget.

Someone should tell Congress collectively: You're free. You can balance the budget if you want to. Just recognize that you can, and then do it.

Joseph Kraft Latin nations rush to democracy

WASHINGTON — With its presidential elections, Brazil became the seventh country in Latin America to pass from military to civilian rule since 1981. But how come? Why the sudden rush to democracy while the Reagan administration blows so cold on human rights?

The answer is that there has not been so much a boom in democracy south of the border as a recession in military rule. Cyclical economic pressures have forced the military regimes to abdicate. When it comes to Washington's influence over Latin America, economics beats human rights hollow.

A convenient date for charting the political-economic cycle in Latin America is 1980. During the next decade, a worldwide boom brought steady growth of about 5 percent annually to the economies of Latin America. New elites came on stage, demanding places of political power. They developed the thesis that to sustain growth while holding off Castroism, Latin America had to modernize relations between peasant and landlord, city and country, workers and companies; the governed and the governors. The basic theme of modernization was endorsed for the U.S. by President Kennedy in the Alliance for Progress.

Under the banner of modernization, civilian leaders with ambitious programs came to power in such important countries as Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Venezuela and Peru. But the modernization process turned out to be messy. There were strikes in urban areas, rural protests, widespread disorder. Often there emerged terrorist groups more or less linked to Castro and the communists.

Dominican Republic in 1965. It played at least some role in the military coup which led to the death of Salvador Allende in Chile in 1973.

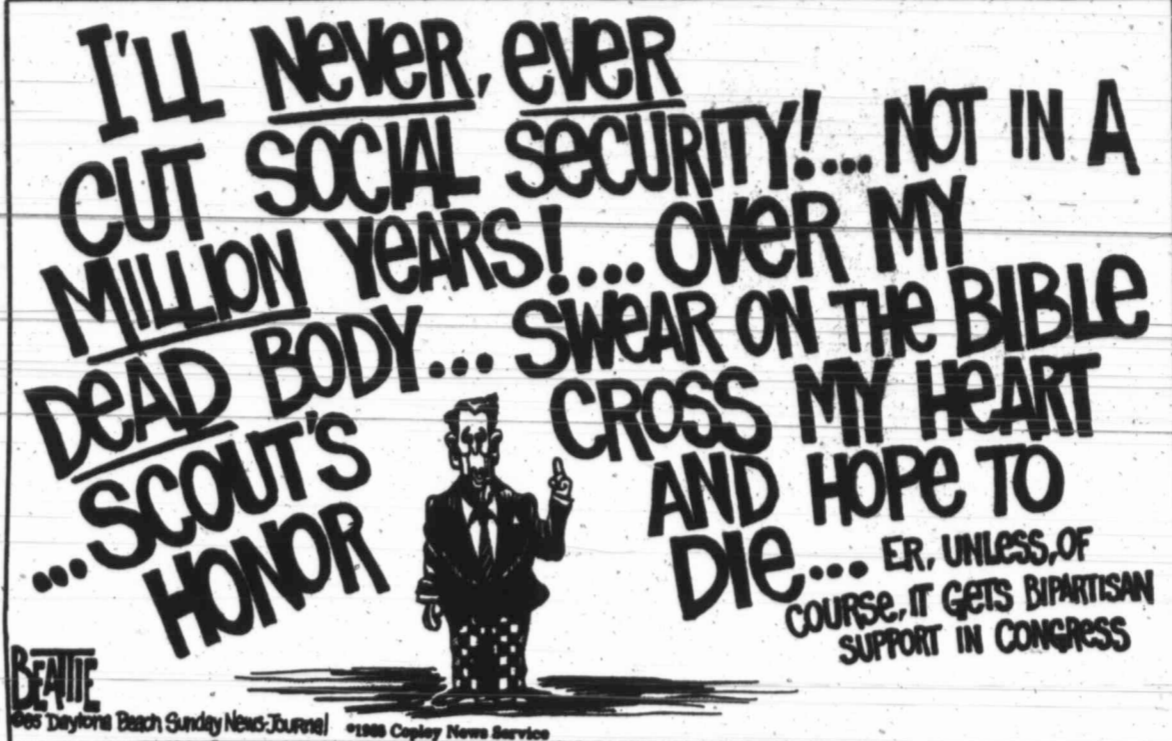

What really swept out the military was not so much human rights policy as the second oil shock which followed the ouster of the Shah of Iran in 1979. In 1973, the industrialized countries had cushioned the blow to consumers by subsidizing oil prices. But in 1980 the U.S. and other developed countries fought back with strong anti-inflation programs. In the process, interest rates soared, and there set in the worst recession since the 1930s.

The effect on Latin America was devastating. Charges on the newly borrowed billions soared. Sales of raw materials and manufactured goods to the U.S. and Europe plunged. Debts assumed the proportions of unscalable mountains. Locals with money took it to the U.S., and, as confidence waned, inflation soared.

The military regimes had no capacity to deal with these conditions. Some, as in Argentina, tried to flex muscles and evoke patriotic feeling. Hence the Falklands war of 1982 which further discredited and divided the soldiers. Others gave up, and, having secured the best possible terms for themselves, handed power back to civilian authorities. Peru led the way in 1980. Thereafter Honduras, Bolivia, Argentina, Panama, El Salvador and Uruguay preceded Brazil down the road to civilian rule. Elections are also due this year in Guatemala.

Encouraging the fragile democracies which have emerged now constitutes a major American goal in Latin America. To that end, proclaiming support for human rights and slipping arms to anti-communist freedom fighters are small potatoes. What truly counts is stretching out debts on increasingly less onerous terms and keeping markets open for Latin American exports. It is literally true that a prosperous U.S. holds out the best hope for democracy in the other Americas.

Joseph Kraft's reports on Washington, national affairs and trends are distributed nationally by the Los Angeles Times Syndicate.

Jack Anderson Reagan to hard-line Chile

WASHINGTON — President Reagan will follow up his public criticism of South Africa's white supremacist policies with a tougher line against another unpopular regime — the military dictatorship of Gen. Augusto Pinochet of Chile.

A preliminary step in implementing the new policy will be the replacement of Ambassador James Theberge, who has spent four years in Santiago trying to ingratiate himself with the Pinochet government and who reportedly opposed the get-tough policy.

In fairness to Theberge, his attitude toward Pinochet may be the result less of sympathy than of pragmatism. The strategy behind Theberge's approach is explained in an embassy document, which I quoted in a recent column.

The United States "is critical of the Pinochet government because it has not been moving rapidly enough toward a democratic transition and because of human rights violations in Chile..." stated the document. "The U.S. Embassy in Santiago has and will continue to practice secret diplomacy, and the ambassador will quietly discuss with officials of the Chilean government the importance of political liberalization."

With this as his guideline, Theberge repeatedly demonstrated, in small but significant ways, seeming U.S. support for Pinochet. For example, he was the only ambassador from a Western democratic country who attended a recent ceremony honoring the military regime. On the other hand, he was the only one who failed to attend the 10th anniversary celebration of a Catholic human-rights group.

Apparently, Pinochet hasn't been the least influenced by any secret U.S. pressure to liberalize. On the contrary, he recently called out the troops and truncheons to suppress his political opponents in violent confrontations.

So President Reagan will add a little public pressure. The new policy is being drafted behind closed doors by the State Department's Latin American and human-rights bureaus. It's still closely guarded, but my associate Lucette Lagnado has learned about the proposed changes. For example:

• The embassy will attempt a delicate "tightrope act" between the Pinochet regime and the opposition parties. The new ambassador will try to open lines of communication with both sides, while making it clear that the United States doesn't necessarily embrace either the regime or its critics.

• The White House and State Department will make more frequent, public criticism of Pinochet. The pattern, in fact, has already begun. An inside source said the State Department has made some 15 critical public statements about Chile in recent months. "That's more than we have criticized the Russians," he said.

• Like the first two proposals, an economic "sanction" being suggested by the policy drafters is significant but more symbolic than practical. The proposed policy would have the United States abstain from votes on Chilean loans from the Inter-American Bank and other international institutions. Secretary of State George Shultz opposes the use of loans to pursue political policy. But abstention by the United States from such loans would register U.S. displeasure with Pinochet, without directly blocking the loans or preventing other nations from blocking them.

The purpose of the policy shift hopefully is to increase U.S. influence in Chile. Theberge has "lost the confidence of both sides" there, I'm told. A more enhanced approach might win the United States at least the grudging respect of both Pinochet and his opponents.

CIA'S POLO CAPER — When Ronald Ray Rewald undertook to join (and eventually buy) the Hawaii Polo Club so he could hobnob with important people for his CIA bosses, it became an expensive proposition for both himself and the company he organized allegedly at the behest of the CIA.

It cost Rewald a bad back, which he suffered in a head-on collision with another polo player. And it cost the company's investors more than half a million bucks, according to Rewald's 59 indictments for fraud and other charges.

That indictment alleges that Rewald "diverted and used for his own personal benefit approximately $256,000 to pay for expenses he incurred ... in the sport of polo."

In addition, the government charges that Rewald forked over $264,000 to buy and care for his polo ponies — an enormous amount for a modest string of ponies and their fodder and stabling, according to one horseflesh expert I consulted.

At least Rewald gave his nags proper CIA airs by assigning them aliases, just like two-legged agents: Jacob, also known as Feather; Barn Fly, a.k.a. Barbie; Caramel, a.k.a. Special, a.k.a. Something Special, and Moon Drifter, a.k.a. Moonie, a.k.a. Moon Daughter.

DISCREET EDITING — The "Green Sheet" is a daily publication of the Department of Health and Human Services, a compilation of news clips about the department and its headlines that costs the taxpayers $200,000 a year to print. Naturally, news stories about the department's boss usually figure prominently in the Green Sheet.

Jack Anderson's investigative report from Washington is distributed by United Feature Syndicate.

Poor are entitled to a telephone

By JIM CRAIG
WASHINGTON — Almost like food, clothing and shelter, the telephone has become a necessity. It is particularly important to the elderly, the handicapped and shut-ins. Rising phone costs which came in the wake of the break-up of AT&T effectively have snipped phone lines to thousands of American homes.

Last week, several members of the House introduced legislation to protect the needy from losing their telephone link with the outside world simply because they couldn't afford it.

Millions of Americans rely on their telephones for much more than casual conversation. A poll by the American Association of Retired Persons showed about 20 percent of Americans over 55 have reduced their use of the phone because of rising cost. Legislation introduced by 13 House members, including Texas Democratic Reps. Mickey Leland of Houston, John Bryant of Dallas and Ronald Coleman of El Paso, is aimed at assuring those on fixed incomes that they can count on affordably-priced telephone service. The measure, if adopted, would require state public utility commissions to establish special lifeline rates for providing local telephone service at a discounted rate for low-income residential customers.

The lifeline service is defined by the measure as basic service intended to include a limited number of calls in a consumer's local exchange area, with an additional charge per call for extra calls.

State regulatory commissions would be given the flexibility to develop rates and eligibility criteria for the lifeline service in keeping with local needs.

Additionally, the proposed legislation would make all qualified local telephone companies that provide the lifeline telephone service eligible for payments from a lifeline service fund to defray the cost of the service.

The fund would be established from a surcharge on interstate long distance service, which would be the same as the fund the Federal Communications Commission already has established for subsidizing high cost rural area telephone companies.

A qualified local telephone company would receive compensation from the fund equal to 50 percent of the difference between the rate for lifeline service and the cost of providing such service.

Around The Rim Oil tax isn't appropriate

By CHARLIE ALCORN

When Governor White addressed the new session of the Texas Legislature, greeting it with news of budget deficits and the need to trim the state's burgeoning payroll, nobody was surprised.

More than a few were outraged by one of his ideas for reducing the deficit. White's proposed 800 percent increase in the drilling fee on new oil and gas wells is absolute lunacy. Obviously, our Governor perceives the oil industry in Texas to be a font of inexhaustible money to be dipped into anytime there is a cash squeeze.

Somebody needs to remind the Gov that this is 1985 and the oil industry has been slowly recovering from one of its worst slumps in history. Twenty-six dollar a barrel oil has left many oil companies struggling to break even and such an exorbitant tax increase might push them all to the bankruptcy courts.

Of course this increase in drilling fees won't affect the major oil companies too much. For the big boys, an extra $900 a well is a drop in the bucket. The producers who will be hurt most by the increase are the independents, who are responsible for most our domestic oil and gas drilling.

The drilling fee was a good idea when it was first proposed by the Railroad Commission last session. The present $100 fee goes to plugging abandoned wells that were causing the state problems with salt water overrun. In years past the Railroad Commission had to pay for the plugging jobs out its own pocket and ran well over budget as a result. The $100 fee solved the problem.

So why the 800 per cent increase?

This current budget deficit is looming in White's political future like a noose and he must find a golden goose quick. The Railroad Commission neither asked for, nor needs the extra money. White is looking for an easy way to fill the state coffers but he is headed in the wrong direction with his drilling fee increase.

Independent oil and gas producers already pay more than their fair share of taxes. Let's hope our legislators will come up with a more creative solution to the deficit problem, other than sticking the independents with this unfair and unjustified drilling fee increase.

Like the man in the commercial, Gale Pittman is up every morning long before the break of dawn making donuts.

Pittman, owner and operator of Gale's Donuts, 1604 E. 4th, gets up at 3 a.m. to begin the task of making donuts available to the people of Big Spring. He also makes pastries, cookies and sweet rolls, and does cake decorating and catering.

"I do everything," says Pittman. "I enjoy doing cakes the most. It's really a creative art to see what you can come up with." Pittman's mother taught him cake decorating. "She used to do it up at the house, and I learned from her."

Working in the public makes his job exciting, Pittman said. "To me it's interesting. It's an art." But the difficult part is "trying to come up with some of the ideas on cakes that the public wants you to do such as Cabbage Patch."

In his spare time, Pittman enjoys drawing and arts and crafts.

Technology reducing pain in dentistry

CHICAGO (AP) — Computer age tools are taking a good deal of pain out of dentistry, according to one of the nation's largest dental organizations, with headquarters in Chicago.

The Academy of General Dentistry (AGD) reports that a number of technological advances in the field are contributing to pain-free dental visits. And, it adds, much of the new technology is also responsible for healthier teeth.

"The future is already here in dentistry," says Dr. Howard Glazer, of the AGD. "Dentists are making use of sophisticated hardware. We're using machines to detect caries (cavities) and microscopes to quickly and accurately fill them. We have tomographs and myo-monitors for diagnostic purposes, and laser dentistry is just around the corner."

Glazer points out that these devices and others not only make a dental visit more comfortable, but many of them can identify a problem before it gets to a serious stage.

Though the incidence of caries among children has been cut by a third in the past decade, decay has not been eradicated altogether, he says. But an ultramodern set of tools sharply reduces discomfort associated with the filling process, Glazer adds.

The cavities detector is a minicomputer that gives the dentist an optical readout, he explains. A needle point is placed on the tooth groove and, based on a numbers scale, indicates whether decay is present. It also tells the dentist what kind of filling material to use, from amalgam to sealant.

A special dental microscope is now being used by dentists to make cavity-filling precise, Glazer notes. This device allows the dentist to survey the tooth in great detail, so just the decayed portion is removed.

"You don't have to remove extra tooth to be sure decay is out," explains Glazer. "The microscope clearly outlines the area to be removed."

Another detection device has been developed for root canal work. In simple terms, it measures the electric potential between the periodontal ligament and the body, so the dentist knows exactly where the ligament is and can quickly and accurately perform the procedure. It is especially effective for work on older people and pregnant women because it eliminates the need for multiple X-rays, the dentist points out.

Tomographs are used to identify jaw misalignment, TMJ dysfunction and other disorders. They are X-rays that resemble a stop action camera. The high speed machine is able to photograph the jaw as it moves, so the dentist can make a diagnosis. Myo-monitors are designed to measure electrical impulses in the facial muscles, revealing how and where a person bites. This provides important data so the dentist can assess jaw and bite disorders.

Lasers are not far behind existing technological breakthroughs in dentistry. Academy members see small hand-held dental lasers available in a few years for such in-office procedures as decay removal, preparation of teeth for fillings, crowns or caps and periodontal surgery.

Among the most welcome tools — by dentists and patients alike — are newly designed needles for injecting local anesthetics, Glazer says. These are pistol-like instruments with an extra-fine needle that deaden just the tooth, not surrounding tissue and the face. The needle barely penetrates the gum and the anesthetic takes at once.

"No more waiting 15 uncomfortable minutes for the procedure to begin," Glazer says.

Dr. Donohue

Body tolerates excess water

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Healthwise, is it possible for a person to drink too much water per day? And if so, how much would be too much and what possible ill effects or undesirable results or problems might occur? — B.D.

Rarely is the body or the kidneys in particular harmed by too much water. We can usually tolerate well over five quarts a day, although our need is only for about two and a half quarts (total fluids, not just water).

Questions like yours haunt me. If you get in the habit of drinking gargantuan quantities you may develop a habit called psychogenic polydipsia. The sign, not surprisingly, is excess urination. If you are passing more than three quarts of urine daily you are in the polydipsia ballpark.

Again, it is not really harmful, but you still have to wean yourself off such large fluid intake, for one important reason. Your kidneys, in getting used to such fluid elimination, lose their fine tuning, which they have to regular total body fluid. From my childhood I've listened to people preach the "sobriety of water-guzzling" sermon. It isn't necessarily so. In fact, it's outright wrong. There are only a few times when people should tend toward overhydration. People who form kidney stones are examples of those who should make a conscious effort to drink plenty of fluids, but never to the point of discomfort or great excess. I'm sure you've heard me preach that sermon here before. You have left me hanging on why you have asked this question.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: The subject is cocaine. I am both saddened and angered as to how this life-destroying drug has come into such widespread use (if you believe the statistics). I am saddened to see its devastating effect on a close family member, and I'm angered because of the misleading gobbledegook so widely disseminated in the early years of its appearance on the recreational drug scene (a few years ago). Then it was described as a chemical substance without habituating potential, just a nice friendly little crutch.

How could everyone have been so dead wrong? Isn't it pretty well established that this drug is, indeed, addictive? I want your comment. — K.R.

My comment is that you are justified in your response to the cocaine story. It is true that the addictive potential of this drug was sadly underestimated. Now most authorities are coming to the conclusion, after years of observation of chronic users, that cocaine is, after all, an addictive substance. The earlier assessment was as potentially psychologically habituating. Now strong words, like physically addictive, are being used.

The truth may lie somewhere between, or as a combination of both factors. What else can I say? Whatever the technical language the social effects from abuse are quite obvious.

Dear Abby

Wife wants husband to touch her

DEAR ABBY: I've been married for eight years and have two beautiful children. My husband is a very loving father, but he never expresses any affection for me. For instance, I always have to go to him for a hug or kiss. He never reaches out to touch me, or even take my hand. I am naturally very affectionate. He is not. He's always been that way, but I thought after we were married he would change. We've talked about it, and he says it's just not "in him" to be demonstrative.

Last night he said, "When you were in the kitchen washing dishes, I wanted to sneak up behind you and put my arms around you, but I just couldn't do it."

I thought, how sad! If only he had done it, he would have made me the happiest woman in the world. Abby, is it because of the way he was brought up? Nobody in his family touches or kisses much. My family is just the opposite.

How can I make him change? I know he loves me, but it's really painful living with a man who never shows any affection.

HUNGRY FOR AFFECTION DEAR HUNGRY: You can't make him change; only he can change himself. He's inhibited because (you guessed it) that's the way he was brought up.

You don't have to spend the rest of your life hungering for affection. Verbalize your need to be touched, hugged and kissed, and stress that he can learn to express his feelings without embarrassment. Then ask your family physician to recommend a therapist who specializes in behavior modification.

Other options: Call your local mental health facility and inquire about sex therapy. If you live near a university whose medical school has a human sexuality program, you're in luck.

DEAR ABBY: After 40 years of a beautiful marriage, I lost my husband. We were a childless couple with no relatives living nearby; I had to take care of everything. When going through his chest of drawers, I found a large plastic bag of keys, a few with identifying labels, but most without.

Abby, I am going crazy trying to find out what these keys are for. I don't think I should just toss them out because I'm sure my husband wouldn't have kept them unless they were of some use.

Abby, you could save your readers a lot of unnecessary grief by advising them to label every key they have right now! And if a key is no longer useful, to throw it away.

KEY CRAZY IN SUN CITY DEAR KEY CRAZY: I wouldn't recommend labeling keys. Should you be burgled, the labeled keys would save the thief a lot of time. More practical advice would be, label keys in a code known only to family members, and toss out keys that aren't currently useful.

Silver Awards make area Girl Scout history

History is being made for the West Texas Girl Scout Council. The Council's first group of girls to receive the highest award available for Cadette Girl Scouts — the Silver Award — were honored at a banquet and awards ceremony at First Baptist Church, Tuesday.

Sixteen girls were honored: Collette White, Amy Carroll, Erin Kelly, Christy Alexander, Kathryn Burrow, Renae Reinert, Kim White, Shauna Richardson, Kathy Watson, Angela Dees, Tonya Rock, Shawna Adams, Cindy Phillips, Lori Anderson, Carolyn Walker and MarJayne Lehman, all from Debbie Burrow's Troop #36, and Barbara Smallwood of Virginia Olivers' Troop #156.

The girls fulfilled many requirements in order to earn the award. Each must earn The Challenge of Being a Girl Scout, which involves a community service project. Then, they must earn three interest project certificates in which they have thirty to choose from. The girls then choose whether to do a Career Exploration interest project or earn the activity certificate From Dreams to Reality. The final achievement they must earn is the Silver Leadership Award. The girls spend 25 hours on activities to earn this award.

All material and projects are documented in a notebook by each girl. The local Silver Review Board Committee reviews the notebooks and rates them on a scale from one to 10. The board then goes over the notebooks with the girls. If the girls received a favorable rating, they then have a 15-minute interview with the board. The girl is again rated on a scale from one to 10. If she passes, she receives the high honor of the Silver Award.

Rebekah Lodge installs Wilson as secretary

District Deputy Lila Hollow installed Sheri Wilson to the office of recording secretary during the Big Spring Rebekah Lodge #284 meeting, Tuesday. Mrs. Hollow was assisted by Frances Loftis and Lillian Rhyne.

The charter will be draped at the next meeting for one of the Lodge's members. Twenty visits to the sick were reported.

The next meeting will be Tuesday.

Johnny Rutherford speaks about C.L.E.A.N. Project

Johnny Rutherford informed members of the GFWC-TFWC Big Spring Junior Woman's Club about the origin, history and future of the C.L.E.A.N. Project.

Rutherford, founder of the project, presented solutions to the problems of litter and other "eyesores" in Big Spring.

Plans for the 1985 Installation Banquet were discussed and several details concerning installation were voted on. The possibility of donating a McGruff Puppet to a public classroom also was discussed.

The next meeting will be at 7 p.m. Feb. 18 in the home of Debbie Wegman.

CHRIS EVERT LLOYD celebrates following her 6-2, 6-4 win over MARTINA NAVRATILOVA in the Virginia Slims of Florida tourney.

Navratilova falters; Evert captures Slims

KEY BISCAZYNE, Fla. (AP) — Even with a 6-2, 6-4 lead in her title match against Martina Navratilova in the Virginia Slims of Florida, Chris Evert Lloyd didn't think she had it won.

Even though she was serving for the match, Lloyd said she was thinking about the possibility of losing. She was still wary of the woman who had beaten her 13 straight times and in 16 of their past 17 meetings.

"I think I was kind of in a daze," she said Sunday after finally breaking through against her nemesis. "I was a bit tentative on my first two match points, and I started thinking how I didn't want to blow it."

"I've had so many chances to beat her during the streak and haven't been able to. I didn't want that to happen again."

It didn't. Lloyd held on to win 6-2, 6-4, handing Navratilova only her seventh loss since the beginning of the 1982 season.

Lloyd broke Navratilova's serve in the first and third games and never trailed on her own serve in the first set at the Sheraton Royal Biscayne Racquet Club.

In the second set, Lloyd scored three service breaks, including love games in the seventh and ninth against Navratilova's serve. She won her third match point when Navratilova looped a forehand long.

"I was a little afraid after the first set," Lloyd said at a joyful news conference after the 66-minute match, "because I don't think I've ever played that well in my life."

"My passing shots and my return of serve were the best ever, and I have to do that to beat Martina."

Navratilova, now tied with Lloyd 31-31 in their lifetime series, had said Saturday that she thought she could beat Lloyd even if she had a bad day. But she admitted Lloyd didn't play Sunday like she has the past two years.

"She didn't miss any shots at the beginning," Navratilova said. "I think this is probably the best she has ever played against me. I don't think I would have been able to win if I was playing a little better, but at least I could have made it interesting."

The loss was the first for Navratilova since her record winning streak was ended at 74 matches by Helena Sukova in the semifinals of the Australian Open last month. She had a 54-match winning streak ended by Hana Mandlikova in January 1984.

Navratilova won her only previous tournament this year, the Virginia Slims of Washington.

The last time Lloyd beat Navratilova was in the finals of the December 1982 Australian Open, where she won 6-3, 2-6, 6-3.

After several blowouts against her friendly foe, Lloyd pushed Navratilova before losing 4-6, 6-4, 6-4 in the U.S. Open last fall. She called her victory Sunday "a breakthrough."

"I think she had a real psychological edge over me after winning 13 straight," said Lloyd. "It's great to know I can compete with her."

While racing to a 4-0 lead Sunday, Lloyd played nearly flawlessly from her baseline perch and Navratilova struggled with her serve.

"In my past matches when Martina has jumped on me right from the start, I've gotten disheartened and she has gained confidence," Lloyd said. "It was important that I got a good start."

Lloyd said she thought the turning point in the match came early in the second set, when she fell behind 0-30 on her own serve only to rally and win the game.

The two traded service breaks from that point until Lloyd broke through for a 5-4 lead with a whizzing passing shot off one of Navratilova's few good first serves.

AFC defense keys victory

HONOLULU (AP) — Mark Gastineau's "Sack Dance" was outlawed by National Football League rulesmakers this season. His ability to get to quarterbacks continues undiminished.

The New York Jets' defensive end, who led the NFL with 22 sacks in the regular season, added four more Sunday as the American Conference beat the National Conference 22-14 in the annual Pro Bowl game.

RICHARD DENT ... 3 sacks on day

DAN MARINO ... winning quarterback

He also dumped the Los Angeles Rams' Eric Dickerson in the end zone for a safety that produced the first score of the game with 4:10 left in a first half that was so dominated by defense it appeared it might end in a scoreless tie.

"In a game like this, with only one week's preparation, the defense will have that advantage," Gastineau said after the game. "That was obvious with the number of sacks today."

The number of sacks, in fact, was 17, a Pro Bowl record for the two teams. Nine were by the AFC, eight by the NFC, for which Chicago's Richard Dent played Gastineau by dumping AFC quarterbacks three times.

Overall, 19 of the AFC's 22 points were set up by the defense or special teams, including the play that turned the game around, an 83-yard run with a Neil Lomax fumble by Kansas City defensive end Art Still that turned a 14-12 AFC deficit into a 19-14 lead with 5:24 left in the game.

The fumble resulted from the kind of play common to all-star contests.

On a third down and three from the AFC 15, Lomax tried to hand off to Dickerson. But the two collided, the ball came loose and Still fell on it. He was pushed to his feet by Seattle's Joe Nash and the Los Angeles Raiders' Rod Martin and continued untouched on a run the 6-foot-7, 257-pound end said "seemed like it took a couple of days."

Norm Johnson added a 22-yard field goal set up by another defensive play — New England's Andre Tippett's recovery of another Lomax fumble.

To Lomax, playing in his first Pro Bowl, the botched play that led to the winning score was one of the things that happens when the offense has only a couple of days to get its timing down.

"I guess I was a little tight to Eric," said the St. Louis Cardinal quarterback, who alternated with San Francisco's Joe Montana for the NFC. "That's what happens when you have two or three days to work on the plays. If we had two or three weeks, it wouldn't happen."

The NFC, which won last year's contest 45-3 and holds a 9-4 edge since the merger of the NFL and the American Football League, had a huge statistical edge — 426 yards total to 204 for the AFC.

But the AFC led 9-0 at the half on Gastineau's safety — which was preceded by sacks of Lomax by the Jets' Joe Klecko and Martin — and Miami's Dan Marino's 6-yard touchdown pass to the Raiders' Marcus Allen. The second score came three plays after Seattle's Freddie Young, in the game with Dallas' Bill Bates as the Pro Bowl's first designated special teams players, tipped a punt by New Orleans' Brian Hansen to give the AFC the ball at the NFC 15.

Meanwhile, Minnesota's Jan Stenerud was missing 35-and 39-yard field goal attempts for the NFC and Lomax had a pass intercepted in the end zone by Kansas City's Deron Cherry that stymied an NFC scoring threat in the dying seconds of the first half.

But the NFC came back from to take a 14-9 lead on a 13-yard TD pass from Montana to Green Bay's James Lofton and a one-yard run by Chicago's Walter Payton 35 seconds into the fourth quarter.

In fact, Montana was the more effective of the NFC quarterbacks. The MVP in last Sunday's Super Bowl completed 10 of 14 passes for 112 yards and was more effective in evading Gastineau and the other AFC pass rushers.

Foster sets record

Associated Press Writer CHICAGO (AP) — Olympian Greg Foster, running before an appreciative hometown crowd and no longer overshadowed by Renato Nehemiah, broke Nehemiah's world indoor best in the 50-meter hurdles of the Bally Invitational Track and Field meet.

Foster's 6.30 time in his qualifying heat Sunday broke Nehemiah's record of 6.36 seconds set in 1979.

"My parents are sitting up there," said Foster, pointing to a section of the Rosemont Horizon. "I'm really happy about this one."

Foster also won the 50-meter hurdle finals, although the time was 6.44.

Nehemiah's move to professional football, with San Francisco, opened the door for Foster to become the nation's top indoor hurdler, and he was also an Olympic silver medalist in the 110 hurdles.

"My start did it," Foster said of the record. "I've quit worrying about the rest of the race and started worrying about the start."

"That's just the first of Nehemiah's records," he said. "The one I really wanted is the 55 meters (60-yard hurdles)."

It was the only world or U.S. record set at the meet, witnessed by an announced crowd of 7,911.

The most exciting race was the mile, won by Ireland's Eamonn Coghlan, the indoor record holder. His time of 3:57.25 was almost seven seconds off the record pace and four seconds off his time in winning Friday's Millrose Games in New York.

Jim Nielsen set a fast pace through the first half of the race, but then faded. Veteran John Walker led in the third quarter, until Steve Scott moved in front with two of the 11 laps left.

Then the 32-year old Coghlan, who had been near the tail the entire race, moved up to challenge Scott.

They ran shoulder to shoulder the final lap, but Coghlan took the lead on the final straightaway.

"I was going as hard as I could, but he's got such tremendous acceleration indoors," said Scott.

"I'm more comfortable indoors," said Coghlan. "I like the turns and the bank (of the track), and I use the centrifugal force."

Walker, the New Zealander who won the 1976 gold medal in the 1,500, finished in 3:59.39 to take another step in his goal of becoming the first man to record 100 sub 4-minute miles. He now has 98.

In the women's 1,500, Ruth Wysocki was the winner in a meet record 4:14.2, making up for what she called a poor performance at the Millrose Games.

Asked if the absence of premier middle distance runner Mary Decker cheapened the win, Wysocki said: "It didn't make any difference to me."

"But I'm not as fit as she is right now," she added.

Decker routed her opponents, including Wysocki, at the Millrose Games. Wysocki's time Sunday was 23 seconds better than her Millrose time.

Wysocki downplayed any feud between herself and Decker, but said: "If you want to be America's sweetheart, you can't enhance your image at the expense of an 18-year old's feelings. That's my honest opinion."

In other events, Carol Lewis,

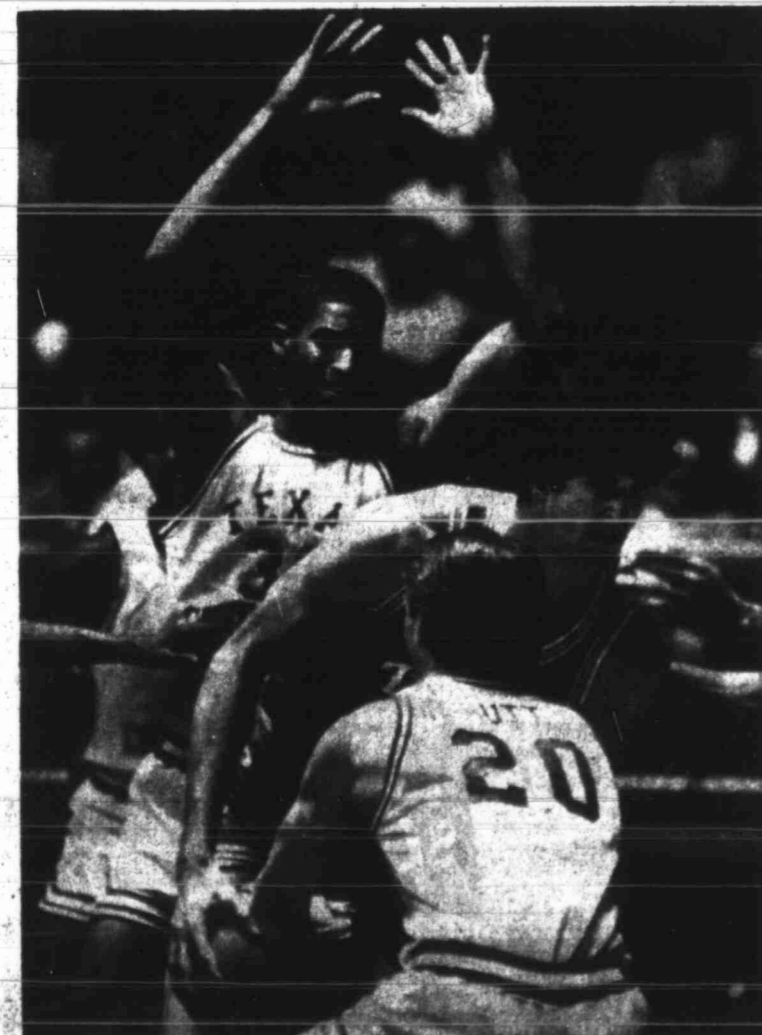

GREG FOSTER starts over the final hurdle during the finals of the 50-meter hurdles in the Bally Invitational Track and Field meet in Rosemont, Illinois. FOSTER broke the world indoor record with a time of 6.30 seconds.

sister of Carl, set a meet record by winning the women's long jump in 21 feet, 8 inches.

Stephanie Hightower won the women's 50 meter hurdles in 6.88 seconds.

Silver and gold medalist Alice Brown won the 50 meter dash in 6.3.

Texas center JOHN BROWNLIE encounters tough going between TCU players DENNIS NUTT and MARC HOUSTON in Saturday's game.

SMU stays on top of SWC standings

The No. 2 ranked Southern Methodist Mustangs ran into "Buzsaw Bubba" in Lubbock to suffer their first Southwest Conference basketball loss but the Texas Aggies presented them with a big present just hours later.

SMU retained the SWC leadership by a game with a 6-1 ledger but the Aggies, Houston and Texas Tech are all tied for second just a game out.

SMU lost 64-63 to Texas Tech Saturday night as Bubba Jennings hit 13 of 18 shots and scored 26 points.

But on a regionally televised Sunday game from College Station, Texas A&M tripped the defending champion Cougars 71-69 behind Don Marbury's 20 points. The red-hot Aggies have now won their last four SWC games.

Alvin Franklin had 31 points for Houston.

Houston and SMU collide on Wednesday night in Dallas in the biggest game of the upcoming week.

TCU whipped Texas 53-45 and Baylor won its first league game with a 65-56 victory over Rice in Houston.

SMU blew a chance to move higher in The Associated Press poll because No. 1 ranked Georgetown was bumped off by St. John's, also by a point.

It was SMU's first loss on the mainland after having fallen to Chaminade in Hawaii on Christmas Day.

"This is probably the biggest win we've had," said Tech Coach Gerald Myers. "On the other hand it's too bad SMU wasn't playing someone else so I could pull for them."

"With Georgetown getting beat they might have had a chance to be No. 1. They've done a lot for our conference and have been great representatives for the SWC. I'm sure they'll still be a force to reckon with this season."

Texas Tech's Tony Benford 10-foot baseline jumper with three seconds left was the Pony killer.

SMU Coach Dave Bliss was philosophical about the loss.

"It's difficult to go undefeated on the road and have everything go your way," said Bliss. "We had our chances and missed some free throws at the end. We had our opportunities."

The Mustangs had to play the final 6:48 without starting center Jon Koncak who fouled out with only six points.

It was only SMU's second loss of the season with 16 victories.

"It was a great win against a super team," said Jennings. "This is the kind of win you think about when you first start playing basketball. I was hot and some of the shots I took weren't that good but they went in."

The TCU-Tech game has been moved to Tuesday night this week for television purposes.

In other Wednesday night action, Texas A&M is at Rice and Arkansas is at Baylor.

On Friday, Texas A&M is at Arkansas and TCU is at Houston.

Tech is at Texas on Saturday.

On Sunday, Rice is at SMU, Houston hosts Illinois and Arkansas is at Georgetown.

Virginia 54, Arkansas 52

Virginia's game plan to beat Arkansas was simple: stop Joe Kleine, the Razorbacks' talented senior center.

"We did not want him to move from side to side across the lane without somebody bumping him, getting in his way to make him change his direction," said Virginia Assistant Coach Dave Odom following Virginia's 54-52 win Sunday. The Cavaliers held Kleine to 14 points, but more important, as Razorbacks' Coach Eddie Sutton noted, they worked their game plan to near perfection.

Sutton said Virginia "did a great job of keeping the ball out of Joe Kleine's hands. They played the zone very well. There were 7 1/2 minutes in the second half when Kleine didn't touch the ball."

"Our idea defensively was to try to limit the number of times Joe Kleine caught the ball," Odom said of the former Olympian who entered the game averaging 23.8 points. "We knew he would get his shots, but we thought if we limited the number of times he caught the ball, he might have to rush the shots he did get."

It was the second win in 24 hours for the Cavaliers, who dropped Wake Forest 58-56 Saturday.

"Without any kind of preparation, I thought we did a real good job," said Odom, who is handling the coaching duties with Jim Larranaga while Terry Holland, Virginia's head coach, is confined to the University of Virginia Medical Center for an intestinal problem.

Sutton said he "went out to the hospital today to see Coach Holland. I told him that it would be a three or four-point ballgame one way or another. He has some butterflies, but he seems to be in good spirits."

Virginia senior guard Tim Mullen earned four of his team-high 13 points at the line in the final 17 seconds to seal the win, which left Virginia at 10-9. Tom Sheehey added 12 points for the Cavaliers, all in the first half.

Arkansas, falling to 13-7, got a game-high 18 points from Charles Balentine. Kleine pulled down 14 rebounds.

Virginia opened up a 44-36 margin on a Jim Miller tip-in with 8:48 left in the game.

Wadkins streaks to LA win

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lanny Wadkins has a reputation as a streak player.

Recent success notwithstanding, he denies it.

"I've won 14 tournaments and more than $2 million. If that's a streak, it's a pretty good one," he said Sunday after a run-away, record-setting triumph in the Los Angeles Open golf tournament, his second victory in a three-week-old PGA Tour season.

"I don't think I'm a streak player at all. I know I have that reputation. But last year was the only time I've been completely healthy for a full season and gone through the year without winning or without being in the top 10 (money- winners).

"And that was close to being a good year," said Wadkins, who played well most of the season, won $198,996 and was runner-up in the PGA national championship.

"Actually, the PGA may have been a turning point for me. I was awfully disappointed, but I told Penny (his wife) we were just going to take it from there and make 1985 the biggest year I've ever had."

Wadkins paused for a moment, let the hint of a smile play across his face, and added:

"I've got an awfully good start on it."

Wadkins, who said he is playing about as well as he ever has, fired an aggressive, 7-under-par 64 in the final round and won the Los Angeles title by 7 strokes, the largest winning margin on the Tour in more than two years.

More significantly, it gave Wadkins a 264 total, 20 under par, six shots better than anyone ever before had played the tough Riviera Country Club layout, long considered one of this country's premier tests of tournament golf.

"To play Riviera 20 under par, well, I'm almost speechless," Wadkins said. "It's something I'll remember for a long time."

The victory was worth $72,000 from the total purse of $400,000 and lifted his earnings for the young season to $172,350. It also enabled the 35-year-old Wadkins to become only the ninth player to go beyond $2 million in career earnings.

Wadkins won the Bob Hope Classic that opened the Tour three weeks ago. In that one, he had to come from four shots back with five holes to go to the Craig Stadler, then struggled through five holes of sudden death before winning.

"This one was as easy as that one was tough."

It was, simply, no contest. Wadkins started the final round two shots in front, and was never even tied.

He nailed it down with a string of four consecutive birdies beginning on the ninth hole and ending with a short-iron approach that came to within two inches of being eagle-2 on the 12th.

That gave him a 7-shot lead with six to play and he brought it home in style, finishing with a card that showed no bogeys, no 5s and reduced the rest of it to a fight for second.

"It's a funny thing about a big lead," said Wadkins, one of the game's most aggressive players. "The more of a lead I have, the more of a lead I want. I just kept the pedal to the metal."

Hal Sutton gained the No. 2 spot with an 18-hole birdie that lifted him one shot in front of Corey Pavin. Sutton, who hasn't won since taking the 1983 PGA national championship at Riviera, had a closing 69 and a 271 total. Pavin was 70-272.

Stadler came on with a 66 and was tied at 273 with Chip Beck and Gary Koch. Beck played the last 18 in 70, Koch in par 71.

Calvin Peete, winner of the Phoenix Open, was well back at 70-278. Jack Nicklaus was 71-279 and Tom Watson 72-281.

Bird delivers gift win

Larry Bird, who put himself in the National Basketball Association All-Star game with his all-around excellence this season, gave K.C. Jones a ticket to Indianapolis with one stroke of brilliance.

The coach of the Eastern Conference in the All-Star game in Indianapolis Feb. 10 is determined by which team has the best record after games of Jan. 27. Before Boston met Portland Sunday, both the Celtics and the Philadelphia 76ers were 35-8.

With three seconds to go, Portland took a 127-126 lead on a basket by Clyde Drexler. But Bird connected on a dagger from deep in the corner as the final buzzer sounded, giving him 48 points and the Celtics a 128-127 triumph.

A loss by the Celtics would have sent 76ers Coach Billy Cunningham to the All-Star game, but Bird's basket means Jones will go instead.

"It means a lot to me to have K.C. as the coach," Bird said. "I'd rather play in the All-Star Game with my own coach on the bench."

"I could have used the three days off, but Larry messed it up by hitting that shot," Jones said kidding. "But if he can hit a shot from behind the backboard the least I can do is to go to Indiana."

In the only other NBA game, Detroit tripped Washington 115-105 and Milwaukee beat San Antonio 106-93.

Bird said a severe angle made him think he had little chance to make the game-winner, but he had no time to adjust his position.

"I took what they gave me, but at first I thought it was going to hit the side of the backboard," he said. "It was a fadeaway, not a great shot."

Everyone else who saw it disagreed.

"The angle behind the glass made it an incredible shot," Celtics guard Danny Ainge said.

"That shot says everything about Larry," Boston's M.L. Carr said. "The game meant a lot to K.C. and the organization and everyone was saying it was over. But Larry would not be denied. The guy gave 100 per cent all day."

"Obviously, the shot was not impossible for him," Portland Coach Jack Ramsay added. "He's the best player in the league, one of the best of all time. There's nothing he doesn't do extremely well."

Bird hit 17 of 28 field-goal attempts, including a pair of three-point bombs, and all 12 free throws in equalling his scoring high for the season. He also grabbed 10 rebounds.

Robert Parish added 30 points for the Celtics, who are now 20-2 at home.

JOHN MCENROE pushes back a television cameraman and his camera that he felt came too close him at courtside of the U.S. Pro Indoor finals. MCENROE beat MILOSLAV MERCIR 6-3, 7-6, 6-1.

McEnroe nets 4th title

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Top-seeded John McEnroe, nearly forced into a fourth set by newcomer Miloslav Mecir, says a change in his style of play helped him pull off his fourth straight U.S. Pro Indoor tennis title.

"If something isn't working, you don't have to bang your head against the wall," McEnroe said Sunday after earning the $54,000 first prize with a 6-3, 7-6, 6-1 victory over the 20-year-old Czechoslovakian.

McEnroe, 25, the U.S. Open and Wimbledon champion, had trouble with the unseeded Mecir only in the second set of the $300,000 tournament when he fell behind 5-1 after twice having his service broken.

McEnroe said he decided to stay back and rally and instead of rushing the net on Mecir, a pro for three years.

"I think it threw him off. And I think he got demoralized after I won the tie-breaker," McEnroe said.

McEnroe, ranked No. 1 in the world, broke Mecir's service twice to get to 5-5, held service and then came back from 0-3 in the tie-breaker to win the set.

Mecir, who advanced to the finals after an upset over Jimmy Connors, ranked No. 2 in the world, said he wasn't bothered by McEnroe's change of style.

"I was bothered by him protesting calls. I lost concentration," said the Czech, whose $27,000 second prize was more than half of what he earned last year.

McEnroe did not formally protest during the match, although several times he pointed to spots where he felt a ball had landed out when called good.

Mecir, ranked No. 60 in the world, said, "I had a chance to win the second set and didn't. That makes me a little bit sad."

But he said he was satisfied. "I didn't expect to get to the final," said Mecir.

McEnroe admitted that trailing, 5-1, he expected to the match to reach four sets.

"Maybe not 100 percent, but in my mind I was going to lose the set," he said. "I had to prepare myself to keep playing."

McEnroe said that he hurt his right knee in the second game of the second set but that he doesn't think it's serious.

"I really don't know what happened... It collapsed a bit. It hurt for a couple of games. I had trouble moving and changing direction. Then, it let up," he said.

"I'll have somebody look at it since I have three weeks off," he added.

Mecir defeated two other seeded players, Joakim Nystrom (6) and Ramesh Krishnan (13) en route to his confrontation with McEnroe.

McEnroe, who didn't lose a set in the week-long tournament, defeated Marty Davis, Brad Gilbert, fifth-seeded Yannick Noah and Scott Davis.

McEnroe said his goals this year were, "to get as good as I can. If I do that I will win a lot of matches... obviously the French and Wimbledon." McEnroe has never won the French Open.

"The Grand Slam (U.S. Open, Wimbledon, French and Australian opens) isn't that important to me," he said. "People keep talking about it. It would be nice, but I am happier now than I have ever been before. I want to enjoy the game more."

State water districts slate negotiations

Meeting decides Stacy proposal's fate

General manager Owen Ivie

Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau
AUSTIN — Negotiations are scheduled to resume today between officials of two state water districts in talks that could determine the fate of the proposed Stacy Dam reservoir project in West Texas.

Owen Ivie, general manager of the Big Spring-based Colorado River Municipal Water District, said Monday morning he is flying to Austin for an afternoon meeting with officials of the Lower Colorado River Authority.

Lower Colorado River Authority board members, last Friday, instructed their general manager to reach a prompt settlement on the issue. Ivie said he expects that a compromise will be reached this week.

Discussions, sources have indicated, have involved the prospect of the Lower Colorado River Authority relinquishing some of its unused downstream water rights. In exchange, the Austin-based authority is reportedly pursuing a guarantee that the Colorado River Municipal Water District would release water to the Highland Lakes chain in times of drought.

But, Ivie noted, a settlement would not bring an end to efforts to win final approval of the project. The Texas Water Commission, he said, must issue another permit for the proposed project.

The river authority, until last week, waged a long-standing crusade to halt the Big Spring district's plans for Stacy, arguing that water rights for the reservoir are owned downstream.

The Texas Supreme Court sided with the Lower Colorado River Authority late last year. Ever since, West Texas legislators have threatened to oppose a statewide water plan now under legislative review, unless legal roadblocks surrounding the project are removed.

Stacy Dam, as envisioned by proponents, would supply municipal water to a large patch of West Texas, including San Angelo, Big Spring and possibly Abilene.

Senate against funding for nuclear dump site

Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau
AUSTIN — The Texas Senate passed a resolution Monday urging that state funds not be spent to purchase a dump site for low-level nuclear waste in South Texas.

Approval of that resolution, sponsored by state Sen. Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi, came only minutes after several Texas legislators held a news conference to lambast consideration of a proposed 365-acre site in McMullen County about 60 miles south of San Antonio.

The resolution will be sponsored in the House by state Rep. Larry Don Shaw, D-Big Spring. The resolution directs the Low-Level Radioactive Waste Disposal Authority not to spend money to purchase a dump site until the Texas Legislature has studied the issue.

An earlier legislative proposal, filed by state Sen. John Traeger, D-Seguin and state Rep. Hugo Berlanga, D-Corpus Christi, urges the state not to issue an operating permit for the site until July 1987.

A vote on the McMullen County site is expected Feb. 11 by directors of the Low-Level Radioactive Waste Disposal Authority.

But Truan and the other lawmakers — state state Reps. Shaw, Ted Roberts, R-Corpus Christi, and Ernestine Glossbrenner, D-Alice — believe the site selection process is moving too rapidly.

They complain the McMullen County site now under consideration poses a health threat to the region because it is located in the Nueces River watershed, and about 12 miles from the upper end of Choke Canyon reservoir.

The contingent presented resolutions adopted by the Corpus Christi City Council, the Nueces County Commissioners and the Coastal Bend Council of Governments in opposition to the McMullen site.

"We are extremely concerned that the agency responsible for the site" selection, Truan said, "has determined to locate such a site in an area that would endanger the water supply for the entire region," or about half a million people.

"Texas is moving too fast in the area of licensing this site," Truan said.

Material disposed of at a low-level site would include clothing contaminated in the practice of nuclear medicine in Texas hospitals and tools contaminated in nuclear power plants that may begin operation in Texas, but not highly radioactive materials such as spent nuclear fuel rods.

Shaw, who helped establish the low-level authority four years ago to locate a dump site, now said revisions must be made and skids applied to the process.

Shaw said he was unsure when he would present his resolution to the House for consideration.
