Congress views Reagan's budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan today asked Congress to exhibit "political courage" and adopt a low-growth $973.7 billion budget for next year that would freeze, trim or eliminate scores of familiar domestic programs.

But he acknowledged widespread congressional reservations about his budget and joked that he would "settle for a tie." Much of the congressional criticism comes from the proposed $30 billion increase in defense spending at the same time domestic spending would be chopped nearly $40 billion.

It recommends sharp reductions in mass transit, housing and student aid; an end to the revenue-sharing program that turns federal tax dollars back to state and local governments without strings; termination of the federal subsidy of the Amtrak rail-passenger system, and a 5 percent pay cut for all federal civilian workers.

The Reagan budget, which he portrayed as austere, would fail to meet his own earlier target of halving the federal deficit by 1988.

The proposal, which Reagan formally presented to congressional leaders today, keeps him on a collision course with Capitol Hill, where leaders of both parties have said for weeks that cuts in popular programs, already slashed during Reagan's first term, would be difficult to enact without accompanying spending restraint in defense programs.

Reagan, asked at the presentation about House Democrats' charge his budget was "dead," said: "I've just brought it back to life."

But House Democratic leader Jim Wright of Texas, asked if Reagan would get his budget, replied, "Some variation thereof."

Reagan repeated the phrase and added:

"I just depends upon how close we all come. Right now, I'd settle for a tie."

And, pressed again on whether he would agree to defense cuts, responded, "We'll have to talk about that."

On Capitol Hill, Sen. Lawton Chiles of Florida, ranking Democrat on the Senate Budget Committee, called the budget "a wall without windows. It tells us what we're up against, but affords no vision."

Chiles made the statement as he released a Senate Democratic staff analysis of the budget proposal that challenges the president's contention his proposals would reduce the nation's deficits in increments each year.

"Deficits remain high. The future stays clouded," Chiles said. Earlier, Republican and Democratic congressional leaders were both quick to criticize the budget proposal.

"The president, I must say, is in a fairly comfortable position," Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole of Kansas said. "He says, 'Don't touch Social Security. Don't touch defense. Don't raise taxes. And you can't touch interest on the debt.' That doesn't leave a great deal," Dole said.

"Those of us in the Congress have to maybe look beyond some of the president's promises of the campaign," he added.

Wright said the proposed budget shows "a blind spot on the part of Mr. Reagan" and Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger. "When they speak of spending, they don't mean military spending. When they speak of shrinking government, they don't think of the Pentagon as a part of government," Wright said.

While "still a far cry from a balanced budget," Reagan said his spending outline is "a significant step in the right direction" and a "second installment" on the deficit-reduction effort begun last year.

Paying the price of child support

State studies growing problem

By SCOTT FITZGERALD Staff Writer

Texas is notorious for some of its murky reputations.

In legal circles, the state is now being branded as a haven for persons dodging their child support payments.

"I don't think Texas should have a reputation as harboring those who are not able to make child support payments," said Nancy Oseasohn, the state's assistant attorney general.

What riles Ms. Oseasohn — and concerns attorneys or law officials who handle divorce cases that involve children — is enforcing court orders that require someone to make support payments.

Big Spring attorney Wayne Burns said that since divorce has become more socially acceptable in our society, child support cases are on the rise.

"There has been a trend in the last couple of years to strengthen enforcement laws regarding child support and give better remedies to a custodial person who has the child," Burns said.

A recent state law that entitles a person's wages to be garnished or assigned to a custodial parent is an example of enforcing payment.

District Court Judge James Gregg said that the state Legislature now in session will have to make some decision on accepting new federal laws regarding garnishment.

Gregg said that the state's attorney general, Jim Mattox, is a proponent of child support causes such as the Department of Human Resource's Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) program. Ms. Oseasohn said new "wage assignment" federal laws will make it easier to give automatically a person's wages to the parent with the child.

Garnishing wages is one option to collect child support payments. For the dependant person living on moderate means, however, starting the legal process can be frustrating. Especially when the financially responsible parent moves out of state.

Ms. Oseasohn said that all states recently accepted a law known as the Uniform Reciprocal Enforcement of Support Act (URESA).

"The concern is for a custodial person living in one jurisdiction to obtain payments from one living in another," Ms. Oseasohn said.

For example, if a Texas man making child support payments moves to Oklahoma and stops sending money, Oklahoma officials are empowered to garnish his paycheck and send the money back to Texas.

The dependant parent files a petition through either his local district court or attorney general's office and papers are sent to the appropriate legal jurisdiction in the other parent's new home.

The jurisdiction that receives the petition is then supposed to enforce it.

"Maybe it will get handled and maybe it will not. Most states should cooperate with us," Ms. Oseasohn said.

Howard County attorney Tim Yeats said interstate cooperation is "a nice thought, but only two or three states do it the way it is supposed to be done."

Yeats said the county attorney's office is limited in providing manpower and time to enforce such petitions.

"With the limited resources we have," Yeats said, "it's hard to pour resources and time into cases that benefit out-of-state and out-of-county residents." Yeats said he intends to enforce some petitions, especially those involving parents who are far behind in child support payments.

"I sympathize with mothers who need child support payments, but if we got into that business, it would be full time," Yeats said.

Ms. Oseasohn, who specializes in child support law, said she tries to prosecute cases she receives from other states.

"I see it as work that is important and needs to get done," Ms. Oseasohn said.

Snow predicted for WT area

Big Spring-Permian Basin roads, barely thawed out from this weekend's storm, face another wintry blast of ice and snow late tonight and Tuesday.

A winter storm watch has set for Tuesday for the area, when a cold front is expected to move south into the area from the Panhandle. Snow storms, only isolated flurries and showers today, are expected to drop a few inches on the Howard County area.

Although weather forecasters have not stated how many inches they expect to fall here, the weather service broadcast warned of a "possible heavy snow," and listed precautions to be taken in case travelers were stranded on the road in a blizzard.

Forecasts were predicting a 40 percent chance of snow after midnight Tuesday and a 60 percent chance during the day tomorrow. The low is expected to be in the 20s, with a 10 to 20 mile an hour northerly wind sending the chill factor plummeting.

Most roads were clear, with isolated patches of ice still remaining at the side of some roads and on bridges and overpasses. However, travelers were warned to try and be off the road by tomorrow, and were warned to travel slowly because of the possibility of remaining ice patches.

City streets were plagued with minor accidents caused by the ice and snow this weekend, but only one person was injured in a motor vehicle accident since 2 p.m. Saturday.

The woman, a passenger in a two-vehicle accident in the 400 block of State, about 10 feet south of today after many closed or shut their doors early Friday and Saturday, but they could be closed again tomorrow, depending on the amount of snowfall.

So far, Big Spring has received 91 inches of precipitation — mostly snow — since the first of the year, according to the U.S. Big Spring Experiment Station. Their figures show .07 inches for the month.

Firemen, who answered a large number of fires and smoke scare calls this weekend, are asking people using space heaters or electric heaters to be sure they are not placed too close to bedding, furniture and other items that could ignite.

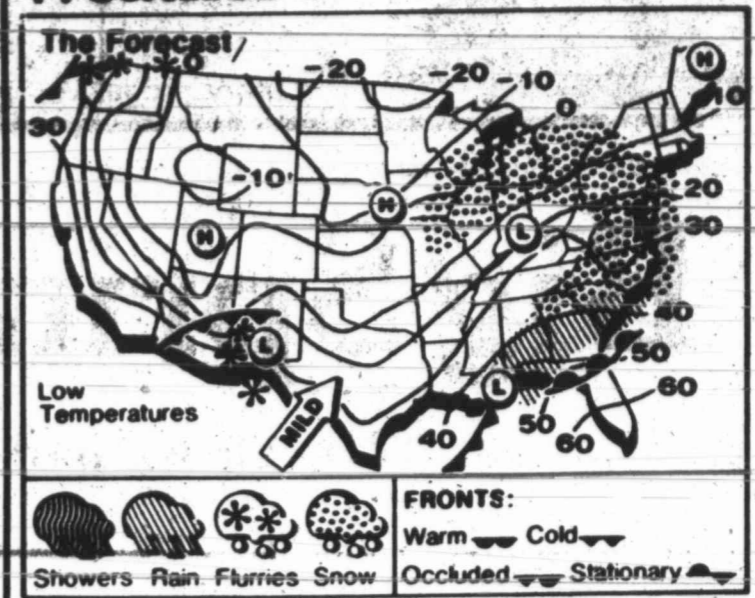

Elsewhere in Texas, freeways in San Antonio were closed and residents were urged to stay at home until midmorning today because of a layer of ice left on the highways by a freezing rain that fell throughout the early morning hours.

Major highways out of the city were open, "but potentially hazardous," state highway officials warned.

A traveler's advisory was in effect for all of the Hill County and South Central Texas today because of the icy road conditions, caused by freezing rain and light snow throughout the region.

Light snow was also reported in scattered areas of Northeast Texas, the South Plains and the Panhandle, and weather officials warned that the state probably will be hit by another round of snow and ice before it can thaw out from last week's winter storm.

2 released from county jail

Two Big Spring men were released from Howard County jail following their arrest Saturday morning by Big Spring police.

Stephen Flood, 24, of 3706 Calvin and Scott Johnson, 26, of 1206 Dixie were each charged for driving while intoxicated (DWI).

They were released on $1,000 bond amounts set for each of them. Jerome W. Whitt, 53, of Desert Hills Trailer Park was released from county jail on $500 bond, after being charged with assault.

Karen Rogers, 20, of 2107 S. Gregg served one day in jail for her DWI judgment. Jimmy Duane Latham, 29, of 800 Nolan served one day in jail for his DWI judgment.

Big Spring police transferred Andrew R. Grisham, 18, of 2802 Navajo to county jail after he was arrested for DWI, unlawfully carrying a weapon and possession of marijuana. He was released on bonds totaling $3,500.

Floyd Eugene Breedlove, 56, of Snyder remains in custody of Howard County jail following his arrest for revocation of probation on a prior felony charge. No bond was set.

A Texas Department of Safety trooper arrested Oscar P. Velasquez, 23, of Coahoma for DWI. He was released on $1,000 bond set by Judge Lewis Hefflin.

Firemen battle residence blazes

By KEELY COGHLAN
Staff Writer

Big Spring firemen this weekend extinguished fires at four residences, one business and an alley, at least two of which were caused by heaters.

No one was injured in the fires, but flames and smoke caused almost $19,500 damage to buildings and property, according to department reports.

One bedroom and its contents in a three-bedroom brick house at 2600 Albrook were "heavily damaged" by a fire Friday evening. Firemen arrived at the scene at 6:54 p.m., four minutes after receiving the call, to find the bedroom "engulfed in flames," according to the report.

They also found flames coming out of the double windows of the house, occupied by John W. Aken, the report stated. The 10 men called to the fire used 100 gallons of water to knock down the flames and subdue the fire.

In addition to fire damage to the bedroom, the rest of the house suffered smoke damage, according to the report. Damage to the house, owned by J.A. Barnes of 125 Jonesboro, was estimated at $8,000.

The fire was probably caused by a small electric heater igniting bedding that was too close to the heater, the report states.

A house fire early Sunday afternoon destroyed both bedrooms of a wood frame house at 111 N.W. 12th and caused an estimated $7,000 damage to the building.

Seven firemen, responding to a 1:05 p.m. Sunday alarm, used 500 gallons of water to put out the fire, according to department reports. When firemen arrived at the scene, they found smoke coming out of the south door, windows and eaves of the house owned by Joe Bailey Johnson.

The entire house suffered heavy smoke and heat damage, according to the report.

The cause of the fire is under investigation. The three units that responded to the fire alarm were cleaned and returned to duty at 2:26 p.m.

The living room and kitchen of a wood frame house at 1615 Cardinal were damaged in a fire Saturday morning, according to a report.

Damage to the house was estimated at $4,000. Two units from the department arrived at the scene at 1:41 a.m. to find a fire in the living, where flames were burning in the room's overstuffed furniture.

Firemen used 100 gallons of water to douse the fire, which also caused smoke damage to most of the house. The units had been cleaned and returned to duty by 2:40 a.m.

Answering another call early Sunday morning, firemen found the outside wall of a stucco-wood lath frame house at 202B S. Goliad in flames.

The nine men answering the alarm arrived at the scene at 1:13 a.m. and extinguished the fire, which was located in the wall of the house, with water. Firemen returned their units to duty at 2:02 a.m. Cause of the fire is still under investigation.

Grand jury to review shooting investigation

By SCOTT FITZGERALD
Staff Writer

A grand jury which convenes Feb. 11 will review the investigations into the shooting death of a San Angelo youth last November in addition to its normal criminal caseload, 118th District Court Judge Jim Gregg said.

"This is a special session though it's a regular grand jury because an outside prosecutor has been selected to review the O.D. Majors shooting case," Gregg said.

District Attorney Rick Hamby said in a news release on Jan. 11 that the Texas Prosecutor Council had assigned Reynaldo Cantu to review the Nov. 26, 1984, shooting death of a San Angelo youth by Howard County sheriff's deputy O.D. Majors following a high-speed car chase.

Cantu is a former district attorney of Cameron County and served as felony prosecutor for the 197th District Court.

Grand jury commissioners met Friday afternoon in Howard County Courthouse and selected 30 names of possible grand jurors for the next term of six months.

Those persons selected will be notified by mail and asked to report to the county courthouse Monday.

District clerk Peggy Crittenden said that "the first 12 on the list that's qualified and shows up," would be selected to the grand jury.

Gregg said for a person to qualify as a juror, he or she must meet the criteria of a state statute that requires a juror to be a resident of the county, a registered voter, of sound mind and good moral character.

The juror must not be under investigation for a felony nor under indictment of theft or any other misdemeanor, Gregg said.

Persons who serve on the commission and select potential jurors are appointed by Gregg.

Names of eligible jurors and commissioners were not released from the district clerk's office.

Hamby had requested to the prosecutor's council that a special prosecutor be assigned to assure that the question of objectivity would not be an issue when the shooting case was reviewed.

Police Beat

Vandals continue rampage

More than $600 damage was done to a 1978 Oldsmobile Delta 88 this weekend when vandals broke three windows and damaged one of the car's doors, according to police reports.

Kendall Green of P.O. Box 362 told police someone damaged the car between 10:36 p.m. Saturday and 8:30 a.m. Sunday while it was parked in the 100 block of Airbase.

In addition, an AM-FM stereo worth $150 was taken from the car and the dashboard was damaged.

Steve Christian of 1107 S. Goliad told police that someone stole his pet pit bulldog at 8:45 a.m. Sunday. The brown bulldog was valued at $150.

Margarita Alvarez of 827 W. Sixth told police someone had used her yellow 1980 Toyota pickup truck without permission at 2 p.m. Saturday. The car, which was recovered, was valued at $4,000.

Billie Carr, an auditor for the Mid-Continent Motel on the north service road of Interstate Highway 20 told police that someone took $50 cash from the hotel Friday.

David Watts of Gail Route told police that someone took $59 at the Cinema Theater at College Park Shopping Center at 501 Birdwell. The theft occurred between 9:25 and 11 p.m. Sunday.

Tieng Nguyen of Odessa told police someone broke the glass windows at his house at 2600 Chanute between noon Saturday and 4 p.m. Sunday. The damage was estimated at $75.

Adela Muniz of Route 2 told police that someone stole her tan purse at 8:30 p.m. Saturday when she was at 209 N.W. Second. The purse, valued at $25, contained $135 in cash and her identification.

Phone call nabs suspect

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. — A telephone tip led to the arrest of a 36-year-old man who was arrested and charged with the murder, kidnapping and rape of an 8-year-old Chinese orphan girl found hanging from a tree, authorities said.

George Richard Fisher of Hillsborough was arrested Sunday and charged with rape, kidnapping and first-degree murder in the death Wednesday of Jean Har-Kar Fewel, said State Bureau of Investigation Agent Dan Gilbert.

The girl, an orphan from Hong Kong, had been in the United States for a year and was being adopted by Tom Fewel and his wife, Joy Wood.

Prison back to normal

PENDLETON, Ind. — After searching the entire Indiana Reformatory for weapons, officials are concentrating on returning the maximum-security facility to normal after a 15-hour standoff in which inmates held three people hostage.

Nine inmates involved in the incident Friday have been segregated from the prison population and officials are reviewing procedures used to defuse the uprising, state Correction Commissioner Gordon Faulkner said Sunday.

Five of the seven guards stabbed in the uprising remained hospitalized Sunday and one of the hostages, a counselor, said some of the inmates "kept us alive" when others held homemade knives to the captives' throats.

2 held on $1 million bond

CHICAGO — Two men charged with murder and arson for profit and held on $1 million bail apiece had an accomplice who may have fled to Korea after a blaze that killed three firefighters, authorities say.

Suk J. Kim, 36, of Skokie, and Jang Han Bae, 35, were charged Saturday with three counts of murder and one of arson in the Friday fire. Cook County Judge James Meeghan reduced bond Sunday for both men from $5 million.

Bae, of Streamwood, owned Vicstar Electronics, which was housed in the building that collapsed during the fire, killing the three firefighters and injuring a fourth, said Detective Lawrence Poli.

Taking fire precautions

BERKELEY, Calif. — Authorities don't know whether only one person is responsible for a string of 19 fires that have caused more than $900,000 damage since Dec. 29, but they're taking steps to cut down the risk.

Firefighters last week distributed 5,000 fliers warning residents to dispose of combustibles properly and that each could help start a fire or make it spread. No one has been injured in the blazes.

"If it is the same person, we have a real sickie out there," said Fire Marshal Raymond Hiatt. "I'd like to nail him and give him some help."

A head carved in the stone guards the entrance to a pre-Incan tomb within Rio Abieso National Park in the eastern Andes in Peru. University of Colorado archaeologists have entered into an agreement with the Peruvian government to study the ruin they found last year.

History lesson

Archaeologists probe pre-Incan civilization

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — A five-year study by University of Colorado archaeologists hopes to learn the secrets of a 1,400-year-old pre-Incan civilization hidden deep in the Amazon jungle of Peru.

The university on Thursday announced its exclusive contract with the Peruvian government for the first scientific study of Gran Pajatén, on the eastern slopes of the Andes.

Discovered by farmers in 1963, the 80-acre site near the village of Pataz contains 18 well-preserved buildings, believed to date from 500 A.D. to 1500 A.D., decorated with stone mosaic figures.

"The people of Pataz are diligent about guarding the area, and that's one of the reasons the antiquities have been so well protected," said university archaeologist Tom Lennon, the project's co-director.

Lennon first visited the area in July 1984 with three other Boulder explorers, and they found traces of a prehistoric road and pottery that indicates contact with the expansionist Incas, yet clearly predates that civilization, said Lennon.

"There are unlooted burials of an unknown, unnamed people, located in inaccessible places," he said.

Jane Wheeler, a CU anthropologist, said Gran Pajatén comprises only a small part of the evidence of past civilizations within the 1,060 square-mile of Rio Abieso National Park, a national preserve established in 1983.

"We're intrigued by the evidence of dense human habitation, because such jungle areas are apparently unoccupied in other parts of the world," she said.

Working with a remote sensing group at Lima's National Agrarian University, CU will be asking the U.S. National Aeronautics and Space Administration to help with a satellite survey of the park. The survey will evaluate the area's resources and might locate other archaeological sites.

Gran Pajatén also might be the rainiest spot on earth and researchers will try to obtain precise measurements of rainfall, Ms. Wheeler said.

Unofficial measurements taken in the past at the 8,000-foot elevation suggest that 1,500 to 2,300 inches of rain falls there each year — far exceeding the record rainfall of 1,041 inches at the acknowledged wettest spot in the world, Cherrapunji, India.

Khadafy stalls prisoners' release

LONDON (AP) — Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy's regime today postponed for at least 24 hours the release of four Britons held there for nine months, citing "unforeseen circumstances," the British consul in Tripoli said.

Hours earlier Terry Waite, the archbishop of Canterbury's special envoy who negotiated the men's release, was quoted by the British Broadcasting Corp. as saying he was "cautiously optimistic" they would be released early today.

But Consul Hugh Dunnachie said in a telephone interview with Press Association, the British domestic news agency: "The statement from the Libyans said it was due to unforeseen circumstances and I don't know any more than that."

Police hunt for bomb suspect

69 Americans injured in bar blast in Athens

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Police launched a nationwide hunt today for a man in connection with a bomb blast at a bar in which 80 people, including 69 American military personnel and their dependents, were injured.

Police said the man was seen entering Bobby's Bar in the suburb of Glyfada before the Saturday night explosion and was described by witnesses as being about 25 to 30 years old, dark-skinned and carrying an attache case. Customs officials at Athens Airport, ports and border points were alerted in the event the man tried to leave the country.

Most of the 80 people injured were released after receiving emergency first aid treatment at the nearby U.S. Air Force's Hellenkin Air Base adjacent to Athens airport.

Thirteen U.S. servicemen and dependents, among the 69 Americans wounded when the bomb exploded, were airlifted Sunday to a U.S. base in West Germany for treatment, U.S. and Greek officials said.

Greek police said seven Greeks, a West German and an Ethiopian also were reported injured when the time bomb went off under one of the tables at Bobby's. Police said today two other people were treated and left in the confusion, and it was uncertain what their nationality was.

An anonymous caller who said he represented the "National Front" claimed responsibility for the blast in a call Sunday night to the Athens daily Eleftherotipa. He criticized the United States for the "continuing situation" on Cyprus, where Turkish troops occupy 33 percent of the island.

Some Greeks feel Washington has not done enough to pressure NATO ally Turkey into removing its troops from Cyprus, which Turkey invaded in 1974 following a coup by the Cypriot national guard, led by Greek army officers. Turkey claimed it was protecting the ethnic Turkish Cypriot minority against the Greek Cypriot majority.

The caller said the group would "strike again where Greeks and Americans frequent."

A police official who asked not to be identified said: "We have our doubts as to the authenticity of the so-called National Front. It's totally unknown to us but we are intensifying our investigation because we consider these people extremely dangerous. They struck without warning and went right for blood."

Police said they found parts of a wrist watch and wire in the ruins of the bar, indicating the explosion was caused by a home-made device.

The conservative opposition daily Apoyevmatini claimed today that Premier Andreas Papandreu's socialist administration was shaken by the incident "because it is unable to stop unknown terrorists from committing bomb attacks to express his government's anti-Americanism."

Papandreu came to power in 1981 on an anti-U.S. platform. The explosion collapsed part of the bar's ceiling, smashed chairs and barstools, blew doors off their hinges and showered the street with glass. Some of the 200 patrons, their clothes scorched, were trampled in the rush to get out.

Leader labels problems

BANGKOK, Thailand — Vietnam's Communist Party chief Le Duan has acknowledged his country suffers from the party's "shortcomings and mistakes" in economic and other affairs, the Vietnam News Agency reported.

In a speech marking the party's 55th anniversary, Le Duan also called for strengthening ties with the Soviet Union and improving relations with China and Southeast Asian countries, VNA reported Sunday.

VNA, monitored in Bangkok, said Le Duan made the remarks Saturday in the Vietnamese capital Hanoi before senior state and party leaders and diplomats of socialist countries.

French report bombing

PARIS — A bomb explosion destroyed three cars and damaged a dozen others outside the French ministry that oversees the troubled territory of New Caledonia.

There were no injuries and no group claimed responsibility for the Sunday bombing outside the Ministry for Overseas Departments and Overseas Territories.

Police said the bomb was in a car parked next to the ministry building in central Paris. The explosion ignited a fire that spread to two nearby cars. Flying debris shattered windows in surrounding buildings and damaged other parked vehicles.

Six killed in plane crash

CANNET-DES-MAURES, France — A single-engine plane carrying a pilot and five members of a skydiving club crashed into a hill near the French Riviera, killing all aboard, police said.

The cause of the crash, which occurred soon after takeoff Sunday, was under investigation. Police said the plane exploded after it hit the hill.

The skydivers were part of the Cannet-des-Maures Parachute Club. In September 1982, 23 members of the club were among 46 people killed near Mannheim, West Germany, when a U.S. Army helicopter carrying skydivers crashed.

Flooding kills 13 people

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil — Heavy rains and floods killed 13 people over the weekend in Rio de Janeiro state, raising the death toll from three weeks' of heavy rains in three states to at least 171, according to official reports.

Five people were killed in flooding that swept through shantytowns on the outskirts of the city of Rio de Janeiro late Saturday, state civil defense worker Claudio Torres said.

Eight people were killed in the interior town of Tres Rios, 86 miles north of Rio, he said.

In the past month, more than 50,000 people have been driven from their homes in an area of southeastern Brazil covering about 35,000 square miles, roughly the size of the state of Maine.

Opinion

They're no match for a human mind

It might be an English student's dream — a computer that can detect grammatical errors, correct spelling mistakes and even find synonyms.

A new generation of word processors will soon be on the market. For people who have access to the machines, writing may never be the same. IBM and Wang both are entering the realm of computerized dictionaries and thesauruses to help writers over linguistic rough spots.

IBM already has a program called Epistle. It catches simple grammatical errors, such as subject-verb disagreements. Wang is taking the process a step further with a program that is designed to spot archaic expressions, trite phrases and other departures from good writing.

To some people, computers with the grammatical skills of a Miss Grundy may seem like a bad thing, a major step toward a machine-dominated society. Yet research shows not just the amazing potential of computers but the uniqueness of human language.

A computer can be programmed to handle straight facts, to spell and construct sentences adeptly and to delete phrases it has been told to delete.

But nothing can match the human mind in its ability to use nuances, metaphors and similies. There is no substitute for human creativity in inventing new words and expressions to describe new objects or situations.

Lacking the essential human ability to imagine, a computer could never write a novel or write about religion. Computers will never take over the language — or the world. The human mind, with its confusion, its unpredictability and its ability to be creative simply can't be reduced to a floppy disk or duplicated in a computer program.

Nations only share interests

Connoisseurs of irony will note that the U.S. government, at the very moment it ponders whether to punish human rights abuses in South Africa by severing economic relations, is preparing to sell military weapons to the government of mainland China. Who could have dreamed 20 years ago that the pillars of detente with the world's biggest communist nation would be erected by Richard Nixon and Ronald Reagan?

There are other paradoxes. During its war against North Vietnam, a Chinese ally which has since fought a war with China, the U.S. was so wary of Mao's regime that it considered building an anti-ballistic missile system to protect against a Chinese nuclear attack. Now it proposes to arm Peking.

When President Nixon first visited China in 1972, naive Americans gushed over the success of Chinese communism. The intervening years have been sobering, furnishing a stream of evidence documenting the crimes of a monumentally tyrannical government.

Despite genuine measures to relax state domination of the economy, China's central government remains thoroughly repressive. Thousands of political prisoners languish in labor camps. "Counter-revolutionary offenses," which the Christian Science Monitor reports can include anything from "befriending a foreigner to selling transcripts of a dissident's trial," were last year made punishable by death.

Washington and Peking nonetheless have drawn closer, thanks to their mutual distrust of the Soviet Union. In diplomacy, the enemy of my enemy is my friend. That's a fact of life the U.S. should exploit where it can. But there are strict limits to American cooperation with China.

The first U.S. interest in China is to constrain the Soviets. Sharing a 7,000-mile border with a hostile power is a chronic worry and expense to Moscow. Remove that threat, and the half-million Soviet troops stationed on that front could be used to bolster its European forces.

U.S. arms can enhance China's military credibility and deter Soviet expansion. They also help to dissuade Peking, if it needs dissuading, from any rapprochement with the Soviets.

But the Reagan administration is right to limit its help to defensive weapons. The agreement reportedly involves torpedoes, devices to detect submarines and guns for ship defense. Weapons that use against attacking tanks and aircraft have also been discussed with the Chinese. Presumably none of these would be advanced equipment.

"Defensive" is a term that should be used gingerly here, since many of these weapons can be used for offensive purposes. An attacking army would have ample use for, say, anti-tank weapons.

But it would need tanks and attack planes more. Weapons like that, or weapons employing sophisticated technology, shouldn't be provided by the United States. Should China ever repudiate its current policies, which isn't hard to imagine, they could be turned against us and our allies. They might also find their way into Soviet hands through North Korea, which has good relations with both Peking and Moscow.

Another danger is that offensive weapons might be used against Taiwan, which Peking still regards as part of China. The chances of an invasion (much less a successful one) are remote, given the importance China places on its relationship with the U.S. But there is no reason to stimulate Peking's territorial appetite.

Limiting our help also would underline an important point: Democracies cannot make reliable alliances with despotic regimes. In extreme emergencies, like World War II, they can fight against the same foe, but their deepest interests are ultimately irreconcilable. Cooperation with the Chinese doesn't require silence or naivete about the nature of their government. It ought to mean encouraging true liberalization, which only recently has become a plausible possibility.

If the U.S. can use China against the Soviets, it should. But no one should regard this government as a friend. The old maxim is especially true here: Nations have no friends, only interests.

Probe stirs Pentagon action

WASHINGTON — I'm always gratified — if frustrated — when the Washington bureaucracy gets wind of one of my investigations and takes action even before I've had a chance to tell you about it.

That's what happened in the case of the Pentagon's asbestos-polluted air.

My associate Indy Badhwar found out that the attic rooms housing the fans that circulate the air breathed by the Pentagon's 25,000 employees are littered with powdered asbestos, pigeon droppings and feathers. Asbestos is known to cause cancer and other lung ailments; pigeons are notorious disease carriers.

But someone apparently spotted my associate as he was being given a secret guided tour of the fan rooms, and reported the sudden interest in the Pentagon attic. Suddenly, after years of potentially malignant neglect, the Pentagon brass began scrambling.

A three-page "fact sheet" was rushed into print and distributed to employees, describing the situation. Makeshift protective coverings were installed to cut down on further pollution of the huge building's ventilation system. And of course an employee who was accused of showing my associate through the fan rooms was put in fear for his job. Inevitably, with all the uproar, someone leaked the asbestos scandal to the Federal Times.

The fan rooms were a sickening sight. Asbestos flakes and powder had accumulated on the floors from the crumbling insulation jackets around the maze of ventilation pipes. Unidentifiable material had flaked off the ceilings. Bird droppings and feathers were scattered next to the intakes through which air is recirculated to the hundreds of Pentagon offices.

In the Pentagon, rank has no privileges in the matter of potentially lethal air. The special fan room that pumps air into Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger's office and his private dining room was covered with bird litter and powdered rubble. In several places, asbestos powder had poured onto the floor from decaying pipe jackets.

"All that tick and crud is surely being picked up by the blowers and being pumped into our offices," said Frederick L. Small, an Air Force civilian manpower expert who has been waging a private crusade against the air pollution.

It's not just the central ventilation system that's dangerous. Small was horrified to discover asbestos insulation in the window air conditioner-heater in his office. These individual units are used in hundreds of Pentagon offices to augment the central heating-cooling system.

When Small complained to his boss, Brig. Gen. Monte D. Montgomery, the general immediately requested a full-scale sampling of the offices in his command, "since this represents a potentially serious health hazard." A report is due shortly.

The General Services Administration has drawn sharp criticism from employee unions for failing to pursue an aggressive asbestos-abatement program. Small put it this way: "GSA is a greater threat to our national security than the Russians are. At least the Russians aren't trying to kill us with asbestos and pigeon-carried diseases."

Footnote: A General Services Administration spokesman said that asbestos levels in the Pentagon are far below federal safety standards, but that steps were being taken to address the problem.

HARRASSMENT, CIA STYLE: In an earlier column, I related how the CIA had tried to obstruct my investigation of the Ronald Rewald case. Now I have learned that others have experienced similar harassment.

Rewald claims he was a CIA operative; he is under indictment for fraud and perjury. He claims the CIA bankrolled his Honolulu-based investment firm as a front for covert operations in the Pacific. The firm eventually collapsed at a loss to investors of $11 million.

Before Rewald was silenced by a court gag order, he was interviewed on videotape by David Taylor of the British Broadcasting Corp. The taping was conducted in great secrecy in a Honolulu hotel room.

The next day, an anonymous caller phoned Taylor's cameraman and asked what time the crew planned to meet Rewald for the second session. But the cameraman's affiliation with the BBC was known only to the other crew members.

The CIA then apparently attempted a "sting operation" to get the videotapes. The agency called the Chicago distributor and demanded the tapes before they were aired, explaining that Rewald had been found dead and the tapes were needed immediately as part of the investigation.

Taylor did some checking. He found that Rewald was very much alive, visiting relatives in Wisconsin.

Another curious incident, which had the fingerprints of the CIA all over it, was reported to me by Melvin Belli, the famed San Francisco attorney. He has filed a multimillion-dollar lawsuit against the CIA in Rewald's behalf.

In the fall of 1983, while CIA officials were secretly negotiating with Rewald to buy his silence, a man showed up in Belli's office claiming authority to negotiate the lawsuit. The mystery man offered the following deal to Belli's associate, Paul Monzone:

Rewald was to check into a psychiatric hospital, from which the CIA would quietly whisk him out the next day. He would be given $50,000 and a new identity. In return, Rewald was to drop the lawsuit and take a vow of silence.

Monzone declined the anonymous offer. Still another mystery has Rewald's lawyers scratching their heads. A former prison official signed an affidavit swearing there was a CIA "contract" out on Rewald's life.

Belli's office mailed the affidavit to the official, with suggested corrections, for the notarized signature. The official completed the affidavit and mailed it back. But the law office received an empty envelope.

Around The Rim

Thanks, OPEC, we needed that

By CHARLIE ALCORN

For as long as I can remember (only a few relevant recollections before 1974) a foreign entity named OPEC, has been wrecking havoc on the United States economy like some Iranian terrorist in a three-piece suit. This most famous of cartels (synonymous with market cutthroats), comprised of oil exporting nations on four continents, has been in my household vocabulary since the '74 Embargo — the year those greedy oil moguls kicked sand in the face of the Seven Sister's oligarchy.

In the process, OPEC kicked the antiquated oil pricing system into the 20th century. The cartel forced the price to $30 a barrel, a move that had long been suppressed by some of our largest capitalists: Exxon, Texaco, and Aramco.

Americans groaned about paying $1.00 for unleaded, while Europeans shelled the equivalent of 3 dollars a gallon for their rotgut petrol. "How can those Arabs do this, I just refuse to pay more than a dollar for gas. I can remember when we paid 18 cents a gallon," sounded the cry of gas line patrons around the country.

And the boys from OPEC laughed all the way to the bank.

But times have changed, even for the filthy rich sheiks and sultanates, who created opulent jewels out their barren dunes of sand.

Immediately, the U.S. became "energy conscious." And you know how we get when we latch on to a good cliché. In less than ten years, Americans proceeded to bring the once thought ever rising price of oil back down to $26 a barrel on the spot market in 1984 from $40 a barrel in 1978.

Now OPEC is collapsing all around itself.

Invisible OPEC can't even finish the agenda at one of their posh summits in Geneva or Zurich. Poor guys, must be rough knowing that the billion dollars they've stashed in Swiss bank accounts might have to pay for something besides remodeling their private 747's.

It just proves that what goes around, comes around. Turns out the Arabs have to pay their dues like everybody else.

So while OPEC bickers about price cuts, the American economy continues to prosper. The Charles Atlas of world economy. Thanks in part, to a sand facial from the ex-bully, OPEC.

Today is Monday, Feb. 4, the 35th day of 1985. There are 330 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:
On Feb. 4, 1945, President Franklin D. Roosevelt, British Prime Minister Winston Churchill and Soviet leader Joseph Stalin began a wartime conference at Yalta.

On this date:
In 1783, Britain declared a formal cessation of hostilities with its former colony, the United States of America.

In 1789, presidential electors unanimously chose George Washington to be the first chief executive of the United States.

In 1801, John Marshall was sworn in as Chief Justice of the U.S. Supreme Court.

In 1861, delegates from six southern states met in Montgomery, Ala., to form the Confederate States of America.

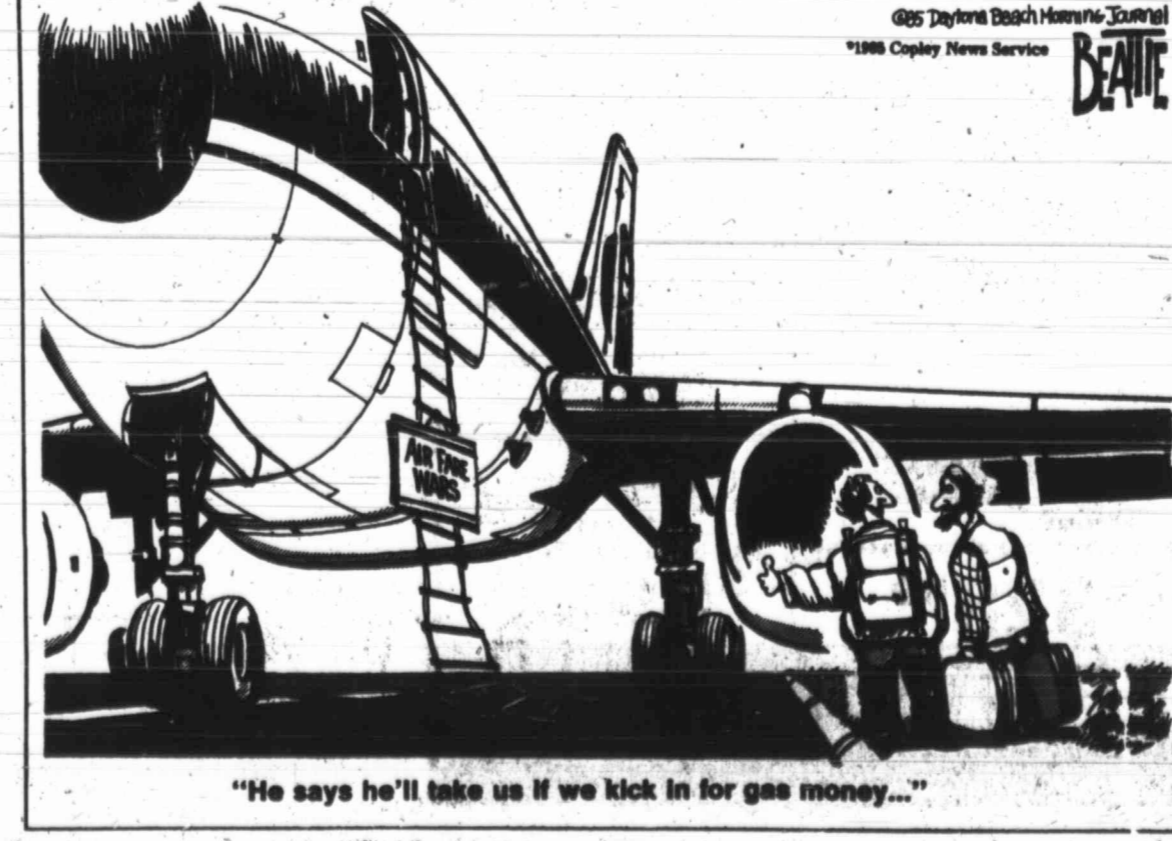

In 1932, New York Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt opened the Winter Olympic Games at Lake Placid.

In 1938, the play "Our Town" by Thornton Wilder opened on Broadway.

In 1941, the United Service Organization (also known as the USO) was founded.

In 1948, the island nation of Ceylon, now Sri Lanka, became an independent dominion within the British Commonwealth.

In 1974, newspaper heiress Patricia Hearst was kidnapped from her apartment in Berkeley, Calif., by members of the Symbionese Liberation Army.

Selling farm goods to Russians no easy task

WASHINGTON (AP) — Want to sell some grain, fruit trees or cowhides to the Soviet Union? The Agriculture Department says Moscow can be a lucrative market, but there are a few things a prospective exporter should know. Doing business with the Soviets "can involve a novel array" of business practices, some of them steeped in bureaucratic procedures far different from those prevalent in the West, says a new "Foreign Agriculture" magazine report. But with patience and attention to details, the Soviet Union can offer rewards to the determined American seller — and a boost for producers. "Even veteran exporters find that dealing with a monopoly buyer in a country of more than 270 million people requires specialized import and export knowledge unparalleled in countries that fill their import needs through commercial channels involving numerous traders," the report said. For the new seller, just locating the appropriate buying agency in the Soviet Union's governmental hierarchy can be a time-consuming and costly ordeal. "Then, after contact has been made, prices discussed and delivery dates offered, often comes the noncommittal, 'Thank you. Don't call us, we'll call you.' The waiting period may last weeks, months, even years," the report said. But the U.S. exporter who has the time, money and patience to invest may find financial rewards eventually. However, it must be "clearly understood that sales promotion seeds sown one season may not bear fruit until several seasons have passed." The report was written by two USDA employees, Dale Posthumus and William Huth. Posthumus is an assistant agricultural attache in Moscow, and Huth, formerly stationed in Moscow, now is the agricultural attache in East Germany. Although grain, mainly wheat and corn, account for about 85 percent of the U.S. agricultural sales to the Soviet Union, a wide variety of other products also moves in the export pipeline. Last year, for example, the Soviets bought about $350 million worth of non-grain agricultural products from the United States, including $167 million worth of cotton and $123 million worth of soybeans. But there was also inedible tallow, $34 million; cowhides, $12 million; tree nuts — mostly almonds and filberts — $7 million; tobacco, $666,000; hops, $149,000; vegetable seed, $21,000; and nursery products, $11,000. A prospective exporter must keep in mind that "all economic activity in the Soviet Union is planned and carried out by the state" and that there is no legal private enterprise except for the selling of home-grown produce in local farmers' markets. "Foreign traders are not allowed access to these markets," the report said. "The Soviet leadership exercises control over export-import trade through a multiplicity of economic planning and regulatory organizations under the direction of the Council of Ministers." The Ministry of Foreign Trade plans and carries out Soviet foreign trade policies, including the development of commercial relations with other countries, supervising the work of Soviet trade representatives stationed abroad, and fulfilling planned import and export commitments.

A system of about 60 foreign trade organizations, called FTOs, is supervised by the ministry. Those are specialized, each with exclusive responsibility for a specified range of goods.

Dallas sewage problem stinks, says one official

PALESTINE (AP) — Opponents to the dumping of raw sewage in Trinity River by the city of Dallas are skeptical of the city's motives for withdrawing an application for a 30 million gallon discharge. They say the move is only a lull in the battle while Dallas, city officials, revamp their strategy for the discharges. "Raw sewage is raw sewage. You can put makeup on it but it still looks pretty ugly," said Rep. Cliff Johnson, D-Palestine. "I think they're going to try to do a much better public relations job before they try this again." Applications on file with the water commission show the discharge is only the first of a series that could add nearly 2 billion gallons of raw Dallas sewage into the Trinity over the next year. The city has said it needs to release the untreated waste while the city's central treatment plant is being upgraded to meet federal standards.

Dear Abby

Woman is the weeper, not keeper

DEAR ABBY: I had brunch on the 12th floor of the Ritz Carlton Hotel in Chicago on Nov. 18, 1984. In the bathroom, on the floor near the commode, my sister found a gorgeous diamond ring. Without a moment's hesitation, she took it to the manager's desk and gave it to the manager. (He did not take her name and address.) After leaving the hotel for the airport, I decided to call the manager and give him my sister's name.

Since then, we have gotten a lot of static from people we've told this to about our "stupidity."

My sister called the hotel manager a week later and was told that nobody had claimed the ring, that the hotel would hold it for a year, and if it was not claimed, it would be turned over to the Chicago police! When my sister asked why wouldn't it be returned to her, since she had found it, the manager replied, "This is our policy; all you will get out of it is the satisfaction of knowing you did the honest thing."

Question: What should one do if one finds a valuable article in a public place? I have always believed that a found article, if not claimed, should be returned to the finder after a reasonable amount of time. I feel very uneasy about this, because I am sure that the person who lost this beautiful ring is heart-sick, and I have the feeling that she will never see it again.

I am signing my name, address and phone number in case you need it, but sign me...

UPSET IN ST. PAUL, MINN.

DEAR UPSET: Write to the American Bar Association and ask what the laws of Illinois say about finding and returning valuables. (Laws vary from state to state.)

The address for the American Bar Association is 1155 E. 60 St., Chicago, Ill. 60637. Include in your letter what you told me, and be sure to enclose a business-sized, self-addressed, stamped envelope for a reply.

DEAR ABBY: To clarify what has become a confusing issue concerning the tomato: If an edible part of a plant comes from the flower (ovary), it is a fruit. If it comes from any other part of the plant, it should be considered a vegetable. Therefore, from a botanical standpoint a tomato is not "both a fruit and a vegetable" as was stated by Mr. Griesman in your column.

Abby, in regard to your question, "Where do the nuts fit in?": Nuts that come from the flower are fruits. This includes filberts, pecans, chestnuts and walnuts. Others that are not true nuts, but are actually seeds, are Brazils, cashews, almonds and peanuts. (I assume that we are talking about the same kind of nuts.)

MICHAEL L. DAVIS, BIOLOGIST.

KNOXVILLE, TENN.

DEAR BIOLOGIST: You would not believe the number of letters I harvested on the tomato controversy.

A Tucson botanist wrote more about the tomato than I (or you) really want to know, but this sign-off was thought-provoking:

"Abby, I would like to believe this letter has cleared up the confusion, so in closing may I say, nuts to you!"

John Weins, Botanist

DEAR ABBY: Here it is, long after Christmas, and I feel like a jerk. The problem? When I was taking down my Christmas decorations, I found a stack of some 20 Christmas cards with my annual newsletter — all addressed, stamped and ready to be mailed before Christmas, of course.

I thought they had been mailed with another batch of cards I had written, but nope, here they are, sitting on the table, bursting with Christmas cheer and last year's holiday news. Some were not very important, but many were to faraway relatives, who by now probably consider me an ol' "Bah-humbbug!"

Should I mail these embarrassingly late Christmas cards with an apology — or just toss them out? Sign me...

SNAFU
DEAR SNAFU: Mail them with an apology. Better late than never.

ARRANGING TRIP — Patricia Hall, travel agent and part owner of Skipper Travel, says her job is a daily challenge. The agency uses the Sabre computer for accessing information, booking reservations and ticketing.

By TINA STEFFEN
Lifestyle Editor

For a person who enjoys traveling and planning trips, being a travel agent is a good job for Patricia Hall of Ackerly.

Being a travel agent is never boring and always a daily challenge, Mrs. Hall says. "People are different and it presents a challenge to get what they need. Sixty percent of our business is for pleasure. We also help with business trips."

"I like planning trips and getting the best fare. It's like doing (the customer) a favor."

Mrs. Hall has been an agent with Skipper Travel for 2½ years. My stepfather, Bill Ragsdale, started the business. I worked like a year at the beginning. Then I dropped out to take care of my kids," she said. Once they left home, Mrs. Hall went to Sabre School in Dallas for a week, which is sponsored by American Airlines. The school gave intensive, concentrated training on the Sabre computer used by travel agencies for accessing information, booking reservations and ticketing.

Experience is the key training to this business, Mrs. Hall says. "You learn by doing." Mrs. Hall's travel experience was a big help when she returned to travel agency work. Her knowledge about places and transportation helped her sell trips to her clients.

Today, Mrs. Hall is part owner of the travel agency, along with her mother Dorothy Ragsdale, and brother Jerry Iden.

A travel agent makes hotel, airline, cruise, train and car reservations and ticketing. They also provide customers with information about all fares, restrictions, places in the world to see, any other options available to travelers, and plan trips for individuals and tour groups.

"Anywhere in the world anyone wants to go we have information on it or access to information. That's one advantage to using a travel agent. We shop and get a suitable connection and a cheaper fare at no charge. We are totally a service business." Travel agencies receive commissions from the travel companies they book customers with.

An aspect about her work Mrs. Hall enjoys are the "familiarization trips."

"You get to go on lots of familiarization trips free. The agency pays for it. To be a good travel agent, you need to have been there and have seen the places so you can sell it. If you like to travel, see new things and places, that's just part of your job," she said.

The difficulty comes when Mrs. Hall tries to get a client to his destination and the flights are showing full. "Sometimes this is a high stress job because you want to do your best and don't want any mistakes on the job. You want to be dependable."

When she isn't commuting to work from Ackerly, she enjoys playing the piano, reading, snow ski or playing Scrabble. For 20 years, she has been the organist at First Baptist Church in Ackerly.

Dr. Donohue

Ear surgery can help in Meniere's

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Please discuss Meniere's disease in your column. My husband was diagnosed as having this disease after numerous tests by ear specialists and neurologists — hearing tests, brain scans, etc. He has the usual symptoms of hearing loss, dizziness, loss of balance. Is there an operation that can be done to relieve the symptoms? Can allergy play a part? What effect does smoking have? — C.M.

Meniere's disease, also sometimes called aural vertigo, is a problem of accumulated fluid in the inner ear, where the balance mechanism is located. Surgery does have its place in treatment in some cases. One of the techniques involves placing a small drainage tube in the inner ear to carry off the excess fluid there.

Allergy can cause Meniere's symptoms, and treatment of the allergy can result in cure. But many have Meniere's without the allergy trigger. Then treatment becomes more difficult.

Certainly, simple measures, like decreasing salt intake and giving up caffeine products, can be a boon to many. Yes, smoking can play a role, as you indicated, so giving that up can help greatly in many cases. Drugs are a part of treatment for some. All the measures available have the single goal of reducing the fluid in the inner ear, the direct cause of the symptoms.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I have asked before, but no answer came. Does long-term use of diuretics cause kidney or liver problems? — J.N.

Often, what seems to be the simplest of questions do not lend themselves to quick answers. The list of diuretics is long. I've looked over the more common ones.

All I can say is that they cause kidney problems only when there has been some pre-existing damage. That is to say, if the kidneys are sick to begin with use of diuretics can make them worse. Yet these medicines can still be used, but with ailing kidneys things have to be monitored more carefully.

Generally, in such matters we fall back on statistics that tell us that there are scads of people who use diuretics and have done so for years and that we have yet to see any outbreaks of kidney damage from them. The same holds true with liver damage and diuretics. Long-term use usually doesn't hurt the liver. Where that does happen the damage is in a very small number of users.

It's More you.

It's slim.
It's elegant.

O'Meara wins Crosby title

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Mark O'Meara said there was a special value in his victory in the Bing Crosby National Pro-Am golf tournament.

"It shows that last year was not a freak of nature," O'Meara said Sunday after winning the event.

Last season O'Meara was universally regarded as the most improved player on the PGA Tour.

After playing three seasons without particular distinction, he put together one of the more enviable records in the game. He won once, was second five times, finished in the top 10 in 15 events, led the Tour in birdies and was second only to Tom Watson in money-winnings with $465,873.

With an early-season triumph to his credit this season, the sturdy 28-year-old appeared poised to make another run at the top rank of golf's leading performers.

"I'm becoming a good player,"

he said. "But there's a lot of room for improvement."

"I'm going to keep on grinding, keep on working on my game, keep on trying to improve."

"I want to be a good player, maybe a very good player. I want to see how far I can go."

O'Meara had a chance to win this title a year ago. He had an 8-foot eagle putt on the 18th hole that would have won it. But the young man, in a position to win for the first time, 3-putted and eventually finished third.

This time it did not escape. And it was his pressure putting on bumpy greens that turned the trick.

Leading by one and under a three-man attack, O'Meara had to drop a 6-foot putt to save par on the 15th. He missed the green and again faced a 6-footer for par on the 16th.

On the tough 17th, a par-3 jutting into Carmel Bay, he buried his tee shot in a bunker and came out long, 10-12 feet from the cup.

He needed that putt to save par and the lead.

"The greens were bumpy," he said. "I said to myself, 'well, just give it the best stroke you can. That's all you can do.'"

A broad smile crossed his face and he began moving his hand in a wavering motion, back and forth, as he continued:

"It bounced up a little, then hit a bump and went right, and hit a bump and went left, and back to the right, then left again and right in the cup."

"It was the greatest."

A routine 2-putt par on the final hole finished off the round of 73, one over par on the rain-dampened Pebble Beach Links. The 283 total, 5-under, was good for a one-shot victory and a $90,000 first place check.

"There was a lot of luck involved," he said. "This time the good luck was on my side."

Curtis Strange missed on a 6-7 foot birdie putt on the final hole that would have tied it and forced a playoff. He had to settle for a round of par 72 and a tie for second at 284 with 41-year-old Japanese pro Kikuo Arai and fast-finishing Larry Rinker.

Arai had a 71. Rinker holed from off the green for birdies on the 16th and 17th, then birdied the 18th for a 69.

Rex Caldwell scored consecutive eagles, a 3-2 performance, on the second and third holes and rode that start to a 66 and a tie at 285 with Payne Stewart, who also had a 66.

Tom Watson, with a 69, Australian Greg Norman and West German Bernhard Langer were another stroke back at 286. Norman and Langer each closed with a 71 in the occasional drizzle.

MARK O'MEARA blasts his way from a trap on the second at Pebble Beach, Calif. Sunday enroute to a 5-under first place victory in the Crosby Pro-Am.

Howard to host Frank Phillips

The Howard College Hawks and Hawk-Queens will be in another heated Western Junior College Athletic Conference encounter tonight at Dorothy Garrett Coliseum when they host Frank Phillips College.

Coach Don Steven's Queens (4-4, 18-7), will be out for their third consecutive win-in-a-row and their second win over Frank Phillips (5-19, 0-8). The Queens defeated FP earlier 81-50.

Guards Molly Early and Lorri French keyed the win as Early scored 18 points while French added seven assists and four steals.

Forward Wanda Larkin, who scored 16 in the loss to Howard, leads FP averaging 14 points and seven rebounds.

Early continues to lead Howard in scoring averaging 14 points per game. "Twin Towers" Diane and Allison Dickson has been playing well for HC lately. Allison scored the winning basket in last week's 58-56 win over Amarillo College.

Game time is 6 p.m.

HAWKS HOPE TO WARM UP SECOND TIME AROUND

Coach Ed Sparling's Hawks are hoping their shooting touch will be around for Frank Phillips this time. In their last meeting HC (9-11, 3-7), shot a cold 37 percent from the floor. The poor shooting resulted in a 84-71 loss.

Forward Walt Reynolds was the only bright spot for the Hawks with his 13 points and 8 rebounds.

Lonnie Sivils leads Frank Phillips (13-10, 5-5), with a 11-point average. Dale Gallow is next at 10.

Guards Michale Porter, Bruce Kimble and Joe Burney lead the Hawks in scoring. Porter and Kimble average 19 and 17 respectively. Burney is averaging 13 points per contest.

Game time is 8 p.m.

SMU powers past Rice Owls 68-52

DALLAS (AP) — The fourth-ranked Southern Methodist Mustangs take a two-game Southwest Conference lead into their showdown with the Arkansas Razorbacks in Fayetteville on Wednesday night.

"We're looking forward to going to Arkansas because we've always played pretty well in Barnhill and it ought to be a great game," said Mustang center Jon Koncak, who scored 22 points, blocked 5 shots and collected 9 rebounds in a 68-52 victory over Rice on Sunday.

SMU may have played well there recently but SMU hasn't won at Arkansas since 1976.

The Mustangs hold a two-game lead over Arkansas and Texas A&M, who are tied for second in the SWC standings.

Arkansas fell 56-39 to Georgetown on Sunday while Houston lost 77-76 to Illinois in another intersectional game.

Rice did the only thing it could against SMU — slow the ball down — but it worked only a half.

Then the Mustangs pressed the Owls into mistakes and Koncak got hot.

"It was not a pretty game," said SMU Coach Dave Bliss. "Rice tested our patience by working on the 45-second clock. I don't think we got caught overlooking Rice. We did a good job defensively."

"We were just too impatient on offense."

Rice Coach Tommy Suits said the Owls had to try to lull SMU to sleep.

"We had to play slow and passively because it was our only chance against them," Suits said. "That was our only chance against them."

"The faster they play the better they are."

Bliss said it took the Mustangs a full 20 minutes to settle down. "Sometimes we get going so hard that it just doesn't turn out right," he said.

Koncak said, "It seems everybody really gets pumped up to play us. That's what happens when you're ranked as high as we are."

"Rice played awfully hard."

SMU increased its overall record to 18-2 and the Mustangs are 8-1 in the SWC.

The Owls, losing their seventh consecutive game, fell to 8-11 and 1-8.

SMU, leading by only a point at halftime, outscored Rice 18-2 to start the second half behind Koncak, the seven-foot Olympian, and Scott Johnson, who tied a season high with 14 points.

Rice's slowdown tactics worked perfectly in the first half as frustrated SMU led only 21-20.

The Owls worked down most of the 45-second clock before shooting. Freshman Jeff Crawford of Bardwell, Ky., making his first start, scored six straight baskets and a career-high 12 points for Rice in the first half.

Crawford was scoreless in the second half and Greg Hines came on to score 14 points to lead the Owls in scoring.

Bliss started Terry Williams in place of forward Larry Davis to experiment with a several defenses.

"We worked on the defenses Friday and Larry missed most of the work because he was getting new contact lenses," Bliss said. "Terry had worked on the defenses and Larry didn't."

Davis came off the bench to score 14 points including four slam dunks.

Suits said he will pick SMU over Arkansas in the game.

Upsets Noah for title

Swede takes indoor championship

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Sweden's Stefan Edberg, who upset top-seeded Jimmy Connors and No. 3 Yannick Noah on his way to a $45,000 winner's paycheck at the U.S. National Indoor Tennis Championship, is quickly making a dash toward the upper echelon of the men's tour.

The 19-year-old Edberg, winner of $201,802 on the pro tour last year, took care of the Connors, ranked second in the world, Saturday in the semifinals of the $315,000 tournament, then devastated Noah for the winner's share Sunday.

And he knocked off two of the top three seeds in straight sets — bouncing Connors 6-1, 6-4, before trouncing Noah 6-1, 6-0.

He was, Edberg said afterward, playing the best tennis of his career.

Noah agreed, saying that even had he not been playing on a sore ankle, and even if his pregnant wife had not gone to the hospital Sunday, Edberg was just too good.

"I lost 6-1, 6-love, you know, so there's not much to say about what happened," Noah said. "He was just much better today ... I don't think there was any particular point, or particular moment where I lost the match. I think I lost the match from the first point. He was a much better player," Noah said.

Edberg, who is ranked 19th among the world's touring tennis pros, took just 54 minutes to demolish Noah, who was ranked 14th coming into the Memphis tournament.

He made just three unforced errors during the match and he served five aces. He allowed Noah to tie at 1-1 in the first set, but it was never close after that.

"I don't think I ever played so well," Edberg said. "I played great today."

Eagles get new general manager

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Harry Gamble, a veteran of 30 years of high school, college and pro coaching, was introduced today as the general manager of the Philadelphia Eagles, saying his aim was for consistency in the team's management.

"I think my No. 1 responsibility will be to convince the people of Philadelphia that this is a viable organization that is going to be competitive in the National Football League," Gamble said at a news conference.

"There's nothing that would please me more than to play a contributing role in the development of a football team that all the fans would be proud of."

Gamble was introduced by Eagles' owner Leonard Tose, who praised Gamble's "football knowledge, leadership and loyalty."

Gamble, 54, had been the Eagles' director of football administration. He was responsible for overseeing the budget in areas relating to football and overall administration costs.

"The job and responsibilities Mr. Tose are giving me are nothing more than an extension of what I've been doing," he said.

The promotion comes at a time when Tose, who threatened late last year to sell part of the team and move it to Phoenix, is negotiating with an NFL committee in an effort to resolve massive financial problems.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, FEB. 5, 1985

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Today's full moon will bring all kinds of interesting action, especially that which is of an unusual nature and where original and progressive ideas and personalities are concerned.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You have fine creative ideas now so think about those who can best help you to market them, and make the right contacts.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) A good day for improving conditions at home and having more harmony there in the future. Fine for inviting persons in.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) A fine day for getting your best talents across to the right persons who can help you to commercialize on them.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Be wise in going after whatever will make you more prosperous and prominent in the days ahead.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) You should be filled with important ideas today and should bring them to the attention of bigwigs for backing.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Get into the big issues of any enterprise which are important and don't get bogged down with minutiae now.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Seek new friends today and give home and family a little respite. If you get an invitation to a party, be sure to attend.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) See that bigwig who can give you the added support you need for some project that is worthwhile and take your mate with you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You have vision now and can see how to have greater advancement in current projects you are working on.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) A day to improve relationships with others and not be so concerned with work at hand. Be sensible.

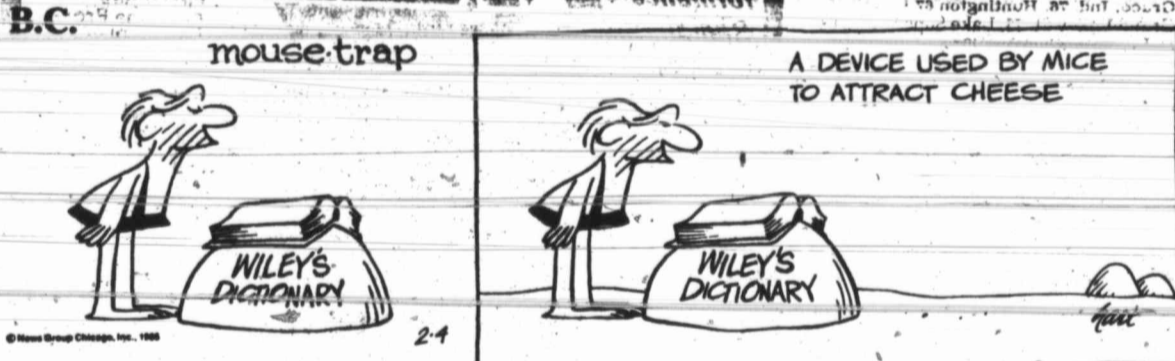

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) The full Moon can help you to get better organized and to operate in a more conservative fashion.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) A good day to make your surroundings more charming and clean as a whistle and be happier. Avoid one who wants to waste your time.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be capable of getting the right slant where vocational projects are concerned. Slant the education along such lines also. Be generous with praise when something exceptional is accomplished and keep the incentive high that way.

"The Stars impel; they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Defense bid geared for 'Star Wars'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan today sends Congress a $313.7 billion defense budget that continues full-scale procurement of major weapons systems such as the MX missile and B-1 bomber, boosts research spending on "Star Wars" projects and increases the size of the armed services.

The fiscal 1986 spending plan also reflects the administration's continuing emphasis on modernizing conventional forces — although the number of planes and ships to be bought has been reduced compared to last year's projections — and contains funds for defensive biological weapons and a military pay boost.

Presenting the proposed budget to the Senate Armed Services Committee today, Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger cautioned against cuts by Congress.

He asserted that spending already had been pared as much as prudently possible, while still allowing the United States to regain its military strength and exert pressure on the Soviet Union to negotiate an arms control agreement.

"To reverse ourselves at this critical point would add significantly to our future defense costs, refute the mandate the president has just received from the American people and weaken our ability to seize this unique opportunity to secure a safer world through peace with strength," Weinberger said in written testimony.

Because of a well-publicized fight within the administration two months ago, the gross totals for the Pentagon's fiscal 1986 spending plan have been known for some time. The Reagan budget asks Congress to authorize programs totaling $313.7 billion during the 12 months starting Oct. 1.

That represents a 5.9 percent increase, after discounting for the effects of inflation, over the $284.7 billion in budget authority granted by Congress for the current fiscal year.

Not all the money authorized each fiscal year is actually spent in that year, however, because purchases of major weapons normally are spread out over several years.

In fiscal 1986, actual spending would total $277.5 billion, up from a revised fiscal 1985 total of $246.3 billion.

More than 38 percent of next year's spending total, or $106.2 billion, is for programs that were authorized in previous years. That reflects the huge defense buildup initiated by Reagan four years ago.

According to long-range forecasts included in the 1986 budget, the Defense Department expects its spending to climb even more over the next five years, rising to $354 billion in fiscal 1991 and to $477.7 billion by fiscal 1996.

While Weinberger's annual report to Congress spoke glowingly of the improvements to be made next year in conventional forces and readiness levels, it is the president's so-called "strategic modernization program that receives the highest budget priority.

For example, the plan calls for the procurement of 48 more MX missiles, at a cost of $4.04 billion, and completing the planned acquisition of 100 of the 10-warhead nuclear weapons.

So far, Congress has approved only 21 of the missiles, and the program stands in jeopardy of being scaled back or halted. A series of key test votes will occur this spring on whether the 21 missiles included in this year's budget actually will be purchased.

The 1986 spending plan also calls for $6.2 billion to acquire the last 48 B-1B bombers, bringing the total acquired to 100.

Also requested is another $624.5 million to continue development of a mobile, single-warhead missile known as the Midgetman.

Reagan's election changed budget outlook

WASHINGTON (AP) — What a difference 54.4 million votes make.

Last year, President Reagan spoke of excellence in education and proposed a $100 million election-year hike in education spending for 1985.

With his landslide re-election in the history books, Reagan's post-election budget would chop $2 billion from the Department of Education's bottom line for 1986.

During the election campaign, Reagan dedicated a Buffalo senior citizens apartment house built partially with federal money under a program called Section 202. His 1986 budget would all but wipe out that program.

AP analysis

The president's pre-election spending blueprint suggested only an $8.9 billion cut in domestic programs. This year, the administration wants about $39 billion slashed from domestic spending.

Reagan's 1986 budget, sent to Congress today, gives the voters a first look at the priorities they supported by giving him a second four-year term.

There aren't many surprises.

With the president's last election behind him, the careful effort in 1984 to craft a budget with one eye on keeping voters happy has been discarded.

This first spending blueprint after a landslide re-election victory is generally a rerun of the script laid out in the Reagan budgets of 1981, 1982 and 1983: cuts in domestic spending, increases in defense spending, hopeful talk of balanced budgets and huge federal deficits.

"We said 'no' frequently in 1981... but we did not accomplish enough," Reagan said in his budget message. "We have no choice but to renew our efforts with redoubled vigor."

If his budget seems a change from some things Reagan said and did in 1984, it certainly does fulfill some of his campaign promises and deal with areas where the campaign showed vulnerabilities.

Social Security benefits are untouched, just as Reagan promised after Democratic challenger Walter F. Mondale began pummeling the Republican incumbent on the issue during the fall campaign.

Reagan pledged repeatedly during the campaign to stand fast against tax hikes. He said he would allow them only as a "last resort" to cut federal deficits, echoing his 1985 budget document that declared, "To those who say we must raise taxes, I say wait."

This year, Reagan used a campaign theme to declare his continued opposition.

"If we fail to reduce excessive federal benefits to special interest groups, we will be saddled either with larger budget deficits or with higher taxes — either of which would be of greater harm to the American economy and people," he said.

Social programs face cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal health and welfare programs — including Medicare, food and drug safety, health research and disease control — face spending freezes or cuts under President Reagan's 1986 budget.

The budget, sent to Congress today, also calls for a cap on Medicaid payments to the states for health services to the poor, a change the administration says will save $16.6 billion over the next five years.

The administration allowed for a 4.1 percent cost-of-living increase next January for recipients of Social Security and Supplemental Security Income, the federal assistance program for the very poor, although the actual amount will depend on inflation over the next year.

Medicare payments to hospitals and physicians, to pay for medical care for the elderly and disabled, would be frozen at current levels.

The administration says that would save $2.3 billion from projected cost increases.

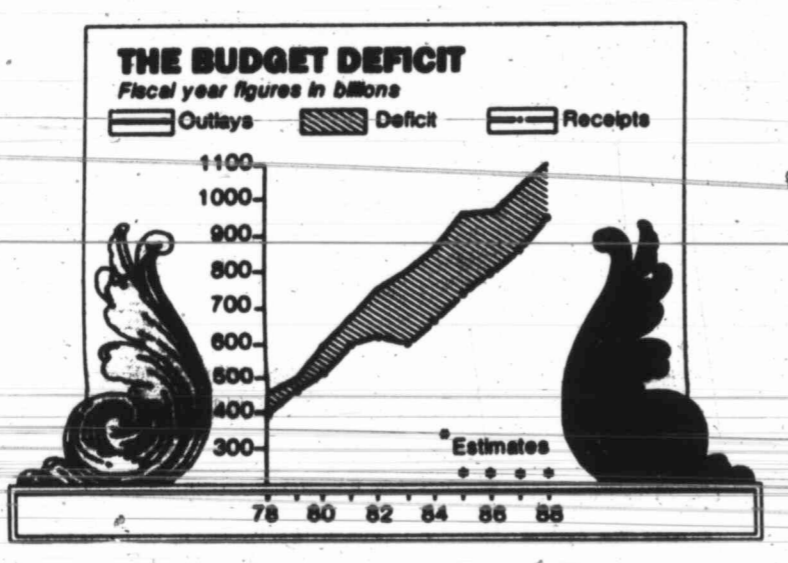

And recipients would face an increase in Medicare Part B insurance premiums, which pay for doctors' bills. The premiums will increase $1.30 per month next year over the current $15.50 and continue to rise for the next five years.

The budget also proposes a cap on Medicaid expenditures at $22.2 billion, an increase of $400 million over 1985 but a reduction of $1.3 billion from current 1986 cost estimates for the medical insurance program for the poor.

It would begin a six-year staff reduction within the Social Security Administration that would cut the federal payroll by 17,000 people by 1990, leaving the agency staff at 62,945.

The budget also calls for freezes in programs of the Food and Drug Administration; a $287 million reduction in spending by the National Institutes of Health, most of it in cuts for research grants; and a $16 million cut in spending by the Centers for Disease Control.

Research into AIDS — acquired immune deficiency syndrome — a deadly disease that strikes mostly homosexuals, is cut from $96 million this year to $86 million in 1986. The department said, however, that the cut comes in one-time 1985 expenses and actual research will continue at 1985 levels.

In programs of the Department of Housing and Urban Development, the administration is proposing to increase fees for Veterans Administration and Federal Housing Administration mortgage loans.

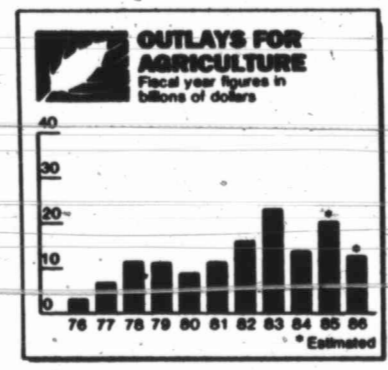

VA borrowers would pay a 5 percent loan origination fee under the plan, up from 1 percent, at an additional cost of $2,850 for a $75,000 home. An FHA loan for a $75,000 home would cost an additional $850 at settlement because of a proposed increase in the cost of loan insurance.

The HUD budget also calls for a two-year suspension of a program that helps poor people pay their rent. Programs to fix up existing public housing and build new units would face a similar halt.

The budget faces difficult obstacles in Congress, even from the Republican-controlled Senate.

Sen. David Durenberger, R-Minn., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee's health subcommittee, said the freezes will not be approved unless they are tied to a firm plan to balance the federal budget. The budget contains no such plan, Durenberger said, and in its absence senators will be unwilling to impose suffering on people the programs are intended to help.

"If they knew it was a one-time thing leading to a balanced budget, I think they'd take most of them," Durenberger said. "I'd recommend most of them. But only if it's a one-time shot on the way to some reform, not just as some way to cut budgets."

The proposal to extend the freeze on hospital payments also is in trouble because the administration proposed in the budget to accomplish the freeze through regulation rather than submitting a bill to Congress.

"Over my political dead body," Durenberger said of that idea.

Durenberger said Congress also is likely to balk at the new cap on Medicaid, proposed by Reagan along with a proposal to allow more flexibility for states to structure health programs for the poor.

"The reality is that the federal government is cutting back substantially in its financial support for the poor, claiming state and local governments can make up the difference," he said. "Everybody's being taken care of but the poor."
