"Johnny" is in trouble again. While the cry from concerned parents and educators in recent years has been "Why can't Johnny read," the question heard in many Texas public schools today is "Why can't Johnny play?"

The outraged cries from students, parents and coaches have snared news headlines and filled hearing rooms this spring. Yet the extracurricular rule is only one of a series of education reforms.

The Big Spring Herald takes a thoughtful look at education reform in "Educating Texas," a five-part series starting Wednesday.

Oil dealers say market is unfair

FORT WORTH (AP) — Independent Texas petroleum wholesalers say they will seek cooperation from oil refiners and convenience store chains to resolve what they call "competitive abuses" in the gasoline market.

The Texas Oil Marketers Association officials said at their meeting Monday that major oil companies are opening more of their own service stations and selling fuel at wholesale or even cheaper, undercutting other dealers.

TOMA President Homer McGinnis said "big oil" companies are sidestepping small independent petroleum companies who traditionally have supplied retail outlets throughout the state.

If voluntary cooperation doesn't work, the association would not rule out the possibility of seeking legislation to divest integrated oil companies of their retail service operations, McGinnis said.

"For years we worked effectively together with the oil companies to provide an efficient system of distributing petroleum products," McGinnis told members of the 700-member organization.

"But now, in a scramble for market share in the four years since decontrol of the oil industry, big oil has embarked on a

Cosden damage ignites gas prices

By KEELY COGHLAN Staff Writer

Although service stations in Big Spring have been able to keep gasoline supplies flowing after a fire March 26 shut down operations at the Cosden Oil & Chemical Co. refinery, prices at the pump keep rising.

Prices at Fina and other gasoline stations have increased between 2 and 10 cents, according to most station owners.

The only stations that did not report a price increase were Exxon stations supplied by Tomco; however, company President Tommy Tompkins said gasoline suppliers had started increasing costs before the fire.

"I get all my supplies from Cosden, but when something happens, I'm able to get them from elsewhere," he said. "I haven't had to increase my prices."

Tomco provides gasoline to eight Exxon stations in Big Spring and Coahoma. Although prices vary at individual stations, regular gasoline costs about $1.13, and unleaded about $1.20, at self-service stations he supplies, Tompkins said.

However, those prices are similar to those at some gasoline stations that have suffered price increases because of the Cosden fire. Gasoline page 2-A

Lucas says hoax a lie

Mass murder suspect recants newspaper story

Staff and wire reports

Henry Lee Lucas now says he was lying when he told a Dallas newspaper reporter that he had only killed three people, a close friend of the convicted killer says.

At various times, Lucas has claimed to have slain between 100 and 600 people nationwide. More than 150 killings around the country have been attributed to him by police departments, including the April 25, 1982 death of Odessa shoe salesman Happy Howry, whose abandoned body was found beaten in a field in Big Spring.

Both Lucas and his sometime traveling companion Otis Elwood Toole were charged with capital murder in the Howry death. Lucas, however, was not indicted because the only evidence implicating him was testimony from Toole, according to 118th District Attorney Rick Hamby.

The uncorroborated testimony of an alleged accomplice is not enough for a conviction, Hamby said Monday.

Toole also is charged with murder in the shooting death of Ohio hitchhiker William Boyd Hite, whose body was found riddled with bullets six miles west of Big Spring off Interstate Highway 20.

The Austin American-Statesman today reported that Lucas told her his statement to a Dallas newspaper reporter that he had only killed three people was false.

The Dallas Times Herald, in a copyrighted story on Sunday, raised questions about whether Lucas had committed many of the up to 600 homicides he earlier confessed to.

Clemmie Schroeder, who prayed with Lucas Sunday at the McLennan County Jail in Waco and is now one of Lucas' closest friends, and law enforcement officers from California to Florida said Monday they continue to believe Lucas is responsible for dozens of slayings.

HENRY LUCAS

However, Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox said he had doubts about the handling of the Lucas case.

Ms. Schroeder, who has been giving Lucas daily Bible lessons and instruction in painting twice a week, said Monday, "He has told me he has killed as many as 10 people in one day. He said there are only four cases he has confessed to that he is not sure about. His prayer has been, 'Lord, if these aren't my cases, reveal it somehow, so the killer will not be out there and evil will be uprooted.'

During a 70-minute visit Sunday afternoon, they prayed twice, Ms. Schroeder said. She said Lucas told her that he had made the claim about killing only three people 14 months ago, before his religious convictions deepened and while he was still denying involvement in other slayings.

"I know he's a killer. There's no doubt in my mind. He really feels he needs to confess to every one of his cases because that's the only way to undo the evil he has done," she said.

Lucas has been transferred from Georgetown to Waco. A McLennan County grand jury is investigating several slayings claimed by Lucas there, and apparently intends to question him later this week.

"He said he was hoping they would let him talk to the grand jury to clear all of this up," Ms. Schroeder said.

Williamson County Sheriff Jim Boutwell, who along with Texas Ranger Sgt. Bob Prince has been involved in the Lucas Homicide Task Force since its inception, said neither he nor Prince has been invited to appear before the grand jury.

"Our position is that he's confirmed a lot of murder cases by far more than just confessions," Boutwell said.

"No professional officer believes everything he has claimed. But if he can describe a crime and lead you to the scene and is accurate on most details and does not have an airtight alibi, he either did it or he's the biggest psychic the world has known," the sheriff said.

Coahoma recycles trash law

By LUIS RIOS Staff Writer

COAHOMA — Council members Monday night unanimously approved a measure to allow trash collector Gerald King to haul garbage once again in the city.

The issue came to a vote after the City Council was deluged with complaints from 85 residents gathered at the Community Center to protest previous council actions.

Mayor Eleanor Garrett repeatedly tried to restore order, but the angry residents would not be denied. Two motions by Councilman Barbara Robertson to adjourn and seconded Jerry "Red" Brockman failed for lack of a vote.

Ray Bell, who said he was chosen by a group of citizens to speak on their behalf, presented the City Council with a petition containing 209 signatures.

The petition asked that the trash collection ordinance be properly enforced, that the contract with King be honored and that trash collection in the city resume.

Councilman Billy Sullivan said he had no objections to King hauling trash and he would not fight such a move.

"This (trash) ordinance is legal and binding and I myself have no qualms about it," Sullivan said, addressing the audience.

Councilman Sullivan was asked directly by Bobby Sullivan if he would vote for the trash collection and ordinance. Bobby Sullivan told Mayor Garrett it is not fair for 18 citizens not to pay for trash collection.

"Why should I pay for it and they not," Bobby Sullivan said. "And are we going to rock back and forth for another two years?"

Janice King, wife of Gerald King, also presented the City Council with a copy of an application for workman's compensation insurance, which the city requested earlier.

Despite giving the King's approval to collect trash, council members declined to void a letter dated April 3, 1985, from the City to King terminating the trash collection contract.

The letter was from Brian Polard, an attorney with McDonald, Harmon and Malone of Waco. The letter stated that the City would not pay King for trash collection. It further warned that if he did haul he would be sued by the law firm.

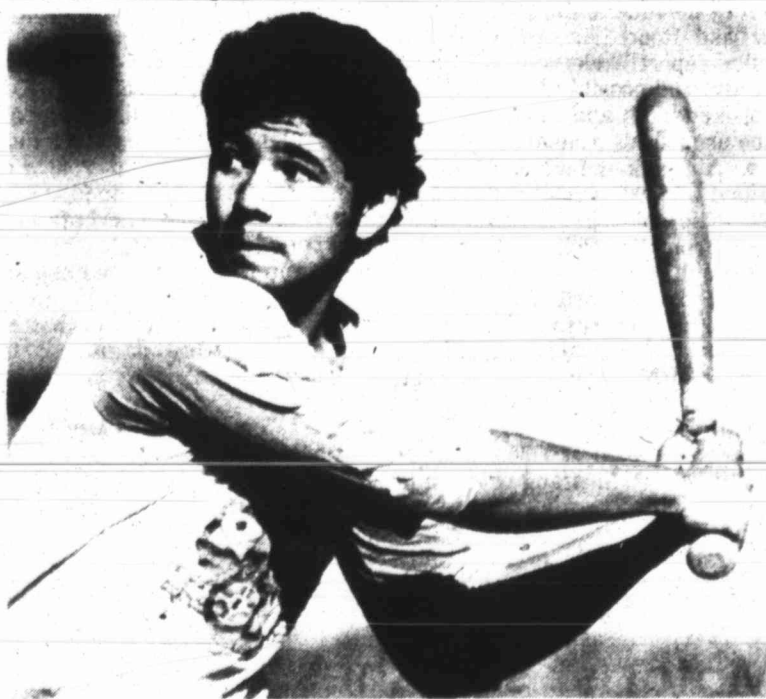

Mayor Garrett said she would not consider cutting off the water for residents not paying their trash collection bill until she was able to speak with them.

The Council also tabled rest by Coahoma page 2-A

Steel Country blues

Town tries to adjust, rebuild following massive layoffs

LONE STAR (AP) — "Steel Country" has melted away from more than just the local newspaper's name.

The change from "The Steel Country Bee" to simply "The Bee" reflects a changing attitude as towns once dependent on the steel industry diversify and try to rebuild their economies with other industries, the paper's managing editor says.

"We looked to our very name and realized there's more to our future than the steel mill," said Charley Harriest.

Three years ago, Lone Star Steel Co. had 6,000 employees and a booming market for its oil field pipe.

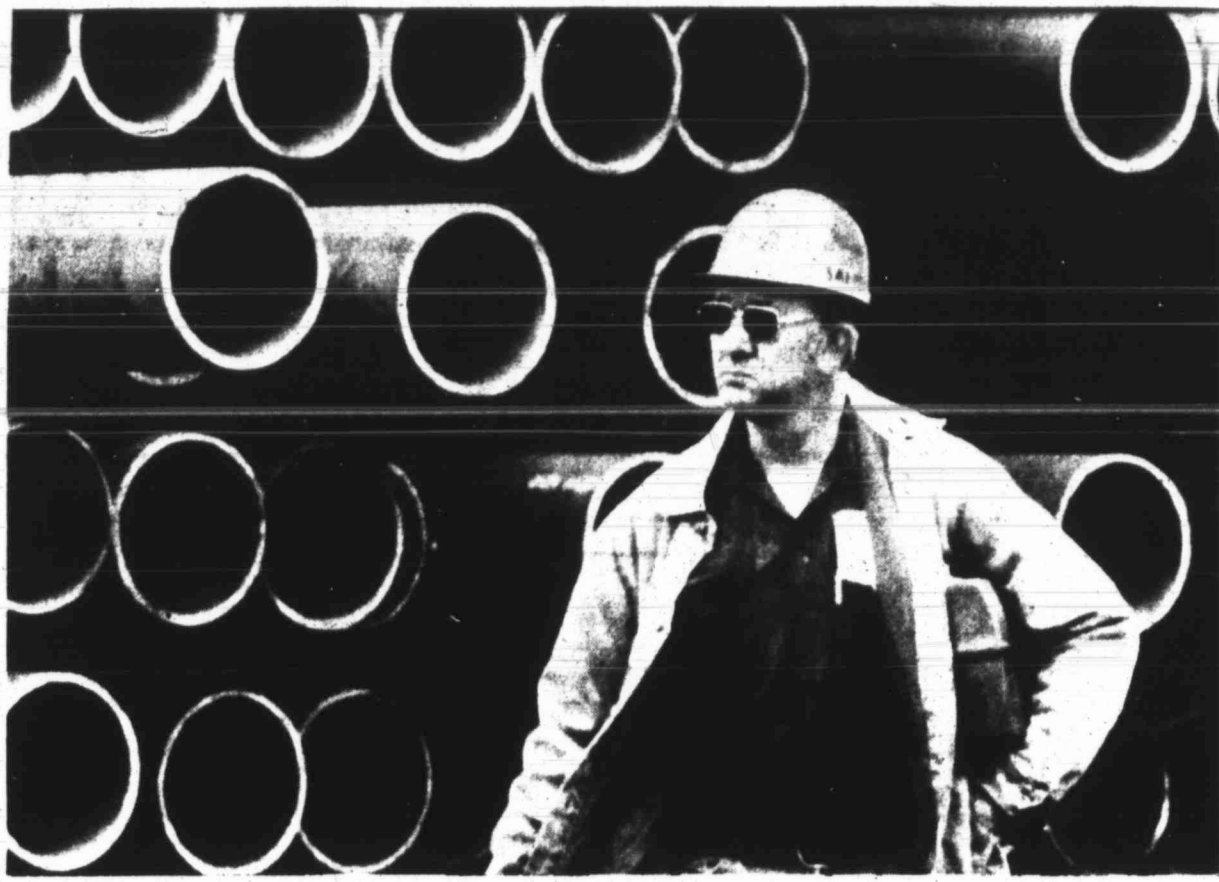

"People used to fuss because they had to work so much overtime," said J.D. Hay, a 30-year veteran at the mill.

But the boom ended suddenly, and in August 1982, Lone Star Steel laid off 4,000 workers. Unemployment in the area jumped to 36 percent, and the hard times have lasted longer than many imagined.

Last month, the steel company hit the community with more layoffs — an additional 800 that cut the workforce to 1,700 hourly workers.

According to the Texas Employment Commission, more than 1,500 workers have left Morris County since 1982, and the county's tax base has shrunk from $1.7 billion to $1 billion.

Gov. Mark White created a special task force last month to help communities cope with large industrial layoffs.

"It's not enough that we aggressively promote the diversification of the Texas economy," he said at the time. "We must take steps to help the troubled."

Other recent developments also have brought new hope to the dying town.

Three new industries — a roofing plant, a high-speed printing company and a builder of modular classrooms — just received state and federal grants to locate in Morris County. The new plants will employ about 400 workers.

In addition, the Lone Star State Bank built a $600,000 building and voters approved a $10 million bond issue to build a junior college that will provide training jobs.

"As bad and bleak as it seems, these people are not quitters," county Judge Ronald Cowan told the Dallas Times Herald. "We're going to come out of it. We're not on the edge of the volcano, but we're certainly not stable."

Senate tentatively approves primary bill

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate has tentatively approved a presidential primary bill described by one Democrat as a threat to conservative Democrats but by others as a measure that could attract voters.

The Senate's six Republicans opposed the proposal in a series of votes Monday, and Sen. John Leedom, R-Dallas, protested it with a six-hour filibuster.

The measure, tentatively approved on voice vote, would allow Texans to vote in a "Super Tuesday" presidential primary in March 1988. A final vote is needed to send the bill to the House.

Sen. Chet Edwards' bill would set up a presidential primary for Democrats and Republicans on the second Tuesday of March in presidential election years.

The May primary date for state and local candidates would remain the same, but a person voting in the presidential primary would have to vote in the same party's primary in May.

For years, Texas Republicans have been holding presidential primaries at the same time they vote in the May primary. Texas Democrats in the past have chosen their delegates for national conventions, where the presidential nominee is selected, through a complex caucus system.

Under Edwards' bill, at least 75 percent of the delegates, excluding elected and party officials, would be named according to the popular vote in the presidential primary. Party conventions would choose the remaining 25 percent.

Sen. Roy Blake, D-Nacogdoches, objected that conservatives might vote for Vice President George Bush in March 1988, "and not vote for you and me in May."

Police dropped charges against Kenneth Evans McGruder, 39, of 800 Pine on suspicion of unauthorized use of a motor vehicle.

Police Monday afternoon arrested Kenneth Merritt, 20, of 1001 Birdwell at the police station on an assault warrant.

Motorist smashes barricades

A 25-year-old Big Spring man was injured Monday evening when his motorcycle collided with a barricade at the intersection of Gregg and Edwards.

Ronnie Ray Barber, 25, of 1200 Sycamore, however, refused medical treatment, according to the police report.

Barber's 1982 brown and gold Honda Goldwing 1100 cc motorcycle collided with a barricade and cones blocking the left lane of south Gregg at the intersection, the report stated. Barber had been traveling south on Gregg before the accident.

According to the accident report, Barber didn't see the barricades until he was on top of them.

The police officer who filed the report listed four factors as contributing to the accident: no forewarning or detour sign; sand put on the roadway by construction crews that caused a haze in the air, lowering visibility; oncoming traffic's headlights; and the difficulty in spotting the barricades.

Bank fund started for wreck victim

A fund has been started at the Coahoma State Bank for wreck victim Derrell Douglass of Coahoma. Douglass is listed in serious condition at Lubbock General Hospital. Donations may be made to Derrell Douglass Fund, Coahoma State Bank, Coahoma, Tx. 79511.

"We haven't had any other problems other than the prices keep increasing," said Jane Daughhettee, who owns Ray's Fina at 501 E. FM 700 with her husband. "We have large tanks, and they were full at the time of the fire. We haven't had to buy any, but we have had to increase prices," she said.

According to Mrs. Daughhettee, her station's prices have "gone up a full 10 cents" to $1.20 for unleaded and $1.13 for regular.

"We haven't run short or nothing, but we've come close," said Billy Henkel, the owner of Super Save Drive In Grocery Store at 1610 Gregg, a convenience store that sells self-service gasoline.

Henkel said he received most of his supplies from McCormick and Son of Snyder, which has had to bring supplies in from Lubbock, he said.

"So far, it hasn't affected us too much," Henkel said. "Everybody in town got scared the day of the Cosden fire and the price went up to $1.08 (for regular gasoline). It dropped back down to $1.06, but it's gone back to $1.08."

marketing course that is not only causing severe hardships to our members ... but, more importantly, directly threatens consumers with higher pump prices for gasoline," he said.

McGinnis said that major oil companies have invested millions of dollars to expand an expensive network of retail service stations.

"Then, in a vain attempt to justify that investment, they have begun competing unfairly ... temporarily selling gasoline and other products below their cost of operation, and trying to stop any expansion of independents in metropolitan markets coveted by the major oil companies themselves," McGinnis said.

The store's unleaded gasoline also increased 2 cents, to $1.14, he said.

Diesel prices have increased the most at her station, said Ruby Burns, manager of the Southwest Energy Distributors Fina station at 201 N. Benton.

"We're buying from different Fina suppliers, and we raised prices for the difference in wholesale prices," Burns said. "We raised it about 10 cents on diesel and we went up 2 cents on gasoline."

Ernie Morgan, owner of Ernie's Fina Service at 2005 Gregg also said he has had to increase prices at his station because of the effects of the Cosden fire on supplies.

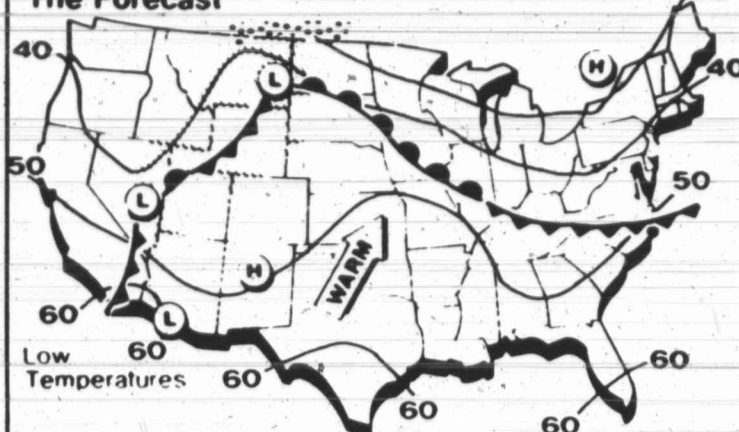

"We're still getting gas, but it has gone up," Morgan said. "But it went up 5 cents before the fire. I guess it's just that time of year when the prices go up."

He said gasoline prices at his station have increased 7 cents in the last two to three weeks.

One of the principal Fina jobbers in Big Spring, Sam Thurman of the Thurman Oil Co., could not be reached for comment because he was out of town, according to an office employee.

Taxpayers' last stand

A modern-day Lady Godiva protesting taxation in Pittsburgh, Thomas Jefferson decrying "tyranny" in New York and anti-tax protesters of various stripes greeted Americans faced with that last-minute income tax crunch.

Many of those facing the day of reckoning rushed Monday to banks to open tax-sheltered individual retirement accounts and to post offices to mail their income tax returns by midnight's deadline.

"Today has been like a zoo," said Ed Barnes, vice president for marketing of Franklin Savings Association in Kansas City, Mo. "I'm told that one branch had 25 people in line waiting to open IRA accounts when the doors opened."

Officials at other banks said the race to open the accounts, which allow Americans to deduct up to $2,000 from their reported income and shield the money and interest from taxes until retirement, began at the beginning of the month. Many banks have had special hours to accommodate the mobs.

Turner gunning for CBS

NEW YORK — Cable television magnate Ted Turner is expected to announce plans in the next two days for a hostile takeover of CBS Inc., The New York Times reported today.

Turner, owner of the Atlanta-based superstation WTBS, will make his announcement either Wednesday or Thursday, according to unidentified sources in the broadcast industry and investment community quoted by the Times.

The announcement will be made to follow CBS's annual shareholder meeting in Chicago on Wednesday afternoon, the Times said.

GM sales drop in April

DETROIT — General Motors Corp.'s lagging sales have pulled down domestic car figures again, with the industry reporting a 6.6 percent sales decline in early April.

Ford Motor Co. sales were up 7 percent in the April 1-10 period and Chrysler Corp.'s rose 15.6 percent.

But GM's fell 14.3 percent. It was the fifth time in 10 reporting periods this year that the leading automaker posted a year-to-year decline.

"These lagging numbers will be short-lived," said David Healy, automotive industry analyst at Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc. in New York.

Missouri Highway Patrol troopers stop a car at a roadblock on a highway near Branson, Mo. Monday after a trooper was killed and another wounded during a routine traffic inspection earlier in the day. The FBI said the assailant in the shooting may have been one of 23 people indicted in Seattle for involvement in a Neo-Nazi group.

Shooting spree

Neo-Nazi member suspected in trooper slaying

BRANSON, Mo. (AP) — Authorities searched trains and used dogs and infrared sensors today to comb 150 square miles of mountains for a reputed member of a neo-Nazi group suspected of slaying one state trooper and wounding a second.

The suspect, identified by police as David Tate, 22, of Athol, Idaho, was named Monday in racketeering and conspiracy indictments returned in Seattle against reputed members of the white-supremacist group known as The Order.

About 80 members of the Missouri Highway Patrol, county and local police and the FBI set up roadblocks, used infrared sensors from planes and tracking dogs in the Ozark Mountain country, said highway patrol Capt. Lee Thompson.

Authorities cut back the search early today and concentrated on preventing Tate from escaping the area, Thompson said.

"He's murdered an officer," said patrol Lt. Ralph Biele. "I can't see this man walking out of the brush with his hands up."

Search parties checked homes and other buildings in the sparsely populated area and authorities stopped trains that had passed through.

The manhunt began after troopers Jimmie Linegar, 31, of Reed's Spring, and Allen Hines, 35, of Branson, were shot Monday afternoon during a routine traffic check, Biele said.

The officers had stopped a 1975 Chevrolet van with a

Nevada license plate and the driver showed an Oregon driver's license for Matthew Mark Samuels, 23, Biele said. A computer check indicated that was an alias used by Tate, who was wanted on an Oregon weapons violation, he said.

After the license check turned up the violation, the van's driver shot Linegar, who was wearing a bullet-proof vest, four times with a silenced, automatic pistol, Biele said. He died two hours later.

The driver then walked to the back of the van and shot Hines three times, knocking him under the van, Biele said. Hines fired "two or three times" at the man's legs and the suspect fled south into the brush, he said.

Hines, who was shot in the arm, hip and neck, was in fair condition early today at Skaggs Memorial Hospital in Taney County.

Although one officer, spoke on condition of anonymity, said other weapons were found in the van, officials declined to comment on its contents.

Biele, noting the rugged condition of the area, said the suspect "could hide a long time" before he was found. However, he said that sooner or later he might emerge in an attempt to get food or steal a vehicle.

"We have no reason to believe he's ever left the area," he said.

Sandinistas offer help

MANAGUA, Nicaragua — President Daniel Ortega said Monday his government is "willing to make gestures on sensible questions that worry the United States" if the U.S. Congress votes down funds for Nicaraguan rebels.

He referred to the approval granted to two U.S. congressmen, Reps. Dave McCurdy, D-Okla., and Bob Stump, R-Ariz., to visit the Punta Huetel airfield 13 miles south of the capital.

The Sandinista government claims the facility is a civilian airport, and Ortega said McCurdy and Stump were permitted to visit the airfield to determine its "offensive or defensive character."

"We made an exception with them, because they represented the two parties and are members of the defense and intelligence committees," Ortega said.

"A vote by Congress against the $14 million (requested by President Reagan to aid the anti-Sandinista rebels) would be more beneficial for this country, since we would be on the threshold of a new type of relation between the United States and Latin America," Ortega said.

Tokyo market plummets

TOKYO — Tokyo's stock market suffered its biggest single-day decline in history today, with the Nikkei Dow Jones index dropping 345.45 points.

Several brokers blamed the slide in part on jitters stemming from Japan's economic frictions with the United States and Common Market.

They said a 150-point decline in the first hour of trading intensified general market jitters, and that selling snowballed. Today's slide broke a mark set on Sept. 28, 1981, when the market dropped 302.84 points.

Before the average started edging up toward the last half-hour of trading, the Nikkei Dow Jones average had plunged 405.80 points. It finally settled at 12,207.28 at the bell.

Runoff called in Peru

LIMA, Peru — Alan Garcia of the center-left Aprista party won a strong plurality in Peru's presidential election, and opponents of his Marxist rival began a campaign Monday to avoid the runoff election required under the constitution.

Official results are not expected for weeks, but returns compiled by television networks and national newspapers indicated Garcia won about 45 percent of the vote cast Sunday.

Officials halt prison uprising

ODENVILLE, Ala. (AP) — Authorities credited a show of force by state law officers and National Guardsmen for the surrender of inmates who held the warden and 21 other people hostage for about 10 hours at a state prison.

More than 200 prisoners, making a wide-ranging list of demands, seized the classification office at St. Clair County Correctional Facility Monday morning using clubs, knives and guns for the attack that injured seven prison employees and at least five inmates.

The uprising ended about 10 hours later with the release of all the captives. Prison Commissioner Fred Smith refused to accept a list of 30 demands, most seeking greater personal liberty behind prison walls, except for allowing a filmed statement by three rebel inmates.

"As we started approaching darkness, I made the decision we would not go into the night and from day to day," said Smith. "I told them that my patience was running short."

With heavily armed state troopers and National Guardsmen ringing the prison along with local officers and prison personnel, most of the rebellious inmates began drifting back to cellblocks. Smith promised the remaining inmates there would be "no physical retribution, no one would be abused."

None of the injuries were serious, although three employees, including two beaten unconscious in the takeover, were hospitalized, hospital and prison officials said.

John Hale, information officer for the prison system, said one inmate was hospitalized, apparently from a drug overdose. Officers ransacked by the inmates included the prison pharmacy.

On July 25, inmates issued a list of grievances in which they called the prison "a powder keg ready to explode."

The statement added: "The prisoners at St. Clair prison have about arrived at the breaking point."

"You cannot treat people like animals and think brute force will repress rebellion against such treatment," said the statement which was signed only with "Prisoners of St. Clair Prison."

Warden Larry Spears, 36, was among the hostages.

Astronauts attach swatter to satellite

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Working with great speed, two spacewalkers floated into Discovery's open cargo bay today and attached to the shuttle's robot arm crude "flyswatter" tools designed to save an $80 million communications satellite.

"Job well done," Mission Control commended them.

The unrehearsed work by astronauts David Griggs and Jeffrey Hoffman was the first step in a hastily arranged, but well-thought-out plan to try to rescue the Syncom satellite.

Early Wednesday, Discovery's crew will close the 40-mile gap with the satellite, move in and try to snag a four-inch lever on the side of the huge rotating payload with holes cut in the plastic flap-like ends of the tools, which look like large flyswatters.

The lever is an on-off switch for electrical power, and was supposed to have tripped outward automatically when the astronauts deployed Syncom on Saturday. Without power, the satellite is useless.

Working in cumbersome $2.1 million space suits, Griggs and Hoffman had trouble at first as their tools, straps and other gear kept floating away at the end of tethers.

After about 40 minutes they were well-adjusted to their outside environment and within 90 minutes they had completed strapping the tools to the arm. Mission Control had estimated the task would take more than two hours.

They even took time to enjoy the breathtaking panoramic view of sun, sky, Earth and stars that surrounded them.

"Not a bad view, eh?" Hoffman remarked. "It looks different when you don't have a window frame around it."

The tools were crafted out of pieces of plastic, a window shade, tubing and other items scavenged from Discovery's cabin. Their shapes prompted Hoffman to dub the crew "the Swat Team."

The rescue exercise has extended the mission from five to seven days, with landing now set for Friday at the Kennedy Space Center. It gives Sen. Jake Garn of Utah, who is flying as a congressional observer, extra time to see how the National Aeronautics and Space Administration responds to difficult situations.

The innovative thinking that developed the "flyswatter" has helped astronauts convert bad situations into good on many missions.

Space Shuttle Discovery's mission specialists Jeffrey Hoffman, right, and David Griggs work to attach the swatters on the end of the Canadian Arm Tuesday.

"We will once again have demonstrated the flexibility of the manned system, whether we succeed or not in this," said flight director Randy Stone. "We are going to give it our best effort. Obviously, there are many possibilities that this is not the problem, but this is the only thing we can do anything about. An action like this does have a lower probability of success than we normally go into an exercise with."

"Our ingenuity people have been working overtime," Mission Control's Bob Springer told the astronauts Monday as he sent them instructions on how to make the tools.

PUBLIC NOTICE

AT&T Communications of the Southwest, Inc. ("AT&T Communications"), in accordance with the Public Utility Regulatory Act and the rules of the Public Utility Commission of Texas ("PUC") hereby gives notice of its intent to implement a new schedule of rates for its services. The new rates will be effective May 14, 1985, unless otherwise determined by the PUC. All customers and classes of customers would be affected by the proposed rates.

AT&T Communications has filed a reprice of its tariffs designed to more closely recover access and other costs for WATS and 800 Service and all private line services including Channel Services, Foreign Exchange (FX), DATAPHONE Digital Service, and OCC Facilities.

Also proposed is the institution of a charge for Directory Assistance to begin to recover access costs incurred for such service and increases in rates for operator assisted AT&T Long Distance calls. The initial minute charge for all AT&T Long Distance calls 51 miles or less are proposed for increases to reflect the access charges approved by the PUC for such calls.

The proposed new rates for all services would result in an increase in adjusted test period revenues of $139 million or 12.7 percent.

A complete copy of the proposed tariffs are on file with the Texas Public Utility Commission.

Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should notify the Commission as soon as possible. A request to intervene or participate or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Blvd., Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. Cleanup attitude can be infectious

A successful spring cleaning complements a beautiful spring. The combination is a double dose of sparkle for the city's streets and yards. The impetus gained from the weekend cleanup campaign must be maintained.

There is good incentive to keep up the work of tidying property and thoroughfares. A generous season has given enough moisture to make the city green, giving residents a running start at making their yards at least manageable if not showplaces.

The mesquites are out, a sure sign that the last vestiges of winter have passed. South and Scenic mountains are blanketed in light green growth. Farmers, readying for the planting season, are encouraged by the wealth of rainfall.

A massive volunteer effort Saturday resulted in absolute sparkle along Gregg Street, FM 700 and Third and Fourth streets. When 140 volunteers had done their four-hour stints, the landfill was 11 dump-truck loads fuller, and the city's residents were the benefactors.

The "clean" attitude must not stop here. Momentum captured in Saturday's effort can be held. Property owners, tenants and business owners can easily carry on. It's just a matter of awareness and pride.

The rational mind of 1 Ohio banker

The recent savings and loan scandal in Ohio has shaken the banking industry very badly. What happened was the Home State Savings Bank had invested its depositors' money in a Florida company that specialized in dealing in government securities. The company was shut down by the SEC after it couldn't account for millions of dollars of bonds it claimed to have on hand. When word got back to Ohio that Home State was stuck with bad paper, the good citizens of Cincinnati decided it might be prudent to take their money out of the bank while there was some still left.

Unfortunately everyone got the idea at the same time, and panic set in, not only for Home State customers, but also for other banking institutions in Ohio. The governor had no choice but to declare a long bank holiday to cool down all the people who were screaming for their savings.

I asked a former Ohio banker (not Home State) who also got burned how something like this could take place.

"We made a mistake. It could have happened to anybody."

"That's what the people of Ohio are afraid of," I said. "Why would a bank risk so much money with a small Florida securities company?"

"You should have seen their offices in Florida. Every dealer had a suite overlooking the ocean."

"You mean you invested your depositors' money in a firm because you were impressed with their offices?"

"Of course not. I didn't give them any funds until the officers took me for a ride on their 70-foot yacht. I'll say this, people in Florida really know how to live."

"Hold it," I said. "Bankers don't risk their customers' savings in a company just because it owns a yacht."

"It wasn't only the yacht. They also paid more interest than other firms in the bond business. The competition for deposits is fierce these days, and if we can offer just a quarter of a percent more to the public we can put the guy across the street out of business. People don't understand that we can't let their money sit in our vaults. If we offer them a higher rate of interest, then we have to get a higher rate of interest for ourselves. That's why we went to Florida. They were able to pay us more, and at the same time it was safe because they were backing our deposits with government securities. Is that a sure thing, or isn't it?"

"Probably, except many of the securities didn't exist."

"Now you're getting into technicalities."

"Why didn't you ask to see the bonds?"

"We did. Do you think we're from Missouri?"

"And what happened?"

"They showed them to us and then put them back in the safe."

"Didn't it occur to you that they might have been showing the same collateral to different customers over and over again?"

"Frankly it never crossed our minds. This one guy had a home you wouldn't believe, with a tennis court, Olympic-size pool and race horses. Nobody lives like that unless they're honest."

"In retrospect wouldn't your bank have been better off if you had taken the bonds back to Ohio instead of leaving them in Miami?"

"I couldn't have done that. If I had asked for the securities I would have hurt their feelings, and they would have told me to invest my money somewhere else."

"Perhaps that would have been the best thing that could have happened to you. At least you wouldn't have tossed all your depositors' money into the Okefenokee swamp."

"Yeh, but at the same time I would never have gotten such a good interest rate for them either."

Terrorists sucker Congress

WASHINGTON — About 200 members of Congress have been suckered into writing letters of endorsement for a terrorist group whose cadres participated in the seizure of the U.S. Embassy and 52 hostages in Iran. In fact, the group advocated putting the hostages on trial as spies, and staged a demonstration protesting their release.

This militant Marxist organization has sent fast-talking Iranian exiles, soaped, pressed and wearing tailored suits and neatly knotted ties to visit Capitol Hill. They have persuaded gullible congressmen that they are really "freedom fighters" against the Ayatollah Khomeini.

It's technically true that these Marxist revolutionaries, once pro-Khomeini, turned against him after he began a remorseless crackdown on communist elements in Iran. They now call themselves the "People Mojahedin Organization of Iran" — a name that apparently sounds enough like the anti-Soviet Mujahideen guerrillas in Afghanistan to confuse the unwary.

We unmasked the Iranian Mojahedin terrorists last August and told how they had hoodwinked several members of Congress into writing letters of support. We even gave the names of four U.S. officers the Mojahedin had bragged of assassinating in Iran.

Some of the gullied congressmen quickly repudiated the Mojahedin, but the Iranian Marxists merely redoubled their lobbying efforts on the Hill. Now the State Department has privately warned members of Congress that they are being courted by militants who are devout Marxists, stridently anti-American and violent.

The department's warning is contained in a one-page summary of an intelligence report on the Iranian exile group. Our associate Lucette Lagnado has obtained the report, which says the group was formed to combat "U.S. imperialism" and "criminal Zionism." These are regarded by the Mojahedin as "the principal forces which have corrupted Iran and oppressed the world."

According to the document, members of the group "have advocated the use of violence since their inception" and have participated in "bombings, assassinations of Iranians, attacks on Israeli offices in Tehran and bank robberies."

The Mojahedin apparently were among the student militants who seized the U.S. Embassy in 1979.

"The Mojahedin took a measure of credit for the prolonged holding of American diplomats as hostages," notes the State Department report, "advocated putting them on trial as spies and staged a large demonstration in Tehran protesting their release (in January 1981)."

Footnote: A well-dressed exile called at our office to plead the Mojahedin cause. Mr. Lagnado questioned him about the group's virulent anti-American activities, including the murder of U.S. officers. He blandly dismissed the accusations.

A FISHY TALE: Not long ago we were leaked a copy of a memo from Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige to his fellow Cabinet members at Defense, State, Justice and Energy, plus the heads of the space agency, the CIA, the budget office and the National Security Council.

The memo asked for a crackdown on the release of unclassified scientific and technical reports to the public. Despite his high-hush tone the memo had a familiar aroma: fishy. It was so full of quotable quotes, phrases and anecdotes — though woefully lacking in hard evidence — that we concluded it was written in the specific hope that it would be leaked.

Sure enough, a few days later it was published all over the country.

Curiosity aroused, we asked Commerce for supporting data and filed a Freedom of Information Act request for the background material cited by Baldrige.

Although Baldrige had quoted "reputable scientists in government" in his memo, his aides would turn up neither the identities of these scientists nor any reports, minutes or even memos between them and Baldrige. Some of the memo's quotable quotes were from "verbal briefings," we were told, so no documentation existed. Some documents could not be turned over because they came from "other government agencies."

FORGETFUL BUDGET CUTTERS: The administration has asked for 7,500 additional examiners for the Internal Revenue Service during the next three years, estimating that they'll be able to squeeze out $2.6 billion in lost taxes by 1989.

Then, instead of a leveling off or declining — as taxpayers learn the risks of cheating — the budget proposal estimates the additional revenue at $2.8 billion in 1990. How come?

Repossessing plan for U.S. debtors

WASHINGTON (AP) — As poor countries' debts near the trillion-dollar mark, the top financial authorities of the non-communist world will debate this week how to keep the debtor nations from falling further and further behind in their payments.

The four biggest debtors — Argentina, Brazil, Mexico and Venezuela — owed U.S. banks $69.4 billion as of last September, according to figures from the Federal Reserve System. Their total debt is about $275 billion.

They have made progress since 1982, at least in their relations with foreign creditors, but it has come at the price of lowering their modest living standards at home.

Smaller debtors are worse off. One investment banker, Christine A. Bindert, senior vice president of Shearman Lehman Bros. Inc., said Friday that Peru, Bolivia and Nicaragua were for all practical purposes in default at the end of 1984.

James A. Baker III, the new secretary of the treasury, will be watched closely at the closed-door meetings. Representatives of the 147 other member governments in the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund want to know if he has any fresh ideas for dealing with a debt crisis that refuses to go away.

The first sessions at the fund's Washington headquarters

Officials, usually finance ministers and central bank directors, representing poor countries. Then officials get together from the United States and the 10 most important industrial countries. Later in the week there will be joint meetings.

One evening, if past practice is followed, there will be a secret working dinner of Baker and the finance ministers of Britain, France, West Germany and Japan.

The semiannual meetings will also deal with: — Whether the World Bank needs more capital for more long term loans to raise living standards in — What the IMF can do to harmonize the policies of its member governments. But debt is expected to be the major topic.

Brazil, with its $102 billion debt and uncertain political future, owes the most money. But Argentina, with less than one-fourth Brazil's population and a third of its area, owes almost half as much as Brazil — $47 billion.

The civilian government that Argentina elected in 1983 after seven years of military dictatorship, is facing its first test at the polls this year. Many voters are unwilling to go along with the belt-tightening that President Raul Alfonsín wants for an effort to satisfy the country's creditors.

Brazil's prices have been increasing by more than 200 percent a year and Argentina's by over 800 percent. Until measures are taken to curb the inflation, the fund has suspended its loans to them.

Richard Erb, the American who is the fund's deputy director general, told U.S. bankers last week, "When inflation is even 100 percent a year it's too high."

Although Argentina and Brazil could shake the whole international financial system if they announced a halt in their debt repayments, many other nations, large and small, are in equally bad shape.

Nigeria, the biggest country in Africa, is more than $20 billion in debt. Nigerian governments, both civilian and military, have been negotiating unsuccessfully with the fund for years over a solution, but have resisted the devaluation that many economists believe necessary.

The debt in the Philippines is about $26 billion, with political unrest and disputes over financial policy making its situation more difficult.

Saying 'no' to trash hauling

To the editor: In the past few weeks a strange feeling has surfaced in Coahoma. One that says the King Family are being harassed. (not true).

Why should your tax money be spent to pay for Mr. King's liability insurance, workman's compensation and his billing? (over $4,000 per year). Money that could be spent on city needs. (road and water line repair).

Ask why some past councilmen have tried so hard to guarantee Mr. King's contract. (Is your job guaranteed?) Even to the extent of threatening to cut off your water. Are scare tactics needed for good government? They could have made trash service a city service so the profits could be used to benefit Coahoma.

When Lawrence Aberegg, Jerry (Red) Brockman and Pat Harrison took office the city was over $114,000 in debt. They have already reduced that debt by $44,000 in one year. All done without threats, only good business.

On commies and taxation

To the editor: Mr. Abraham Shifrin, a Russian Jew, was a Soviet Army veteran, became a lawyer after WWII and served in the Ministry of Defense in Moscow. In 1953 he was arrested, accused of spying for Israel and America, and sent to prison for ten years. After four more years of internal exile, he spent several years actively promoting the cause of Soviet Jewry and finally, in 1970 managed to leave Russia and go to Israel.

Mr. Shifrin has this to say about religious persecution in Soviet Russia, "The Soviets persecute not just Jews. They arrest people even for telling anti-Soviet jokes. They shoot Christian priests. They persecute Christian believers and suppress all religions. They destroyed 200,000 churches in the last decade. In the Soviet Union it is a crime to have a Bible."

"In the Soviet Union, I never met one man even among Communist officials who believed in Communism. They hate Communism because they know it. But here in America, I have met such idiots who believe in Communism."

"Only 100 meters from the Kremlin there is a (Rockefeller) Chase Manhattan Bank, and it is not for the Soviet people who cannot enter this building. The reason men like David Rockefeller deal with Communists is that all men want something. He and other multi-billionaires have everything except for one thing — power over the whole world."

Think about this as you pay income tax!

Big Springers to pedal in Bike Ride '85

Howard College will be one of the communities participating in the spring fund raiser to support the work of the American Diabetes Association. A former Dallas Cowboy quarterback, Roger Staubach made this announcement as preparation for the event in Big Spring began under the direction of local chairman, Claude Patterson.

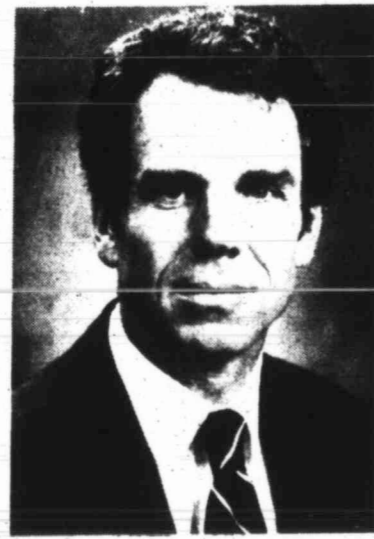

The local Bike Ride will be from 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday. Local riders will pedal for pledges while competing for prizes.

"The Bike Ride is a great event," said Staubach, State Bike Ride '85 chairman for the association. "It has many advantages besides just raising money for much needed diabetes education and research. It's great exercise."

Riders who obtain sponsors and participate in the event will earn incentive prizes based on the amount of money collected in pledges. Among the prizes riders can earn for reaching certain dollar goals are: coolers, cameras, 10-speed bikes, sleeping bags and trips.

"We're gearing up for what we believe will be an outstanding event," Patterson said. "All of us working on the event are very excited, and we have set high goals for this year. We are counting on wide spread support from our community to continue to expand the services the association offers to persons with diabetes."

Sponsor sheets are available at Taco Villa, the library, and Y.M.C.A. They also are available

Dear Abby

Early entrance throws harried hostess off

ABBY: I invited some friends over for cocktails at 6:30 p.m. That afternoon one of my guests called to confirm the time. We talked a while, and just before she hung up, she said, "I'll come by early. Good-bye." I was so surprised, I didn't say anything, but it was too late anyway.

She arrived at 5:45. I was still dressing, so I let her in and I returned to finish dressing. Then I had several last-minute things to do for the cocktail party, so I wasn't able to visit with her, or even listen to her while she followed me around babbling about one thing or another. She really upset me because I couldn't concentrate on the things I had to do, and I'm afraid I wasn't a very gracious hostess.

Is it acceptable in today's society for guests to inform the hostess that they will be coming early? And how could I have avoided this unsettling experience?

OLD-FASHIONED DEAR OLD-FASHIONED: The problem here is not what is "acceptable" in today's society; it's the difference between how you perceive your relationship with this woman, and how she perceives it.

She was presumptuous to assume that she would be welcome to come early. And you lacked the backbone to call her back and tell her it would not be convenient for her to come early — which is what you should have done.

(Every teen-ager should know the truth about drugs, sex and how to be happy. For Abby's booklet, also available in Spanish, send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 (this includes postage) to: Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 28923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Dr. Donohue

Alcohol abuse lowers male's hormones

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: This may sound like it's coming from out in left field, but I am most interested in finding the answer. I've heard that drinking alcohol can make one gay. Is that just a scare someone dreamed up, or is there any truth to it? — B.A.

It's not true. Alcohol does not produce a change in sexual orientation.

I can imagine how the story got going, however. Excessive alcohol can make a male develop external female attributes, like breast enlargement. This arises from its effects on testicles and on liver function. By causing testicular atrophy (shrinking) it can cause a reduction in male hormones produced by those glands.

At the same time, the effect of alcohol on the liver can cause an increase in the amount of female hormones. Every male produces a certain level of female hormones, which are normally processed by the liver. The inability of the alcohol-damaged liver to properly process the hormones causes their levels to increase.

Besides the breast-tissue increase, the testicle shrinkage, and loss of typically male body hair, there may also be some impotence.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I'm an ardent reader of your health column and what you advise people on various subjects. I want your advice on a matter concerning my thyroid gland, which is inactive. Would it be possible to get a non-prescription, over-the-counter aid for this, one that will activate the gland? — Mrs. H.A.

I am an ardent reader of letters like yours. They permit short, if not always encouraging, answers.

No, there is no over-the-counter aid to activate an inert thyroid gland. Such medicines are available by prescription only, and for good reason. These medicines have to be carefully adjusted, tailored, if you will, to the individual gland's degree of inactivity.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Triple slaying stuns West Texas town

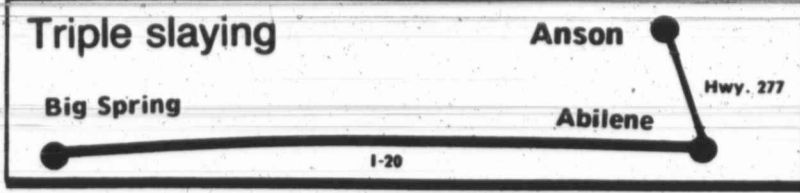

ANSON (AP) — Abel Flores Sr. had finished talking over his daughter's marital problems with a priest only an hour before he and his daughter were gunned down at a row of small storage buildings, the priest says.

"He said, 'We've got trouble,'" Father Frank Nelan said Monday. "I said, 'What are we going to do about it?'"

Authorities say Flores' son-in-law, Roy Herrera, had already decided.

Herrera, 21, went to the building near St. Michael's Catholic Church about 3:30 p.m., shot Flores in the head with a .38-caliber pistol, then shot his wife Sonia, 19, from whom he was separated Saturday, authorities say.

He then turned the gun on himself, sheriff's department of-officials told the Abilene Reporter-News.

Herrera and his wife died at the scene, and Flores was pronounced dead on arrival at Hendrick Medical Center in Abilene, about 20 miles from this West Texas city of 2,700.

Anson High School, where the couple had attended school, was as quiet as the empty St. Michael's Church Monday.

"The whole school is stunned," said Donella Spurgin, who taught

Sheriff's Deputy Eric Coleman said the Herreras had spoken to Nelan about their problems and that they were storing some of their belongings at Anson Mini Storage.

Herrera and his wife agreed to meet at the storage unit, where he was going to give her some of their belongings, Coleman said.

"He had made up his mind what he was going to do," Coleman said. Herrera and his 14-year-old brother drove to the storage facility, and Mrs. Herrera came with her father, 37. Herrera brought his father's gun, said Coleman.

When Herrera arrived, his younger brother realized there might be trouble and ran to the family's nearby home, according to Coleman. On the way home he heard the gunshots, officials said.

Coleman said Mrs. Herrera went into the storage unit when the shooting started, but there was no lock on the door. He said Herrera came in and shot her in the head before killing himself.

Flores and Herrera worked at Pride Refinery between Anson and Abilene.

'Redhead killer' shakes cops

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Authorities have been frustrated in their attempts to solve a string of slayings of redheaded women in part because no one noticed or cared they were missing, an investigator said.

Of 11 red-haired victims found along highways in six states since September — the latest discovered Saturday in East Tennessee — few have been identified, making the job of finding their killer or killers even more difficult.

"What we're facing is that most of the victims are unidentified. And if they're unidentified, you can't go back and see who they were with last," Agent David Davenport of the Tennessee Bureau of Investigation said Monday.

"The problem is, these women are mostly hitchhikers or prostitutes with no strong family ties. Nobody is looking for them. Most times, nobody cares," Davenport said.

In most cases, the women were dumped along interstate highways from Pennsylvania to Texas. Investigators from several states plan to meet soon in Nashville to discuss how they can cooperate to solve the cases, Davenport said.

The most recent victims were found in Tennessee. A 12th woman slain in southern Kentucky may also be linked to the killings, authorities said.

On Saturday, a woman's body was discovered near Interstate 81 about 15 miles east of Greeneville, Tenn.

Baseball Fever

By Steve Belvin

It was good to see baseball '85 get off to such a good start. Player-manager Pete Rose was the star in leading his team to a victory on opening day. Dickie Thon made a comeback from a serious injury and Vida Blue made a comeback from drugs.

The start of the season was exciting and no doubt the 155 games ahead will be filled with just as much excitement.

It will bring new milestones and bring others closer to their long-sought goals. Rose will reach Ty Cobbs hit record by August, Rod Carew will continue to pursue 4,000 hits, Reggie Jackson will continue his assault to reach 600 homeruns and Don Sutton will strive towards 300 career wins. Those are the "for sure" milestones.

The question marks are, who will emerge as the all-time strikeout leader, Steve Carlton or Nolan Ryan? Or will Dale Murphy become the first player to win three consecutive Most Valuable Player awards?

Better yet, who will get into the playoffs. I'll tell you I'd love to see in the World Series in October. The Texas Rangers and San Francisco Giants. I guess it's all right to dream every once in a while.

The Detroit Tigers are the team to beat in the American League East.

Jack Morris and Dan Petry are the best 1-2 pitching combo around. Willie Hernandez is the "stopper" in the bullpen. The outfield has two legitimate superstars in Chet Lemons and Kirk Gibson. Don't forget about hard hitters Lance Parrish, Alan Trammell, Dave Bergman and Darrell Evans.

If anyone can unseat the Tigers, it's the vastly improved Toronto Blue Jays. The keys are relievers Bill Caudill and Gary Lavelle. The Jays starting rotation is already solid and the only weak position is catcher.

Thanks to hitters like Cal Ripken and Dave Winfield the Baltimore Orioles and New York Yankees will battle it out for third.

No the Rangers won't win the AL West, but they'll do better than the 69-92 record they posted last season.

Personally, I think the Rangers will finish in the top three. Their pitching rotation of Charlie Hough, Frank Tanana, Mike Mason, Burt Hooten and Dave Rozema is steady. Let's hope that reliever Dave Stewart doesn't have rabbit ears.

The strength of the Rangers will be the hard hitting outfield of Gary Ward, George Wright and Larry Parrish.

Unfortunately the West race will boil down between Kansas City and Minnesota. KC has the hitters and the speed while Minnesota has the pitching.

The National League East might be the hottest contested race of the season.

The Cubs, Mets and Cardinals all have shots at winning the crown. All three clubs have strong pitching rotations. But I'll give the edge to the Cubs because of strong hitters like Ryne Sandberg, Jody Davis, Gary Matthews and Leon "Bull" Durham. Big Lee Smith is the ultimate stopper in the bullpen.

The National League West will also be a good race. There are four contending teams in the division: San Diego, Atlanta, Houston and Los Angeles. It would be a welcome change to see my team, the Giants, finish above .500 this year.

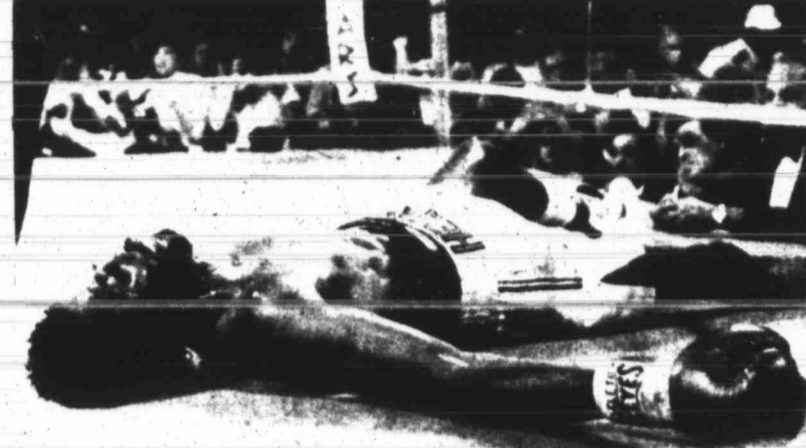

The nod goes to Atlanta. They'll be tougher with a healthy Bob Horner on third. He and Murphy are capable of hitting 70 homers together.

San Diego doesn't have the hitters Atlanta does, so they'll rely on team speed and Goose Gosage in the bullpen. The Dodgers have a good pitching staff with Fernando Valenzuela, Jerry Ruesch and Bob Welch, but their bats must come alive.

Houston has a good overall team. Pitchers Nolan Ryan, Joe Niekro and Bob Knepper are a solid foundation. Singles hitters like Thon, Craig Reynolds and Enos Cabell are consistent. But if anything holds the Astros back, it will be their lack of power-hitting.

If they can find one, then look out for Houston. So it looks like an exciting season ahead. That's what makes baseball so unique. So much can happen in 162 games.

Irresistible Force

Hagler KO's Hearns in 3rd

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — It was one of the most hyped fights in history. It lived up to every superlative — starting with "Marvelous."

Marvelous Marvin Hagler, shocking Thomas Hearns with a lightning-and-thunder assault Monday night, retained his undisputed middleweight championship and sent Hearns and his dreams of four titles cartwheeling into oblivion.

Hagler began at Hearns' midsection. Within a minute, he was unleashing bombs to the challenger's head.

Blood from a cut between Hagler's eyes soiled his face and Hearns' gold trunks. But still, Hagler waded in, staggering Hearns in each of the first two rounds.

Early in the third round, the blood was gushing from the cut on the bridge of Hagler's nose. Referee Richard Steele signaled time out, waved Hagler back to his corner and summoned ring physician Dr. Donald Romeo.

"I had to get a medical opinion on the cut," Steele said. "The doctor stated to me that the cut wasn't that bad because the blood was not blocking his vision."

Steele waved the fighters together again and Hagler resumed his assault, finally sending Hearns sprawling with a right to the jaw.

Hearns struggled to his feet at the count of nine. Steele cleared Hearns' gloves. There was nothing he could do about the challenger's eyes. They were cloudy and glazed, to go with rubbery legs.

"He was not responding," Steele said. "I didn't ask him any questions. I knew that he'd had enough."

Dusting the gloves off is just routine. But at the same time, I was taking inventory."

And he found nothing left in Hearns' arsenal. Two minutes and 1 second into the third round, Steele waved the fight to an end.

With his 51st knockout, Hagler improved his record to 61 victories against two losses and two draws, while handing Hearns only the second loss of his 42-fight career.

And Hearns' dream of ultimately winning four championship belts was dealt a blow as brutal as the one that jangled his brains.

Hagler and Hearns had railed at each other during months of prefight promotion. It was going to be hard to live up to the simple yet awesome claim that this was to be "The Fight."

But it was. The two fighters whaled away at each other for eight of the most intense minutes in the sport's history. "I haven't seen that much action in three rounds, ever," said Steele, a referee for 15 years.

Roughly 2 million fans saw it worldwide, more than the record 1.6 million who saw the first Muhammad Ali-Joe Frazier fight.

There is a good chance it will net more than the record $22 million which Larry Holmes and Gerry Cooney brought in three years ago.

"We gave the people what they deserved, what they paid their money for," Hearns said. "It was one damn good fight. But it doesn't stop here. If it happened once, let's do it again!"

Hagler's dream remains very much alive. He is chasing Carlos Monzon's record of 14 successful middleweight championship defenses. This was his 11th. "Hopefully, we can knock on the door of history," Hagler said.

Hearns, the World Boxing Association welterweight champion before he relinquished that share of the crown to Sugar Ray Leonard in his only other loss, remains the World Boxing Council super welterweight champion.

He had dreamed of taking Hagler's belt, then going after the one held by Michael Spinks, the undisputed light heavyweight champion.

"I was picturing myself with four belts around my waist, my chest, my neck, my legs," Hearns said with a beatific smile. "How in the hell was I gonna walk?"

He couldn't — not after Hagler was finished with him. He had been standing at the end, but he had to be carried back to his corner like a sleeping child by a tuxedoed member of his entourage. It was 45 minutes before he was sufficiently recovered to appear in public again.

"I just thank the Lord for letting me come out not being damaged in any way," Hearns said. "I still have my proper senses."

"I don't take defeat easily. I have to give Marvin respect, proper respect, for being a great champion. The man has not held the title eight years for nothing."

"I was looking to reach greatness, to make history. It hurts...I always seem to reach-the big fights and it always seems to be a problem."

Hearns, despite his predictions of a third-round knockout, had been expected to keep Hagler at arm's length for the first few rounds before going for the stopper.

Dodgers nip Astros, 5-3

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In the past, the Los Angeles Dodgers have been known for solid starting pitching and a powerful starting lineup.

But the guys coming off the bench have been grabbing their share of the spotlight lately.

Rookie second baseman Mariano Duncan, who was called up from the minor leagues only because a couple of front-liners were injured, and long reliever Carlos Diaz were the stars of Monday's 5-3 National League baseball victory over the Houston Astros.

Duncan was inserted into the lineup in the first inning when second baseman Steve Sax reinjured his right leg. He eventually provided the game-winning blow with his first big-league home run.

Then Diaz was the eventual winner, pitching three scoreless innings. Diaz took the mound when starter Orel Hershiser left the game because of stiffness in his lower back after four innings.

"We have a much stronger bench than some people have given us credit for," said Diaz, who raised his record to 2-0 by scattering three hits and striking out three, "and we seem to be doing our best work in the late innings."

That, at least, was the way it went Monday.

After Duncan took over for Sax, who was injured while batting in the bottom of the first inning, he walked and scored an unearned run on Pedro Guerrero's sacrifice fly.

However, the Astros scored a run off Hershiser in the second when Jose Cruz singled and scored on Mark Bailey's single, then took a

Smith wins Boston

BOSTON (AP) — With about six miles remaining in the 89th Boston Marathon, visions of the 1983 New York City Marathon danced in Geoff Smith's head.

In New York two years ago, Smith was the heart-rending second-place finisher. After leading from the 16th through the 26th miles, he was overtaken by New Zealander Rod Dixon with exactly 385 yards remaining.

The scene of the exhausted Smith lying crumpled on the pavement at the finish line, and the exultant Dixon celebrating with both hands raised in the air provided a magnificent backdrop for a television audience of millions throughout the world and provided photographers with a dramatic picture.

The scenario was somewhat different in Monday's Boston Marathon, and then again, it was similar for the 31-year-old Smith, the overwhelming favorite to become the first foreigner in 21 years to win the race for the second consecutive year.

The difference was that Smith was not dueling anyone for the lead this time. The similarity was in the fact that he was exhausted again, this time just past the 20-mile mark, where his hamstrings began to ache. "New York (the memory of it) was there all the time," the gritty Smith said about the last six miles, where his hamstrings continually cramped, the last time less than a mile from the finish line.

"Between 24 and 25 (miles), I stumbled, I felt like I was in New York," he added, after repeating as the Boston winner in the relatively slow time of 2 hours, 14 minutes, 5 seconds — the slowest in this marathon in eight years.

Despite the cramps, despite having to jog, walk and kick out at the kinks in the legs caused by the heat — it reached as high as 71 degrees and was 67 some 10 minutes before the race — Smith won by one of the biggest margins in Boston Marathon history. He finished 5:06 ahead of Gary Tuttle, the 37-year-old runner-up from Ventura, Calif., who completed the race in 2:19:11.

Smith had gone out at a killing pace in an effort to break the world best of 2:08:05, set by Steve Jones of Wales in the 1984 America's Marathon-Chicago.

Although unhappy with the winning time, he was not sorry that he had run so fast so early, a pace that was ahead of Jones' mark through 19 miles.

Baseball Roundup, 2-B

3-1 lead in the third on Jerry Mumphrey's two-run triple.

Los Angeles pulled to within a run in the fourth when Mike Marshall singled, and eventually scored another unearned run on a passed ball. The Dodgers then tied the score in the sixth when Marshall walked and scored on Sid Bream's sacrifice fly.

Sabres, Bruins back in Stanley playoffs

By The Associated Press
 A short time ago, hockey fans in Quebec eagerly anticipated an Adams Division playoff final between the archrival Montreal Canadiens and Quebec Nordiques. But if momentum is worth anything, the Buffalo Sabres and Boston Bruins could short-circuit such a Battle of Quebec this year.

The Sabres, after trailing 2-0, rebounded with a pair of home-ice victories to tie their best-of-five National Hockey League series against Quebec at 2-2. Boston overcame a 4-1 deficit Sunday night to beat the Canadiens 7-6, knotting that series 2-2.

Buffalo is at Quebec and Boston at Montreal tonight in the deciding games, while the only other first round series still going has the New York Islanders at the Washington Capitals. The Islanders, like the Sabres, are seeking to become the first NHL team to climb out of a 2-0 hole in a best-of-five series to win.

Already advancing to the second round, which will be a best-of-seven and will begin Thursday night, are Philadelphia, Edmonton, Winnipeg, Chicago and Minnesota. The Oilers and Jets will meet in the Smythe Division finals, while the Black Hawks and North Stars go in the Norris. The Flyers await the winner of the Islanders-Capitals series.

"We won't lose this series," said Montreal right wing Mario Tremblay. "We'll start the next game like lions."

The Canadiens may have to do so without rookie defenseman Chris Chelios, whose departure with a sprained right knee at 3:24 of the second period Sunday night had the same effect of a pin being inserted into a balloon. Montreal led 4-1 when Chelios was bodychecked by Terry O'Reilly and Geoff Courtnall.

Chelios was examined Monday and was listed as a doubtful starter.

What does the absence of Chelios mean to the Canadiens?

"It made quite a difference in the game Sunday night," said the Bruins Ken Linseman, who had three goals and two assists to pace Boston's rally. "When he's on the ice, he's constantly in possession of the puck. He's a lot like (Bruins All-Star defenseman) Raymond Bourque; he can control a game."

One thing is clear to Montreal Coach Jacques Lemaire: whether Chelios plays or not, the Canadiens must avoid being mere spectators.

"If you stop playing, the way we did Sunday night, you can make any team look good," he said.

Meanwhile, what the Nordiques have in their favor as they return to Le Colisee to host the Sabres is they have not been beaten at home by Buffalo since December 1982, a string of 10 victories and two ties.

"It's got to end some time," said Sabres Coach Scotty Bowman. "It may as well be now."

That mastery is not what was on the minds of the Quebec hierarchy Monday. They were more concerned with the broken jaw suffered by forward Anton Stastny on Saturday night when he was struck by the stick of Sabres defenseman Mike Ramsey.

Ozzie celebrates Cardinals win

By BEN WALKER
 AP Sports Writer
 Acrobatic Ozzie Smith occasionally does front flips and back flips on the ballfield when he's happy.

So when baseball's best-fielding shortstop signed a four-year contract extension that will pay him more than $2 million per season, he found another way to celebrate.

He hit a home run. For only the eighth time in his eight-year career.

"It put a little icing on the cake," Smith said Monday night after his home run helped the St. Louis Cardinals beat the Montreal Expos 6-1.

Earlier in the day, Smith, who was in the final year of his contract, ended rumors of a possible trade when he signed the rich extension. Hours later, in the sixth inning of the Cardinals' home opener before 42,986 fans, he homered off Montreal reliever Dan Schatzeder.

Ironically, Smith's last home run came last year during the Cardinals' home opener.

"That's just the way it worked out," he said.

In other National League games, San Diego bopped San Francisco 8-3. Pittsburgh halted New York 4-1. Los Angeles beat Houston 5-3. Cincinnati held off Atlanta 9-8 and Chicago nudged Philadelphia 2-1.

The Cardinals had two reasons to celebrate Monday night. Besides Smith's home run, Bob Forsch scattered eight hits in a strong performance.

Forsch missed half of the 1984 season because of back surgery, and his effort against the Expos marked his first complete game since he pitched a no-hitter against Montreal on Sept. 26, 1983.

Padres 8, Giants 3
 Carmelo Martinez, taken off the disabled list earlier in the day, drilled two home runs, including a grand slam, to help defending NL champion San Diego win its home opener.

Martinez connected for his first career slam in the seventh inning off reliever Greg Minton. In the fourth, Martinez homered after Terry Kennedy belted a two-run shot off Atee Hammaker, 0-1.

Pirates 4, Mets 1
 Mike Bielecki, a rookie starter, and John Candelaria, a veteran who has been turned into a reliever, combined to end New York's season-opening, five-game winning streak.

Bielecki, the minor league pitcher of the year in 1984 when he went 19-3 at Class AAA Hawaii, went 6 2/3 innings. Candelaria then took over and earned the save.

Reds 9, Braves 8
 Nick Esasky hit Cincinnati's first home run of the season and the Reds scored five times in the first inning off Pascual Perez to take a straight victories, Seattle lost 7-4 to Oakland Monday night as baseball's hottest hitter, Mike Davis, hit his third homer and collected his 11th RBI in four days for the A's.

"We knew coming in here how hot Davis was," Seattle Manager Chuck Cottier said.

Despite the loss, however, the Mariners already have gained some respect with their unbeaten first week.

"They're hot, all right," winning pitcher Bill Krueger said. "I don't think losing one game is going to affect them much. But I hope it does and we can sweep this series."

In the American League's other two games, Chicago edged Boston 6-5 in 11 innings and California blanked Minnesota 5-0.

Angels 5, Twins 0
 California left-hander Geoff Zahn improved his career April record to 25-5 with a six-hit shutout over Minnesota, with home run help from Ruppert Jones and Jerry Narron.

The loss was the ninth in the Twins' last 11 home openers. Ironically, Zahn, who pitched for the Twins for four seasons, was the winner in their only two victories.

Minnesota starter Mike Smithson, 1-1, whose 35 homers allowed last year led the majors, gave up Jones' shot in the second inning and Narron's in the fourth.

White Sox 6, Red Sox 5
 Julio Cruz snapped a 4-4 tie with a two-run single off Bob Stanley in the 11th inning, giving Chicago its Patriots' Day victory over Boston.

A walk to Ozzie Guillen, Greg Walker's single off Stanley's foot and a groundout that moved the runners up set the stage for Cruz's line single to left.

The Red Sox, who rallied from a 4-3 deficit in the ninth on Jim Rice's two-out single, threatened to come back again in the bottom of the 11th when Glenn Hoffman doubled, moved to third on an infield out and scored on a passed ball. But winner Al Jones, 1-0, allowed no more baserunners.

Six Flags Over Texas artisans bring horses to life

ARLINGTON (AP) — The carrousel horse — with flowing tail, glass diamond saddle and immaculate gold body — inside the Six Flags Over Texas management office was just a side project for three of the park's artisans.

But the teasing beauty of the horse, enticing riders despite its helpless immobility, launched the most ambitious antique restoration project in Six Flags history.

A few years ago, Six Flags officials purchased a stable of carrousel horses as backups from Astrodome builder Judge Roy Hofeinz, who collected them as a hobby.

Discarded in a balcony of the park's Sign Department warehouse, the horses lay in a heap.

Then Ed Armstrong, 28, John Gavia, 41, and his 31-year-old brother, Dan, decided to refurbish one of the horses — more for fun than anything else.

That horse was put in the management offices.

"They did such a marvelous job on that one horse that we said 'hey guys, we've got a valuable asset here. Let's make this carrousel what it should be,'" said park spokesman Bruce Neal.

All 66 of Six Flags' carrousel horses were scheduled to be restored to their glorious turn-of-the-century beauty.

So the Gavias, both wood carving hobbyists, and Armstrong took on the project amid their usual chores of maintaining and creating some of the 6,500 signs that fill the tourist attraction.

"It's a big challenge to reproduce a piece of art," said John Gavia, supervisor of the Sign Department. "You're missing a leg that was carved by one of the world's most famous carrousel carvers, and it's something that has to be done right, without any shortcuts."

The carrousel, the last one built by William Dentzel, carried endless lines of smiling children in Rockaway's Playland in Long Island, N.Y., during the 1920s.

Dentzel, considered one of the greatest American carrousel horse carvers, operated the ride himself for the 1926 and 1927 seasons.

When the city of New York condemned the property in 1937, the horses were stored until 1945. But Rockaway's reopened, and the horses known as "standers and jumpers" were in business again.

In 1962, Six Flags bought the ride from Rockaway's for $25,000.

Unfortunately, the first thing the maintenance department did to the horses was coat them in Fiberglas — a death certificate for the basswood carvings.

Ed Armstrong carefully sands around the eye of a wooden carrousel horse. Armstrong is one of the artisans at Six Flags Over Texas working on restoring all 66 of the horses that ride the circa 1900 ride.

Judge's order re-suspends 'Legion of Doom' member

FORT WORTH (AP) — A Paschal High School senior believed by police to be a member of a vigilante group has been re-suspended for allegedly carrying a handgun on campus.

State District Judge Claude Williams on Monday rescinded another judge's temporary restraining order that had allowed Bradley Biells to continue attending classes after being suspended earlier this month.

Williams said Biells, who was not at the hearing, must leave school Monday and not return until a panel of three school board members rules on his appeal of the suspension.

Biells was suspended April 9 after allegedly showing a gun to a baseball coach on the school grounds Feb. 22, according to Paschal Principal Radford Gregg.

Gregg said he decided to suspend Biells after police told him the youth had displayed the weapon in the parking lot of the school's fieldhouse.

The principal said police told him about the incident while investigating the "Legion of Doom," a vigilante-style group of high school students suspected of more than 30 felonies. Police have identified Biells as a member of the group.

Biells' attorney, David Lobingier, contended his client would suffer irreparable harm if not allowed to remain in class and take the six-week examinations that began Monday.

Lobingier also said Biells' future employment and relationships with students could suffer.

School officials testified that Biells could be placed in an alternative school that would enable him to make up work, take his final exams and graduate.

Rulings by the hearing panel may be appealed to the school board and, in turn, to the Texas Education Agency in Austin, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram said.

Still pending is Biells' request for a court order preventing the school district from disciplining him. A hearing on the motion is scheduled for April 22.

Cecelia Speer, assistant director of student affairs for the Fort Worth Schools, said the panel is expected to meet today.

Ms. Speer said the school board hearing panel could lift the suspension, place Biells in another school or alternative program or suspend him for the remainder of the school year.

Berkeley police arrest protesters, students

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Police in riot gear moved in at dawn today and started arresting anti-apartheid protesters camping out on the steps of Sproul Hall, birthplace of the Free Speech Movement of the 1960s.

No violence was reported as officers rounded up about 114 demonstrators by 8:30 a.m. PST, said university spokesman Ray Colvig.

About 40 campus police officers surrounded approximately 200 students who were in the seventh day of their protest, warning them three times that they would be arrested if they did not leave.

About half the protesters moved off the steps but the rest stayed, said Colvig.

Police escorted the students into the building, where they were booked on charges of trespassing and illegal lodging, Colvig said.

The demonstrators had been warned Monday that officials would take action if the sit-in did not end.

University Chancellor Ira Michael Heyman told the students in a letter that they had turned the event into a "camp-in."

The university will "take action to open the doors of Sproul Hall, take down the signs and end the camping out," Heyman said.

His warning came just hours before a noon rally that drew about 1,000 students.

Students had complained that the regents, who meet next month in Berkeley, would not discuss divestment of the university's $1.7 billion invested in firms doing business in South Africa. The issue is on the June agenda, when regents will meet in Santa Cruz after the semester has ended.

In his statement to the protesters, Heyman said, "events in South Africa continue to show the cruelty and the shame of apartheid. About that there is no disagreement in our community."

But, he said, the protest at Sproul Hall, the administration building, "has become illegal, despite repeated efforts by the administration to ensure that campus rules are observed."

The demonstration was endorsed by employee unions, local politicians and such counter-culture figures as singer Holly Near and Mario Savio, a key figure in the Free Speech Movement 20 years ago at Berkeley.

"Until the university discusses our demands we're not discussing their demands," said Ross Hammond, a member of the campus student senate.

"The university really put us in this position. People have been calling for divestment since 1977 and there has been no movement. Every year the regents say (they are) responsible to employees to guard their investments, but the employees have been asking for divestment," Hammond said Monday.

Watson Laetsch, vice chancellor of undergraduate affairs, said Heyman would organize a forum for groups to present their views.
