Tornado threatens city

By CAROL BALDWIN
Staff Writer

A spectacular lightning display and high winds accompanied by the sounds of wailing warning sirens frightened many area residents Monday night as a possible tornado was sited near the Martin County line.

Because of the density of the thunderstorm rolling through the area, the National Weather Service issued a tornado warning and advised area residents to be prepared to take cover in case a tornado developed. Although early reports indicated that a tornado was possible, no reports of damage were logged during the evening.

A spokesman at the Martin County Sheriff's Department said the storm roared through Stanton with the promise of a heavy rainfall but delivered only .3 of an inch.

"We were hoping for more rain," the spokesman said. "There were high winds but no one sited a tornado."

In Big Spring the storm was preceded by a brief, rolling dust storm and high winds. Reports of rain varied from .2 of an inch to more than a half-inch.

The U.S.-Big Spring Field Station, located north of Big Spring, recorded .24 of an inch of rain yesterday. That brings the year to date total to 8.04 inches. Normal rainfall at this time of year is 5.65.

Tommy Hart of 1750 Purdue said he received .32 of an inch Monday night.

Chuck Benz, a resident on the city's southwest side, said he received .26 of an inch of rain.

Boyce Hale, who lives on the Sterling City Route, said he received .52 of an inch of rain during the evening.

Larry Shaw of Knott received .42 of an inch of rain at his home. Farmers in Knott were reporting between a half-inch and .6 of an inch this morning, Shaw said.

Shaw said winds "blew a little and we

No-shows shun court

105 citizens miss jury duty

By SCOTT FITZGERALD
Staff Writer

They were summoned but they didn't appear.

The district clerk's office registered lots of no-shows for jury trial duty this week.

District Clerk Deputy Colleen Barton said 140 summons had been mailed and only 35 persons appeared.

After legal exemptions had been cleared, only 29 persons were left, she said.

"That wasn't enough to go to trial," Barton said.

She said that the court will usually hear about two cases per week for its scheduled jury trial weeks. Howard County has 15 jury trial weeks scheduled in the 118th District Court's 1985 calendar.

District Clerk Peggy Crittenden said that Judge James Gregg ordered 40 more names from the Howard County computer. Legal lingo identifies these last minute substitutes as "talesmen."

"The sheriff's department then contacted whoever they could as well as prospective jurors from the no-show list. Enough people came in this morning to have the jury," Crittenden said.

Gregg explained to persons who had been summoned by the sheriff's department that the court "didn't have enough to show up. We came up short."

"We had to go to the wheel or in this case, the names popped out of the computer," Gregg said.

The judge said that names are selected randomly from the computer which keeps a list of current registered voters in the county.

Recent state legislation prevents the court from requesting the sheriff's department to go out and pull anybody off the street, Gregg said.

"They can't do that anymore," Crittenden said about the old method of selecting talesmen.

Big Spring, seen from fields to the north of the city, is quiet as it awaits another rainfall. The wait was short as a thunderstorm struck the city last night.

Girl gets settlement in lawsuit

By JOHN RICE
Managing Editor

A young girl injured in an automobile accident on the parking lot of the Big Spring Herald could possibly get millions of dollars as a result of a settlement reached today.

Judge Jim Gregg approved the settlement in 118th District Court at 10:15 a.m. after William and Crystal Lyons, parents of the girl, agreed to its terms.

According to testimony, the settlement breaks down this way: The Lyons will get an initial award of $700,000 from the Herald's insurance carrier, Liberty Mutual, for their daughter Vickie Lynn, who was 4 at the time of the Oct. 9, 1980 accident.

On July 1, 1986, a payment of $100,000 will be made to the court, to be administered on Vickie's behalf. Additional payments of $100,000 will be made annually "for life," or a minimum of 20 years.

The Lyons will pay attorney's fees and expenses totaling "roughly $40,000," according to an attorney for the Lyons, out of the initial $700,000 payment.

Thirty-five people had been called as potential jurors in the case which was scheduled for trial today. The panel was dismissed following the settlement.

The Lyons filed suit on behalf of their daughter in 1981, seeking damages totaling more than $12 million.

According to testimony today, the girl is deaf in the right ear, legally blind in the right eye and suffered brain damage after being struck by a vehicle while she was playing in the newspaper's parking lot.

The girl's father testified today that although Vickie has "problems walking, writing and speaking" she is a second grade student and is "keeping up" in school. He said she will be promoted to the third grade in the fall.

Although the settlement was approved by the court, attorney John Gunter of Midland, representing the Big Spring Herald, asked Judge Gregg to order that "the settlement be held private."

He said publicity about settlements is "detrimental" to future cases.

After a brief meeting in chambers between Gregg and attorneys for both sides, the judge took no action on the attorney's request.

Invasion of the cotton snatchers

Grasshoppers reigning over county cotton fields

The rain is a blessing.

The hail and the grasshoppers aren't. Howard County farmers were checking their fields today for hail damage, wind damage and grasshoppers, which have been plaguing their freshly planted crops.

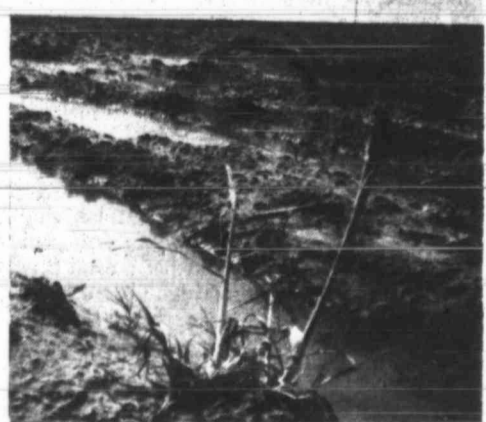

"We're tickled that we've gotten so much rain," said Janie Reid, whose family farms between 1,300 and 1,400 acres near Coahoma. "It (the cotton) looks real good."

"I just wish it wouldn't be hailing and have real high winds every time it rains," she said. One of the Reids' fields was hailed out Monday morning, little more than a week after the family finished planting.

That field will have to be replanted because of the damage, not only from the hail, but from the high winds and sand damage that came with the severe thunderstorms.

As if that wasn't enough, one of the original 10 plagues of farmers — grasshoppers — have invaded county fields. "We've got grasshoppers real bad. If you have pastures anywhere near the fields, they're going to get in your fields," Reid said.

In one of the Reids' fields in east Howard County, the grasshoppers "are out in the middle of the field waiting for the cotton to come up."

This cotton field is one of many that will feel the bite of the grasshopper this year.

The county extension office has issued a release on how to rid fields of the jumbo grasshopper invasion, which has damaged "considerable acreage in the Vealmoor area," the release states.

The release, from County Agricultural Extension Agent Don Richardson, suggests that farmers spray their fields with 7XLR, Pydrin, Orthene, Azodrin, Bidrin, ULV Malathion or any of the pyrethroids.

Richardson, however, said the release is not an endorsement of the chemicals and is not intended to discriminate among the products.

But jumbo grasshoppers have been eating their fill of the young cotton plants near Vincent, said farmer David Barr. "They were working real good — I should say, real bad — until Thursday. The grasshoppers didn't have anything to eat because of the flood."

Once farmers replant, however, the grasshoppers will return, he said. Vincent received 4 inches of rain Thursday, one inch Sunday and one inch Monday, Barr said. "The cotton was just coming up, and it washed it on out. It washed us around real good."

"A lot will have to be rowed up again," Barr said. "But it's better than a drought." Barr, who also is a rancher, said he no longer was having to feed his cattle. He had to buy feed for the cattle for more than a year during the drought.

"We haven't had any falling ice," he said, referring to the hailstorms other parts of the county have had.

In Knott, the hail didn't do too much damage to Paul Hopper's fields, said his wife, Cindy. "Here at the house it was not too terribly bad," she said. The hail was only the size of large peas, with a few a little larger, at marble-sized.

"But I heard my husband say on the radio that one place got it really good. He said the other farmer was going to have to replant."

Hail hasn't been too much of a problem at Luther, said Doris Juneke. The cotton didn't suffer any damage, she said. "But the hail knocked quite a few apricots down off the trees."

According to Juneke, her family — her husband, F.C. Juneke, and her son, Calvin Juneke — had just finished planting their fields with the exception of one field near Gail Road. "It's kind of like a lake," she said.

Chapel High's log cabins

Woodworking becomes an art in Leverett's Chapel

LEVERETT'S CHAPEL (AP) — Little boys build with Tinker Toys. Bigger boys like Lincoln Logs or Leggos. But high school boys, at least at Leverett's Chapel High School, use real logs and lumber to build their houses.

For the last eight or nine years, the juniors and seniors enrolled in Tom Ansley's woodworking classes have built houses instead of individual projects.

At the end of each school year, they sell that year's house and use the proceeds to pay for its materials and any new equipment needed for the next year's project.

This year, Ansley's 12 students are building the shell of a 1,225-square-foot, three-bedroom, two-bath log cabin, with room for a washer and dryer.

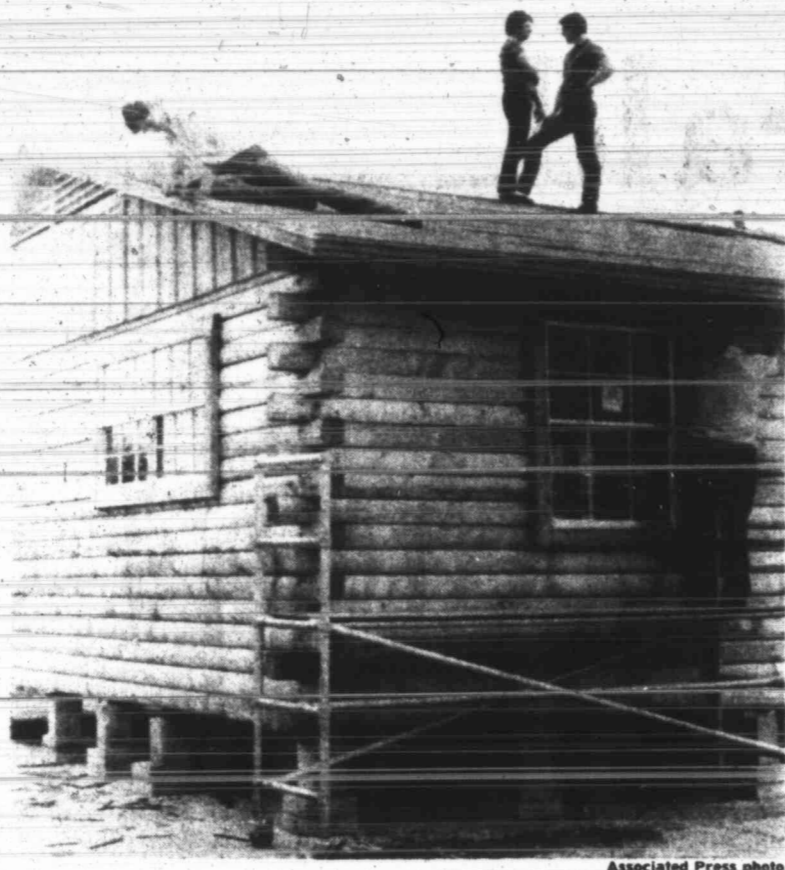

"This has been a lot of fun for me," Ansley said, "and I think the kids enjoy it. There are not many who don't return for the second year."

"Last year we did a log cabin, too, but we're going to start alternating. That way, one year we'll build a frame house, the next year a log one, so the kids will get to learn a little about both types of construction."

Students build the shell houses from scratch in a small lot between the school oil well and the parking lot. They use a floor plan modified from one used by Ansley, a former house builder.

They begin with textbook studies on how to build a floor, followed by how to build a wall or put on a roof. As they complete each section of formal study and pass their tests, they build that part of the house, Ansley said.

When weather is severe, they work inside the building, or continued formal studies inside a classroom.

The rest of the time, they build. "This isn't a vocational course, where you get students for about half a day," Ansley explained. "Each class is in here for about an hour a day so there's not time for architectural planning or other building trades."

"And it's not intensive enough to prepare students to be carpenters, though some of them do go on as carpenter's helpers in the summers or for part-time work through college.

"Sometimes what they learn is that they really don't want to do this, so then it's sort of a negative process, but just as important to keep them from wasting time with something they don't want to do later."

Ansley said he first had the idea to have the classes build houses after the school's football coach asked students to build a storage shed for the team's equipment.

They did, and that summer he considered making such construction a regular project.

"We did, and it's really worked well," Ansley said. "The project really pays for itself."

He said after the construction is complete, the house is advertised and then sold to the highest bidder at a school board meeting.

The buyer must move the house and finish the inside on his own.

"I think last year a developer bought the house, finished it, and then sold it," Ansley said. "People sometimes come and look at the houses as lake houses or something, but so far we've always sold them as homes. I've seen some of them all fixed up, and they look real cute."

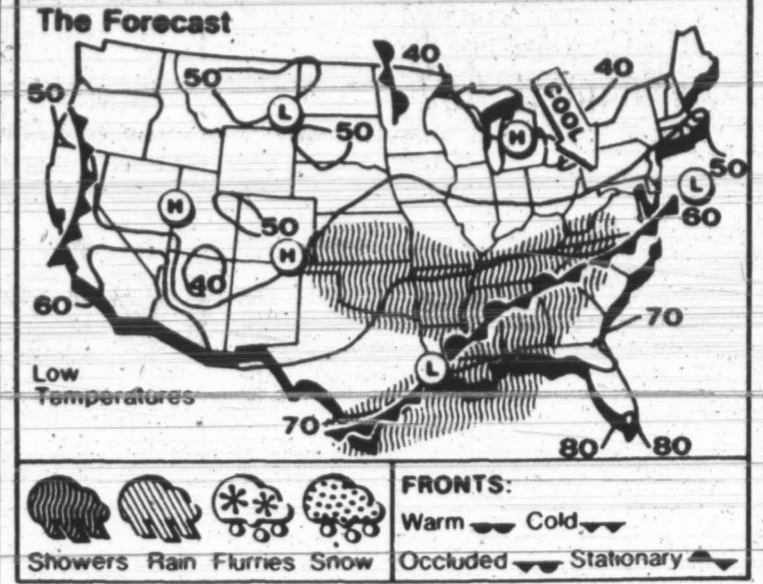

Ansley uses whatever money the house brings to pay for materials used that year and to purchase new equipment for the students.

"When we first started this, we used an old skill saw, and we had nails, hammers and a lot of blue thumbs," he said. "But now we've got all state-of-the-art equipment, with air nailers and air staplers."

The students keep their equipment in a maroon-colored mail jeep. The jeep, lined with hardhats, contains an air compressor, extra nails and staples, staple guns, rolls of wire, saws and a thermos. At the back of the jeep is an intercom, connecting Ansley and his class with the school office.

Later this year, after the house is finished, Ansley said he and his students will go for their annual all-thing-can-eat celebration supper at the restaurant of the boys' choice, and then they will make cabinets and shelves for the stadium concession stand, completing a project begun last year.

Weather

State

At least five twisters, baseball-sized hail, flooding and furious lightning accompanied a vast line of thunderstorms that were still rumbling across East Texas this morning.

An Ennis Chevrolet dealership and about four other businesses were damaged when a possible tornado swept through that Ellis County city at about 2:30 this morning, county sheriff's department spokeswoman Lisa Pierce said.

"Nobody was injured, though, and the damage wasn't bad," she said. The damage was estimated at less than $100,000.

Tornado and flash flood watches were posted throughout the area for much of the early morning, and severe thunderstorms watches were still up for East and Southeast Texas through 5 a.m.

Most of the thunderstorm activity had moved into the Eastern and South Central sections of the state, including the middle coast. Elsewhere in the state, skies were mostly cloudy, except for fair skies in the far west and along parts of the lower Rio Grande Valley.

The thunderstorms were expected to abate briefly before resuming this afternoon, with the possibility of more severe weather tonight, the National Weather Service said.

Two tornado sightings were confirmed in Lamar County near Direct, but like two funnels spotted near Paris and one near Big Spring, none caused any damage or injuries, Lamar County Sheriff's Department spokesman Harry Mitchell said.

Nacogdoches authorities said a tornado was reported to have ripped the tips off several trees and downed some power lines before retreating into the sky after 6:30 a.m. without causing any injuries.

The storms drenched the area from San Antonio to San Angelo and northward, with as much 1.33 inches falling in six hours at Abilene, the weather service said.

But although underpass and street flooding was reported throughout North and West Central Texas, most of it was minor and forced no evacuations, officials said.

Dime- to baseball-sized hail pounded scores of communities — including Bryson, Rayland and Jacksboro in North Central Texas and Falfurrias in South Texas — as the storms headed east Monday night and this morning, the weather service said.

Severe thunderstorms generated high winds and hail across Texas early Monday, knocking out electrical power to about 1,500 homes in southwest Wichita Falls.

Lightning struck a retail sporting goods store in northwest Dallas early Monday, sparking a three-alarm fire that caused about $75,000 in damages to the store and its contents, fire investigators said.

Cotton

In the southeast corner of the county, Lomax farmers aren't worried about hail and grasshoppers. They're still suffering from drought, which plagued the county for two years.

Lomax received three-tenths of an inch of rain this weekend, said Mrs. Gene Perry of Lomax. Added to the total for the year, the Lomax area has received barely more than an inch in 1985.

"I don't know whether we'll dry plant," she said.

Because of the severe drought, farmers last year only produced 9,000 bales, County ASCS director Tim Hall said. Normally, farmers produce between 80,000 and 100,000 bales.

Prospects this year are better, but farmers are planting less. Howard County farmers will plant 90,000 acres of cotton this year, up just slightly from the 85,700 acres in 1984, according to figures from the county Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

"I expect the reason is that more farmers are not going with the (federal cotton) program. We still have about 85 percent participation, there's just a few more not participating," Hall said.

One reason is the increase reduction in acreage and the $50,000 payment limitation to a farmer, Hall said.

"To the average layman that sounds like a lot. But when you get out and farm the acres... it's harder to make a profit. When you add in to what you get from cotton sales, he's not making very much money, if any, in the last couple of years," he said.

"It will get better. If it doesn't rain every couple of days, we can replant," said Barr. "The fields need a few days to dry up so farmers can plant by June 10."

"The pastures are coming back. You need rain every couple of days to grow a little grass," Barr said. "It may only take us one year to come back where we thought it would take three or four."

Jury grants supervision in sexual abuse case

By SCOTT FITZGERALD Staff Writer

Long-term supervision will benefit a Big Spring man guilty of sexual fondling a 4-year-old girl, jurors decided Monday afternoon in 118th District Court.

Joe Garza, 17, who listed his address on jail records as 1609 Young, was given seven years probation after pleading guilty to the crime that occurred last October. He opted to have a jury set punishment.

Jurors deliberated about an hour before telling Judge Jim Gregg that the unanimous decision was that "the imposition of the seven-year sentence be suspended" and that Garza "be placed on probation."

"Probation was recommended only because this was his (Garza's) first offense," jury foreman Orvel Oringderf said after the hearing.

"Long-term supervision would be more beneficial" than a short prison sentence, he said.

District Attorney Rick Hamby had asked jurors to levy the maximum 20-year prison sentence. "These poor children who can't protect themselves — give these voiceless victims the encouragement to come forward and report these incidents... and give him (Garza) the maximum," he said.

Attorney Wayne Basden, appointed by the court to represent Garza, told jurors that Garza had done the honorable thing in pleading guilty to the charge.

"By pleading guilty, no witnesses have had to come to court. He freely and voluntarily incriminated himself for this conduct," Basden said.

Basden told jurors about Garza's offense that "it may have been a moment of weakness. It's a weakness most of us can't comprehend. He hasn't caused physical harm. He hasn't permitted me to give evidence that would exonerate him in any way."

After reading a statement that Garza gave Big Spring police last December, Hamby told jurors that the crime was "one of the most disgusting offenses that I've ever come in contact with."

In other district court action Monday:

Judge Gregg granted probation to two people who pleaded guilty to setting fire to a mobile home on North Birdwell Lane last November.

Jerry Don Kinman, 46, of 1610 Mesquite and Bobbie Glenn McMurray, 47, of 1006 W. 7th were sentenced to 10 years probation.

Both were arrested on the arson charge yesterday. The Howard County sheriff's department and Big Spring Fire Investigator Burr Lea Settles worked together investigating the case.

"We followed up on information given to us. It subsequently led us to Fort Worth to interview witnesses and the result of the investigation between the fire investigator and this department led to the arrest of Kinman and McMurray," Chief Deputy William Shankles said.

Shankles said that Kinman had hired McMurray to set the fire in order to collect insurance.

Gregg also ordered Kinman to pay restitution of $13,900 over a 10-year period.

A Big Spring man pleaded guilty to a robbery charge and was sentenced to five years in prison.

Matthew Scholes, 23, of Coahoma was identified in a police lineup after a robbery last December at the 7-11 store on West Highway 80 and Willa.

District Attorney investigator Buster McCarthy said Scholes' offense began as a shoplifting incident.

"He was taking a couple of six-packs (of beer) and started out of the store. When they tried to stop him, he turned around and pulled a pocket knife. It went from a shoplifting offense to robbery that quick," McCarthy said.

Woman injured in 2-car wreck

A 22-year-old Big Spring woman was injured slightly Monday afternoon in a two-car accident at the intersection of Gregg and W. Fifth streets.

Laraine Day Teel, 22, of 538 Westover was treated and released at the Malone and Hogan Clinic, according to a spokesman.

The driver of the other vehicle, Eddie Leary, 55, of Childress, was uninjured in the accident.

According to the accident reports, Leary was traveling north in the 500 block of Gregg in his 1976 blue Lincoln Continental. Teel was driving east in the 300 block of W. Fifth in her 1982 gold Chevrolet Chevette when the collision occurred.

According to the police report, Leary "disregarded" a red light for north- and south-bound traffic and entered the intersection.

had a little hail." One farmer in Flower Grove reported that "he lost some crops" because of the hail, Shaw said.

But hail was not heavy in the Knott area. Shaw said the shower was "real good" for cotton already coming up in his fields.

Mrs. John Couch, a resident on the Gail Route near Luther said she received .7 of an inch last night, while a store "just around the corner" from her home received only .3.

"We had quite a bit of wind and hail," Mrs. Couch said. "I drove around this morning to look at the crops but I can't tell if it ruined us or not," she said, referring to hail damage.

Mrs. Couch said she received reports "that it rained heavier north of us" toward the Colorado River.

Mrs. Wendell Shive said Coahoma received more than .6 of an inch of rain last night. Farmers in the Lomax area, where very little rain has fallen this year, were reporting .3 of an inch.

Rain slows flames

DAYTON BEACH, Fla. — Weary firefighters battled seven uncontained wildfires today, even after a drenching rain helped slow the flames that have charred 150,000 acres. The same storm hurled lightning that sparked some new blazes.

Thirteen major fires continued to burn, involving about 66,500 acres, and seven of those blazes were still uncontained in east-central Florida, Larry Amison, a spokesman for the state Division of Forestry, said late Monday. Amison said.

"We think we got about two inches of rain in some parts of Flagler County, but with that we got a lot of lightning too," Amison said.

Drilling barge capsizes

MORGAN CITY, La. — A drilling barge carrying 23 people capsized in a bayou near this coastal Louisiana town, killing one crew member and leaving 11 feared trapped inside, the Coast Guard said today.

Nine people were pulled from the water shortly after the rig capsized. Two were pulled through a hole cut in the bottom of the rig by rescue workers, said Coast Guard Petty Officer Bruce Barton.

"There are divers inside the vessel looking for survivors or bodies," said Keith Simon, spokesman for the Acadian Ambulance Service. "The outlook is not very good for survivors. Two of the three decks are under water. Very little of the vessel is exposed."

Mark Kugelberg, another Coast Guard spokesman, said the barge came to rest at a 45-degree angle, with only about half of its bottom deck above water.

Septuplets delivered

ORANGE, Calif. — A team of three dozen doctors, nurses and therapists mobilized for today's Caesarian section delivery of seven babies carried by a high school teacher who took fertility drugs.

The obstetrician for Patricia Frustaci, 30, decided to deliver the septuplets in the 28th week of pregnancy — two months before full term — after the woman's condition slipped around noon Monday, said Valerie Orleans, a spokeswoman at St. Joseph's hospital.

"They (physicians) felt her condition had gone from good to fair, so now was the time," Ms. Orleans said.

Mrs. Frustaci, who took the fertility drug Pergonal, entered the hospital March 25 with doctors hoping to stave off the mass birth at least until the 28th week.

The seven fetuses weigh about 1 1/2 to 2 pounds apiece.

Fighting in Lebanon claims 83

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Palestinians said their outnumbered defenders held out against Shiite Moslem militiamen at two crowded refugee camps today, but the Shiites seized control of a third camp. Police said 83 people died and 392 were wounded in 36 hours of fighting.

The Shiites, seeking to prevent the PLO from returning to Beirut, advanced into the Sabra refugee camp after storming all but a handful of Palestinian strongpoints.

Seven successive cease-fires were shattered. Fierce fighting raged in the Chatilla camp near Sabra in west Beirut, and at Bourj Barajneh near Beirut's international airport to the south.

The Amal militia claimed it had taken all three camps and "seized huge quantities of arms and ammunition." Palestinian spokesmen conceded only that Sabra had fallen.

The Palestinians claimed Amal gained control of Sabra by moving into the shantytown behind the Lebanese army's mainly Shiite 6th Brigade, which was sent in late Monday to halt the fighting.

Heavy gunfire and the explosions of rocket-propelled grenades were heard in the two camps as hundreds of Palestinians defended the camps against the militiamen.

Sabra and Chatilla are the camps that were assaulted by Christian militiamen in September 1982 in the wake of Israel's invasion of Lebanon to crush the Palestine Liberation Organization. Hundreds of Palestinians and Lebanese Moslems were massacred by the Christians.

A Palestinian spokesman in Bourj Barajneh, who spoke on condition he not be identified, said Amal closed down a hospital in Sabra and evacuated all the patients and staff. The hospital was set on fire in Monday's fighting.

Palestinian sources said many of their casualties bled to death Monday because medical teams could not reach them in the encircled camps. There was no independent confirmation.

The Palestinians also said Amal executed three young Palestinians they found hiding in Sabra today during house-to-house searches.

Palestine Liberation Organization Chairman Yasser Arafat called on Arab states for "immediate intervention to halt these barbaric massacres," a PLO statement said.

It said Arafat called on the ambassadors of 11 Arab nations in Amman, Jordan, where he is visiting, and conveyed his request.

Both Sabra and Chatilla are former Arafat strongholds, and pro-Arafat posters are plastered throughout the camps.

Air strikes reported

BANGKOK, Thailand — The communist Khmer Rouge today claimed Vietnam has been launching air strikes against Cambodian villages in an attempt to flush out guerrillas battling Cambodia's pro-Vietnamese regime.

The clandestine radio of the guerrilla army said that about 6,000 Vietnamese troops, together with tanks and artillery, have been involved in a sweep against the Khmer Rouge near Phnom Penh, the Cambodian capital, since April.

Aircraft have been used against the guerrillas as well as against villages in the district of Mouk Kampoul, said the Khmer radio, in a broadcast monitored in Bangkok, Thailand.

The Vietnamese rarely use air power in Cambodia, a country they invaded in late 1978. The Khmer Rouge, ousted by the Vietnamese, is one of three major Cambodian resistance groups fighting some 160,000 Vietnamese troops in the country. The other two guerrilla groups are non-Communist, but all are supported by China.

The Vietnamese launched a dry-season offensive against the Cambodian guerrillas last December, and overran many of their bases along the Thai-Cambodian frontier.

Gandhi in India

MOSCOW — Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi of India arrived in Moscow today for a six-day visit he said he hoped would lead to "much deeper understanding" between two nations that already are close.

Gandhi was greeted at the Kremlin by Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev, in a ceremony broadcast on national television.

The two leaders will hold talks on Wednesday. Indian officials said the sessions will be private, with only interpreters present.

Gandhi and his wife, Sonia, were met at the airport by Soviet Premier Nikolai Tikhonov and Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko.

Their motorcade then sped through Moscow's crowd-lined streets to the Kremlin, where the Indian leader will be staying.

Threat still exists

LONDON — The prime minister of Grenada today said he believes a Marxist threat still exists on the Caribbean island, but that an improved security situation should allow all U.S. troops to leave by the end of 1985.

The United States, supported by some Caribbean states, led an invasion of Grenada in October 1983 following the assassination of Marxist Prime Minister Maurice Bishop by a more radical group. The United States feared the tiny country would become a Cuban-led Communist bastion.

Lottery determines who is executed in protest

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — Police say inmates in a jail in east-central are holding a death lottery, choosing prisoners to execute as a protest against overcrowding and bad living conditions.

Last week, a prisoner in the city jail of Belo Horizonte, the country's third-largest city 290 miles north of Rio, was kicked and beaten to death by inmates after his name was chosen in a lottery by his cellmates, Police Chief Antonio Alves said in a telephone interview.

Another prisoner was chosen by consensus and also killed, he said Monday.

He said the prisoners have vowed to continue the killings as a protest against poor conditions.

"We try to isolate the ringleaders and switch prisoners to different cells. But what can I do if they want to kill each other?" Alves said.

He said the killing occurred in a 13-by-13 foot cell holding nine prisoners. The inmates included armed robbers and murderers transferred from the state penitentiary.

"They said it was to protest prison conditions. Inmates here have no beds, no privileges. It really is no place to serve out a sentence," the police chief said.

Last Friday, the Human Rights Commission of the city council inspected the jail, and members called it a "horror."

'Person'alizing modern English

The chief regional attorney for the Education Department's Office of Civil Rights in California, Paul D. Grossman, has complained to the University of Berkeley that its course catalog contains sexist language such as "manmade," "manpower" and "mankind." Such language, he said, "may be perceived by some persons as subtly discouraging female students' interest in the program." "Man-made," he suggested helpfully, could be replaced with "synthetic." "Mankind" could become "humankind, human population, humanity or the human species;" and "manpower" could become — oh, well — you know.

Grossman was not suggesting which courses should be offered to freshkind, thereby not impinging on academic prerogatives, nor did he say whether he was directing his remarks at all departmental chairpeople or just at particular chairpersons. He did not even indicate whether he believed that the chairpersonship of any given department should be rotated among the members of that department. He did, however, suggest that "grantsmanship" could be converted to "grantwriting, grant preparation or grant acquisition" and would be a splendid substitute for "manpower," as in (one would imagine) "do we have enough human resources to do the job?" And as for "fossil man" in anthropology, why not use "fossil humanity"? We then could also (derivatively) have "Piltown Humanity," "Peking Humanity" and "Neanderthal Humanity."

We don't need any more diffusion of English. Much of its beauty and function has been tarnished already by computer slang and technological infiltration. We have "input" and "feedback" galore. Thanks very much anyway, Mr. Grossperson.

Please free the Mayflower Madam

Does any New Yorker sleep more soundly knowing that Sydney Bidle Barrows faces a long stretch in prison? If so, the explanation lies in their own psyches, not in the danger to innocent people presented by the now-famous "Mayflower Madam," who is accused of directing a $1 million-a-year prostitution business on New York City's West Side. There is no reason she should be in jail.

The laws against prostitution have been partly a matter of hypocrisy, enforced leniently at best and capriciously at worst. They normally serve to express a pious, collective disapproval of sin without seriously threatening its survival.

Even that gesture goes too far. Prostitution falls in that category of human affairs — voluntary, non-violent acts between adults — that properly lies beyond the reach of government.

But it has few protectors. Liberals, staunchly uphold the privacy of what people do in their own bedrooms, but when money is introduced they get squeamish. Conservatives, who insist on the sacred right of economic players to arrive at mutually beneficial transactions without state interference, hastily abandon that principle when the commodity is sex instead of plywood.

Both sides treat individual freedom as something so valuable it must be carefully rationed. That's how people like Sydney Barrows end up in jail.

Granted, much of the opposition to permitting commercial sex comes from people who object mostly to its obnoxious side effects — public solicitation, troublesome automobile and pedestrian traffic, street crime. But the answer isn't to ban prostitution. Most of the fallout results not from the activity itself, but from the laws against it.

Prostitutes, for example, would be less inclined to seek customers on busy streets if they work in peace in legal establishments. Likewise, the illegal status of their commerce makes both sellers and buyers vulnerable to crime, since they are breaking the law themselves. The status quo also pushes prostitutes into frequent contact with other criminals, which isn't likely to improve their character. Any side effects could be controlled better through zoning and regulation than through an outright ban.

In any case, the usual rationalizations don't justify prosecuting Sydney Barrows. Her business, whether it involved prostitution or, as she claims, mere escorts, was hardly a public nuisance. There was no street solicitation — arrangements were handled by phone. There was no central bordello attracting clients day and night — Barrows' employees delivered.

In fact, the operation deserves a chapter in the next edition of "In Search of Excellence." Barrows' three agencies apparently were run with ruthless efficiency and an emphasis on customer satisfaction. She required punctuality, conservative clothes, strict weight control and manicured nails, white discouraging drugs, alcohol and kinky improvisations. She also called clients to check on her employees' performance. "It was like being at IBM," one of her subordinates told New York magazine.

If this was a sex-for-hire business, it was exactly the kind the law should allow — safe, honest, unobtrusive. It is also exactly the kind that would flourish in a legal environment. But the authorities nonetheless closed it down. If they get their way, Barrows may spend seven years behind bars. And why? To protect the weak from succumbing to temptation?

Barrows' business is the sort of activity that, unlike robbery or assault, harms no one and, in fact, affects no one except those who choose to be affected. Moral distaste is no more grounds for interfering with commercial sex than it is for outlawing public expressions of atheism.

If a woman sells herself, as Jefferson would have put it, it is no concern of mine: She neither picks my pocket nor breaks my leg. The law ought to concern itself with people who do one or the other. Sydney Barrows is no danger to anyone, and our laws should acknowledge that.

Federal agency gets help to ship out safety regulations

By JACK ANDERSON and JOSEPH SPEAR
WASHINGTON — The federal agency that protects workers from dangerous conditions is rewriting its safety regulations for shipyards — with the cooperation of a shipyard that was charged with 617 violations of the existing rules.

The safety standards being overhauled are the very ones the shipyard violated, for which the agency proposed record fines of $786,000.

The agency responsible, the Occupational Safety and Health Administration, is headed by Robert Rowland, who owns between $15,000 and $50,000 worth of stock in the parent company of the shipyard, Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Co.

Documents obtained by our associates Donald Goldberg and Indy Badwar disclose Rowland's active interest in the rewriting of shipyard-safety rules.

For example, a recent memo submitted by Rowland to the White House, describes the plan to revise the safety regulations as "a way of providing employers with maximum flexibility." The memo also warned, "Public interest groups and unions could seek court intervention...."

The 617 safety violations were filed against Newport News by OSHA inspectors in 1980. Shortly after the Reagan administration took office, OSHA officials began discussing revision of the shipyard safety standards with Newport News executives.

On May 22, 1981, OSHA's regional administrator in southern Virginia wrote to the company, "As you know, I am terribly concerned about the practical application of many of the maritime standards and feel that with your cooperation a viable proposal could be developed...."

OSHA records show that a task force was set up consisting of four agency officials and four Newport News executives. In February 1982, the task force proposed "a significant reduction (approximately 75 percent) in the volume of standards for the maritime industry."

The project was two-pronged: One OSHA office was to eliminate "redundant and inappropriate standards and still retain those requirements that address significant safety and health issues." The other office would review and revise current shipyard safety regulations.

In 1983, Thorne Aughter, then OSHA director, was given an extensive tour of the Newport News shipyard. Later he wrote company officials, "I will make every effort to assure that those new understandings on all our parts get translated into more appropriate and realistic safety and health standards for your industry."

Just how much influence the company had in OSHA's rewriting project is made clear in a memo from OSHA's project director to Barry White, the head of the safety standards office, on Aug. 3, 1984. Though OSHA career experts had found that only 20 percent of the rules were redundant, the proposal submitted by Newport News and the Shipbuilders Council recommended scrapping 70 percent of the regulations.

"Ideally," the project director wrote, "Shipbuilders-Newport News (proposal) should be used as the base. By doing so we are satisfying the vast majority of the industry...."

The memo concluded: "I strongly feel that the way I am proceeding is best for your office, OSHA ... and the industry as a whole." No mention was made of the shipyard workers.

Footnote: An OSHA spokesman said all segments of the industry, including unions, had been consulted, and that rules changes would be subject to public comment. United Steelworkers union officials said they were never consulted, and that the proposed elimination of 70 percent of the safety regulations won't be open for challenge, because OSHA doesn't consider that a revision of the rules. Newport News did not comment.

SOUTH AFRICAN AID: Congress and the White House are squabbling over the $1 million appropriated for a human-rights fund designed to encourage better relations between blacks and whites in South Africa. That's twice the amount provided last year.

The problem is deciding who gets the money. Some anti-apartheid activists in Congress want the money to go to outspoken opponents of the white-minority government, and complain that U.S. Ambassador Herman Nickel has been vetoing such suggestions. Instead, the money is being given to groups that haven't offended the South African government — to legal groups that aid black prisoners, for example — instead of to individual dissidents to help them fight the apartheid system.

"Those folks on the Hill who want direct confrontation with the government (of South Africa) are turning this into a high-risk program," said an official of the Agency for International Development, which hands out the money. "There may come a day when (the South Africans) say, 'Enough is enough; take your money and go home.'"

High predictions fuel Pentagon budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon reaped windfalls of up to $50 billion by making inflation predictions that were too high, and then absorbed the money into a "trackless tangle of vast and vanishing funds," the chairman of the House Armed Services Committee said Monday.

But Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said the funds are accounted for and that "good management" helped bring about the savings.

Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., in a speech prepared for delivery today on the House floor, said the Reagan administration has consistently overestimated inflation in preparing the Pentagon budget and "therefore over-compensated for it."

Aspin said since 1983, the Pentagon has provided for 30 percent more inflation in the cost of procuring its major weapons system than it projected for the nation's economy.

"We're talking about needless appropriations totaling no less than $18 billion and possibly on the order of $50 billion," he said. "It's startling that we should be so uncertain about how we throw the taxpayers' money around and it's astounding so much money is involved."

The Pentagon says budget surpluses resulting from lower inflation and better military management practices are regularly reported.

Weinberger drew criticism last week from

'It's startling that we should be so uncertain about how we throw the taxpayers' money around and it's astounding so much money is involved.'

Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis.

members of Congress, who have been trying to hammer out a scaled-back 1986 defense spending plan, when he said the Pentagon would have a $4 billion surplus from its 1985 budget.

Weinberger, appearing Sunday on NBC-TV's "Meet the Press," said the latest surplus would normally have been reported later in the year, and added it "should be a source of considerable satisfaction."

"For three years now we have managed to make savings — not quite this high — but we have done it because of good management, because we've had increased competition and we're getting a lot better defense for the price," he said.

Deputy Defense Secretary William H. Taft IV acknowledged today that the savings run into the billions of dollars but insisted, "that's good news, not bad."

Testifying before a House Armed Services subcommittee, he attributed the savings to lower inflation rates as well as to "better management" and added, "I think its very regrettable that words like 'windfall' or 'secret' are being applied to this. It means we get more defense for less money."

Later, he told reporters that some of the money has been applied to other military programs, with congressional approval.

"Some of it has not been spent and won't be spent," he said.

He said those funds will be returned to the Treasury as "a direct saving to the taxpayer."

But he said he didn't know exactly how much money is involved or how much has been returned to the Treasury.

The Democratic-controlled House is considering a budget resolution that would freeze defense spending at current levels with no allowance for inflation.

The Senate, meanwhile, begins work on a $302 billion defense authorization bill for fiscal 1986, which includes a package of procurement changes intended curb abuses by defense contractors.

The Senate bill holds increases in overall Pentagon spending to the predicted rate of inflation next year. Reagan originally sought a 5.9 percent increase beyond inflation.

The president has accepted the lower figure dictated in the Senate's budget blueprint. But he has said he may seek supplemental funds if Democrats make further defense reductions.

Around The Rim

A loss of innocence

By CHARLIE ALCORN
Athletic banquets are traditionally upbeat. Proud parents, coaches and children stuff themselves with wholesome food from the cafeteria, drinking weak ice tea. It is a time for bad jokes and passionate testimonials.

The spring Sports Banquet Friday night at Big Spring High School's cafeteria started out like any other. The hamburgers and french fries were entirely adequate and the featured speaker was brief (a rarity in most cases). But before many of the crowd of 250 patrons had settled back with their toothpicks, a foreign element, sadness, was ushered into the post-meal stirring.

Standing at the podium was a coach whose best player was absent for the evening. The girls basketball Coach's Award was not proudly received. No trembling teenage hands came to wrest the gleaming plaque from the outstretched coach's hand. There were tears, not handshakes.

But why the melodrama? Whatever the reason for the athlete's absence, the coach's loss of control muted the crowd. Her anguished plea "to help this confused girl" went without explanation. The audience drew a collective deep breath, and barely audible mutterings filled the air. "That was worse than a soap opera," said one in the crowd.

Neckties were loosened and sweaty palms dried as the next coach made his way to the podium. Unfortunately, his really was a sad tale.

The elegantly proportioned weight of the second year boys basketball coach shifted nervously on the balls of his feet. He made it through the obligatory introductions and awards presentations before it came time to present his coveted Basketball MVP Award. As he announced the winner, again no smiling face came down the aisle to receive the trophy. The coach explained that his best player, the District 4-5A Sophomore of the Year, had been forced to transfer to Andrews High. The coach said his star was the victim of jealous classmates and the rumour of a gun.

Silenced reigned as the coach sat back down with his lonely trophy.

Proper innocence was restored by the following coaches, who shared only glowing reports the rest of the evening. But a vague discomfort remained with me as I snapped pictures of the beaming athletes. I will not soon forget the brief moment, when the dreamy world of the high school fete collided with a dose of reality.

Dear Abby

Obscure condolences create added burden

DEAR ABBY: We recently suffered the loss of a teen-aged son — a dearly loved, popular boy. His entire school went into mourning, and numerous floral arrangements from his friends were sent. Many were from people known to us, but some were not.

This outpouring of love and affection did, however, present a minor problem. We had (and are still having) a difficult time trying to thank the proper people. (We don't know who "Joannie and Sue" are. And "Jimmy and Ray" are mysteries, as are "The Three Musketeers.")

Abby, please ask your readers to include their full names and addresses with their loving messages when they send flowers. It would make it so much easier for us to thank them.

There are so many details that must be attended to at a time like this, it would help so much. Thank you, Abby.

HIS GRIEVING PARENTS

DEAR PARENTS: Your letter will get top billing in this column.

Readers, please sign your cards with your first and last names, and include your addresses.

And florists, if the senders don't include this information, please suggest it when flowers are ordered. What a help it would be to the bereaved families who want to express their gratitude promptly.

DEAR ABBY: Our neighbors are lovely people, but we work all day, and are the youngest people in our area. This time of year we have a lot of things to do outside, but every evening someone drops by to visit. That means we have to stop what we're doing and spend anywhere from half an hour to two hours with the chatty neighbors. The only way to get away is to make some excuse to go back in the house — then we get nothing done.

I get the pickling stories, and my husband gets to hear about somebody's carburetor. Every time we show ourselves outside, we get company.

Please advise us. We don't want to make any enemies — just distant friends.

READY TO SCREAM IN IOWA
DEAR READY: People who write with this kind of problem usually do so because they're too timid to do what they know they have to do in order to keep others from imposing on them.

Be assertive! When friendly neighbors wander over to visit while you're working, at the risk of appearing inhospitable, do not give them the big hello. Instead, keep right on working, and without looking up, say, "I wish I had time to visit, but I'm determined to finish this. Let's make it another time, OK?" And keep working.

P.S. You probably won't follow this advice — but you asked.

Girl Scout camp offering several summer sessions

A unique experience awaits girls at the West Texas Girl Scout Council's Summer Resident Camp at Camp Boothe Oaks in Sweetwater.

Girl Scout camping presents an opportunity for a girl to learn self-reliance, responsibility, and simple living in the out-of-doors. Camp Boothe Oaks with its large oak trees and nearby lake, provides an environment for exploring and enjoying the natural world.

Program activities include volleyball, softball, basketball, archery, swimming, canoeing, campcrafts, primitive camping, hiking, games and arts and crafts.

Campers live in units of platform tents or cabins. They share living facilities and unit responsibilities. The girls are supervised by a trained staff.

Several sessions are available. A one week Badgework Sampler is offered June 9-14, June 16-21, June 30-July 5, July 7-12, and July 14-19. In this session girls get to try numerous activities like outdoor cooking, canoeing and archery.

For the experienced camper, there is the Adventurer Session for one week, June 9-14, June 16-21 and July 14-19. This session gives girls a chance to enhance their outdoor skills.

The Outdoor Explorer Session is for girls wanting to be at home out-of-doors. For two weeks, June 30-July 12, girls will learn new skills and broaden old ones.

Art Explorer, another two weeker, June 30-July 12, is for the girl who likes crafts. Weaving, ceramics, black pottery, leathercraft, solar etching along with a general program of swimming, canoeing, outdoor skills and sports are offered for this session.

A session designed especially for girls seventh grade through 9th grade is Cadette Achiever. The girls will plan most of this two week experience June 9-21. Emphasis will be on advanced camping skills along with general camp program.

For the adventurous type an eight day Canoeing Session is planned July 14-21. Girls in the seventh grade or older are eligible. An experienced Red Cross canoeing instructor will teach canoeing and basic water safety skills. The girls will complete the Red Cross Fundamentals of Canoeing Course and the Girl Scout Interest Project, "Paddle, Pole, and Roll." The last three days of the session will be spent away from camp on a canoeing trip.

The cost of a one week session is $70, and the cost of a two week session is $125. The canoeing session is $125. Non-Girl Scouts are welcome to attend for $10 extra. For more information, call the West Texas Girl Scout Council Service Center at 698-1738.

Dr. Donohue

Hot weather brings on swelling

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I am a 55-year-old woman in pretty good health. I notice that during the summer I have problems of leg swellings. Because I am a great gardener, the problem crimps my style. My legs feel heavy. Mind you, this never happens during the rest of the year unless we have one of those rare late fall hot spells. My doctor says my blood vessels are leaky. Can you explain? — Mrs. K.R.

Edema can reflect many bodily ills, and I presume the serious causes, such as congestive heart failure have been ruled-out. Yes, quite simply, in some people hot weather does cause a leaking in the tiny blood vessels, the capillaries, and the most likely places for the swelling (from accumulated blood fluid) to appear are the legs, especially if you do a lot of standing for long periods.

It's not serious, but obviously annoying. You can help minimize the fluid collection by restricting your salt intake. Salt promotes fluid retention. Compression stockings and leg elevation during the day, when that's possible, help as well.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Three years ago I was tested and diagnosed as having hypoglycemia, which is low blood sugar. Since then I have been pretty faithful to a high protein-low carbohydrate diet. So I can't seem to understand why, when I go to restaurants, shopping centers, church, or work, I panic and feel as if I'm going to faint.

What could be causing this? — S.K.
I'm not saying outright that you don't have hypoglycemia or that you've lost control of it again, but these new developments suggest a new problem — agoraphobia. Your feelings, as you describe them, fit that to a tee. It's the fear of leaving home, especially when having to go to crowded places like shopping malls, church, or restaurants. In such settings, the agoraphobe feels weak and dizzy, may perspire heavily and have palpitations. He may fear that he's going to faint, or even die.

And with control of your low blood sugar, by diet, as you are doing, the agoraphobia idea sounds even more likely as an explanation: If your doctor agrees, he can suggest a therapist to help, or one of the support groups that exist to help those with such psychological problems. You will find your other questions (related to your low blood sugar) discussed in the booklet "Help for Hypoglycemia," which other readers may order by writing me, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope and $1.00 for printing and handling.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Ex-Navy officer accused of spying

JOHN WALKER JR.

BALTIMORE (AP) — A former communications expert accused of passing secrets to the Soviet Union may have spied for much of his 20-year Navy career and probably got some classified information from the aircraft carrier where his son is stationed, the FBI said.

John Anthony Walker Jr., 47, was arrested Monday and accused of dropping about 120 secret or confidential Navy documents in the rural Maryland countryside outside Washington. Authorities said he flashed a gun when agents approached, but dropped it and surrendered.

Some of the documents appear to have come from the USS Nimitz, a nuclear carrier where his son is stationed, a court affidavit said. Walker, who now works as a private detective in Norfolk, Va., retired in 1976 as a chief warrant officer after 20 years in the Navy. His son was identified as Michael Lance Walker, a yeoman third class.

U.S. Magistrate Daniel Klein Jr. ordered Walker held without bond after being told the former communications specialist may have been supplying the Soviet Union with information for 15 to 18 years, said Assistant U.S. Attorney Michael Schatzow. Among subjects covered in the documents seized by the FBI in a wooded area of Montgomery County were deployment of Soviet navy vessels in the Mediterranean and movements of Soviet merchant marine ships, a court affidavit said.

Schatzow said the allegations of long-term spying were based on statements from two confidential informants who took lie detector tests.

For Service, Experience Look to Home Realtors

No one enjoys the potential trauma associated with the prospect of moving, but with careful planning one can avoid or at least minimize unnecessary frustration and aggravation.

Home is exclusive local agent for RELO Relocation Service, the nation's largest referral network of independent real estate brokers, headquartered in Chicago. As a result, the company is actively involved in providing tips and advice to home owners, buyers and sellers.

Kay Moore, owner of Home Realtor, points out there are many important, often personal things easily overlooked which could prove disastrous and expensive if not accomplished in time. This is where a good realtor and a service like RELO is very helpful.

The sale associates at Home Real Estate never "rest on their laurels." Each one continues to develop expertise in the field through the firm's own training programs as well as industry seminars.

It's important for newcomers of Big Spring to select a realtor who isn't a newcomer. In other words, to select a firm who has served the Big Spring market for many years and has a thorough knowledge of the real estate market here.

When you need a realtor, drop by Home's office at Coronado Plaza and get acquainted.

Pickens hits dry hole in Unocal battle

Amarillo oilman agrees to sell holdings back at a loss; drops takeover bid

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In his first defeat in three years of assaults on big oil companies, Texas oilman T. Boone Pickens Jr. has agreed to sell his Unocal Corp. holdings back to the company at a slight loss.

Pickens' surrender Monday was a major victory for Fred L. Hartley, Unocal's 68-year-old chairman, who had vowed not to give in to Pickens' threats. Hartley has spent 46 years with Unocal, the parent of Union Oil Co. of California, and he played a major role in building it into the nation's 13th largest oil concern.

Pickens is chairman of Mesa Petroleum Co. of Amarillo and head of the Mesa Partners II investor group. In previous forays against five other oil companies, the Pickens group earned $697 million plus $35 million in expenses by selling back those companies' stocks at a premium price.

Unocal's stock didn't trade Monday at the request of the company. It ended last week at $46 a share. Mesa's stock fell 25 cents to close at $16.37 1/2 a share.

Pickens' fate appeared sealed by the loss of two crucial battles last week.

The oilman all but conceded losing a proxy fight May 13 at Unocal's annual meeting, although the actual tally has been postponed until May 29. He had been seeking to delay the annual meeting and board election for two months to give more time for his takeover efforts.

Last Friday, the Delaware Supreme Court upheld the legality of Unocal's effort to exclude the Pickens group from cashing in on the company's offer to repurchase 29 percent of its stock for the premium price of $72 per share. Unocal's stock now is trading for $46 per share. Unocal was offering to repurchase 50 million of its 173.9 million shares by issuing $3.6 billion in debt securities. The new debt would make the company less attractive to unwanted suitors.

The Pickens group now owns 23.7 million, or 13.6 percent, of Unocal's stock.

The group's $54-per-share offer to increase that stake to 50.1 percent was derailed by Unocal's more lucrative bid, which effectively lured away shareholders.

Air travelers crowd the United Airlines ticket counter at Chicago's O'Hare International Airport Monday as ticket agents work to reroute grounded passengers due to the strike by United pilots. Negotiations between the air carrier and the pilots union are continuing in Chicago.

United Airlines negotiators, pilots resume strike talks

CHICAGO (AP) — Negotiators for United Airlines and its 5,000 striking pilots returned to the bargaining table Monday, and a federal mediator said the atmosphere was positive as both sides tried to resolve the four-day walkout against the nation's largest airline.

Meanwhile, the Federal Aviation Administration reported numerous incidents of pilots from other airlines interfering with radio transmissions between nonstriking United pilots and air traffic controllers.

United, which usually logs 1,550 flights a day, planned 207 departures systemwide Monday. The airline has advertised for new, experienced pilots and said it was processing 5,500 applications.

In the bargaining session, Helen Witt, head of the National Mediation Board, said during a lunch break that the atmosphere Monday was "positive" and "the people came to talk."

Air Line Pilots Association negotiator Bill Bashear described the brief discussion as "very businesslike and cordial."

Company and union representatives met with mediators in the morning to lay down ground rules for further discussions. The mediators later met separately with the company and union, and negotiations continued for 11 hours before recessing late Monday.

Holmes knows 'The Truth'; lands courtesy win

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Larry Holmes "is happy with what I've done. If I don't fight again, I'm happy."

The 35-year-old International Boxing Federation heavyweight champion built his record to 48-0 with a 15-round decision over Carl "The Truth" Williams Monday night.

It moved him to within one win of the 49-0 record of Rocky Marciano, the only heavyweight champion to retire without having lost a fight.

The victory in the nationally televised fight was unanimous — by big margins on two of the three official cards.

But it wasn't easy. "I thought the fight was close," Williams said. "I don't think he did enough to get a unanimous decision."

"He's a great champion, and we all love him, but I thought I did a hell of a job. I thought I outboxed him."

Judges Al Rothenberg and Paul Gibbs each favored Holmes 146-139 (11-4 in rounds). Judge Jerry Roth saw it 143-142 (8-7) for Holmes. All three men gave Holmes the last four rounds.

The AP scored it 145-140 (10-5) for Holmes.

"The fights are not getting easier, they're getting harder," said Holmes, who had said before stopping David Bey in the 10th round March 15 that that would be his last fight.

"The opponents are not getting older, they're getting younger," he told several reporters in his hotel suite.

Holmes appeared hurt on a couple of occasions, suffered contusions about both eyes and was bone tired.

He skipped the post-fight news conference.

"I could have come back to the press conference, but I said the hell with it," Holmes remarked at the hotel.

But there was no question that Holmes was one tired fighter after his battle with the 25-year-old Williams.

"They all get up for me," said Holmes before making an appearance at a victory party.

He sat on a sofa in his suite at the MGM Grand. Well-wishers were hushed as he talked quietly to the reporters. He wore a gray sports jacket over a striped white polo shirt with black slacks.

He looked like a winner, but there was a bulging reminder of the battle and of how tough his profession is. Holmes' left eye was tightly closed.

When he became a champion June 9, 1978, with a 15-round split decision win over Ken Norton at Las Vegas, Nev., he forgot the post-fight news conference in his joy, and instead jumped into a hotel swimming pool.

"If I had jumped into the pool after this fight, I would have drowned," Holmes said.

"Williams could have won it," referee Mills Lane said. "Holmes is much older now. All I can say is that Holmes is not the same man he was in 1978."

Before the fight, attended by 6,046 fans at the 12,100 seat Lawlor Events Center, Holmes said he planned to fight twice more before his 36th birthday in a bid to break Marciano's record.

But in his suite he said, "That could change. Williams was stronger than the films showed, more determined than the films showed."

"What I want to do is really sit back and look at myself. If I do fight again, we're not going to fight for $2 million (he got $2.3 million Monday night to $175,000 for Williams). The price is going up."

Reno's first heavyweight title fight since Jack Johnson knocked out Jim Jeffries in the 10th round July 4, 1910, was a good action fight, with both men shaken but neither close to going down.

Williams, who went into the fight with a 16-0 record, with 12 knockouts, was cut above the left eye in the third round. Lane said it was from a right hand. Williams said it was from the laces of Holmes' glove as he threw a left jab.

Williams, who weighed 215 pounds to 222½ for Holmes, shook the champion with head and body combinations in the fifth and sixth rounds and with a flurry to the head in the 11th when Holmes' left eye began to close.

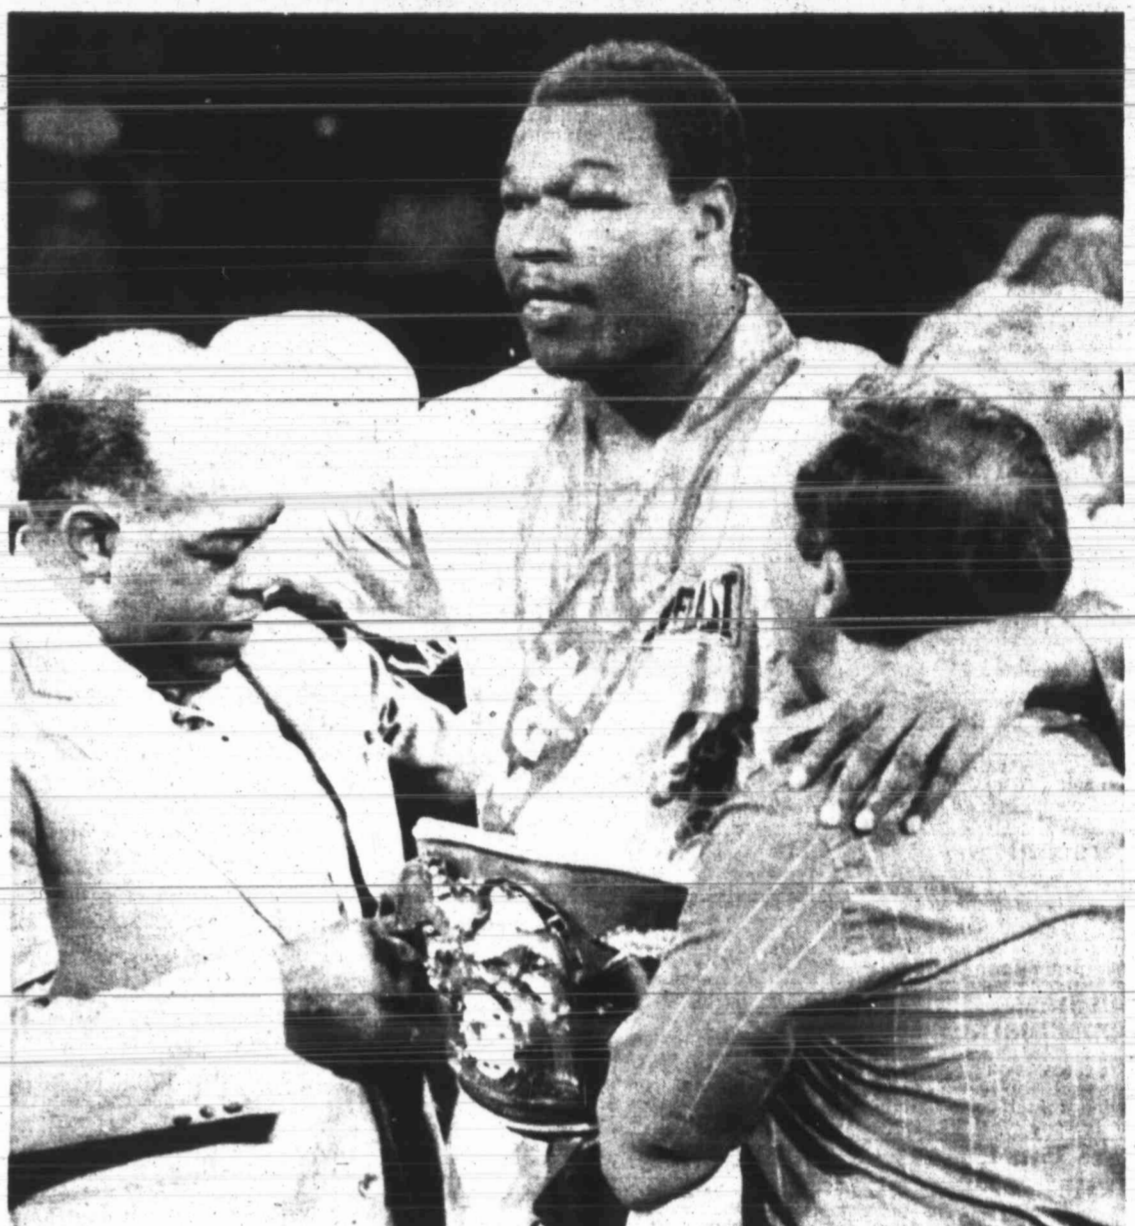

But the challenger from White Plains, N.Y., wasted a lot of motion and time by often circling Holmes without throwing any punches. Also, by circling and backing away, Williams did not make Holmes use what Williams had called the champion's 39-year-old legs.

Holmes, who had trouble with Williams' jab, scored effectively with his own and hurt the challenger on several occasions with body punches. In the ninth round, Holmes had Williams wincing in pain from a left-right to the body just before the bell.

But Holmes, not known as a body puncher, did more head hunting than body punching.

"Larry should have punched to the body more," said trainer Eddie Futch.

"When you go to the body, you leave the head open," Holmes said. "I didn't want to leave the head open because he's a pretty fair puncher."

Bulls nip Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — Jacksonville Coach Lindy Infante never realized his words carried such power or that his defense took them so literally.

"The last thing I told our defense before we went out for the second half was to make them kick field goals," Infante said. "They really know how to follow instructions."

Trailing 17-3 at the half, the Jacksonville defense shut out the Houston Gamblers in the second half while Brian Sipe rallied the Bulls offense to a 20-17 United States Football League victory Monday night.

Sipe's pair of second-half touchdown strikes — 22 yards to Alton Alexis and five yards to Larry Mason — set up the game-winning 27-yard field goal by Brian Franco in a 17-point third quarter.

"Our defense went out and played a magnificent second half," Infante said. "It gave our offense a chance to click. Our defense gave us field position and we were able to turn it into points. Everybody left the locker room very confident at the half about what we could do."

Bulls running back Mike Rozier went over the 1,000-yard mark with 86 yards on 20 carries using a pair of artificial turf shoes borrowed from the National Football League Houston Oilers, who have his National Football League rights. Rozier brought his grass-turf shoes to the Astrodome. "I knew we had it in us," Rozier said of the team's second-half charge. "We were dead in the first half but in the second half when we came back out I could feel the difference."

Gerald McNeil's 49-yard punt return for a touchdown ignited the Gamblers to a 17-3 halftime lead. Toni Fritsch kicked a 44-yard field goal and Kelly hit Richard Johnson with a 15-yard touchdown pass in the second quarter for their halftime bulge.

The Bulls, 7-6, reached the Houston one-yard line in the second quarter but two penalties and a sack of Sipe forced them to settle for Brian Franco's 29-yard field goal.

Jacksonville, aided by two pass-interference penalties, reached Houston's 23 but Luther Bradley's interception with 10 seconds left in the half ended that threat.

The Gamblers had promised to give away a $1 million annuity to a lucky fan if 40,000 fans attended the game and a $10,000 if at least 35,000 were present.

Gambler officials said 17,127 fans attended the game — the smallest crowd of the season.

The Gamblers, 8-5, gained only four yards and held the ball for only 4:35 of the decisive third quarter.

Ex-Steer Valenzuela eliminates Howard

Pete "Jinx" Valenzuela, a 1983 Big Spring High School graduate, proved to be a hometown nemesis for the Howard College Hawks in the Texas Junior College State Baseball Tournament this past weekend. Valenzuela helped Texas Southmost College of Brownsville eliminate the Hawks 5-4 in the third round of the tournament Friday afternoon.

Valenzuela, who compiled a sparkling 9-2 record for the Scorpions this year, pitched eight innings of solid ball against the Hawks to pick up the win against his familiar rivals. Hawk batsmen hit the sophomore righthander hard during the game, but an airtight Southmost defense kept the score close. Valenzuela signed a scholarship to play baseball for the University of Houston next season after being recruited by a number of regional and out of state baseball programs this year.

The Hawks, who were the Region V runners-up this year, finished the season at 31-14. They ended up fourth in the state tournament behind tournament champion San Jacinto College and runnerup McClellan Community College, who were the Region V regular season champs. Texas Southmost, which is an independent, finished up third in the tournament.

San Jacinto will represent the Texas region in the ten team NJCAA World Series, May 25-31 in Grand Junction, Colorado.

Hogs top All-SWC team

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — After winning their first Southwest Conference post-season baseball championship, Arkansas also grabbed the hog's share of the all-tournament honors.

The Razorbacks, who wrapped up the tournament title with a 10-6 victory over Texas Sunday, landed seven players on the all-tournament squad selected by media covering the ninth annual tournament.

Leading the way for the Razorbacks was junior first baseman Dave Patterson who batted a hefty .700 with seven hits on ten trips to the plate over a three-game stretch. In addition, Patterson was named the tournament's outstanding player.

Joining Patterson on the all-tourney team for the Razorbacks were outfielders Norm Roberts and Mike Loggins, third baseman Greg Swindell, designated hitter Ralph Kraus, and pitchers Fred Farwell and Tim Deitz.

Texas, the round-robin champion and tournament runnerup, landed four players on the squad: pitcher Greg Swindell, second baseman Bill Bates, outfielder David Wrzesinski, and utility infielder Dodd Johnson.

Greg Dennis of Baylor was named as the all-tournament shortstop while teammate Tony Huey was selected as the utility outfielder. Houston's Pat Hewes was named as the all-tournament catcher.

Patterson, Roberts and Swindell were unanimous choices.

OZONA — The Big Spring Red Sox semi-pro baseballers kept their season record perfect by sweeping a doubleheader from the Ozona Royals Sunday.

Tony Ontiveros won his fourth game of the season as he took a 4-2 win in the opener, despite only four hits by the Red Sox.

The Red Sox won the second game 5-2, after breaking a 2-2 tie in the seventh inning. Adam Yanez delivered the game-winning hit when he singled in Vicente Garcia and Ontiveros, who had reached base via singles.

Ron Finnell was the winning as the Red Sox raised their record to 10-0. The Sox travel to Big Lake this Sunday for a doubleheader.

Rangers rally, 8-7; Pirates blast Astros

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — The Bobby Valentine-led Texas Rangers opened at home to rave reviews as they gave their new manager a win that matched their best comeback ever.

The beleaguered Rangers had to overcome a 7-0 deficit before their stunning 8-7 victory over the Kansas City Royals Monday night in American League baseball action.

"That's great," Valentine said of matching the come-back record the Rangers set April 10, 1983, when they rallied from 7-0 to beat Boston 9-7. "Maybe we'll break it before the year's over."

The Rangers capped the comeback when Curtis Wilkerson scored the winning run with one out in the ninth on a wild pitch by Kansas City reliever Joe Beckwith, 1-2.

"There probably couldn't have been a more exciting way to win," Valentine said. "I can think of some better ways, but we'll take it."

Wilkerson led off the ninth with a single and advanced to second on catcher Jim Sundberg's passed ball. Rookie centerfielder Oddibe McDowell sacrificed him to third, and the Royals intentionally walked Toby Harrah and Buddy Bell to get to a slumping Larry Parrish.

Beckwith's first pitch sailed over Parrish's head to the screen, allowing Wilkerson to score the winning run and making a winner of Dave Schmidt, 2-2, the third Ranger pitcher.

"I've been struggling with the bat," said Parrish, who had struck out 11 of his last 22 at-bats. "I'm up there looking for a base hit or a ball to the outfield and suddenly the ball's over my head. I'd rather have got a hit and won it, but the way we've been struggling we'll take them anyway we can get them."

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Pittsburgh Pirates have gotten neither timely hitting nor timely pitching this season, but Rick Rhoden gave them both Monday night.

Rhoden scattered four hits over six innings and delivered a key single in a two-run Pittsburgh fifth inning as the Pirates defeated the Houston Astros 3-1 for only their 11th victory in 35 games this season.

"It feels so good to win one," said Pirates Manager Chuck Tanner. "We haven't been scoring runs but those three runs tonight looked like a million. Rick just did a great job and he got a big hit."

Rhoden, 3-4, left the game with tightness in his pitching arm and Al Holland finished up with three scoreless innings to record his third save. Holland has allowed only one run in 21 innings since being traded by Philadelphia to the Pirates last month and opponents are batting under .100 against him.

"I told Holland before the game I'd go eight and give him the ninth for the save," Rhoden said. "I could have kept pitching — I'm not worried about it (the arm) — but there was no sense in it. We had a lead and we have one of the best bullpens, and everyone was rested."

The Phillies were concerned about Holland's weight, since he reportedly has weighed more than 240 pounds this season, but Tanner joked, "He looks like Robert Redford to me."

"I don't care what he weighs if he gets batters out," Tanner said. "If he keeps pitching like this, we'll put a weight clause in his contract ... we'll make him gain weight."

With the score tied 1-1, Bill Almon and Rhoden opened the Pirates' fifth with singles off Joe Niekro, 2-5, and Marvell Wynne bunted the runners up.
