A tribute

U.S. honors war dead

By the Associated Press

Vietnam veterans hold center stage in many cities and towns today as the nation caps the long Memorial Day weekend with ceremonies and parades honoring the nation's war dead.

For many other Americans, the day meant a backyard barbecue, a trip to the beach or a picnic in the park to kick off the summer vacation season.

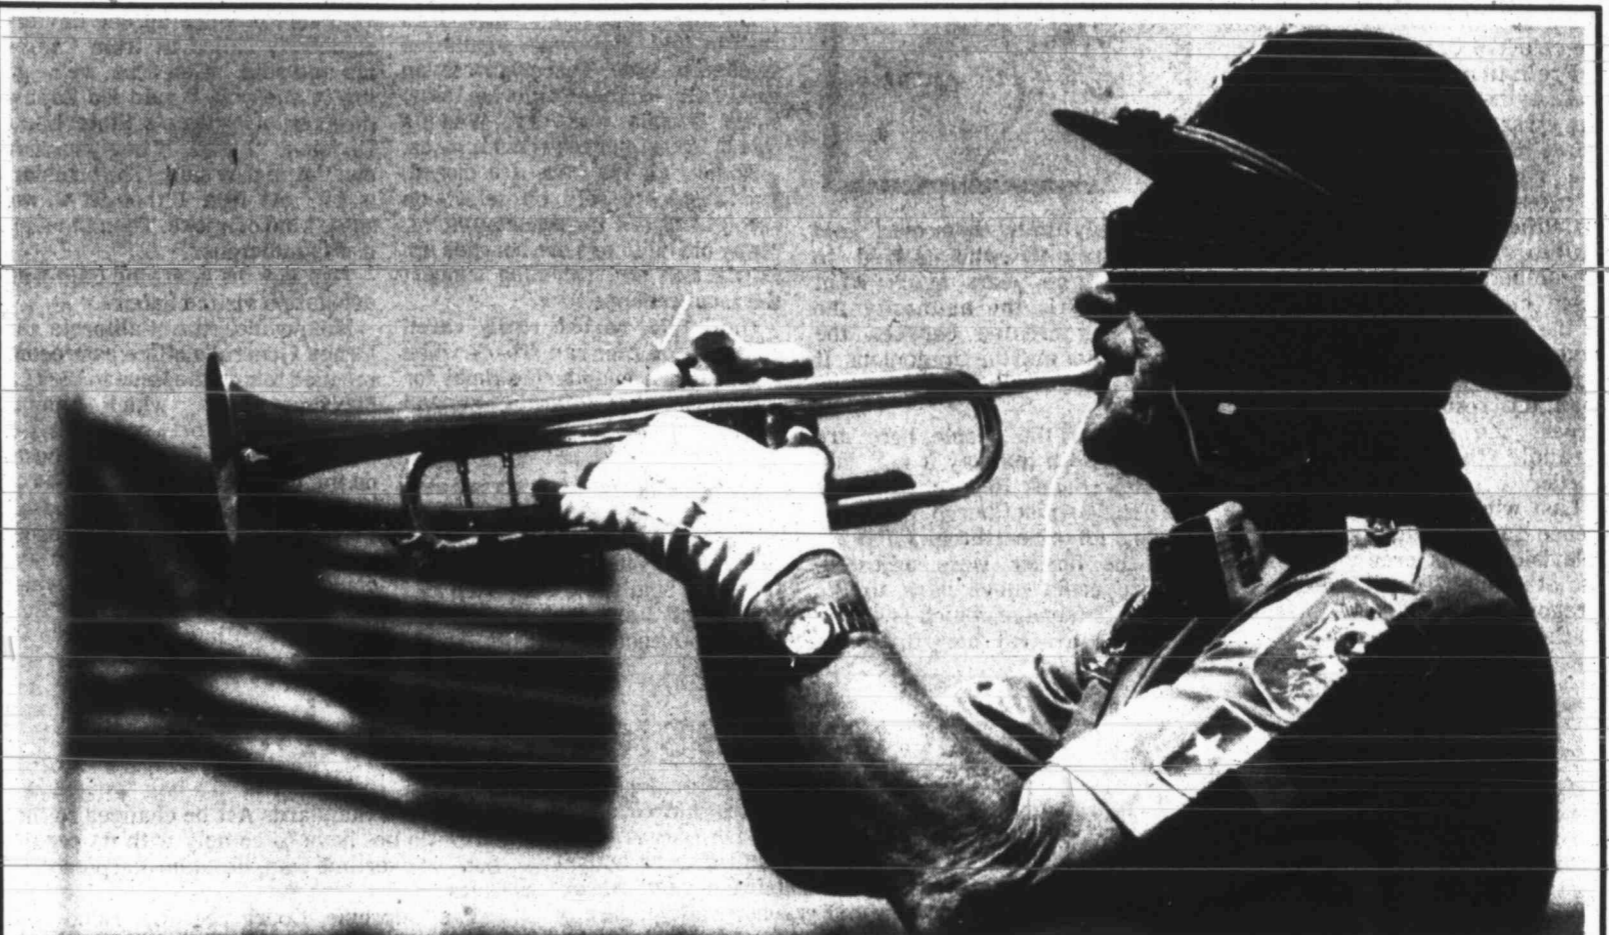

President Reagan was scheduled to place a wreath today at the tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington National Cemetery in suburban Arlington, Va., before flying to Disney World near Orlando, Fla., for a reunion with some of the high school bands that missed his second inauguration.

At the Orleans Parish Jail in New Orleans, officials planned to dedicate a mural painted by deputies and inmates showing a Purple Heart medal and two Medals of Honor beside an enormous rippling American flag, scenes from the war and a map of Vietnam.

"It's a tribute to the price paid, not only by those who served in Vietnam, but to all of the prices paid by all the people who've fought for the freedom we enjoy," said Orleans Parish Criminal Sheriff Charles C. Foti.

A parade in the Detroit suburb of Dearborn was expected to include up to 1,000 Vietnam veterans among its 4,000 participants.

The town's 68th annual Memorial Day Parade "marks the 10th anniversary of our war," said Colin McGee.

Memorial Day

Howard County remembered its war dead this Memorial Day.

The Avenue of Flags Memorial was dedicated Sunday afternoon at Trinity Memorial Park as part of a Howard County Memorial Day Ceremony. The memorial consisted of a large bronze plaque with the names of 47 veterans being honored and a flag for each.

The American flags lined the roads around the center of Trinity Memorial Park.

The Avenue of Flags Memorial is dedicated to all Howard County men and women who served their country.

A wreath was placed at the flag pole by the All Veterans Council. The raising and lowering of the flag, taps and the 21-gun salute was performed by the Veterans of Foreign Post 4372 of Odessa.

19 killed in holiday traffic accidents

By The Associated Press

At least 19 people died in traffic accidents in Texas during the three-day Memorial Day holiday, according to an informal count.

Among the latest fatalities:

— An 18-year-old man was killed and four other people were hurt Sunday night when they were thrown from a pickup truck that ran off a rural road in Comal County and overturned four times, the Department of Public Safety said.

The dead man's identity was being withheld pending notification of relatives.

— Two Midland residents were killed Sunday afternoon when they were struck by a vehicle while riding their bicycles on Texas Highway 191 about seven miles west of Midland, according to the DPS.

The victims were identified as George

Hoffman, 35, and David Werner, 14.

— Jack Scott, 55, of Odessa, died Sunday morning when his car veered off U.S. Highway 385 about three miles south of Odessa, the DPS said.

— Raul Perez, 57, of El Paso, was killed late Saturday when in a car in which he was riding smashed into a concrete barricade on the International Bridge, authorities said.

Two teen-agers died in separate traffic accidents near Freeport, Texas, early Saturday morning, and state Department of Public Safety officials said two people were killed and three others injured in a two-vehicle accident Saturday afternoon in Travis County.

Henry M. Pulido, 17, of Freeport, Texas, was killed when the motorcycle he was driving collided with a train. Pulido's passenger, Scott Morgan, 17, of Oyster Creek, Texas, was treated for cuts and bruises at a nearby hospital.

Mark Dyer, 16, also of Freeport, was pronounced dead at the scene of a one-car rollover that occurred east of Jones Creek, Texas, police said.

Three people were killed and 11 injured in separate accidents Saturday in the west and central regions of Texas.

Dead are Lowrie Jane Leonard, 26, of San Angelo, Richard Steven Wyatt, 18, of Brownwood, and Angelita Cantu, 65, of Mason.

Ms. Leonard was killed Friday evening but the accident was not discovered until Saturday afternoon 24 miles north of Brady.

Wyatt died of massive head injuries he suffered in a two-vehicle accident Saturday morning in Early, police said. Injured were David Allen Wyatt, 16, of Brownwood;

Carlton Ray Wright, 16, of Early; and Wylie Robert Russell, 17, of Brownwood.

Also injured was the driver of the second car, 29-year-old Barry Keith Stevens of Cedar Park, and his wife, Reene Stevens, also 29.

David Wyatt remained in satisfactory condition Saturday at Brownwood Regional Hospital, a nursing supervisor said. The other two men and the Stevens couple were treated and released.

Ms. Cantu was killed in a two-vehicle, head-on collision near Junction, Texas, that injured six others.

Injured were Cecelia Kirk, 40, of Hext, and Mason residents Louis Palacio and Janie Palacio, both 30; Lesa Palacio, 2; Louis Palacio Jr., 9; and Lupita Palacio, 6.

Condition reports on the injured were not available.

The life at 'Club Fed'

Residents object to prison camp atmosphere

By The Associated Press

Maybe it's because there are no fences, guard towers, walls or searchlights that local residents refer to the Big Spring Federal Prison Camp as "Club Fed."

The air of benign incarceration — as well as the tennis courts and the softball tournaments — goes against the concept of crime and punishment held by some area residents.

The institution's front entrance is an oasis of green, and a line of cedars and neatly manicured lawns seem immune to the harsh West Texas sun.

Among its inmates are a notable lot, including former Deputy Secretary of Defense Paul Thayer, former millionaire rancher Rex Cauble and ex-Dallas stockbroker Billy Bob Harris.

Until two years ago, nationally known wheeler-dealer Billy Sol Estes also served his time at the prison camp.

Local jokes about the camp are laced with sarcasm.

"You can tell the inmates," one Big Spring man said. "They're the ones with good suntans."

But Janet Schmidt, the prison's assistant superintendent, said the facility is still a jail.

"The fact that we have no fences and are a much more relaxed environment has spawned that image," she told The Dallas Morning News. "But we have no golf course or swimming pool. Our recreational facilities are the same as you'll find at a maximum-security facility."

Estes, who was freed from the camp about two years ago, agreed.

"Let me tell you, when a man has lost his freedom, he could be locked up in the fanciest hotel in Dallas and he'd still be a prisoner," Estes said.

"At Big Spring, the inmates were treated fairly and decently, and they responded in kind. But it was a prison and it was run as a prison. And it's unfair to the men doing time there to think otherwise," he said.

The prison camp is built on the grounds of the now-closed Webb Air Force Base and has an average population of about 460 inmates. Most are serving sentences of one to five years on drug-related and "white-collar" crime convictions.

Mrs. Schmidt said all inmates are required to work at such tasks as carpentry, electrical work, building and grounds maintenance and clerical chores. Inmates also can study computer sciences, government, real estate and stock investments.

Area residents look at the lifestyle at the Big Spring Federal Prison Camp with dismay.

Border ballyhoo

California, Oregon at odds over states' boundaries

NEW PINE CREEK, Ore. (AP) — Pat Burkett, who used to live in San Jose, doesn't want to be a Californian again.

Eddie Fisher, who retired as a Hollywood special effects man, says his property taxes will be lower if New Pine Creek becomes part of California, but he doesn't really care.

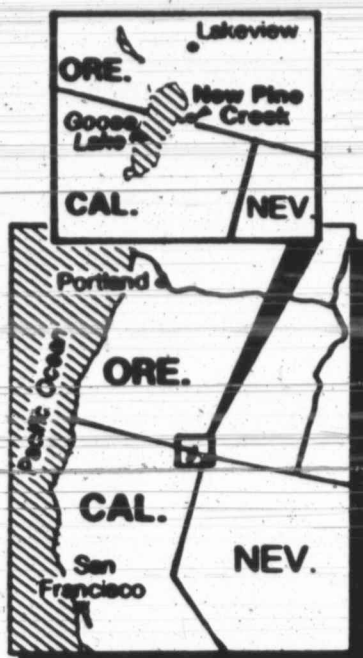

Mrs. Burkett and Fisher are among the 300 Oregon residents who would become instant Californians if the Golden State succeeds in having the border moved about a half-mile north to the 42nd parallel. "They're getting greedy down there," Oregon Gov. Vic Atiyeh has said. "They've got all the California coast, and now they want a little chunk of Oregon."

Preliminary studies indicate that, as the result of an 1870 surveying error, Oregon has about 31,000 acres of California, while California has about 20,000 acres of Oregon.

California sent a delegation to Salem, Oregon's capital, in December to discuss the border issue, but officials said settlement of the boundary question could be several years away.

No one is affected more directly than the residents of New Pine Creek, the only community to straddle the Oregon-California border.

Last winter, Mrs. Burkett's patience ran out after a stream of television news crews came into her Stateline General Store on the Oregon side seeking an interview on the border controversy.

"I bodily threw them out," said Mrs. Burkett, who moved to Oregon three years ago. "What angers me is the animosity the press has created between the Californians and the Oregonians. It wasn't there and the press has done it."

"Most of the people here are satisfied with the way it is," said the Rev. Frank Reetz, pastor of the First Baptist Church. "It would cause a lot of heartbreak."

If the border were adjusted, Reetz could move back to the church parsonage, which is on the Oregon side. He moved to the California side of town so his son could attend seventh grade at the Stateline School rather than ride a bus 14 miles north to Lakeview.

The border dispute has its roots in the survey done by Daniel Major, who passed through Goose Lake Valley in 1868.

Joseph Ross was the only settler. He had a place on what was then defined as the California side. John O'Neill, who ran a pack train for the Army, settled on the Oregon side in 1869, the year the survey reached the Pacific.

In 1901, residents rejected changing the name to Orcal to commemorate the fact the town straddled the border.

During California's last gold rush in 1912, the town's population swelled to 5,000. There were seven bars, all on the California side, since Oregon was dry. Wendt's Opera House showed silent movies.

Today, all the bars are closed, and residents rely on television satellite dishes for entertainment. Many old buildings are boarded up. Cattle and hay ranching support the local economy.

Until 1976, no one really cared where the border ran. That's when Bud Uzes, a boundary official for the state of California, started researching a book on the boundary.

The 42nd parallel has served as a boundary since 1819, when it was cited in a territorial treaty between the United States and Spain. At that time Spain held California and the United States had what was to become Oregon.

When Major traced the 42nd parallel, he took astronomical readings with a sextant only three times, said Uzes. As a result, he wavered back and forth across the true line as he made his way west from the 120th meridian to the Pacific Ocean.

Uzes didn't pursue the boundary matter immediately, because California was waging battle in the U.S. Supreme Court over its border with Nevada, claiming that part of Nevada north of Lake Tahoe was actually California's. But once that issue was settled — the justices decided to let the line stand — California looked at its northern boundary.

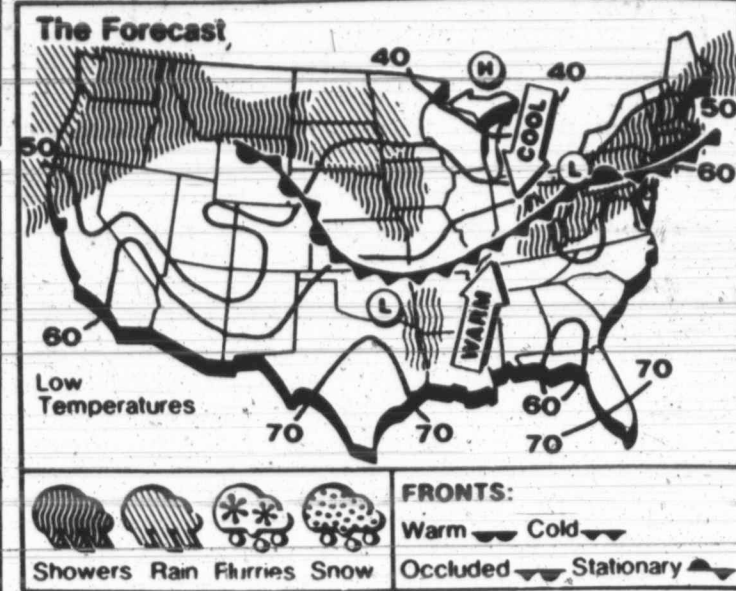

"I sort of woke up one day and somebody called us from California and said, 'Gee whiz, we're going to sue you,'" said Ed Zajonc, director of Oregon's State Lands Division. "I said, 'I beg your pardon?' And they said, 'The boundary is off.' At first I thought it was some kind of a joke. Then I thought it was ludicrous."

Two months later, the California delegation visited Salem.

Meanwhile, the California Attorney General's office has recommended taking the issue to the U.S. Supreme Court, which handles border disputes between the states.

"There could be a lawsuit based on the jurisdiction of the two states in taxation," said David B. Judson, the California deputy attorney general handling the case. "There could be an auto accident in which the question would arise over which state law applied."

Council to select commission members

By KEELY COGHLAN
Staff Writer

City Council members Tuesday will select the three members of the firemen's civil service commission during the 6:30 p.m. council meeting.

Councilmen will vote on members for the newly created board after discussing nominees in a closed executive session.

The council also will consider an agreement with David M. Griffith and Associates Ltd., a consultants firm, to perform a study of the city's user fees and a cost allocation plan.

According to City Finance Director Tom Ferguson, the study would determine the actual cost of services provided by the city. The city could then decide whether to recover the cost of the service through user fees or to subsidize the service through the property tax rate.

The study also will determine the costs to the city of providing administrative services, police service, fire service and other services to the Big Spring Airpark.

The council also will consider a proposal to hire a risk management consultant to examine city insurance policies and coverage types.

Council members also will discuss budget revisions for the current fiscal year. According to figures from Ferguson's office, the city has increased beginning fund balances, an increase in expenses and a decrease in revenues.

According to the revised budget, the city increased the amount of money in its beginning fund balance, from $393,335 to $450,696. It also showed an increase in the amount in its restricted fund balance, from $185,593 to $327,148.

Total revenues, however, decreased, from an estimated $6.601 million to $6.556 million.

Operating and maintenance expenses increased from an estimated $6,390 to $6,429, and capital expenses increased from $437,750 to $802,562.

The restricted fund balance at the end of the year fell from an estimated $60,593 to $16,932. The estimated ending fund balance also dropped, from $391,047 to $84,822.

In addition, councilmen will consider a resolution recommending that the federal Fair Labor Standards Act be changed so that cities do not have to comply with its regulations on overtime compensation and personnel rules.

The Supreme Court recently ruled that cities must comply with the federal statute.

Councilmen also will consider awarding bids for the sprinkler system for the expanded Western Container building at the airpark, for ballfill support equipment and for a tapping machine.

Council members also will review Parks and Recreation Board recommendations to:

- Permit a sailboat race June 9 at Moss Creek Lake to benefit the Sunshine Neighbors, which helps small children with medical problems.

- Agree to allow Walter Unger to collect donations for construction of a fishing dock at Moss Creek Lake for use by senior citizens and the handicapped only.

- Approve rules and regulations governing tee times at Comanche Trail Municipal Golf Course.

The council also discuss filling three slots on the city electrical board.

House approves bill for atom-smasher

AUSTIN — A bill designed to help the state attract a federal atom-smasher won final approval Sunday in the Texas House after language was added to ensure that Texas A&M is included in the selection process.

House members had approved the measure earlier, but further action was needed for a Senate amendment to include Texas A&M in the selection process before the bill could be sent to the governor for his signature.

The measure gives Texas A&M University and the University of Texas additional powers of eminent domain to use in acquiring property that may be needed for a proposed $4 billion atom smasher.

Texas A&M, the University of Texas, Rice University and the University of Houston have formed a consortium to work on a design for a Super-Conducting Super-

Collider to be used in research of particles smaller than atoms.

The facility will consist of a circular track with a 30-mile circumference that will be located underground.

Sen. John Montford, the Senate sponsor of the bill, said the schools wanted their current powers of eminent domain streamlined. That was needed so if a part of the huge project falls outside university-owned lands, he said, the universities can acquire the additional land quickly, without holding up the project.

The Department of Energy, which is sponsoring the project, is reportedly considering Permanent University Fund lands south of Fort Worth and in Andrews County for the facility.

Gas prices show increase

LOS ANGELES — Gasoline prices, which had zoomed up 9½ cents a gallon since February, increased less than half a cent in the past two weeks, oil industry analyst Dan Lundberg says.

The 0.043-cent-a-gallon boost "is a virtual stall in that upward climb from $1.13 on Feb. 8," Lundberg said Sunday.

But he said it was unlikely that prices would fall before summer.

"Gasoline prices, which had gone up over 9½ cents a gallon since early February, accelerated just a fraction above idle during the past two weeks," Lundberg said.

He said his survey of 17,500 gas stations nationwide on Friday found that motorists were paying an average $1.23 per gallon. The last Lundberg survey was taken two weeks ago.

United strike lingers on

CHICAGO — The strike by 5,000 pilots against United Airlines moved into its 11th day today after talks broke off over a holiday weekend during which rival air carriers gathered in passengers grounded by the walkout against the nation's largest airline.

No talks were scheduled after bargaining broke off Saturday.

"We have a moral and legal obligation to come back to the bargaining table if the National Mediation Board asks us," said United spokesman Chuck Novak. But if no such request is made, "we will continue to hire pilots" and increase the number of flights, he said.

"I think we're prepared to hold out as long as we have to," said Dale Richter, a 17-year United employee and spokesman for the striking Air Line Pilots Association. "The morale is very high."

Volcano ready to blow

VANCOUVER, Wash. — Mount St. Helens is humming with earthquakes at an "extremely high rate" and could soon burst forth in eruptive activity, say scientists.

Quake activity is "about as high as we can go before starting to feel the possibility of some extrusions (of lava)," Rick Benson of the University of Washington geophysics center in Seattle said Sunday.

The quakes increased in size and number throughout Sunday, said Chris Jonientz-Trisler of the center.

Low clouds stymied efforts Sunday to fly geologists into the crater of the southwest Washington volcano to view the lava dome inside.

However, a flight was planned overnight to measure gas emissions before scientists compared notes today. Ms. Jonientz-Trisler said the gas readings could give a good idea of when an eruption might occur.

Storm rips Bangladesh; 10,000 feared dead

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) — A hurricane that rose in the Bay of Bengal and whipped mammoth waves across the islands and coast of Bangladesh has killed 1,464 people by official count, and news reports today said 10,000 people were feared dead.

President Hussain Mohammed Ershad flew to the stricken areas and ordered air force helicopters and four navy ships to join army and air force rescue teams.

Officials at the Cyclone Control Room at the chief martial law administrator's office said Sunday the confirmed death toll from Saturday's hurricane in southeastern Bangladesh was 1,464.

But the mass circulation Bengali-language daily The Ittefaq reported more than 10,000 were killed in the hurricane and 25-foot-high waves, and The Bangladesh Observer, an English-language daily, quoted unofficial sources as saying more than 25,000 were missing.

The Ittefaq, quoting an unidentified forestry official, said 7,000 of 10,000 residents of Urirchar Island were feared dead. The paper quoted survivors as saying the island was hit by 25-foot-high waves. Ittefaq's reporter said 3,000 others were dead in coastal areas.

Sultan Mahmood, the chief air force vice marshal, told the AP after touring the area that a 60-mile strip from Noakhali to the islands of Pirkhsh and Char Clark had been ravaged, and he did not see any houses standing except for hurricane shelters.

Residents told Mahmood that 6,000 are missing on those islands, he said.

At least 50,000 families have lost their homes in Noakhali, Mahmood said.

Everyone who remained on the tiny island of Urirchar was dragged into the sea by 10 to 15-foot waves, said officials at the control room.

The officials said some of the estimated 10,000 islanders on Urirchar were evacuated to the mainland before the hurricane hit, but at least 500 were reported missing. Only a family of four has been rescued, officials said.

No contact could be established with the island, 35 miles off the coast from the town of Noakhali and near Sandwip island.

But the officials, who cannot be identified under martial law regulations, told The Associated Press a plane that flew over the area reported the island raked clean by waves.

In 1981, people began settling on the four-mile square island after erosion ate away their land. Many islanders lived on small boats.

2 Koreas renew talks

SEOUL, South Korea — A North Korean Red Cross delegation arrived in the South Korean capital today to resume humanitarian talks broken off 12 years ago.

The negotiations, aimed at reuniting families separated in the south and north, were cut off by North Korea for political reasons.

The 84-member delegation stopped briefly in the truce village of Panmunjom, where Jong Yul, vice president of the North Korean Red Cross organization, said:

"If we unite together on the basis of understanding and trust, the barriers (to unification), including the military demarcation line, will be overcome."

American troops usually aid the South Korean army in maintaining security on the southern side of the border, but there were no American soldiers in sight when the North Koreans arrived.

Pope's assailants on trial

ROME — Three Bulgarians and four Turks go on trial today on charges of being part of the so-called "Bulgarian connection" plot to kill Pope John Paul II four years ago.

The opening session of what Italian newspapers are calling "the trial of the century" is expected to deal exclusively with lawyers' motions. No testimony is considered likely.

The proceedings will test accusations by convicted papal assailant Mehmet Ali Agca that he was not the only one to shoot the pope, that the scheme was hatched in Bulgaria and that a suspected Turkish mobster offered the equivalent of $1.2 million for the death of the Polish-born pontiff.

All the defendants face life sentences.

8 killed in soccer riot

MEXICO CITY — Thousands of soccer fans jammed a tunnel into Mexico City's second largest stadium to watch a playoff match, and eight people died and 29 were injured in the crush, authorities said.

The official news agency Notimex said the eight died of asphyxiation. But Angel Corona, the Public Ministry official leading the investigation, told The Associated Press any comment on the cause of death would be "pure speculation."

He said autopsies would be conducted today.

Angel Corona said two boys, ages 12 and 15, were among the dead and the other victims were men over 20. Seven people perished in the tunnel and an eighth died after being taken to the hospital, he said.

An estimated 90,000 people were inside the 70,000-capacity stadium when the match began at noon, Notimex said.

Palestinians, civilians killed in Beirut refugee camps

By The Associated Press

Fighting raged between Shiite Moslem forces and beleaguered Palestinian guerrillas in Lebanon today, and witnesses reported scores of civilians and wounded Palestinians were rounded up and killed in three Beirut refugee camps last week.

A Red Cross attempt to remove some of the Palestinian fighters wounded in eight days of fighting failed on Sunday.

Druse leader Walid Jumblatt, who has maintained neutrality in the current battle but has fought on the side of the Shiites in the past, negotiated a mid-afternoon cease-fire Sunday to evacuate the wounded.

But it "never happened," said Sophie Martin, a Swiss who heads the International Red Cross' Beirut office.

Police have reported at least 360 people killed and 1,658 wounded since the Amal militia, backed by elements of the 6th Brigade, launched their attacks on May 19. The Amal launched the assaults to rebuild the power base it lost in Israel's invasion in June 1982.

The Moscow-oriented Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine said squads from Amal, the main Shiite militia, have rounded up about 1,000 Palestinian civilians from the camps and elsewhere in predominantly Moslem west Beirut and herded them into interrogation centers around the city.

It was not possible immediately to confirm the report.

Hundreds of Palestinian refugees were killed in the Sabra and Chatilla camps by Christian militiamen in 1982 after Israeli troops had entered Beirut and surrounded the camps.

Frogmen search for survivors in tanker explosion

ALGECIRAS, Spain (AP) — Navy frogmen today dove into the waters off the Rock of Gibraltar to search for 17 people missing in the explosion of two tankers. Officials said they feared the death toll could go to 40.

Antonio Fernandez, spokesman for the Cadiz province civil governor, said today that 10 of the 18 bodies found so far had been identified as either crew or refinery workers who perished Sunday when the Petragen One exploded as it was unloading 20,000 tons of Libyan naphtha.

Officials of the Gibraltar refinery, owned by the Spanish Petroleum Co., say the explosion was caused by gases accumulated in the Petragen One's hold. The first blast, they say, set off two others in the Spanish tanker Campanavia, moored close by and taking on a load of airline fuel.

The investigating magistrate, Federico Lazaro Guill, said today the number of victims could rise to at least 40 since it was not known how many people were in the area of the refinery and the wharf when the blasts occurred.

Firemen and emergency teams today sprayed water on the partially sunken hulls of the tankers to cool them off and permit frogmen to move in.

King Juan Carlos and Vice Prime Minister Alfonso Guerra visited the 13 injured remaining in the Social Security Hospital in nearby La Linea de La Concepcion this morning and were to tour the disaster site later on.

Hospital officials said 39 people had been admitted for injuries. The explosions sent flames shooting thousands of feet into the air, witnesses said.

"The building shook, plaster fell around me and I rushed to the window just in time to see a huge ball of fire swallow up the whole of the wharf at Campamento on the Spanish side of the Bay of Gibraltar," newscaster David Hoare told the British Broadcasting Co.

Job figures are hard to fathom

While it is nice to see the local unemployment rate fall to an acceptably low level, the statistics released last week on the labor force came as a bit of a shock.

Figures compiled by the Texas Employment Commission put total unemployment in Big Spring during April at 727 people. That number should reflect the people looking for work who didn't find a job. For the county, the number is 831.

The figures translate to a rate of 5.9 percent for the city, 5.1 percent for the county. Those are fairly positive statistics for the local economy. They could be better, but they are a far cry from the 9 percent levels of a couple of years ago.

What is disturbing is the statistic on number of people who make up the labor force. The employment commission says about 300 people left the Big Spring labor force between March and April. TEC puts the county loss at 400.

If those figures are accurate for a one-month time frame, they reflect one of two things, or a combination of the two: 400 workers left the county in April, or 400 workers simply dropped out of the system, discouraged at their inability to find work.

If 400 people, many with families, left in April then it means we've not yet seen the final setting of population here following the downturn in the oil economy. The supply of jobs, and the level of economic activity, still does not correspond to the demand for work.

Perhaps there's a fluke in the statistics. It's very hard to believe that the county took a net loss of 400 people and families in a month's time. But in any event the spurt in economic activity we're now seeing — new construction along FM 700 and downtown — is destined to generate jobs that will put new demands on our ability to provide workers.

When E.F. Hutton talks, U.S. listens

If people don't think Attorney General Ed Meese is all heart, they ought to take another look at the recent settlement of the Justice Department's case against the brokerage firm of E.F. Hutton.

The company pleaded guilty to 2,000 felony counts of mail and wire fraud which involved kiting checks worth more than a billion dollars to 400 American banks.

E.F. Hutton made a deal with the government and was sentenced to pay a fine of $2 million (which boils down to $1,000 for each count) and $8 million to the banks it defrauded.

When somebody asked the Attorney General why no individuals were prosecuted, Mr. Meese replied, "In this case it was more important to get recompense to victims (read banks) than to prosecute the individuals." Meese called the settling of the case a "comprehensive and open-ended restitution plan." He said the plea-bargaining agreement showed the Justice Department's concern for victims and "its desire to make whole those banks and other institutions who suffered any loss."

The Attorney General's decision to let E.F. Hutton buy its way out of trouble for a few million bucks made us reassess our opinion of Meese as a tough law-and-order man. When it comes to crooked brokers Ed Meese is a toasted marshmallow.

I called my man at Justice and asked why the big turnabout on crime by the Reagan administration.

"E.F. Hutton has suffered enough," he said. "Will justice be served if we send anyone to jail over a little billion dollar check-writing scam?"

"You've sent people up the river for stealing a lot less," I pointed out. "I know a lady who embezzled $10,000 from her credit union and she's doing seven years in a federal penitentiary."

"That was a serious white-collar crime, and if we had let her plea-bargain we would be sending a message that we were soft on credit union theft. The Hutton scheme, on the other hand, involved over a billion dollars, and the Attorney General decided he'd rather collect restitution for the banks than try to send a few misguided employees to jail."

"Why couldn't he have done both?" I asked.

"You mean you would want us to fine one of the leading brokerage houses in America and also put their people behind bars? What kind of animals do you think we are?"

"Nobody wants anyone to go to jail," I assured him. "But what kind of message are you sending white collar criminals if people can get away with stealing $8 million and not have to worry about going to the pokey?"

"I suppose you'd want us to prevent E.F. Hutton from selling securities as well?"

"Why not, if it would make other people who deal with the public's money think twice about committing fraud. One crooked bond dealer in Florida almost brought down the entire banking system of Ohio. I say if you commit a felony you should get out of the investment business and go into making license plates where you belong."

He protested, "Even if we wanted to we couldn't prosecute anyone in the check-writing scheme."

"Why not?"

"Everybody turned state's evidence so we wouldn't send them to jail."

"Why did you agree to that?"

"Because we would have never had a case against them if they didn't tell us how they did it."

"I'll take your word for it that you were as tough on Hutton as you possibly could get. But what do I tell the lady who is doing seven years for stealing from the credit union?"

"Tell her she has to pay her debt to society like almost everybody else."

General Dynamics charged good times as overhead

By JACK ANDERSON and DALE VAN ATTA
WASHINGTON — The shortest way to a Pentagon contract is often through a cocktail lounge or across a golf course. At least this is the route that General Dynamics has often taken to win friends and influence procurement officers.

General Dynamics may have slipped from first to third place in the great corporate scramble for defense dollars, but it hasn't been for lack of effective lobbying. Its Washington executives have wined, dined and golfed their way from Capitol Hill to the Pentagon.

Our associate Tony Capaccio found the evidence in internal company documents and public records. He also interviewed several people familiar with the lobbying operation.

He uncovered entertainment expenses and other questionable payments that General Dynamics improperly charged to various defense contracts as overhead. Here are some of the ways the company spread its largesse:

• Political contributions: Four of the company's top Washington representatives, including office director Ernest "Ted" LeFevre, contributed a total of $1,806 to members of Congress between 1983 and 1984 through the company's political-action committee. These donations were not charged to the government.

• Tickets: General Dynamics handed out tickets ranging from $120 for the ballet at the Kennedy Center for an unnamed congressman, to $346 for an airline ticket for former Sen. Roger Jepsen, R-Iowa, to visit a company plant. A $125 ticket for a March 1983 Placido Domingo concert was given to Rep. Joe McDade, R-Pa. Explained a memo: McDade "is a particularly effective member of the (appropriations defense) subcommittee and is well respected by colleagues."

• Gifts: These included $78 for flowers sent to a congressional staff member and $54 for a basket of fruit delivered in July 1983 to Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz. The fruit was accompanied by a note from LeFevre that said: "Hopefully, this will make you feel at least half a good as your ride in the F-16! ... (signed) The troops at GD."

• Receptions: General Dynamics' Washington office donated $100 worth of white wine toward the House Science and Technology Committee's 1982 Christmas party. Another $90 in booze was donated to a farewell party for a Senate Commerce Committee staff member; the thank-you note enclosed the receipt for the corporate files.

In December 1983, the company spent $915 on a buffet in its own penthouse suite for a senior aide to Sen. Bennett Johnston, D-La., and staff members of the Defense appropriations subcommittee. "These personnel were very important to our successful ef-orts to obtain increased M-1 tank and F-16 aircraft production in the FY 1982 budget," a company memo explained.

• Dues: For several years, company lobbyists charged the taxpayers for their $30 monthly membership dues to the Republicans' Capitol Hill Club and its Democratic counterpart.

• Cookbooks: In 1982, General Dynamics bought 10 copies of "Congressional Cookbook" and submitted the $120 bill to the government. The project director for this collection of congressional recipes was the wife of Rep. William Dickinson, R-Ala., the ranking Republican on the House Armed Services Committee.

• Golf expenses: Company golfing fees were also charged to the taxpayers, including $115 monthly dues at the Congressional Country Club and $40 for golf-club storage. Last year, LeFevre charged the government $635 for bar and restaurant bills at Burning Tree Country Club for a single three-person outing. He did not, however, pass along the $205 he spent on green fees, equipment and rentals for the same excursion.

For the 1983 Kemper Open at the Congressional Country Club, a General Dynamics executive suggested that the company buy an additional $600 clubhouse-and-grounds-badger package because "every year the legislative affairs department receives several requests from friends on Capitol Hill for tickets."

Footnote: Last December, four of the company's 56 Washington employees finally registered as lobbyists. Spokesman Al Spivak said that until that time, they hadn't felt their activities fell within the registration laws.

Spivak also noted, correctly, that "it is not illegal for contractors to entertain members of Congress and staff." Where entertainment charges have been improperly charged as overhead on its government contracts, Spivak said, the charges have been withdrawn.

DIPLOMATIC DIGEST: Saudi Arabia is trying to set up an Afghan government-in-exile, according to intelligence sources. The trouble with the Saudi plan is that they want ex-King Zahir Shah to head the exile regime.

The king, who was booted out in 1973 and lives in Rome, is not popular with the Afghan rebels who are fighting Soviet invaders and their puppet government forces. The Saudis are offering a powerful inducement — $40 million in aid to the resistance groups — but are unlikely to win any of them over to the king. The rebels figure, probably correctly, that the Saudis will come up with at least some of the money anyway.

Sermon isn't doing its job

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: Frankly, I don't get much out of our pastor's sermons. He says a lot of good things, but later I can't remember what they were or how they are supposed to affect my life. I want to know the Bible better, but how can I get more out of sermons? — Mrs. V.H.

DEAR MRS. V.H.: You already have the first requirement: You want to learn what the Word of God says. A sermon, after all, is more than just a public lecture on a topic of current interest. It should be a declaration of the Word of God, helping people to understand the Bible better. The Bible is God's Word, and we need to understand its truth and apply it to our lives if we are to believe and live as God wants us to.

Let me make several practical suggestions. First, before every service, pray that God will give you an alert mind and a receptive heart. Then, if you can find out in advance what passage of the Bible your pastor is preaching on, read that passage several times at home until you become familiar with it and have some idea of its main points. This will help you to concentrate more on the points he is making in the sermon. Some people also find it helpful to take notes during a sermon, writing down the outline or the main points, or noting other scriptures that the pastor mentions that relate to his message. Finally, after a sermon, review your notes and re-read the passage of scripture.

In addition, let your pastor know when a point in a sermon especially means something to you. He will not only be encouraged by this, but may be challenged to give more time and effort to his messages. If you do this, he also may be more ready to listen to you when you indicate that something was not clear in a message. Many people simply say they "enjoyed" a sermon when they greet their pastor at the door, but that tells him little about what precisely was helpful or challenging to them.

Agents job requires charm

By LISA MUSSER
Staff Writer

All Gary Harkins says it takes to do his job is to be handsome, charming, have a college education and insurance training.

Harkins, 40, is an agent for State Farm Insurance. He has been selling insurance in Big Spring from his office at 1505 Scurry for four years.

He says his job is to "make people happy." He does this by showing them their insurance needs and then meeting these needs with family insurance policies. His policies cover auto, home, health and life insurance.

Nothing in his business seems to pose a challenge for him, except, he jokingly says, "having to put up with my secretary and getting mail from Austin."

Dorothy Grizzard, Harkins' secretary, seems to keep him in line at work and remind him what he needs to do. Harkins says Grizzard's hardest job is "putting up with him."

"He's a real good boss," Grizzard says. "We try to do our work and have a good time, too." She says his office serves approximately 2,300 Big Spring people and keeping up with the work this creates, to Harkins' disappointment, doesn't leave him time to go play golf except on days when the office is closed.

He says he entered the insurance business 10 years ago because it gave him a "better opportunity to serve people." He was formerly an electrification adviser and served builders and home owners by instructing them on electrical needs. Harkins graduated with a business degree from McMurry College in Abilene. He sold insurance in Colorado City before he

Surgery corrects aorta problem

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: My daughter was born with coarctation of her aorta. She is going to have surgery for it. Can you explain the condition and the surgery to be done? I need some reassuring. — J.C.

The aorta, the largest artery in the body, is like a pipeline. It runs directly from the heart's pumping chamber out through the chest and abdomen, branching out here and there to send blood to other vessels and hence to all areas of the body. Your daughter's aorta has a section that is abnormally narrow, and when it happens it usually is in the chest area, near its beginning.

This must be corrected because the narrowness forces the heart to work harder to pump blood through the vessel. In time that can lead to heart enlargement and eventually to high blood pressure. We can't say just why coarctation occurs in some infants and not in others.

The narrow segment is removed and either the two ends sewn back together or a Dacron graft used to bridge the gap between the ends. The surgery is safe. It is done many times each year and results in a normal aorta.

The alternative to surgery is usually a shortened life expectancy, so you are making the right move. I hope this is the kind of reassurance you are seeking. I had to shorten your very nice letter and limit my response to the aorta problem. Will you write me after your child's surgery. I want to know how she's doing.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: If a woman is on a relatively accurate 28-day menstruation cycle, when are the best days to get pregnant? I've been told seven to 10 days before menstruation and I've been told 10 to 14 days before menstruation. — Mrs. B.M.

It depends on just when your ovulation occurs, and that is usually from 12 to 16 days before the onset of menstruation. Conception is most likely to occur on one of those days.

But the calendar is not the most reliable means of detecting ovulation, for there is always a wide variance — among different women and in the same woman, too. Ovulation, even in a woman with a regular cycle, can vary from the 10th to the 17th day.

A more reliable index of ovulation is your body temperature. You have to chart that daily and not just for a single cycle, but for several. Three should be sufficient. As you are charting cycles you will notice that on one of the days you have a significant rise, by about a degree. That is the day of ovulation. You note where those ovulation days appear in the several cycles. The ovum (the egg released at ovulation) stays alive and subject to fertilization for at most 24 hours. Sexual relations are set to take advantage of this most likely time of conception.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I was disappointed with your answer to Miss X, who was troubled by the fact that she was flat-chested and wanted to know what she could do about it. You suggested she consider "augmentation through surgery" if it was "causing her great distress."

I feel you should have suggested she seek counseling so she might accept herself as she is and feel better about herself. As a male I prefer women with smaller breasts, and I'm sure there are other men out there who feel the same way I do. Won't you reconsider your advice to Miss X and others like her who might be considering wasting money on silicone? — J.P.

I think I'll let my response stand along with your comment.

FOR MRS. M. — An abnormal craving for clay, cornstarch, or for ice is called pica. I suggest you report your habit to your doctor. Sometimes it can reflect an iron deficiency anemia. Your doctor can settle that by taking a sample of your blood for analysis.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I have a problem with my right ear. It itches. I have not seen a doctor as I don't know if it's serious or not. It wakes me up at night. I have to itch. Can you help? — L.M.

I know what you mean. I have the same problem, and if I roll over onto my right side the itching nearly drives me crazy — or it used to. I searched the literature for causes and found lots of them — allergy, eczema of the ear canal, dryness, seborrhea, reaction to hair sprays or shampoos. Then I did what you should do. I saw a doctor.

He pronounced the diagnosis as "chronic itchy ear." He banned scratching. The relief from scratching was only temporary and I was once again setting up the scene for infection by scratching (it thickens the skin and invites invasion by organisms). Finally, my doctor prescribed a steroid cream for the offending ear and I am happy to report that I am better. I am sure you will be helped this way.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I have been trying for years to quit cigarettes, but am among the unsuccessful ones so far. I even tried hypnosis. Strangely, the person doing it told me after several attempts that I was one of the rare ones who cannot be hypnotized. How rare am I? — M.S.

I am told that about one person in four cannot be hypnotized.

Parkinson's disease afflicts more than 200,000 Americans, with 36,000 new cases reported annually. Dr. Donohue's booklet, "Coping with Parkinson's," is a practical patient and family guide to treatment, therapies, and drugs used for control. For a copy write to Dr. Donohue, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, IL 60611. Please enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and $1.50 for postage and handling.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: My husband, who is 24, weighs 145 pounds and is 6 feet, 1-inch tall. His blood pressure concerns me. It always ran about 140/90 consistently, but recently it has dropped and is between 105/60 and 60/30. He has been experiencing tiredness, dizziness, weakness and chest pains. He fainted once that I know of, and has lost weight, even though he eats well. I cannot convince him to see a doctor. He says low blood pressure is of no consequence, only high pressure. What should I tell him? Isn't this dangerous? — Mrs. C.N.

Those recent blood pressure readings are very disturbing. They have to be reported. While it is often said that low blood pressure is not bad, readings that low are not what is meant. Your husband's normal pressure was the 140/90. And even though that might be considered a bit high for his age, the degree of drop you give me cannot be considered healthy, even without the other disturbing symptoms he's experiencing — the weight loss and the rest. He needs a thorough examination to get to the bottom of things. The sooner the better. What you have to do is convince him of that.

Arthritis sufferers can be helped. For a copy of the booklet, "How You Can Control Arthritis," which discusses many types of arthritis and related joint diseases as well as effective treatments and medications, write to Dr. Donohue, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, IL 60611. Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 50 cents.

Dear Abby

Male nurses cross dividing line

DEAR ABBY: You asked your readers how they felt about male nurses. Well, let me tell you. If I caught a male nurse tending my wife, he would leave her room faster than he went in. Men should stay in man's work, or confine their nursing to men only.

My wife goes to a woman doctor. She started going to a male doctor, but I wouldn't let her go back to him a second time. I made her find a woman doctor.

My wife had to see a specialist once, and he was a man, but I insisted on going into the examination room with her. If a doctor won't allow a husband in the room, he shouldn't be a doctor. I hope to see a law passed that says no male doctor can examine a woman unless her husband is present.

KNOXVILLE, TENN.
DEAR KNOXVILLE: Would you hope to see a law passed that says no female doctor can examine a man unless his wife is present? Just asking.

DEAR ABBY: Are male nurses discriminated against? This is the way it is in Vancouver, Wash.:

Hospitals have nurses' lounges — but the males aren't allowed to use them. Female nurses are often provided with uniforms and laundry service — males aren't, unless they want to wear the "scrub" uniforms, which lack the crisp, professional appearance most nurses like to maintain.

A male's sexuality is always suspect. Many female nurses assume that a male nurse must be somehow "less of a man" — otherwise he'd be a doctor, not a nurse. It's amusing to see the slightly shocked expression with which one nurse meets another nurse's wife for the first time.

How do I know all this? I am a nurse, and so is my husband.

NURSE'S WIFE
DEAR ABBY: You asked, "Are male nurses discriminated against?" This may answer your question:

During the final hours of Christmas shopping last year, a hysterical woman ran out of the ladies' room in a large department store screaming, "A woman fainted in there, and she's on the floor white as a sheet — somebody come help her!"

I immediately handed my packages to my wife and started for the ladies' room saying, "I'll help her — I'm a nurse." Some woman behind me shouted, "You'd better say you're a doctor!"

F.D.H., RN, DETROIT
DEAR ABBY: If I ever have to go to a hospital, I will give strict orders not to send me a male nurse to even give me a bedpan. (I would sooner be looked after by the cleaning woman.)

Women are traditionally caretakers by nature. We nurse our babies, and when our husband and children are sick, we take care of them. And in the end, we women take care of our elderly parents.

Men, on the other hand, are traditionally the child molesters, perverts, wife beaters, exhibitionists, serial murderers and general all-around lousers. We women can consider ourselves lucky if we can find one decent man to spend our life with and have children.

Men are expecting too much if they expect to be trusted until they improve their record and their reputation.

If a man wants to be a nurse, let him find a job in a veterans hospital.

LOIS IN NEW YORK
DEAR ABBY: I know a lot of people who think the only reason a man wants to be a nurse is so he can be around more women in various stages of undress. I doubt it.

I have two good friends who are both lesbians. They have been in the nursing profession for over 20 years, and neither one of them has ever been accused of making a pass at a patient.

SUPERINTENDENT OF NURSING

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I want to start a family. Twelve years ago, when I was 17, I had an abortion in the early stages of pregnancy. There were no complications.

I do not want it on my medical record. My husband does not know about it, and if he were to find out, the consequences could be devastating.

Can my gynecologist tell if I've had an abortion?

NO NAME, PLEASE

DEAR NO NAME: No. If yours was a routine, complete abortion with no complications, there is no way a gynecologist can detect it.

Testing America

Urine tests for drugs on increase

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball employees facing random urine tests for drugs join other groups already subject to such tests, including some students, teachers, police officers, soldiers, people looking for jobs and people who want to keep their jobs.

Like drug use itself, drug testing is pervasive in our society.

Want to work for IBM? You must submit to a drug test first.

Acting strange in class? If you go to school in Arkadelphia, Ark., your principal may require you to take a urine test.

Coming to work with bloodshot eyes? The Boston Police Department is considering a plan to administer urine tests to red-eyed officers.

"It is estimated now that 25 percent of the Fortune 500 companies do at least pre-employment urinalysis, and that is estimated to rise 10 percent a year," said John Ellsworth, director of marketing for Diagnostic Dimensions, a New Jersey company that advises industries on how to conduct drug testing programs.

"It would be safe to say that probably in the vicinity of 30 million tests a year are performed," said Ellsworth, whose company is a subsidiary of Hoffmann-LaRoche, the makers of a popular laboratory drug test.

Companies and government agencies use drug tests for several reasons, including job performance, safety (people who operate dangerous equipment should not be using drugs) and security (people might be inclined to steal to support their drug habits).

Opponents have legal and scientific problems with routine drug testing. They say the results can be abused, there are privacy questions, and the tests have been known to falsely indicate drug use.

"In terms of fairness, it turns due process on its head," said Norma Rollins, acting director of the New York American Civil Liberties Union. "Everybody is considered guilty until they are proven innocent by this test."

Baseball Commissioner Peter Ueberroth announced earlier this month that everyone from staff secretaries to club owners would be subject to random urine tests for drugs. Minor league players will be tested, but the major league players union would not allow its members to submit to mandatory testing.

In general, unions oppose such testing, said Murray Seeger, a spokesman for the AFL-CIO, whose member unions represent 14.7 million workers.

"We have a general concern for the legal rights for anyone subjected to that kind of testing without cause," he said. "If it's done willy-nilly among employees, that's subject to negotiations with the union."

Drug tests are cropping up everywhere. Some examples:

—Half of 750 applicants at the Aluminum Company of America plant in Vancouver, Wash., failed drug tests in the first three months of last year. Most of those who failed had smoked marijuana.

—Railroad workers suspected of drug use can be required to submit to a urine test under regulations proposed by the Department of Transportation last year. The proposal is still pending.

—In the military, soldiers are subject to random drug tests, and some have successfully challenged their accuracy in court. The Army and Air Force recently notified thousands of former and active soldiers they had the right to challenge urine tests.

—In Arkadelphia, students who act strangely or smell of alcohol or marijuana may be required to submit to a urine test. Four of the nine students tested since 1982 were found to have smoked marijuana. The Arkansas ACLU has challenged the policy in court.

—In Boston, the police are considering plans to test the urine of officers who appear red-eyed or slightly disoriented. In Albany, Ga., several officers resigned last year rather than submit to drug tests imposed after the arrests of two officers and the suspension of a narcotics agent.

—IBM began screening job applicants for drugs last year because "we feel one of our paramount responsibilities is to provide a safe, healthy, productive working environment for our employees," said spokesman Tom Mattia.

Many companies and government agencies, particularly those involved in dangerous work, "cannot wait for accidents to happen before they begin testing. Lives are at stake," said Ellsworth of Diagnostic Dimensions.

But Margaret Brooks, director of the Legal Action Center in New York, said drug tests were used indiscriminately.

GOP set to blow down Texas House

AUSTIN (AP) — Winning control of the Texas House by 1990 is a goal that's within reach, and it would mean Republicans could play a big role in the next redistricting battle, the state GOP chairman says.

"I think we have an outstanding chance of getting at or near a majority in the House of Representatives in Texas in 1990, and once we do that and we get some control over redistricting, then this will be a Republican state in my opinion," Strake said.

His comments were aired Sunday on the public affairs television program "Capital Eye."

After each 10-year federal census, state legislatures draw new lines for the districts from which congressmen, state representatives and state senators are elected.

Strake said the Republican Party has been hurt in the past by overwhelming Democratic control in both houses of the Texas Legislature and therefore, the redistricting process. But after the big gains made in 1984, GOP lawmakers now make up more than one-third of the 150-member House, holding 52 seats. Continued success in local races could put the Republicans in the majority after the 1990 elections, he said.

"The area to watch is the House ... because that's our best chance to make significant gains in redistricting in 1990," Strake said.

"That's been the cork in the bottle as far as we're concerned. We have, I think, suffered under unfair redistricting."

Pointing to recent opinion polls showing that many Texans consider themselves conservatives, Strake repeated his contention that the Democratic Party no longer addresses conservative needs.

He said that is a big reason numerous public officials — including former Democratic congressman Kent Hance — have switched parties since the 1984 elections. Because of the switches and philosophical leanings of many Texans, Strake said the 1986 elections pose a chance for additional Republican gains.

"We have the donkey on the run right now," Strake said. "I think we have an excellent chance of taking the governor's chair, perhaps the attorney general's chair and the ag commissioner's chair in the elections of 1986."

Gov. Mark White, Attorney General Jim Mattox and Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower, all Democrats, will be up for reelection next year.

Strake denied that any financial offers have been made to lure Democratic politicians to the Republican Party. He also said party switchers get no promises that they won't face opposition in the Republican primary, either.

"No financial help is involved whatsoever," Strake said.

Annie-Laurie "Ala" Kneissel, center, and her brother Alexander von Auersperg, at right, issued a plea Sunday in New York to Alexandra Isles, former, mistress of their stepfather Claus von Bulow, to come forward and testify at his retrial for the attempted murder of their mother.

Children ask socialite's mistress to testify in retrial

NEW YORK (AP) — Claus von Bulow says that his stepchildren had no right to speak on behalf of their comatose mother when they asked the socialite's former mistress to return to the United States and testify at his trial on charges that he tried to kill his wife.

Princess Annie-Laurie "Ala" Kneissl and Prince Alexander von Auersperg issued a plea Sunday to former soap opera actress Alexandra Isles, 39, who is believed to be staying in Europe to avoid testifying at von Bulow's retrial in Providence, R.I.

"They are taking on a right to speak on behalf of their mother on their own," said von Bulow, 58, in a telephone interview from his New York apartment.

"They have the right to speak on behalf of their mother no more than do I or Cosima," he added, referring to his daughter by Martha "Sunny" von Bulow.

Mrs. Isles testified at von Bulow's 1982 trial that she set a deadline for him to leave Mrs. von Bulow and marry her. Prosecutors say that deadline expired shortly before Mrs. von Bulow's first coma in 1979.

Jurors in von Bulow's first trial said testimony by Mrs. Isles was influential in arriving at a guilty verdict that was overturned by an appeals court.

Mrs. von Bulow, 53, remains in a second coma she lapsed into in December 1980. Prosecutors say von Bulow injected his wife with insulin, bringing on the comas.

Judge Corinne P. Grande, who ruled that the state could not use Mrs. Isles' testimony from the first trial because prosecutors did not make enough of an effort to find her, last week gave prosecutors until Tuesday to produce Mrs. Isles.

A warrant for Mrs. Isles was issued on a charge of fleeing to avoid giving testimony.

Mom ready to name 5 surviving septuplets

ORANGE, Calif. (AP) — Patti Frustaci, who for the first time visited and touched her five surviving septuplets, has chosen names for the tiny infants known so far only by letters and nicknames, her doctor said.

"It's my understanding that she has names picked out, but she hasn't announced them yet," Dr. Martin Feldman said after Sunday's visit.

The surviving infants, three boys and two girls, remained in critical condition Sunday with a lung disease common in premature babies, but phototherapy treatments have nearly wiped out the skin-yellowing jaundice in two of them, said Dr. David Hicks, a neonatologist at Childrens Hospital of Orange County. The jaundice is caused by premature livers failing to process old red blood cells.

Mrs. Frustaci, with intravenous tubes dangling from her arms, spent an hour with her babies, touching them and talking to them, said Feldman, who was not there for the visit.

"She said a couple of them opened their eyes and seemed to respond to her touch," Feldman said.

Mrs. Frustaci was taken by wheelchair from the intensive care unit of St. Joseph Hospital to the neonatal intensive care unit at the adjacent childrens' hospital late Saturday, Feldman said.

She had been too ill previously to make the trip, he said.

Intravenous tubes provided nourishment for Mrs. Frustaci, who suffers intestinal problems from her Caesarean section delivery of six live babies and a stillborn girl last Tuesday.

Before Sunday's visit, Mrs. Frustaci's only glimpses of the surviving children were from photographs and news tapes. She had only touched a stillborn girl and a boy nicknamed Peanut who died Friday.

Feldman has said Mrs. Frustaci suffered an emotional setback after the death of Peanut, who at 1 pound was her smallest living baby.

"The reason that we decided she should go over is because she needs to see the babies," Feldman said. "It would be a catastrophe if anything happened to any of these children and she did not have the opportunity to see any of them."

DANNY SULLIVAN smiles in victory lane Sunday at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway after winning the 500 mile race. The Louisville, Ky., native was driving his third race at Indianapolis.

Sullivan spins and wins Indy

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Danny Sullivan, a master of life in the fast lane, now is master of the Indianapolis 500, the fastest lane of all.

Sullivan, a jet-set playboy from Louisville, Ky., who earned his racing stripes on the European road courses of Formula One, drove into and out of trouble twice Sunday and sped away from the fastest qualifying field ever to win his first victory in the world's richest auto race.

Most importantly, he mastered "The Spin," the newest route to success at Indy. Last year, Roberto Guerrero spun all the way around and went on to finish second. This year, Sullivan spun all the way around and went on to win, adding yet another frustration to Mario Andretti's 16-year quest for a second 500 crown.

And just four laps after he attacked "The Spin," he mastered his own aggressiveness, wisely hitting the brakes when another potential disaster loomed in front of him.

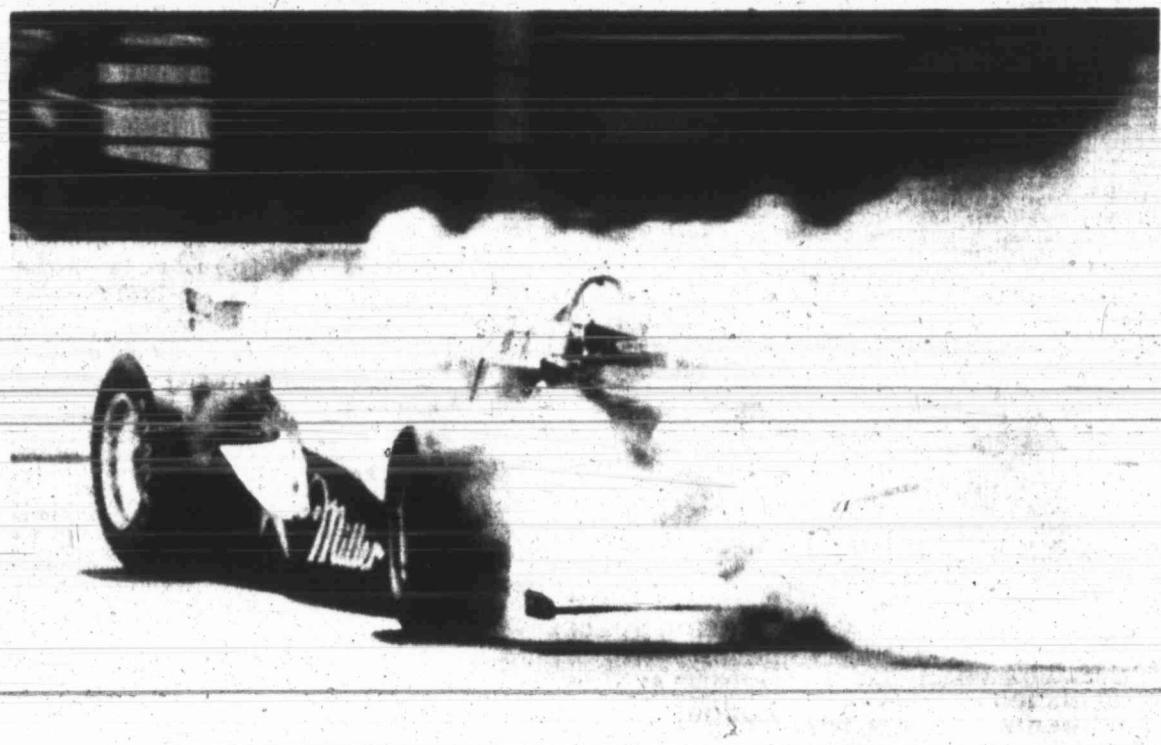

From there, it was just holding on, hitting 205 mph on the next-to-last lap to diffuse Andretti's final challenge and coasting into Victory Lane, finishing 2.4 seconds ahead with an average speed of 152.982 mph. The race record of 163.612 mph, set last year by Sullivan teammate Rick Mears, was saved by nine caution periods.

Eighty-one laps from the end, Sullivan didn't think he would make it.

"We were racing pretty good. I needed to get in front of Mario because the (air) turbulence was pretty bad," Sullivan said. "I went down onto the apron of the track."

He added rather sheepishly that thought there were 12 laps left, and "I thought I had to get ahead of Mario quick."

He passed Andretti, a daring move. But it backfired. The rear-end of his car fishtailed and suddenly he was careening up the track.

DANNY SULLIVAN slides along the track sideways at the Indianapolis 500 Sunday as he spun out narrowly missing MARIO ANDRETTI's car and the wall. SULLIVAN recovered from the 360 degree spin to go on to win the race 21 laps later with an average speed of 152.982 mph.

He missed the wall but spun right in front of Andretti, who had been eliminated by crashes in each of the three previous years. The 1969 winner, who had led most of the first half of the race, barely avoided the spinning Sullivan and regained the advantage temporarily.

"That was horrifying. I thought it was rather weird that he tried to do it (pass)," Andretti said. "I kind of sucked him in and he took the bait. It was shades of two years ago, when (Johnny) Parsons spun in front of me and took me out."

"In my opinion, there's no way you can pass in that situation, and he did it anyway. He got a little experience off that. I stayed off the brakes so I wouldn't spin. I kept my car as straight as possible. I hoped inertia would keep him out of the way, and it did. It was all smoke, and I was momentarily blinded by it."

"Let me tell you, I was just holding on," Sullivan said. "I thought that was everything."

More, though, was to come. On lap 124, rookie Rich Vogler spun in almost the same spot, slamming off the wall and spewing debris over the track. Former winner Tom Sneva spun behind him and met the wall, too. This time, Sullivan opted for caution. "When those two guys got hooked up, I just backed out of it," Sullivan said. "It's the hardest question. Do you stay on the gas and hope you miss it or do you brake and try to get around it? Luckily, I was already in the process of slowing down."

After that, Sullivan stayed close and twice tried to pass Andretti along the main straightaway before taking the lead for good with 60 laps to go.

When the green flag was waved with three laps to go, Sullivan's lead was less than three seconds, but Andretti could come no closer.

Winner stayed cool

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Danny Sullivan might best remember his victory in the Indy 500 with a handy little rhyme: First you spin, then you win.

This race, punctuated so often in the past by frightening accidents, was marked Sunday not by the crashes which occurred, but by the one that did not.

And because it didn't, Sullivan was around at the end, in position to claim the checkered flag. This was no small accomplishment considering the adventure he went through on the 120th lap of this marathon test of men and machines.

Sullivan and Mario Andretti were drag racing, staging one of those car-to-car duels that so often punctuate this pulsating event.

They came thundering down the front side of the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, two cars alone, isolated on the track, their engines roaring in a dangerous Indy version of one-on-one.

Together, they zoomed into the treacherous first turn, a spot that has swallowed its share of drivers in 68 previous races.

It was then that Sullivan, buffeted violently by the dirty air Andretti's car was leaving in its wake, courted tragedy.

Perhaps confused by the numbing noise that is a routine part of this race, perhaps unable to clearly hear his pit crew over the symphony of sound, he misread a vital radio message.

"I thought there were 12 laps left," Sullivan said, somewhat sheepishly. "I thought I had to get ahead of Mario quick."

There were, instead, 81 long laps left in this race — all manner of time. There was no urgency, no need for him to force the issue at that point. But Sullivan bore down on Andretti, making his move then and there.

As he edged in front ever so slightly on the turn and headed into the short chute that rockets the racers toward Turn 2, Sullivan's car suddenly began an unplanned trip.

It shuddered and fishtailed violently to the left, before suddenly reversing direction, spinning madly out of control. It whirled a full 360 degrees and shrouded the two cars with a blinding blanket of smoke.

It was an invitation to disaster. "We'd been running pretty good," Sullivan said. "The car was working, but I needed to get in front of the turbulence."

"We were side by side and then I went down on the apron with all four wheels. I just looped. I thought, 'That's all she wrote.' I was just holding on."

Andretti was flabbergasted by what was happening right there in front of him. "I prayed," he said, "in the millisecond I had."

Sullivan must have been praying, too, because by some miracle, his car came out of the spin pointed in the right direction. It could not have been programmed better. He never hesitated, simply stepping on the accelerator and charging back in the chase.

"We were turned around facing Turn 2, and I just took off," he said. "Cancel the tow trucks and rescue crews. The reports of Sullivan's demise were greatly exaggerated."

The passing move and the unbelievable recovery tested all of Andretti driving skills to avoid disaster.

"I stayed off the brakes so I wouldn't spin," he said. "I kept my car as straight as possible. I hoped inertia would keep him out of the way and it did. It was all smoke and I was momentarily blinded by it."

The episode left Andretti in front — for a while. On the 140th lap, Sullivan made another run at him. This time, he had the lap count right.

"I knew I had a few more laps," he said. "I knew I could take him. It was just a matter of setting him up."

And there was one other important element to the second run.

"I didn't let him push me on the apron this time," he said.

Americans rally to claim World Team Cup

DUESSELDORF, West Germany (AP) — The United States, despite Ivan Lendl's win over John McEnroe, downed Czechoslovakia 2-1 Sunday to retain the Ambre Solaire World Team Tennis Cup.

Ivan Lendl defeated John McEnroe in the opening match of the $500,000 final, but Jimmy Connors fought back from 0-4 in the final set to keep the U.S. team's hopes alive.

Ken Flach and Robert Seguso clinched the cup by taking the doubles against Lendl and Tomas Smid 6-3, 7-6 (7-3), in a match that finished in fading light on the red clay courts of the Ruchus club.

Among those cheering on Flach and Seguso were both McEnroe and Connors.

Earlier, Lendl downed McEnroe

6-7 (4-7), 7-6 (8-6), 6-3.

Connors posted a stunning victory over Miloslav Mecir after losing eight straight games and going down 0-4 in the final set.

With Mecir suffering from a rarely seen case of nerves, Connors prevailed in two and a half hours, 6-3, 3-6, 7-5.

Connors, ranked third in the world, broke Mecir's serve three times in the opening set and despite dropping his own serve once, won the set 6-3.

Connors appeared to be cruising to an easy victory until the seventh game of the middle set.

The American then sent an easy volley with Mecir completely out of reach to drop his service and give Mecir a 4-3 lead.

Mecir, ranked 13th in the world, broke Connors again in the ninth game to take the set 6-3 and even the match at one set each.

He built a 4-0 lead in the decisive set, wearing Connors down with accurate cross-court shots.

The American appeared finished until he broke Mecir to love in the fifth game. Connors also won the next four points on his serve but Mecir held his serve to take what appeared to be a decisive 5-2 lead.

Connors held to come back to 3-5 and then Mecir crumbled.

Apparently overcome by a severe case of nerves, Mecir served two double faults. When his fifth serve also went long, he then served underarm, stunning the 7,000-member center-court crowd.

Connors volleyed the serve away for a winner to break Mecir and reduce the margin to 4-5.

Connors took the next game and a frustrated Mecir again served under-arm.

Connors went down 15-30 in the 12th game, but took the next three to clinch the set 7-5 and save the match for the Americans.

"He got tight, and the tighter he got the looser I got," Connors said later.

"But even when I was down 0-4 in the last set, I really felt I wasn't completely out of the match," he added.

But the American ace also praised the Czechoslovakian newcomer, saying he was very difficult to play against.

Mecir beat Connors in their only earlier encounter this year — at the U.S. Indoor Championships in Philadelphia in February.

Irwin collects Memorial golf victory

DUBLIN, Ohio (AP) — Playing difficult golf courses seems easy for Hale Irwin.

Irwin displayed another example of that ability Sunday, winning Jack Nicklaus' Memorial Tournament for the second time in three years.

The two-time U.S. Open champion solved gusty winds and Muirfield Village's swift, undulating greens for a par round of 72, a 7-under-par total of 281 and a one-shot margin over Lanny Wadkins.

Wadkins, the leader over Irwin by one going into the last round, slipped to 74 for a 282 total. Irwin collected $100,000 and Wadkins $60,000.

Irwin, 39, now has won 17 times in a PGA Tour career that began in 1968. And his victories have also come on such stretches as Winged Foot, Riviera, Inverness, Butler National and Harbour Town.

Irwin revealed his formula for beating the tough courses, saying: "You have to have shot-making abilities — to curve the ball left or right depending on the conditions. You can't have pure length or be a one-shot player."

"You have to use common sense. You have to know where the mounds are to get the ball to the pin. If you get carried away with birdies and bogeys, either way, you can't catch up. And you have to take an extra large tablespoon of patience each morning. I managed very well all week."

The formula for Irwin, 39, fifth on the Tour career money list with $2.7 million, has clicked over Muirfield Village's 7,106 yards near Columbus. He was beaten by Roger Maltbie in a 1976 playoff before his two Memorial triumphs.

Texas, Arkansas capture Regional titles; head for CWS

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The instant the University of Texas retired the final Lamar batter to nail down a berth in the College World Series, Texas pitcher Michael Poehl sprinted off the mound with his teammates in fast pursuit.

The junior righthander finally collapsed under a heap of ecstatic Longhorns after being gang-tackled in right field.

"I ran out of room. There's a wall out there," Poehl said Sunday afternoon after going the distance in Texas' 10-2 victory over Lamar for the NCAA Central Regional baseball championship.

In stopping Poehl, his teammates accomplished something the Lamar Cardinals were unable to do. Poehl scattered nine hits and struck out a career-high 13, including two in the ninth inning after UT head coach Cliff Gustafson made a surprise decision to start him.

Poehl improved his record to 7-1 as Texas, last year's runnerup in the CWS at Omaha, Neb., ran its record to 60-12. Lamar ended its season at 35-24.

His teammates collected 15 hits, including four from Rusty Richards and three each from Dodd Johnson and Dennis Cook, as Texas swept through the regional without a defeat to return to the College World Series for the fifth year in a row and an NCAA record-extending 24th time.

"I can't believe it, but this feels just as sweet as the first time we went to Omaha. I think we are playing our best baseball at the best time," Gustafson said.

"We did something I never thought was possible. We won a six-team tournament with only three pitchers," Gustafson added.

Poehl's was the third complete game of the regional for the Longhorns.

Gustafson had announced on Saturday, after Texas beat Oklahoma to assure itself a spot in the regional finals, that Cook would be the starting pitcher against Lamar. But on Sunday, Gustafson gave the ball instead to Poehl, who had been forced to leave a game earlier in the tournament with a blister on the middle finger of his throwing hand.

"I came in the locker room today and coach said, 'You're going to throw today. The skin on my hand was pretty hard again, but I was still surprised,'" Poehl said.

UT catcher Robbie Byers said Poehl was effective because "he got his slider over."

Lamar took an early 1-0 lead on John DiPillo's first-inning RBI single. But Texas tied the score in the third after Bill Bates stole second and third and scored on Cook's single.

Poehl surrendered one more run in the fourth, then shut down Lamar while his teammates took care of the offense.

The Longhorns tore into Cardinal starter Dirk Tidwell for five runs on five hits in the fourth inning for a lead they never relinquished.

Bates had the big blow with a two-run triple off the centerfield wall, and Cook, Richards and Coby Kerlin knocked in a run apiece.

Richards drove in a run in the fifth inning and again in the ninth, giving him three RBIs in a 4-for-5 game that vindicated Gustafson's insertion of him in the lineup. The Houston sophomore was benched for the Southwest Conference tournament, in which Texas finished second to Arkansas.

"I shortened my stroke a little bit," said Richards, who was 6-for-14 in the regional. "I lowered my hands and tried to hit line drives. But it was more mental than anything."

David Denny hit a solo homer for the Longhorns, extending to 93 his school-record RBI total for the season.

Texas will begin CWS play with a 7-10 game Saturday night against Arizona (47-20).

Ark. 7, Ga. Tech 5

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Arkansas Coach Norm DeBrynn says his baseball team won't be affected by the post-tournament doldrums going into this week's College World Series as they were after winning the Southwest Conference tournament.

"Our ball club has got confidence and a good approach to the game," DeBrynn said. "These are the kinds of kids who win championships."

The Razorbacks knocked off scrappy Georgia Tech 7-5 Sunday in the final of the NCAA South-II regional to advance to the first round of the College World Series in Omaha, Neb., where they will face South Carolina.

Arkansas had an emotional victory over defending national champion Texas in the finals of the Southwest Conference tournament in Fayetteville, Ark., to win the berth in the regional. Texas, which hosted the NCAA Central regional at Austin, won that tournament Monday with a 10-2 victory over Lamar, and will also be at Omaha.

"We came in after we had just won three straight in the tournament and we didn't look very sharp in our first two games here," said Arkansas pitcher Ken Deitz, who came on in relief in the top of the ninth inning in Sunday's game, with two out and two on and the potential Georgia Tech winning run at the plate. "We didn't play our best in this tournament, but we played good enough to win."

"They were both big tournaments to win," Arkansas second baseman Keith Kerns said. "I don't think that it has sunk into the team that we are going to Omaha."

Jeff King lifted a fourth-inning home run to begin an Arkansas rally which carried the Razorbacks past Georgia Tech. The comeback was typical of the Razorbacks' play in the tournament, play that drew praise from Georgia Tech Coach Jim Morris. "I think they have some real good athletes and think they are well coached," Morris said. "I think they will do quite well in the series."

Arkansas didn't lose a game in the regional, although they trailed in almost every contest. The victory over Georgia Tech was Arkansas' 16th in a row, including regional tournament victories over Eastern Kentucky, Florida State and George Mason.

The loss ended Georgia Tech's world series hopes after they had fought back to get into the finals. The Jackets had come from behind with two outs in the ninth to beat Eastern Kentucky Saturday, then knocked off No. 2-seeded Florida State on the Seminoles' home field.

Georgia Tech took a 3-0 lead against Arkansas, partly behind a two-run home run by Jeff Distasio in the third, his fourth of the tournament. King led off the fourth inning with his home run and Norm Roberts slashed a run-scoring triple.

Arkansas took the lead in the fifth with a three-run home run by Steve Clements, and added two more in the eighth.

Georgia Tech had the tying runs on second and third with two outs in the ninth when Deitz got Georgia Tech hitter Pete Geist to ground out to third to end the game.

The victory raised the Razorbacks' record to 49-13, while Georgia Tech finished the season at 42-19-1. Fred Farwell rose to 10-1 with the victory, while loser Kevin Brown dropped to 10-6 for the season.

Six Arkansas players were named to the All-Region team and first baseman Dave Patterson, who had two home runs in the tournament opener against Eastern Kentucky, was chosen outstanding player of the tournament.
