Crews clean chemical spill

RR car leaks hydrochloric acid

By KEELY COGHLAN
Staff Writer

Officials this morning continued their efforts to decontaminate the site of a chemical spill at the railroad near Runnels and First.

City firemen, policemen, street crews, Cosden Oil & Chemical Co. safety crews and Union Pacific Railroad personnel joined forces early today to contain the hydrochloric acid spurting from a stationary railroad tank car.

"There's no danger right now. Possibly the patch may not hold, but right now we don't anticipate that," Edwards said.

By 8:45 a.m. today, officials declared that immediate danger from the hydrochloric acid spill was over and removed the barricades blocking a small portion of the downtown business district.

During the emergency cleanup, police had shut off an area bounded by Main and Johnson streets and by Second Street north to the railroad tracks. Businesses near the barrier were advised that they would be evacuated if the wind shifted, Edwards said.

Two or three Northside residents, who lived across the tracks from the spill, also were allowed to return home, according to Police Lt. Jerry Edwards. They had been evacuated because the wind had carried the chemical's odor — a sharp, unpleasant smell — to their homes, Edwards said.

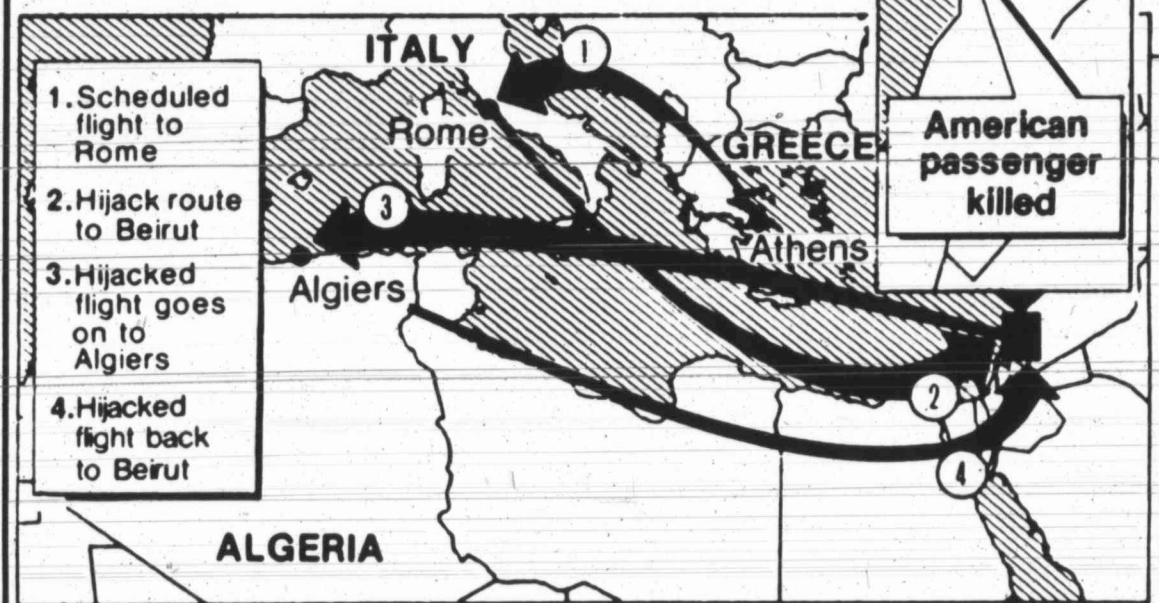

No one was injured in the incident, Edwards said. A railroad official said he could not comment on the incident, citing company policy. Officials in the public relations and customer service divisions of the railroad's offices in Dallas and Houston had no information on the incident, and referred questions to another department.

According to Arson Investigator Burr Lea Settles, the acid poses a danger when its fumes are inhaled or the acid touches a person's skin.

A railroad employee early today found the acid leaking from a stationary tank car, which had been switched onto a side track. Ed-

Hijacked: Day 4

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Shiite militia leader Nabih Berri announced today that all hostages have been removed from a hijacked TWA jet and taken to an undisclosed location in Beirut. But airport and militia officials insisted the more than 30 Americans were still held captive on the airliner for a fourth day.

Berri said they were taken from the aircraft during the night for security reasons because of what he called a "possible Israeli landing" at Beirut airport.

But one airport official, a member of Berri's Amal militia, said he personally served lunch to hostages aboard the plane early this afternoon.

White signs mandatory seat belt bill

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White has completed his survey of the 1985 Legislature's work, signing into law a new-tax $37.2 billion state budget, a mandatory seat belt law, and higher tuition for state colleges.

"By living within our means and addressing our most critical human needs in this budget, we have placed ourselves in an enviable position for the future," White said Sunday.

After reviewing more than 1,000 bills passed by the 140-day regular legislative session, White vetoed approximately 50 bills and let about 100 bills become law without his signature. The vetoes included $9.8 million in the general appropriations bill because he said the items did not represent "good public spending policy."

He said he signed the seat belt law "reluctantly" after considering whether it would infringe on individual freedoms.

White said in his approval of the budget that "we have laid paths toward the more diverse and dynamic economy which we will need as we work to become less reliant on the oil and gas industry as the central element of our economy."

The 1986-87 budget includes $26.3 billion from general revenue, a 12.5 percent increase over the current general revenue appropriation.

Public school and highway financing increased as decreed by the 1984 special session.

The state prison system and mental health and mental retardation institutions also got extra money to comply with federal court orders. Needy children on welfare got a $4 a month raise and state employees were given a 3 percent a year pay hike, but lost two state holidays.

The appropriations bill leaves about $70 million to begin funding a package of indent health care bills. Sunday midnight was the deadline for White to act on bills and resolutions, or they would go into effect without his signature.

The governor's vetoes on specific items of the appropriations bill included grants from the Criminal Justice Division to the Department of Public Safety, Commission on Jail Standards, Department of Corrections, Prosecutors Council and Supreme Court.

The governor's office said Sunday that in the past the Criminal Justice Division, which is part of the governor's office, has received a lump sum to dispense to law enforcement and allied agencies.

Crude outlook

Projected prices show a decline

HOUSTON (AP) — The most recent survey by the Society of Petroleum Evaluation Engineers reflects a much more bearish mood in the oil and gas industry.

The projected price of oil in the next decade has dropped by 35 percent while natural gas is expected to be 53 percent less costly than predicted only three years ago.

Current expectations are that 10 years from now a barrel of oil will cost $38.56 and natural gas will be priced at $4.26 per thousand cubic feet.

The society's 1982 survey showed that the petroleum industry anticipated that by 1992 oil would be $58.87 a barrel and natural gas would cost $8.98 per thousand cubic feet.

This year the group surveyed 126 oil and gas producers, bankers, financial advisers and consulting engineers.

OPEC oil prices may drop below $20 a barrel of other OPEC countries continuing cheating on prices and quotas, said the Saudi Arabian minister today.

Oil pump plunge

Saudi Arabian minister says prices may dip below $20 for OPEC barrel

NEW YORK (AP) — Saudi Arabia's oil minister was quoted today as saying oil prices could plunge below $20 a barrel, a drop of nearly 30 percent from current official levels and the lowest level since 1979, if other OPEC members continue to cheat on oil price and production limits.

The minister, Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani, said production by Saudi Arabia had fallen so far below its own quota that the oil-rich kingdom no longer would serve as OPEC's "swing producer," adjusting its output to compensate for overproduction by other members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

"And if we increase production, then prices will start dropping, if the other countries in OPEC (and those who are not members) maintain their level of production. We do not think that prices will come down to $26 or $25; prices will drop sharply to something below $20."

Yamani was quoted as saying by Petroleum Intelligence Weekly, a newsletter that covers the international oil industry.

Meanwhile, another oil industry newsletter, the Middle East Economic Survey, said OPEC production averaged 14.5 million barrels a day in May, the lowest level in 20 years, but that seven of OPEC's members were exceeding production quotas.

That report said OPEC's main problem was erratic marketing practices, estimating that at least 70 percent of OPEC oil exports were being sold at market-related prices, rather than official prices.

The current average OPEC price of crude oil is $28.09 a barrel, down from a peak of $34.50 in 1981. In the open market, oil prices are lower.

Yamani said, however, that he was not calling for cuts in the official price of OPEC oil.

Liquor petition drive nets 2,700 signatures

By SCOTT FITZGERALD
Staff Writer

A last flurry of signatures may have pushed the stone over the cliff.

From Friday through Sunday, over 1,000 persons signed liquor-by-the-drink petitions that urge a change in Precinct One's mixed drink law.

"People probably saw that this was the last weekend they could sign, so we had a good turnout," said Micheal Russell of Citizens for a Choice.

According to Precinct One's mixed drink law, persons who wish to be served mixed alcoholic beverages must be members of an establishment that serves mixed drinks. Persons who wish to join clubs that serve mixed drinks must pay club fees and be accepted for membership.

"We have over 2,700 names and of these, 2,600 will be good," said Russell.

Russell said that 10 to 15 petitions were still being circulated throughout the precinct this morning. Precinct One encompasses Big Spring, Silver Heels and the Tubbs Addition.

The names will be turned into the county tax assessor's office this evening at 5 p.m., Russell said.

"We're over the limit, and what we're counting are the signatures that have full names and proper addresses," Russell said.

The group had to collect a minimal 2,421 signatures to call for an election. Those who signed the petition had to have their names and addresses match their voter identification certificates. Signees also had to list their voter identification certificate number.

Part of the "good turnout" that Russell spoke about, included a petition signing party at Classic Auto Sales on F.M. 700.

Russell said about 50 persons signed the petition last night at the car dealership.

"We had a local band that adopted a name of 'Spring City.' It lasted from 6 p.m. to about 9:30 p.m. People sat around and listened to the music and that's what we wanted them to do," Russell said.

Citizens for Choice have been collecting signatures since a mixed drink petition was filed in the Howard County clerk's office on May 17.

Netters live and breathe sports at Newk's academy

NEW BRAUNFELS (AP) — Twenty-four tanned teen-agers scattered to folding chairs and the polished tile floor. A coach in a rumpled cap took his place behind a steel lectern, and his was the only voice heard in the room.

He began to talk about the day's workout, about specific skills to be drilled. He waved a pencil in his left hand as he spoke quickly, made his points and sent the group on its way.

From first impressions, the two dozen could have been members of a high school baseball squad, or a basketball team.

But when they took up their rackets and started to walk by Sally Schwartz, it became apparent that this was no average high school group.

"This is Mario, and he's from Indonesia," she said, introducing a broad-shouldered, tanned Asian.

"This is Don from Germany, and Luis from Mexico," she continued, nodding to a blond, blue-eyed, ruddy-faced teen-ager in a light tennis shirt and blue shorts, then a quiet dark-haired athlete.

"And this is Meek, from India," Schwartz added as a wiry 16-year-old joined the group.

Meek, whose real name is S. Meenafshisudaram, smiled. With a baseball cap substituted for his headband, he could have passed for a second baseman.

But baseball is a strange game with hard horsehide balls and aluminum clubs to most of the members of Newk's Competitive Edge Tennis Academy. Their game is tennis, six or seven days a week, nine months at a time.

"We're not the business of turning out 14-year-old John McEnroes here," said Schwartz, whose title is educational and administrative supervisor. "We want these kids to work hard here in high school, earn a scholarship, go to college and get a good education."

Jose Campos of Spain prepares to return the ball during a workout at the Newk's Competitive Edge Tennis Academy at New Braunfels. Students at the academy take five classes at New Braunfels High School then work out daily on the tennis court.

"With this training and four good years of training in college, they can then decide if they want to become professionals."

The four-year-old program already has a top-flight record of placing players in colleges. Every player who has graduated has earned at least a partial tennis scholarship, and some reached even higher.

One graduate, Beverly Bowes, is the No. 1-ranked women's player in the NCAA — as a freshman at the University of Texas. Gretchen Rush is the No. 1 player on a powerful Trinity University team. Dick Stockton plays on the men's professional circuit.

The academy's results, as the commercial goes, come the old-fashioned way — with work.

After taking five classes at New Braunfels High School, the athletes — ranging from two dozen to as many 40, depending on the time of year — return to the academy and meet with tennis director Roger Tyzzler, the man in the rumpled cap.

He briefs them on the day's practice, makes a few announcements (Wednesday was going to be haircut day) and sends them out to eight of the camp's omnipresent tennis courts.

For the first two hours, Tyzzler and his four assistants conduct drills on specific skills. For another hour, specific point situations are covered. After the one-on-one and two-on-one competition puts the skills to use.

And after all that, 40 minutes of conditioning work. Running, weights, Jazzercise, swimming. Rubber-legged stuff.

Dinner and the accompanying sparks from flying flatware follows, then study hall.

"They don't have the kind of freedom of regular tenn-agers," said Tyzzler. "They're here because they're striving for something."

"Sometimes you get homesick," Meek, the Indian, was saying.

"What do you do?" he asked rhetorically. "You cry over it," he answered himself, with a laugh.

"After some time you get used to it."

When you're more than 8,000 miles from home, you can be philosophical like that.

The academy's world-wide reputation has drawn the best junior players from all over the world, including the wiry Indian, who spent last summer touring the European junior circuit by himself.

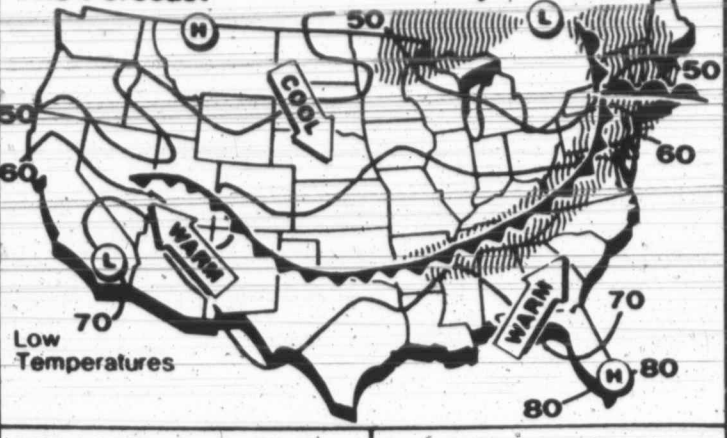

In the last four years, teen-agers from Australia to Spain to Thailand have come to the cedar-lined hills to grind their skills to the finest edge, to become the best they can be during the sopping-sweaty days of the Central Texas springs and falls and the chilly days of winter.

At the same time, Tyzzler said the academy staff tries to give the group a family atmosphere and at least a taste of normal teen-age life.

"Some of these kids, we'll have here from age 15 to 18," he said.

Sex scandal stuns community

RYE, Texas (AP) — Allegations that men here gave four young girls presents in exchange for sexual favors confirmed the worst fears of some residents of the normally tranquil community of Hoop n' Holler.

"Something ought to have been done about it a long time ago," said Virginia Fischer, who runs the community dance hall, pool room and game arcade. "I seen the girls going down in the woods with the men."

At least one of the eight men charged with sexual abuse had been investigated before by Steve Andrews, a Houston police vice officer. Authorities said at least two of them have previous sex-related convictions.

"There wasn't much that wasn't going on," Andrews said of the situation in Hoop n' Holler, which sits just outside Rye on Texas Highway 146, about 60 miles northeast of Houston.

Andrews said one of the men "would ask the parents if the girls could come spend the weekend with him. They'd go to Astroworld or shopping, and he'd sexually abuse them."

Liberty County constable Paul Lognon told the Dallas Morning News that conversations with several residents led him to suspect that something "wasn't normal."

But the constable said he was shocked by what he learned on the night of May 7, after a 13-year-old girl telephoned to tell him that some of her girlfriends had some trouble they needed to talk about.

"You didn't hear about this 10 years ago, but there's a market for little girls," he said.

wards said. The fire department was notified of the spill at 6:40 a.m., and the police department was asked to set up barricades at 7:15 a.m., Edwards said.

"There was a hole punched in the side. The acid sprayed out ... and turned to vapor," Settles said, describing the leak.

"The tanks have heavy duty rubber on the inside. There was probably a weak spot on the rubber, and it (the acid) eventually ate its way through," Edwards said.

The chemical was being shipped to Reagent Chemical Co. of Midland, Boyd said.

No leaks were found in three other hydrochloric acid-filled tank cars sitting on the tracks near the leaking car, according to Hal Boyd, who serves as the city's emergency management director.

Settles said the other chemical tanks did not pose an immediate hazard during cleanup efforts. "There was no danger to the other tanks as long as they weren't leaking and it was not on fire," he said.

whatever, and discounts would be given from that level. We would have to reduce the price again and again," he was quoted as saying.

In May, Saudi Arabia's production dropped to under 2.5 million barrels a day, Yamani said, the lowest level since 1965 and well below Saudi Arabia's quota of 4.35 million.

Not only did that reduced production lower Saudi Arabia's revenue, but it forced it to dip into its natural gas reserves, Yamani was quoted as saying.

"That is very serious. We should not touch that," Yamani said of the gas reserves. "Therefore, if this country cannot continue doing that, the only alternative is to start increasing production."

Petroleum Intelligence Weekly said it interviewed Yamani on June 7 following a recent meeting of OPEC's executive committee in Taif, Saudi Arabia. At that meeting, Yamani reportedly delivered a message to colleagues from King Fahd, saying the kingdom no longer would tolerate persistent flouting of OPEC price and production limits.

OPEC is expected to focus on compliance with quotas at its regular meeting, which is scheduled for July 5 in Vienna.

"We did not threaten anybody. We just made it clear that this situation cannot continue," Yamani was quoted as saying by Petroleum Intelligence Weekly.

"I think the urgent problem is discipline, how to stop members producing above their quotas and how to stop discounting," he said. "These are the urgent issues we face right now. Once we achieve that, the market will react anyway. And we will see what we need to do after that."

Coke is it, or is it?

Just how well is the new Coke selling, anyway? Pretty well, industry watchers say, despite vocal and well-publicized complaints from consumers who are fiercely loyal to the old cola. But sales are being spurred by curiosity, heavy promotions and price discounting and just how successful the change in formula truly is won't be known until all the hoopla dies down in several months, Coca-Cola Co. and the analysts say. "The next three or four months certainly will be a heavy trial period. It will be a while before sales stabilize and we will be able to have definitive information on sales. We do expect to widen our share," Ron Coleman, a spokesman at Coca-Cola's headquarters in Atlanta, said Thursday.

Russian poets and jazz

NEW YORK — Russian poets Yevgeny Yevtushenko and Andrei Voznesensky appeared together at Carnegie Hall for the first time outside the Soviet Union as the Paul Winter Consort improvised as they read. During intermission of the show Sunday, Yevtushenko pleaded for closer understanding through art between Americans and Russians. "We try to show how art could be an international rainbow," he said. "With this collaboration, we would like to show how a representation of our cultures, musicians or poets, could keep contact over the heads of professional politicians." Yevtushenko was invited to participate in World Environment Day here on June 5 by the United Nations Environment Program.

One dies in fiery crash

WEST HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. — A man trapped in a burning car after a collision with a bus was pulled to safety by passers-by, but his wife died in the wreckage, officials said. Police spokesman Officer Paul Kunz said 21 of the 43 passengers on the bus, as well as the driver, were treated for minor injuries after the accident Sunday. Kunz said Arthur Koczyski, 64, Queens was driving with his wife, Margarethe, 57, when he made a turn and was hit by the Metropolitan Suburban Transportation Authority bus. The car spun around, hit a utility pole, and caught fire, Kunz said, but Koczyski was rescued by bystanders. Koczyski was treated for cuts and bruises. No charges were filed in the accident, Kunz said.

Burroughs nixes merger

DETROIT — Burroughs Corp. has terminated merger talks with New York-based Sperry Corp. after the two computer makers failed to agree on combining their technology and marketing, Burroughs said today. A new computer company formed by the merger would have ranked second behind industry leader International Business Machines Corp. Negotiations between the two companies continued through the weekend.

Hijacked: Day 4

Hostages moved out of plane into Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Shiite militia leader Nabih Berri announced today that all hostages aboard a hijacked TWA jet have been removed from the plane and taken to an undisclosed location in Beirut. There were believed to be about 30 Americans still held hostage in their fourth day of captivity. Berri said the action was taken for security reasons because of what he called a "possible Israeli landing" at Beirut airport. There was no independent confirmation the passengers had been taken off the plane, but Berri has been involved in the negotiations for their release and his Shiite Amal militia is the strongest armed force at Beirut airport. In Washington, a State Department official said the United States has "no reason to doubt" Berri's statement. The hostages were those remaining from the 145 passengers and eight crewmembers, mostly Americans, aboard the TWA flight 847 that was hijacked by Arabs Friday morning en route from Athens to Rome. The hijackers' main demand to release the hostages was that Israel free more than 700 Shiite Moslem prisoners it holds. Berri, who is also justice minister in the government, announced the hostage transfer at a Beirut news conference at his sandbagged house in mostly Moslem west Beirut. He spoke in both English and Arabic and would not disclose the secret hideout of the hostages except to indicate it was in west Beirut. "I have personally ordered their evacuation ... because we were afraid of an operation or a battle in which all of them would have been killed," the Shiite leader said. The evacuation was carried out after midnight when there were fears of a possible rescue operation by foreign troops, he said. Berri's Amal militiamen had cleared newsmen and photographers from the airport and switched off the lights, plunging the area into darkness. He said Amal guards were still protecting the hostages "somewhere in Beirut." When asked if the hostages were all together, Berri replied, "I think so." President Reagan's national security adviser, Robert C. McFarlane, spoke with Berri by telephone today, according to sources close to Berri. The sources, who asked for anonymity, said McFarlane urged redoubled efforts to secure the safe release of the hostages. Reagan administration policy has been not to negotiate with terrorists. "We do not give in to demands. We do not encourage other nations to do this," White House spokesman Larry Speakes said Sunday. Bassam Tleiss, a representative of Berri's militia, said there were 32 passengers and three crew members on the plane. He denied the State Department's claim that six to 10 American passengers were removed from the plane during an earlier stop at Beirut, saying, "This is a false report." The State Department had said it did not know the passengers' fate. The Boeing 727 has traveled about 8,500 miles since being hijacked Friday by gunmen who identified themselves as Shiite Moslems. In Jerusalem, an Israeli official said today the government will consider any U.S. request for the release of more than 700 Moslem prisoners but wants any such demand made public. He added that Israel "will not volunteer to release the prisoners" even though the government had planned to release the Shiite prisoners in the near future anyway. Berri placed his Amal militiamen at the airport on "maximum alert" before dawn, warning against a "possible Israeli attack" to free the hostages. Amal fighters fired parachute flares to light up the sky over the airport and fired hundreds of tracer bullets over the nearby Mediterranean Sea, where an Israeli gunboat had been cruising. Berri said he was continuing to negotiate through the Red Cross for release of the Lebanese Shiites being held by Israel.

Dollar rises; gold dives

LONDON — The dollar rose slightly in quiet trading on European markets today. Gold bullion prices eased. London dealers said the dollar had stabilized following sharp falls Friday sparked by an unfounded rumor that President Reagan had suffered a heart attack. All financial markets in West Germany and Hong Kong were closed for local holidays. The dollar was selling for 3.07 West German marks in London, up from Friday's close of 3.0615 marks.

Chile ends state of siege

SANTIAGO, Chile — The military government says it is lifting a seven-month-old state of siege because of a decrease in terrorist activities, but will maintain the less stringent restrictions of a state of emergency. In a 10-minute broadcast on national television Sunday night, Interior Minister Ricardo Garcia said that under the state of emergency, "... there will exist a very limited restriction on information, without suspensions or prior censorship." Garcia said restrictions on public gatherings will continue at the discretion of military chiefs "according to the situations of each region of the national territory." Press censorship would remain for "certain acts prohibited by the constitution or earlier laws," such as those involving "illegal" political activities or terrorism, he added.

Western alliance unity

FLORENCE, Italy — The chief U.S. negotiator at the Geneva arms talks with the Soviet Union says the United States will not pursue the Star Wars missile defense plan unless it strengthens the Western alliance. Max Kampelman, addressing a foreign affairs conference of European Christian Democrats, said Saturday: "We believe firmly in the strategic unity of the Western alliance. However it develops, SDI (President Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative plan) must be a factor which strengthens that unity. If it does not strengthen that unity, it will not be pursued." A text of Kampelman's remarks was made available to The Associated Press Sunday.

War for world supremacy

PEKING — China said today the United States has overtaken the Soviet Union in a battle for world supremacy, and claimed President Reagan's foreign policy is aimed at "vilifying the socialist system." A commentary in the official English-language weekly Peking Review also charged Reagan had taken unrelenting positions in dialogue with developing nations. The commentary was published one month before Chinese President Li Xiannian is scheduled to visit the United States. It contained shrill language not recently seen in Chinese commentaries on U.S. policy. "In economic and military affairs, the United States seems to eke out an edge over the Soviet Union in their rivalry for global supremacy," the commentary said.

Defense plan hits House floor with a bang

Lawmakers on the Hill battle over MX missiles, 'Star Wars', nerve gas

WASHINGTON (AP) — The fight over the Pentagon's budget moves to the House floor this week with major battles expected over nerve gas, the MX missile and President Reagan's "Star Wars" strategic defense plan. At the same time, House-Senate negotiators will be trying to work out an agreement to produce a compromise 1986 budget blueprint, although consensus could be several weeks away. The major floor action will be in the House, where legislators beginning Tuesday will vote on a number of key issues as part of the effort to come up with a bill authorizing Pentagon spending. The bill on the floor proposes to freeze spending at current levels of about $292 billion, some $10 billion less than the defense bill approved two weeks ago by the Senate. Whatever passes the Democratic-controlled House will have to be reconciled with the bill from the Republican-run Senate in a process similar to the effort to develop a budget package. President Reagan originally sought a 5.9 percent increase after inflation for defense spending, but he reluctantly has approved the Senate measure which limits Pentagon increases to next year's expected inflation rate. A major fight is expected over nerve gas, which the Reagan administration wants to produce after a 16-year U.S. moratorium. The Senate approved the proposal, but the House has turned it down for the past three years. Nerve gas proponents say the vote will be close this year. Another dispute centers around the MX. Reagan wanted 48 more of the weapons next year en route to a total deployment of 100 of the weapons, but the Senate cut that to 12 and limited the overall force to 50 of the 10-warhead missiles if they are deployed in vulnerable Minuteman missile silos. The House bill also proposes buying a dozen MXs in 1986, but would limit total deployment to 40, a cap supported by Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., the influential chairman of the Armed Services Committee. Controversy also surrounds Star Wars, known formally as the Strategic Defense Initiative.

Forensic experts examine remains, corpse from grave in Mengele case

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — Eleven forensic experts from America, West Germany and Israel today begin examining the skeleton and scraps of cloth exhumed from a grave to determine if the corpse was that of Nazi war criminal Josef Mengele. Dr. Wilmes Teixeira, a Brazilian forensic specialist, said "a very special appeal" for more medical data was made to the Simon Wiesenthal Center in Los Angeles on Sunday. He said "more precise information" was needed about Mengele's 1938 dental records and other documents to compare with material that the foreign specialists have. Mengele, the infamous "Angel of Death" accused of sadistic experiments on Nazi death camp inmates and of sending hundreds of thousands of Jews and other prisoners to their deaths at the Auschwitz concentration camp in Poland, fled to South America at the end of World War II. He is the "most wanted" killer of the Austria-based Simon Wiesenthal centers seeking out Nazi war criminals. Teixeira said the new tests were to determine the sex, height, age, race, blood type and physical abnormalities of the body unearthed June 6 from a cemetery in the town of Embu, 17 miles from Sao Paulo. Preliminary examinations by Brazilian specialists indicated the bones were those of a white male over 60 and 5-feet 8-inches tall. That would fit the description of Mengele, who would have been 68 on Feb. 7, 1979, when the body of a man who drowned while swimming at the Bertiofa beach resort was recovered.

New car market should stay free

Former presidential aide Michael Deaver isn't the only American tourist to discover the sizable benefits of buying a foreign car abroad. Even without diplomatic clout, you can save as much as 45 percent by shopping in Europe; buying an import in this country from a car broker, rather than an authorized dealer, will save you as much as 20 percent.

But if Sens. Daniel Inouye and Wendell Ford, sponsors of S 921, have their way, this "gray market" in foreign autos will be eliminated. Their measure, now on the Senate floor, would stop individuals and independent dealers from importing cars, leaving the field entirely to dealers licensed by the car manufacturers.

This piece of protectionist legislation is defended as a safety measure that will safeguard the public from allegedly dangerous gray-market imports. Yet there's no evidence that these cars are especially likely to cause accidents, and regulations already on the books assure that all imports meet American safety and pollution standards.

It's sensible to enforce those safety rules stringently, but banning gray-market imports isn't the way. A wiser course, proposed by the gray marketeers themselves, would be to impose a fee on those who buy foreign autos outside official channels, with the money used by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration to monitor compliance.

What's really behind S 921 is an effort to fatten up Mercedes, BMW and the other luxury foreign car manufacturers, which have kept prices artificially high on this side of the Atlantic — more than double what they are in Europe. That's why the gray market has boomed from 5,000 cars in 1982 to an estimated 60,000 this year. But there's no good reason to insulate foreign car dealers from the strains of competition. The gray market that they want to shut down is, after all, just another name for the free market.

Steve Chapman

Marshall Plan helped us, too

The 40th anniversary of the end of World War II has rekindled all sorts of controversies, from Bitburg to Yalta. But the Marshall Plan to rebuild the postwar economy of Western Europe has always been above reproach. Even today, it is revered as a model of successful foreign aid — as when the Kissinger commission on Central America offered economic aid proposals described as a combination of the Marshall Plan and the Alliance for Progress.

But a young scholar has made a persuasive case that the Marshall Plan's stature is founded mostly on mythology. The essay by Tyler Cowen, a graduate economics student at Harvard, appears in a Heritage Foundation volume edited by my columnist colleague, Doug Bandow. Cowen's examination of the program not only exposes the truth about the reconstruction of Europe but argues against repeating the exercise.

The analogies to Central America and other underdeveloped nations have always been dubious anyway. The Marshall Plan was meant to rebuild advanced industrial economies, not to create them where they had never existed. Europe also was blessed with the most important natural resource of all — an educated, able labor force. Physical capital, we have learned elsewhere, is no substitute for human capital.

The program, begun in 1948 at the urging of American Secretary of State George Marshall, sent more than $13 billion in aid to 16 different countries over four years. It was meant to provide food, raw materials and technical help to enable Europe to repair the damage done by World War II and to combat the threat of communism. By almost universal consensus, it was a great success.

But Cowen notes that its scope is much exaggerated: "At no time did Marshall Plan aid ever exceed five percent of the gross national product of the recipient nations." The countries which got the most help, like Greece and Austria, didn't begin to recover until the aid was nearing its end. Others, like France, Germany and Italy, were recovering even before the help arrived.

Those facts shouldn't be surprising. Economists like P.T. Bauer have amassed evidence that foreign aid is more likely to retard development than to speed it. The same was true in Europe. The Economic Cooperation Administration, which ran the program, used its power to press for state planning and large public sectors, both of which tend to stifle growth.

So what fueled Europe's recovery? West Germany's legendary economic miracle was brought about by a drastic currency reform that conquered inflation and by the removal of a variety of economic controls, particularly on prices. It was sustained, says Cowen, by "a combination of sound monetary policy, supply-side fiscal policy and a relatively free market."

Thanks to similar policies, Belgium avoided the economic problems that afflicted other nations. According to Cowen, it "recovered the fastest from the war and placed the greatest immediate reliance on capitalism." The two aren't coincidental.

Winston Churchill characterized the Marshall Plan as "the most unselfish act in all of history." But it wasn't designed solely out of altruism. American managers and workers were well cared for. American merchant ships, tobacco growers and oil companies all profited from policies that penalized Europeans. Likewise, U.S. duties and quotas kept out goods produced in Europe, thus taking away much of what the aid was meant to give.

All this is entirely consistent with the experience in developing countries, which have rarely prospered as a result of American aid. By strengthening the government at the expense of the private economy, it often destroys the real sources of progress. Had we drawn the correct lessons from the Marshall Plan, as Cowen has, a lot of mistakes made since then could have been avoided.

Serving God

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: How can I do something worthwhile for God? Do you have to become a minister in order to be used of God in other people's lives? I'm too old to do that, I think, but I have recently committed my life to Christ and want to serve Him somehow. — M.K.

DEAR M.K.: God can use you right where you are, if you are open to Him and are seeking to be used by Him. Yes, God calls some people to become ministers or missionaries, and above all you should seek His will. But it is a mistake to believe that is the only way God can use you.

In fact, some of the most effective witnesses for Christ I know are people who are not in the ministry. Some have a gift for teaching and are teaching the Bible in a Sunday School class or a home Bible study. Some are in business and others are workers who quietly live for Christ and speak about Him as God opens the door. Some are housewives who pray for their neighbors and help them when trouble strikes, demonstrating Christ's love to those who do not know Him. But all have three things in common: They have a close walk with Christ every day; they have a deep love for others; and they seek practical ways to share their faith.

Pray that God will help you to be a witness for Him right where you are. Pray for those around you — your relatives, the people you work with, your friends — who do not know Christ. Pray that God will give you a love for them and help you to build a boldness to speak to others about what Christ has done for you. All around us are people who need to know Christ. They will never hear of Him unless we tell them, and Christ has commanded us to be His witnesses. We need to be like the early Christians in Thessalonica: "The Lord's message rang out from you... your faith in God has become known everywhere" (1 Thessalonians 1:8).

Billy Graham's religious column is distributed by Tribune Media Services.

Today

By The Associated Press
Today is Monday, June 17, the 168th day of 1985. There are 197 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On June 17, 1775, the Revolutionary War Battle of Bunker Hill was fought as more than 3,000 British troops launched an attack on more than 1,000 American soldiers near Boston. The British forces succeeded on their third try in taking the hill, but not until one-third of their number was wiped out.

On this date: In 1789, the Third Estate in France declared itself a national assembly, and undertook to frame a constitution.

In 1940, France asked Germany for terms of surrender in World War II.

In 1944, the republic of Iceland was established.

In 1954, the televised Senate Army-McCarthy hearings ended.

In 1963, the U.S. Supreme Court struck down rules requiring the recitation of the Lord's Prayer or reading of biblical verses in public schools.

In 1972, the eventual downfall of Richard M. Nixon's presidency began with the arrest of several burglars at the Democratic national headquarters in Washington's Watergate complex.

Ten years ago: In a speech to a group of conservative businessmen in Washington, President Gerald R. Ford said he would curb federal regulation of business.

Five years ago: Jordan's King Hussein arrived in Washington for meetings with President Jimmy Carter and congressional leaders, who were hoping to persuade Hussein to participate in U.S.-sponsored talks on Palestinian autonomy.

One year ago: Swale, the horse that won the Kentucky Derby and the Belmont Stakes, collapsed and died outside its stable at Belmont Park.

Today's birthdays: Actor Ralph Bellamy is 81. Author John Hersey is 71. Singer Dean Martin is 68. Singer Barry Manilow is 39.

Thought for today: "Any coward can fight a battle when he's sure of winning." — George Eliot, English novelist (1819-1880).

Gandhi visit gives U.S. a shot at better relations

By JACK ANDERSON and JOSEPH SPEAR
WASHINGTON — Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi's visit gave the Reagan administration a unique opportunity to improve relations between the world's two largest democracies. But the president's men must discard some long-cherished misconceptions about India if a solid relationship is to be achieved.

First and foremost, President Reagan must realize that Gandhi offers the hand of friendship as an equal, not as a client. Like his grandfather, Jawaharlal Nehru, and his mother, Indira Gandhi, he is a dedicated nationalist for whom Indian's interests are always paramount. Gandhi is determined not to play second fiddle to either the United States or the Soviet Union.

For all the political differences between the two countries, Indians and Americans are remarkably alike: irreverent, self-critical, harboring a healthy distrust of big government. And Gandhi's economic reforms and tax cuts have drawn unabashed admiration from members of the Reagan administration.

The United States is India's biggest single trading partner. Nearly half a million Americans trace their ancestry to India, and thousands of Indians are studying in American colleges. Educational and cultural exchanges are at an all-time high, epitomized by the Festival of India now being celebrated in 100 U.S. cities.

The only serious point of difference is in geopolitics: U.S. global strategy often collides head-on with India's regional ambitions. With 740 million people, the world's third largest standing army and 10th largest industrial output, self-sufficient in food and boasting a successful space program and a rapidly growing high-technology sector, India wants to be South Asia's superpower.

In pursuit of this goal, India has proclaimed its own version of the Monroe Doctrine: Neither the Soviet Union nor the United States should "colonize" the region with military bases and arms supplies that threaten the existing strategic balance in the subcontinent.

Unfortunately, ever since the 1950s, Washington has provided sophisticated weapons to a succession of Pakistani dictators, whose armies have turned their American-made arms against India in three wars. The Nixon administration's "tilt" toward Pakistan in the 1970 crisis over Bangladesh brought U.S.-Indian relations to an all-time low. It was U.S. military aid to Pakistan that led India to seek the friendship of the Soviet Union.

The flow of U.S. weapons to Pakistan has increased since the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan. But most of the sophisticated fighter planes, missiles and anti-tank guns are deployed against India, not the Soviet threat, intelligence sources told our associate Indy Badhwar.

Realists in the Reagan administration don't expect Gandhi to break precipitously with the Soviet Union, any more than he expects the United States suddenly to ditch Pakistan. But diplomats in both countries agree that the "Pakistan problem" must be solved before any real improvement in U.S.-Indian relations can occur.

Administration sources suggest that the initiative is India's — that Gandhi should seek a regional alliance with Pakistan to thwart Soviet expansion in the subcontinent. But other analysts think the United States should make the first move by refusing to give Pakistan any more weapons that are obviously intended for use against India.

There are some pro-India voices in the administration, arguing that in the long run India will be a better and more dependable ally than the shaky military dictatorship in Pakistan. They warn that Pakistan's President Mohammed Zia ul-Haq could go the way of the shah of Iran.

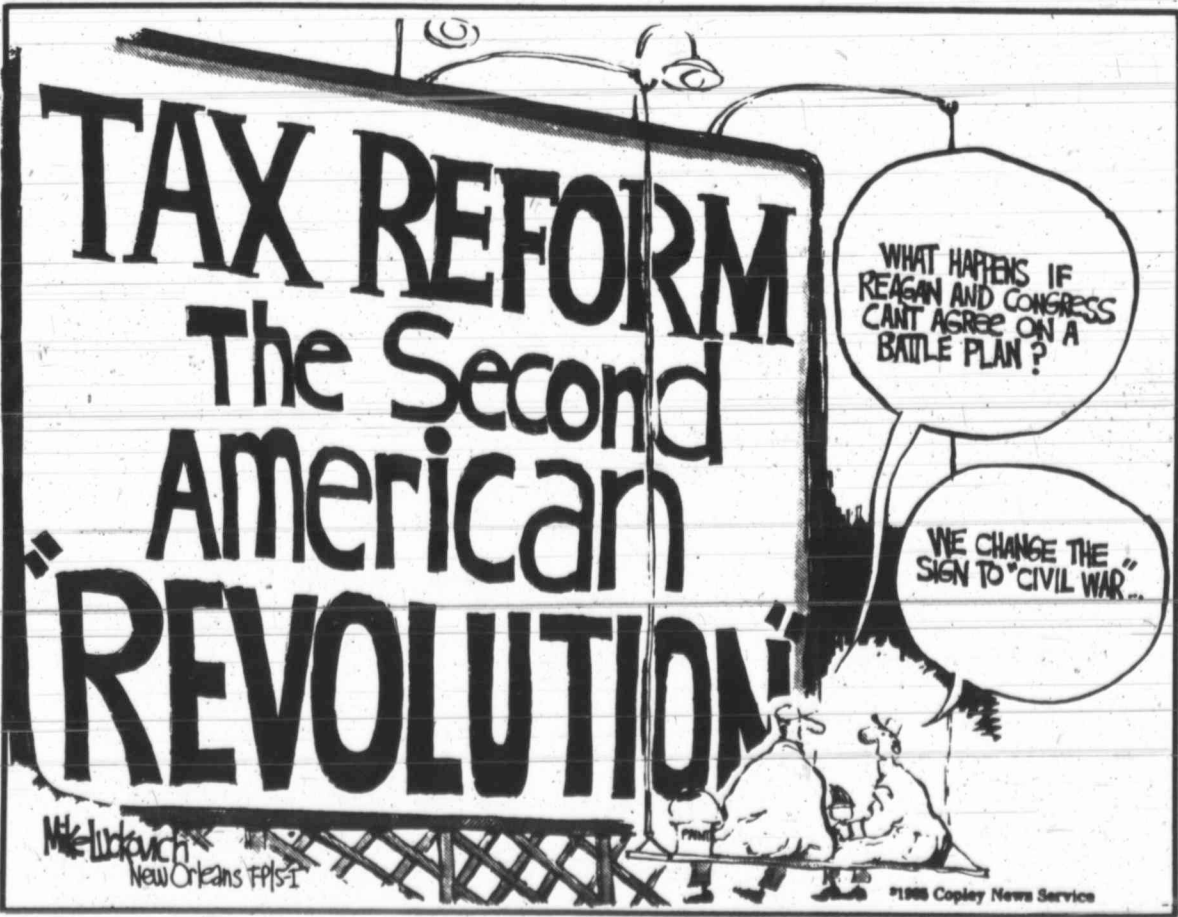

Gandhi is willing to live with the U.S.-Pakistan security arrangement under which arms supplies will continue through 1986. But he wants to know what direction U.S. policy will take after that. He also wants to know how tough a stance the United States is prepared to take against the production of a Pakistani nuclear bomb. The future of U.S.-Indian relations hinges on the answer to these questions.

HALL OF HEROES: In September 1944, seven paratroopers of the 101st Airborne Division and four members of the Royal Air Force were forced down behind the German lines near the town of Den Dungen, the Netherlands. Luckily they were found by members of the Dutch underground, who hid them from the Nazis for 42 days until Allied troops arrived. Every year the townspeople of Den Dungen celebrate the anniversary of their liberation. This year the surviving U.S. and British veterans will hold a reunion with their rescuers of 1944, and dedicate a memorial plaque in the center of the town. Queen Juliana will present a medal to the leader of Den Dungen's wartime resistance fighters, Peter Christiaan van Breevort.

MINI-EDITORIAL: In more than three decades in this business, we've seen governments at all levels devise some pretty bizarre schemes for spending the public's money. But the New York City school board's decision to operate a high school exclusively for homosexuals strikes us as preposterous. We believe that everyone has the right — within the law — to march to his or her own drummer. But surely it's not the taxpayers' obligation to provide the timpanist.

WATCH ON WASTE: It will cost the Job Corps $15,200 to train each of the 40,500 people who will be taught job skills this year. Why not send them all to Harvard instead?

Heart of City Festival Auction nets $4,000

It was reported at the Chamber Business Committee that $4,000 was netted from the Heart of the City Festival Auction on June 1. This will be applied to Christmas decoration refurbishment. The large decorations put up each year by the City are now ten years old (and they were bought second hand then!). Every so often, new tinsel, fixtures and wiring must be replaced. Fortunately, our high school vocational classes, under the direction of instructor Frank Ortega, has been contracting to do this work at a big savings.

Another $4,000 was netted from the sale and auction of the belt buckles. It was decided to let the belt buckle become the first in a series of seven, each being a limited edition of 300. The next buckle will come out in 1986.

Chairman Corky Harris also presented a proposal to sponsor a series of customer relations workshops for sales and service employers and employees in the Big Spring area. These workshops will be held in four 90-minute sessions spaced over a two week period and will be held July 12, 18, and 23, and August 9. The cost of this workshop series is $50 per person which includes all materials. For more information call the Chamber at 263-7641.

The generosity of local merchants and citizens continue to amaze. Another example came to light this week. Big Country Manufacturers donated a set of bunk-beds to the Northside Community Center to be raffled as a money-making project for the center. Completing its second year of operation, the Northside Center was begun on a shoestring and has operated at a minimum budget under the direction of Marianne Brown. Many needs are met by this Center.

We have a young entrepreneur in our midst. Daniel Bristo, son of Mr. and Mrs. Larry Bristo, is a student at Abilene Christian University. He's home for the summer and is earning money in a unique way. He bought a parking lot paint stripping machine, and is painting parking spaces, stenciling in arrows and handicapped designations. Call 263-4602 if you have a faded parking area.

The Federal Prison Camp pumps over five million dollars a year into the local economy.

In last Sunday's edition of the Dallas Morning News, in Columnist Kent Biffle's front page article, Big Spring is the topic of a tongue-in-cheek story. A person from Hatchback Harbor, New Hampshire, wrote to say he had won a free vacation in Big Spring, Texas, and asked for advice. The advice was, "Learn to talk like a Texan real fast." The article goes on to explain the first step is to learn to pronounce the city properly — BEG SPRANG.

Biffle's wife is a native of Odessa. This is not the first time he has shown an interest in Big Spring. Several years ago, he did a large assignment on movie making in Texas and spent several days here interviewing those who had worked to bring the movie makers to Big Spring on two previous occasions — "Midnight Cowboy" and "Hanger 18."

A Human Services Council has formed to bring together all the various helping agency heads in the Big Spring area to communicate and coordinate with each other. One major effort on their part will be the update of a booklet listing all the helping agencies and services. If your agency has been overlooked, call Victor Sedinger at 267-7851, or Donna Jackson at the Howard County Library.

The Ambassadors are putting together plans to sponsor a festival in mid August weekend. Possible activities are a street dance, all kinds of food and drink booths, golf tournament, tennis tournament, a beauty or talent contest, a cook-off of some type. Blue Blazers will co-sponsor it with proceeds going to benefit tourism development. It is hoped that this would become an annual event and could bring in $40,000 annually.

Another group is planning a similar festival in October to be called the Country Affair. Howard Kloss is heading up planning on this.

In January, a group of 30 businessmen and women took time off from their work to conduct a series of mini-workshops for the high school athletic program. This was the brainchild of Coach Quinn Eudy. It involved male and female athletes in football and volleyball in 9th through 12th grades.

Many of the speakers were ex-Steeers, but all were Steer supporters! Coach Eudy sent the following letter to all those businesspeople who spoke. In part it said, "We had the best off-season program at Big Spring since I've been here. The attitude and work habits of the players were way above average. I attribute a great deal of the success of this spring to the sessions given by the business people. The things they talked about: overcoming obstacles, criticism, and circumstances, self discipline, desire, and all the other things — inspired and motivated our players."

Eudy went on to say, "I believe one of the very best things it did was to show the players that people in Big Spring are behind them and really care for them."

That's another evidence of the spirit of Big Spring!

Annie Matt Angel, president of the Big Spring Garden Club Council, met Thursday with the Council and planned the program for the next 12 months. They made up an ambitious project to take back to the individual clubs for approval.

(1) The Spirit of Beauty Project will involve the purchase of 38 pounds of bluebonnet seeds (at $10 a pound!) to be taken to each elementary school where the 3rd graders will be taught how to plant, cultivate, and tend them. Then they will be planted around the school grounds to beautify the school grounds. This is, of course, subject to approval by the school authorities.

(2) The Spirit Grows Green Project will involve the planting of pecan trees on Arbor Day.

Don't forget to attend the Big Spring Cowboy Reunion and Rodeo. The Rodeo Bowl will be filled June 26-29 with top cowboys.

DEAR ABBY: I don't have a problem, but you seem to have one. The answer you gave to "I Am Serious," who asked, "Which came first, the chicken or the egg?" was ridiculous!

Didn't you learn anything in school? I knew the answer to that 50 years ago while I was still in grade school.

The facts are: The chicken is a bird, and all birds evolved from the reptile family approximately 100 million years ago. Reptiles had been laying eggs for millions of years before that time, and the chicken evolved from the reptiles.

Of course, the egg you laid in your column when you cited the Bible as your source of information is another matter. Next time you want an answer to a scientific question, consult The Book of Knowledge. Darwin was right. The book you referred to has no answers, only questions.

C.G., McPHERSON, KAN.
DEAR C.G.: Read on for more letters on the chicken-and-the-egg subject:

DEAR ABBY: You cited Genesis 1:20 to support the theory that the chicken came before the egg. Wrong!

Abby, birds did not show up until about 150 million years ago. Eggs have been used as a form of reproduction for a much longer period — even counting the eggs with shells hard enough to survive out of water. The first eggs were laid by reptiles more than 100 million years before the first bird existed.

It may take another 300 years before we admit that the Earth is 4 billion years old — not 6,000 years.

Dr. Donohue

Herpes: Hang in there, says reader

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I'm writing this letter in response to the letter you received from the young lady who thinks her life is ruined because she contracted herpes 2 from her lover. My case may offer hope and relief for her and for others suffering from herpes 1 and 2.

I am a 54-year-old male who has had herpes 1 and 2 as long as I can remember. As a child, I had 1 (cold sores) quite frequently. They never lasted more than two or three days, and I still get them. They are only a minor inconvenience and I have never had a complaint from anyone I kissed. I don't know where or when I contracted Number 2 herpes, but I have had it all my adult life. I just learned for sure last year, when my doctor took a culture. He says I must be the granddaddy of herpes 2. My outbreaks are minor and infrequent, and only last two or three days. They have not made me ill or in any way interfered with my sex life, except that I leave my partner alone during the sores stage.

During all these years I have not had a single complaint from my lovers. I have been married 21 years and my wife has no sign of either 1 or 2. Most victims can lead a normal and happy sex life, so hang in there. — Anon.

Your letter is one that shows life is not so grim for a person who has herpes. And now the oral medicine, acyclovir, is available for use in either initial attacks or recurrent ones. It's not a cure, but it does heal the sores of herpes 2 faster. I agree with your comments and with your sensible approach, including, of course, your careful avoidance of sexual contact during the active (sore) phases.

Favorite wins Texas Junior Tennis title

AUSTIN (AP) — T.J. Middleton, who bypassed high school tennis, validated his top-seeded spot with a weekend straight-set victory over Class 5A state champion Barry Richards of Spring Klein in the Texas Junior Sectional Tennis Tournament.

Middleton turned back Richards 7-6, 6-2 Saturday in the Boys 18 title match, finally negating his opponent's scorching forehand.

His 7-4 edge in the first set tiebreaker, Middleton said, gave him the momentum he needed to break Richards' first two services in the second set.

"I'm happy with my tournament," said Middleton, of Richardson, who lost only one set in five matches. "I'll probably take a week off, then go back to work for the rest of the summer."

Middleton's next venture is the United States Junior Davis Cup trials in California in late June.

Like Middleton, three other top-ranked players — Diana Merrett of Richardson in Girls 18, Nancy Webster of Corpus Christi in Girls 14, and David Di Re of Fort Worth in Boys 12 — lived up to their ranking with victories in title matches.

But two No. 1 seeds were beaten in the finals by second-seeded opponents.

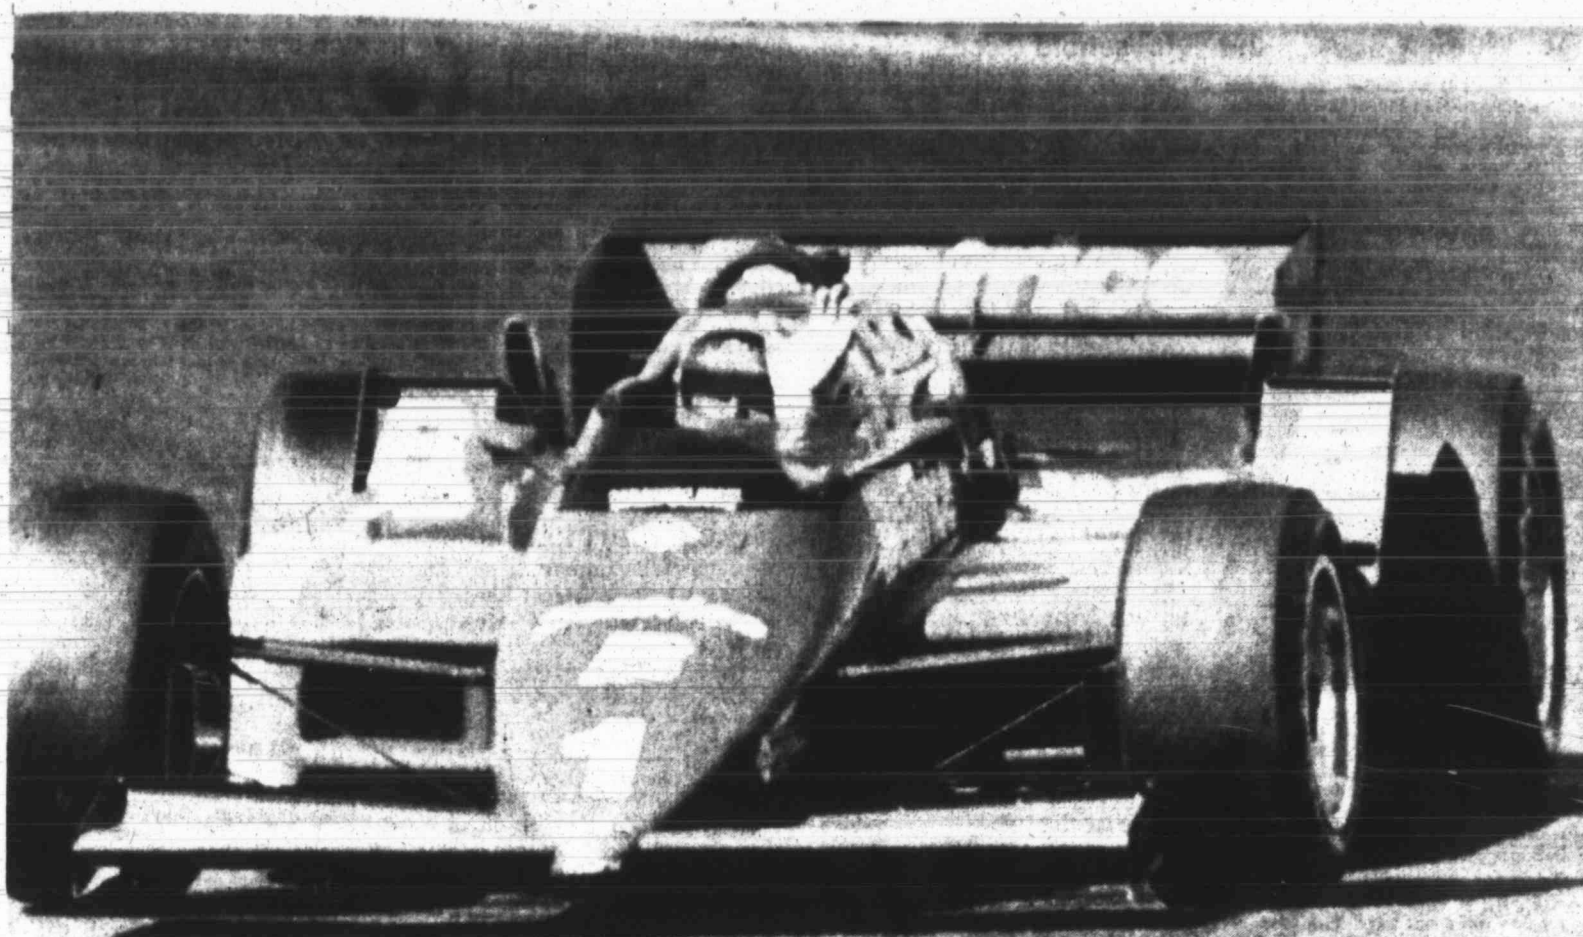

Merrett played a faultless baseline game to beat fourth-seeded Lynda Tate of Irving, 6-3, 6-0, to move up from a 1984 Girls 18 second-place finish.

Webster swept through the tournament without losing a set. She turned back eighth-seeded Vicki Paynter of Humble, 6-1, 6-4, in the title match.

Di Re took his title with a 6-2, 6-3 victory over Brandon Allen of San Antonio.

However, Mitch Michulka of Dallas and Michael Wesbrooks of Beaumont, who were also top ranked, couldn't withstand the challenges offered by 1984 winners. Michulka was blasted 6-1, 6-1 by No. 2 seed Tommy Alfano of San Antonio in Boys 16 and Wesbrooks was conquered, 6-4, 6-4 by second-ranked Michael Flanagan of Dallas in Boys 14.

Alfano took a 5-0 first-set lead over Dallas' Michulka and carved out a 4-0 second-set edge to add the boys 16 title to the Boys 14 trophy he won last year.

MARIO ANDRETTI waves to the crowd as he takes a victory lap after winning the Portland 200 Sunday after taking the lead from Al Unser Jr.

about 20 miles from the finish.

Discovery shuttles into space

Aircraft rockets into orbit in 18th international flight

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Shuttle Discovery rocketed into orbit today with five American astronauts, a French test pilot and a Saudi Arabian prince for a mission that will include a "Star Wars" laser test and a hunt for a "black hole" in space.

The international flight, 18th for the shuttle, began spectacularly as the 100-ton space plane blasted off its launch pad at 7:33 a.m. EDT and darted skyward over the Atlantic Ocean, spewing a 700-foot tail of fire and a torrent of smoke from its rocket boosters.

Nine minutes after liftoff, the Mission Control Center in Houston reported Discovery was in an orbit more than 200 miles above the globe.

During seven days in space, the crew will deploy three communications satellites, hunt for a "black hole" in our Milky Way galaxy and serve as a target for a "Star Wars" laser beam.

The satellites are owned by AT&T, the Mexican government and a consortium of 22 Arab nations. Also aboard are two French medical experiments, three West German technology experiments and a Canadian-built robot arm.

In all, 27 nations are involved in the mission.

Large delegations of French, Saudis and Mexicans flew here to attend pre-launch parties and to watch the fiery blastoff.

The crew, commanded by astronaut Dan Brandenstein, includes Saudi Prince Sultan Salman Al-Saud, a nephew of Commander Dan Brandenstein, looks over his shoulder at the crew for the Space Shuttle Discovery as they leave for the launch pad early Monday morning. The shuttle made a successful takeoff at 7:33 a.m. EDT.

King Fahd, and Patrick Baudry, a French military pilot. The others are pilot John Creighton and mission specialists Shannon Lucid, John Fabian and Steve Nagel.

The prince will observe deployment of the Arab satellite and snap pictures of his homeland that could disclose hidden sources of oil, minerals and other resources. He also will assist Baudry with the French experiments.

Tuesday is the last day of Ramadan, the month observed by Moslems with a dawn-to-dusk fast and whose end is determined by sighting the crescent of the new moon. From his vantage point in space, the prince may be the first Moslem to see the crescent.

The first of the satellites, Mexico's Morelos-A, named for an independence hero, was to be released from Discovery's cargo bay later today. Arabsat-1B will be dropped off on Tuesday and AT&T's Telstar 3D on Wednesday. Morelos will be used to transmit educational television and commercial programs over the national TV network and will provide the first TV and phone service to many remote areas of Mexico. Arabsat will be used by Arab League countries for communications, data relay and television. Telstar will join other satellites in transmitting AT&T's Skynet family of satellite services.

Also aboard is a fourth satellite, Spartan-1, which Mrs. Lucid and Fabian are to deploy on Thursday and retrieve on Saturday. Spartan will examine what may be a black hole lurking in the center of our Milky Way galaxy, devouring stars, cosmic dust and gas at a rapid rate.

"The center of the Milky Way is tightly packed with stars and seems associated with some violent action; it may be a very large black hole," said Ray Cruddace, Spartan project scientist.

Black holes are formed when a massive star or a galaxy exhausts its nuclear fuel and suddenly collapses into an object so densely packed that its gravity prevents even light from escaping. The gravitational pull of these objects is so great that they suck in nearby stars, gas and dust in enormous amounts.

Two of the West German experiments involve the processing of materials in space and the third will study the behavior of fluids in weightlessness.

United Airlines launches drive to win customers

CHICAGO (AP) — United Airlines, forced by a four-week strike to make deep cuts in service, is launching an aggressive marketing campaign to win back passengers, a company spokesman says.

"We think we can regain that market share — get back on top — within 30 to 60 days," spokesman Chuck Novak said Sunday.

He said the airline would announce promotions designed to bring customers back, but added that fare cuts are not likely.

Novak's remarks came two days after the company and leaders of the Air Line Pilots Association representing about 5,000 United pilots settled on a new three-year contract to end the 29-day strike.

He said it would take United three to four weeks to restore full service to all 50 states and to the airline's 10 foreign destinations. The airline has operated about 14 percent of its pre-strike service of 1,550 daily flights since pilots walked off the job May 17. Pilots' union officials say several issues could cause problems for the airline despite the settlement.

Roosevelt's boys remember the CCC

POE VALLEY, Pa. (AP) — They're mostly old and gray now, but there was a time — the best of times, some say — when they were known as Roosevelt's boys, members of the Depression-era Civilian Conservation Corps.

The "boys" came together again Sunday, bringing their wives, sons and daughters, old pictures and enough memories and tales to fill the 3,500-acre state park the CCC carved out of mountainous central Pennsylvania timberland 50 years ago.

About 140 people participated in the third annual reunion of Company 1333, which had worked on the Poe Valley State Park. CCC members from Texas, Virginia and New Jersey joined the gathering, hoping to see some of the boys they had known.

"The CCC built me up. It made a man out of me," said Joseph Toltin, who drove in with his wife, Agnes, from Elmwood Park, N.J.

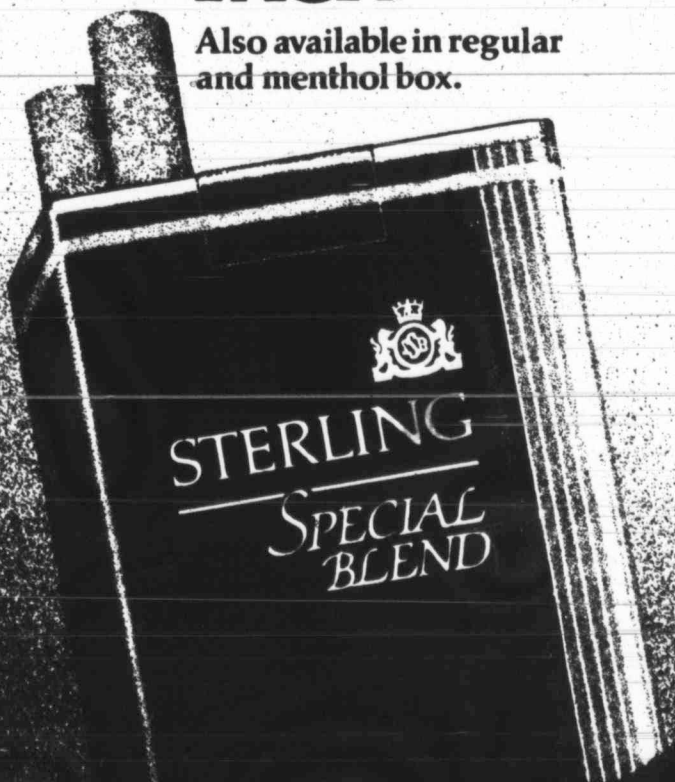

Toltin was 16 when he joined up with President Franklin Roosevelt's newly created CCC.

Chen falters, North succeeds

ANDY NORTH OF Madison, Wis., hits his second shot out of the trap on the 17th hole of the U.S. Open.

BIRMINGHAM, Mich. (AP) — Andy North calls himself "a survivor."

"I've always believed if you just keep working hard, some good stuff might happen."

North, who has spent a lifetime of hard times on the PGA Tour since winning the 1978 U.S. Open, was scuffling along Sunday, paired with T.C. Chen of Taiwan and hoping that something, anything, might happen.

On the par-four fifth hole, it did — and it was North's ticket to his first victory since Cherry Hills in Denver seven years ago.

North had a final-round 74 over the par-70 South Course at Oakland Hills Country Club. It gave him a four-round 279, the only sub-par score over what was supposed to be a Monster but what rain had turned into a pussycat for the first three days.

Chen had domesticated the course in astonishing fashion on the first day with a double-eagle, the first in the U.S. Open's 85 years, on No. 2. It gave him a lead he would hold for the first three rounds.

On Sunday, The Monster ate him alive in one equally electrifying instant.

Chen double-hit a sand wedge and took a quadruple-bogey-eight on No. 5.

Suddenly North, who had trailed

Bradley captures Rochester

PITTSFORD, N.Y. (AP) — Pat Bradley said she never doubted herself, not even when standing in a dark glen 30 yards short of the 14th pin from where saying par seemed like a distant dream and another blown tournament looked like a distinct possibility.

With only the top of the flag in sight, Bradley whacked a wedge shot within 15 feet of the pin and holed a breaking putt for a par.

The cool recovery helped her to an even-par 72 on Sunday and a two-stroke victory over a charging Nancy Lopez in the $255,000 LPGA Rochester International golf tournament.

It was the first victory since November 1983 for the No. 3 money-winner in the Ladies Professional Golf Association, and one of the most satisfying.

"It showed me a lot out there today, that you don't have to hit the ball absolutely super as long as you keep trying, hang in there and never give up," Bradley said.

"I never doubted myself today. If I had, I would never have done what I did. It was like, 'Pat, that's OK. We're going to get out of this one, too.'"

Bradley overcame intermittent rain, two lightning delays and the late charge by Lopez to secure her first victory since the Mazda Japan Classic. She posted rounds of 74-67-67-72 for an 8-under-par 280 on the wet Locust Hill Country Club course, a par-72 layout measuring 6,163 yards.

The final round was twice delayed by electrical storms on the front nine.

by four strokes, was tied atop the leader board.

From then to the end, North, Chen, Canadian Dave Barr, South African Denis Watson and Payne Stewart vied for the lead.

T.C. bogeyed the next three holes to lose seven strokes to par in just four holes. But, almost as twosome with Rick Fehr, also bogeyed No. 18 — although his 35-foot fourth shot from the fringe barely rolled wide of the hole. That miss gave North a two-shot cushion and he took advantage of it.

He played No. 18 cautiously, used the extra shot Barr had given him ("It's nice to be able to make bogey on the last hole.") and banked $103,000, nearly as much as he'd made in the preceding 2½ years.

He also became the 15th player to win at least two U.S. Opens.

Barr, with his 72, Chen (a murderous 77 following rounds of 65, 69 and 69) and Watson (70) each finished one stroke back at 280 and earned $39,185 apiece. Watson's finish will be debated for some time, considering the two-stroke penalty he received during the first round when he waited too long for a ball to fall into the cup for par on the eighth hole.

Stewart (70) wound up tied with Seve Ballesteros of Spain (71), one of the pre-tournament favorites, and Lanny Wadkins (70) at 281, Johnny Miller (69) was alone at 282 and defending champion Fuzzy Zoeller (71) was in a group at 3-over-par 283.

He said his double hit — he pitched out of the rough, his ball went almost straight up and he nicked it again with the wedge, a penalty stroke — was on his mind for the rest of the round.

Barr, playing in the next-to-last remarkably, he recovered his cool and regained a share of the lead.

With four holes to go, though, it belonged only to North and Barr — and when the Canadian bogeyed No. 17 with a poor second shot out of the left rough, North was alone in the lead.

Stars reach USFL playoffs for third consecutive time

By The Associated Press
The Baltimore Stars, the defending United States Football League champions, clinched a third straight playoff berth with a bang and a whimper.

The Stars, who have struggled to a 9-7-1 record after making the USFL championship game in each of the league's first two seasons, assured themselves of another postseason appearance with a 41-10 victory over Orlando Saturday night.

It was Baltimore's highest point total of the season, but a season-long 6,988 fans attended the game at Byrd Stadium at College Park, Md. There were 11,000 no-shows.

Stars Coach Jim Mora said it's still too early to look two weeks ahead to the playoffs.

"The approach we are taking right now is that we want to win our last game," Mora said of next Sunday's game at home against Tampa Bay.

In other games Saturday, it was Memphis 31, Jacksonville 0; Tampa Bay 17, Birmingham 14; Oakland 34, New Jersey 29 and Arizona 21, Los Angeles 10. There were no games Sunday.

Memphis and Tampa Bay also clinched playoff spots Saturday, joining Baltimore, Birmingham, New Jersey, Oakland and Denver. Houston could clinch the last berth tonight with a victory at home against San Antonio.

Chuck Fusina teamed with wide receiver James Caver for a pair of touchdowns to lead Baltimore's rout of Orlando.

Fusina, who completed 19 of 26 passes for 203 yards and three touchdowns, found Caver for a 23-yard touchdown midway through the second quarter and again from 17 yards out early in the third period.

"James has been great these last three games," Mora said. "And we've been getting him more involved in our offense. Chuck has a great deal of confidence in him."

"It's amazing how he's come on," Fusina said.

Jeff Brockhaus gave Orlando, 4-13, a 3-0 lead with a 39-yard field goal in the second quarter, but Baltimore took the lead for good eight minutes later when Kelvin Bryant ran eight yards for a touchdown. Bryant later caught a two-yard touchdown pass from Fusina.

Bandits 17, Stallions 14

Tampa Bay was outgained 416 yards to 253, but managed to beat Birmingham with the help of five interceptions, including two each by Dwayne Anderson and Marcus Quinn.

"I think this is the first time in three years we beat a good team and we really didn't play well on offense," Bandits Coach Steve Spurrier said. "I think this will give us some momentum."

That march ended with a three-yard TD pass to Jim Smith, who finished with 11 receptions for 139 yards.

Twins overcome Hough's knuckler

ARLINGTON (AP) — Gary Gaetti, who hit a two-run homer for the Minnesota Twins, says Texas Rangers knucklerball pitcher Charlie Hough can be a tough opponent.

"I don't think we've beaten Hough since I've been here," Gaetti said Sunday after Minnesota whipped the Rangers 4-1. "I can't tell where he's throwing the ball, but sometimes he makes mistakes like the pitch for the home run."

Gaetti's sixth-inning blast gave the Twins a 3-1 lead. Minnesota went into the game having lost to Hough all nine times he had started against them.

But Gaetti and Ray Gagne took advantage of two Hough mistakes, and Minnesota pitcher Ken Schrom scattered seven singles.

"Hough was up with his pitches tonight a little," said Gagne. "He seemed to be putting the pitches where I could hit them. I'll take him pitching like this anytime."

Rangers manager Bobby Valentine said fatigue hurt Hough, 5-7, who gave up seven hits in six innings.

"Tonight, he admittedly was out of gas," Valentine said. "He lost it in a hurry and just left a couple of balls up."

Gagne's second major league homer gave the Twins a 1-0 lead in the third inning. After the Rangers

Banks sets world long jump record

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Willie Banks, the first American in 74 years to hold the world record in the men's triple jump, has found a tough opponent in the California bar examination.

"I know I can pass the exam," said Banks, who leaped 58 feet, 11½ inches to claim the record Sunday in the USA-Mobil outdoor national championships.

The 29-year-old UCLA Law School grad, who erased the record of 58-8½ set by Brazil's Joao de Oliveira in the high altitude of Mexico City on Oct. 15, 1975, has failed the exam three times and plans to take it again in February.

His record, which came on his second jump of the night, highlighted the finest triple jump competition in history. Overall, four jumpers cleared 57 feet — the first time that ever has been done legally.

Banks said he wasn't surprised by the record performance.

"When I took the first step on my run, I knew it was going to be a world record," he said. "On my first run I was back behind the board and I jumped 57 feet, not even jumping. After that I kind of jogged around and I felt my legs coming back."

Meanwhile, sprinters Kirk Baptiste and Jamaica's Merlene Ottey-Page completed doubles Sunday by winning the men's and women's 200-meter dashes, respectively.

WILLIE BANKS ...new world record holder

Baptiste, winner of the men's 100 Saturday night, took the 200 in 20.11, just ahead of high school sensation Roy Martin, the runner-up in 20.13. Ottey-Page, winning both women's sprints for the second year in a row, followed her victory in the 100 Saturday night with a 21.93 triumph in the 200. Her time was the fastest in the world this year.

In addition to Banks and Ottey-Page, there were four world-leading performances Sunday night — by Andre Phillips, Henry Marsh, Johnny Gray and Doug Padilla.

Fernando whitewashes Astros

HOUSTON (AP) — Red-hot Pedro Guerrero couldn't believe it when he was struck out with men in scoring position. So after he fanned with runners on first and second in the first inning, he responded by belting a double and a home run and driving in three runs in his next two at-bats.

"I was mad. The way I'm hitting I didn't believe anyone could strike me out with men in scoring position. I was ready after that," Guerrero said after leading the Los Angeles Dodgers to a 9-0 win over the Houston Astros Sunday night.

Guerrero's home run was his fourth in as many games and ties him with eight Los Angeles Dodgers and two Brooklyn Dodgers for the club record for home runs in consecutive games.

The home run is Guerrero's eighth in the Dodgers' last nine games, his ninth of the month and his 13th of the season to place him third in the National League.

"He's hot," Los Angeles manager Tommy Lasorda said. "He's swinging the bat as well as I've seen since 1983, when he hit 32 home runs."

"He's the kind of guy who can actually carry a club and that's what he's doing now. It's inspiring," Lasorda continued.

Guerrero's explanation of his hitting streak, in which he's hit .455 in the last six games is simple.

"I'm just swinging the bat and making contact and when you do that you've got a chance to get base hits and home runs," Guerrero explained.

Guerrero and Mike Marshall each batted in three runs.

Valenzuela, 6-7, pitched a six-hitter, snapped a personal three-game losing streak and gave the Dodgers a sweep of the three-game series.

Valenzuela walked three and struck out five in picking up his third shutout of the season, tying him for the National League high.

The Astros have not scored in their last 25 innings.
