Liquor petition . rejected

By KEELY COGHLAN Staff Writer

A petition that would place the issue of liquor-bythe-drink on the ballot went on the rocks today. Howard County Tax Assessor-Collector Dorothy Moore said a preliminary count, finished about noon, showed the petition was shy 283 signatures.

"We had 2,138 good signatures and they needed 2,421," Moore said.

Her office was in the process of rechecking figures a second time, but Moore said she did not expect a large variance in the count. "It'll be pretty close to the same.'

Citizens for a Choice, the group that solicited the signatures, had collected 2,655 signatures, a spokesman said.

Micheal Russell, a spokesman for Citizens for a Choice, said he would not comment on the failure until after the group consulted with its attorney. The petition failed because of Moore's interpretation of state regulations, Russell said today. Russell said Moore's office took a very strict interpretation of state rules, where voter signatures must appear exactly - down to the middle initial - as their name appears on voter registration lists. He said he believes the state regulations are not that strict, that if the signature has the same name and address - plus or minus the middle initial - it should be accepted.

Earlier this morning, clerks in the office were owly and steadily pr names as they certified signatures on the petition that would force a special election.

At a table filled with stacks of petitions and records of voter registration records, two clerks

Cities in orbit over atom-smasher

Harte-Hanks News Service All around Texas, local groups are starting to light signal fires that spell out the same message: Put your atom smasher here.

Groups in at least three areas in Texas - including Big Spring and the Permian Basin — are lining up local support to ensure that the U.S. Department of Energy builds its atom smasher in Texas - with any luck, in their community. The federal government is considering the construction of a gigantic atom smasher - the Superconducting Super-Collider, or Texatron — with a price tag between $2 billion and $6 billion. The project could create thousands of new jobs and pump hundreds of millions of dollars into a local economy.

The Texatron would consist of a circular tunnel from 60 to 100 miles in circumference, a series of magnets inside the tunnel, and a research facility - the campus in which scientists would work. Operation would start with two beams of protons shot into the tunnel in opposite directions. The particles naturally travel in a straight line, but the magnets would bend their paths around the tunnel and

The protons would race around and around the tunnel, accelerating on each circuit and eventually nearing the speed of light. At that point, they would col-

accelerate them

lide, producing subatomic particles for the scientists to study.

In those collisions and their effects, physicists hope to find answers about the nature of the universe: How it started, how it will end, and how it's put together. The fact that the Texatron's cost may prove prohibitive has not stopped communities around the state from trying to snare the project.

Six sites have been studied by a commission established by Gov. Mark White, which made its report in January.

One is in north Texas at Waxahachie. That site is close to Dallas-Fort Worth, an area with a major international airport, a reservoir of skilled technicians and a wide array of cultural activities. The North Texas Commission, which promotes the development of the area, is taking a keen interest in the project, says commission President Worth Blake.

Another potential site, left out of the governor's site study, is in the Permian Basin. Grant Billingsley, executive vice president of the Midland Chamber of Commerce, says local chambers of commerce are spearheading a drive to bring the Texatron to the Midland Odessa-Big Spring area.

The area's flatness, its geology and its good transportation facilities, Billingsley says, suggest

Jobless rate up

Oil slowdown has 'ripple effect'

By KEELY COGHLAN Staff Writer

A slowdown in key industries pushed the county and city unemployment rates up almost a full percentage point in May, the local office of the Texas Employment Commission reported today.

Total employment fell slightly while the number of persons looking for work edged up, Joe Wallis, office manager for TEC here, said. He attributed May's countywide unemployment rate of 5.7 percent — up from 4.9 percent in April — to a slowdown in oilfield exploration and service work and a reduction in the medical health field.

"As one industry slows down, it will have a ripple effect," Wallis

Wallis said scheduled openings of three new restaurants and another convenience store in Big Spring should help unemployment figures.

He said, however, that those new jobs "won't offer employment" to persons displaced from the oilfield and the health professions. "It will be hard to place those people.

TEC figures for Howard County in May show the labor force had 16,355 persons, 15,417 of them employed and 938 unemployed. That compares to an April labor force of 16,289, of which 15,495 people were employed and 794 unemployed.

The increase in the work force can be attributed to more individuals looking for jobs because school is out, Wallis said.

Figures for the city of Big Sprng, obtained from the Austin TEC office, also showed a similar increase in the unemployment rate and the labor force.

May unemployment for the city is at 6.7 percent, up from 5.7 percent a month ago, TEC reports.

Although that figure remains lower than the average national unemployment rate, it crept past the state unemployment average of 6.6 percent.

Big Spring has 12,332 people in its labor force, 11,511 of whom are employed and 821 unemployed. In April, figures showed a labor force of 12,264, of whom 11,569 were employed and 695 unemployed.

Mother of slain teen sues Howard County

Staff and news service reports ABILENE - The mother of a young man shot to death last November by a Howard County sheriff's deputy has filed a civil rights suit in federal court here seeking $6 million in damages.

Howard County Judge Milton Kirby said today he had been "expecting" a suit to be filed in connection with the death of Jose G. Garza, 16, who was shot and killed by then-sheriff's deputy O.D. Majors following a police pursuit in Big Spring. Majors has since resigned.

Adelina Garza of San Angelo, mother of Jose G. Garza, is suing Howard County, the county sheriff's department, Sheriff A.N. Standard and Majors. The suit was filed by El Paso attorney Robin Collins. It asks for $2 million compensatory and $4 million punitive damages

In the lawsuit, Mrs. Garza alleges that the Howard County Sheriff's Department:

· Failed to follow proper procedures in setting up a roadblock and in using deadly force.

 Maintained inadequate policies for reviewing police misconduct, for disciplining and counseling officers, and for screening out prospects who are unfit to be police officers.

 Did not give deputies proper training and supervision in the use of deadly force.

Sheriff A.N. Standard declined comment on the lawsuit when contacted today. "Any comments from this office will be based upon the county's representation," Standard said

Howard County Judge Milton Kirby said he was unaware of the lawsuit this morning. "I wonder when they're going to advise us," he said. "I've been expecting it. We need to talk to the district attorney and county attorney before making any public statements.

Howard County Grand Jurors reviewed the shooting case in February but did not take any action against Majors after hearing evidence presented by the Texas Rangers and the FBI. Standard

A tough job

Labor secretary defends Reagan policies before NAACP

DALLAS (AP) - U.S. Labor Secretary William Brock, defending his department's record on minority employment before the NAACP convention, denied charges the Reagan administration has eroded civil rights and ignored minority concerns.
"I don't believe there's anyone who believes Ronald Reagan doesn't want the maximum opportunity for everyone in the country," Brock said Monday before the 76th annual meeting of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People

Calling the double-digit minority youth unemployment rate a "national tragedy," Brock said the administration was trying to put black teen-agers to work by proposing a sub-minium wage and job training programs.

When asked at a later news conference if he agreed with the administration's handling of civil rights issues, he said, "The president appointed me. I share his views.

"I think there have been missed opportunities for communication" between the NAACP and the administration, Brock said after his noon speech to convention delegates.

Tension during questioning by reporters in the press room where Hooks shared the podium with Brock and listened as his own words attacking Reagan were repeated - contrasted sharply with Brock's earlier speech.

During a speech greeted with polite applause at the Dallas Convention Center ballroom, Brock spoke of a need to curb teen-age unemployment, which he said has climbed as high as 50 percent among blacks and steadily increased over the past 30 years.

In his keynote address Sunday night, NAACP Executive Director Benjamin L. Hooks blasted the Reagan administration and accused it of "open hostility to equal rights."

But on Monday, Brock sidestepped the controversy, saying he wouldn't get into a "debate with the Justice Department" or any other department at odds with the NAACP, which is holding its 76th annual meeting.

Brock pointed to the new Job Training Partnership Act, which replaced the Comprehensive Employment Training Act as the federal jobs-training program for youth, as a significant step. He said JTPA has doubled the number of job placements after training.

Restrictions will keep the program from displacing adult workers, as some labor and minority leaders fear, and "400,000 new jobs" will be created, Brock said. "There are going to be tactical differences" between the administration and NAACP, Brock said. "Our differences are not over the goals, they're over the methods to achieve those goals."

At the end of the news conference, Hooks placed his arm on Brock's shoulder and said he'd known Brock for 20 years.

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) - The ambassadors of Britain and Italy met today with Shiite Moslem leader Nabih Berri, apparently seeking an end to the ordeal of 40 American hijack hostages, now in their 12th day of

There were reports that Syria and Israel, bitter Middle East foes, are ready to join the United States in separate efforts to free the Americans held by Shiites.

Berri told reporters Monday that the hostages, seized in the June 14 hijacking of a TWA Athens-to-Rome flight, would not be freed until U.S. warships pull back from the Lebanese coast. U.S. Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger said the ships are in international waters.

Previously, the hijackers had only demanded the liberation of Shiites jailed in Israel and Spain as a condition for setting free their American captives. Israel freed 31 of its prisoners Monday, leaving 735 still behind bars.

After meeting for 30 minutes with Berri, the Italian ambassador, Antonio Mancini, told reporters: "I came as the president in Beirut of the ambassadors of the European Community (Common Market) to tell him how preoccupied we are, for this hijacking has turned out to be a crucial moment in the life of what we call future Lebanon, the new Lebanon which we expected to rise from the retreat of the Israelis."

The Italian envoy added that he told Berri, "We can't but condemn very strongly every operation that involves innocent people, even in important matters

British Ambassador David Miers met for one hour with Berri at the Shiite Amal militia leader's sandbagged house in Beirut's Moslem sector. "We discussed some aspects of the hijacking," said Miers. "Certain important aspects and principles." He declined to give

The meeting between Miers and Berri followed reports that Shiite extremists have threatened reprisals against Britain for its recent deportation of eight Shiites suspected of plotting the overthrow of the Bahrain government.

In Julis, Israel, Prime Minister Shimon Peres said today he had sent a letter to President Reagan on Monday stressing that Israel and the United States must cooperate fully to seek an end to the hostage crisis.

Previously, Israeli officials had indicated sympathy, but said they viewed the hijacking as a purely American affair.

"I said, as I really feel, that our concern for the safety of the hostages is no different than if it were our own hostages," the Israeli leader said. "I see this as a struggle of the entire enlightened and free world against the ugly phenomenon of terror. And of course, we stand by the United States."

Beirut's leftist daily newspaper, as-Safir, quoted informed sources as saying Syria had agreed to U.S. requests to use its relations with the Shiites to secure the release of the Americans.

Expert says jetliner exploded in air

CORK, Ireland (AP) - An Indian expert who inspected the wreckage of an Air-India jumbo jet that said today it was apparent the Boeing 747 "broke up in the air.

"Some of the pieces, like chairs and cushions, are intact, so they had to fall from high up in the sky," Captain V.K. Bhasin, deputy manager of Indian Airlines, Air-India's sister company. told reporters.
"If the whole aircraft had impacted (against) the water there would have been a lot more twists and turns in the chairs and some of the other equipment,"

Bhasin was part of a seven-man team of Indian civil aviation experts inspecting wreckage picked up from treal, Canada, to India crashed into the sea off Ireland on Sunday. Officials say 329 were on board.

Bashin said it was too soon to say whether an explosion brought down the plane, but "what looks quite obvious is that the aircraft broke up in the air. That everybody knows.

Air-India, meanwhile, indefinitely suspended its weekly flight to Canada "unless security gets tight" at Canadian airports, S.K. Anand, deputy operations manager, said in India.

Japan cuts more tariffs

TOKYO - The Japanese government today announced tariff reductions on more than 1,860 products, most taking effect next year, and said it is willing to discuss abolishing tariffs on all manufactured goods.

The offer came in a mid-term report on an "action program" of market-opening measures to quell foreign criticism of Japan's huge trade surpluses. Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone in April announced the program and pledged to come up with tariff cuts by late June and other market opening measures in July. Japan last year had a trade surplus of $45 billion, including $36.8 billion with the United States.

Threats force delay of 4 planes

By The Associated Press Anonymous bomb threats and suspicious passenger remarks forced jumpy airlines officials around the world to order two planes to make emergency landings and delay takeoff of two others.

The threats came one day after an apparent explosion downed an Air-India jumbo jet out of Toronto 120 miles southwest of the Irish coast, killing all 329 people aboard. Also Sunday, an explosion shattered luggage in Tokyo's airport that had been taken off a Canadian Pacific Air flight from Vancouver.

No bombs were found on any of the threatened planes Monday.

Opinion

A lousy excuse for not working

Combine the often overweening policy of some workman's compensation officials with a racially motivated personnel decision and you have instant folly.

The Kentucky Workers' Compensation Board has ordered the City of Louisville to find a job with all-white co-workers for a man who says he fears black persons. Gary Pearl, a former street-cleaning supervisor, asserts he is not prejudiced; he says he has a mental problem that makes him afraid to work with blacks.

That sufficed for the Kentucky Workers' Compensation Board, which directed Louisville to make "exhaustive efforts ... to return (Pearl) to gainful employment in an all-white setting, if necessary for his employability."

Meanwhile, the city, which is to say, the taxpayers, must pay Mr. Pearl between $900 and $1,000 per month until a work environment to his liking can be found. In addition, the people must pay for litigating an appeal in the courts lest the Pearl case become a license for racial bigotry.

In this free country, Mr. Pearl is not required to work at a given job that he finds objectionable for whatever reason; certainly, he has no birth-right claim to be on Louisville's payroll. That the Kentucky Workers' Compensation Board should honor his petition to work only in the company of whites is "outrageously racist" as civil-rights groups have charged. This incredible ruling should be struck down by the courts without delay.

Pentagon computer waste worse than $600 ashtrays

WASHINGTON - In the apparently endless chronicling of Pentagon waste, it's the $640 toilet seats, $400 hammers and $600 ashtrays that get the headlines. Less sensational, but far more wasteful, are the unpublicized delays and cost overruns on the Pentagon's big-ticket items. One of these is CAMIS, the Continental Army

Management Information System, on which the Pentagon has already spent enough to buy more than 66,000 overpriced ashtrays with no discernible After three years of development and expenditures topping $40 million, the fancy computer system still is many months and millions of dollars from even reaching the drawing board. How important is CAMIS to national security? An internal memo from the Army Forces Command chief of staff put it this way:

"The need for CAMIS can be simply stated. Without it, the Army cannot perform the functions needed to mobilize the (reserve) force; redistribute personnel, equipment and materiel by priority, and prepare units for deployment within the time frame demanded by national strategy

But for all its urgency, the CAMIS project has boged down in the very first of its preliminary stages figuring out what the computer system should be able to do when it's eventually built and programmed

Our associate Donald Goldberg obtained hundreds of pages of internal Army documents detailing the project's problems. With the help of Joe Burniece, an analyst with the Project on Military Procurement, a private watchdog group, the story has been pieced together.

As envisioned four years ago, the computer system was to cost about $600 million from start to finish. Surveying the appalling extravagance to date, sources involved in the project now predict glumly that the ultimate cost is sure to be well over

In 1982, the Army chose Rehab Group Inc., a Washington-based company, to do the basic "brainstorming" for CAMIS under a Small Business Administration "set-aside." But the General Accounting Office ruled that Rehab was too big to qualify for the special small-business treatment. So Army officials gave Rehab a sole-source contract, arguing that it was the only firm that could do the Army attorneys questioned this reasoning but were ignored. When other officials insisted that the project be opened up for competitive bidding as originally planned, the brass created a separate computer project - and gave Rehab a sole-source

By the spring of 1984, Col. Luther Crum, thendirector of the Army Automation Management Office, wrote a memo to the chief of the Army Reserves charging that the CAMIS project was out of control. Detailed plans were "essentially nonexistent," he charged, and even the amount of money already spent was impossible to figure out.

'Adequate controls over the sole-source contractor, Rehab, are lacking," Crum complained. "They are in control, rather than being controlled."

Crum's recommendation that Rehab's contract not be renewed was ignored, and the company is now in the running for yet another slice of the CAMIS pie. The Army's inspector general is reportedly investigating the fiasco.

But political and diplomatic considerations always seem to override enforcement of the law Mexico, for example, refuses to extradite drug smugglers for trial in U.S. courts. Yet no one hints that U.S. aid to Mexico should be curtailed. The embassy feared his testimony would implicate members of the current Bolivian

The House staffers saw a movie about Moscow and engaged in a question-andanswer session with their hosts. It was the first time such a group had been invited to the embassy since 1974, and some of the congressional staffers were "a little goosey," confided one source, about fraternizing with the Soviets. Just to be safe, they cleared the affair with the FBI, the CIA and the State Department.

Crazy world has made her MADD

Is that the kind of picture you want your kids to see? A drink in your hand! And if one of your kids becomes an alcoholic and is killed in a car wreck or by someone else?

Maybe you can hold it, or think you can, but maybe one of your kids won't be able to. Thank God for Drs. Bill & Bob. Anyone who recognizes his problem and has the courage to do something about it is heroic to me!

It doesn't take much courage to be a drunk. How do I know? Why do I care? Because it is my experience the tendency is inherited like a lot of other things. No, I've never been one, but I probably would have been if I drank.

On my mother's side of the family, I came from a long line of alcoholics. Uncles, cousins, etc., and finally my sister.

Don't let anyone go who has been picked up twice. Why are DWIs and dope pushers let out on bail? Look what kind of world we are giving our children. Look at the twisted men who don't mind violating their own daughters. Men who will kill old women, vandalize, steal,

Why do we allow our kids to see anything on TV? The movies made on TV today. Some people will do anything for a little money. They don't care who they ruin. Women and children aren't safe on the streets or at home anymore.

Why can't we have some good old movies like we used to have? Musicals, comedy. Not sick comedy This world is going to blow up in our face. No wonder I'm MADD. L.M. LEWIS

Today

Today's Highlight in History On June 25, 1876, Lt. Col. George A. Custer and his Seventh Cavalry were wiped out by Sioux and Cheyenne Indians in the Battle of Little Big Horn in Montana. On this date:

In 1788, the state of Virginia ratified the U.S. Constitution.

In 1906, in New York, architect Stanford White was shot to death atop the original Madison Square Garden - which he had designed - by Harry Thaw, the jealous husband of Evelyn Nesbit.

How Reagan, Carter handle hostages

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Reagan's handling of the hijacking of TWA Flight 847 underscores the difference between how he copes with a foreign crisis in which others hold the trump cards and how Jimmy Carter dealt with the event that helped doom his Reagan has taken an active role, but he has not allowed it to dominate his time.

He showed his involvement not by concentrating all his attention on the crisis but by visiting briefly with families of victims during trips to Indianapolis and Dallas which had been scheduled in his campaign to sell his tax overhaul plan.

The contrast with Carter is sharp. In the third year of his presidency, Iranian radicals seized the American Embassy in Tehran, demanding that the United States send back for trial the shah, who was in this country for medical treatment. Some of the hostages were released, but 52 were held for 444 days - freed, finally, on Jan. 20, 1980, the day the presidency was surrendered by Carter to Reagan.

As soon as the crisis occured, Carter cancelled trips, stayed awake late into the night, walked the White House grounds alone, chaired meeting after meeting to consider his options and, eventually, found himself held hostage — "the 53rd hostage," he was called.

Reagan's White House staff went into action with the seizure of TWA Flight 847, but Reagan initially stood apart. When word arrived at the White House the morning of June 14 that the airliner had been hijacked, Vice Adm. John M. Poindexter called togehter an interagency crisis committee and parceled out assignments.

The State Department set up a special task force to monitor developments; Defense

...'Reagan's aides say he is deter mined to avoid becoming a hostage of crisis, as Carter had.'

would review the military situation. Contacts were set up with the airline, intelligence agencies and friendly governments in the region. Poindexter's boss, National Security Adviser Robert C. McFarlane, kept Reagan informed of developments, but the president took no immediate action to take over minuteby-minute monitoring of the crisis. Most of the White House crisis management people had been through it before — either in dress rehearsals or the embassy bombing in Beirut, the suicide attack on the Marine headquarters, the coordinated assault on U.S., French and Kuwaiti facilities Reagan has spent both weekends since the hijacking at the presidential retreat at Camp David, Md., but he came back early on the first weekend to meet with the National Security Council, demonstrating his personal concern for the deteriorating situation. The past weekend, he flew by helicopter from Camp David to Andrews Air Force Base to receive the bodies of four U.S. Marines killed in a second instance of terrorism - the gunning down of patrons at a cafe in El Salvador. Reagan used the occasion to vow "to find the jackals and bring them and their colleagues in terror to justice. He could not be so bold in his choice of words about the terrorists holding 40 American hostages in Lebanon. He could only say, as he did Tuesday night in a news conference, that he would have to "wait it out" and appeal to Lebanese authorities to work for the Americans' release.

He expressed frustration, saying he had 'pounded a few walls myself' in anguish. Aides and Reagan may yet take another look at his plans to take a 10-day vacation, beginning Friday, in California if the hostages remain in hostile hands then and no solution

But Reagan's aides say he is determined to avoid becoming a hostage of crisis, as Carter

In his memoirs, the former president captured the atmosphere: "The safety and wellbeing of the American hostages became a constant concern for me, no matter what other duties I was performing as president. I would walk in the White House gardens early in the morning and lie awake at night, trying to think of additional steps I could take to gain their freedom without sacrifying the honor and security of our nation. I listened to every proposal, no matter how preposterous.

On the fourth day of the Iranian crisis, Carter postponed a state visit to Canada and a few days later cancelled trips that had been scheduled to Pennsylvania, Florida and Georgia, where he had hoped for a few days' vacation on Sapelo Island.

"Staying close to Washington quickly became standard policy," Carter wrote. And on Dec. 4, a month after the embassy was seized and the day he announced his candidacy for re-election, Carter formally confined himself

Although he eventually did take to the campaign trail four months later, while the hostages remained in captivity, the crisis consumed him and, perhaps more than any other event, his presidency.

The red-headed stranger in the black coat is really

Willie Nelson

AUSTIN (AP) — The gray coat looked great on him; it lent the ultimate majesty to the formal ensemble made up of blacks and

Unfortunately, it didn't fit. Willie Nelson. not a victim of middle-age pauch, hadn't been given the right size. He went back into the rear part of his large travel bus, the one called "Honeysuckle Rose," and came back with a black coat that fit him perfectly.

The famous singer-songwritter and, for the last six years, movie actor, turned and faced his visitor and smiled. It was a preacher's outfit, circa 1870, and if it were possible for Willie Nelson to look more at home in any clothing other than the jeans, T-shirts and bandannas that he usually dons for concerts, he did so now.

He looked terribly impressive, in fact, and looking at him in his preacher's collar and heavy wool coat and broad rimmed black hat was to see Julian Shay, the hero of "Red-Headed Stranger," in person.

When one realizes how far back Julian Shay has been on Willie Nelson's mind it is easier to understand why the Texas-born musician seems so right for the part. The character was born via Nelson's

'Red-Headed Stranger' album, which hit the market 10 years ago. Making a movie of "Red-Headed Stranger" has been a dream of Nelson's since he wrote the epic song

In the next few weeks that dream will slowly work itself into that peculiar brand of reality contained in processed movie film stock. The formal wear he put on in that bus was a wedding outfit. In that day's shooting, which would end early because of severe thunderstorms, he and Raysha, the character played by Morgan Fairchild, were married at a house on Academy street posing as a house in Philadelphia.

The rest of the action, which is set in the plains of Montana, will be shot at the star's Briarcliff ranch west of Austin

William Wittliff, a longtime Austinite and writer of "Raggedy Man," "Barbarosa" and "Country," is making his directorial debut at the helm of "Red-Headed Stranger." Nelson and Wittliff are also co-

"Bill wrote the script seven or eight years ago," Nelson recalled as he rested in his bus. "We played the album on a drive from here to San Antonio. But we kept running into financial trouble. We'd have a deal; then we wouldn't have a deal. Or we would almost have deals. We just couldn't get a Nelson said he finally spent his own money to construct the Western town that how occupies a large part of his Hill Country property. A friend from Arkansas put in $200,000 as seed money, and then Nelson put in some more of his own.

"Then we got a little help from Bud Shrake (a local screenwriter) and Darrell Royal," and a woman he describes smilingly as "a mysterious lady in Boston."

It is a small, independent production. Some distributors have expressed interest in the picture, but no deal has yet been struck for this important phase in the life of

It was time for Nelson to be made up for the wedding sequence. Not much was needed — just a little powder on the face and some color on the gray beard. At the beginning of the action the preacher is in his early 40s. Nelson is in his early 50s.

"I feel a little more at ease with this movie," he said as color was brushed onto his beard. "I've been with this one so long, I feel I've already made it."

Nelson and Wittliff worked together on "Honeysuckle Rose" and "Barbarosa," and apparently they understand one

"He's as good as any I've seen," said Nelson of his director. "He and I talk the same language, anyway. Bill tells you exactly what he wants, but he'll listen when you have an idea. He'll put it together."

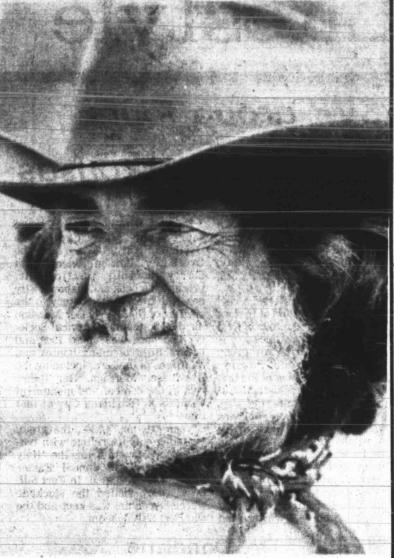

With makeup completed, the star returned to his bus for the finishing touch, a large black hat. A driver then took him the three blocks from the Austin Opera House parking lot to the location for the wedding scene. "We have put in as many as 16-hour days, but most of the time it's 12," he said of his work schedule. "The production manager (Dick Gallagley) watches out for us and makes sure we're not going too long here

He still finds time for his favorite pastimes, jogging and golf. There's an exercise bicycle at the back of the bus, and cans of Herbalife and a plate of fresh fruit occupy space on the kitchen counter.

"I nearly quit the game (golf) when I found out I wasnt' supposed to hit it as hard as I wanted," he complained cheerfully.

Last-minute appeals fail to stop execution

Charles Milton was put to death by injection early today after a flurry of last-minute appeals failed to spare his life. Milton, 34, of Fort Worth, who converted to the Islamic religion while in prison, used his final statement while strapped to a Texas Department of Corrections gurney to pray to Allah and to urge his "brothers and isters to be strong.

The Fort Worth laborer was sentenced to death for the slaying eight years and one day ago of Fort Worth liquor store owner Menaree Denton. The woman was shot in the heart while she and her husband, Leonard, struggled with Milton during an aborted robbery. The legal scrambling through the state and federal courts climaxed at 1 a.m. CDT with word from the Supreme Court that it had denied a request to halt the execution.

Gov. Mark White, as has been his custom, then rejected a petition for a reprieve.

Milton, with needles inserted into his arms to carry the lethal drugs, had little reaction and died peacefully. His only deliberate movement while the drugs entered his system was to nod to his brother-in-law, Joseph Smith, one of five personal witnesses he selected.

The execution took 23 minutes from the time he was taken into the death chamber to the time doctors pronounced him dead at 1:33 a.m.

Milton became the fourth Texas prison inmate this year and eighth overall to be executed since the state resumed the death penalty in 1982.

In a two-page typewritten statement released late Monday, Milton said he suffered many sleepless nights for the crime. "I am sorry Mrs. Denton was killed in the struggle over the gun, but I didn't even know Mrs. Denton was dead until several days later," Milton wrote.

He said the woman's husband was as much to blame for his death as he was because the two were struggling for the Like his oral comments, Milton in his written statement asked Allah for forgiveness. But he also criticized his attorneys for the handling of his case, saying he learned more about his case through newspapers or the radio than through his lawyers.

"My final words are to my mother," Milton said in the statement. "I have lived my last years as a Muslim. I die as a Muslim and I would like to be buried as a Muslim. I have no hard feeling to anyone in Milton signed his statement as "Hakeem Saboor Rahim aka Charles Milton."

Earlier Monday he met with family members including two sisters, his ex-wife and four children.

"He would have been all right if he hadn't got involved with dope," said Helen Milton, his former wife, who said he had a $600-aday drug addiction. "He did the best he could, and two weeks before the incident he was talking about how he was clean and going to move back in.

Milton previously was convicted of theft and was given a four-year prison term. Today's death date was his third. Two earlier dates had been stayed. He had been on Death Row more than six years.

Defense attorneys contended the shooting was an accident.

White's gasohol veto fuels controversy

AUSTIN (AP) - A Gov. Mark White veto denied Texans a chance to know what's in the fuel they pump into their cars and trucks, say two Republican lawmakers upset that White blocked a gas pump labeling bill.

The veto killed a measure that would have required labels indicating how much alcohol is in the fuel. Sen. J.E. "Buster" Brown said Monday that gasohol and other alcohol blends can damage cars and invalidate warranties. The Lake Jackson lawmaker said the measure was a "full disclosure" bill. "It's letting the public know what they're buying in their gasoline," he said at a gas station news conference.

The bill, approved 132-1 in the House and 24-4 in the Senate, was opposed by the Texas Farmers Union, whose members raise products used in alcohol fuels.

Rep. Jim Horn, R-Denton said at the Monday news conference that about 40 million gallons of gasohol - which is 10 percent alcohol - are sold in Texas each month. "There is no telling," how much alcohol-blend fuel is sold, he said.

In his veto message, White said the bill is "excessive regulation and creates needless bureacracy without showing compensating benefits to the public.

Walter Tibbitts, a natural resources analyst for White, said Monday there was not "groundswell of consumers seeking labeling of every gas pump in the state of Texas." The Texas Department of Agriculture would have had to spend $600,000 a year to enforce the labeling, he added.

'The case was never made that alcohol blends, per se, are detrimental in any way to automobiles. The industry is increasingly using alcohol as an octane enhancer. You'll see more of this now that the Environmental Protection Agency is serious about phasing out lead," said Tibbits.

"This is the same governor who signed a mandatory seat belt law that says letting the public know what's in the gasoline is an intrusion into their daily lives," said Brown.

'Old gas' rules may change

AFTON, Okla. (AP) - The director of he Federal Energy. Regulatory Commission says pipelines regulated by the federal agency may be required to bill for old gas separately from new gas. Old gas is that mainly produced from wells drilled before 1977. Raymond J. O'Connor told about 300 utility industry officials and regulators from 13 states on Monday that natural gas pipeline companies that buy low-priced old gas may not be able to use it to average out high-priced new gas and undercut competition for new customers.

O'Connor spoke to the Mid-America Regulatory Commissioners at its annual meeting. The commissioners are from

Girl wants buddy to hop bars alone

DEAR ABBY: "Jimmy" and I have been living together for two years, and we get along great. My problem is Jimmy's buddy (I'll call him Leo).

Jimmy and Leo used to go out and make the bars before Jimmy and I started to live together. Then Leo moved out of town, and I was Now Leo is in the picture again. He comes to town nearly every weekend and encourages Jimmy to make the bars with him. Leo has no steady girl - he's a womanizer, and when he and Jimmy go out together, they stay out practically all night. Jimmy never goes near a bar until Leo comes in town. I've t ried to explain to Jimmy that we are a couple, and I don't want to be left sitting at home while he's out barhoping with Leo.

Jimmy says he and Leo were best buddies before he even knew me, and besides, we aren't marwe're just living together. Well, I consider him my husband, and I feel like I'm his wife.

Leo knows how I feel, but he continues to encourage Jimmy to go with him. What should I do about

FEELING THREATENED

DEAR FEELING: Your problem isn't Leo, it's Jimmy. He's doing what he wants to do; no one is forcing him. Don't blame Leo thank him. He's showing you a side of Jimmy that you might not have seen until it was too late.

Gold salt stops arthritis inflammation

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: You referred recently to gold being used for rheumatoid arthritis. I would like to know more about this treatment. Does it simply alleviate pain? Does it stop the degeneration of the bones? - Mrs. E.C.B.

Gold does more than relieve pain; it stops joint inflammation. Just how it does this is still unclear after more than 50 years of use for that purpose.

Gold is one of several heavy metals with long and sometimes curious histories dating back to ancient pharmacology. Silver, bismuth, antimony, and arsenic are others

Typically, such materials found their medical niches for the wrong reasons. Gold got into rheumatoid arthritis treatment because in the early days RA was thought to be an infection and the metal then was used extensively to fight infections. Later, it was learned that there was no arthritis infection to fight, but that the gold worked anyway. So it has remained a popular therapy, not to cure arthritis (there is no cure) but to provide a respite from its effects. The element gold is a solid, as you know, and it becomes medically useful only when it has been altered by changing it chemically into a water-soluble compound, a gold salt. One such salt used in treatment of arthritis is sodium

Many arthritics who hear about gold therapy write to me wondering why it is not being used by their doctors. The fact is that not everyone with arthritis needs gold.

Nor will it work for everyone. But for those who need it, and who can tolerate the therapy, it is an effective means of control in severe cases when other medicines fail.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: When I had my ultrasound study done, the technician told me at one point, "Hold your nose and blow." I was dying to ask why, but by the time I got around to it I was back upstairs, and I don't think I would have anyway. Why was I told to do

One effect of holding the nose and then blowing out air is to expand certain blood vessels, ones the doctor wants to view a bit better.

Man returned to prison; another loses his parole

A Big Spring man waived his right to a state parole hearing and will automatically be returned to the Texas Department of Corrections, District Parole Officer David Harman said Monday afternoon.

Adam Vela, 24, of 402 N.W. 11th had been sentenced to prison in December of 1983 on a theft by appropriation conviction. He was released on parole last August, Harman said.

Vela appeared before Justice of the Peace Lewis Heflin in a peace bond hearing, Monday morning. Harman said that Heflin "ordered Vela locked back up until further notice." The parolee was charged on June 17 with violation of a peace bond and aggravated assault. "I interviewed him regarding a revocation hearing and he waived it. He's returning to the TDC," Harman said Harman said Vela had violated a condition of parole that requires he report to a parole officer. His aggravated assault charge is still pending before a grand jury, Harman said. In other parole hearings, Harman said that Robert Marquez, 39, Marquez pleaded guilty in Lubbock federal court on June 4 to a charge of distributing one ounce of cocaine to a federal undercover agent in Big Spring on Jan. 26, 1985. Harman said "the federal charge is still pending upon a completion of a pre-sentence investigation being done by the San Angelo federal parole office." Marquez is still in jail on federal detainer in Lubbock and it will be up to U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward whether Marquez will serve time in a federal or state prison, Harman said. "He (Marquez) still owes four years and four months. The sentence can run concurrent or stacked. It's up to Judge Woodward, how it will go. We don't have control over it," Harman said. Marquez was sentenced to the TDC in Jan. 1980 for possession of marijuana and felony theft. He was released in Oct. 1980. A parole warrant was issued for his arrest on March 19, Harman said, "because of his federal arrest in January."

County OKs probation office move

The 118th District Adult Probation office is moving from the third floor of the Howard County Courthouse. Commissioners approved a request Monday by District Judge James Gregg that the probation department be allowed to move from its current location to the fifth floor of the Permian Building located on 113 W. 2nd. Commissioner Bill Crooker made the motion. Commissioner

David Barr seconded it. A "nay" vote was cast by Commissioner Louis Brown. Brown told members of the court that he opposed the motion because "everyone has suffered" from lack of space in the courthouse. Gregg said after the motion was approved that he made the request because he is adding another probation officer to his staff.

"We had a discrepancy in our audit," Gregg said about the case overload in the probation office. According to state statute, Gregg said, each probation officer is supposed to handle no more than 100 cases. Gregg said his probation officers are currently handling 150 cases each. An additional officer, bringing staff size to eight, would balance the case load, Gregg said. The three-year lease agreement for 10 offices to house the department in the Permian building will become effective Aug. 1.

County auditor Jackie Olson said the county will pay the $750 per month rent as well as provide money for office equipment such as telephones.

In other court action yesterday: Commissioners approved an $8,475 bid request from Pollard Chevrolet for a new Howard County Sheriff's Department patrol car.

 Commissioners resumed working on the 1985-86 budget. They reviewed expenditures and requests from the sheriff's department, juvenile probation department, Dora Roberts Rehabilitation Center, The Northside Club, the Rape Crisis Center and the game warden's office.

Hard work will pay off

To be successful in anything you must work hard at it. It's no different for members of the Big Spring Steers football

They are making a diligent effort to become one of the top teams in the district, and that's no joke. That effort began in the Spring with a tedious off-season program and some real head-knockin' with the pads on.

Like a lot of athletes, the effort to improve wasn't put on hold until the Fall season, it has continued through the summer. That's right, the Summer. These Steers would rather sweat in the weight room or on the track than do the normal things kids do in the summer like water skiing or swimming.

Go to the local YMCA and you'll see a host of Steers pumping iron. Or head to Blankenship Field and you'll find some working on their conditioning. And it's a good bet you'll find some of the BSHS coaches there with their players, not supervising, just working out with the kids.

It has to be a boost for the players when they have their coaches working side-by-side with them, not shouting instructions, just offering encouragement. It takes a special man to go through all that pain and agony, setting a good example for the players.

And I love the players' attitude. Talk to them about the upcoming season and you'll find out there's no doubt in their minds that they'll be winners. Forget about the 2-8 record last season or the fact that Big Spring is the smallest school in the state's top district. These guys don't care about that. In fact most prefer playing in rugged District 4-5A because they know they are playing against the best.

I'm getting anxious for football season to start because I'm expecting Lig things from the Steers this season. Too much time and effort has been directed over the past year for them to be unsuccessful. After viewing their work habits, the Big Spring Steers have made a convert out of

If the old football adage "games are won in the Spring and Summer, not in the Fall," holds true. The Black and Gold will certainly win their share of games this football season.

Rozier jumps leagues; becomes NFL Oiler

PHILADELPHIA (AP) -Heisman Trophy winner Mike Rozier has bought out his contract with the USFL Jacksonville Bulls and will play for the Houston Oilers of the NFL this fall, according to his agent.

Rozier this week will sign a fouryear contract worth an estimated $2 million, his agent, Philadelphia lawyer Art Wilkinson, said Monday.

National Football League pokesman Dick Maxwell said Rozier's case has been reviewed and that "he is free of any contract obligation.

Rozier, who set rushing records and won the 1983 Heisman Trophy while at the University of Nebraska, was staying with his parents in New Jersey, but did not return calls there. Rozier gained 1,361 yards this year in the United States Football League with Jacksonsville, which tried to keep Rozier with an offer that included $1 million in real estate, according to Wilkinson.

"The down payment was $400,000 to $500,000. The issue was not enough cash," Wilkinson said. He said it was decided to go with the 'safe money" from Houston.

Houston obtained the NFL rights to the former All-American in a supplemental draft in June 1984 of USFL players. Rozier was chosen second, after Steve Young of the Los Angeles Express.

The Oilers and Rozier have been awaiting NFL clearance to sign.

MIKE ROZIER ...moving to NFL

Wilkinson said Rozier "felt glad about the opportunity to play in the USFL this year and prove he could play. He did that. He feels like he can come in and be every bit as good a running back as Earl Campbell was at Houston and he was at Nebraska.
