FIRST NATIONAL BANK

Although it was hot Saturday, it's a pretty sure bet that this reading of 163 degrees on the First National Bank sign in downtown Big Spring was an error. Passing motorists no doubt were shocked when they glanced up at the reading, though.

Speeding is quick way to trouble

By SCOTT FITZGERALD

Be careful if you are one those persons who likes to rev her up and let her fly. Speeding in a motor vehicle on public roadways is a serious offense.

Sgt. Frank Woodall of the Texas Department of Public Safety in Howard County said that a person's driver's license "is subject to suspension" if he receives four moving violations in a 12-month period. The driver's license is also liable for suspension if a person receives seven moving violations in a 24-month period.

Her office in conjunction with the county's other justice of the peace offices handle speeding citations issued by the DPS. According to the latest DPS monthly reports, of the 566 total Howard County DPS arrests in February, 369 were speeding violations. Of the 622 total arrests tabulated for January, 56 percent, or 352, were for speeding, "which is not very high," said Woodall.

What can a ticketed motorist expect? On the bottom half of the ticket that the trooper issues is a date and hearing time to appear before the justice of the peace.

Caller threatens to kill 7 U.S. hostages in Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Arab rage over President Reagan's threats to blockade Beirut Airport brought Syrian calls for retaliatory boycotts Saturday and a warning, purportedly by their extremist Shiite Moslem captors, to kill seven kidnapped Americans.

Commissioners to hear county judge's request

By SCOTT FITZGERALD
Staff Writer

Howard County Judge Milton Kirby will ask county commissioners during their meeting tomorrow if they will allow him permission to negotiate a contract to get more office space for the Texas Department of Public Safety.

"We'll try it this way," Kirby said about his proposal, "we've tried every other way in the world to get space in the courthouse."

The DPS office is currently located on the first floor of the courthouse.

"We're trying to find space in the courthouse to put some people in. We need storage space for the county clerk's election boxes," Kirby said.

Commissioners in their last meeting passed a motion that allowed the 118th judicial adult probation office to relocate to the fifth floor of the Permian Building. Members of the court then discussed the possibility of the DPS relocating to the former adult probation office.

"We looked it over real good. There's not enough space on the third floor," Kirby said.

He said there had been talk about relocating the DPS office in the Permian Building also.

Kirby said when the adult probation office space becomes vacant in August, commissioners would "put somebody in there. I don't know who but I guarantee we'll put somebody in there," Kirby said.

County attorney Tim Yeats and county treasurer Bonnie Franklin will appear before the court to inform commissioners of the practicalities and changes in the Fair Labor Standards Act that regulates minimum wage and overtime pay requirements.

Yeats said municipalities were exempt from the act until recently when the Supreme Court reversed its earlier decision.

"Commissioners need to be aware of changes. They need to set a policy on overtime," Yeats said.

Commissioners will also decide on county employee Gilbert Paredes' request for a raise in his salary. Commissioners were informed of Paredes' salary raise through a letter he wrote to the court. It was read and reviewed at the last meeting.

Paredes wrote in his letter that his "field is programming and programmers earn an average of $25,000 a year."

He currently earns $16,842 annually.

Four-year-old Paco Falcon and his dog Blackie saved a household of people in San Antonio after a firecracker apparently touched off a two alarm blaze. Blackie perished in the flames.

Boy, dog credited with saving family from fire

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A boy and his dog were credited with saving a house full of people Friday after a firecracker apparently touched off a two-alarm blaze that swept through a two-story duplex and sent four firefighters to the hospital.

Four-year-old Paco Falcon, his aunt and his uncle fled to safety after Paco saw the flames and woke his relatives. Meanwhile the frantic barks of Paco's dog Blackie alerted downstairs residents. But Blackie perished in the flames.

"We would have been burned up if it wasn't for Paco," James Perez said of his nephew. Paco also saved his aunt Letty Salazar. "I was walking around to the TV," she told the San Antonio Light. "There was fire on the roof."

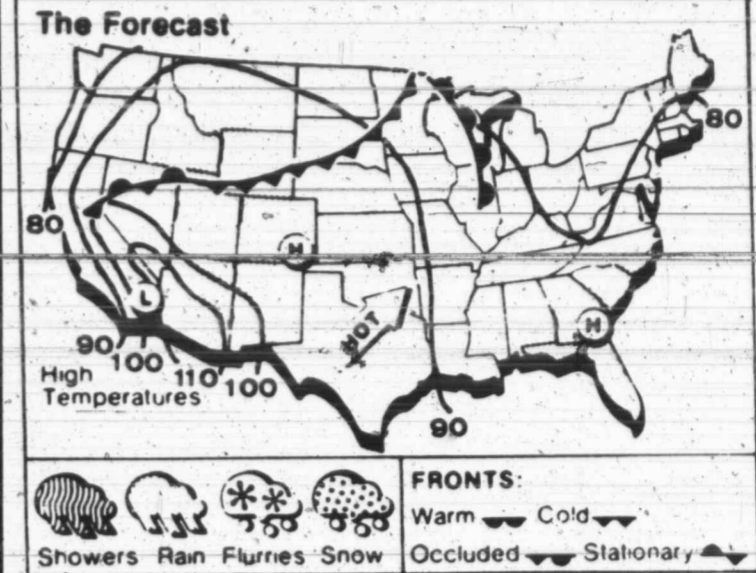

Downstairs resident William Jefferson said he and his wife, Artie James, ran when they heard Blackie. Paco's mother, Dolores, was at work.

Sixty firefighters battled the blaze more than half an hour before bringing it under control at 12:18 p.m.

Four firefighters, suffering from burns and smoke inhalation, were treated and released from Baptist Medical Center.

The fire, which investigators said was sparked by a firecracker, began on the second story.

Weather

Local

West Texas: Generally fair through Monday but widely scattered thunderstorms in south section east of mountains. Isolated thunderstorms south Sunday evening. Lows Sunday night 60s except upper 50s mountains. Highs Sunday and Monday 90s, except to 100 to 105 along the Rio Grande River.

State

Heavy thunderstorms pummeled Southeast Texas Saturday night, spawning at least one tornado that smashed a storage shed near Buna and knocked over some trees, officials said.

Jasper and Hardin counties were hardest by the rains that for the most part left the rest of Texas alone Saturday, the National Weather Service said.

No one was injured when a twister touched down about five miles northwest of Buna shortly before 8 p.m., Jasper County Sheriff's dispatcher Reba Freeman said. The tornado, accompanied by half-inch hail, destroyed a shed and some trees, she said.

Scattered thunderstorms also developed over parts of East and Central Texas, while the rest of the state basked under mostly fair skies and warm temperatures.

Forecast

The forecast calls for fair skies and warm days throughout the early part of the week. Highs today will reach the mid 90s. Winds will be southeasterly, 5 to 10 miles per hour. Tonight, look for lows to drop into the mid 60s.

Police Beat

Items taken from store

Robert Pruitt of 2309 Brent told police someone forcibly entered the A-1 Furniture Store on 2611 W. Highway 90 and stole a safe with contents estimated at $2,956 and other store items estimated at $670.

The burglary occurred sometime Friday night or early Saturday morning, according to a police report.

• Steve Trezise of K-Mart on East-F.M. 790 told Big Spring Police Friday night that someone stole five Kraco AM-FM cassette stereos sometime between April 1 and June 15. Total value of the missing items was listed at $500.

• Donna Fish of 606 Hillside told police Friday night that someone stole a black trash container that belongs to the city from her residence.

• Police arrested four persons on the 1100 block of S. Main and charged each of them with minor in possession of alcoholic beverage. Those arrested include: Nancy Ann Martinez, 18, of Coahoma; Jacob Rios, 18, of 3206 W. 8th; Robert Gonzales, 17, of 1607 Avion and Nancy Ramirez Gonzales, 17, of 1607 Avion.

• Jeff Briscoe of P.O. Box 2610 told police that someone damaged his car fender in the Taco Villa parking lot located at 1501 S. Gregg. Damage was estimated at Troopers generally do not stop a vehicle that measures over the speed limit when first detected. The vehicle's speed is measured briefly over time and distance, rather than "looking" the radar immediately, Woodall said.

Furthermore, it is not a DPS policy, Woodall said, to single out only one vehicle in a moving mass of speeding vehicles on the roadway.

"We're not opposed to stopping two vehicles. In my check rides, there have been several occasions where we have stopped two vehicles," Woodall said.

He said that troopers are given the option of taking enforcement action against speeders, and Woodall said troopers do allow a "tolerance," or speeding slightly above the limit.

"It's not nearly as high as most people think," Woodall said, but naturally declined to specify what that tolerance is.

peace will assess a fine of no more than $200.

"If you feel you are not guilty and plead 'not guilty,' I'd say we'd have a hearing," Long said. A speeding suspect has the right to request a trial before a judge or six-person jury.

If a person is found guilty of speeding in a justice of the peace court, he can appeal the verdict to county court. The person has to post an appeal bond that is double the amount of the fine the justice of the peace has assessed, Long said.

The bond is a surety instrument used by the courts that attempts to insure a speeding suspect's appearance in court, Long said.

Deaths

Paul Morris

Paul Morris, 60, died Friday night in a Big Spring hospital following a lengthy illness.

Graveside services will be held at 10:30 a.m. Monday at Trinity Memorial Park with Rev. Wesley Hutchings officiating. Services are under the direction of Nalley-Pickle and Welch Funeral Home.

He was born Oct. 8, 1924 in Dublin. He moved to Big Spring as a child with his family and grew up here. He was a World War II veteran and served in the U.S. Navy. He worked as an auto body repairman in Big Spring for many years.

He is survived by one daughter, Shirley Oliver of Houston; his mother and stepfather, Esther Howell and Buster Howell of LaPryor; two brothers, Wayne L. Morris of Big Spring and C.L. Morris of Grand Prairie; five nieces and one nephew.

Buck Buchanan

WACO — C.M. (Buck) Buchanan, 69, of Mount Calm died Friday in a Waco hospital.

Services are at 2:30 p.m. Monday at Friendship United Methodist Church near Bartlett. Burial will be in the Friendship Cemetery. Services are under the direction of Wilkerson-Hatch Funeral Home in Waco are in charge of arrangements.

Under current practice, each OPEC country sells its own oil and they compete for shares of the shrinking world oil market. Some countries, such as Saudi Arabia, have seen their incomes fall drastically. Others have fared better.

By pooling their oil and sharing the revenue, OPEC members would have less incentive to cheat on price rules to win more sales. They would be tied to a specific share of the group's income.

However, sources from key OPEC delegations said Saturday they saw little chance of the plan's being adopted. They spoke on condition that they not be identified by name or nationality.

Industry analysts said the plan, if approved, could help OPEC by reducing friction between the

Reagan turns up heat

WASHINGTON — President Reagan, turning up the heat on congressional budget negotiators, accused House Democrats on Saturday of refusing to retreat from a spending plan that he contended would cut huge budget deficits with "gimmicks" and by "raiding the national defense."

In his weekly radio address, the president said: "Unfortunately, as it stands now, the budget proposed by the House is simply not a serious document. At best it could win a prize for creative bookkeeping."

With Congress returning from its Independence Day holiday, Reagan has invited all the budget negotiators — Democrats and Republicans alike — to meet with him at the White House on Wednesday.

The House and the Senate both have approved budgets that would cut the deficit by $56 billion in fiscal 1986, but would achieve the savings through different paths. The key differences involve military spending and a Senate proposal — backed by Reagan — for a one-year freeze in Social Security cost-of-living benefits.

The House plan would impose a flat freeze on military spending at its current level of $29.6 billion. The Senate would allow military spending to rise with the pace of inflation, to an estimated $302.5 billion.

With budget negotiations at an impasse, a bipartisan group of Senate conferees proposed a $59 billion tax increase last week to help cut deficits.

Reagan, vowing anew to veto any tax hike, said, "I have some advice for those who talk about tax hikes: Save your breath."

On time for reunion

WESTFIELD, N.Y. — John Testrake, the pilot of hijacked TWA Flight 847, talked about the good old days Saturday and tried to recognize old schoolfellows at the 40th reunion of his high school class.

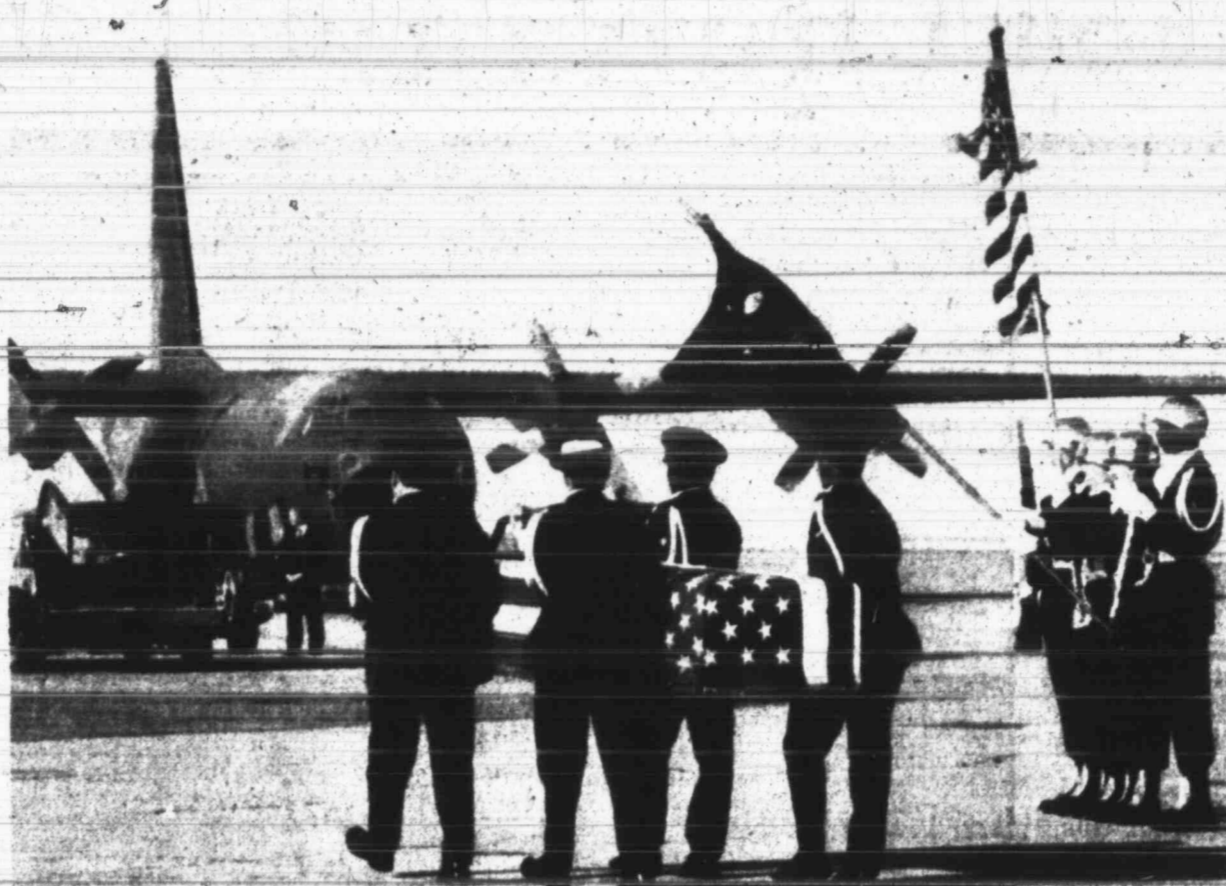

Testrake, who now lives in Richmond, Mo., tried hard to forget the hijack ordeal, saying he wanted to celebrate the reunion with his friends from Ripley Central High School in nearby Ripley, where he grew up.

But television camera crews and photographers trailed him as he greeted old classmates at the Portage Inn here. Ten members of his class of 23 were on hand.

Testrake, 57, said he'll talk about the hijacking at a news conference scheduled Sunday after church with his mother, 80-year-old Mildred Testrake. Later, he will take part in a parade through downtown Ripley, a town of 1,000 people, about 60 miles southwest of Buffalo near the Pennsylvania state line.

Dorothy Luke, the only graduate still living in Ripley, described Testrake as "quiet and studious and more interested in model airplanes than us girls, but we were more interested in him."

Testrake's cousin and classmate June Saunders, of Trenton, Mich., said, "I never doubted for a minute that he'd be here."

Missing in action

Vietnam offers bid to resolve MIA questions

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department is studying a proposal from Vietnam's communist government for high-level talks to resolve questions about American servicemen still listed as missing in action, the department said Saturday.

The proposal, relayed to Secretary of State George P. Shultz through Indonesia's foreign minister, could come up for discussion during the current trip of Secretary of State George Shultz to five countries in the region.

While technical teams from the two countries have met regularly in an effort to determine the fate of the missing, any high-level direct talks would be the first such discussions since the war ended 10 years ago.

The request for direct talks was transmitted from the Vietnamese ambassador in Jakarta to Indonesian Foreign Minister Mokhtar Kusumaatmadja, who relayed it to Shultz.

"Dr. Mokhtar did relay a message to us from Hanoi indicating Hanoi's interest in settling the POW-MIA issue," the department said in a statement read by spokeswoman Kathleen Lang.

"We are studying this proposal. If it indicates a sincere desire on the part of the government of Vietnam to move forward much more rapidly than in the past to resolve this longstanding issue, which has caused so much anguish to the families of the missing men, we would of course welcome that very much."

The department added that it is "extremely grateful to Dr. Mokhtar for his efforts to resolve this issue."

Shultz was in Hong Kong on Saturday for a rest before embarking on a tour that was to include Thailand, Malaysia, Australia, Fiji and Hawaii. The trip was to include discussions following the meeting in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations.

Since the war ended in 1975, 1,375 servicemen have not been accounted for in Vietnam, and another 1,089 U.S. military personnel are listed as prisoners of war or missing in action in other parts of Southeast Asia. Technical teams of five or six people, headed by a U.S. Army lieutenant colonel, now visit Ho Chi Minh City six times a year to discuss the problem.

The latest such meeting ended Saturday. Col. Joe Harvey, chief of the Honolulu, Hawaii-based U.S. Joint Casualty Resolution Center, told reporters at Bangkok Airport that his five-member team had met with Vietnamese technical authorities and "solely discussed the issue of accounting for Americans missing in action in Southeast Asia."

But Harvey declined to reveal details of the trip, including whether the team had toured sites where American warplanes crashed while fighting in Vietnam. There have been recent indications that Vietnam might allow such inspections.

Last week Paul Wolfowitz, assistant secretary of state for East Asian and Pacific affairs, said the United States would prefer to have a continuing team in Vietnam to work on the MIA problem, rather than the periodic meetings.

"We would actually welcome the kind of progress that would require our people not just to meet four times or six times a year, but even be in Vietnam on a continuing basis," Wolfowitz said.

Airliner threatened

BREST, France — A Boeing 747 of the Jordanian airline Alia made an unscheduled landing Saturday at a military airport in Brittany following a bomb threat, a government official reported.

It was the second foreign jetliner to land in Brittany in two days because of bomb threats.

The Brest official, who spoke with the condition that he not be identified, said the Alia jet landed at an airport in Landivisiau following a threatening telephone call received in Frankfurt, West Germany. He would not say who received the call.

He said the 192 passengers and six crew members were evacuated and police searched the jumbo jet for explosives.

On Friday, a British Airways Boeing 737 on a flight from London to Malaga, Spain, made an emergency landing in Dinard after the airline's office received a threatening phone call.

A British security team searched the plane and found nothing, police in Rennes reported.

They said the 74 passengers and crew continued their trip to Spain shortly after midnight in a second plane sent from London and the Boeing 737 flew back to Britain.

Skeleton was Mengele

SAO PAULO, Brazil — A Brazilian forensic team said in its final report Saturday that a skeleton buried in a cemetery near Sao Paulo was most likely that of Nazi war criminal Josef Mengele.

The report filed by the seven-man team concluded that "the sum of the coincidences verified in the anthropological examination indicate that it is highly probable that the exhumed skeleton is that of Josef Mengele."

The 27-page document supported the findings of a 17-man examining team, including American and West German specialists, which said in a preliminary report June 21 that the remains were those of Mengele "within a reasonable scientific certainty."

Five separate folders of forensic evidence, including facial photos of Mengele and pictures of the skeleton, were made available at Sao Paulo's federal police headquarters.

Mineworkers protest

MANSFIELD, England — Nottinghamshire's moderate miners quit the National Union of Mineworkers on Saturday in protest against rule changes which make leftist leader Arthur Scargill president for life.

The move could signal the breakup of the 143-year-old national union, which Scargill led to defeat in a year-long strike that ended last March.

"The men at this conference will not bend their knees at the altar of Arthur Scargill," Nottinghamshire union treasurer David Prendergast told reporters.

Leaders of the 28,000 miners in the central England county, Britain's second biggest coal region which worked throughout the strike, voted 228-20 to leave the national union at a meeting at their headquarters in Mansfield.

International fugitive nabbed in Canada

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Charles Chit Ng, an international fugitive linked to the gruesome discoveries of bodies, weapons and torture videotapes at a remote California cabin, was arrested Saturday in Canada, the FBI said.

Ng was arrested in Calgary, Alberta, after allegedly trying to steal food from a supermarket and shooting a security guard in the hand, according to a statement by Robert S. Gast, the FBI's special agent in San Francisco.

Ng was charged with attempted murder, unlawful use of a firearm and theft in the incident, said Roy Anderson, a Calgary police inspector. Ng was taken before a bail magistrate Saturday, where charges were read to him, and his hearing was adjourned to Monday.

Calgary police said the former Marine and alleged accomplice of survivalist Leonard Lake was identified through fingerprints and identification he was carrying, the FBI said.

Ng, 24, has been sought for a month in connection with the discovery of skeletal remains at a rural cabin in Calaveras County, where Lake lived. The pair have been linked to 22 missing or dead people, and the remains of at least nine bodies have been found at the cabin along with several bags of bones.

On Sunday, investigators from San Francisco, Calaveras County and the FBI will travel to Calgary to interview Ng, according to the FBI statement.

After the guard was shot, the statement said, Ng was subdued by another security guard until police arrived.

Lake swallowed a fatal poison pill while in police custody on June

2 after being arrested during a shoplifting incident at a hardware store. Witnesses said a man fitting Ng's description was with Lake, but fled before police arrived.

Lake went into a coma and died four days later. The next day, police found the first human remains buried near the cabin.

Ng, a native of Hong Kong who lived in San Francisco, has been the subject of a manhunt since. Authorities say he is seen on at least one of several videotapes that depict sexual torture of women and were seized at the cabin.

Investigators find evidence of arson

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Investigators found evidence of arson at the site of a 81,000-acre demon fire Saturday and offered a reward for the culprit who set the blaze, the largest of a rash of fires that have charred 200,000 acres in nine Western states.

The fire, in Los Padres National Forest, has menaced the town of Ojai since Tuesday — devouring 19 homes, 37 outbuildings and $3 million worth of orchards.

Meanwhile, cool, damp weather that gave firefighters a chance to cut firebreaks around stubborn forest and brush fires also kept crews from setting backfires to stop the blaze.

Investigators for the U.S. Forest Service who gathered personnel from the Northeast to battle the rash of Western blazes said they found evidence of arson at the site of the Ojai fire but spokesman Peter Libby declined to describe it.

It is the third destructive

Southern California brushfire of last week declared to be the work of an arsonist. Libby said the Forest Service was offering a $5,000 reward for information leading to the conviction of the arsonist. The fire was almost half contained, he said.

Low fog overnight and Saturday, coupled with a drop in wind and temperature, helped California firefighters contain two big blazes, while crews in Washington contained an 1,800-acre blaze on the Colville Indian Reservation and a 120-acre fire on Devil's Ridge west of Yakima.

"It's harder to keep the fires burning where we want them to burn, because we have to wait for the fuels to dry up. The fog has also hampered our attempts to get aerial views," said Forest Service spokesman Gil Levesque.

Maiming FOI act would hide truth

Without the Freedom of Information Act, Americans might never have learned about some of the U.S. government's greatest mistakes.

The 19-year-old law, which guarantees citizen access to most government documents, has helped reporters and scholars uncover scores of scandals — from congressional abuse of travel funds to the My Lai massacre. For the fifth year in a row, the Reagan administration and Sen. Orrin Hatch are pressing for revisions that would make such discoveries more difficult. Congress should resist their plan.

The Reagan-Hatch proposals, soon to be considered by the Senate Judiciary Committee, would savage virtually every provision of the law. Among other changes it would impose high fees and long waits on citizens who ask for documents, declare more FBI and CIA records off-limits and allow businesses to squelch disclosure of previously public information about them.

Although he offers no evidence, Hatch says the bill is necessary to protect national security, law-enforcement investigations and business trade secrets. He argues that the measure would relieve the burden on government agencies that now must spend time and money searching files in response to FOIA requests.

Compounding the errors, the bill's language is broader than Hatch's aims require. By granting blanket exemptions to many kinds of information, the measure could keep out of public reach useful information that its disclosure in no way jeopardizes national security.

By imposing delays and higher fees, it could suppress important public data. And by removing many law-enforcement and corporate records from scrutiny, it could eliminate incentives from both government agencies and private businesses to serve the public interest. The bill might ultimately be used to conceal information that government officials find embarrassing.

The bill's flaws, while considerable, should not be the central issue when lawmakers take up Hatch's plan. Instead, they should ask a single question: What serious problem is the measure meant to correct? So far, the evidence shows that the plan would deprive Americans of important information without making the country safer.

Unless Congress can uncover impressive reasons for revision, it should vote to keep the FOIA intact.

A television snob draws the line

EDITOR'S NOTE: Stephen Chapman is on vacation.

BY DONALD KAUL

I've always been a television snob, I admit it. I've taken great delight in bragging about how little I watched TV. There was no television when I was a kid, and by the time it arrived in our neighborhood on the near-northwest side of Detroit I had gone away to college, so I never got the habit. Even as a young adult I did not succumb to the machine. Our eldest children were almost in school before we got a set, a black-and-white model with a small screen. We only used it to watch Playhouse 90 and Edward R. Murrow. And old movies. And baseball. Nothing else. Maybe a little football and basketball. Julia Childs. Hardly anything at all.

So when VCRs — video cassette recorders, for those of you who have been in solitary confinement for the past few years — showed up, it was just another thing not to get. I refused to buy one or even to consider it.

"But it gives you more control over your life," friends would say. "You don't have to stay home to watch a particular program anymore; you can record it and watch it at your leisure."

"I never stay home to watch a particular program," I'd tell them. "To state the obvious, there is hardly anything worth watching on TV, ever. Even the best of it, Masterpiece Theater for example, is little more than high-class junk. You're always better off reading a book or taking a walk or cleaning the basement."

"What about television news?" they would say. "Wouldn't it be nice if you could tape that?"

At this point I would give my imitation of Herbert Marshall addressing a slow learners' class at a British boys school. "Television news? Isn't that an oxymoron, a mating of opposites for ironic effect? It used to be aimed at 12-year-old mentalities; it is now aimed by them. I except MacNeil/Lehrer, of course, which is really a televised radio show and nothing I need to tape."

Pretty smug talk, admittedly, but I meant it. I was prepared to make my stand for civilization on the VCR front. You're either a snob or you're not.

Then my daughter came home from college for the summer.

"You've got to get a VCR," she said.

"Why? Isn't that wretched music you listen to doing enough damage to your brain?"

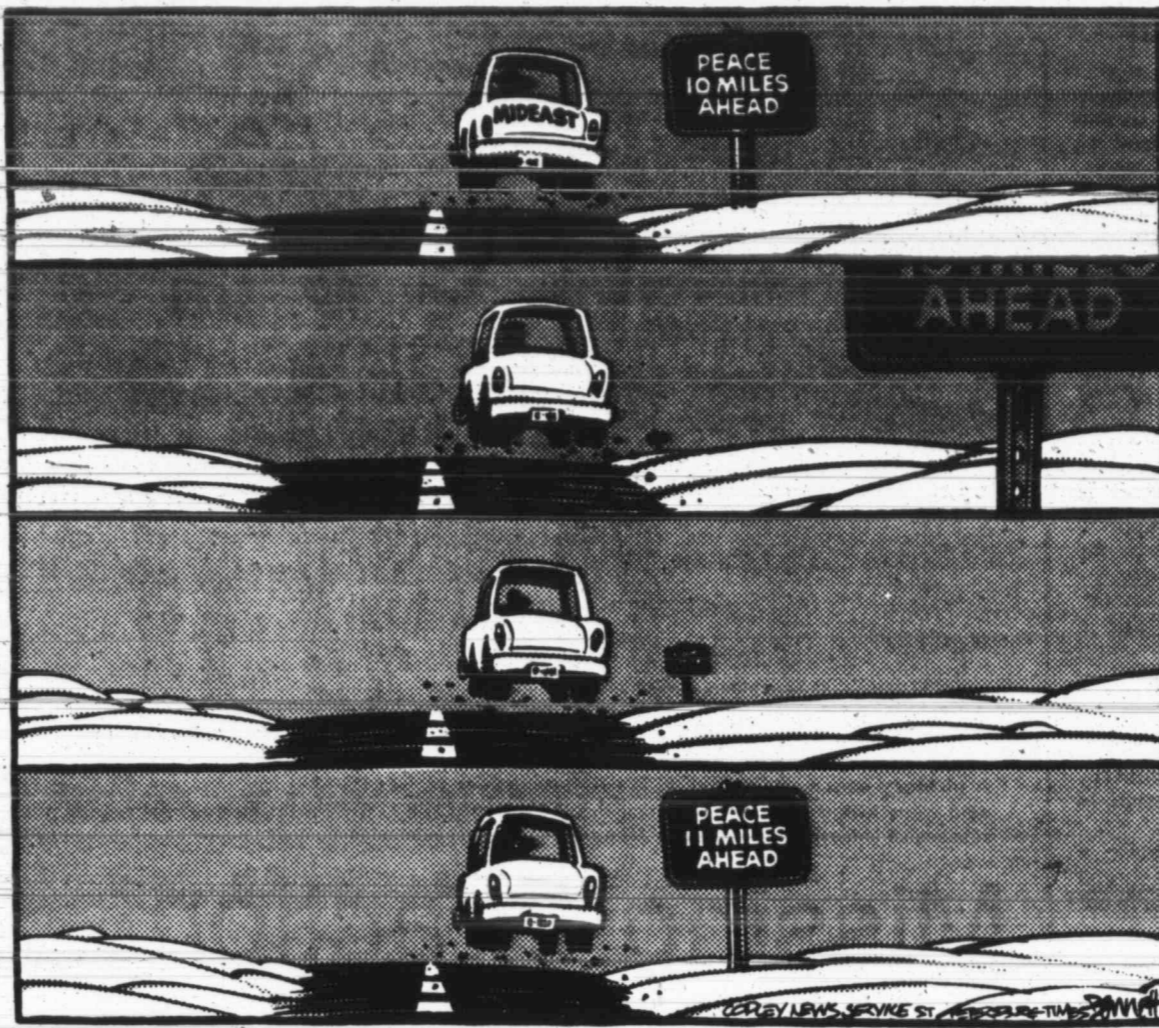

"You don't understand," she said. "I have quit smoking. I have quit drinking. I am trying to save money for school. There is no way to do all of those things without being able to rent movies and watch them at home on a VCR."

"Are you trying to tell me that the only alternative to smoking, drinking and staying out late at night is a VCR?"

"No. I could do drugs."

I went out and bought the VCR. It ruined my life, what's left of it. You can't just go out and buy a VCR, you know. First there are decisions to be made. Do you want a VHS or a Beta model? Some say the Beta has better sound and the VHS the better picture. Some say the reverse is true. Do you want a cable-ready machine? Remote control? How about hi-fi stereo?

But I'm never going to get cable, you can bet on that. You have to draw the line somewhere. As I said, you're either a snob or you're not.

Life at 'Club Fed'

The nickname "Club Fed" given the Federal Prison Camp at Big Spring is a play on the name of the luxury travel accommodations "Club Med." It stems from the atypical environment at this minimum security prison: dormitory-style living; an unoppressive atmosphere; ample recreational opportunities and, most obvious to the visitor, no fences.

I think the prison atmosphere and surroundings are worthy of pride — pride that the United States can embrace humane detention of some of its criminals, and pride that this city has the good fortune to be a neighbor to a prison camp that is both an economic boost and a friend of the community.

I don't think "Club Fed" is spoken in scorn or contempt as much as it is a back-handed compliment.

Prisons shouldn't be a place people want to get into. They shouldn't offer so many attractions that in weighing the merits of life inside and out people would seek to earn a criminal record just so they could take life easy. But short of that counterproductive predicament, prisons should be two things. They should be humane. And they should where possible fit the crime.

You wouldn't want to house an ax murderer in a fenceless "Club Fed." But are you willing to incarcerate a drug dealer — perhaps indirectly responsible for the ruination of hundreds of lives — in those surroundings? I think you are. Because the ax murderer might take a walk one night and extend his crime spree. The drug dealer is not likely to do so.

It's a matter of law and the court system to decide length of punishment for a given crime. Just as there are varying degrees of punishment, it makes sense that various offenses merit varying types of incarceration.

It doesn't cost taxpayers any more to treat prisoners humanely than it does to treat them like animals. Why not opt for humane treatment?

The motivation to behave at the prison camp here is simple. If a prisoner disobeys the rules, he loses the privilege of serving his term at a nice prison.

What's life like at "Club Fed"? It's central air and heat. It's weekend visits with relatives (no conjugal visits, however). It's the possibility of furlough for short periods of time. It's basketball, volleyball and handball.

It's also assignment to a work detail between 5:30 a.m. and 4 p.m. It's a headcount five times a day. It's prison. It's the loss of basic freedom.

Make no mistake. On the outside looking in it may seem like a Mediterranean vacation. On the inside looking out, it might as well be iron bars and barbed wire.

Party futures ride on election

AUSTIN — Now that the preliminaries are out of the way, Edd Hargett and Jim Chapman can concentrate on determining the futures of the Republican and Democratic parties in Texas.

Hargett and Chapman are the survivors of a confusing, multi-candidate race for the vacant Congressional District 1 seat in Northeast Texas. They face each other in a runoff on Aug. 3.

To say the outcome will determine the future of our two major parties may be a bit of an exaggeration, but political leaders on both sides are acting like that is the case.

This race is the only political test around this year, so it takes on special significance as a portent of the important 1986 elections. The victorious party will have a momentum and a morale advantage for next year.

Hargett, a political novice and former quarterback, is a symbol to the Republicans of the continuing wave of 1984 GOP successes. He is the chosen candidate of those intent on making Texas a truly two-party state.

Chapman, a former Hopkins County district attorney and quintessential East Texas Democrat, represents his party's hopes for turning that Reagan wave into a GOP cesspool in a non-presidential election year.

Their contest is interesting in particular because it symbolizes the serious fight for the hearts, minds, dollars and votes of Texas conservatives.

For years, Texas liberals suffered defeats in the Democratic primaries and dreamed of someday winning control of the party. Conservative Democrats were Republicans at heart, they reasoned, and ought to become so in name, too.

In some ways, that dream has come true in recent years. Thousands of conservative Democrats have switched party loyalties.

No marriage, no happiness

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: My parents have been upset with me ever since I moved in with my boyfriend. I told them they shouldn't make such a big deal over it — people do it all the time — but they don't see it that way. What can I do to make them accept me and my desire to live my own life? — A.G.

DEAR A.G.: Have you ever asked yourself — or your parents — exactly why they are upset with you? They may have various reasons — embarrassment with their friends, for example — but I suspect the deepest reason is that they love you and know you are only creating trouble and unhappiness for yourself.

And I completely agree with them, for what you are doing is wrong in God's eyes and will eventually hurt you. The Bible warns, "Do not be deceived: God cannot be mocked. A man reaps what he sows. The one who sows to please his sinful nature, from that nature will reap destruction" (Galatians 6:7-8). We can never know exactly how it will happen, but when we break God's laws — as you are doing — it eventually catches up with us. In your kind of relationship, for example, there is no real, lasting commitment, as there is in marriage, and some day you may wake up and find yourself abandoned. You will never know the joy and security of a loving relationship outside a vow of marriage.

You are concerned about your relationship with your parents, and that is important. But more than that, you should be concerned about your relationship with God. God loves you, and you will only find lasting joy and peace in life through following Christ. He wants to forgive you of your sins, and He wants to guide you and make you into the person you ought to be. Don't follow the path others are taking, for "wide is the gate and broad is the road that leads to destruction, and many enter through it" (Matthew 7:13).

Lance resigns Georgia Democratic Party post

ATLANTA (AP) — Georgia Democratic chairman Bert Lance has resigned his party post, telling the executive committee that he did not want the party to become involved in his fight over allegations of unsound banking practices.

"I leave the chairmanship because I desire to regain my status as a private citizen and not because I have done anything improper," said Lance, who has come under federal investigation as chairman of the Calhoun First National Bank.

"I have worked hard over the past many years as a public figure and the time has come when I am ready to let others do the job," he said in a letter to the party's executive committee dated Wednesday.

"Also, if I have to fight the OCC (Office of the Comptroller of the Currency) over the coming months, to stop their abuse and harassment, then that should be my fight and not the party's," he said.

A letter of resignation was on its way to Gov. Joe Frank Harris, the titular head of the state party. Harris had not received the letter as of Saturday, although he was aware that it was coming, said Barbara Morgan, the governor's press secretary. She said he would have no comment on Lance's resignation until he had received the letter.

Calls to Lance's Calhoun home and office were unanswered.

Lance resigned in 1977 as director of the U.S. Office of Management and Budget because of congressional investigations into allegations he mishandled bank funds.

Allegations of illegal check kiting and other "unsound banking practices" were contained in a federal bank examiner's report sent to Calhoun First directors in May.

The contents of the report on the north Georgia bank were revealed by The Atlanta Constitution in a story published June 28. Lance disputed the allegations in the report and tried to gain a court order to prevent the newspaper from publishing the story.

The report by National Bank Examiner Lloyd R. Elledge and a cover letter from Robert R. Klinzing, Southeastern district administrator for the Comptroller of Currency, both stated that Lance had engaged in "numerous violations of law" in his administration of Calhoun First.

Lance was handpicked by Harris to chair the party following Harris' election as governor in 1982.

After the bank examiner's report was made public last week, several party leaders called for Lance's resignation.

Although Harris did not say publicly that he wanted Lance to quit, the governor said, "I am deeply distressed about the im-lications of what I have read because I feel so strongly that a person who holds the public trust — or one who is in the public eye, as Bert is — must avoid even the appearance of impropriety."

The Comptroller of the Currency had been investigating the Calhoun First National Bank since October. The Atlanta Constitution, in its story last week, said the allegations contained in the report were not necessarily a final statement of findings.

In Klinzing's letter to the Calhoun First directors, he said his office and the Securities and Exchange Commission are considering action, including civil penalties against the board.

Man jailed after threatening to crash stolen plane

WHEELING Ill. (AP) — A man "in the middle of a divorce" was held on multiple charges Saturday after allegedly threatening to crash a stolen airplane into the restaurant where his wife worked so she could see him kill himself.

Frank Moore, 36, of Chicago was jailed in lieu of $50,000 bond after making a three-hour flight Friday before surrendering, police said.

Police said they believed the prospect of never seeing his young son again prompted Moore to surrender.

John Ostrowski, director of airport services at Palwaukee Airport in Wheeling, about 20 miles northwest of Chicago, said Moore left the suburban airstrip at about 10:15 a.m.

Moore, a licensed pilot, radioed the Palwaukee tower shortly after taking to the air in the Cessna 150, Ostrowski said. Moore told air controllers he "was in the middle of a divorce," Ostrowski said, and planned to fly to the restaurant where his wife worked "so (she) could see him kill himself."

Two police officers trained in negotiation rushed to the tower, along with Moore's wife, Jackie, said Police Lt. Raymond Olson.

Mrs. Moore tried to talk her husband down in a conversation with him by two-way radio, saying, "Frank we could solve our problems. Why don't you come down so we could talk?"

Moore responded from the airplane: "That's what I asked you to do this morning. You said no. ... Why should I?"

Mrs. Moore then went to a runway with Wheeling Police Sgt. Stephen Weber, who tried to coax Moore into surrendering while talking to him on a handheld radio.

Weber said, "We were talking about hugging Michael and never being able to hug Michael ever again."

"He wanted to hug Michael again," said Weber, who has received FBI training as a hostage negotiator. Michael, 13, was identified as Moore's son by a previous marriage.

Moore touched down once on the runway at Palwaukee and later landed for nine minutes before taking off for a final 34-minute flight. He then landed and surrendered to authorities.

Moore, who works for a plumbing contractor, was charged with felony theft, criminal trespass, reckless conduct and disorderly conduct, Olson said.

He was being held in the Wheeling police lockup, said Cook County sheriff's police, and will appear in court for a preliminary hearing Wednesday.

Moore surrendered about 1:25 p.m. Officials had estimated he had enough fuel to stay in the air until 2 p.m.

Shaw named to head committee

AUSTIN — State Rep. Larry Don Shaw, D-Big Spring, has been appointed to the Natural Resources and Environment Committee of the State and Federal Assembly of the National Conference of State Legislatures for 1985-86.

Shaw and Rep. Rick Perry, D-Haskell, were appointed by House Speaker Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth.

Shaw, vice chairman of the House Natural Resources Committee of the 69th Legislature, will serve as a member of the committee, while Perry will serve as an alternate member.

The Assembly's 10 standing committees convene three or four times a year to meet with federal officials and develop recommendations.

The committee Shaw is appointed to deals with the development of national environmental policies and their impact on state economies and the government. This year, the committee's priorities are water resources, hazardous waste and Superfund.

Martin County commissioners to name judges

Martin County commissioners will appoint 12 judges to man election boxes on Sept. 21 for voters who will decide whether the county should establish its own water district.

The Texas Legislature recently passed House Bill No. 2382 that asked for the creation and financing of the Martin County Underground Water District.

Martin County Judge Robert Deavenport said the thrust of the bill was to create a water district within the county that would establish measures to control pollution of underground water resources.

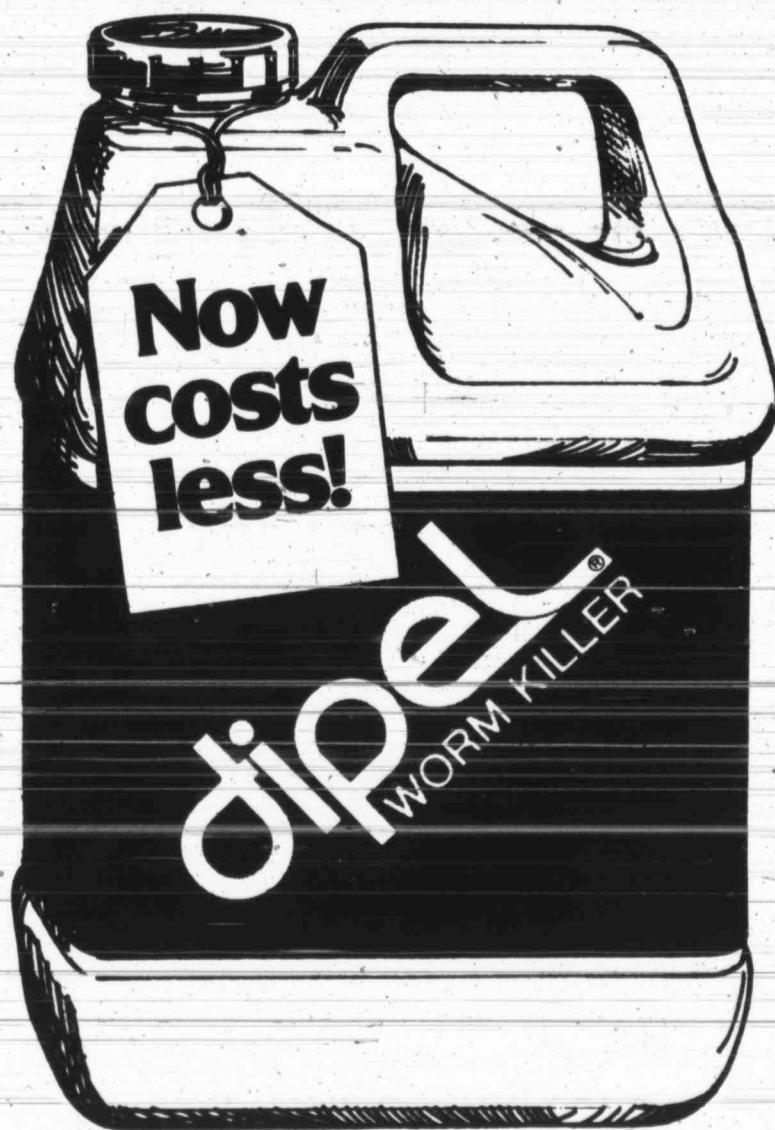

In other action, county commissioners will discuss replacing the county attorney's position recently resigned by Robert Morris. Morris is now Howard County's assistant district attorney.

Deavenport said the court had advertised the vacancy at the University of Texas and University of Texas Tech law schools and contacted other county and district attorney's offices throughout the state.

"I would hope by September 1, we can fill the county attorney's position," Deavenport said.

Commissioners will also discuss retaining a certified public accountant to review the county's 1984-85 budget. Deavenport said the county's budget year runs concurrent with the calendar year.

Cotton growers: save bucks and benefical.

TEST RESULTS ARE IN:

In an overwhelming majority of tests conducted in the Cotton Belt, in which Dipel biological insecticide was applied before conventional insecticides became necessary, increased yields and greater profits resulted.

In 5 of the Texas tests, fields were sprayed twice and adjacent check fields remained untreated until it became necessary to go to a conventional schedule. Dipel treated fields yielded more cotton and greater profits than the fields that received only conventional treatment.

It makes sense because low cost Dipel gets to early cotton worms without harming helpful beneficials. Thus, applications of harsher chemicals can be delayed and reduced.

Dipel is a natural biological worm killer. One bite of treated foliage and worms stop feeding almost immediately and then die within a few days. Dipel has not shown worm resistance build-up, won't affect boll maturity, and is nonphytotoxic to cotton foliage. It's easy to use. In addition, Dipel has not shown harmful effects on man and his environment.

Dipel 4L and Cotton Seed Oil. The only microbial cotton insecticide that is compatible with cotton seed oil. Mix one pint Dipel 4L to one pint cotton seed oil and apply at one quart per acre total volume of spray.

Boston exhibit is devoted to history of retarded

BOSTON (AP) — For more than 100 years, they were shunned as "imbeciles and idiots" and consigned to manual labor in institutions. Society blamed their slow wit on moral evil and forbade them to marry and bear children.

But now, the mentally retarded can celebrate their struggles to overcome discrimination and misunderstanding in the country's first exhibit devoted to their history.

"This is about a victory of getting accepted into society," said Diane Barry, a spokeswoman for the Walter E. Fernald State School for the mentally retarded, which put together the exhibit at the Prudential Center. "They are not morons and imbeciles. They were only a silent, neglected minority."

"We wanted to show that retarded people can bring joy into other people's lives, that they have skills and abilities, that they can be good friends and neighbors."

The display of 21 photographs and drawings, tracing the treatment of the retarded from 1840 to the present, is designed for the retarded and for those who are not. Commentary printed in large red letters is for retarded readers, with black print for others.

The show ends with the Declaration of the General and Specific Rights of the Mentally Retarded, issued by the United Nations General Assembly in 1971, and these words in red: "You have now seen when happened to mentally retarded people for the last 100 years. What happens tomorrow and the next day is up to you and your friends."

Marge Sullivan, 46, a mildly retarded woman who has lived at Fernald since she was 15, recently saw the exhibit and said she was touched that someone cared enough to present her story.

"I think everybody should see it and understand not to criticize other people and not to call them names," she said. "I've been called every name in the book because I am handicapped. They should know what I am feeling like."

Barry said Fernald, founded in 1848 and the state's largest institution for the retarded with 900 residents, decided to put on the exhibit after an employee found a box of old photographs in the school's basement. Fernald researchers turned up no other exhibit devoted to the mentally retarded in this country, she said.

The photographs showed retarded men and women at Fernald before the turn of the century, all wearing the same clothes, sleeping 30 to a room, tending fields on their hands and knees, and eating in rooms that looked like prison mess halls.

"Everyone seemed to forget that the retarded liked to learn and play," the red text says.

"They had no privacy, no sense of individuality, no training," said Barry. "And here we are talking about 3 percent of our population, and studies show that 75 percent of mentally retarded people are only mildly retarded."

In the 1960s, advocates for the retarded began lobbying for laws to protect them and for changes in the state systems that housed and trained them.

The exhibit includes several photographs from the 1840s and 1850s, before doctors began to recommend institutionalization and the retarded lived at home, apparently with comfort and love.

Inmates hope program will keep youngsters out of jail

WOODBRIDGE, N.J. (AP) — About 400 maximum-security inmates pumped iron and ran laps Saturday to raise funds for a program they hope will keep youngsters from ending up behind bars.

The convicts at Rahway State Prison fought stiff heat in a "Run-a-Thon" for the Big Brothers and Big Sisters of Middlesex County Inc., a group that provides adult companions for children with single parents or no parents.

Some runners logged as much as 26 miles around the exercise yard's track course.

The charity group hoped to raise as much as $10,000 from the event, said A. Roy Kiskley Jr., president of the organization's board of directors.

"If I can keep a kid from coming through here ... I like that," said inmate Emmett Jones. "Anything we can come up with to do for a kid, we do it."

Jones, who took pictures of his fellow inmates, said he planned to develop and print the pictures himself, applying skills he had learned in jail.

He is a member of the prison's "Lifers" program, a group of convicts serving life sentences. They use scare tactics to counsel juvenile offenders. The program was the subject of a nationally televised documentary, "Scared Straight."

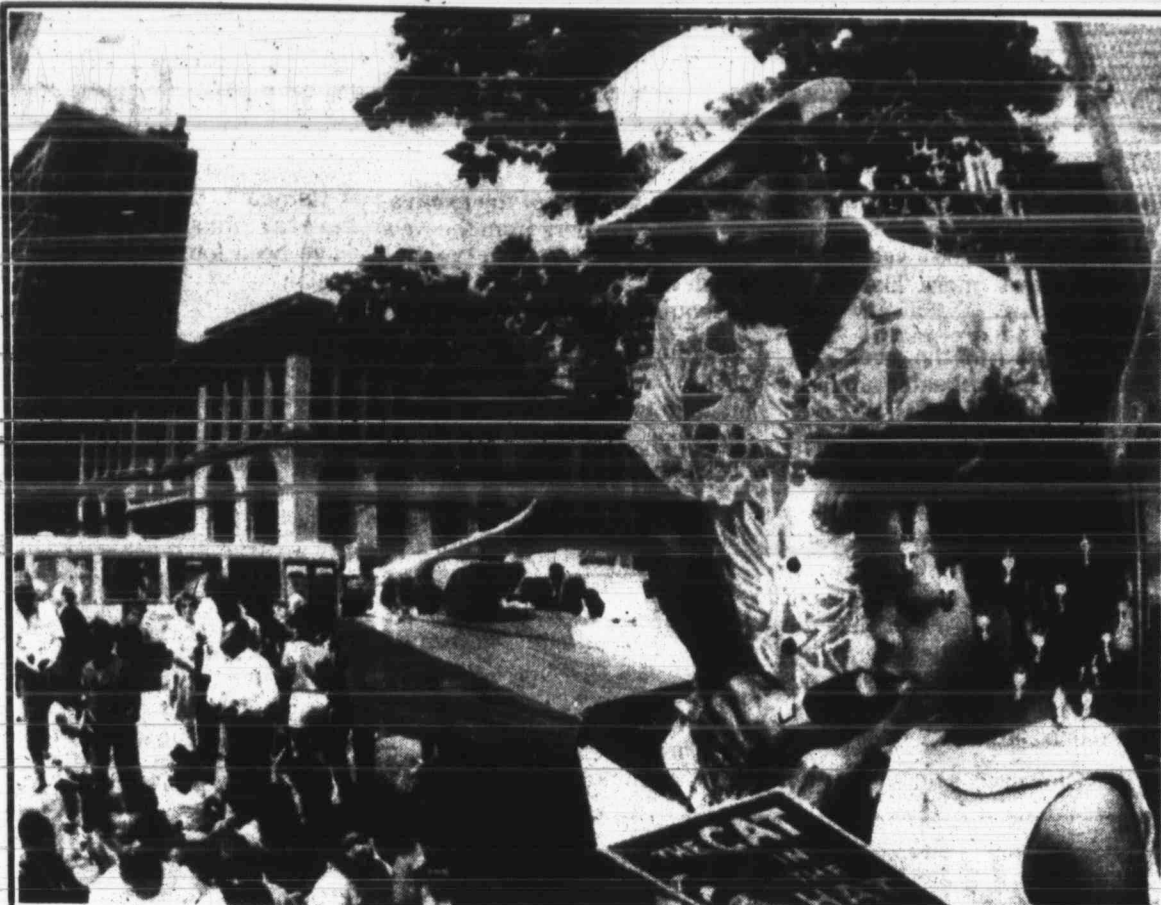

Members of the jail's Prisoner Representative Committee said they agreed to the fund-raiser to help keep children from following in their footsteps.

"Had we had a big brother or a big sister, maybe some of us wouldn't have ended up where we are today," said Charles Allen, the committee chairman.

"All for kids," he said, after running more than 14 miles. "It was nothing for us."

Prison Superintendent John J. Rafferty said he was pleased to host the program, which he said ran smoothly.

As the competitors joked and jostled each other, shotgun-toting guards patrolled nearby walls. Visitors were frisked and marked with an invisible ink tattoo they had to show to get out.

'Read-a-thon' draws attention to national illiteracy problem

CHICAGO (AP) — A priest, an actor, an educator and the founder of a cookie company took turns reading aloud at an open-air podium Saturday to end an all-night "read-a-thon" drawing attention to the problem of illiteracy.

"We live in a society where nobody reads to anybody anymore," said Marva Collins, an educator known for the West Side Preparatory School she established to give ghetto children a better education.

"Just sitting and reading on the West Side, you can gather a whole yard full of children," said Mrs. Collins, whose selections Saturday were poetry by Emily Dickinson and a children's story called "The Velveteen Rabbit."

Only a few passers-by drew close to listen over the blare of traffic beside the downtown park where the event was held.

"I don't think it was an event to get a lot of people to sit around and listen, but it was to raise the issue of reading," said the Rev. Nelson Belizario, a Roman Catholic priest and a student of ethics at Chicago Theological Seminary. He read from a biography of social activist Dorothy Day.

"It's perhaps a pity that people don't fill this park," said Wally Amos, national spokesman for the Literary Volunteers of America, one of the groups sponsoring the event. "But that didn't stop the readers. ... That's the thing about reading — you don't read for other people, you read for yourself."

Street people read during much of the night, said Amos, 49, founder and chairman of the Los Angeles-based Famous Amos Chocolate Chip Cookie Corp. He has represented Literary Volunteers since 1979.

"We had a guy who read from a paper ... what some might call radical views — but that's freedom of speech," Amos said.

Stage actor David Katz, 49, of Chicago, said he chose to read works by black author James Baldwin because of having spent time in Harlem in New York City, about which Baldwin wrote, and in the black ghetto in Syracuse, N.Y.

The read-a-thon helped kick off the annual conference of the American Library Association.

Literacy Volunteers of America has about 20,000 volunteers teaching more than 20,000 adults who need help with basic reading skills, said John Rosica, a board member. There are an estimated 27 million Americans who read below a fifth-grade level.

Farmers blame Union Carbide for tainted watermelon crop

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Farmers blamed Union Carbide Corp. on Saturday for tainted watermelons that have sickened at least 108 people, saying instructions for the company's pesticide aldicarb claimed the product would leave the soil after 100 days.

The farmers said they used the product four years ago while growing cotton in four Kern County fields named by state health officials Saturday as the source of the watermelons blamed for the outbreak.

William Ihle, spokesman for the state Department of Health Services, said Saturday that 70 California cases of illness were linked to aldicarb poisoning, an increase of 36 cases from Friday. Another 38 cases were confirmed Friday from Oregon, Washington, Alaska and British Columbia.

He said as many as 200 additional cases in 23 California counties were under investigation Saturday.

"No one had any idea that the chemical would stay in the soil this long," said watermelon grower Don Icardo, who owns one of the four fields identified as tainted with aldicarb, a toxic pesticide.

State authorities in Alaska, Oregon, Washington, and California have ordered the recall of thousands of melons, with voluntary recalls under way in British Columbia and Utah. Aldicarb tests on watermelon samples in Washington and British Columbia proved positive, officials said.

Icardo said he and other growers used aldicarb, sold exclusively under the brand name Temik by Union Carbide, for growing cotton four years ago.

They used the pesticide under instructions from the product label, which says the chemical leaves the soil after 100 days, he said.

"I used Temik five years ago on a corner of land — a few acres — that was at that time used for cotton," said R.M. Mettler, whose melons were also identified as tainted with the pesticide. "Now it is used for watermelons, and that's where the tests came out positive."

Mary Anne Ford, spokeswoman for Union Carbide's agricultural products division in North Carolina, accused the California melon growers of a "flagrant misapplication of this product."

Soil and laboratory tests conducted in California show the pesticide does degrade within 100 days after application to cotton, and it is "highly, highly unlikely" it would still be in the soil four years later, she said Saturday.

"The reason there is no prohibition of a rotating crop ... is that it (the study) doesn't support such a need," she said.

"Every indication we have to date is that this has been a violation of the product's registration, which is clearly prohibited," Ms. Ford added.

Ihle, meanwhile, said "legal action would be taken if somebody did something wrong."

The 2,400-member Western Growers Association warned earlier that delays in locating the source of the contamination could mean disaster for California's $25 million-a-year watermelon industry.

Nautilus to join national museum

GROTON, Conn. (AP) — The world's first nuclear-powered submarine, the Nautilus, was towed home without its pioneering atomic engines Saturday to become part of a national museum near the place where it was built.

Welcome-home festivities were open to thousands of spectators on both sides of the Thames River, the location of the U.S. Naval Submarine Base and the Electric Boat shipyard in Groton.

About 300 small boats decked out in signal flags and blowing fog horns welcomed the Nautilus and its two tugboats into the Thames, and it was preceded by the tall ship Providence, a replica of the first Navy ship commanded by Revolutionary War hero John Paul Jones.

A Navy band on a pier at the submarine base struck up the John Philip Sousa march "Washington Post" as the Nautilus neared the end of its last voyage, and cannons were fired from the deck of the Providence.

Rear Adm. J.D. Williams, commander of the Navy's Sub Group Two, told a large crowd that when the Nautilus was first christened it "represented a triumph of American technology."

"Today that picture has changed some," Williams said. "We no longer hold a clear lead" in nuclear warfare because of advances by the Soviet Union.

"We cannot afford to compromise the present unless we mortgage the future," he said. "The Nautilus is more than just a tourist attraction. She serves as a reminder of our future."

The vessel will be prepared for a berth as the centerpiece of an $8 million museum and library, opening in April 1986, dedicated to the history and development of submarines. It also returns home as Connecticut's official state ship.

The Nautilus left the Mare Island Naval Shipyard near San Francisco under tow in May, lacking a crew and power, for the 6,000-mile voyage to Groton via the Panama Canal.

The Nautilus was christened here on a chilly Jan. 21, 1954, by first lady Mamie Eisenhower, the first president's wife to christen a submarine.

Electric Boat, a subsidiary of General Dynamics Corp. of St. Louis, built the Nautilus for $63 million, compared to the more than $1 billion spent on today's top-of-the-line Trident submarines, which are nearly twice as big and carry missiles.

With its revolutionary atomic fission propulsion system built by Westinghouse Electric Corp., the Nautilus' first cruise in 1955 broke records for distance traveled, time submerged and speed.

Unlike conventional ships that require frequent refills of fuel oil, the Nautilus didn't need its first refueling of radioactive uranium until February 1957, when it returned to Groton after traveling 62,562 miles.

At the time, President Dwight D. Eisenhower hailed the performance of the "gallant ship which has paced a revolution in naval tactics and construction."

In 1958, the 319-foot sub became the first ocean-going vessel to reach the North Pole during a 1,830-mile voyage beneath the Arctic ice.

After its decommissioning in 1980, after sailing 500,000 miles in 25 years, the Nautilus had been destined for a final resting spot first at the Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md., then at the Washington Navy Yard.

JoAnne Echevarria Myers, standing, and Jeanne Seetoo show off some tacky stuff which was displayed this weekend at the "Ye Olde Cape May Spec-Tack-ular."

Quiet town turns tacky for festival

CAPE MAY, N.J. (AP) — This quaint community of Victorian-style homes is turning tacky, inviting people to put on their polyester leisure suits and come to see paintings on velvet and poodle salt-and-pepper shakers in the first Ye Olde Cape May Spec-tack-ular.

"The only rule we have is don't let taste creep in," Joanne Myers, an artist and inn keeper, said of this weekend's event.

A group of women combed flea markets and garage and tag sales to assemble more than 50 exemplars of tackiness, including a beach hat made of beer cans crocheted together, a doll's head that dispenses tissue, and a painting on black velvet of the late Elvis Presley.

"It's on loan, but it's been asked not to be returned," one of the organizers, Jeanne Seetoo, said of the painting.

The choicest fruits of the women's search, in which no more than a quarter was paid for any item, will be on display in the "Tack Museum" at the Franklin Street School here.

Also planned are a tacky lamp contest, a truly tasteless slide show, music by a "fleet of accordion players," and a fashion show featuring many clothes and accessories people would like to forget they ever wore, the women said.

A "poodle shrine" will display toilet paper covers, lamps, salt and pepper shakers, and statues featuring the cute canine.

An original cookbook penned for the occasion by Philadelphia architect Stuart Schunck will be on sale. It includes recipes for such delectable treats as caramel corn on the cob, "buses" made by attaching Life Savers with toothpicks to Twinkies, and a football-shaped novelty made with 10 pounds of peanuts and marshmallow cream mixed together and covered with peanut butter.

For snacks, there will be a food booth "under the fallen arches."

Woman trampled by circus elephant

NEW LONDON, Conn. (AP) — A 47-year-old woman who tried to mount an elephant in a shopping mall parking lot was killed early Saturday when the animal threw her to the pavement and trampled her.

Joan Scovell of New London was attempting climb on top of Freda, a 6,500-pound pachyderm, at about 4 a.m. when the elephant grabbed her with her trunk and threw the woman down, police said.

"It all started because she wanted to see the elephants, she wanted to ride the elephants," said Daniel Sorel, 28, who was to marry Ms. Scovell in two weeks.

Sorel said he and his fiancée had been drinking Friday night when they drove into the New London Mall parking lot and went to the compound where nine elephants owned by the Clyde Beatty-Cole Bros. Circus were chained by the feet to stakes.

"We drove in and she went right over to this pen," Sorel said. "She walked in and I said, 'Joan, don't go in there, they might not be friendly.' But she went in."

Police Chief Donald R. Sloan said Ms. Scovell may have been repeatedly thrown or trampled by the elephant because her body was mutilated.

Sloan said the circus has been ordered to place security personnel with the elephants 24 hours a day until they leave, or the circus will be closed.

Ned Potter, assistant manager of the circus, said there were no animal trainers in the elephant compound at the time of the incident.

Redfish is hot item around U.S.

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A nationwide rage for cooking Cajun style is making redfish, a New Orleans favorite, as scarce in this Gulf Coast city as a teetotaler on Bourbon Street.

Nobody knows how much of the large, saltwater drumfish Louisiana is exporting, but prices, which peaked last winter at $7.50 a pound, have tripled in the last two years.

"It's so bad, I'd like to buy my own boat," said Ralph Brennan, manager of Mr. B's in the French Quarter, where red drum is the top Cajun fish dish. Justin Frey, an owner of Galatoire's, another French Quarter gastronomic shrine, said he's periodically been forced to pull redfish off the menu.

"People think, what's the matter with Galatoire's?" he said. The shortage has some Louisiana state lawmakers up in arms. Sen. Ben Bagert tried to persuade the Legislature to stop some exports of redfish and speckled trout, but his bill got snagged in committee.

"Let them eat mackerel or halibut."

Jaw bone is key to prehistoric find

MANTUA, N.J. (AP) — Midge Dickinson knew she had something out of the ordinary when she found an enormous jaw bone sticking out of the red clay of a water pipe trench in her yard.

She says she called a neighbor over to take a look after a rainstorm exposed the bone Monday, not wanting to call authorities right away for fear of being dismissed as "a looney."

"I didn't want to make something out of nothing, I wanted someone else to tell me," Ms. Dickinson, 28, said of her early apprehension.

A Glassboro State College archaeology professor says she may have found the remains of a young mastodon, a 10-foot-tall shaggy beast resembling an elephant that roamed southern New Jersey 10,000 years ago, when it was more like arctic tundra.

By the end of the week, Ms. Dickinson had collected a pair of tusks, teeth the size of Zippro lighters and thigh bones too large to interest the neighborhood dogs.

Robert Harper, a professor of history and archeology at Glassboro State, said the size of the skeleton, the alignment of the teeth on the 16-inch surviving section of jaw and the tusks suggested they are from a young mastodon.

Ms. Dickinson said she would leave the balance of the excavation to researchers from the New Jersey State Museum in Trenton, which has expressed an interest in acquiring the bones.

Shirley Albright, assistant curator of science, said the museum's two other mastodon skeletons on exhibit are from northern New Jersey.

"This would very much be a point of interest," she said.

Harper said the southern New Jersey tundra was home for many prehistoric mammals about 10,000 years ago, until the so-called Wisconsin Glacier approached its southern stopping point near Trenton and changed the local climate.

Remnants of the era, including several mastodon skeletons, have been found throughout the region.

But Harper said most of the skeletons have been found in deep excavations and it was very unusual to find a mastodon skeleton just two feet below the surface.

Ms. Dickinson, 28, might have to wait several more weeks to fill in the trenches around her water pipes while scientists and curious neighbors investigate her yard.

"For five months I was living off my neighbor's hose after my well ran dry," she said. "I'm just glad to have water."

Recalcitrant rookies wait for millions

NEW YORK (AP) — A sharp slash in the money being offered by National Football League teams to their top draft picks has unified an often antagonistic group — player agents.

Agents for most of the NFL's 28 first-round choices gather in Chicago Monday in an unprecedented session that will attempt to counter what agents say is a cutback to 1982 salary levels by teams no longer threatened by the United States Football League.

"Adversity can bring a lot of people together," says Leigh Steinberg, who represents four of NFL Management Council, which has been predicting serious losses if the bidding war continued to escalate, began last winter to advise teams to cut back.

With the opening of NFL camps two weeks away, many have. According to figures supplied by agents, only 47 of 338 players drafted had been signed, including only three of 28 first-rounders — top pick Bruce Smith and No. 14 Derrick Burroughs by Buffalo and Emanuel King, the 25th player taken, by Cincinnati. Bernie Kosar, the quarterback taken by 49ers have made a respectable first offer to wide receiver Jerry Rice, their first pick; and so have the Pittsburgh Steelers to defensive end Daryl Sims.

Ray Galindo, Sims' agent, acknowledges that the offer is a good one. But he adds: "Only two or three offers for other first-round picks are comparable. The other offers are ridiculous."

Kosar and Smith, whom the Bills signed before the draft for $2.6 million over four years in a mini-war with the USFL's Baltimore Stars, have contracts comparable to last year.

plus a $400,000 signing bonus.

On the other hand, there's the Indianapolis Colts' reported offer of $800,000 over four years to Duape Bickett, a linebacker from Southern California. "That's an offer comparable to '81," says Steinberg, Bickett's agent. "He's the fifth pick in the draft, he's a linebacker just like King, but he's being offered less than King, the 25th pick."

Despite the current unity, agents aren't quite sure what they can do other than hold their players out of camp. "The teams need their first-

DUANNE BICKETT

BERNIE KOSAR

JERRY RICE

the first 12 players taken this year. "The wagons are going to circle. These cutbacks are helping a lot of new relationships to form that weren't there before."

The crux of the problem is the decline of the USFL, which in 1983 and 1984 gave agents leverage that produced more NFL money. But the three-year-old spring league, which says it will resume play in the fall of 1986, now is more worried about meeting its own payrolls than signing rookies.

Meanwhile, NFL teams have voted to reduce rosters from 49 players to 45 this season and the Cleveland in the supplemental draft last week, also is signed — to a $1 million-plus per year contract. For some teams, no announcements don't necessarily mean no signings.

Executives like New York Giants General Manager George Young often run leak-free negotiations, then pop up in the week that camp opens with a drawer full of signed contracts.

Moreover, while some agents cry "conspiracy," there remains team-to-team variation.

Agents report that the Super Bowl champion San Francisco

Sources says Burroughs will get $1.7 million for four years, comparable to a similar choice last year and King $1.175 million for four years, a little lower.

Nor are other offers totally regressive.

According to one source, the Giants have offered running back George Adams, whom they took with the 20th pick of the first round, close to $1.6 million over four years, a lot more than they paid three years ago to Butch Woolfolk, another running back taken with the 19th pick. Woolfolk received a reported $1 million over four years round picks and the coaches want them in camp," says one, who asked not to be identified, but who favors the holdout strategy. "They get a lot of publicity from the pick. How do they explain to their fans that he hasn't showed up?"

Steinberg, whose four first-rounders are double any other agent's, isn't sure.

"I've had maybe 25 to 30 first-rounders over the years and I've never had one hold out," he says.

"On the other hand, the offers so far are ridiculous. You can't even make a counter-offer."

Ryan sidetracked in Astro win

HOUSTON (AP) — Dickie Thon hit his first homer this year and doubled in the sixth inning to break a 6-6 tie and lead the Houston Astros to an 8-7 victory over the Montreal Expos Saturday night.

Montreal's Tim Wallach belted a fifth-inning grand slam, the third of his career, in a losing cause.

Thon, who has been struggling to make a comeback since being struck in the head by a pitch on April 8, 1984, homered in the fourth. In the sixth, he followed Mark Bailey's double with one of his own to put Houston ahead 7-6, took third on a grounder and scored on Bill Doran's sacrifice fly.

Jeff Calhoun, 1-1, gained his first major league victory in relief of Nolan Ryan. Ryan left after Wallach's grand slam. He struck out three batters to raise his all-time career major league strikeout record to 3,993.

Gary Lucas, 3-1, was the loser. The Expos took a 1-0 lead in the first after Tim Lincecum lined a ground-rule double and scored on a pair of groundouts.

The Astros tied it in the bottom of the inning. Phil Garner singled with two outs, took second on Joe Hesketh's balk and scored on Jose Cruz's single.

The Astros moved ahead 4-1 in the fourth on a two-run home run by Glenn Davis, his second, and a solo blast by Thon.

The Expos jumped ahead 6-4 in the fifth. Raines and Vance Law walked and Hubie Brooks drove in Raines with a double. A walk to Dan Driessen loaded the bases for Wallach's grand slam, his seventh home run of the season.

The Astros tied the score at 6-6 in the fifth when Doran and Ty Gainey singled. Doran scored on a Cruz single.

Raines scored the game's last run in the ninth, doubling and coming around on a fly out and a groundout.

The ball took some funny bounces in St. Louis, and the Los Angeles Dodgers weren't complaining.

Baseball Roundup

"There were a lot of strange things going on out there. I saw it during warmups that there was a little extra sponge because the (artificial) turf was hot," said Ken Landreaux after hitting two home runs, including a weird inside-the-park shot, as the Dodgers beat the Cardinals 8-3 Saturday.

San Francisco beat Chicago 6-4 in another NL game. The New York at Atlanta game was rained out. Baltimore downed Kansas City 8-3 and Oakland topped Toronto 5-1 in AL games.

In later AL games, Boston was at California, Chicago was at Cleveland, Minnesota was at New York, Detroit was at Texas and Milwaukee played in Seattle. In NL night games, Cincinnati was at Philadelphia, San Diego faced Pittsburgh and Montreal visited Houston.

The Dodgers got the game off to an odd start when Mariano Duncan collected a bunt double with one out in the first. The St. Louis fielders watched the bunt stay fair while Duncan raced to second.

Landreaux then hit a drive that bounced over the head of charging right fielder Andy Van Slyke and rolled to the wall. It was the first inside-the-park home run for the Dodgers since Davey Lopes did it on July 23, 1979.

"It was a single, but it just bounced over his head and kept going," Landreaux said.

Pedro Guerrero homered, doubled and singled, while Steve Sax and Mike Scioscia each added three hits in Los Angeles' 16-hit attack.

Landreaux led off the third with a home run, and Guerrero hit his 20th of the season in the fifth to make it 5-0.

In the seventh, with Greg Brock on base on a forceout, Scioscia looped a ball to left-center. The hit went for Scioscia's second double of the game, but when third baseman Terry Pendleton mishandled the relay, Scioscia kept running and scored on the play.

"That was a game for bloopers, wasn't it?" St. Louis Manager Whitey Herzog said. "They tried to give it back to us, and we continuously fouled it up."

Bob Welch, 2-1, pitched a six-hitter for the victory and Kurt Kershner, 5-6, took the loss.

Giants 6, Cubs 4

Rookie Chris Brown hit his second home run of the game, a leadoff shot in the ninth inning that broke a 4-4 tie, to give San Francisco its fourth straight victory.

Brown, with three homers in his last two games, connected for his game-winning blast off Chicago relief ace Lee Smith.

Manny Trillo also homered for the Giants, while Leon Durham and Jody Davis homered for the Cubs.

Orioles 8, Royals 3

Fred Lynn, who hit a grand-slam home run for the AL in the All-Star Game on July 6, 1983, hit another grand slam exactly two years later to cap Baltimore's seven-run fifth inning in Kansas City.

Lynn's third career slam was an opposite-field drive off reliever Joe Beckwith, who had intentionally walked Eddie Murray to pitch to Lynn.

Scott McGregor, 7-7, gave up seven hits over 8 2-3 innings for the victory.

A's 5, Blue Jays 1

Don Sutton allowed five hits over eight innings to win his 288th career game, while Carney Lansford sparked Oakland's offense by scoring three times and doubling home another run.

Sutton, 8-5, won his fifth straight game. He has not lost since May 22.

Toronto, which got a home run from Rance Mulliniks, hurt itself with five errors.

Youths foster global understanding

By KIM KIRKHAM
Lifestyle Writer

Five Big Spring youths are spending one month of their summer vacation helping promote international understanding between countries.

Traveling abroad in the Rotary International Youth Exchange Program are Kirsten Wilkins, Sami Eyskens, Blair Richardson, Jim Cowan and Debbie Donelson. Kirsten left June 30 for Hulst, Holland. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dan Wilkins. Sami, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Eyskens, will leave Tuesday for France. She will spend most of the month at St. Tropez, a resort area. Returning July 31, she will bring back a French youth, Virginie Mermoud, 17.

Jim left June 20 for France. He is the son of Dr. and Mrs. James Cowan. A youth will return with him. The son of Mr. and Mrs. Don Richardson, Blair will leave July 26 for Mazamet, France. His exchange student, Bertrand Alquier, arrived June 28 and is currently living with the Richardsons.

Debbie, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Delbert Donelson, also is traveling abroad. She left June 30 for Lille, France. Her exchange youth, Valerie Pastour, will return with her July 31.

"I would like to participate to gain a better understanding of other races of people and their cultures," wrote Sami on her application for the program. "I hope to help other people understand my culture."

On his application, Blair wrote: "I would like to learn more about international cultures, trade and communications. I am interested in meeting new people and learning of their way of life, and I wish to show these people more of the American ways of life."

According to an article in the March issue of The Rotarian, an international magazine, 7,425 young people participated in youth exchange during the 1983-84 Rotary year.

Open to students from both Rotarian and non-Rotarian families, a youth may live abroad for one month or for a full school year in the program.

Applicants are selected by the local Rotary Club on the basis of a written application and a personal interview. To be eligible, students must be 15 to 18 years of age and in the upper one-third of their class, said Dan Wilkins, exchange program officer for the Big Spring Rotary Club.

Although the students room and board is provided by the host family, the exchangees must pay for their transportation, clothing, health insurance and incidental expenses.

Anyone interested in being a host family can contact Wilkins or Troy Fraser. Fraser is the officer of the exchange program for the Greater Big Spring Rotary Club.

"It's a wonderful opportunity to live abroad and learn how people abroad live," said Wilkins. And "lifelong friendships may be established. They (youth) will never forget this."

LOADING — Blair Richardson shows Bertrand Alquier the technique of loading a gun. Bertrand arrived June 28 and will stay with the Richardsons until July 26 when he and Blair go to Mazamet, France, Bertrand's hometown.

PACKING — Sami Eyskens will leave Tuesday for Tropez, a resort area. Returning July 31, she will bring back a French youth, Virginie Mermoud, 17.

All-American Barbie goes haute couture

By CONNOISSEUR

The All-American Barbie doll has gone haute couture in Paris.

Barbie recently was given a retrospective exhibition in Paris with 300 versions of Barbie on display and a new wardrobe created by some of France's top designers.

Not all were haute couture — the various Barbies wore everything from pedal-pushers to a new Dior gown designed for the occasion. Barbie also was seen on a streamlined TGV (Train a Grande Vitesse) parked under the Eiffel Tower.

The retrospective was the brainchild of American surrealist designer Billy Boy, 24, a collector of historical haute couture as well as Barbie paraphernalia. He has amassed several thousand pieces of Barbie merchandise, including dozens of her friends and hundreds of her miniature accessories.

He calls Barbie a pop icon, a campy cult figure that since her introduction in 1959 has mirrored the values and aspirations of Western culture — as well as every important fashion trend.

"She's not a pacesetter," he said, "but she's always up to the moment, and unlike a lot of people, she looks good in anything — skintight Spandex, the minidress."

Barbie's high-styled wardrobe for her Paris exhibit included outfits designed by Dior, Hermes, Kenzo, Ungaro, Saint Laurent, Patou, Montana, Rykiel, Tarlazzi and Mugler.

Christophe de Menil accessorized a gown with jewelry by Claude Lalanne.

Barbie's boyfriend, Ken, wasn't ignored — he got a chic new suit designed by Lanvin.

The retrospective began with Barbie as she looked in her "bubble cut" of the 1950s. Billy Boy says she then reflected the look associated with Bettina, a celebrated doe-eyed, red-haired model. Today's Barbie is more of a Bo Derek blonde.

Another display showed the evolution of the 11 $\frac{3}{4}$ -inch doll. Barbie was shown dressed as a career girl, a sportswoman and a waitress. There's "Color-Magic" Barbie whose hair changes color and talking Barbie, who says things such as, "I think I'll call Ken" and "There's a new rock show on TV."

Another doll in the Barbie collection was Julia, modeled after Diahann Carroll, who played the title role in the TV show "Julia." Various ethnic versions demonstrate Barbie's internationalism.

Billy Boy was asked if he would create an outfit for Barbie.

"Yes, but nothing surreal...maybe a Yuppie outfit, like a square-shouldered pink tweed jacket," he told Connoisseur. "But Barbie's not a Yuppie. She's fabulous."

The Barbie retrospective, sponsored by Mattel France, ran in Paris through June 1, then travel in France throughout June.

4-Hers compete for Junior Rodeo Queen title

By TINA STEFFEN
Lifestyle Editor

Out of seven 4-Hers competing, the one who sells the most rodeo tickets will become the Howard County Junior Rodeo Queen.

The queen will preside over the Howard County 40th Annual Junior Rodeo festivities July 24-27. The Rodeo is sponsored by the Howard County 4-H Clubs and held at the Rodeo Bowl at the Howard County Fair Grounds.

The winner will be announced at the Rodeo July 24 and introduced nightly during the Rodeo's Grand Entry. She will receive a belt buckle and gift certificates fit for a queen. Past queen contests were held differently than this year's. Each club chose a representative for the contest and the clubs elected the queen.

This year, any 4-H girl could participate by signing up and selling tickets to the rodeo. The selection is more on individual effort than club effort, said Nancy Crenshaw, contest chairman. The contestants have until July 24 to sell their tickets.

Participating in this year's contest are: KAELA DYAN VAN VLEET of Lucky Acres 4-H Club. She is the 10-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gayland Crenshaw, Knott Rt. Kaela is a fifth grader at Washington Elementary and enjoys softball, 4-H projects and reading clubs. "I like horses, and I thought I wanted to be in something for the 4-H," she said as to why she is competing.

DANA DOLAN of Forsan 4-H Club. She is the 14-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. LeRoy Dolan, Sterling City Rt. Dana is a ninth grader at Forsan High School and enjoys sports, music, cooking and sewing. "At first my club picked me (for the contest), and then I decided to go ahead and do it because it would be fun."

CARRIE BRUTON of Lucky Acres 4-H Club. She is the 12-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Bruton, Hillside Trailer Park. She is an eighth grader at Runnels Junior High School and enjoys horseback riding, showing lambs and pigs, judging livestock and participating in food and nutrition projects in 4-H. Carrie is not pictured above.

ANDREA RAY of Coahoma 4-H Club. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dois Nell, Rt. 2. Andrea is 14, a ninth grader at Coahoma High School and enjoys horses and steers. "I like rodeo, and I'd like to represent it," she says.

MELISSA PAUL of Lucky Acres 4-H Club. She is the 17-year-old daughter of Harvey Paul and Irva Paul. She enjoys roping, barrel racing, cooking and piano. "I want to run for rodeo queen to promote rodeo as a whole and preserve the spirit of the Old West."

KELLY NEWTON of Gayhill 4-H Club. She is the 14-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marion Newton, Rt. 2, and a freshman at Big Spring High School. She enjoys showing animals, cooking and sewing.

KIMBERLY ROMAN of Forsan 4-H Club. She is the daughter of Mr.

and Mrs. Mike Roman, Longshore Rd. She is nine and a fourth grader at Elbow Elementary School. Kimberly is active in the Howard County Youth Horseman Club and is interested in showing lambs in 4-H. "I thought (the queen's contest) would be fun. I like horses and stuff like that," she said.

The Junior Rodeo begins at 7:30 p.m. nightly with the Forsan, Coahoma, Lucky Acres, Gayhill and Knott 4-H Clubs participating in the events. Tickets are $3 for adults and $1.50 for children and may be purchased from the contestants or at the gate.

Callihan-Belew

Sherri Lynn Callihan became Mrs. Ronald V. Belew in a ceremony Saturday in the Chapel of the First Baptist Church. The Rev. Larry Ashlock, pastor of Midway Baptist Church, officiated at the 7 p.m. rite performed before two arch candelabra, and ficus tree arrangements of apricot and white mixed flowers.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ross J. Callihan, Sterling City Route. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Belew, Anderson Road.

Mrs. John Birdwell, organist, Mrs. Del Hartin, pianist, and vocalist Garry Miller of Lamesa, cousin of the bridegroom, provided music.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of embroidered English net with Juliet sleeves and a bodice highlighted by pearls and sequins. The bodice featured a sweetheart neckline. The A-line skirt of embroidered net had an attached chapel-length train. Her two-tiered, fingertip-length-veil was attached to a lace tiara featuring pearls on the scalloped edge.

She carried a cascade of marigolds, statice and pelargonium.

Angela Raymon was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were LesLea Beles, sister of the bridegroom, Cindy Redding and Rhonda Gaskins. Catherine Fox of Spring, cousin of the bride, was flower girl.

Cabell Mackie was best man. Groomsmen were Steven Archer of Lamesa, Joe Hataway and Roger Craft. Milton Richardson and Delbert Richardson, both of Lamesa, were ushers. Ringbearer was Christopher Cauble of Gainsville, cousin of the bride. Cheryl Fox of Spring, cousin of the bride, and Bonnie Cauble of Gainsville, cousin of the bride, were candlelighters.

A reception followed in the church's Parlor. The bride's table

MRS. RONALD V. BELEW
...formerly Sherri Lynn Callihan

was covered with white lace over a white cloth. The table was centered with silver candelabrum with navy candles and fresh flowers of apricot and navy touches.

The bridegroom's table featured an octagon-shaped chocolate cake decorated with registered cattle brands. The table was covered with a white cloth and centered with an antique lamp and bare back ring.

Serving at the bride's table were Kenda Wigginton and Leslie Chandler. Mrs. Ronny Moser and Mrs. Charles Vernon served at the bridegroom's table. The house party consisted of Mrs. Dalton Johnston, Mrs. Alton Underwood, Mrs. Lester Arnold, Mrs. Harvey Wooton, Mrs. Francis Zant, Mrs. William Riley, Mr. and Mrs. Lonnie Coker, and Mr. and Mrs. Jame Findley.

A graduate of Forsan High School, the bride attended Howard College. The bridegroom graduated from Coahoma High School, Howard College and attended Hardin-Simmons University. He is employed at Don's Machine Shop.

Following a wedding trip to the Texas coast and San Antonio, the couple will live in Big Spring.

Tatom-Sanders

Trinity Baptist Church was the setting for the Saturday wedding of Cappy Lee Tatom to Bobby Wayne Sanders. Dr. Claude Craven, pastor, officiated at the 7 p.m. rite.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B.G. Tatom, 1502 E. 5th. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Sanders, Midland. The couple exchanged vows before an archway and two 15-branch spiral candelabra, two large baskets filled with dusty pink roses and cream white carnations, and baskets of green ferns.

Tammy Spears, pianist, and vocalist Sharon Andrews, provided music for the ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal-length gown of slipper satin. The fitted bodice featured an illusion yoke outlined with floral applique lace. The gown featured a chapel-length train and mutton sleeves. The fingertip-length veil of illusion, encrusted with pearls, fell from the floral headpiece.

The bride carried a bouquet of dusty pink roses, cream white and blue carnations and baby's breath. She carried the bouquet on her Order of Rainbow Bible given to her by her parents.

Susan Thomas of Midland was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Lynn Sanders of Midland, sister of the bridegroom, Donna Downing of Big Spring and Nan Elmore of Stanton. Sheri Anderson of San Angelo was flower girl.

Lloyd Coots of Meridian was best man. Groomsmen were Roger Coots of Sheffield, Rex Holcombe of San Angelo, and Richard Carruth of China Springs, cousin of the bridegroom. J. Corby Tatom of Big Spring, brother of the bride, and Brad Slavik of Midland were ushers. Codie Cobb of Dripping Springs, cousin of the bride, served as candlelighter. Ring bearer was Wes Cochran of San Angelo.

A reception followed in the Fellowship Hall of the church. The bride's table featured a dusty pink cloth with a white lace overlay and a flower arrangement in the bride's colors. The three-tiered white cake with pink and blue drop flowers had steps coming from the top layer to the middle layer.

The bridegroom's table featured a hexagon-shaped two-tiered chocolate cake with the his initials on the top tier. The table was covered with a beige lace cloth and featured a brass coffee service.

The houseparty consisted of Claire Miller of Irving, Brenda Littleton of Iraan, aunt of the bridegroom, Linda Littleton of

The couple will make its home in Midland.

Armstrong-Acuff

Debbie Armstrong became Mrs. Ricky Acuff in an Independence Day ceremony Thursday at the United Pentecostal Church of Stanton. The Rev. Walker Hodges, pastor, officiated at the 7 p.m. rite.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ike Wasson, 1900 Main. The bridegroom is the son of Wanda Acuff, 1710 Benton.

Danny Dugan, vocalist, provided music for the ceremony before an altar setting of candles, which included two three-branch candelabra and two 15-branch arch candelabra decorated with gypsophelia and apricot carnations. The unity candelabrum completed the setting.

Given in marriage by her stepfather, Ike Wasson, the bride wore a floor-length gown of candlelight satin fashioned with an overlay of Schiffli embroidery. An oval neckline and gathered sleeves of Schiffli embroidery completed the design. The fingertip-length veil of candlelight bridal illusion was held by a bandeau of silk roses and seed pearls. Appliques of Chantilly lace accented the two-tiered veil.

The bride carried a bouquet of apricot roses and peach carnations accented with blue satin ribbon lace, baby's breath and ivory lace.

Millie Anderson served her sister as matron of honor. Flower girl was Penelope Armstrong, daughter of the bride.

Dale Acuff was best man. Wendell Armstrong, brother of the bride, and Jack Acuff, brother of the bridegroom, were ushers and candlelighters. Ring bearer was Jeremy Armstrong, son of the bride.

A reception followed at the Caprock Room in Stanton. The bride's table featured a white three-tiered wedding cake decorated with apricot and blue flowers. The top layer was topped with satin bells and flowers. The bride's table was draped with an apricot cloth and lace overlay and topped with the bride's bouquet. The bridegroom's table featured a chocolate cake in the shape of a cash register.

A graduate of Big Spring High School, the bride is employed by the Big Spring State Hospital. The bridegroom graduated from Big Spring High School and is employed by Furr's Supermarket.

Following a wedding trip to Jamaica, the couple will live in Big Spring.

Lifestyle guidelines

We will be pleased to announce the news of your engagement, wedding, silver or golden anniversary in the Lifestyle section of the Big Spring Herald. We try to use the story on the date you request, but sometimes space does not permit this. The information must be submitted to us in a form available at the Herald no later than Wednesday noon before the Sunday it is to be published. The form must include a name and telephone number of a person whom we can reach during the day for more information.

We will use a picture of the couple in the announcement. Or in the case of engagement announcements where a picture of the couple is not available, we will use one of the bride-elect. The picture must be a professional quality studio photograph. We prefer a 5 x 7 glossy black and white print. We ask for this kind of photograph so that it will reproduce well in the newspaper. Following the picture's publication, it may be picked up at the Lifestyle department.

The information for the story may be brought to the Lifestyle department of the Herald, which is located at 219 Seary. Or it may be mailed to Lifestyle Department, Big Spring Herald, P.O. Box 1431, Big Spring, Texas 79720. Call us at (915) 263-7331 if we can help with more information or clarification of our policies.

ENGAGEMENTS
Information of engagement announcements must be submitted to the Lifestyle department of the Herald anytime after the engagement is a reality until at least three weeks prior to the wedding. Anything closer than three weeks will not be published. The engagement form must be submitted no later than Wednesday noon prior to the Sunday it is to be published.

If the bride-elect, prospective bridegroom or their parents do not now or have never lived in our area, we need to know why you are submitting your engagement to the Herald. If only grandparents live in our area, please give their names and addresses.

WEDDINGS
If a wedding writup is submitted to the Herald after the wedding has occurred, the space allotted to it will diminish according to the length of time that has passed since the wedding.

BIRTHS
Local hospitals supply information for Storckclub. If a child is born elsewhere in the newspaper's circulation area, or is born to out-of-town parents with local or area grandparents, please contact the Herald Lifestyle Department with Storckclub information.

Information needed for Storckclub is: newborn's name, sex, time and date of birth, weight, place of birth, parents' name and address. If the baby is born outside the circulation area but has legal grandparents, please include their name and address. The local grandparents serve as the area connection for the information.

NAIL GROWTH RATES
You may have noticed that it is nearly impossible to keep all your nails at the same length. This is so partly because nails grow at different rates. The nails on one hand usually grow faster than those on the other. Normally, the faster-growing nails are on the hand that you use most. Also, nails on the same hand may grow at different rates. Nails grow fastest when one is in the twenties and thirties and when one is pregnant. It is also believed that activities such as piano-playing or typing, which increase circulation to the fingertips, can make nails grow stronger and faster.

Long, attractive nails require manicuring and pampering to look their best. For an overall well groomed appearance, one must take time and patience when applying make up and fixing one's hair. A change in hair style can perk you up and give you a whole new outlook. Be sure to stop in and let us suggest a great summer hairstyle for you. You will find us conveniently located at 1908 Marcy. We are here to serve you Tues.-Sat. Call us at 267-2187. LA CONTESSA offers you all the latest in hair care and fashion.

YOUR COMPANY (When You're Gone)

What happens to the family-owned business when the proprietor dies? What if the proprietor and the key employee are killed in a common accident? Who will have the authority to operate the company? Will the company be sold for less than its true value in a forced sale?

Most small business owners are very occupied with the day-to-day operations of the business. Some time should be set aside to plan for the sale or transfer of the business in the event of the owner's death. Sit down with a scratch pad and list a few "what ifs." What if I die? What if I'm permanently disabled, physically or mentally? What if I disappear while on a fishing trip and cannot be found?

If something should happen to you, how do you want your company disposed of? Have you a friendly competitor with whom you could have a buy-sell agreement to cover these contingencies? Do you have relatives or friends knowledgeable enough to run your business with whom you could have a buy-sell agreement?

None of us likes to plan for something as unpleasant as dying. But the planning is far better done by you, the one who is knowledgeable about the business. Planning done after the fact will probably be less favorable to your family.

Businesses that depend on the daily input of the owner's expertise have an even greater concern. These businesses start losing gross revenue almost immediately upon the absence of the owner and are often more difficult to sell because of the expertise required of a new owner.

A written buy-sell agreement can help establish the business's value for estate tax purposes and provided a ready buyer in the event of your untimely absence.

Pruitt is retired from civil service work at Webb Air Force Base. The couple attends First Assembly of God.

Nylons introduced in 1939

NEW YORK (AP) — Although nylon stockings were introduced at the 1939 New York World's Fair, a whole year of testing took place before they were sold in stores. On May 15, 1940, the first nylon stockings were sold at the Wilmington Dry Goods store in Wilmington, Del.

Soon after, World War II diverted nylon to the military, where it was used for parachutes. At war's end in 1945, nylon was produced for civilian use, and by 1949 new shades and embroidered styles of stockings were sweeping the country.

On Oct. 28, 1959, the DuPont Co. introduced "Lycra" spandex, a new extra-stretch, lightweight, strong and durable fiber first used in foundations and swimwear. Giorgio Sant' Angelo's 1964 "Lycra" collection of bodysuits, skirts, bikinis, dresses and tights marked the beginning of that fabric in fashion.

During the 1960 "miniskirt decade" the hosiery industry responded to the need for legwear that wouldn't show garters with pantyhose, which by 1968 were being worn for all occasions.

Astigmatism

Quite often I am confronted with the request "tell me about Astigmatism in words I can understand — O.K. — here goes!"

Astigmatism is a vision disorder (not a disease) in which images at all distances may be distorted or blurred. It can occur at any time in life and is sometimes present from birth.

Astigmatism usually occurs when the shape of the eye is more oval than round. Why this happens is not known. Some theories say it is inherited while other theories blame such factors as close work, diet, poor lighting, and excessive rubbing of the eye.

Signs of astigmatism vary from distorted or blurred vision (high degree) to headache or poor school work (low degree). Squinting is a very common sign. The degree of astigmatism usually does not change rapidly, but gradual changes will generally occur. Often there is a slightly greater change during the school years and for elderly persons.

Astigmatism is easily diagnosed by a complete eye examination and can be properly corrected with prescription eyeglasses or contact lenses. Only a few short years ago astigmatism could not be corrected with soft contact lenses. This is no longer true. Today, many of my astigmatic patients are very successfully wearing soft lenses. # Devastating childhood experiences can be time bomb

By COSMOPOLITAN

Devastating childhood experiences can be a time bomb that disrupt adult relationships and ruin the lives of women who have not learned to face them.

The death of a parent, physical or emotional abuse, incest and serious illness are the major childhood traumas, according to Cosmopolitan, and they can damage adult self-esteem and the ability to relate to others.

Other traumas include parental neglect, death of a sibling or best friend, a broken home or one fraught with friction, or a series of changes in schools and neighborhood.

"Childhood traumas often cause detachment, a withdrawal of feelings," said Dr. Peter Purpura, a Long Island clinical psychologist.

"When the person grows up and becomes involved in an intimate relationship, the capacity to feel becomes frightening because she is once more in touch with the old feelings of fear, anger, rejection. They are overwhelming. She often becomes confused, depressed. She doesn't understand the present pain — or remember its origins."

Many experts call the death of a parent the most profound childhood trauma.

"It's even more devastating to lose a mother than a father," said Anne Rosenberger, psychiatric social worker and executive director of the Bereavement and Loss Center in New York City.

"The mother is the nurturer. After her death, many things change in the structure of the household."

Pamela Goldsmith, a Berkeley, Calif., psychotherapist who lost her own mother at age 14 and suffered nightmares and anxiety attacks years later in a delayed grief reaction, said:

"Death is a profound experience. Our society denies death, but we can learn from it how precious relationships are, how important it is to be honest with each other — and how transient and precious life itself is."

Victims of childhood abuse as adults often seek the love they lacked — even from the parents who abused them.

"The bonding that occurs with abuse is stronger than in normal parent-child relationships," said Dr. Frances C. Howland, assistant professor of clinical psychiatry at the Yale University School of Medicine. "Often the victim mimics the oppressor."

Howland said such people become their own oppressors, telling themselves they are worthless.

"The talented, the imaginative, learn as children to escape mentally, to disassociate themselves from the abuse. It's a natural defense mechanism."

They continue to disassociate as adults, sometimes suffering from a shattered identity or multiple-personality disorder.

Victims of incest suffer guilt, shame and often a fear and distrust of men.

Serious illness, such as epilepsy, can be devastating to a child and leaves its mark on an adult, author Ellen Kessner wrote.

"Not being able to control your body destroys the sense of capacity to control yourself, your environment, your dealings with the world," psychologist Purpura said. "Often it produces a defensive lifestyle."

For those who feel a devastating childhood experience has made life less happy and productive than it should be, the experts advise discussing the trauma with a hearing person and/or self-help group. Be willing to confront it and express anger, fear, guilt and grief. Awareness is the first step toward changing behavior. Be willing to change, to be vulnerable, to take risks.

Surviving divorce means healing hurt emotions

By COSMOPOLITAN

Surviving the first year of divorce means leaving behind self-pity, guilt and bitterness and coming to terms with losing both a husband and a secure place in the world.

"The more we have clung to the belief that our marriage is our life," Ann Linthorst said in Cosmopolitan, "the larger the vacuum we are left with when it ends."

Divorce is a painful process, bringing with it self-pity, doubt, rage, bitterness, guilt, blame, loneliness and fear.

"Divorce touches you in ways you never dreamed you could be touched," said Beverly Hills psychotherapist Mary Hirschfeld, "and causes tremendous emotional reverberations."

Reaction can range from physical symptoms such as hives to escape and withdrawal.

Psychologists term this behavior transitional stress reaction, and Hirschfeld calls it a vacuum of sanity.

"At this time your thoughts and behavior can mimic symptoms of schizophrenia, depression, paranoia," Hirschfeld said. "But you're not crazy at all. If there were a reconciliation, for instance, the symptoms would disappear. Real mental illness doesn't work like that."

Fierce anger can be part of the healing process, if it is released in positive ways. Hirschfeld recommends screaming in the shower, jogging, pounding pillows.

Newly divorced women need evidence they are still desirable, bright and worthwhile, which can lead them into a series of primarily sexual minirelationships.

"For some, these one-night or one-month stands are a form of self-destruction," Hirschfeld said. "Such a woman is really saying, 'My husband didn't value me, so I won't value me.'"

"Then there are those who are trying or prove they are still desirable, while others may simply need some contact, some touching. Still others are experimenting, trying to test their sexuality in this new, unmarried context."

Chase had this advice to share after her own first post-divorce year:

- Accept support offered by friends, but realize no one can be available all the time and you must learn to be there for yourself.

- Work on getting past the fear and doing something you always wanted to try. The doing is important, as is the realization that your life has fewer limits than you thought.

- Investigate your motives if you suddenly find yourself tempted to invest in prime Florida swampland or bring a questionable stranger home with you. You won't find reassurance in impulsive actions.

- Don't try to become friends with your former husband until you are both ready. You must learn to be separate from him before you can be friends with him.

- Consider getting professional help.

- Know you are not a failure. The fault almost always lies in our conceptions about what marriage is supposed to do for us and not in ourselves.

- Understand that the hurt will not last forever — unless you really want to believe life is rotten, in which case you probably will continue to go get all the proof you need.

"I wouldn't recommend divorce as a new kind of therapy," Chase said, "but it did give me the impetus to expand emotionally and spiritually — and to learn about the nature of real love."

Steroids cause jaundice in male athlete

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I am a 24-year-old male who weighed 150 pounds three weeks ago when I began taking anabolic steroids. I now weigh 170 pounds and have increased muscle mass and strength dramatically. However, my eyes have a yellowish color, my urine is bloody, and I have severe low-back pain. I don't want to stop taking the steroids because my results have been so outstanding. But I am worried about my health. I am currently taking 20 milligrams of the steroids per day. What should I do? — J.C.

Stop taking those male hormones right now and get to your doctor pronto. The yellow eyes mean you are jaundiced. I suspect you are jaundiced because the steroids have disturbed your liver. They can cause serious liver disease. I can't explain the bloody urine and the low-back pain on the basis of steroid use. These signs may be from an entirely different process, like a kidney stone. But that's just another reason to be examined. I have no sermon to preach about steroids. Your letter stands as eloquent testimony to some of the potential hazards.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Thanks for a marvelous column. Last February my husband and I went skiing in Vail. I was sick the entire week with "altitude sickness." A nurse told me there was a medication one could obtain before going to high altitudes (we live in Connecticut) to prevent the illness. No doctor here has heard of any such medication. Could you please suggest something. We are going skiing again this coming winter and don't want to have nausea and headaches again all week. — P.S. I met about 10 other "sufferers" out there so it was not just a bug. — D.C.

Even though the skiing season is over, mountain climbing is with us. The medicine to prevent altitude sickness is acetazolamide. You also should acclimate yourself before reaching the great heights by ascending in stages. It also helps to arrange, if possible, for sleeping at lower levels.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I always like to run directly behind a competitor in long races. I feel I am getting an aerodynamic edge. Am I kidding myself? — O.O.
You've rediscovered a long-accepted principle. It's called "drafting." You are conserving considerable energy this way. At least two major studies have found that the lower head wind resistance is more than worth the effort. Next time take a look behind you. You'll probably see another "drafter" running in your shadow.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Rice visits family in North Carolina

By TINA STEFFEN
Lifestyle Editor

ESTALEENE RICE recently returned from North Carolina where she visited her daughter KAREN AND ROY HUGHES and their daughter, AMANDA. While there she attended her granddaughter's wedding. Her granddaughter, KENDA HUGHES, married JOE WALTERS. Estaleene also visited with her grandson CAPT. STEVE HUGHES, who will leave July 28 for Germany. He will be stationed there for three years. Estaleene was accompanied to North Carolina by her son KENT RICE of Dallas.

Congratulations to SEAN THORNTON for being selected as Ambassador of the Month for June by the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce. Artist of the Month was PAT NASH. Her oil paintings are on display at the Chamber during July.

Also congratulations to CAROLE FRY OWEN for winning a national award from the National Federation of Press Women, Inc. this week. She also won several Texas Press Women awards for her stories, photography and other communications work earlier.

According to NEIL ALLEN, curator, the HERITAGE MUSEUM has a special exhibit on display this month. "Crossroads of Empire," an exhibition of early maps of Texas and the Southwest, will show through July 21.

Auxiliary installs officers, has ice cream supper

The Disabled American Veterans Auxiliary met Monday at the Veterans of Foreign Wars Post on Driver Road for installation of officers and an ice cream supper.

Officers were installed by the installing officer, Gladys White, past region I commander. New officers are: Gertrude McCann, commander; Fannie Clark, senior vice commander; Bernice Gibbs, junior vice commander; Clara Lewis, adjutant; and Katie Spivey, chaplain.

McCann presented White with a set of brass bells from India. The meeting closed with group singing led by Lewis and prayer by Spivey.

Dear Abby

Mom criticizes daughter

DEAR ABBY: Once again I have come away from a visit with my mother feeling severely depressed and inadequate. I can't remember the last time she gave me a compliment. She always finds something to criticize no matter how good I look or what I have achieved.

I could recite one example after another, but your column isn't long enough. The most recent was last week when I was a bridesmaid at my cousin's wedding. I wore a beautiful gown that showed off my slim figure. My hair and makeup were professionally done and everyone was telling me how fantastic I looked. My mother came up to me and said, "You look horrible — you're too skinny!"

I have cried my eyes out from her insults. Abby, I want so desperately to love her and feel guilty when I don't, which is most of the time. I'm 25, self-supporting and have lots of friends. What is the matter with my mother? Or is it me?

SOMEWHERE IN NEW JERSEY
DEAR SOMEWHERE: It's both of you. Your mother refuses to recognize that you are a grown woman, and her constant criticism is her way of controlling you — to assure herself that she still has power over you. And even though you are self-supporting, you are still her "little girl," trying to win her approval. You could benefit from some counseling to help cut those apron strings without feeling guilty.

DEAR ABBY: What should be done in regard to a wedding gift for a relative who marries twice in four years?

Kitchen and Bath Specialists

by Bob and Jan Noyes

The type of sink selected for a kitchen should largely depend on the available appliances and one's cleaning habits. A single-bowl sink is a good choice for a kitchen equipped with a dishwasher. It usually has a 22 x 25 x 8 inch basin. It is large enough to soak big pots and pans but does not waste precious counter space. A double-bowl sink makes sense for a kitchen that does not have an automatic dishwasher. It needs a slightly wider 22 x 33 inch space, but its two identically sized basins can simultaneously handle food preparation and dishwashing chores. An extra-deep sink can be a plus in small kitchens and in homes without a separate laundry room.

Before you sink money into kitchen renovations, talk to BOB'S CUSTOM WOODWORK. We can design, build, and install your new kitchen, from floor tile to custom cabinets. We also design and build room additions, and do all types of home renovations. Come to Bldg. 613 in the Industrial Park, or phone 267-6811. Open M-F, 8-12, 1-5 or by appt.

— HINT —
A sink can be installed in a corner area which might otherwise be wasted.

I gave a substantial cash gift to a nephew when he entered into an ill-advised marriage four years ago. As expected, it bombed before the first year was over. This nephew is "in love" again and is getting married in a couple of months. His bride has never been married and is having a big church wedding.

I and several of my relatives are in a quandary about what kind of gift to give for the second time around. These second marriages are becoming a little too frequent to suit me. I'm considering giving a small household appliance — about one-fourth the value of my first gift. Or maybe it should be just a nice congratulatory card?

PERPLEXED IN IOWA
DEAR PERPLEXED: I can understand your reluctance to pop for another substantial gift, but please consider the bride, whose only "ain" is being No. 2. A card will do, if that's all you can afford, but I vote for a small household appliance.

DEAR ABBY: My father-in-law passed away five years ago. Eight months later, his widow passed on. They were both well into their 80s and are buried in the family plot side by side. As of now, their graves have no markers, which I think is disgraceful. I have mentioned this to my husband several times, but he hasn't done anything about it. My husband and his brother are the only children. I have discussed this with my sister-in-law, and she feels the same way I feel about it.

As I understand it, my brother-in-law wants to put something on his father's headstone, crediting him with having served in the Army overseas for four years, but he doesn't know how to word it.

I can't see where it's important — or even proper — to put that on a headstone. All I see on headstones in modern cemeteries is the person's name, date of birth and date of death.

Do you think my sister-in-law and I should go ahead and select a headstone and have it put up? Five years of an unmarked grave is long enough.

TIRED OF WAITING
DEAR TIRED: Give your husbands a deadline (no pun intended). And if they don't get the job done, you and your sister-in-law should do it.

Around town

Bristo selected to 'Up With People'

By JOHNNIE LOU AVERY
James Bristo, a 22-year-old Foran High graduate and McMurry College student, has been selected to perform with 'Up With People'. He auditioned in April in Abilene, was just notified of his selection, and will begin his one-year tour in January. James is a baritone and a guitarist.

Whether politics motivated Reagan's decision to select a teacher as the first private citizen in space didn't matter to the hundreds of teachers who completed the application process. Surprisingly, the physical requirements were minimal: no height or weight restrictions, but vision correctable to at least 20/40 in the better eye, the ability to hear a whispered voice at three feet, and blood pressure less than 160/100.

The 15-page application form also required eight essays exploring personal and professional lives, teaching philosophy, communications skills, community involvement, and reasons for wanting to go into space.

At least one Big Spring teacher applied: Dollie McCrea Budke, a math teacher at BSHS.

Another applicant was a 42-year-old senior English teacher from Virginia who hails from Big Spring. Kay Crownover Lanceley graduated from BSHS in 1961. Her mother, Mrs. W.R. Crownover, lived on Benton Street until just weeks ago when she moved to Port Lavaca.

Kay's husband is an instructor at the FBI Academy at Quantico and they have 2 daughters. Kay's brother is Dr. Ronnie Crownover, son-in-law of Myra Robinson.

Lynn Clawson Walters, the salutatorian of the same class of '61, and best friend of Kay, shared this information through her mother, Tiny Clawson. Lynn is a computer company representative headquartered in Arlington but she travels world-wide working with large bank systems.

Now on display at the Heritage Museum is an exhibition of rare maps organized by the Amon Carter Museum. The maps, some dating back to one from 1656 by the Royal Geographer of France, is accompanied by a 22-minute media program which introduces the significance of these maps in the development of the Southwest and summarizes their role in the history of the region. There are 22 historical maps in all.

The museum is open Tuesday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 12 p.m. and 1 p.m. to 5 p.m., and Saturday from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. Admission is $1 for adults but no charge of children and students.

The maps will be exhibited through July 22. Neil Allen is curator of the museum.

In spite of the "Return the Flag" movement which has swept the country, Mexico officials say that the Alamo flag cannot be returned to Texas for the Sesquicentennial because it is in poor condition and must be restored.

The movement to get the flag began when Texans learned that the flag was in a deteriorated condition in a museum in Mexico. The blue silk, gold-fringed banner is the only flag still in existence from the Alamo.

Businessmen, history buffs, and the U.S. congressional delegation from Texas — headed by House Majority Leader Jim Wright — asked the Mexican government to loan the flag to Texas for the 150th anniversary of the Battle of the Alamo. Even congressmen from Tennessee joined the campaign to retrieve the flag in memory of Davy Crockett and 30 other Tennesseans who died in the battle.

The flag is housed in the National Museum of History in Mexico City. Officials say it can neither be photographed or loaned until it has been restored and that is "going to take a considerable length of time."

Big Spring could win a Governor's Community Achievement Award and receive a percentage of the $700,000 highway landscape fund if we try!

The Governor's Community Achievement Awards competition is open to all Texas cities. It is divided into eight population categories and each category winner receives a graduated percentage of the highway landscape fund provided by the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation and a handsome cast aluminum plaque signed by Governor Mark White.

Cities will be judged in eight different areas, including cleanups and litter reduction, education, public awareness, enforcement, citizen participation, recycling and beautification. Official entry forms are available from the Austin office.

The goal is to make the state as spotless and litter free for the Sesquicentennial visitors as possible. The objectives are reduction of litter in Texas among highway rights-of-way, involvement of citizens in community enhancement projects such as cleaner parks, streets, downtown areas, and fostering of local pride.

Mrs. Essie L. Person is now serving her third year as president of the Women's Convention, West Texas Baptist District Association. This district comprises cities from Fort Worth to El Paso to Dalhart.

Mrs. Person is preparing a historical souvenir book for the convention to convene in Big Spring August 6-8. Friends, acquaintances, and merchants are invited to purchase an ad for commercial purposes or for memorials. The cost of ads range from $25 to $100.

The souvenir book, published by a local printing company, will be a unique way of welcoming the large number of delegates from other cities into Big Spring.
