Paving program

Q. How many property owners have to sign a paving assessment petition for the city to pave a street?

A. The city has recently lowered the minimum level of participation, according to Public Works Director Tom Decell. Sixty percent of the property owners or persons who own 60 percent of the property are required to sign the petition before the city will do any paving. The city will pay a greater portion of the cost if 75 percent or 90 percent of the property owners or owners of 75 or 90 percent of the property sign the petition.

Reagan doing well following surgery

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan was said to be "doing beautifully" Saturday following surgery to remove a large intestinal polyp. Before surgery he signed letters temporarily transferring presidential power to Vice President George Bush beginning while Reagan was under anesthesia.

"There was no sign of cancer whatsoever," said the head of Reagan's surgical team, Navy Capt. Dale Oller. He said Reagan was alert in the recovery room after a two hour and 53 minute operation.

Another doctor, Steven Rosenberg of the National Cancer Institute, said, however, that final results could not be determined until Monday, when tissue was examined. He said there remained "a real possibility" that tests would reveal that the polyp now removed was cancerous.

"All of the findings during the surgery were normal. There were no indications of the spread of the tumor," Rosenberg said.

Even if it were malignant, he said, the operation may have been curative.

In a briefing attended by Reagan's surgical team, Oller said the doctors removed the right portion of Reagan's colon, where the large polyp was located. He said two feet of the colon was removed.

"His operation went without incident and all the findings at the time of the surgery were normal," Oller said. He said Reagan is "now awake and conversant in" the recovery room, where he was to remain for the rest of the day and night.

Asked when Reagan could resume his presidential powers,

Oller said, "We will know about that in a couple of hours." Oller described Reagan as "doing beautifully."

Oller said tests would be conducted on the removed tissue to determine if there was any malignancy in the growth.

"We do not know if there was cancer in the polyp," Oller said. "The examination of the president, however, showed no evidence of tumor elsewhere," he said.

BOB DEAVENPORT ...tricycle race winner

'Old Settlers' meet in Martin County

By KEELY COGHLAN Staff Writer

STANTON — Word has it that Martin County Judge Bob Deavenport cheated in the tricycle race.

Deavenport, who was president of the Old Settlers Reunion held here Saturday, denies he used unfair methods in his victory over Stanton Mayor Danny Fryar.

"I used superior intelligence and a bigger bicycle," Deavenport said. "They didn't have any rules on the size of the tricycle."

Deavenport used a regular-sized bicycle that just happened to have three wheels. Fryar, he said, used a small tricycle and looked humorous trying to ride it.

"He's 6'6" or so. He had to put his legs over the handlebar on that job," Deavenport said, and laughed. Fryar looked at his trike, and said, "Gee," according to Deavenport.

About 800 people were expected at Saturday night's barbecue at the Stanton City Park; between 300 to 400 participated in the day's parade, games and other contests.

It's a long way from what began as a small gathering of family and friends in 1933 having a picnic on Horace Hamilton's front lawn.

Jack Smithson, then about 8 years old, was present at the first

'Global jukebox' booms plea for help

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A "global jukebox" booming a plea for Africa's starving people touched hearts and wallets around the world Saturday, with hundreds of millions of television viewers hopping electronically from London to Philadelphia to Moscow to Sydney.

Singer Lionel Richie closed the cross-Atlantic concert in Philadelphia by announcing that donations had topped $40 million. It was unclear whether the figure referred to funds raised just in the United States or included $16 million announced earlier in London.

More than 100 performers, many of whom did not appear separately, closed the 14-hour Philadelphia show with a spirited rendition of "We Are the World," a song recorded last winter by U.S. artists to raise funds for African relief.

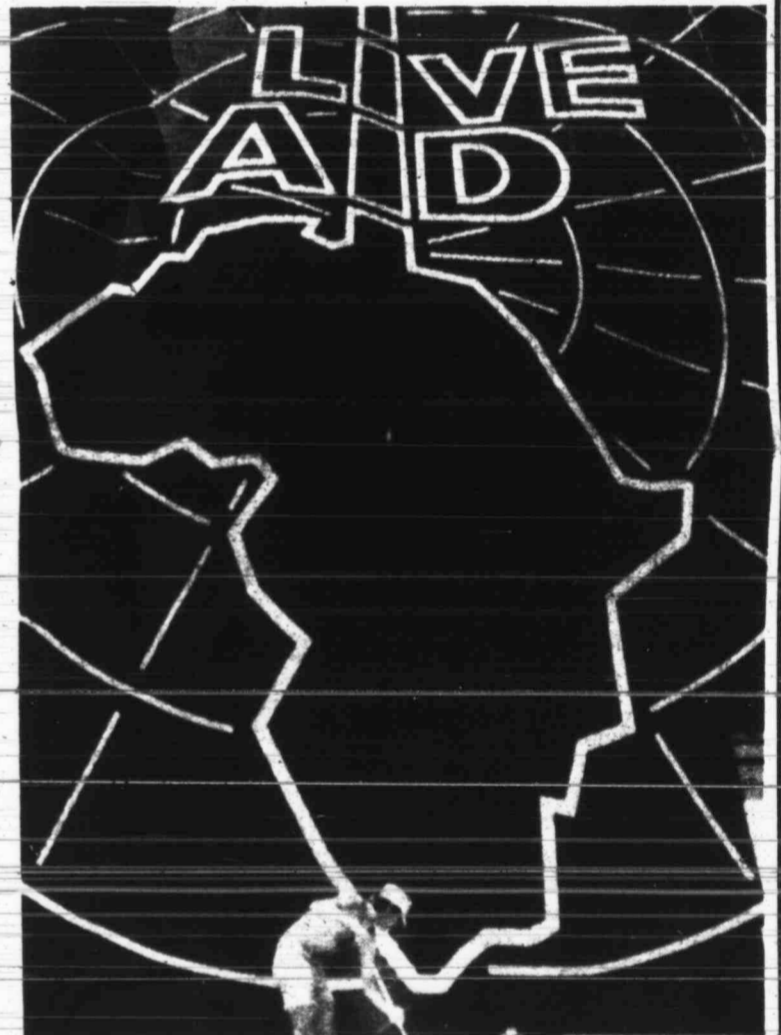

Hours earlier, more than 72,000 people jamming London's Wembley Stadium sang along with Paul McCartney as the former Beatle performed the group's classic "Let It Be" to end the 10-hour British segment of the international rock festival.

Irish singer Bob Geldof, who brought together the star-studded cast for the international charity appeal, was lifted shoulder-high on the 140-foot revolving stage by David Bowie, Alison Mayot and The Who's Pete Townsend, as McCartney sang. Bowie urged that the Live Aid festival become an annual event.

Meanwhile, British Labor Party legislator Tom Torney said he was seeking support to nominate Geldof for the Nobel Peace Prize.

About 60 of the world's greatest rock stars donated their talent — Madonna, Mick Jagger, Patti LaBelle, Duran Duran, the Beach Boys, Santana, Eric Clapton, Tina Turner and Bob Dylan among the performers in Philadelphia; Sade, Elton John, Geldof's Boomtown Rats, Bowie, and McCartney in London.

Phil Collins sang in London and then crossed the Atlantic faster than the speed of sound on the Concorde to perform again in Philadelphia.

"Good morning children of the '80s. This is your Woodstock and it is long overdue," Joan Baez said in greeting the thousands of fans at Philadelphia's John F. Kennedy Stadium as the concert opened there.

While the concert evoked the size and good feeling of the 1969 Woodstock bash, it was closer in spirit to the "Concert for Bangladesh" organized by former Beatle George Harrison in 1971 to raise money for starving children.

"If you do nothing, millions of people will die," Geldof said

Saturday morning as the music kicked off at Wembley.

"Any money that you send in — which is the point of the whole thing — 100 percent will go out to Africa," Geldof said, adding that his organization was buying 60 trucks now in the Sudan to move relief supplies to starving people.

The message was heard. Calls to 1-800-LIVEAID had overloaded the 1,126 circuits which had been set up around the United States in the first hours of the concert, AT&T said. Volunteers were staffing center in 10 cities to take pledges of aid, but with call attempts hitting 120,000 per Live Aid page 5-A

Greenville woman wins Miss Texas

FORT WORTH (AP) — Miss Greenville, 21-year-old Jonna Fitzgerald, fiddled her way to the 1985 Miss Texas crown Saturday night, outperforming 63 other contestants to win a trip to the Miss America Pageant in Atlantic City.

Among participants in the event was Ronda Fowler, Miss Howard County. With misty eyes and a beaming smile, Ms. Fitzgerald received her tiara from Tamara Hext, Miss Texas 1984, before a packed Tarrant County Convention Center crowd.

The new Miss Texas gets a $4,000 cash scholarship, her choice of eight other scholarships, a $1,000 National Sponsors State Fashion Award, a "Texas-sized wardrobe," the use of a car for a year, a jewelry wardrobe and a $500 gift certificate.

Ms. Fitzgerald, who wore a white, short-sleeved gown and clutched a bouquet of yellow roses, said earlier that if she were reincarnated she'd be "a Stradivarius violin" — appropriate for the woman who won Thursday night's talent competition with her electric fiddle.

The 5-foot-7 University of Texas at Arlington junior also whipped through country and classical tunes on her violin Saturday night.

Miss Dallas, 24-year-old Stephany Samone, was named first runner-up and will assume Miss Texas' duties if Ms. Fitzgerald is unable to carry them.

Second runner-up was Miss Hurst-Euleless-Bedford, Mary Theresa Atkins, 21; third runner-up was Miss Haltom-Richland area, Sonna Warvell, 23; and the fourth runner-up was Miss Duncan ville, Dawan McPeak, 23.

Beginning Wednesday night, judges awarded points in preliminary evening gown, talent and swimsuit competition. A talent and a swimsuit winner were announced each night. Evening gown results were not announced.

The semifinalists who made it to Saturday's contest were those with the most points by the end of the third round on Friday.

Ms. Warvell won the third-round talent preliminaries, while Ms. Johnson prevailed in the swimsuit competition.

Thursday, Ms. Fitzgerald conquered the talent competition, and Dena Fenoglio (Miss Montague County) won in swimsuit. First-round competition Wednesday saw Ms. Samone place first in talent and Ms. Atkins triumph in swimsuit.

Scholarships, prizes and trophies — expected to total $702,000 — were to be awarded to contestants at a $12.50-a-person ball after Miss Texas' coronation.

The first runner-up will receive her choice of several scholarships, a $1,200 cash scholarship to the college of her choice and a $400 gift certificate.

Second runner-up gets a $1,000 scholarship to the college of her choice and a $300 gift certificate. The third and fourth runners-up get an $800 and $700 scholarship, respectively, to the college of their choice.

Fort Worth has been host of the pageant, now celebrating its 50th anniversary, for 24 years. The Miss America Pageant is set for Sept. 14 in Atlantic City.

Investigation launched

ST. LOUIS — The Pentagon is investigating evidence that General Dynamics Corp. overcharged the Defense Department more than $1 million during its development of a prototype anti-aircraft gun in 1980 and 1981, a St. Louis newspaper reported Sunday.

In a copyrighted story, the St. Louis Post-Dispatch reported that government sources said the investigation involved charges that General Dynamics spent extra money on the prototype Divad anti-aircraft gun it built in competition with another company to manufacture the weapon.

When General Dynamics failed to get the final contract, it allegedly charged the extra costs illegally to another Pentagon contract, the newspaper said.

A spokesman for the Clayton, Mo.-based defense contractor declined to comment on the report.

The Post-Dispatch reported that James J. Graham, a defense department lawyer, mentioned the previously undisclosed investigation in a letter to the Navy on July 2.

Graham is chairman of a federal task force that has been investigating a broad range of alleged criminal activities involving General Dynamics.

Threat grounds plane

ATLANTA — An Eastern Airlines jet carrying 312 passengers made an unscheduled landing Saturday at Grand Cayman Island because of a false report that a bomb was aboard, government and airline officials said.

No bomb was found, said Karen Ceremsak, a spokeswoman for Eastern in Miami. She said the plane was cleared to resume its flight.

The plane landed at Miami International Airport at 8:17 p.m., an Eastern spokeswoman said.

All 312 passengers and the 10 crew members left the plane safely after it landed at the Grand Cayman airport at 12:04 p.m. EDT, said FAA spokesman Roger Myers.

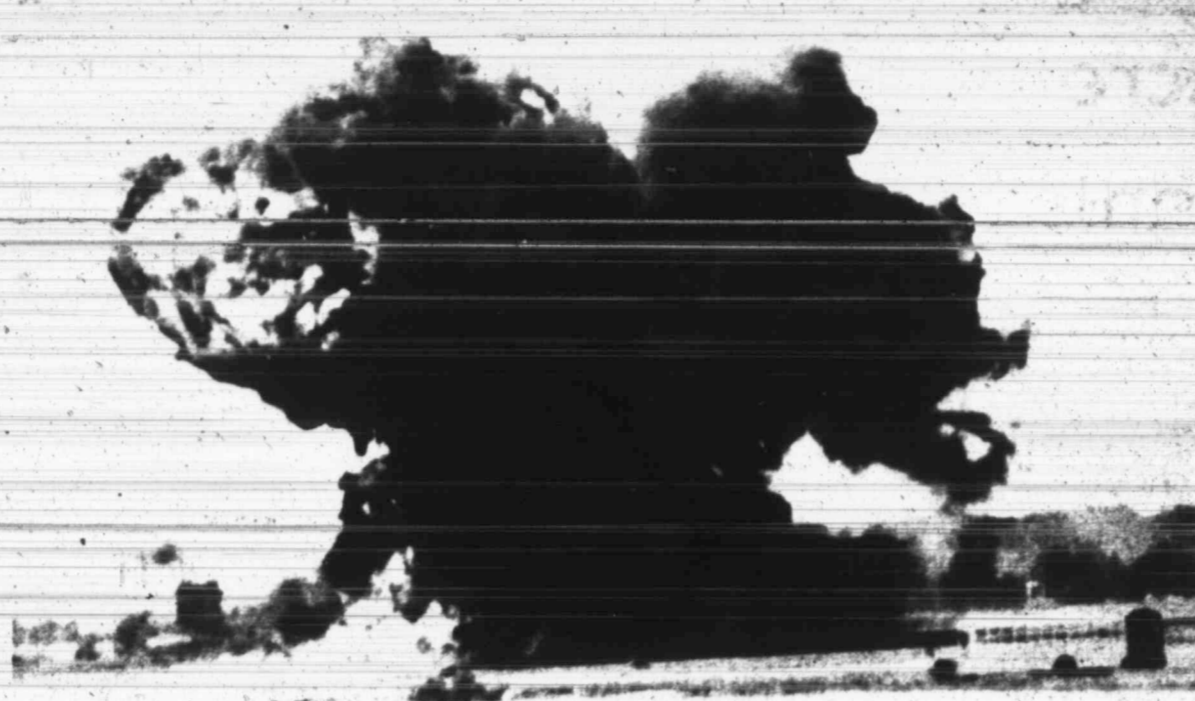

Myers said an anonymous woman called told the airline that a bomb was on the L-1011 jetliner, which was en route from Panama City, Panama, to Miami.

Judge convicted

CHICAGO — The highest-ranking judge charged in the Operation Greylord probe of courthouse corruption was convicted Saturday on 59 criminal counts including mail fraud, racketeering and income-tax violations.

After 3 1/2 hours of deliberations on Friday and Saturday, a U.S. District Court jury found Cook County Circuit Judge Richard LeFevour guilty on all counts with which he was charged.

LeFevour, 54, only looked at his wife and shrugged as the verdict was read, but several other members of his family burst into tears.

A Blue Angel jet explodes upon impact after a mid-air collision with another jet during the Western New York International Air Show Saturday.

Navy tragedy

Pilot dies in Blue Angels air show stunt

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. (AP) — Two jets in the Navy Blue Angels precision flying team collided Saturday during an air show stunt and crashed to the ground in flames. One pilot was killed, but the other parachuted to safety, officials said.

Six A-4 jets were in the air when the two collided, said Joe Osborn, an air traffic controller at Niagara Falls International Airport, where the Western New York Air Show '85 was being held.

One pilot apparently did not eject from his plane and died in the crash, Osborn said, but the other parachuted to safety.

The dead man was identified as Navy Lt. Commander Mike Gershon.

The second pilot, Lt. Andy Caputi, "received minor injury as the result of aircraft ejection," said Kathy Johnson, a spokeswoman at the Air Force Reserve base at the airport. "He has been released from the hospital following a medical examination, a returned to duty."

No ages or hometowns were available for the pilots. The Blue Angels canceled their Sunday show and were returning to their base in Pensacola, Fla., Ms. Johnson said.

A Federal Aviation Administration worker in the control tower, who would not give his name, said the planes collided at the top of a loop. One crashed on the airport grounds, and the other came down in a nearby automobile junkyard, he said, adding that there were no injuries among the spectators.

The crash occurred at 3:42 p.m. as the two jets were flying by a reviewing stand.

Mark Grossman of Niagara Falls, a spectator at the show, said: "Two planes took off from opposite directions, made a circle and came back toward each other. As they passed each other, I saw an orange burst. Shortly after that, the planes went down and burst into flames when they hit the ground ... there was debris flying, and clouds of black smoke."

Carlton Weyland, another witness, said when he saw the flash of light from the collision, he thought at first that it was a planned part of the show. "Then all of a sudden one stopped dead in the air, then the other went over and started to pinwheel down," he said.

One pilot emerged with a parachute, and "everyone was looking for the other parachute" before the planes hit the ground and exploded, Weyland said.

"Everyone was dumbfounded," he added. Weyland said police reassured the crowd that both pilots were safe, but that as he was driving from the airport, an officer at a roadblock said police were looking for one of the pilots.

The accident happened about 15 minutes after the start of the show.

A Navy investigation was begun to determine the cause of the accident, Ms. Johnson said.

A 1982 training accident killed one member of the precision flying team, and brought to 20 the number of Blue Angel pilots killed in air shows or training since the group was formed in 1946.

Attache kidnapped

BEIRUT, Lebanon — The Kuwaiti Embassy's press attache has been kidnapped, making him the 14th foreigner seized in west Beirut in the last 16 months, police said Saturday.

News of the Thursday abduction came as Moslem leaders held up putting a new Syrian-mediated peace plan into effect until about 35 observers arrive from Damascus, the capital of neighboring Syria.

The observers are mainly army officers and their arrival in Beirut is expected Sunday, said government sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The Syrians are the main power brokers in Lebanon since the collapse last year of U.S. peacemaking efforts in the 10-year-old civil war.

The observers will complete the plan to end militia rule in the capital and at the airport, which has been boycotted by the United States following the June 14 hijacking of a TWA jetliner.

The Kuwaiti press attache, Wajed Ahmed Doumani, was kidnapped while going from his home in the seaside Jnah neighborhood to the embassy compound less than a mile away, police said.

They said at least three men stopped Doumani's American car bearing a numbered diplomatic license plate, pulled him out at gunpoint and ordered the chauffeur to drive on.

Bomb victims buried

KUWAIT — As crowds shouted "Death to the killers!" a funeral procession wound through the streets of this Persian Gulf country on Saturday with the bodies of five victims of two time-bomb explosions.

Security authorities released few details about their investigation into the blasts at two seaside cafes Thursday that killed eight people and wounded 88.

Labor unions, student organizations and other groups have called for rallies to denounce terrorism, which has struck this oil-rich country with increasing frequency in the past few years.

Sheik Sabah al-Ahmed, the acting prime minister, told families of the victims that the "cowards and criminals" responsible for the bombings would be punished.

An obscure group called the "Organization of Arab Revolutionary Brigades" claimed responsibility for the bombings in a telephone call to a French news agency in Paris and a note delivered to the news media in Beirut, Lebanon.

The caller said the group was pro-Iranian, but Iran denounced the bombings, as did Iraq and Libya. The Iraqis, at war with Iraq, claimed Iraqi agents planted the bombs.

Hi! I'm Roxie Forrest, owner of Nutri/System weight loss centers in Odessa, Midland and Big Spring. But weight loss is more than a business to me because it wasn't long ago that my clothes stretched instead of hung. That I used a cover up over my swimsuit. That all my clothes had long sleeves to cover up my arms. And everytime I bent over to pick something up, I got in my own way. After four children I had accumulated my share of baby fat. At Nutri/System we know how self-conscious being over weight can make you. Nutri/System is not magic; you have to want to lose weight. But if you are fed up with being overweight, Nutri/System can help. You can lose up to a pound a day. And more importantly, you can keep that weight off with our program. If you call by July 15th, you can be 20 lbs. slimmer by August 1st, for only $49.00!

Our not-so-secret secret documents

Top secret isn't, anymore. The number of Americans with government clearances to view classified documents is 900,000. The number of Americans with Top Secret security clearances is 100,000. When that many people can see secret documents, they're not secret anymore.

Spies used to do it for political reasons. They now seem to be doing it for money. The U.S. government will never be able to pay people not to be spies. It must rely on the patriotism and the fear of punishment.

It's easier to keep a limited number of important secrets than to keep a high number of unimportant ones.

We must limit the number of people with access to secret information. And we should curtail the number of documents that are classified, reserving that status for documents which must remain secret.

Secret must mean it to be it.

Prize is a surprise

Federal, state, and local law-enforcement agencies spend millions of dollars each year trying to track down and apprehend fugitives. How much easier and cheaper if the fugitives could somehow be persuaded to, in effect, surrender on their own.

Impossible? Kudos to the U.S. Marshal's Service for finding a way. Nearly 3,400 fugitives in Florida were lured out of hiding during recent weeks by phony offers of free vacations, expensive dinners, and other prizes. When the fugitives, wanted for crimes ranging from murder and rape to robbery and assault, showed up to claim their prizes, they were met by police and federal marshals.

This was innovation of a high order, and rare enough in government service to be noticed and heartily applauded.

Hard lessons of hostage crisis

The release of the 39 Americans held hostage for 17 days in Beirut is the rarest of terrorist cases: one in which the victims (except Robert Dean Stethem) got out unharmed, apparently with no genuine concessions made to win their freedom. Neither the United States nor Israel gave up anything. It was as close as the outcome could get to an unqualified success.

President Reagan deserves credit, but he had ample help from people outside his control. The hijackers got plenty of publicity from the episode, but otherwise they seemed to have no clear purpose. The 766 Shiite prisoners held by Israel were scheduled to be released already. Thus, it was possible to let the terrorists have what they demanded without compromising principle or safety.

Indispensable to the outcome was Syrian President Hafez Assad. His interest was not in preserving American lives but in asserting his nation's importance — not only in Lebanon, but to the resolution of the entire Arab-Israeli conflict. His mediation will make him harder to ignore. It may even compel the United States to look seriously for ways to lure him toward negotiation with Israel.

The safe delivery of the American hostages was the product as much of serendipity as of diplomatic skill. The next time, we may not be so fortunate. This incident served as a loud warning. With it in mind, several steps ought to be taken to discourage future terrorism and to cope with it if it happens.

The first is to be militarily ready to respond. When the moment of truth arrived in Beirut, the specially trained American anti-terrorist unit, Delta Force, was poised for action in ... North Carolina. It couldn't be used quickly, which in this case meant it couldn't be used at all. It isn't hard to guess in which part of the world Americans are most likely to be seized or attacked by terrorists. Delta Force should be there too.

The second, and ultimately more important, is to be willing to respond with force to free the victims — which means being willing to risk their lives. Saving the lives of the hostages has to be one goal of American policy. It should not be the only goal. To make it the only goal is to invite terrorists to launch new attacks to get whatever they want.

The choice is not whether to save lives. The choice is whether to save the lives of specific, identifiable people by incurring a certain risk to unknown future victims. An early rescue attempt might not have freed the captives. But it certainly would have shown potential hijackers the futility of seizing Americans.

As it happened, the president was able to settle the dispute without making tangible concessions. Had the crisis dragged on, he would have been under unbearable public pressure to give in rather than let Americans die. No terrorist contemplating the way in which this drama unfolded could be depressed at the prospects for success in the future.

The third is to make it easier for the United States to retaliate afterward, without endangering the innocent. The way to start is to remove the executive order forbidding the Central Intelligence Agency to engage in covert assassination. Civilized people are justifiably horrified by the slaughter of civilians that would result from bombing terrorist strongholds. They should welcome the selective killing of the people who directed this hijacking.

The danger is that Americans, relieved that the hijacking didn't end disastrously, may assume that U.S. policy has been vindicated. But the real test of the administration's handling of this affair lies in the future. In the absence of clear measures to penalize these hijackers and to combat future attacks, terrorists are increasingly likely to regard Americans as attractive targets.

This episode dramatized not only America's good luck but also its vulnerability. The good luck may not last. Our leaders should do what they can to see that the vulnerability doesn't either.

Speakes speaketh not

President Reagan's surgery gave the American public a live demonstration of how the administration's press relations are going. I'd say, not well.

The issue was the question of presidential succession — who would run the country while Mr. Reagan was under anesthesia Saturday — and spokesman Larry Speakes was inclined to impede the cause of knowledge rather than promote it.

But the press did a good job of confusing the situation, too, in its quest to clear the air. Big Spring doesn't experience pack journalism very often. Only when a major story breaks do we see the multimedia entourage swing into action. Even then, it's nothing to compare with the Washington press corps. It can be quite a spectacle. It cries out for orderliness.

Spokesman Speakes seemed to revel in the chaos, instead of seeking to bring order to it. The presidential power was in Vice President Bush's hands, he said, for the expected several hours that Reagan would be incapacitated for surgery. Or did he say that?

The press pressed the issue. Was this a granting of successional power as described in Section 3 of the 25th Amendment or wasn't it? It's all in the letter, Speakes said, referring to a letter sent Saturday from Reagan to the President pro tempore of the Senate and the Speaker of the House.

Will you read the letter for broadcast to the American people?

Speakes spoke not.

Instead, Speakes held interminable silences while chastising the reporters for not setting up ground rules for the press conference. It was as much an attitude — talking down to the reporters — as anything else.

A free press and orderliness are contradictions of term. The individuals who make up a large moveable body of humanity known as "the press" are just that — ruggedly individualistic, even while they play off one another's story ideas and angles.

It makes for the strongest press in the world. It is not subject to strict rules of organization. Nor should it be. Its evolution has been one of individual interpretation and expression. The public distills the products of the press and the people are informed.

It can be unruly at times. But who would want a sedate, well-ordered press, in which no individual dared to be different?

It was Speakes' press conference. His job is public information. He should have established the ground rules. To belittle the members of the press for doing their jobs — asking questions and filing stories — is symptomatic of the Reagan administration's relationship with the press, and ultimately with the public.

The administration will tell you what it wants you to know when it wants you to know it. That's rule No. 1. You can almost here Speakes saying what he obviously is thinking: How dare you ask for more?

'Wanted' list borders on vigilantism

By JIM DAVIS

AUSTIN — With a name like mine, one becomes sensitive to the problems of misidentification.

There are 27 other James or Jim Davises in the Austin phone book, and the friends of most of them have mistakenly called my number, usually in the middle of the night.

Last week, I called for an appointment to have my eyes tested. "Oh," said the receptionist, "are you the Jim Davis who draws the cartoons?"

"Yes," I replied. "I am the creator of the famous 'Omar the Opossum' cartoon that I am sure you are referring to."

"Oh...dear...no...I meant 'Garfield,'" she stammered.

"Ah, well, that's the OTHER Jim Davis," I said with some distaste. "He already wears glasses. I'm the one who needs them."

Perhaps because such experiences are common in my life, I was dismayed last week to find the attorney general of the state of Texas asking newspapers across the state to run the names of 10 persons in each of five cities who have repeatedly failed to pay child support.

The cities were Houston, Austin, Fort Worth, San Antonio and Corpus Christi.

Attorney General Jim Mattox, who has made war on parents who don't make their child support payments, released the names at a Capitol news conference and asked state newspapers, television and radio stations to print or broadcast them.

The number of names in each city was set at 10 so that those listed could be called the "10 most wanted." Mattox never has been one to shy away from a gimmick in the interest of publicity.

Mattox's goal is noble, but, unfortunately, his method is not.

Mattox said his department would buy advertisements to publicize the names if newspapers across the state didn't run them free of charge.

"My goal with this 'most wanted list' program," Mattox told reporters, "is to enlist the public in helping us to find these delinquent parents so that their children can have the proper food, clothing and financial support they deserve."

Mattox's goal is noble, but, unfortunately, his method is not.

I haven't seen the reaction of all newspapers in the designated cities, but only one of the four I did see ran the names. And in that one case, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, the story explained how many similar names were in the local telephone book.

My bureau had to worry about only one list of names, those for Corpus Christi. Reporter Janet Warren asked the attorney general's office for some more identification, such as last-known addresses or dates of birth. The reply was that there are no current addresses, of course, because these deadbeats were hiding out. Dates of birth would be available later, a spokeswoman said, and probably would be run with any advertisements.

We elected to send the names to the Corpus Christi Caller with a note explaining the problem. The Caller's editors wisely decided to delete the names from the story. Several names on that bicultural city's list were the Hispanic equivalents of John Smith or Jim Davis.

To have simply run these names with instructions on how to turn in such deadbeats to the authorities would have come too close to vigilantism.

In effect, Mattox is asking people to turn in any friend or acquaintance who has the same name as one of the "10 most wanted." The guilty then would be sifted from the innocent.

That might bring some deadbeat parents to justice, but it also is likely to cause pain and embarrassment for many people who are taking perfectly good care of their children.

Mattox, who was tried and found innocent earlier this year of commercial bribery charges, should be more sensitive than most to the problem of undue public embarrassment.

He was always quick to proclaim his innocence and to blast the news media for paying too much attention to his legal problems. He has been slow to worry about how his campaign against delinquent child support could hurt the innocent.

And that is a shame. The attorney general's goal is laudatory, but his methods need refining.

Jim Davis is chief of the Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau.

Christ is only way to God

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: In your opinion, I know, Jesus is supposed to be the only way to God. But don't all the other religions make the same sort of claim? It seems to me that one religion is just about as good as any other. — R.H.

DEAR R.H.: You are right in one thing you say: Christians who take the Bible seriously do believe that Jesus Christ alone has opened the way to God. This is not, however, because they are narrow-minded or because they feel they are better than other people. There are several important reasons for this belief that you need to examine:

First, Christians believe it because of Jesus' claims about himself. He not only claimed to have a unique relationship with God, but also claimed to be God Himself in human form. Many people have claimed to be great religious teachers; Jesus claimed to be God. More than that, He claimed to be the only way to God. "I am the way and the truth and the life. No one comes to the Father except through me ... Anyone who has seen me has seen the Father" (John 14:6,9).

Second, Jesus not only claimed unique authority, He supported His claims. He did this by His miracles, but most of all He demonstrated beyond a doubt that His claims were true by rising from the dead. You can visit the tombs of many of the world's religious teachers — but when you go to Jerusalem, you will see an empty tomb. Jesus "was declared with power to be the Son of God by his resurrection from the dead" (Romans 1:4).

What difference should this make to you? There is only one thing that separates you from God, and that is your sin. You need forgiveness and cleansing — and only Christ can give that to you. Don't turn your back on God's gift to you. Come to Christ and commit your life to Him, and when you do, you, too, will be able to thank God for the gift of salvation in Christ.

hour, many donors got only busy signals.

Allen Spivak, the co-producer of the Philadelphia segment, had predicted $25 million might be raised in the United States, then he doubled the estimate Saturday morning.

"We are talking about serious worldwide fundraising and every station that's picking it up is doing its own telethon," he said.

Outside JFK stadium, police arrested several people for selling counterfeit souvenirs. Inside, the official T-shirt was selling for $13.

"Rockin' All Over The World" was the idea, and the very first song as the 16-hour rockathon opened in London with Prince Charles and Princess Diana joining the Wembley crowd.

Two hours later, Miss Baez led the Philadelphia crowd in singing "Amazing Grace."

Geldof and the Boomtown Rats played their set to tumultuous applause at Wembley 45 minutes after the concert started.

"I just realized that today is the best day of my life," said Geldof, who has been making popular music work for Africa since last October with the "Band Aid" recording, which in turn inspired the all-star American collaboration, "We Are the World."

The Wembley stage was emblazoned with the slogan "Feed the World," a message beamed to a hoped-for audience of 1.5 billion people. Nearly 100 countries were taking live feeds, although the whole 16 hours was seen only in the United States via MTV, and 40 other countries were getting videotape.

Bluesman B.B. King performed from the Netherlands, and there were also live feeds from Japan, Germany, the Soviet Union and Australia.

An invited audience of 200 attended the Moscow performance by the five-member band Autograph, but state TV showed only delayed excerpts.

"We are proud to participate... it's nice to know that for a change high-tech is contributing to something positive," said announcer Vladimir Posner.

The stages in Philadelphia and London were linked by satellites, a bit of technological wizardry which Geldof called his "global jukebox."

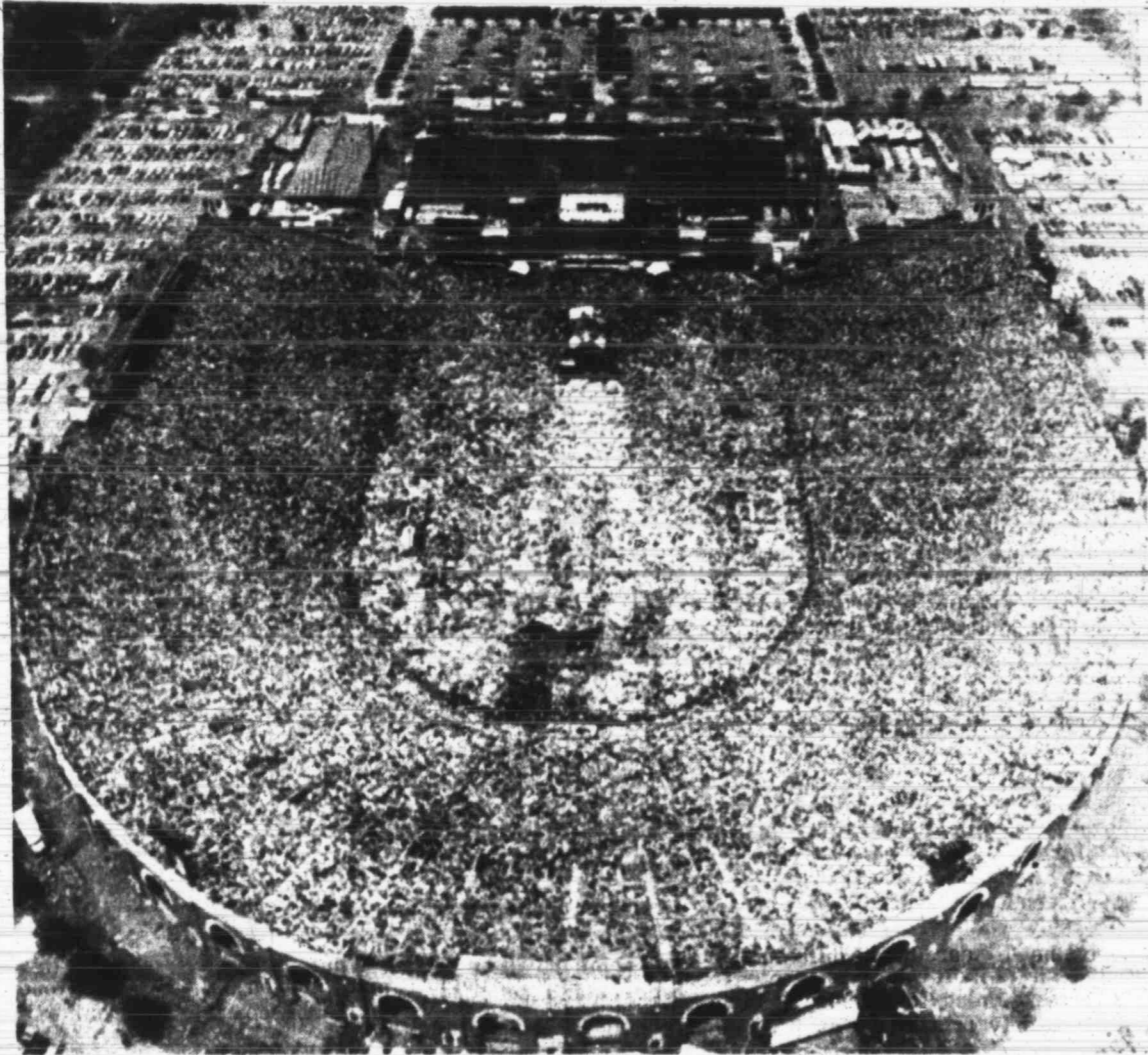

"This is really the big one," said Eric Bazilian of the Hooters, the first rock group on the 107-foot high stage at Philadelphia.

Fans who packed almost every foot of the giant stadium enjoyed the acts as they moved along in rapid succession, those from England being shown on three giant TV screens.

"This is the concert of the century, the best concert ever put together, and who could miss it?" said Bernice Majeski, 24, of New Haven, Conn.

Jack Nicholson greets singer Joan Baez on the stage of the Philadelphia's JFK Stadium Saturday. Baez was the first singer to perform.

Fans jam the JFK Stadium Saturday in preparation for the Live Aid concert.

Madonna performs before thousands of people jammed into JFK Stadium. The concert was aired on M-TV throughout the day and on ABC Saturday night.

Teddy Pendergrass saluted the crowd. Pendergrass was performing for the first time since an auto accident which left him partially paralyzed.

Violence unleashed

Radiation warning signs only evidence of atomic test

TRINITY SITE, N.M. (AP) — Radiation warning signs posted on a mesh fence are about the only evidence today of the violence unleashed here 40 years ago.

This isolated stretch of desert on the northern fringes of what is now the White Sands Missile Range has a place in history because of a brief moment in the pre-dawn hours of July 16, 1945 — the explosion of the first atomic device. The beginning of the nuclear age changed the world forever.

As the countdown to change began, the bomb sat in a steel cab atop a 100-foot tower awaiting an electrical signal that would set off its combination of plutonium, explosive and detonators.

Only a few scientists and politicians had any knowledge of the bomb's development or the hopes that it might provide a way to end World War II.

Scattered about the secret site about 210 miles south of Albuquerque were the men and women who had worked on the bomb in an effort called the "Manhattan Project."

Some of the scientists sat protected in three concrete bunkers 10,000 yards from Ground Zero. Others were perched atop nearby hills.

All waited in the darkness to see if their theory that atoms of certain heavy elements could be split at once, releasing vast quantities of energy and creating an immense explosion, would hold true.

Zero hour told them they were right.

The blast lit the desert sky of south-central New Mexico as never before. A mass of flame hurled rocks and debris into the air. A deafening roar filled the valley as a mushroom cloud slowly rose overhead.

The steel tower was vaporized. Only a crater in the ground showed where it had stood. Three weeks later, similar devices were dropped on the Japanese cities of Hiroshima and Nagasaki, forcing the Japanese surrender.

"It probably saved a million to 2 million lives. An invasion of Japan would have probably resulted in the loss of many more lives," said Norris Bradbury, who supervised the assembly of "Fat Man," as the bomb was nicknamed.

Bradbury watched the July 1945 detonation from a hill about 10 miles from Ground Zero.

"The most impressive thing, of course, was the light," Bradbury recalled in an interview at his Los Alamos home. "It was a very, very bright light. Just as bright as daylight."

Bradbury, who served as director of Los Alamos National Laboratory from 1945-1970, was "dog-tired" and asleep just hours before the explosion, which was delayed by rain.

"Someone woke me up and I saw it. We weren't to look directly at it, but, of course, a little peeking went on," he said.

Bradbury had left Stanford University in 1941 for a Naval Reserve commission. In 1944, he was ordered to Los Alamos, the secret community nestled in the Jemez Mountains west of Santa Fe where the Manhattan Project scientists worked on the bomb under the direction of physicist J. Robert Oppenheimer.

Bradbury, now 76, said he did not learn of the bomb project, which was begun at Los Alamos in 1943, until his arrival. His job was to "make sure the thing was put together correctly," he said.

"I had no deep thoughts right before it went off," Bradbury said. "I was worried just about making sure I was doing what I was supposed to do. Most of my thinking was trivial and pedestrian."

The director of the Manhattan Engineer District, Maj. Gen. Leslie R. Groves, once wrote: "As we approached the final minute, the quiet grew more intense. I was on the ground. ... As I lay there in the final seconds, I thought only of what I would do if the countdown got to zero and nothing happened."

Though the Manhattan Project was kept successfully from the public, secreted away in the mountains of northern New Mexico and on this sparsely populated desert, the explosion did not go unnoticed outside the bombing range.

The brilliant light was seen nearly 300 miles away — as far north as Santa Fe and as far south as El Paso. Windows rattled in Silver City, more than 100 miles away, and in Gallup, nearly 200 miles to the northwest.

A woman driving near El Paso saw the sky turn from deep black to bright white in a matter of seconds.

The government explained the strange occurrence by saying a munitions dump had been blown up — a story that held until Aug. 6, 1945, when the world learned an atomic bomb had been used on Hiroshima.

Since the detonation, Trinity Site has become a tourist attraction, though it has returned to its original state — dusty, wind-swept land dotted with desert flora.

The crater caused by the blast has been filled in.

About two miles from Ground Zero, the ranch house where the bomb was assembled stands freshly renovated.

At Ground Zero is an obelisk declaring, "Trinity Site, where the world's first nuclear device was exploded on July 16, 1945."

A careful search of the site can turn up bits of trinitite, the green glassy substance formed when the blast melted the desert sand.

White Sands spokesmen say the levels of radiation at the site are minute, but still monitored biannually.

Visitors are usually allowed at the site only one day a year, but this year the area will be open on the anniversary date and on the usual tour day in October.

Efforts to help dying man end with his death instead

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The efforts of two restaurant patrons to save a 71-year-old man choking on a piece of meat led to his death instead, says the Milwaukee County medical examiner's office.

William Bray, a securities salesman, died July 6 of a ruptured spleen and fractured ribs suffered when the two performed the Heimlich maneuver and mouth-to-mouth resuscitation in an attempt to dislodge the meat from his throat, according to a medical examiner's report.

"The only thing that could have caused these injuries would have been amateur resuscitation efforts," the report said.

Bray collapsed at 7:30 p.m. on July 5. When paramedics arrived, they found a man and woman bending over his body. The paramedics dislodged the meat, opened an airway and obtained a pulse before taking Bray to the hospital.

He did not complain of any injuries and three X-rays failed to disclose the ruptured spleen, according to the report. But, because of the spleen injury, Bray's blood pressure dropped steadily and he died at 6:50 a.m. the next day. The episode came to light Thursday after Department of Health officials requested that an autopsy be performed.

Although Bray died of injuries from the resuscitation efforts, the measures may have been performed properly, said Norman Wichman, chief of paramedics for the Milwaukee Fire Department.

"In elderly people where the bones are brittle, it is very common to crack ribs while doing CPR," he said. "It happens frequently with our trained EMTs (emergency medical technicians)."

He urged people to receive proper training in life-saving techniques, but added, "I'm not going to tell anyone not to touch someone who is choking, in distress and dying."

Pepsi officials lose sleep over Classic Coke announcement

By The Associated Press
Pepsi-Cola officials have been losing sleep — literally — over Coca-Cola Co.'s announcement that it is bringing back the old Coke, as Classic Coke, while continuing to market new Coke, a Pepsi-Cola spokesman says.

That's because Pepsi-Cola officials have been so busy since Wednesday afternoon responding to "media inquiries" about their company's reaction to the latest salvo in the cola wars.

"After the announcement was made, the phone literally rang off the hook," Ken Ross, the spokesman, said Thursday.

And Pepsi-Cola's public relations department was caught short-handed because some staffers were at the Kennedy Space Center in Florida preparing for the aborted launching of the space shuttle, which was to have carried Coke and Pepsi into space, Ross said.

Roger Enrico, president of Pepsi-Cola USA, the domestic unit of Purchase, N.Y.-based PepsiCo

Inc., managed to appear live on CNN, ABC's Nightline and Good Morning America and CBS Morning News, Ross said.

Then he made himself available for several hours at an office in New York City Thursday, for "media inquiries."

Reporters lined up, waiting their turn.

Pepsi-Cola's reaction to Coca-Cola's announcement was this: "We're not surprised. Very obviously people across the country do not like this (new) Coke," Ross said.

"We now have the opportunity to compete with one product that lost to Pepsi in millions of taste tests and against one product that the public hates," Ross asserted. "That doesn't seem to be too tough a challenge."

Ross said about half a dozen Pepsi-Cola staffers had rushed to New York City, an hour from headquarters, to be more readily available.

Ernie Hughes catches 40 winks in a service station parking lot in Portland, Ore., after having to stop and get the almost dead batteries for his electric wheelchair charged up. According to Hughes, the two 12-volt batteries for his 3-wheeler take 30 minutes each to fully charge and are good for 25 miles around town.

Malpractice insurance crisis threatens childbirth centers

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Like many women, Mary Klaneski intended to have her new baby in the home surroundings of a childbirth center. But now lots of expectant mothers are making other plans as a nationwide malpractice insurance crisis threatens to put such centers and nurse-midwives out of business.

The Childbirth Center of New Haven, where Mrs. Klaneski had planned to deliver her third child, is one of 10 whose malpractice insurance was being canceled this week.

And an official of the 130-center industry said about one-third of the facilities would end or curtail services by year's end, forcing many women to hospital delivery rooms.

"I don't feel that a hospital is any place to have a baby," said Mrs. Klaneski, who lives in Plymouth. "Birth is a normal, healthy thing to be doing and a hospital is a place to be sick."

At the New Haven center, she received guidance and exercise in natural childbirth, and her husband and two young children were educated about the process of birth.

At the centers, birthing rooms look like bedrooms rather than hospital rooms. Efforts are made to avoid the use of high-technology equipment, and the center staffs can include midwives, nurses and doctors.

Malpractice insurance policies for the New Haven center and nine others were terminated by Mutual Fire, Marine and Inland Insurance Co. of Philadelphia.

The company, which wrote group policies for 40 to 50 birthing centers and half of the nation's 2,900 nurse-midwives, said it has been unable to find risk reinsurance, the practice used by insurance companies to cover themselves against losses.

Mutual Fire President Richard Guilfoyle said the rise in malpractice claims is forcing insurers out of the birthing field.

Several childbirth centers have closed, and others, like the New Haven center, are curtailing services, said Pam Townshend, director of the Family Childbirth Center.

"They can't write insurance if they can't get reinsurance," Kitty Ernst, director of the National Association of Childbearing Centers in Perkiomenville, Pa., said Thursday of the insurance industry's reluctance to continue offering malpractice insurance.

Ms. Ernst expects that another 30 centers will be "closed or on hold" by Dec. 31 as policies come up for renewal.

Birthing centers, which typically charge about half the cost of a hospital delivery, have delivered about 30,000 babies in the last decade. There are about 3.6 million births a year in the United States.

In recent years, some hospitals have included wings that cater to women much the way birthing centers do.

Ms. Townshend attributed the problem of liability insurance to litigious consumers, trial lawyers, insurance companies and competition between obstetricians and a growing number of nurse-midwives.

In Connecticut, annual malpractice premiums run more than $30,000 and reach $80,000 in some states. The insurance industry lumps birthing centers and nurse-midwives in with obstetricians when calculating risk of malpractice claims.

This is inappropriate, Ms. Townshend, Ms. Ernst and others claim.

Only 6 percent of the nation's nurse-midwives have been sued for malpractice since 1974, compared with 60 percent of obstetricians, according to the American College of Nurse-Midwives in Washington, D.C.

Ms. Ernst said there have been only 15 such suits against her association's member centers.

Dream of park becomes reality

By SCOTT FITZGERALD
Staff Writer
Slowly but surely, Howard County Park is becoming a real park.

"This park is for kids who don't have transportation to other city parks. It keeps them off the street," said County Commissioner Louis Brown. The park is located at 1005 N.W. 4th and is in Brown's precinct.

Howard County Commissioners have tentatively budgeted $7,500 to be spent on the park, up from the $5,000 used this year.

In November 1984, the county signed a one-year lease agreement with the Big Spring Independent School District. The lease allows the county use of 11 lots and the former Lakeview Elementary School Building, which serves as a recreational hall. It has been used for different functions including a training facility for the Howard County Boxing Club.

J.V. Martinez who serves as coach of the boxing club says he and Brown "scrounge here and scrounge there" to keep up and maintain the park.

"We've been working on it. With what little material we get, we put it to use," Martinez said.

County funds are designated for the operation and maintenance of the park only. The county cannot spend money on the boxing club or it would violate Article 3, Section 52 of the Texas Constitution which prohibits counties from granting public money to associations.

Current fiscal year expenditures according to records from the county auditor's office show the county paying $1,268 for utilities and telephone; $1,667 on repairs and maintenance and $1,593 on athletic supplies and equipment.

Athletic supplies and equipment consist of a heater, air conditioner, ping pong equipment, basketball backboards, basketballs, a volleyball net and balls, boxing gloves, tables, benches and jump ropes.

"Not one cent of county money goes to the boxing team," Brown said.

"We don't have anything to do with the boxing club. Just the building and the grounds," said County Judge Milton Kirby.

He also said that since the park is within city limits, it must comply with city ordinances.

Brown said volunteers do maintenance work. The park's recreational hall was recently sanded and is due for a paint job soon, Brown said.

He said that future plans for the park include installing barbecue pits, planting grass and designating certain areas to serve as softball fields.

He also plans to install another door, entrance ramps and commodes in the recreational hall that will conform with federal regulations on the handicapped.

Study warns of pesticide danger

WASHINGTON (AP) — While pesticide contamination of food gets much attention, a new study released Saturday said the chemicals could be making more than 300,000 farm workers ill every year.

"There is tremendous media attention when there are large numbers of consumers involved, but farm workers face these problems on a daily basis. These problems need more attention," said Gus Spaeth, president of the World Resources Institute, sponsor of the study. The institute is a Washington-based environmentalist think tank.

Spaeth spoke at a news conference last week in advance of Saturday's release of the report, entitled "Field Duty: U.S. Farmworkers and Pesticide Safety."

The institute's news conference was held as California health officials grappled with the problem of pesticide contamination of watermelons that caused illness in more than 300 people in Western states.

The study's estimate of 313,000 pesticide-caused illnesses among the nation's 4 million farm workers was quoted from an unpublished work by epidemiologist Molly Joel Coye of the University of California School of Medicine.

One of the study's authors, Robert F. Wasserstrom, said the estimate was highly uncertain, and he thought it was an "upper limit."

However, Charles Horwitz of the Migrant Legal Action Project said he believed the estimate of 313,000 was too low.

Betsy Buchan, spokeswoman for the National Agricultural Chemical Association, said she had not seen the report, but added, "I would like to see the data. I've never heard of such an outrageous number. The only kind of number I've ever seen was 20,000 as an outside limit."

Ms. Coye's estimate was based on extrapolation of reported California pesticide illnesses, taken from workmen's compensation data, to the nation, Wasserstrom said.

Because some surveys indicate that 75 percent of California farm workers do not realize they are eligible for workmen's compensation, the estimate could be lower than the true incidence of pesticide-caused illnesses.

On the other hand, pesticides generally are more dangerous to farm workers in hot climates where little rain falls, the situation for much of California agriculture, he said.

Aerobics instructor says weight was reason she lost job

HOUSTON (AP) — A 5-foot-6, 135-pound aerobics instructor says she lost her job at a trendy downtown Houston health studio because she was overweight.

But an aerobics coordinator at the Texas Club said Iaci Lowry, 26, was not fired and quit the job after she was advised to lose some weight.

Lowry, 26, an employee at the Texas Club since May 1983, said in a recent interview that aerobics coordinator Diane Keaney confronted her June 18 and told her to lose weight if she wanted to keep her job.

"I'm not a skinny person. I never have been," said Lowry, adding that she can do little to change her basic body shape. She now works at another aerobics studio that does not impose weight restrictions.

The club "wants the 'Perfect' group of instructors with twiggy legs and bodies," said Lowry referring to the recently released movie about aerobics students obsessed with physical fitness.

The movie, titled "Perfect," stars Jamie Lee Curtis as a shape-ly aerobics instructor and John Travolta as a reporter writing a story about the studio where Curtis' character works.

"I'm not asking for Jamie Lee Curtis. I'm not asking for 'Perfect,'" said Keaney. "I'm asking for something that looks good."

She insisted Lowry quit after she was advised to lose weight.

Lowry said that about two years ago she started working at the facility, she began lifting weights, running and swimming to train for a triathlon competition.

She says her training caused her calf muscles to become "huge" and "hard as a rock."

Steve Saxton, regional vice president of the Western Athletic Clubs chain, which owns the Texas Club, says image is important to a private social, dining and athletic facility.

Most of the club's members are 25 to 50 years old and earn at least $30,000 annually, club officials say. Many of them are lawyers and bankers.

Bruce Griffiths, attorney for the American Civil Liberties Union in Houston, said the law is "not clear cut" whether weight policies are discriminatory.

Wife of Dr Pepper chairman shot by teen purse snatcher

DALLAS (AP) — The wife of the Dr Pepper board chairman and chief operating was recovering from three gunshot wounds today inflicted by a teen-age purse-snatcher outside a posh Neiman-Marcus store Friday afternoon, authorities said.

Margaret Virginia Clements, the wife of W.W. "Foots" Clements, was shot in the face, chest and arm by a young man in the parking lot of the Neiman-Marcus store at the NorthPark Center at about 3:40 p.m., police said.

Police said Mrs. Clements struggled with her attacker, who fired two warning shots before turning his gun on her. Police said the attacker also fired once at a witness who chased him.

"He wanted the purse, but she fought him for the purse," said robbery investigator C.O. Prewitt.

"He fired two shots in the air, but she wouldn't surrender."

A high school student was arrested nearby a short time after the shooting and Mrs. Clements' purse, a gold chain and a .22-caliber revolver were recovered, police said.

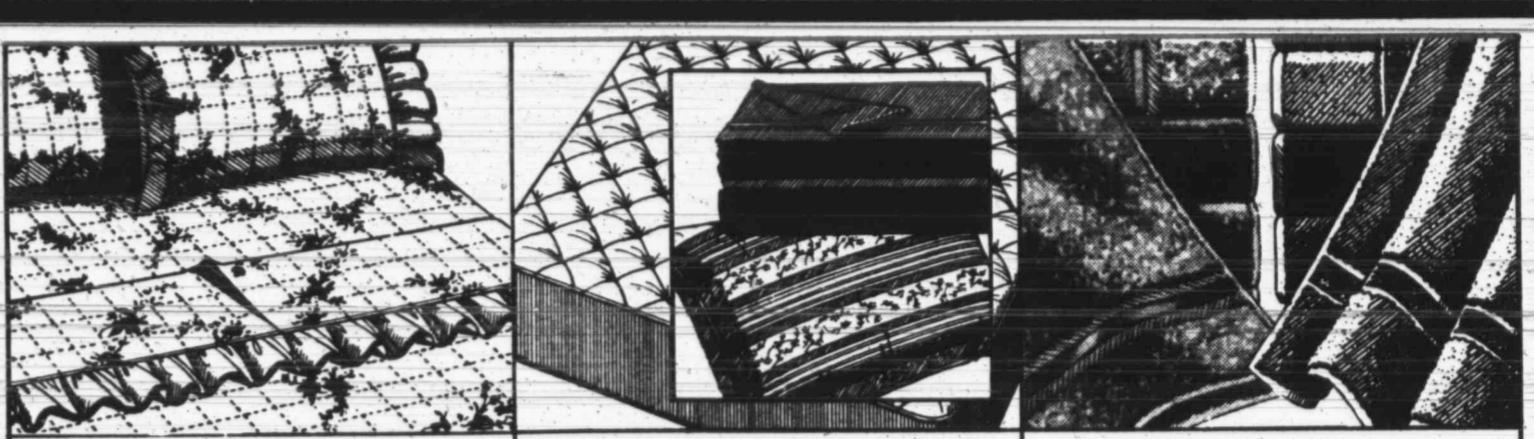

Clements told The Dallas Morning News that his wife, who underwent surgery at Baylor University Medical Center Friday, is expected to recover fully.

Clements said his wife was shot in the face, chest and shoulder. He said a fourth bullet grazed her arm.

He said his wife had credit cards and less than $100 in cash in her purse.

"It is not beyond her nature to protect herself," he said, "but she's not feisty."

Andujar, Guerrero to miss All-Star game

NEW YORK (AP) — The National League All-Stars apparently won't have the services of 15-game winner Joaquin Andujar of the St. Louis Cardinals because his feelings are hurt and slugger Pedro Guerrero of the Los Angeles Dodgers because of an ailing back.

There was no word from the National League Saturday whether either or both would be replaced on the all-star squad.

Andujar, the ace right-hander of the Cardinals, said Friday night he felt he was being snubbed by NL Manager Dick Williams, also skipper of the San Diego Padres, and would not pitch in Tuesday's night game against the American League in Minneapolis.

When asked if he might change his mind, Andujar said in St. Louis, "When I talk, it comes from my heart. When I make a decision, it's made."

The all-star status of Guerrero, who set a National League record with 15 home runs in June, was uncertain because of an aggravated back injury which will force him to miss the weekend's series at Chicago.

Guerrero may be lost for two weeks, according to a Dodgers spokesman, who added that Guerrero wanted to play Tuesday night. He was selected to the NL squad as a reserve outfielder.

Andujar said he was upset because Williams intimated that the Friday night's winner between LaMarr Hoyt of San Diego and Andujar would start the All-Star Game. Hoyt and Goose Gosage combined for a three-hitter in a 2-0 triumph over the Cardinals.

"I've got 152 innings, nine complete games, 15-4 with nine complete games. I don't have to prove anything to anybody," the Cards hurler said. "He talked like LaMarr Hoyt is better than I am against the American League. He treats me like a dummy."

Williams answered, "What I said was there was a heck of a (rivalry) between two pitchers," said Williams while explaining but not apologizing for his remarks.

"He (Andujar) pitched a great game; our guy just pitched a better one. 'I'm sure the league president will take a look at that (but) I'd bet they'll still play the game.'"

American stars down Texas

By CHARLIE ALCORN
Sports Writer

The Big Spring American League All-Stars used the 7-hit pitching of Josh Wooten, along with timely hitting and defense to eliminate the Texas League All-Stars 8-4 in a third round game of the District 3 playoffs Saturday night at the National League Field.

It was a well played game throughout with Wooten and opposing pitcher Angel Villa of the Texas League showing fine control around the plate. Both pitchers went the distance, but it was Wooten, who held the Texas League batters in check most of the game.

The American league got out to a fast start in the top of the first inning with two runs off two hits and an error. Catcher Jonathan Downey, who had three hits in the ball game, drove in shortstop Shannon Coots, after Cort Peterson came home on a passed ball, to account for the two runs.

The Texas League stars answered with one run in the bottom of the inning on an RBI single by Villa, driving in leadoff man Dimas Morales, to make the score 2-1 after one complete inning.

Following a scoreless second inning, the American league added a run in the top of the third on an RBI single by Wooten that knocked in Downey with two outs.

Dimas Morales kept the Texas leaguers close with a solo home run to lead off the third inning, to put the score at 3-2 going into the fourth inning.

The Americans scored two more runs in the top of the fourth to extend their lead to 5-2. Billy Bob Sumpter scored after hitting a double, on Peterson's two-base shot with one away. Next batter Shannon Coots drove in Patterson with a sharp single to left field to end the scoring for the American league.

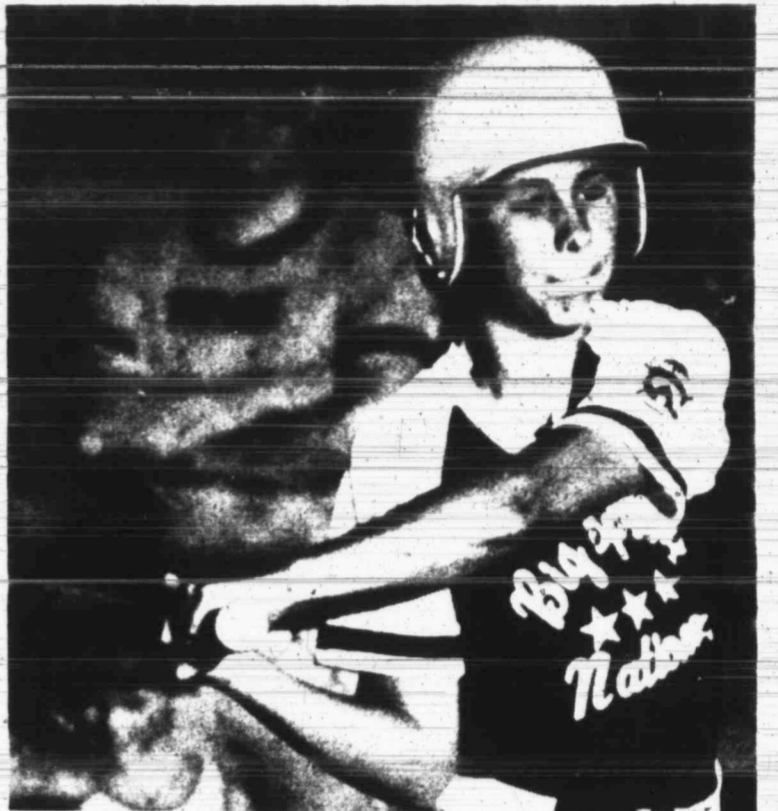

The Texas Leaguers remained close, adding one run in the bottom half of the inning on an RBI single by Shane Kemper, driving in Donny Cervantes, to make the score 5-3 after four complete innings of play.

Cort Peterson lashed his third hit of the ball game in the fifth inning, driving in Brian Neary to stretch the lead to 6-3 after five full innings.

Wooten set the Texas stars down in order in the bottom of the fifth inning to remain at 6-3 going into the last inning of play.

The Americans added two more runs in their last at-bat. Downey led off with his third single of the game and scored on a throwing error by Morales after advancing to third base on a pair of wild pitches by Villa. Lamont Jolola drove in Neary with an RBI single to finish off the scoring at 8-3 heading into the bottom half of the inning.

Wooten set the first two batters down in order before Coots mishandled a hot grounder by Ricky Escobido. Escobido scored on a single by Shane Kemper to make the score 8-4. Wooten got final batter Marvin Rubio on strikes to end the game for the Americans.

An All-Star from the Big Spring National League takes a mighty cut during third round action of the District 3 Little League being held in Big Spring this week. Action will continue through this Saturday at both National and American League fields.

The American stars will now face the Lamesa All-Stars versus the Coahoma All-Stars at 8 p.m. Monday night. The International League made it to the third round by eliminating Midland Western Saturday night, 9-6.

Monday night's other game will feature the Lamesa All-Stars versus the Coahoma All-Stars at 8 p.m. Monday night. The International League made it to the third round by eliminating Midland Western Saturday night, 9-6.

Edwards catches Hinkle at Busch

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — Danny Edwards shot a 3-under-par 68 and overtook a faltering Lon Hinkle for the lead in Saturday's third round of the $500,000 Anheuser-Busch Golf Classic.

"There's not any magic to it," said Edwards. "Get some good putts and here we are."

Edwards held a one-stroke lead over Mark Wiebe, who carded a 64 over the 6,746-yard, par-71 Kingsmill Golf Club course.

In third place one shot back were John Mahaffey, who won the Anheuser-Busch in 1981, Keith Fergus, Mike Reid and Roger Maltbie.

Mike Hulbert and Frank Conner were at 8-under 205, and Curtis Strange, the host pro at Kingsmill and leading money-winner on this year's Professional Golfers' Association Tour, was among a group of five players in fifth place at 7-under.

Hinkle, who led the first two rounds with a 132, was still ahead when he made the turn Saturday at 11-under, but suffered a pair of double-bogeys and two single bogeys on the back nine, finishing with a 76, good for a seventh-place tie at 208.

"I've been playing some good golf the last couple of months," said Edwards, 34, of Edmond, Okla., who switched to a cross-handed putting grip on Thursday.

"I just have not had as many good putting weeks as I would like to have, so I'm just doing some experimenting and seeing how things go," added Edwards, a four-time winner since joining the PGA Tour in 1975. "It's just kind of a change of pace."

Edwards, who is 71st on this year's money list, sank an 18-foot birdie putt on the 437-yard, par-4 fourth hole, then parred the next nine holes.

An 8-iron shot on the 383-yard 14th set up a 12-foot birdie putt, and Edwards knocked home another birdie from the same distance on the par-5 15th.

"I feel I'm a very good player," said Edwards, who last won at the 1983 Quad Cities Open, "but it isn't any secret — the man who puts the best will win the tournament."

Wiebe began the day at 3-under 139 but registered five birdies and an eagle to move to 10-under after 13 holes. Wiebe, who is 117th on this year's money list, bogeyed the par-3 17th, birdied the 18th and finished at 10-under for the three rounds.

Wiebe said there are "seven or eight top qualifying schools I have been through. I don't want to go back anymore to tour school. It's the hardest tournament and the most pressure."

Hinkle, a long-hitting 13-year Tour veteran seeking his first win since 1979, bogeyed the par-4 14th hole to drop to 10-under before his real troubles began.

He hooked his tee shot on the 506-yard 15th out of bounds, leading to his first double-bogey.

The final round will be televised by ABC-TV, starting at 3:30 p.m., EDT.

NANCY LOPEZ watches a fairway shot during the third round of the Women's U.S. Open at the Baltusrol Golf Club in Springfield, N.J. LOPEZ was the second round leader and remained in strong contention for her second Open title.

Baker takes lead in U.S. Open golf

SPRINGFIELD, N.J. (AP) — Kathy Baker has never led a tournament after three rounds, and Judy Clark has never won one as a professional.

They will go after the 40th U.S. Women's Open title Sunday with one major obstacle standing in their way in the final round — Nancy Lopez.

Baker, also a non-winner as a professional, fired a 4-under-par 68 Saturday to take a one-stroke lead over Lopez and the record-tying Clark, who had an Open record 7-under-par 65.

Lopez will clearly be the one to beat as she seeks her 33rd career victory.

"I feel no pressure," Lopez said. "I think if I play my game, think smart and be patient, it will be my turn. One shot isn't much."

Baker, who took the lead on the final hole by rolling in a 15-foot birdie, said she played a very consistent round and noted that her putts started dropping on the back nine.

"I don't think I have ever led a tournament after three rounds," said Baker. "I will just go out and take tomorrow like a new day and do the best I can."

Baker had five birdies and a bogey on the back nine and had an Open record 54-hole total of 6-under-par 210 on the par-72, 6,274-yard upper course at the Baltusrol Golf Club.

The old 54-hole record of 5 under par was set in 1980 by Amy Alcott.

An overnight thunderstorm had soaked the course and Clark said it helped lower scores on Saturday.

"I think we caught the course as easy as it is going to play," she said. "I think after the rain last night and no wind today the greens were really holding."

While the 24-year-old Baker held the lead, she had to share the spotlight with Clark, a 35-year-old non-winner on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour.

Clark tied the Open record for low round with her 65 and charged from 2 over par into contention. She birdied four of the first six holes and finished the round with nine birdies and two bogeys.

The other 65 in Open competition was shot by Sally Little in 1978 in Indianapolis. However, that was done on a par-71 course, and was only 6 under par.

Lopez, who had a share of the lead for the first two rounds, had a third round 1-under-par 71 that saw her struggle with her putter. The 28-year-old golfer is seeking her first Open title and fourth victory in her last seven outings.

Two others golfers will have to be considered contenders in the final round, simply because they are so close to the lead.

Janet Coles and Vicki Alvarez, who were tied for second place one shot behind Lopez after the second round, both shot 71s and were tied at 212, two shots behind Baker.

Betsy King was the only other player under par in the field of 62 golfers that survived the cut. She was at 1-under-par 215.

Russian shatters world vault mark

PARIS (AP) — Sergei Bubka of the Soviet Union broke his own world pole vault record Saturday, clearing 19 feet, 8 1/4 inches during the Paris International Track and Field Meet.

On his third attempt, the 22-year-old Bubka shattered his own record of 19-5 3/4, which he set last Aug. 31 in Rome.

He barely grazed the crossbar with his chest on his record-setting 6-meter jump Saturday, but the bar held firm. Raising his arms in victory, the Soviet immediately was mobbed by photographers and well-wishers.

It was the only world record of the day and overshadowed a fine performance by Mary Slaney of the United States in the women's 1,500 meters.

Slaney, in her last meet before her long-awaited showdown with South African Zola Budd in London on July 20, turned in a winning time of 3 minutes, 59.84 seconds. It was the best 1,500-meter time of the season but far short of the world record of 3:52.47 set by Tatiana Kazankina of the Soviet Union on Aug. 13, 1981 in Zurich.

During the 1984 Olympic Games in Los Angeles, Slaney was involved in a collision with Budd, which knocked both women out of contention in the 3,000 meters.

Slaney, the former Mary Decker, bitterly blamed Budd for the accident — an accusation for which she later was criticized by her own American teammates.

After receiving a standing ovation from the 5,000 spectators at Paris' Jean Boin Stadium, Bubka told reporters: "Yes it was a dream (to reach 6 meters), but that was the dream of all pole vaulters."

"Last year I felt I was ready to reach 6 meters (19-8 1/4). But I missed my chances. I thought I'd make it one day, and I just kept working."

One reporter reminded Bubka that exactly a year ago, on July 13, 1984, he set an earlier world record of 19-4 1/4 in London.

"The number 13 seems to bring me luck," the Soviet said,

Cardinal skipper Herzog awarded

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The St. Louis Cardinals on Saturday rewarded Manager Whitey Herzog for the club's first-place standing in the National League East so far this season by extending Herzog's contract through the 1988 season.

Fred Kuhlmann, chief operating officer of the club, said Herzog, 53, will become the highest paid manager in the National League next year, and one of the highest paid managers in baseball.

Herzog, who guided the Cardinals to a World Series championship in 1982, said he expected to finish his managing career in St. Louis.

"This will probably be my last stop," said Herzog, who has also managed the Kansas City Royals, Texas Rangers and California Angels. "As long as they want me to manage this team, I'll be here."

Herzog's old contract ran through the 1986 season. Kuhlmann said Herzog's salary for the 1985 season would not change, but that Herzog would receive more money beginning next year. Specific details of the pact were not disclosed.

August A. Busch Jr., the 86-year-old chairman and president of the team, announced the signing of Herzog.

"Whitey has done an outstanding job of leading this team," Busch said. "He is one of the best, if not the best manager in all of baseball."

The Cardinals were picked to finish in the bottom three of the National League East this year, but have received strong performances from many veteran players and rookie Vince Coleman to vault to the top of the division standings.

Going into Saturday night's game, St. Louis was 2 1/2 games in front of the second-place New York Mets.

Herzog's job was thought to be in jeopardy before the season started, as the Cardinals underwent changes in the front office and made several trades in the offseason.

SERGEI BUBKA, of the Soviet Union shouts with joy as he clears the bar on way to a world record jump of 6 meters (19-8 1/4) at the Paris Track and Field meet Saturday.

Day camp cures the Summertime Blues

Chad Webb, 10, peers into a jar after a successful frog-hunting expedition at Comanche Trail Lake. On this outing, older kids could fish and hunt for tadpoles, while little campers cooled off in the wading pool and hunted for bugs.

"They were so hot, they couldn't stand it," said YMCA Day Camp Director Hannah Coleman as she watched screaming children splash around in the wading pool at at Comanche Trail Park.

A shoe goes flying through the air and lands on nearby grass as the children dunk a counselor in the pool. They are playing in the water with their clothes on after a hot afternoon of bug hunting. Kids are excited...screaming...laughing.

Over at the lake, some campers are fishing like Huck Finn and Tom Sawyer on the Mississippi River. Instead of fish, others are catching tadpoles and minnows. They want to see their tadpoles turn into frogs...if the tadpoles live that long.

Chad Webb, 10, holds up a jar with a small frog inside it for Coleman (alias "Mom") to see. He filled it with lake water and added some minnows to keep the frog company and "so he will be at home," he says.

The youth studied entomology this past week. They made bug expeditions to the park to find specimens to preserve and study. Thursday, they worked on bug identification and prepared their bug costumes for the big Extermination Dance (also known as a Bug Stomp) planned for Friday.

"We try to make (the kids) feel important and that they are worthwhile people, that they can do something. We try to give them as positive a self-image as possible," Coleman said. "It seems to work pretty well because the kids like it."

About 35 to 40 youth participate in the camp week after week (their parents sign them up weekly). About 10 to 15 youths drop in for a few days or a week and then leave to go back to their other set of parents.

"Many of the kids are from broken homes. They are good kids but they have special problems," Coleman said. "Those with both parents (together) are in the minority." She has found this prominent trend during the three years she has been associated with the camp and claims it's becoming more pronounced.

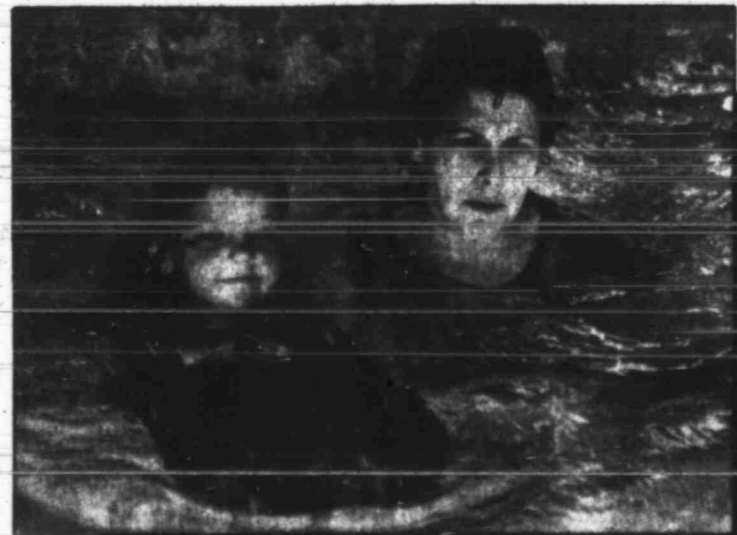

The counselors try to always listen to the kids while they are actively working. When working with their hands, the youth often begin talking about their problems, Coleman said. "We listen to them. We can't solve their problems but can give them ideas of how to solve them."

Upcoming theme weeks for the campers include: Circus Week, Water Week, Jungle Week, "Wish I Were" Week, Pet Care Week, Fiesta Week and Olympics Week. Most of the activities planned will relate to each week's theme.

During Wish I Were Week's concentration on careers, they may visit Malone-Hogan Hospital, the Police Department and Fire Department. The older children will go on a campout at the Davis Mountains in August and visit Fort Davis. The youth plan to take field trips to the Permian Museum and Dennis the Menace Park in Midland, Water Wonderland and Monahans Sand Hills. In addition to learning things related to each week's theme, they have had swimming, racquetball, volleyball, and gymnastics lessons.

Weddings

Russell-Holladay

Stephanie Russell became the bride of Adam Holladay in a Friday evening ceremony at First Baptist Church Chapel with the Rev. Kenny Platte, pastor of Salem Baptist Church, officiating at the rite.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Russell, Garden City Rt. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Hoyle Holladay of Snyder.

The couple was wed before a 15-branch crescent candelabrum, two nine-branch candelabra and two seven-branch candelabra, all entwined with greenery. The seven-branch candelabra were accented with yellow and white flowers. Beverly Norman, pianist, Joy Grimes, organist, and Leslie Newton, vocalist, provided music for the ceremony. The bride was given in marriage by her father.

The bride wore a traditional gown of peau de soie satin and Chantilly lace. The lace-embellished, fitted bodice featured a V-yoke, stand-up collar and full lace sleeves which were closed at the wrists with pearl buttons. The flared, pleated skirt fell from a dropped waist into a chapel-length train. The skirt and train was appliqued with wide French embroidered Alencon lace. The gown was made by the bride's mother.

The bride carried a nosegay of yellow rose buds and stephanotis.

Jane Meyer was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Rebecca Russell, Cindy Stanley and Kathy Lane, sisters of the bride. Kelly Lane and Raegan Stanley were flower girls.

Steve Clark was best man. Groomsmen were Ismael Tercero and Tracy Holladay and Greg Holladay, brothers of the bridegroom. Rusty Henderson and Ronnie Ereckson were ushers. Kimberly Lane and Shae Gowin were candlelighters.

Following the ceremony, the couple was feted at a reception in the church's Parlor. The bride's table featured a three-tiered wedding cake decorated with roses and topped with yellow silk bells. A white embroidered cutwork cloth and a floral arrangement in a silver vase completed the table. The bridegroom's table depicted his chosen profession as a petroleum geologist. The yellow and white cake featured a pump jack, and his grandfather's geologist hammer adorned the table. A white hand-crocheted cloth made by the bridegroom's grandmother and a yellow underlay covered the table. The table was centered with an arrangement of yellow lilies.

MRS. ADAM HOLLADAY
...formerly Stephanie Russell

The bride graduated from Big Spring High School and attended Sul Ross University in Alpine. The bridegroom graduated from Snyder High School and Western Texas College, both in Snyder. He attends Sul Ross University.

Following a wedding trip, the couple will live in Alpine.

Capps-Pounds

The Sand Springs Church of Christ was the setting for the July 4 wedding of Mary Capps and Doug Pounds. Eric Dickey, minister, officiated at the 2 p.m. rite before an archway flanked by two spiral candelabra entwined with pittisporium and French blue carnations.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Joe Capps, Coahoma. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Eldon Pounds, 1211 Madison.

Leslie Newton, vocalist, performed music for the ceremony. The bride was given in marriage by her parents.

The bride wore a white taffeta gown overlaid with Chantilly lace. It was fashioned with a V-shaped lace flounce accenting the front and back, a satin tie sash and a formal-length skirt. The bride carried a cascading bouquet of French blue roses, camellia and daisies.

Twila Jo Pounds, sister of the bridegroom, was maid of honor. Shelley Mayes, niece of the bridegroom, was flower girl.

Troy Hyden was best man. David Mayes, nephew of the bridegroom, was ring bearer. Ushers were Gary Mayes, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, and Andy Weaver of Coahoma, cousin of the bride.

Following the ceremony, the couple was feted at a reception at the church's Fellowship Hall. The bride's table was draped with a white lace cloth and featured a five-tiered white cake. The table was centered with cascades of light French blue roses and the bride's bouquet. The bridegroom's table was covered with a lace cloth and featured a German chocolate cake.

The bride graduated from Coahoma High School. The bridegroom graduated from Big Spring High School and attended a year of college. He is employed by Gamco Industries Inc.

Following a wedding trip to an undisclosed location, the couple is living in Sand Springs.

Anniversary

The Joe Albert DeAndas

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Albert DeAnda, 3700 Parkway, renewed their wedding vows Saturday morning in celebration of their 25th wedding anniversary.

The mass was held at Sacred Heart Catholic Church and was followed by a reception at the church's Youth Center. The event was hosted by the couple's children. Guitarists performing at the reception were: Felipe Munoz, Juan Rodriguez, Victor Rodriguez, Mary Munoz, Margie Rodriguez, Mary Paredes, Katie Hernandez, Lydia Molina and Ruben Munoz.

DeAnda and the former Margaret Mendez are natives of Big Spring. They met in June of 1959 after seeing each other quite often at Garcia's Grocery Store, which was owned by Mrs. DeAnda's aunt. The couple was wed July 9, 1960 at Sacred Heart Catholic Church with the Rev. Patrick O'Casey officiating.

The DeAndas have three children: Joe Albert DeAnda Jr., JoAnn DeAnda of El Paso, and John Anthony DeAnda. They also have three grandchildren.

The couple has lived in Big Spring throughout their marriage. DeAnda is employed by Albert's Upholstry, and Mrs. DeAnda is a nurse at Hall-Bennett Clinic. They are members of Sacred Heart Catholic Church and enjoy traveling and bowling.

Lifestyle guidelines

We will be pleased to announce the news of your engagement, wedding, silver or golden anniversary in the Lifestyle section of the Big Spring Herald. We try to use the story on the date you request, but sometimes space does not permit this. The information must be submitted to us on a form available at the Herald no later than Wednesday noon before the Sunday it is to be published. The form must include a name and telephone number of a person whom we can reach during the day for more information. We will use a picture of the couple in the announcement. Or in the case of engagement announcements where a picture of the couple is not available, we will use one of the bride-elect. The picture must be a professional quality studio photograph. We prefer a 5 x 7 glossy black and white print. We ask for this kind of photograph so that it will reproduce well in the newspaper. Following the picture's publication, it may be picked up at the Lifestyle department. The information for the story may be brought to the Lifestyle department of the Herald, which is located at 710 Scoury or it may be mailed to Lifestyle Department, Big Spring Herald, P.O. Box 1431, Big Spring, Texas 79720. Call us at (915) 263-7331 if we can help with more information or clarification of our policies.

ENGAGEMENTS
Information of engagement announcements must be submitted to the Lifestyle department of the Herald anytime after the engagement is a reality until at least three weeks prior to the wedding. Anything closer than three weeks will not be published. The engagement form must be submitted no later than Wednesday noon prior to the Sunday it is to be published.

If the bride-elect, prospective bridegroom or their parents do not now or have never lived in our area, we need to know why you are submitting your engagement to the Herald. If only grandparents live in our area, please give their names and addresses.

WEDDINGS
If a wedding writeup is submitted to the Herald after the wedding has occurred, the space allotted to it will diminish according to the length of time that has passed since the wedding.

BIRTHS
Local hospitals supply information for Storckclub. If a child is born elsewhere in the newspaper's circulation area, or is born to out-of-town parents with local or area grandparents, please contact the Herald Lifestyle Department with Storckclub information.

Information needed for Storckclub is: newborn's name, sex, time and date of birth, weight, place of birth, parents' name and address. If the baby is born outside the circulation area but has local grandparents, please include their name and address. The local grandparents serve as the area connection for the information.

Anniversaries

The Clarence Benzes

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence (Chuck) Benz, 2807 Apache Dr., will observe their 25th wedding anniversary tonight by dining at the Brandin Iron Inn. The couple also will be honored along with Mr. and Mrs. Jack Wiseman on July 26 during a joint celebration with family in Carlsbad, N.M. It will be the Wiseman's 50th wedding anniversary. Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Wiseman of Carlsbad, N.M. will host the event.

Benz, originally of Carlsbad, N.M., met the former Carol Snoad in Miami, Fla. in July of 1960. She is originally of Union City, N.J. The couple was wed July 14, 1960 in Dothan, Ala. The county judge officiated at the rite.

The Benzes have one child, George Randall Benz of Atlanta, Ga. They have lived in Florida, Georgia and Texas during their marriage.

Benz is circulation manager of the Big Spring Herald. Mrs. Benz is gift shop buyer at Malone-Hogan Hospital. She formerly was a preschool teacher at St. Mary's Episcopal School for six years.

The Benzes are members of First Baptist Church and he is a member of Kiwanis Club. Mrs. Benz enjoys walking Scenic Mountain, doing yardwork and growing plants. Benz enjoys watching her. "It hasn't been dull," Mrs. Benz said about their marriage. "Living with Carol is like living with a big barrel

TIME FOR A CHANGE

If you have lost some weight and changed the size and shape of your body, a new hair style should accompany it. What may have looked great when you were 30 pounds overweight will probably look unruly on your new slimmer frame. Mentally, you will also be ready for something new after putting in so much time and effort in losing the weight. A new hairstyle is a great way to reward yourself. And, speaking of treats, you would be surprised how many women get new hairdos each time they return from a vacation. A suntan makes eyes look brighter and softens features. A change in hairdo to complement these changes is definitely in order.

Highlighting one's hair, streaking, frosting or perhaps a whole new shade can create an entire new image and outlook on life. If you feel the need for a change, contact us here at LA CONTESSA, 1508 Marcy. We are open Tues.-Sat. to service your hair care needs. We can be reached at 267-2187.

The Ben Lloyds

Audie and Ben Lloyd of Andrews, formerly of Big Spring, will celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary July 27 with a reception at the Church of Christ Fellowship Hall in Andrews.

The event will be from 2 to 4 p.m. It is hosted by their children.

The Lloyds were married in 1935. They lived and ran a business in Big Spring on two different occasions in the 1940s and 1950s.

Home Improvement Specialists

by Bob and Jan Noyes
THE ATTIC FAN

One alternative to energy-consuming air conditioning is to use an attic fan to cool a home. There is a lag between the time that outside air cools after sunset on a summer night and the time that a house cools. The purpose of an attic fan is to speed the cooling of the house by pulling air in through open windows up through the attic and out. When the fan is on, air can be let through to the attic either by partly opening the attic door or by installing a louver that automatically does the same thing.

At BOB'S CUSTOM WOODWORK, we do all kinds of remodeling and rebuilding. We also specialize in custom millwork and furniture repair/refinishing. We can repair and replace veneers, and strip and refinish antiques. Our crew of skilled professionals can fix up your home and your furniture. Come to Bldg. 613 in the Industrial Park, or phone 267-5811. Open M-F, 8-12, 1-5 or by appt.

— HINT —
An attic fan can cool air at the peak of an attic by as much as 40 percent.

Dear Abby

Woman to Jewish fiance: Practice what you preach

DEAR ABBY: I teach a class in basic Judaism, primarily designed for people who are contemplating converting to Judaism.

I am also an ardent fan of yours and have found many items in your column helpful in my teaching. I am enclosing a letter I clipped from your column in the Rocky Mountain News about five years ago. I think it is of your best.

Some people may not listen to a rabbi or a teacher, but they will listen to Dear Abby. I hope you agree that this letter is worth repeating.

MAX FRANKEL
CONGREGATION
EMANUEL, DENVER

DEAR MR. FRANKEL: I do.

And here it is:
DEAR ABBY: I am Jewish, 33, was raised in the Jewish faith and had the bar mitzvah when I was 13. However, I do not attend services except on the high holy days once a year.

Last year I fell in love with a wonderful gentile girl. Connie is 19 and an atheist. I want to marry her and out of respect to my parents I want to be married in our synagogue by the rabbi who has been a family friend for many years. The problem is, the rabbi can't marry us unless Connie converts to Judaism.

She is willing, and even agrees to raise our children in the Jewish faith providing I become a practicing Jew. She says if she takes the Jewish faith she will follow it, but she's not going to be the only Jew in the family. This means attending services every Friday night and observing all the holidays.

What do you think?

DEAR DAVID: I think she's terrific. Grab her!

DEAR ABBY: I lost my beloved wife three months ago to cancer. She was 65, I am 66. We had been married for 45 years and loved each other very much. During her illness I became reacquainted with a girl I knew in high school. (We became reacquainted at the hospital while visiting our spouses.) Her husband died of cancer five days after my wife.

Our friendship quickly blossomed into love, and we want to marry. My question: Out of respect to our deceased mates, how long must we wait before marrying again?

LIFE IS SHORT

DEAR LIFE: The time to show respect is while your spouse is living, and if you have done so, you need not be concerned about how long you should wait before remarrying.

However, you would both be wise to give yourselves sufficient time to work through your respective grief. Having just been through an emotionally draining experience, it's easy to confuse consolation, comfort, understanding and even relief with "love." Give yourselves a little more time before making a legal commitment.

Altrusa Club appoints new committee chairmen

Committee chairmen were appointed during the Altrusa Club luncheon meeting July 11 at Holiday Inn. A meeting of the committee chairmen and officers will be held at the home of President Mary Lynn Welch July 16. Plans for upcoming programs and preparations for the yearbook will be made. At that meeting, the members will decide where they want to go in their club work during the coming club year.

Quotes Worth Re-Quoting

"You may see ads offering bargain contact lenses at $40 or even less. Chances are the price covers just the lenses and minimal service, so read the small type for the cost of fitting and examination."
CHANGING TIMES, February 1984.

"Your best buy is usually a package price that includes a thorough diagnostic eye examination; the lenses, necessary care kits; individualized wearing and caring instructions; and unlimited follow-up office visits over a specified time for post-adaptation care."
FEELING GREAT, November 1984.

"Don't bargain-hunt for contact lenses or be tempted by advertisements for cut-rate contacts. Generally, you get what you pay for, and when lenses are sold at a super discount, the company is probably skimping on quality in the lens or service, which, either way, can spell trouble for your eyes."
TEEN, November 1984.

"Whenever you buy contacts, be sure you look at the quality of the total package. Viewing your entire purchase carefully can spell the difference between being 'red-eyed' with problems and seeing the world through 'rose-colored' lenses."

Dr. Donohue

Emphysema victim wants to exercise

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I have had lung (emphysema and bronchitis). Now I want to get some exercise, some level of fitness. In my condition, what can I do? — B.R.

You're starting with a couple of strikes against you, but you know that. Damaged lungs won't allow a whole lot of oxygen to pass into the blood to support a great deal of exercise. And the lung muscles themselves are weakened from disuse.

But let's emphasize the positive, and just how much of the positive there is to work with will come to light with a good examination. Please don't try a program without that, for low blood levels of oxygen can make the heart beat very erratically under stress.

Your doctor can measure the amount of oxygen in your blood during exercise, and that will give him an idea of your exercise tolerance. At the same time he can evaluate your heart performance under stress.

I know one doctor who asks his emphysema-bronchitis patients to take a 10-minute walk as a test, walking as briskly and as far as possible in that period. Some can make only 300 yards, and the patients are warned to stop as soon as they get short of breath, no matter how long or how far they have walked in one stretch. Many can improve from a five-minute walk to as much as an hour walk in a month.

What you must remember is that you are not improving your lungs or reversing damage already done. You are, however, training those breathing muscles which were weakened from lack of exercise. You are also training your body to get by on the limited amount of oxygen the lungs can deliver to the blood.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: The latest locker room talk is about soda loading. What's your reading on this? — C.Z.

Let's wait until the evidence comes in on this, OK?

They're talking about loading up with sodium bicarb, which some people use as an antacid. The theory involves how muscles build lactic acid when used at a fast and furious clip. That causes tired muscles. The soda-loaders feel that by taking the bicarb they can neutralize the acid buildup and increase their endurance.

There's not enough evidence in to say it really works. And you can cause stomach upset, if you get too much sodium. Let the kitchen counter physiologists talk, but forget the idea for now.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I am 16 and began jogging early this spring. Recently, my father decided to join me. He used to jog but has been relatively inactive, for about a year. He is about 25 pounds overweight, in his 50s and eats a lot of cholesterol. I'm afraid he will try to push himself and try to keep up with his old self. Would you please stress the importance of warming up and cooling down and taking it easy? I've tried to tell him before, but he doesn't listen, and I think if he reads this it will (hopefully) make a big difference. — Worried.

Listen, dad, all that inactivity may have deconditioned your body more than you figured. Resumption of vigorous exercise for a man your age should really come only after a checkup. Warming up and cooling down will prevent injuries to muscles that normally don't have this kind of stress. And you should do stretches before you run.

Not all back pain originates in the back. In his newest booklet, Dr. Donohue explains the spine, its muscles and nerves and how you can help yourself avoid back problems or ease those you may already have. For a copy of the new booklet, "Backache and Spine Problems," send $1.00 and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to "Dr. Donohue, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, IL 60611.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Dreams more than entertainment

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — Paying attention to your dreams is a good way to get to know yourself better, according to a psychotherapist who teaches at United States International University in San Diego.

Dreams create an "inner biography" which can be used to increase your self-awareness and even guide you in your conscious decisions, explains Dr. Patricia Ariadne, a licensed marriage, family and child therapist who teaches in the USIU school of education.

Ariadne developed an interest in dreams after reading books by psychiatrist Carl Jung and keeping her own dream diaries. Today, she utilizes dream awareness in her private group and individual practice.

"Not everybody can afford a psychotherapist," she says, "but everybody can afford to pay attention to his or her own dreams."

She is currently researching a book about women involved in feminist arts and ideas who actively create on the basis of their dream imagery. In addition, she has taught a number of workshops to college and community groups about getting in touch with dreams. She meets weekly with a group of women who share their dreams in an attempt to better understand and use the information.

Ariadne also helps individuals to learn about themselves — their fears, wishes and conflicts — by working on dreams in one-to-one psychotherapy sessions.

"Paying serious attention to your dreams can help you assimilate unknown parts of yourself and grow as a person," she says. "While your dreams can't solve your problems, dreams can give you additional information and help you analyze your choices."

Our society tends to discount the relevance of dreams, says Ariadne, who laments the fact that most parents teach their children not to pay attention to them. A former elementary school teacher, she points out that children can remember dreams quite easily.

"They are naturally more receptive to their unconscious," she says, "and remember dreams until parents imply that dreams are unimportant by commenting, 'It's only a dream' when children want to share their dreams. "We should see dreams as healthy, natural components of our personalities, not as something outside of us. Our dreams are us," she adds.

Getting in touch with your dreams starts with such simple activities as keeping a journal in which you write down dreams, Ariadne says. Reading a book which suggests the meaning of symbols in dreams is also a good idea, as long as you realize that each person has his or her own symbolism and needs to create a personal "dream dictionary" to help interpret his or her dreams.

Other activities she suggests to put your dreams to work in your conscious life include:

- Draw a picture of your dream. Drawing can help you understand the dream better and can make it come alive in the daylight.

- If you are bothered by a dream, create an ending for it that will work out the dream to a satisfactory outcome, and write it down.

- Try influencing what you dream about. Ask yourself a question or visualize someone you want to dream about in the quiet time just before you go to sleep.

- Discuss your dreams with someone you trust. Often another person can give you a different point of view about your dream. However, it is important to remember that each person has a right to interpret his or her own dreams and that no one should force an interpretation onto someone else. Most people dream four or five times each night, Ariadne notes, and most remember the last dream, which is usually the longest.

"Mostly it seems to be a matter of interest," she says. "If you try to remember your dreams and pay attention to them, then it becomes easier and easier to remember."

Ariadne suggests writing down dream memories and your feelings and ideas about them in a journal even if the meaning of a dream isn't clear right away. Often a subsequent dream or something that later happens in your conscious life will help explain a dream, she says.

If you have the same dream over and over it may be an attempt by your unconscious to get you to pay attention to a problem in your life, she believes. In a similar manner nightmares can be an attempt to direct one's attention, although nightmares can also have physiological causes, she says.

The USIU teacher says that everyone has both little dreams and big dreams. "Little dreams are the routine ones that your unconscious uses to sort your thoughts," she explains, "while big dreams are those which seem to ask you a question or signify the need for a change in a life direction."

"Some big dreams are so significant they will wake you up. It's almost as if your unconscious taps you on the shoulder and says 'Wake up! This is important.'"

Forrest and Kerla Wester, 705 Capri Court, announce the arrival of a daughter, Rachel Elizabeth, 8 pounds 1 ounce, born on Monday, July 8, 1985, at 7:59 a.m. at Midland Memorial Hospital. The proud grandparents are Carl and Darnell Small of Big Spring and Kenneth and Donzil Wester of Dallas.

Westbrook's class of '35 celebrates 50th anniversary

This must be a record! The class of 1935 of Westbrook High School had a 50th anniversary June 14-15 at which every graduate of that class (11) were present and each brought their spouses. Not one of those eleven graduates had died or divorced. And they came from as far away as Fayetteville, Tennessee, to celebrate.

The eleven, their spouses and present hostesses are:

- Arval Hayes (Ala)-Dallas;
- James Hall (Joe)(Nell)-San Angelo;
- Ailene May Kube (A.M.)-Borger;
- Wilma Jean Berry McKinney (Rex)-Westbrook;
- Ruth Miller Donelson (Elton)-Snyder;
- Evelyn Smith Horton (Tommy)-Ackerly;
- Sibyl Holder Walding (Dennis)-Colorado City;
- Johnny Moore (Alice)-Sweetwater;
- Fhelma King Reece (Sammy)-Abilene;
- Louise Shelton Roberts (Guilford)-McCombs;
- Lucille Moore Byrd (Cecil)-Fayetteville, Tennessee.

Evelyn said the class of 3 boys and 8 girls was always very close and had stayed in touch all these years. It was an achieving class producing a lawyer, school teachers, farmers, beauticians, a doctor, workers in construction, oil, and business. Sibyl Holder was valedictorian and Ruth Miller was salutatorian.

The national tournament to determine national champions for the United Girls Softball Association will be held in Big Spring July 24-27. It will feature 32 teams — 28 out of town, out of state teams, and four Big Spring teams. There are four divisions, broken down by ages from 6-19.

With 392 girls plus coaches, managers, chaperones, and parents from out of town, the motels and restaurants are expecting a booming business Wednesday through Saturday and lots of dollars to the community!

The event begins with opening ceremonies on Wednesday and ends with a catered outdoor banquet and awards presentation Saturday evening. In between, the round robin schedule will include 64 games played on all four parks at the Roy Anderson Complex.

In the opening ceremonies, the tournament will be dedicated to Jane Upton who founded the girls' softball program in Big Spring. Jane, who died recently, was a long-time teacher and coach in the Big Spring schools. Her daughters will be on hand for the tournament.

Moore family holds reunion in Westbrook

The Moore family reunion was held in Westbrook July 7 at the Westbrook High School Cafeteria. Fifty-two family members and friends attended the event.

Those attending the reunion from the Big Spring area include: Mr. and Mrs. Oren Moore, Delza Kay Harris and Jim Harris, all of Colorado City; Mr. and Mrs. Rodney Moore, Andrea Moore and Ross Moore, all of Coahoma; Mr. and Mrs. Arlie Moore, Kenneth Moore and Mr. and Mrs. Royce Moore, all of Westbrook.

UGSA officers are: Marvin Wise, president; Jackie Thomason, vice president and tournament director; Gladys Thompson, secretary-treasurer; and Dickie Thompson, Division III and IV coordinator.

Girls softball began in Big Spring in 1973 and this will be the second national tournament held in Big Spring, due in part to the excellent facilities and to the commitment and organizational ability of the local adult leaders.

Approximately 175 girls, ages 6-19, are involved each spring and summer in the Big Spring softball program.

Tournament director, Jackie Thomason, is seeking volunteers to help with concessions, announcing, keeping statistics, and other tournament jobs. The 24 certified umpires are the only paid personnel connected with the tournament.

Over the next few weeks, much planning will take place for the CROSSROADS STAMPEDE to be held August 16-18. Sponsored by the Redcoats, Blue Blazers, and White Hats, it will be a major project to become an annual event to promote tourism, a magnet to draw ex-Big Springers back and a time of fun to end the summer. Billed as an annual "reunion" with yellow ribbons tied on all the trees at the park, it is for all residents, former residents, and visitors.

Just a few of the events now in the schedule are: a barbecue cook-off, all sorts of booths, a talent show, golf tournament, tennis match, liar's contest, 10-mile run and Shriners giving rides in their little cars.

Clubs and other groups are encouraged to think up creative activities and booths and then call chairman Rick Turner or project chairman Gary Hopper.

The Howard-Glasscock County Old Settlers Reunion is coming up August 2. This will be the 60th anniversary of this annual get-together featuring a barbecue, fiddlers contest, games and contests and special recognition ceremonies, ending with a dance. Dwight McCann is chairman.

Jones wins top prize with his 1957 Chevy convertible

By TINA STEFFEN
Lifestyle Editor

The next time you see a pretty yellow 1957 Chevy convertible driving by, chances are it belongs to DICKIE JONES.

Dickie won first place in the modified class at the National Chevy Convention held at Lincoln Hotel in Dallas July 3-7. He also won a gold certificate for his restoration job on the car.

Two hundred fifty cars participated in the show while only 100 were judged. Dickie's picture will appear in next month's issue of Classic Chevy World.

BARBARA AND LARRY POTVIN of Benson, Ariz. and KATHRYN AND WALTER TAYLOR of Quitique visited the women's parents, MR. AND MRS. HENRY DIRKS, during the July 4 holiday.

MAMIE LEE DODDS recently visited a friend she hasn't seen in 50 years. She and MELISSA SMITH were schoolmates and best friends, so much so that they were almost like sisters, Mamie says.

Mamie's brother DICK PIPER took her to Burleson to visit Melissa during the July 4 holiday.

"It was just like yesterday since I had seen her," Mamie says. The two have continued to carry the same interests throughout the years that originally brought them close. "It was as if the intervening years hadn't existed at all."

BIG SPRING VIDEO, 208 Main, is offering a public service to local families and clubs. The store wants parents, school and civic clubs to view a select group of their video tapes rent free.

The video tapes focus on the dangers of sexual molestation and abduction and offers safety lessons for youths and families about how to deal with strangers and protect themselves from potential harm.

The Fonz (of Happy Days) speaks in the films. Others appearing in the films are John Ritter, Mariette Hartley, Scooby Doo, Yogi Bear, Winnie the Pooh, and The Flintstones.

This is the last time I will be writing this column as the Big Spring Herald is promoting me from lifestyle editor to creative services director. I begin the new position Monday morning. CAROL HART BALDWIN will be the new lifestyle editor and will take over the column.

I've enjoyed writing Tidbits during the last three years and learning about your news. I only ask that you continue to tell Carol what is happening in your lives so that she can keep Tidbits going. Tidbits has become a popular column because people enjoy reading about news of their friends and neighbors. Thank you for your support.
