Miller to take over in Budget Office job

WASHINGTON (AP) - When James C. Miller III succeeds David A. Stockman, the style of the White House Office of Management and Budget is likely to change from the outspoken shove to the guiding hand. But the direction will be the same.

As much as Stockman has taken an adversarial approach to pressing the Reagan administration's economic theories into law as OMB director, so Miller has chosen to lead his charges down what he considers the rightous path.

And while Stockman's candor has led to controversy, apologies and trips to the presidential woodshed, Miller has delighted in regular repartee with reporters.

The smiling, enthusiastic Miller, a native of Atlanta, is an economist who says his conservatism is in his genes. He sometimes wears a necktie bearing a portrait of Adam Smith, father of laissez faire economic theory.

Miller, whose nomination to succeed Stockman was announced Friday, plays "a mean New Orleans trumpet" and in high school in Rockland, Ga.; "used to bring the house down," says his father, a retired airline pilot Blowing his own horn in another way, Miller has invited reporters to breakfast sessions and held forth on whatever topics were hot at the Federal Trade Commission, where he has been chairman since His basic approach there is that businesses will do the right thing by consumers if the government just explains what is expected of them. He clashed often with Michael Pertschuk, FTC chairman in the Carter administration, who said Miller had changed the agency into "trust-trusters, not trust-busters."

Miller was instrumental in leading the Reagan administration's early efforts to cut government regulation, as head of the transition group to study government regulation and then as an aide to Stockman at OMB and as director of the Presidential Task Force for Regulatory Relief.

Perhaps his biggest impact before taking the reins at the FTC was organizing support for, and implementing, Executive Order 12291. Issued early in Reagan's first term, the order requires agencies to do cost-benefit analyses of new regulations and submit them to OMB before new rules are issued.

As head of the FTC, Miller has had little problem complying, thanks to his "educate rather thans regulate" approach. If confirmed by the Senate as OMB director, he will become a regulatory czar of sorts under the order, wielding veto power over other

A man able to focus on what he considers important and avoid being sidetracked, Miller, 43, is a font of statistics. He eagerly turns to aides for supporting detail and easily turns away aggressive questioners with self-deprecating stories about doing dishes at home and explaining the law to his mother, the

State-of-art fantasy in flight at company

Managing Editor

It's like a trip to Futureworld

The computer transforms what once was ink-on-paper drafting into full-color, three-dimensional design. A machine shop transforms the idea into reality. And state-of-the-art equipment, controlled by touch-activated computers, makes a sample of the finished plastic goods.

It's Permian Research Corp., a think tank and more. Bankrolled by area investors, the Big Spring facility on Anna Street is self-contained: idea to finished product.

The latest brainchild is a plastics innovation with an ominous name, the rotary extruder. It melts plastic stock pellets and creates useable material.

The possibilities are limited only by the imagination - from toothpaste tubes, cups and bottles to pipe and television

A plastics extruder isn't new. The rotary extruder is. "It pays for itself every three years because of the energy savings over a conventional extruder," Granville Hahn, president, told visitors Friday at an invitation-only open house.

The patented design consumes just 65 percent of the energy of a conventional model, he said. Hahn obtained the patent for the equipment while employed at Cosden Oil & Chemical Co., where he worked for 28½ years. When Cosden decided it didn't want to pursue the patent, Hahn bought it for Permian.

"We don't have an order for a single one right now, we know it (the demand) is there," he said of the rotary extruder.

The equipment will sell for about $200,000, and recycling demands are expected to create one of its major markets. Permian vice president Raleigh Rutledge believes there is a market for between 100 and 200 units.

Hahn declines to talk about Permian's investors or the financial commitment to its research, except to say the backers live in the Permian Basin and have a stake in the area's economy.

Permian Research employs 12. That number may increase as more of the firm's ideas come to fruition.

One idea is a solution to the carbonated soft drink that goes flat in the refrigerator. Permian Research is at work right now on a better bottle cap.

Beginning in August, many businesses that produce small quantities of hazardous waste will be required to observe new federal and state rules, according to the Texas Department of Health. Businesses most likely to be affected by the new rules include: vehicle and engine maintenance shops; photo, blueprint and copy services; research, medical and teaching labs; laundry and dry cleaners; print shops; and pesticide applicators. Businesses inat recycle their hazardous wastes also might fall under the new requirements

The workshop will cover determining if a business generates hazardous waste, obtaining needed generator identification numbers, filling out the proper shipping papers to transport hazardous waste and packaging and labeling hazardous waste for shipping.

According to Health Department, most small quantity generators in the state are

Old gym still center of old-fashioned workouts

LONGVIEW (AP) - The weather-beaten gym bears little resemblance to modern, climatecontrolled health spas with floor-toceiling mirrors and chrome-plated weight-lifting equipment.

Sunlight shines through cracks in the walls and two rows of windows with no glass. The equipment, much of it hand-made, is scattered around the room cooled only by wind and a few portable fans. Many of the weights have been in the tin-roofed building since it opened in the 1920s as Smith's Gym.

Now called the Longview Barbell Club, the South Fifth Street building is Longview's oldest gym and workout room.

'This is almost like a historic landmark," said weight lifter John Inzer. "This is the only one like it in East Texas. All the other gyms are

'This is like a 'Rocky' gym," he said. "It's just raw iron, and people can spit out the window and cuss and chew tobacco. You can take your shirt off and just do anything.'

Inzer said he and about 60 other Longview body builders and weight lifters choose the barbell club for some or all of their workouts. They enjoy the "anything-goes" atmosphere and the history of the half-century-old gym.

The barbell club was opened in the late 1920s as "Smith's Gym" by Richard Smith, a Longview muscleman who performed exhibitions with stunts such as lying on a bed of nails. For boxers and weight lifters, Smith's Gym was Longview's best-known workout spot.

Weather

Local

Scattered evening thunderstorms are expected in the late after-noon and evening. Highs will be in the low 90s. At night, low temperatures will be in the high 60s. Winds will be 15 to 20 miles an hour and skies will be mostly cloudy.

State

Widely scattered showers and thunderstorms, some heavy, developed over most sections of the state Friday.

Tropical moisture spilling northward, along with afternoon heating and a slightly unstable airmass, was mainly responsible for the shower and thunderstorm activity, the National Weather Service said, while a weak cold front stretched from central Kansas into central New Mexico.

Other than the storms and showers, skies were partly cloudy to cloudy across most of Texas.

Springsteen mania

NEWARK, N.J. - Bruce Springsteen mania swept the region Friday as rock fans lined up early or jammed telephone lines in pursuit of tickets to one of four concerts the New Jersey-born rock star plans in Giants ium next month

Fans armed with beach chairs, blankets and sleeping bags began forming lines at outlets hours before tickets went on sale at 7 a.m. Friday at 46 locations in New Jersey, New York and Connecticut. By 3 p.m., 134,000 of 240,000 available tickets for Springsteen and the E Street Band were sold.

New Jersey Bell customers had to wait longer than usual to get a dial tone because of the flood of phone calls straining the system, said spokesman James W. Carrigan.

Aspartame OK

CHICAGO - The artificial sweetener aspartame has received approval from the American Medical Association as a safe sugar substitute for healthy people, a report hailed by maker G.D. Searle & Co.

"My general reaction to the AMA publication is that it's good news for consumers," said Robert B. Shapiro, president of Searle's NutraSweet Group, which markets aspartame under the NutraSweet trade name. "The AMA joins a long list of scientific authorities, each of which has independently reviewed data on aspartame and has found it to be safe."

According to a report by the AMA's Council on Scientific Affairs in today's Journal of the American Medical Association, consumption of aspartame is safe for everyone except people with a rare metabolic disorder called homozygous phenylketonuria, which can cause mental retardation. Phenylketonuria occurs once in about 16,000 live births.

State employee nabbed

AUSTIN - State accountant James Fontaine was arrested Friday on a charge that he stole a $247,000 state check, but investigators and state officials said they don't know what he could have done with the check.

"He must be a little stupid," said one state employee who has known Fontaine for about 15 years and doubts he could have cashed or deposited the big check.

Fontaine, 43, surrendered to the Travis County sheriff's office Friday after officials notified him of the charge. He was released later in the day after posting $10,000 bond. The complaint, filed Thursday, alleges the $41,400-a-year accountant this month falsified documents needed to have the check written.

uprooted trees crushed 20 houses and four hotels in 20 "I saw the end of the world," said a survivor who broke down in tears. Another said, "It sounded like an earthquake, I thought the mountain had collapsed." Civil Defense Minister Giuseppe Zamberletti said at least 220 people were killed.

Fifteen people were dug out of the mud alive.
One survivor, identified only as Pietro, told Italian reporters his brother climbed a tree to escape the first wave of mud and water that hit the village of Stava, out a second carried him away. "Many families were wiped out with their houses" when the dam burst at about 1 p.m., said Alma Bernard, who owns a hotel in Tesero, about two miles from the disaster scene in the Fiemme Valley of northern Italy. "Earth and mud cover the village (Stava)", she said in a telephone interview with The Associated

Rescue workers and soldiers brought in by helicopter fought through mud and debris in the search for victims. They said 78 bodies had been recovered. Film taken by television cameramen flying over the scene showed an empty artificial lake and a 31/2-mile- Europeans.

CAVALESE, Italy (AP) - A swollen lake burst an long channel of mud stretching into the valley. The dam was completely washed away

The state-run network RAI, which broadcast the film, said the mass of water, mud, trees and other debris reached depths of 130 feet.

The earthen dam was built about 20 years ago to filter waste water from a mine that produces fluorite, a mineral used in making glass.

Officials of the Civil Defense Ministry said the rushing water carried with it sediment from the mine that had settled on the bettom near the dam.

Recent thunderstorms have been swelling mountain streams in the area of the lake and dam, about 4,000 feet above sea level near this Trento province town 193 miles northeast of Milan. The nearest major city, Bolzano, is about 18 miles away Rescue workers were called to the scene of Friday's disaster from as far away as Tuscany, in central Italy. Police closed roads in the area to allow access by rescue squads and heavy earth-moving equipment. The four hotels hit by the wave of water sit in an area dotted with alpine lakes beneath snow-capped peaks of the Dolomites. Tourist officials said about 170 people were registered at the hotels. The Erika, Stava and Miramonti were hit directly and a wing of the Dolomiti was damaged.

This is the height of the tourist season in the area. Most of the vacationers are Italians and northern

Soviets seek Israeli ties

JERUSALEM - The Soviet Union, which is seeking a role in the Middle East peace process, appears to have softened its conditions for restoring diplomatic relations with Israel.

Israel radio reported Friday that Moscow had signaled this week it would consider restoring relations and increasing Jewish emigration. It said the Soviets listed two conditions - an end to an anti-Soviet propaganda campaign in the West, and an agreement between Israel and Syria over the occupied Golan Heights.

No mention was made of a previous Soviet demand that Israel withdraw from the occupied West Bank of Jordan or the Gaza Strip, the radio said. Israel's capture of the territories in the 1967 Arab-Israeli War led to the break in relations with Moscow.

Elephants dying

NAIROBI, Kenya - Ivory poachers are wiping out the elephant population in the Central African Republic, one of the animal's last strongholds on the continent, wildlife conservationists reported Friday.

Dr. Iain Douglas-Hamilton, a leading expert on the African elephant, said he and other members of an aerial survey team found a "catastrophic reduction" of the elephant population there over the past four years.

The survey, conducted in June by the World Wildlife Fund and the International Union for the Conservation of Nature and Natural Resources, concluded from its observations that a 25,600-square-mile northern region contained about 7,800 elephant carcasses and only 4,300 live elephants.

Western Sizzlin opens Aug. 1

By LISA MUSSER Staff Writer

John Homan and James Hutchinson started as dishwashers in the restaurant business; now, the men are the owners of the new Western Sizzlin' Steak House on 4th Street. The new restaurant, formerly the home of Wayne Henry's Steak House, is receiving an entire remodeling and is scheduled to open Aug. 1.

According to the owners, the Big Spring Western Sizzlin', a member of the Western Sizzlin' franchise, will have a unique service style from the other member restaurants.

Homan, 21, and Hutchinson, 22, said the Big Spring store will have full service rather than the "line style" at most of the franchise's businesses open another restaurant in Big Spring and bought the building, Homan said.

David realized he did not have time to devote to the Big Spring store and asked Homan and Hutchinson if they were interested in owning it.

The young men decided to buy the restaurant. David is still taking an active part in the remodeling and opening of the store though, Homan said.

Johnstons to man trade show desk

The 1985 Trade Show of the Texas Council of Painting and Decorating Contractors will be held in the Midland Convention Center July 24-27. D.D. Johnston and his wife, Lois, have been elected to co-chair the registration desk. Assisting them will be former Big Springers, C.A. and Annette Ross.

Johnston, owner of his own construction and painting service, has been a member for 35 years of the PDCA and a member of the top one hundred contractors for twenty years.

Those who want to attend the trade show can call Johnston at 267-6073 for a ticket. Hopefully, a large number of Big Spring people will attend. Johnston is working hard to get the convention to come to Big Spring in 1989.

Fiberglass Systems increased employment and production by 20 percent within the past few months under the leadership of the new manager, Ray O'Guinn. He is planning another 20 percent increase in the near future. O'Guinn grew up in Andrews and for the past several years prior to coming to Big Spring worked in plants in and around El Paso.

Ron Osborne, a Big Spring native and former chief engineer for Oil Field Industrial Lines, has recently signed the contract for a building at the Industrial Park to manufcture a special computer chip board. Ron invented and has the patent on this control mechanism for an all-terrain vehicle ideal for use by the military. The vehicle's four wheels are independently operated by the computer chip control board allowing it to turn at a complete 180 degree angle at a high rate of speed or travel over bumpy terrain with the chassis remaining level while the wheels adjust to the terrain. The computer also allows the vehicle to be driven by remote control without a drive

Due to Osbone's interest in remaining in Big Spr ing, the efforts of the Industrial Foundation and Ralph McLaughlin, Osborne is locating the manufacture of these computer board units here. It is expected to be an expanding business very shortly.

Two notes from the Chamber of Commerce: The Chamber Membership Directory is about ready to go to press. All members have to have current dues to be listed in it. Call the Chamber today if membership status is uncertain.

The nominating committee will soon be recommending names to fill vacancies on the Chamber Board. You may submit your nominations to theis committee in care of Clyde McMahon at the Chamber office by Aug. 20.

Plans are continuing to fall into place for a 'reshaping" of Big Spring. The vision of Old Town Big Spring is beginning to catch on, approval has been given to apply for the Main Street project, and the spirit of competition and cooperation is growing. Cooperation is a key word if we are to succeed, if we are to develop our master plan.

GREAT IDEA DEPARTMENT: Don Cook thought up this novel approach to increase customer traffic and encourage customers to look, compare prices, shop Big Spring first. His idea is for each merchant to choose one item to be sold to the highest bidder. The catch is that only those who come in and shop and compare can bid.

Because some people wonder just what good is the Convention and Visitors' Bureau, it might be well to print excerpts from two recent examples of its effectivenes

Charles Beil, Rotary District governor, wrote the Bureau after the District 573 Conference..."We are refunding the financial assistance which was made available to us by your Bureau to assist in the attraction and conduct of our annual district conference in Big Spring. It was self-suporting... Your generous offer of assistance encouraged us to expand our plans... and was a fine psychological advantage (to produce a most successful conference).

The second letter came from the Wichita Falls misister, B.R. Delaney, who helped conduct the Original West Texas Baptist District convention her June 4-7. He thanked the Convention and Visitors' Bureau for the guidance, financial support and other helps, saying that 50 churches were enrolled with 500 delegates using 275 motel rooms. He ended by saying that a second convention is already planned in Big Spring in August.

 Big Spring Athletics took Highland Mall as its new home on July 1, store owner Dick

Helms said. Though the business didn't want to leave the downtown area, the move has been a positive one for the store.

July is usually the slowest month of the year for Big Spring Athletics, Helms said. This year sales are high for the month and Helms attributes this to the new location.

The store's move was prompted by a need for additional space.

Are your investments growing by at least 8 percent a year? If they're not, you're doing something wrong. Changing Times asked financial counselors, investment managers and others what mistakes investors make and how to avoid them. Here's their advice.

Understand the challenge. Achieving significantly aboveaverage gains is difficult to do for just one year, nearly impossible to do every year. Even professional investment managers don't do it

Study the game. Start by becoming familiar with all the alternatives. Learn how values of various assets are affected by forces such as business conditions, interest rates and inflation, and political developments.

Get information on the records and prospects of the companies whose shares you contemplate buying. Develop a working knowledge of price-earnings ratios, dividend practices and transaction costs.

Work contracts beat descriptions

By TOM PETERS

I think I know a bit about you, the average reader of this column. You're a manager, having been promoted at least a couple of times. That is, you're a success, and pleasantly surprised about it. You'll agree you've worked harder than most, but you don't see yourself as a genius. Good sense and day-to-day application have brought you where you are today.

So answer this question: Have you ever read your job description? Most, when they're honest, will admit that they haven't. If you haven't read your job description, and you're not a genius, yet have had a successful career as a manager, what's the big deal about job descriptions? If I'm in the midst of leading a seminar in which the sparks have yet to fly, I have developed a sure approach to livening things up. I declare, bluntly and unequivocally, that there is no greater waste of time than the endless hours devoted to drafting and administering job descriptions.

My pot stirrer is not something drawn from the seminar leader's bag of tricks. I passionately believe what I say, since I, like most of my seminarparticipant colleagues, have never read a description of any of my jobs. I've done stints as a Navy Seabee batallion operations officer and detachment commander; a Pentagon junior assistant (in the Office of the Chief of Naval Operations); the president's senior drug abuse advisor; and a junior consultant, senior consultant and partner at McKinsey & Co., the management consulting firm. My failure to read my job descriptions has never been a handicap. In fact, it may have helped me from time to time. I've always pressed to do things a bit differently. By not reading my job descriptions, I've never been burdened by knowing exactly what I'm officially not allowed to do or exactly with whom I am required to 'interface" on a project. I say this not as a wild-eyed corporate anarchist, but as one who strongly believes that businesses and other organizations must know what they are about.

In the typical job description, with the stroke of a pen, I set all my managerial worries to rest. I conjure up the tasks that need completing (however impossible they may be), and then I set any nasty coordination worries aside by endlessly listing all the groups who are to be "interfaced with" in the process of execution of the "wish list." No matter what the nature of subsequent foul-ups. I can always blame them on someone's not reading the job description.

While I am an arch enemy of job descriptions, I am an unabashed supporter of great coaching by leaders of organizations. I have been blessed with uncommonly good coaches - my Seabee batallion commander, my White House guide, and my McKinsey mentors (including Bob Waterman, my In Search of Excellence co-author). Those who rely on job descriptions are those who, in general, favor paper over people. In contrast, great coaches put in gruel ing hours teaching values and "the way we do things around here." They do not try to replace that painstaking effort with the typical job description, a four-page document which "covers all the bases." The job description is a cop-out, pure and simple.

I do believe in committing oneself to paper, however. I believe the "coach" (manager) ought to have a brief (one or two pages) written "contract" with his or her people about what is sought to be accomplished this quarter, or this year. The contract is a personal and bilateral commitment between two people: one, the coached — those who set out to learn something new and to accomplish a little more than he or she has ever done before; the other, the coach who promises to provide the personal support, guidance and interference-running necessary to reach the goals set out in the contract.

I believe that the two-person contract - the product of inspired coaching - represents much 'tighter" control than do the endless fantasies contained in the typical job description. That is, coaching is a basis for genuinely knowing what's up and what's likely to be done. The objectives set forth in the contract are limited in number and are "doable." Since both parties have negotiated and made promises, blaming the other, in light of a subsequent foul-up, is inappropriate. The essence of practical control is working through the contract, not creating paper forms.

As is often the case in this column, my solution to a thorny problem is to call upon the manager's time and attention, rather than to resort to the cop-out of the printed form. I do not apologize for repeating myself. There are simply no shortcuts to excellent

The 40th annual 4-H Junior Rodeo will be held Wednesday-Saturday July 24-27. There's nothing quite like a kids rodeo for good clean fun. Maybe wholesome" would be a better word than "clean" as the amount of dirt the participants get on them is in direct proportion to the fun they have. Come out and join us. The performance begins at 7:30 p.m. each evening in the Rodeo Bowl.

The concession stands will feature some new treats this year: Baked potatoes with butter, sour cream and cheese and homemade ice cream

Proceeds of the rodeo are used to finance the 4-H program in Howard County. In the past, money raised has purchased equipment, supplies, and awards, provided training for leaders and helped send our representatives to district and state meetings and competition.

Summer brings special lawn problems

Along with hot temperatures, the wilted, discolored turf. Adjust ounces per 1,000 square feet will summer season in Texas may bring special lawn problems drought, weeds, insects and disease

These lawn problems can cause concern for homeowners unless accurate diagnosis and proper treatment takes place before they become severe.

Dry spots, thin turf and weeds can result from improper watering, fertilizing and mowing practices. Follow recommended cultural practices before applying a chemical to correct lawn problems

Drought stress most often occurs watering schedules to wet the soil to a depth of four to six inches, and water only when grass shows symptoms of moisture stress.

Also, raise mowing heights onehalf inch to improve drought shade and close mowing. While tolerance in mid-summer.

creates a lawn problem. Grass with a nitrogen deficiency may have a pale color and be heavily infested with weeds. A light application of a nitrogen fertilizer will improve the lawn's appearance.

Grass leaves that have yellow stripes parallel to the leaf margins may be deficient in iron. A foliar application of iron sulfate at six usually solve this problem.

Leaf spot diseases are generally a problem when lawns are under stress and increase with high temperatures, drought, heavy proper mowing and watering will Lack of nitrogen or iron often reduce these problems, fungicides may be required to prevent serious

Chinch bugs and white grub feed heavily on lawns during midsummer, and their damage resembles drought injury. If turf does not respond to applications of water, suspect these insects. Both pests damage St. Augustine grass, but only the white grub damages bermuda grass lawns.

Chinch bugs and white grubs can be controlled with insecticides. Water the lawn thoroughly prior to applying an insecticide for chinch bug control, and follow with a light watering.

Drenching the lawn after an insecticide is applied for grub control, sinc grubs feed in the soil.

We will be having an Extension Specialist team in the county on July 29. If you have a horticultural problem and you would like a visit by this team please contact the local County Extension Office at 267-6671. A list of first-come, firstserved will be prepared and as many visited as possible.

Mayfield withdraws from USDA interview

Harte-Hanks Washington day that "he wants his name Bureau

WASHINGTON -Wayne Mayfield, executive director of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service in Texas, unexpectedly withdrew his name Thursday from con-sideration for a high-level career Agriculture Department post in Washington, the agency's top official said

Everett Rank, ASCS administrator in Washington, said Mayfield was considered the best qualified of four candidates to be named director of the Agriculture Department's Cotton, Grain and Rice Price Support Division.

Rank said Mayfield withdrew his name "because of his concern about farmers in Texas."

The administrator also said that Mayfield's 30-day suspension in April and May, in part based on charges of sexually harrassing female employes at the state's ASCS headquarters in College Station, had nothing to do with Mayfield's decision.

"That's all behind us," said Rank. "As far as we're concerned, it wasn't (a factor).

Mayfield was unavailable for comment Friday.

He was scheduled to be formally interviewed for the position at 10 a.m. Monday, but notified Rank by phone Thurs-withdrawn," Rank said. He followed the phone call with a letter, he said

"Wayne Mayfield's name came out top on the list (of candidates) as far as qualifications," said Rank

He said it would be a "sacrifice" for Mayfield to stay in the Texas position because the state executive director is a political appointee, subject to change with designation of a new Agriculture Department secretary, whereas the Washington post is a career civil service position.

"It's a loss for us here," said Rank about Mayfield's decision. William J. Riley Jr., director of personnel for the Agriculture Department, notified Mayfield in a letter dated April 3 that he would be suspended for 30 days.

Riley said the suspension was based, in part, on "signed and sworn statements from four women who either were or are subordinate to you, alleging that certain actions were committed by you which were repeated, unsolicited, unwelcome, and sexually harassing."

The suspension also was based on "investigation reports" that claimed Mayfield had permitted alcoholic beverages within a government-leased vehicle, the letter said.

Jackson calls slum a 'hole in safety net'

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) - The 227 poor blacks who live along an open sewer known as Sugar Ditch in Tunica, Miss., just miles from millionaires are symbols of "a gaping hole" in President Reagan's safety net, Jesse Jackson says.

Jackson has made "Tunica" the battle cry of his crusade against Reagan's domestic policies, which he says increase the suffering of America's poor.

"President Reagan's safety net has a gaping hole in it," Jackson said. "Tunica, Mississippi, is the most graphic example of the government's inaction, its wrong direction and a failed public

Jackson discovered Sugar Ditch about two years ago when a group of Tunica blacks met with him to form a chapter of People United to Serve Humanity. This week, as about 1,500 PUSH delegates met for their national convention, he sprinkled his speeches with references to Tunica. "Come, look, see the bottom of Reagan's safety net, just 35 miles down the road from Memphis," he said Thursday. "Come, look, see the open sewer just out these people's back door. ... Come, look, see the roaches and vermin on the Jackson has made the trek down U.S. Highway 61 to Tunica three times this week, taking congressmen, civil rights leaders, reporters and convention delegates so they could see the squalor for themselves.

"We are going to adopt Tunica," he said in an interview. "We are going to get the people decent housing. We are going to take care of their health needs. We are going to do something about jobs. We are going to send their (high school) graduates to college.

Sugar Ditch, with its 227 poor blacks - mostly women and children - is located between a new downtown business district and a residential community where houses are valued at $50,000 to $100,000.

'Thirty-eight millionaires live in Tunica, rich farmers paid not to farm while the average per capita yearly income in Tunica is around $4,000," he said in a speech this

"There is no indoor plumbing in Sugar Ditch. Feces and other waste matter are thrown into an open ditch, their sewer, just five to seven feet from the houses where children eat, sleep and play.'

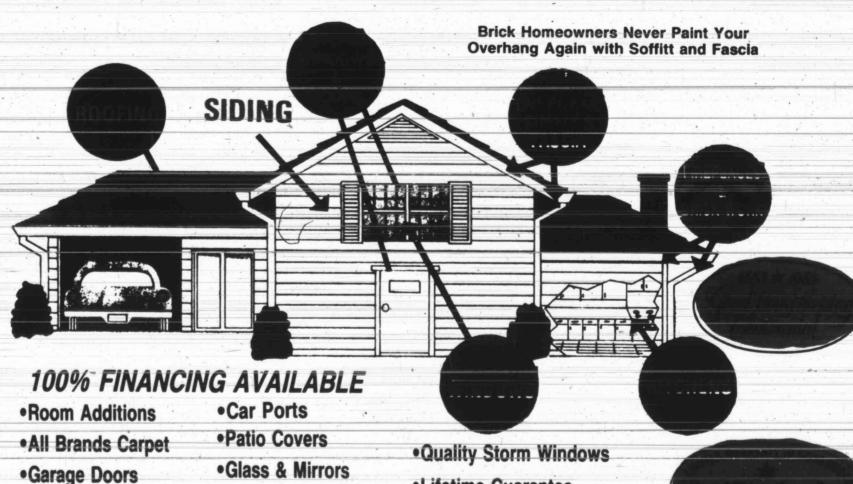

House trailers paid for with federal money are available for some of the poor people of Sugar Ditch, but city officials say there's no room for the trailers inside the town limits, Jackson said.

"The location of the trailers is superficial, but it dramatizes the population control in Mississippi, the exploitation of the blacks," he SANDWICH, England (AP) - A Spaniard (but not the defending since making his first appearance Jack Nicklaus out of the tournament and turned the 114th British Open into what one contender call-"an open house."

"I'm not even thinking about winning. Not now. Too many holes left, too many players close," said Sandy Lyle after he'd tied David Graham for the lead Friday in the second round of golf's oldest champinship.

"Bit of an open house, isn't it?" Lyle asked after a look at the standings of the leaders.

It was, indeed. The dozen players within two savage, howling wind swept Chris-ty O'Connor Jr. out of the lead, The weather was the principal factor. It was windy in the afternoon, very, very windy.

And it was worse in the morning. The morning winds were accom-panied by cold temperatures and driving rain.

Nicklaus was among the unfortunates with an early starting time. He played in the worst of the weather - and didn't play well enough.

Nicklaus, holder of 17 major professional titles including three British Open crowns, struggled to a 75 and had a 152 total. That's 12-over-par and three shots higher than the score necessary to qualify for the third negative firsts. It was the first time the 45-year-old Golden Bear had in 1962. Last month he missed the cut in the U.S. Open and now, for the first time has missed the cut in consecutive majors.

Seve Ballesteros, the Spaniard who is the defending champion, also played in the wind-driven rain of the morning and shot a 74. He just made it at 149.

Can he still win from 10 shots back?

D.A. Weibring, runner-up in the Fournament Players Championship earlier this season, had a 71 and was tied at 140, a single shot off the lead, with O'Connor and Tony Johnstone of Zimbabwe. O'Connor, the Irish product who led the first round with a 64, went 12 shots higher to 76. Johnstone shot 72.

Masters champion Bernhard It provided Nicklaus with two Langer of West Germany led the group at 141, two shots back. Also at 1-over-par were Australians

Robert Lee and Howard Clark of England, Ian Woosnam of Wales and Emilio Rodriguez of Spain. Langer closed up with a 69. Rodriguez and Riley matched par

70. Clark, Woosnam and Senior had 71s. Lee shot 73. Of the 12 leaders, only Senior,

Lee and Langer played in the morning And of the 12, only Langer and the veteran Graham have positive experience in the majors. Langer, of course, won the Masters early this year, and twice has been runner-up in the British Open, including the last time it was played at Royal St. George's.

Graham, 39, a former winner of both the U.S. Open and the PGA, was a little more cautious.

He kept the round together with a spectacular par-5 on the 14th, where he drove into the deep rough, moved the ball only 15 feet with his second shot.

JACK NICKLAUS, shown here eyeing a putt, shot a second round score of 75 in the second round of the British Open. Nicklaus failed to make the Open cut for the first time in 23 years.

North Central runs by Mid-City 'stars

By STEVE BELVIN Sports Writer

The Midland North Central All-Stars got productive hitting from its first two batters in the lineup, smart base running and rode the solid pitching of Don Schroeder, to take a 9-3 win over the Midland Mid-City All-Stars.

The loss eliminates Mid City from District III Little league Tournament play. Mid-City finishes the tourney with a 2-2 record and third place. North Central, now 5-1 in tourney play, will face undefeated Midland Eastern (4-0) tonight at 8 at Pittman Field, home of the National League.

Schroeder pitched six strong for the winners and got strong defensive backup. Schroeder surrendered a run in the third inning and two more in the sixth inning, but by then North Central held a commanding 9-1 lead.

The North Central hurler ended the game with six strike outs while allowing four hits. He teammates played strong defense, especially shortstop Shane Greenly and center fielder Mike Conally.

In fact, it was not untill the sixth and final inning that Schroeder walked a batter and the North Central defense committed an error.

Leading the hit parade for the winners were lead of f man Schroeder and second batter Chad Thomas. The duo combined for five of their team's nine hits. Schroeder collected two singles in four trips to Schroeder (Morth Central); LP — Rick Posey, (Mid-City); Time: 1:25.

the plate. He drove in a run and scored a run.

The left-hand hitting Thomas went three-for-four at the plate. His two doubles and one single drove in one run and he scored two himself. Meanwhile North Central took its liberties on the base paths. They collected four runs by scoring from third base on passed balls. Mid-City took a 1-0 lead in the top of the third inning. Right fielder Gary Young doubled and scored on a single by starting pitcher Rick Posey. But in their half of the third,

North Central railied for three runs of their own, chasing the southpaw Posey from the game. Schroeder started things off with a bunt single. Thomas followed with a hard double against the right field fence. Next Greg Pepper got a base hit, scoring Schroeder with the tying run. Thomas and Pepper then scored on passed balls, giving North Central a 3-1 advantage.

North Central added two more runs in the fourth. Buddy Jones started things off with a single up the middle. Thomas hit his second two-bagger of the game, scoring Jones with the fourth run.

Ferragamo looking forward to playing with new team

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) -Quarterback Vince Ferragamo, traded to the Buffalo Bils by the Los Angeles Rams, says he's ready to suit up in a Bills' uniform and go into action.

"When the other team steps off the bus, we'll throw snowballs at them," he joked after the Bills announced the deal Thursday night. "I'm ready to go."

The National Football League trade sends tight end Tony Hunter to Los Angeles while the Bills get Ferragamo and a high 1986 draft pick - reportedly a third-round selection.

"I don't have any regrets," Ferragamo said. "The Rams treated me well. They drafted me No. 1 out of Nebraska. They thought highly of me then .. After eight good years with the Rams, I'm ready to have some good years in Buffalo.

Ferragamo said the Bills, who finished 1985 with a 2-14 mark the worst in the league, "are a team that's on the upswing."

"They need a lot of hard work to work their way back into the championship arena," he said. "It's a team that has a bad taste in its mouth. Nobody wants to suffer through a year like last year, myself included. They have good young players, good veterans. All it takes is the right ingredients."

The Bills sent veteran quarterback Joe Ferguson to Detroit last March, leaving the club with Joe Dufek, a backup quarterback who had started the last few 1985 games, and Matt Kofler, another backup quarterback. The Bills also have rookie quarterback Frank

The Rams put Ferragamo on the auction block after acquiring Dieter Brock, who formerly played in the Canadian Football League.

Ferragamo missed much of the 1984 season with a broken bone in his right hand and a torn ligament in his passing hand. He holds the Rams' records for the most passing yards in a season. 3,275; the most completions, 274; the most attempts, 464; and the most touchdowns, 30. During his seven years with the Rams, he passed for 9,376 Europeans ban Olympic champ

Action heats up off London track

LONDON (AP) - Sergei Bubka of the Soviet Union failed to break his own world pole vault record, but the bigget incident was off the track on the first day of a two-day IAAF-Mobil Grand Prix track and field meet at Crystal Palace stadium Friday. Joaquim Cruz, Brazil's 800-meter Olympic champion, was banned from his next two events in Europe for failing to go ahead with a planned showdown against Britain's Sebastian Coe, the world record holder.

Bubka, who soared 19 feet, 81/4 inches last weekend in Paris to set his eighth world record, tried to clear 19-9 but failed with all three attempts and had to be content with a winning leap of 19-01/4.

Cruz and Coe, who took the gold and silver medals, respectively, at Los Angeles, were expected to hold their first head-to-head clash since the Olympics. But the Brazilian withdrew at the last minute, sending the program into confusion and disappointing a capacity crowd of 16,500. Afterwards, Andy Norman, promotions officer for British athletics, conferred with Swedish promoter Sven Hansen, organizer Norman. of the Bislett Games in Oslo on July

The two men agreed to bar Cruz and the rest of the Brazilian team from the Edinburgh Games on Tuesday and the Oslo meet - a Grand Prix event - five days later, at which Cruz was to have competed in the Dream Mile.

Norman said Cruz had refused to run because he was annoyed that Coe had switched from the 1,500 meters to the 800.

"Cruz said he was not mentally prepared for a sudden change in had followed a request by Steve opposition, yet said he was quite happy to run in tomorrow's 1,000 meters instead," said Norman.

"I told his coach, Luis d'Oliveira, that he would not be allowed to of the meet. change, and that as he refused to go through with his commitment he and the whole Brazilian party would not be allowed to compete in the Edinburgh Games on Tuesday, or in the Oslo meeting next

"The fact is Cruz agreed to run in the 800 meters. It was arranged before Christmas and there was no question of making any conditions on who would be in the race," said

Saturday."

Norman also claimed that Cruz had demanded $25,000 once he knew Coe was in the same race, more than twice the original sum agreed under the new Grand Prix rules.

Cruz, who finished a poor seventh in his last race, a 1,500 meters in Nice on Tuesday, told reporters he was "neither mentally or physically prepared to run against Coe" and that he needed more notice from the organizers.

All the changes in the program Cram, who broke the 1,-500 world record in Nice, to skip the 1,500 meters here and run instead in Saturday's mile on the second day

Once Cram's request was granted, Coe lost the chance of topclass opposition and asked to move to the 800, which upset Cruz.

In the absence of Cruz, Coe won the 800 meters easily, turning on a great finishing spurt to come through in 1 minute, 44.34 seconds.

Running his first race since setting this year's fastest 800-meter time in June, Coe overtook Jose Luis Barbosa in the finishing straight after the Brazilian had led from the start.

Barbosa tried hard to stay in front in the final 200 meters but Coe burst through to win comfortably, with the Brazilian taking second place followed by American John Marshall.

Willie Banks of the United States, the world record holder, won his triple jump duel against countryman and Olympic champion, Al Joyner. Banks won with a jump of 55-111/4, with Joyner second in

But another American, Benita Fitzgerald-Brown, the Olympic gold medalist, suffered a surprise defeat, beaten by Britain's Judy Simpson in the 100 meters hurdles. Both were given the same time of 13.30 seconds but officials awarded the race to the Briton.

Darren Clark, fourth in the Olympic Games, set a United Kingdom Allcomers record in the 400 meters of 44.80, while Yuri. Sedykh, the double Olympic hammer champion and world record holder, predictably was far too strong for the others with a winning throw of 271-41/2.

Cowboys — contenders or pretenders?

By NICK GHOLSON

Harte-Hanks News Service The "bonehead of the year" award may be sitting just a few feet away from me.

Just across the newsroom sits a young man who likes giving away money. This journalistic philanthropist hails from San Francisco. He thinks Bill Walsh was born in a manger. He once took his mother's picture from his billfold and inserted Joe Montana's in her place. His hat size tripled during the third quarter of Super Bowl XIX.

But his IQ tumbled.

It must have, because this migrant from the land of fruit and nuts just made the worst wager of the year. He bet one of my fellow sports writers that the Dallas Cowboys wouldn't win six games this year.

"The Cowboys can win six games if Tom Landry showed up every Sunday alone," I told him.

'Nope," he shook his flaky, oversized head. "Too many problems." The Cowboys, who opened training camp with the rookies and free agents this week in Thousand years. For Dallas to turn back into Oaks, Calif., do have problems. Maybe not as many as Mr. Bonehead, but it's true they need to decide on a starting quarterback, they need improvement in the offensive line and they need help at wide receiver.

But if I've learned anything watching them play the last 25 years, it's that no problem is too big for Tom Landry, who wasn't born in a manger, just a log cabin.

In 1984 the Cowboys missed the NFL playoffs for the first time in 11-

But from this chair, I see five key players who must have good seasons if the Cowboys are to get back into the playoff picture.

No. 1 is obvious. Danny White has gotten Landry's seal of approval. He now must prove he deserves it. No more mediocrity. No more tossing lob passes to linebackers. White must show the same confidence in himself that Landry has shown in him.

No. 2 is Tony Hill. It seems that a genuine Super Bowl contender, after Drew Pearson retired, Hill's many problems have to be solved. . arms got shorter every week. Wide receiving is a weakness on this team. It's time Mr. Hill be the thrill he has always told us he was without Pearson.

No. 3 is Howard Richards. This is fifth year in the league and it's about time he proved he can play like a No. 1 draft choice. The move to guard may help.

"Howard Richards is a key player. I'm leaning now toward putting him at guard, leaving him there and letting him play to see how he develops," Landry said of the 6-6, 260-pounder from Missouri. "He has the speed to play guard. I think we discovered last year that his leg was much worse than we thought. That really took away from his strength. If he can develop more strength, he still has the opportunity to be the kind of top player we thought he was when we drafted him in the first round."

No. 4 is Everson Walls, once one of the best cornerbacks in the

Pretenders

Continued from page 2-B league. Last year, however, Walls spent most of his time watching receivers run past him, With the passing game now so dominant in pro football, Walls' position is

"Everson Walls can be as good as he wants to," Landry said. "He has a knack for making the play. That's his greatest asset. He doesn't have great speed. He isn't always in good position. But he is capable of making the play when the ball arrives.

"He had a good year in 1983. I don't think he had as good a year in 1984. But he's still better than most of them. I believe he'll come back up this year."

No. 5 is Timmy Newsome. He could be the big fullback the Cowboys have always wanted. At 6-1, 232 pounds, he's a power runner who could take some of the heat off tailback Tony Dorsett and open things up for the Dallas offense.

"He's got a lot of ability that's really untapped. He has size and speed to go with the ex-plosiveness," Landry said.

The Cowboys have problems, sure, we know that. But it takes a real bonehead to bet they won't win six games

CINCINNATI (AP) — A day 1987 with an option for 1988. after news reports leaked word of Bell said he was eager to the trade, the Cininnati Reds and Texas Rangers announced Friday that Texas had sent third baseman Buddy Bell to the Reds in exchange for Cincinnati reserve outfielder Duane Walker and a player to be named later.

The Reds reportedly had been ready to send the Rangers a minorleague pitcher as part of the deal, but Cincinnati spokesman Jim Ferguson said Friday he could make no comment about who the third player will be.

agreed to a Cincinnati contract ex- ed to comment when asked tending through the 1988 season, but declined to disclose any contract details. Bell reportedly was Texas contract running through Cincinnati.

Bell said he was eager to play in Cincinnati, near where he maintains a home and where his father. outfielder Gus Bell, starred for the Reds from 1953 to 1961.

Bell reportedly is making $600,000 a year on a contract through 1987 with an option for Bell's arrival leaves the Reds with three third basemen, including the left-handed-hitting Wayne Krenchicki and the righthanded-hitting Nick Esasky, who have platooned for Cincinnati this The Reds announced that Bell season. Reds officials have declinwhether they are positioning the team for another trade.

The Reds scheduled an afternoon paid $600,000 a season through a news conference for Bell in

Bell said he flew to Cincinnati Thursday morning and agreed in principle on a contract with the Reds Player-manager Pete Rose evidently thought the trade was completed late Thursday night when he told Walker he was part of a deal for Bell. Bell said Thursday he didn't know why the trade wasn't conchided and announced Thursday. "As far as I'm concerned, the contract situation with the Reds was taken care of in 15 minutes this morning," Bell said Thursday. "I don't know what the hangup was. I don't know what held it up unless it was the players.'

Reds General Manager Bill Bergesch spoke with Rangers officials by telephone Thursday night during the Reds' 6-3 loss
