Plane crash kills about 130

Medical personnel, left, cover bodies of victims of the Delta plane that crashed Friday afternoon at Dallas/Fort Worth International Airport.

GRAPEVINE (AP) — A Delta Air Lines jumbo jet carrying 160 people crashed and exploded Friday during a heavy thunderstorm on its final approach to Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport, killing about 130 people, officials said.

The Lockheed L-1011, Flight 191 from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., to Los Angeles with a stop here, struck two cars on a highway and decapitated a driver before slamming into a field and bursting into flames, witnesses said.

At least 34 people were injured, including a person not on the plane, hospital officials said.

Witnesses counted 40 to 60 bodies draped in yellow plastic on the tarmac near the wreckage, about a quarter mile from the runway. Linda Harrison, a records secretary at the Dallas County Medical Examiner's office, said the office's chief investigator, who was at the crash site, told her about 130 people were killed.

"We've received about 20 (bodies) so far," she said. "I understand a lot of the bodies are in fragments."

The three-engine jet crashed between 6:05 p.m. and 6:08 p.m. CDT, said Jerry Cooper, a Delta spokesman. It carried 149 passengers and 11 crew members, said Delta spokesman Jim Ewing in Atlanta.

The plane crashed in heavy rain north of the runway at the airport midway between Dallas and Fort Worth, said Federal Aviation Administration spokesman Dennis Feldman in Washington, D.C.

There was no immediate official explanation for the crash, but Jack Barker, an FAA spokesman in Atlanta, said witnesses told the FAA that lightning hit the plane on its final approach. Barker also said it wasn't known whether wind shear — an abrupt change in wind direction and speed — was involved in the crash.

Misty fog shrouded the field as dense smoke streamed from the charred hulk of the jet. Wreckage ranging from 6 inches to 8 feet was scattered over several hundred yards. The tail section, with engine, was the largest

Wyoming city digs out of hail storm

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — Rescuers searched a flooded creek for bodies and snow plows cleared hail from a main street Friday after the worst thunderstorm in memory sparked flash flooding and left at least 12 people dead and dozens injured.

The victims included a sheriff's deputy and a little girl he was trying to rescue. A woman and her two dogs were found dead in a basement. The police and county civil defense were flooded out of their offices, and residents put on boots to walk gingerly over the marble-sized hail that piled up Thursday night.

"It was like someone opened a faucet immediately above Cheyenne and set it on super-high velocity," Cheyenne Mayor Don Erickson said at a news conference Friday, where he put the damage at millions of dollars. On Friday, rescue teams searched around Dry Creek, pulling victims from cars and trying to find owners of the empty vehicles in the creek bed. The Salvation Army geared up to provide emergency clothing and shelter.

"We've had a lot of calls," said Capt. Steve Owen. "They've lost almost everything they have and don't have anything to change into."

Water had receded by Friday morning, but was still several feet deep in parking lots and Holliday Park. On Thursday night, streets had been filled with 6 feet of water, and rescue workers took to canoes to get around as cars and trucks floated away. Police had ordered residents off the street at 8 p.m.

Mattox: GOP trying to intimidate voters

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox protested to the U.S. Justice Department on Friday over what he charged are attempts to intimidate voters in Saturday's special 1st District congressional election.

Mattox said U.S. Rep. Guy Vander Jagt, R-Mich., chairman of the National Republican Congressional Committee, had called upon U.S. Attorney General Edwin Meese to send Justice Department officials into the East Texas district during Saturday's voting.

"The fact is that the chairman of a national Republican fund-raising committee is attempting to put the weight of the federal government behind blatantly partisan efforts to affect voter turnout," Mattox charged.

"These actions just smack of the worst type of political cronyism possible," he said.

Democrat Jim Chapman, a former county prosecutor, and Republican Edd Hargett, a former Texas A&M and professional football player, are the candidates in Saturday's runoff election. They topped an eight-man field in the June 29 special election to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of Rep. Sam Hall, who became a federal judge.

In a statement released late Friday, Mattox said state officials "want to see the broadest possible voter turnout. Full participation is what makes democracy work."

"Mr. Vander Jagt and the current administration are doing everything in their power to frighten the voters into staying home," Mattox said.

Mattox said he made his complaint in a phone call to Justice Department officials in Washington.

Reunion fiddles down

The Outlaw Prison Band from Big Spring's Federal Camp stole the show Friday at the 61st annual Old Settlers Reunion in Comanche Trail Park. "I'm real proud of this prison band. They stayed with us 'til now," Pat McNew said after the daytime festivities had concluded at the Old Settlers Pavilion.

McNew was elected president of the Old Settlers organizing committee for 1986 during yesterday's reunion. She is the first woman to serve in this position, and she replaces 11-year president Dwight McCann, who relinquished his position because of ill health.

Prison camp staff member Sam Crowell, who

Keith Crawford plays a tune Friday in the fiddling contest at the Old Settlers Reunion in Comanche Trail Park.

The many activities at the Old Settlers Reunion in Comanche Trail Park seem to have tired Elton Awalt, a resident of Golden Plains Care Center.

Wards to drop catalog

CHICAGO (AP) — Montgomery Ward & Co. customers have shopped by catalog for 113 years, but the nation's sixth-largest retailer said Friday it's losing money with catalog sales and will phase them out by the end of 1986.

"The catalog business has lost money since 1980 and has shown no promise of change," Bernard F. Brennan, president and chief executive officer said at a news conference. He said catalog operations had lost $50 million a year over the past five years.

Montgomery Ward, a wholly owned subsidiary of Mobil Corp. since 1976, posted $53 million in earnings on $6.5 billion in sales in 1984, Brennan said. It took in $1.2 billion in revenue in 1984 from catalog operations.

Leader of the band

West Texas band director marches to memories

ABILENE (AP) — At first sight, you get the impression you're in the presence of the man who has kept Kodak in business all these years. The expansive but cozy home on the corner boasts what seem like hundreds of photographs in addition to countless items of memorabilia.

By the stairs is a large hand-written banner proclaiming "We Love Prof." and in a room he keeps locked is an old, hand-cranked phonograph machine. Off to one side is a stack of Mexican sombreros, while in the corner is yet another stack of unmounted photographs.

Welcome to the home of Raymond T. Bynum, the pioneering bandman of the Southwest who helped make marching bands a reality in dry, hot West Texas and influenced music education during his many years at both Abilene High School and McMurry College.

Now 78, Bynum says he doesn't get around as much as he used to, but his memory of the past hasn't dimmed. He seems to have an opinion on just about everything. And unlike many men of accomplishment, he's hopelessly curious about others.

His wife of more than 50 years, Catherine, calls it just plain nosiness. "You'll never find anyone to prove he's timid," she said.

Bynum jokes with his wife about the mess of memorabilia scattered about their house.

"Junk? Yes, junk's the name for it," she said, smiling graciously and shaking her head as she moved off to another room. "We just learn to live in the big middle of it. If you can't beat it, you have to live with it."

Bynum was the son of a schoolteacher who was constantly moving around because of differences with smalltown school boards jealous of his use of authority.

"He was a real strong on what-I call dis-CIP-line," Bynum said, coining his own form of a favorite word. "He didn't get along with the school boards, but he did get along with the kids."

Most of Bynum's early years

West Texas' pioneer bandman Raymond Bynum sits amid stacks of memorabilia at home in Abilene. He helped make marching bands a reality at Abilene High School and McMurry College.

were spent in different towns in Louisiana (he was born in Springdale, Arkansas, because his "mother's sister's husband was a doctor and they went up there to save money.") By the age of 13, he was living in Anson, where he met Catherine.

She moved to Waxahachie and later studied at Trinity University. But she returned to Abilene in 1931 and fell in love with Bynum, who was already a rising influence in regional band music. They married in 1934, and have four children and five grandchildren.

Bynum graduated from Sterling City High School in 1922 and enrolled at Simmons College to study to become a Spanish teacher. While there, his roommate invited him to try out for the famed Cowboy Band.

Bynum admitted he didn't know much about playing a band instrument, and when someone handed him a bass horn, he was clearly confused. "I didn't know whether to blow on it, suck on it or play it with a bow," he said.

Even when he did learn to play the instrument, Bynum was forced to give it up whenever a spotlight-loving Simmons College football player wanted to play in public. During one engagement at which his father attended, Bynum was forced to sit it out.

"I was probably pretty sad looking," Bynum said, remembering that concert. At any rate, his father felt enough sympathy for his son to help correct the situation. "Daddy bought me a saxophone pretty soon."

Playing band music became one of Bynum's joys, and soon after he graduated from Simmons with a degree in Spanish in 1926, he began teaching both Spanish and band at Abilene High School. He started the band program, from scratch, practically the first in the Southwest.

Horseman club sets playday

The Howard County Youth Horsemen Club will sponsor an open play day at 7 p.m. today at the club's Arena on the Garden City Highway, club president Kenneth Williams said.

Registration for the event will begin at the arena at 6 p.m. Anyone may participate.

Events include barrels, poles, flags and a potato race. The evening will have an added attraction in the goat-tying, hair-pulling and ribbon races, Williams said.

There also will be a stick horse race for children 4 years old and under.

The concession stand will be open.

Hart named bank president

S.H. Hart will begin Monday as new president and chief executive officer of the Coahoma State Bank, Gene Stephens, chief operations officer, said Thursday.

Hart will replace Stephens, who served as temporary replacement for Bill Read, former bank president.

Hart comes from the First National Bank of Denver City where he has served as executive vice president and advisory director since September 1984, Stephens said.

Read resigned recently along with vice president Johnny Justiss. Both men remain on the bank's board of directors, Stephens said. Stephens will return to the First State and Savings Bank in Mesquite where he is employed by owner Briggs Todd, a member of the Coahoma State Bank board of directors.

Hart graduated from the Colorado School of Banking at the University of Colorado in Boulder. He also has a bachelor of science degree in agriculture production from Texas Tech University in Lubbock. He is a graduate of Post High School.

Hart, who is married and has three children, is experienced in agriculture and oilfield-related loans and is "going to be an asset to the community," Stephens said.

"The plane was coming in real low. I saw the nose hit a car on the highway," said Robert Braden, who was on the 10th floor of an airport hotel.

He said the plane bounced over a field, clipped one or two water tanks and skidded across tarmac into a muddy, grassy field.

"It went into a ball of flame," said Braden. "The back end caught on fire and skidded across the ground."

Jerry Maximoff, an employee at Zantop International Airlines Inc., was working on a plane about 200 yards from the crash, said he talked to a survivor.

"He said he was sitting in the tail, smoking a cigarette. It felt like the crew was maneuvering the plane left to right, then the next thing he knew he felt a bump, then all of a sudden he was upside down in his seat," Maximoff quoted the survivor as saying.

serves as band sponsor, said the group played mostly country-western selections, but offered polkas and waltzes for the festivities.

"Today's response was real good. There was a group of seniors who danced toe-tappers besides waltzes and polkas," he said.

Crowell also praised other members of the band who are camp inmates.

"They gave up a day's pay to come out here and do this. They're pretty civic-minded people," he said.

Gertrude McCann, who serves as secretary-treasurer of the organizing committee, said another highlight of this year's event was the barbecue, which boasted a record attendance.

"It was the largest we ever had. We fed over 600 persons," McCann said. She said about 1,500 persons attended the daytime activities and

"We have not been able to identify anybody yet," said Ewing. He said Delta had a tentative list, but would not immediately release names.

"The major thing right now is taking care of the families involved first," said Ewing.

Jerry Maximoff, an employee at Zantop International Airlines Inc., was working on a plane about 200 yards from the crash site and talked to a survivor.

"He said he was sitting in the tail, smoking a cigarette. It felt like the crew was maneuvering the plane left to right, then the next thing he knew he felt a bump, then all of a sudden he was upside down in his seat," Maximoff quoted the survivor as saying.

more than 800 persons had registered.

McCann said she was pleased a woman was elected president of the organizing committee.

"I think it will be a challenge for her, but she can do it. She's helped the last 20-odd years and has been coming to this reunion since she was a tiny girl," McCann said.

Contest winners at the reunion included: Top fiddler — 1. Buster Payne of Eunice, N.M.; 2. Lindy Durham of Hobbs, N.M.; 3. Chester Derick of Odessa; 4. Kenneth Crawford of Las Cruces, N.M.

Husband calling — 1. Ruth McNew; 2. Allen Castel; 3. Pat McNew; 4. Maureen Bishop.

Sheriff's Lt. Dan Broyles. 12 people were confirmed dead, and all the missing had been accounted for, the sheriff's department said.

Most of the victims drowned when they were caught in cars that were quickly submerged, Cheyenne Police Chief Byron Rookstool said.

Seventy people were injured, the mayor said. Most suffered lacerations and bruises. Only two people were hospitalized Friday night, the city's two hospitals reported. They were in serious but stable condition.

"It just kept coming and coming harder and harder."

Nicaragua seeks rebels

MANAGUA, Nicaragua — The government on Friday sent troops and aircraft after the anti-Sandinista rebels who daringly attacked a town near the capital, military and civilian sources said.

The government force was searching for about 150 Democratic Force guerrillas who attacked La Trinidad, 75 miles north of Managua in Esteli province, early Thursday, said the sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

A Defense Ministry statement said 33 rebels, 11 soldiers and three civilians were killed in the fighting.

Guerillas deny capture

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador — Left-wing guerrillas on Friday dismissed as "totally false" Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger's assertion that Salvadoran troops had retaliated against the terrorists who killed six Americans.

"It is totally false that any member of the commandos has been captured or has fallen in combat," the rebels said in a broadcast by Radio Venceremos, their clandestine station.

The broadcast of a communique from the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front said: "It is also false that the army has inflicted 21 casualties on us and given a blow of any significant military importance to any of our organizations."

Opposition party raided

HARARE, Zimbabwe (AP) — Police raided the office of Joshua Nkomo's opposition political party Friday, arrested five people and confiscated documents, after making arrests at his home on Thursday.

Prime Minister Robert Mugabe won more than three-fourths of the seats in last month's parliamentary elections and called it a mandate for his plan to create a one-party state.

He has said he would carry out his plan even if it means crushing political opponents and violating the British-drafted constitution, which is effective until 1990.

Blacks protesting the South Africa government's apartheid policies halt traffic Friday while staging a demonstration. Police moved in and arrested about 40 demonstrators.

Government accused of assassinating lawyer

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Black nationalists charged Friday that a death squad sent by the white government assassinated a top civil rights lawyer, the fifth anti-apartheid leader slain in mysterious circumstances in five weeks.

The outlawed African National Congress accused President P.W. Botha's government of sending a death squad to kill Nonyamezelo Mxenge. The main legal anti-apartheid movement in South Africa, the United Democratic Front, expressed suspicion that "the state or its allies" arranged the killing.

There were fears that Mrs. Mxenge's death will cause a new surge of unrest in Natal, her home province.

Police appealed for help in finding the killers and said it was useless to make "irresponsible, unfounded or unsubstantiated allegations" implicating South African authorities.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Charles E. Redman called on South Africa to "find and prosecute the perpetrators of this heinous crime."

Mrs. Mxenge, 43, was a defense attorney for 16 leaders of the anti-apartheid front who face treason charges in Pietermaritzburg, near the Natal port city of Durban.

National police headquarters in Pretoria announced the arrests of 55 more people overnight, bringing the total to 1,384 in the 13-day old state of emergency imposed to quell nearly a year of protest and riot. An estimated 500 blacks have been killed in the violence. Police said they had released 48 of the detainees, who can be held indefinitely without charge.

In a statement issued from its headquarters in Lusaka, Zambia, the African National Congress, the main guerrilla group fighting white rule, said a "death squad of the Botha regime" killed Mrs. Mxenge, who was shot down Thursday night as she stepped from a car outside her home in Umlazi, a black township in Durban. Police said four black gunmen escaped in a car.

Four black leaders of the anti-apartheid front, who had been driving home from a political meeting in eastern Cape province, were found stabbed to death June 27.

Godzilla gulps Dr Pepper

LOS ANGELES — The latest celebrity couple to cause a stir: Godzilla the fire-breathing monster and Dr Pepper, the soft drink advertised as "so misunderstood."

"This is the perfect marriage of product placement and promotion," said Rusty Citron, director of national promotion and merchandising for New World Pictures, which is releasing "Godzilla 1985" in the United States.

"We think everyone's going to have a lot of fun with it."

Beginning next week, the towering terror of Tokyo and the bubbly soft drink from Dallas will be paired in a $10 million advertising campaign leading up to the Aug. 23 release of the film.

Monkeys on the loose

SAN FRANCISCO — A biologist who spent three years studying primates in the wilds of Kenya continued on the trail Friday of two escaped monkeys wandering the wild streets of San Francisco.

Both the biologist, Janice Chism, and the furry fugitives — a 12-pound patas monkey and her baby — are out of their elements, but that hasn't seemed to bother the monkeys much. Since the mother bolted from the San Francisco Zoo last month, they've apparently crossed dangerous streets and dog-filled neighborhoods to dine in lush garden spots and rest in wooded dells.

The professor from Merritt and Laney colleges across the bay in Oakland, who was in the third day of her hunt, was having a bit more difficulty adjusting.

Amish don't need signs

GLASGOW, Ky. — Amish farmers have a constitutional right not to put bright orange warning signs on their plain black buggies because their conservative religion prohibits such displays, a judge ruled Friday.

"The First Amendment compels toleration of sincerely held beliefs of minority religious groups," Barren District Judge Ben Dickinson wrote in dismissing a traffic ticket issued to an Amish man for not carrying a sign on his horse-drawn carriage marking it as a slow-moving vehicle.

BBC in uproar after film on Northern Ireland violence cancelled

LONDON (AP) — The British Broadcasting Corp., which cherishes its independence, has fought a running battle with governments since World War II on issues ranging from coverage of the Falklands War to a critical profile of Uganda's ex-dictator Idi Amin.

Since Britain ordered troops into Northern Ireland in 1969, the publicly funded BBC and rival Independent Television have been attacked by Labor and Conservative governments on at least 16 occasions over coverage of the sectarian troubles.

The latest controversy, which erupted this week, pitted Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and Home Secretary Leon Brittan, who both survived an IRA bomb attack last year, against a BBC documentary on extremism in Northern Ireland featuring an alleged IRA leader.

Brittan said it would give "succor to terrorist organizations" and Mrs. Thatcher "utterly condemned" it. The BBC's 12-member board of governors, 10 of whom were appointed since Mrs. Thatcher came to power in 1979, watched the program and canceled it. BBC journalists, who called a 24-hour strike next Wednesday to protest the decision, said it marked the first time that the governors had ever overridden the director-general, who is responsible for editorial decisions.

Independent Television journalists have announced they will join the strike. The BBC had touted the 45-minute documentary, which passed rigorous guidelines established by the network for Northern Ireland stories, as a balanced look at one of the most serious issues facing Britain.

Titled "At the Edge of the Union," it focused on two elected politicians who advocate violence — Martin McGuinness, a Roman Catholic reputed to be chief of staff of the outlawed Irish Republican Army, and Gregory Campbell, a hardline Protestant who says "you either be killed by the IRA or you kill them."

Opposition leaders, journalists and civil rights groups have accused the government of censorship and jeopardizing the BBC's independence. The controversy has also raised broader issues of covering Irish affairs and terrorism.

BBC Chairman Stuart Young, who was asked to resign by the journalists, issued a statement Thursday saying: "There is no question that the BBC's commitment to vigorous, accurate and honest journalism in its domestic and external services remains undiminished."

But the BBC journalists and other critics weren't so sure. "The editorial independence of the BBC is what is at stake," declared Elizabeth Clough, head of the National Union of Journalists branch at the BBC. "It must be preserved. The BBC must not be seen bowing to government pressure and government interference."

Astronauts fix shuttle telescope equipment

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — With a "Wow!" of delight, Challenger's astronauts announced Friday they had fixed a $60 million telescope aiming device, a key research instrument that will be used to study Halley's comet next year.

So elated were scientists on the ground over the success of the mission, they asked to have the flight extended one day beyond Monday's scheduled landing. NASA said that was unlikely, however, because there was not enough fuel aboard for a 24-hour extension.

Astronaut Loren Acton fed a new set of instructions into the aiming device, called the Instrument Pointing System, and it began accurately tracking targets on the sun.

"Hey, it was successful," said Acton, with some astonishment.

Lee and Minerva Lewis, owners, pose with Paula Angel, designer, at Country Flowers, a new floral shop that opened Thursday.

Women open new business

By LISA MUSSER
Staff Writer

A mother and daughter duo decided to fulfill their business dreams. On Thursday, they opened their own store, Country Flowers at 1701 Scurry.

Minerva Lewis, 51, formerly of Roswell, N.M., and her daughter Lea Lewis, 27, of Levelland moved to Big Spring recently to open the store.

Country Flowers will be operated by the two women along with designer Paula Angel of Big Spring.

The store offers full wire service operations, an assortment of dried, artificial and fresh arrangements, service to weddings, funerals and other special occasions, as well as personalized designer advice.

Free delivery also will be offered within the city limits. Lewis and Lewis said they looked at Sweetwater and Abilene before deciding to locate in Big Spring.

"They decided to move from Roswell 'for a change' and chose Big Spring because 'the people are more laid back; we like the small town,'" Minerva said.

She said she started the business in order to use her talents with flowers and decorating to the fullest extent.

Lea, who has a bachelor of arts degree in art and psychology and a master's degree in secondary education from Texas Tech University, has been working as an engineer for an oil company when she decided to join her mother in the business endeavor.

She said she joined her mother as an owner of Country Flowers because she was "tired of working for someone else." Minerva said the title for the store was chosen because she and her daughter like the "folk" or "country" theme. One of their favorite jobs is making an arrangement around all types of antiques.

Angel and the owners also will be available to go into homes and make designing suggestions regarding floral and plant arrangements.

Minerva's husband, D.F., who retired from First National Bank in Roswell, is involved in the business as a financial consultant, she said.

She said the goals the women had in Big Spring were "to fit into the community and still be able to make an independent living."

Country Flowers is open from 8 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. weekdays and from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturdays. Mrs. Lewis said the store plans to have a grand opening in September.

Old towne Big Spring project may increase sales

THE SPIRIT LIVES ON... that's the one suggested theme for the Old Towne Big Spring project. Capitalizing on the historical aspects, individualism and ruggedness of our people, we can appeal to visitors to stop to eat, shop and spend time enjoying themselves here. Not only can it create many new jobs but it can increase retail sales by double or triple the present sales.

The six members of the Downtown Steering Committee are: Troy Fraser, chairman (representing the Chamber Industrial Team); Hooper Sanders (Industrial Foundation); Chris Christopher (Economic Development Council); David Mills (Heart of the City); Johnny Rutherford (City) and Bill Crooker (County). Formation of the Steering Committee and the selected representatives will be submitted for approval to each of the entities at their next meetings.

The first home of Dora Roberts is for sell. It has been owned and occupied for many years by a family who are retiring and want to sell the large old home of about 4000 square feet. Corky Harris is leading a group who want the house to be moved to a downtown site, restored and used either as a working office such as the Chamber of Commerce and Convention and Visitor's Bureau or it could be used to house another museum. There are several places downtown it could go and add to the overall Old Towne concept.

The home is in good condition and still retains its original lines including the same woodwork cabinets.

Lauri Churchwell, owner of the Dance Gallery, and Marlene Crockett, just returned from the annual convention of the International Dance Exercise Association in San Diego, Calif. The five-day convention included such outstanding speakers as Jane Fonda and Jackie Sorenson.

Before that, Lauri went to the Dallas Institute for Aerobic Research. At the Institute, founded by Dr. Kenneth Cooper, she was certified as a group aerobics leader. To be certified she went through a week-long intensive course of mental and physical study.

Lauri and Patrice McKinney of Colorado City have established Totally Fit, Inc., formed to certify teachers of aerobics. They will hold four clinics a year. The first year all four clinics will be held in Lauri's studio but future plans call for taking the clinics on the road.

Parts drive up repair costs

SCHAUMBURG, Ill. — The cost to completely reconstruct a two-door 1985 sport coupe is about 3.5 times the factory price of the car's $10,682 factory price, according to a repair study conducted by the Alliance of American Insurers.

The estimate was made on a 1985 Chevrolet Camaro and excludes labor. The total cost of parts and paint to completely rebuild the vehicle is $37,014, the reports, gathered by the national property-casualty insurance trade association, stated.

Don Brodie, parts manager for Pollard Chevrolet in Big Spring, said he agreed with the study's findings. He said the sources used for the study, the April 1985 Mitchell Collision Estimating Guide, the April 1985 Motor Crash Estimating Guide and the 1985 Motor Parts and Time Guide, are used by his department to estimate costs before ordering parts.

A sporty domestic compact was used for the annual study to demonstrate the increasing cost of rebuilding damaged cars, said Larry Soular, Alliance research manager. It has a modern unibody design and popular options including automatic transmission with overdrive, power brakes, power steering, air conditioning and stereo.

Manufacturing processes for today's cars are a technological and cost-efficient marvel," Soular said, "but crash repair is quite another matter." Damage to only a fraction of a new car's parts can cause repair costs to exceed the car's value. At that point — not when an automobile is impossible to repair — insurance companies consider the car a total loss.

Soular explained that the insurer in such cases pays the owner the car's pre-crash "actual cash" value and takes the title to the vehicle. Actual cash value means the car's replacement cost less annual depreciation, plus or minus mileage and valuable options. "It isn't necessarily market value or even the remaining loan balance," Soular said.

Replacement part cost is a principle reason for the high cost of auto crash repair and auto insurance rates, Soular said.

In an insurance policy for late-model cars, he said, 60 percent of the premium covers vehicle damage and about 40 percent covers personal injury.

According to this year's study, the sticker price of a new Camaro would buy only enough replacement parts to build a "Flintstone-style" vehicle with: two front fenders and inner panels for $1,050; two front doors, windows and mirrors for $2,282; two reclining bucket seats and tracks for $955; a dash, instrument panel and console for $2,025; a steering wheel and column for $1,062; power disc front brakes and drum rear brakes for $1,472 and two sun visors for $89. Forsaking Fred's foot power for an engine adds nearly $5,000.

Tom Peters on Excellence

Human factor in service important

Discussions at executive seminars (called "Skunk Camps"), run by The Tom Peters Group of companies, revolve around a list of 10 promises, or "blood oaths." At the head of the list is a commitment to measure customer satisfaction and then to base people's evaluations and compensation substantially on that measurement.

Among success measures, market share, revenue growth and profitability are important. But I find that in virtually any industry the leading indicator of organizational health (or lack thereof) is a hard-boiled set of customer satisfaction measures.

To drive this notion home, I ask seminar participants to discuss the ways in which they might evaluate customer satisfaction. Unfortunately, their lists rarely include measures of satisfaction that are truly in the customers' terms. (Suggested measures invariably include mean time between failures, response time after failures and so on.)

A mature high technology company I know has a long tradition of hiring the best and the brightest and then training the daylights out of them. The manager of the company's computer service group, however, had a perplexing problem. Although his customers agreed that his people were more talented than those of his competitors, he was losing his shirt to several local, smaller service vendors. Moreover, reliable third-party measures of customer satisfaction suggested that the gap between him and his competitors was vast. His overall rating (on a zero to 100 scale) was in the high 30s, while his star competitor scored in the low 90s.

With ears open and mouth shut, the manager went to the horse's mouth — the customers. Questioning them intently, he learned that, although the customers appreciated his team's talent, the chief competitor had some nice off-setting habits: For example, the competitor always called customers far in advance of service visits to make certain that the customers' computers would be shut down only at times that caused minimum inconvenience.

The manager's bigger and more bureaucratic entity had a cut-and-dried maintenance schedule. His people came when they came. The customers had better have their important tasks done, because the computer was going to be shut down now, period.

The bottom line: The technically superior service provider was seen to be inflexible and unresponsive to its customers' needs. The smaller competitor, lacking in technical sophistication, more than made up for that deficiency by being accommodating to its customers' needs.

How can one dig deep enough, hard enough and long enough, and with a mind open enough, to unearth the array of things that really matter to the customer (for whatever idiosyncratic reasons a customer may have)? As marketing expert Regis McKenna points out in his new book The Regis Touch (the best marketing book on technical companies I've ever read), technology- and science-driven companies tend to focus almost exclusively on the virtue of technical specifications while considering "soft perception-based stuff" as being of secondary importance. They don't even know enough "soft" vocabulary to ask the right questions.

Another eye-popping example comes from a less sophisticated arena than mini-computers. A colleague does sales training for a consumer electronics firm — one that deals principally in stereos and ancillary home electronic gear (other than computers). Recently, his company began the practice of hiring young people off the street, with little or no experience. In just 60 to 90 days, many of the youngsters would soar to the head of the store in sales. Then the trajectory would flatten or decline. Why?

The trainer used questionnaires and other analytic techniques to try to answer the riddle. When they all proved unsuccessful, he decided to follow the young sales clerks around, and found the following:

"The newly hired kids knew darn well that they didn't know much about what they were up to. So, when a customer would walk in, they would ask 'How can I help you? What do you want? Where do we start?' Using this strategy, they'd go onto the back room, see the sales statistics posted, see their name at the top of the list. Their obvious conclusion: 'I must be an expert.' Their techniques would subtly change. The new-found 'expert' would say, in effect, to the customer, 'Here's what you need. Take it from me. I know.' It's about as simple as that — they turned from absorbent listeners into unsympathetic talkers."

It's not, as it might appear, a matter of vacuously saying, "Give 'em what they want, no matter what." It is acknowledgment that the needs of each customer are unique — whether the customer is a buyer of consumer stereo goods or of mini-computer services. Concomitantly, satisfaction measures, to be helpful, must unearth and reflect these subjective, usually inarticulate customer needs. They must measure customer satisfaction in the customers' own terms.

NEW YORK (AP) — The nation's basic money supply rose more than expected in mid-July, adding to concerns about the pressures on the Federal Reserve Board to tighten credit.

The Fed reported Thursday that its measure of the basic money supply, M1, increased $3.7 billion in the week ended July 22, rising to $59.4 billion.

For the latest 13 weeks, M1 averaged $587.5 billion, an 11.5 percent seasonally adjusted annual rate of gain from the previous 13 weeks. The Fed wants M1 to grow between 3 percent and 8 percent in the second half of 1985.

M1 includes cash in circulation, checking deposits and non-bank travelers checks. Money growth has been brisk lately, which has fueled concerns in the bond market that the Fed is ready to tighten credit and send interest rates higher in an attempt to brake that growth.

William V. Sullivan Jr., senior vice president of Dean Witter Reynolds Inc., said a slight drop in bond prices late Thursday showed that those concerns were heightened by the latest rise in M1, which was more than $1 billion above the increase expected by many credit analysts.

DENVER (AP) — Manville Corp. said its management reached a tentative settlement with one of the groups in the company's bankruptcy court reorganization, which affects thousands of asbestos-related health claims.

The company declined to release any details pending a board meeting today.

Sources, who agreed to speak only if promised anonymity, said the plan was similar to one Manville reportedly rejected in April.

That deal reportedly called for payments to asbestos victims over a 25-year period financed by $1.6 billion in new bonds, $600 million from Manville's insurance carriers and ownership of up to 90 percent of Manville's stock.

The new plan, one source said, called for creation of a trust that would receive 50 percent of Manville's stock immediately, with more to be added if needed to satisfy future claimants.

The trust would award payments to asbestos victims, who could sue the trust for higher awards if they were dissatisfied, the source said. The company would be immune from further suits for damages.

Lawyers for the company's creditors and for asbestos victims reportedly had not yet seen the proposed settlement.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A big increase in government construction projects in June offset a decline in private building as spending on new construction rose a moderate 0.7 percent, the government reported.

The June increase, reported Thursday by the Commerce Department, left construction spending at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $342.8 billion and only partially erased the effects of an 0.8 percent decline in May.

Economists expressed concern that private building has not been showing more strength as interest rates declined substantially in recent months.

"The hope for a strong second half this year is based on the belief that the drop in interest rates will show up in increased investment and increased construction," said David Wyss, an economist with Data Resources Inc., of Lexington, Mass. "The fact that construction is not responding is a bit discouraging."

Nancy Vassar is winner of Frist Humanitarian award

Nancy Vassar has been named winner of the Dr. Frist Humanitarian award for 1985 at Malone-Hogan Hospital.

Vassar is a home health nurse at the hospital. She will represent the hospital in a nationwide competition between employees of Hospital Corp. of America (HCA), Malone-Hogan's parent company.

A reception was held in Vassar's honor Friday in the cafeteria of the hospital.

Special guests at the event were runners-up in the competition. They included Irene Lamb, RN, ICU/CCU nurse; James A. (Tony) Stewart, maintenance and landscape employee; and Claudia Turner, RN, home health nurse.

The award is given annually to each HCA hospital's employee who best reflects criteria set up by HCA as exemplary conduct on the part of its employees, said Emily Ward, public relations director.

Criteria includes a positive attitude toward others, willing to go the second mile for others, having contributed significantly toward improvement of patient care, being dependable and consistent, and likely to be overlooked because of innate humility.

The award is named in honor of Dr. Thomas F. Frist Sr., a co-founder of HCA.

Vassar's name will be entered in a divisional contest within HCA. Should she win there, her name will be entered in a regional competition. Next round is the national competition.

Vassar began work at Malone-Hogan on March 21, 1982. She transferred to the Home Health Department when it opened last year. She and her husband, Duffy, have three children. Her husband is meat manager at Furr's Supermarket.

Problems with aphids

Our office has been receiving a lot of calls about "sticky-stuff" or "Honey-dew" on pecans and other garden plants, cantaloupes, watermelons, and cucumbers in particular. The actual cause of this sticky substance is aphids, often called plantlice. Various species of this pest have been found on the garden plants but it has been the Yellow Pecan Aphid that has been the major cause of this problem with pecans.

Malathion is recommended for the control of aphids on garden aphids but Diazinon, Pydrin or Malathion will control the Yellow Pecan Aphids. D-Syston, a systemic insecticide can be applied to pecan tree up until 90 days prior to harvest for effective aphid control. As with any pesticide be sure and read all the label instructions and follow them carefully.

We had a plant problem tour this week and visited many local residences and home gardens. Among the most prevalent problems affecting the plants we inspected was salt water damage and misuse of pesticides. The most notable problem was concerned with the effects of herbicides or weed-killers incorporated in fertilizers. The colorful ads sound good but the herbicides included in such fertilizer mixtures are usually non-selective and cannot tell the difference between the roots of a careless weed and those of a live oak. Again, be sure and follow directions on the label regarding the use and application of all herbicides and other pesticides.

Symptoms of herbicide damage are often confused with the symptoms of those of iron deficiencies. The striking difference is that with herbicide damage, the veins of the leaves are very light, from light yellow to almost white in severe cases. Iron deficient plants have green veins in the leaves with the yellow coloring occurring between the veins. Such herbicide damaged trees and shrubs can sometimes be saved with the addition of activated charcoal applied in the soil and regular, thorough deep watering to leach the chemical out of the soil. Often the plant's owner is not at fault with herbicide damage and such damage can occur when weed killing herbicides have been applied some distance away from the homeowners property as plant roots, particularly those of large trees, travel quite some distance away. Other herbicide damage symptoms of trees include defoliation and pale stunted re-growth of leaves. Often only one or two limbs may be affected but the entire tree may at times suffer.

Many plants are quite sensitive to the salts in our area's water supplies. In many of the stops this week, we noticed this as a common cause of plant owner concerns in our community. Symptoms of this damage include browning of leaf tips and margins. In severe cases plants may defoliate. Keeping the plants well watered is about all that can be recommended to help with this problem. This will help the plant by not allowing it to suffer any further stress as this problem is aggravated by drought. About the best thing that can happen is to get a good soaking rain to leach these salts out of the soil. Red Oaks, Crepe Myrtles, and roses are particularly sensitive to salt damage.

Blossom end rot is occurring on tomatoes and cucumbers and watermelons. This is actually not a disease but a physiological condition caused by fluctuations of moisture levels in the soil. About all that can be done is to insure a more constant level of moisture in your home gardens by watering very deeply (at least to the 8 inch level). Also check to see that the soil moisture remains constant. Addition of calcium to the plants has sometimes helped with this problem.

We are also hearing a lot of complaints of poor fruit set of watermelons and cucumbers. Bees and certain other insects are needed to insure adequate pollination of these plants and when this occurs such poor fruit sets happen. Be cautious in applying insecticides in home gardens as this also keeps beneficial insects away.

Be a winner with wool

The beauty and versatility of wool will be the focus for the "Texas Make-It-Yourself With Wool" Contest for 1985. The contest is sponsored annually by the Texas Sheep and Goat Raisers Auxiliary, Texas Department of Agriculture and the American Sheep Producers Council.

Purpose of the annual contest is to encourage the use of wool in sewing, knitting and crocheting fashionable garments. It also offers young experts the opportunity to compete for prizes and win recognition. District competition is held in eight areas of Texas during September and October. Anyone may enter.

Categories for competition are determined by age and include: Preteen (ages 10-13), Junior (ages 14-16), Senior (ages 17-21) and Adults (over 21). The District Contest for our area will be October 5 at the Sunset Mall in San Angelo. For more information, call Jean Holland, Tom Green County Extension Agent, 915-653-2385, or write 113 W. Beauregard, San Angelo, Texas 76903-5887.

From lightweight, sheer summer fabrics to heavyweight coatings, versatile wool provides year-round wear in any climate. Because of its natural fiber crimp, much of the volume of wool fabric is air that acts as insulation, allowing comfort without adding bulky weight.

Wool fashions are truly an investment in quality and long life for greater value. When buying wool garments, consider the cost per wearing. To do so, divide the total cost by the number of times you plan to wear the garment. The total cost includes alteration and dry-cleaning costs anticipated for the life of the garment. Because wool fabrics are durable, resist tearing and often do not show wear, wool classic suits are a wardrobe investment which last season after season.

Wool is renewable natural fiber, has other characteristics that make it a premium fiber. Wool resists burning, does not produce toxic fumes and chars but does not melt. Another feature is that it does not transmit static electricity. Wool is easily dyed for seasonal color and retains color without fading. Because it resists moisture, it is excellent for outdoor wear. It retains its shape, resists wrinkling and drapes or hangs beautifully.

Wool is a favorite for home sewing. It tailors well and can easily be shaped by pressing and using supportive inner fabrics.

Proper treatment keeps wool looking fashion right for many seasons. To minimize care, keep closures closed and store garments properly. Wool naturally springs back to shape and wrinkles often disappear. This makes wool a favorite for traveling.

Allow about 24 hours for garments to "relax" after wearing. Steam pressing can also renew their appearance. Press with a moderately hot iron using steam and a press cloth or a dry iron and a damp press cloth. The press cloth reduces garment shine. Leave wool slightly moist after pressing.

Garments often require dry cleaning but many may be hand or machine washed. Follow garment care instructions and look for performance finishes. When laundering turn the garment wrong side out, use lukewarm water, a mild detergent and short agitation or a gentle machine cycle. Wool is weaker wet than dry so move wet garments carefully. Rolling them in a towel removes excess moisture. To maintain garment shape, draw the garment's outline on scrap paper before laundering, then shape garment to its original size.

Remove all stains promptly, using appropriate stain removal solvents. Never rub to remove spots or stains because the fabric's surface may become matted. Brushing the surface with fine sandpaper may make it look less matted and remove scorch. Remove surface balls or pills by brushing or carefully shaving the garment with a safety razor.

Store out-of-season garments clean and in airtight containers because wool attracts moths and carpet beetle larvae. Always follow product directions when using insect preventives. Destroy insects by laundering or dry cleaning.

Union chief Don Fehr said there seemed to be little new in any of Ueberroth's proposals, adding he was not surprised by MacPhail's reaction.

The two suggestions with which MacPhail took strongest exception were that owners stop blaming players for their financial difficulties and that owners put $45 million in escrow while the two sides negotiate how much of a pension raise the players get.

Negotiations with the union had been at a standstill. The two sides hadn't met since Wednesday, but Bob Fishel, executive vice president of the American League and a spokesman for MacPhail, said the two sides agreed to a resumption for 2 p.m. EDT Saturday.

MacPhail was known to be angered by parts of Ueberroth's proposals which seemed to undermine a common thread through eight months of management negotiations with the union — that players must share a responsibility in solving baseball's financial problems.

Fehr, acting executive director of the Major League Players Association, was in meetings with his staff most of Friday morning and afternoon, also reviewing what he said were seven proposals from the commissioner.

"There were some different things in there," Fehr said, "but most of the ideas appear to be, in one fashion or another, a rehash of management proposals that have been made this year or in the past. They do not appear, in and of themselves, to be the type of proposals that would cause somebody to say, 'Ah-ha, we can do something.'"

Fehr said he also was not surprised by MacPhail's reaction to a request by the commissioner to remove blame for escalating costs from the players.

Fehr said management doesn't "want to find another way because they've already decided that all of baseball's financial problems be solved on the backs of players."

MacPhail said the PRC's four-owner executive board, which sets negotiating policy, had been called to New York for the duration. He said he would continue to review Ueberroth's proposals with the board.

At his news conference, Ueberroth outlined only two of the five proposals. The commissioner's office said there were no plans to make the other three proposals public. All five were delivered to the union and the PRC by 8 a.m. Friday.

The first proposal called for the union to set aside its strike deadline and continue to negotiate on the talks' most troublesome issue, pensions, while finishing the season, the playoffs and the World Series. Fehr has said the union will not likely adjust its strike date.

Players have asked for $60 million annually as the owners' pension contribution. That figure represents about one-third of baseball's annual network television revenue, a percentage the union says is traditional. The owners' contribution last year was $15.5 million.

Ueberroth suggested the $45 million difference be put in escrow while the two sides set a 45-day period for negotiations on a pension raise. For each day negotiations continue, $1 million will be deducted from difference and be given to charity as an incentive to find a speedy solution.

The second proposal asked owners, among other things, to stop asking players to help solve financial problems while dropping any discussion of a salary cap. The owners would negotiate a pension raise escalating from a 50 percent increase over $15.5 million to a 100 percent raise in five years. In return, owners would get favorable revisions in salary arbitration.

MacPhail said the escrow proposal was unacceptable. He said that although the yearly television payment hadn't yet been made, "it has already been committed for club operating expenses — primarily for major league player salaries," MacPhail said.

"Secondly," he said, "the suggestion that owners stop asking players to solve their financial problems misstates the objective of the club proposals."

Since negotiations began in November, owners have tied any pension increases to concessions from players in areas that would hold down salaries and other player costs. One such proposal included a salary cap, which still is on the table.

"We are not asking the players to solve club economic problems," MacPhail said in the statement. "We are simply asking them to join with us in constructing a proper system to control costs and share revenues on an equitable basis."

MacPhail said owners would continue to ask "that all player compensation—salaries and benefits be considered together.

Verplank retains lead in Western Open golf

OAK BROOK, Ill. (AP) — a 67. Amateur Scott Verplank shrugged off a double bogey, shot another 68 and stretched his lead to five shots Friday early in the second round of the $500,000 Western Open Golf Tournament.

Verplank, 21, the current national amateur champion and the first round leader here, completed two trips over the Butler National Golf Club course in 136, eight shots under par.

The Oklahoma State student recovered from an early double bogey with a burst of six birdies over his last eight holes.

With about half the field of 156 still out, Jim Thorpe and Canadian Dave Barr shared second at 141. Thorpe shot a no-bogey 66 and Barr one-putted nine times on the way to Craig Stadler, Scott Simpson and rookie Ernie Gonzalez were next at 142. Simpson shot 70 in the mild, sunny weather, Stadler had 71 and Gonzalez 73.

Seve Ballesteros of Spain played his luck nine in 31, had a 68 and said he "got back in the tournament," with a 143 total.

Curtis Strange, a three-time winner this season and within $3,300 of the all-time money-winning record, matched par 72. With a 149 total, however, he was in danger of missing the cut when the field is trimmed to the low 70 scorers for the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday.

Defending champion Tom Watson and Jack Nicklaus both had late starting times. Watson had a first round 74, Nicklaus 76.

Cubbies nip Mets

CHICAGO (AP) — Gary Matthews' tie-breaking homer in the fifth inning Friday powered the Chicago Cubs and Dennis Eckersley to a 2-1 triumph over the New York Mets.

The victory was the third straight for the Cubs and snapped New York's three-game winning streak.

Matthews' homer, his eighth, came off reliever Terry Leach, 1-1, who relieved starter Sid Fernandez after he was lifted for a pinch batter in the top of the fifth.

Eckersley, 8-5, allowed six hits in the six innings he pitched. It was his first start since July 24 after being moved back in the rotation because of a sore shoulder.

Oilers-Giants kick off preseason

CANTON, Ohio (AP) — The estimated 24,000 fans who will pack Facett Stadium for Saturday's 1:30 p.m. opening of the National Football League exhibition season can expect at least a modest glimpse at the starting lineups of the Houston Oilers and New York Giants.

"Commissioner (Pete) Rozelle has impressed on the coaches that this is a showcase game," Giants' spokesman Ed Croke said of annual AFC-NFC Hall of Fame game. "Coach (Bill) Parcells intends to start his first string."

Wrestlers have rough time on opening day

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — The wrestlers at the National Sports Festival began their three-day competition in virtual anonymity Friday as five members of the national championship Greco-Roman team lost, one under tragic circumstances.

Only 325 fans turned out at the Louisiana School for the Deaf to see the wrestlers, who complained earlier in the week that they had been shuffled off to the sidelines by organizers. Those who showed up saw two high schoolers, Martin Strmiska, 17, of Tracy, Calif., and Joe Russell, 17, Portland Ore., beat marines.

They also saw Ron Carlisle, a three-time national champion, fall to Craig Pittman in the heavyweight division. Carlisle and his wife lost their first child at birth Thursday night and he flew home to Quantico, Va., immediately after his 2-1 defeat.

"Losing the child, that was more on my mind than wrestling," Carlisle, 27, said after his bout. "My wife told me she was all right and wanted me to stay. If I had won, I would have stayed, but right now I don't have any desire to continue."

Pittman couldn't allow Carlisle's sadness to affect his approach. "Maybe he wasn't at his best, but he felt tough to me," said Pittman, 25, who is certain of at least a bronze medal because of Carlisle's withdrawal. "RHIP (rank has its privileges) didn't mean a thing," added Pittman, a corporal, who beat Carlisle, a staff sergeant, for the first time in three meetings. "It was the very best I ever wrestled against him."

The two teenagers who surprised marines won in different methods. Strmiska fell behind 10-3 in his first bout in senior competition, but caught Eric Wetzel in a headlock and pinned the 1985 national runner-up with just 58 seconds gone in the final round.

"We're here to learn, to get experience," Strmiska said. "It feels good to win, but let's see what happens after it's over."

Russell, a two-time world schoolboy champion, decisioned Craig Pollard in a low-scoring match.

The only winning marines, aside from Pittman, were 136.5-pound national champion Buddy Lee, and Mike Johnson at 198 pounds.

MARINA KONYAVSKY, who was born in the Soviet Union and now lives in Los Angeles, using a ribbon while competing in the rhythmic gymnastics at the National Sports Festival.
