Arsonists torch Airport school

Officials estimate $30,000 damage

By KEELY COGHLAN
Staff Writer

Arsonists started a fire late Monday night that gutted the library at Airport Elementary School, causing an estimated $30,000 in damages.

Arson Investigator Burr Lea Settles, who is continuing to investigate the blaze, labeled it "incendiary." The department, however, has not identified any suspects who may have been involved in setting the fire, which was reported at 10:52 p.m. by an anonymous caller.

Settles said books were piled up in a mound in the center of the room and then lit. The fire also damaged the roof, walls, ceiling, carpet and furniture in the library.

"They ransacked the library," he said. The school, closed several years ago, is not used for classes or offices, said Lynn Hise, Big Spring Independent School District superintendent. "We store a little furniture there, but that's about all."

The school district's insurance adjusters have not set a damage estimate. The fire department tentatively set damage at $30,000.

Vandalism had not been a problem at the elementary school before the fire, Hise said, but several other Big Spring schools have been the target of vandals, costing the district between $60,000 and $70,000 this summer. Last summer vandals caused only about $2,000 damage, he said.

Because of the vandalism, school officials and the district board will meet to discuss security measures, Hise said. "It's one of those things that runs in cycles," Hise said. In an effort to prevent further vandalism and to solve the crimes this summer, the district will work closely with the police department's Crimestoppers program, he said. A break-in at Goliad Middle School this summer was solved with the help of Crimestoppers.

The arsonists got onto the grounds of the closed school by climbing over the chainlink fence surrounding the buildings, Settles said. When firemen arrived at the fire Monday, they had to use boltcutters to open each of the three gates.

Settles said he did not know if a flammable liquid was used to start the fire, but he is sending samples for laboratory tests.

An anonymous caller reported the blaze, he said. "Whoever called in helped reduce the damage. Whoever he is, we want to thank him," Settles said.

Firemen who entered the buildings first found the library ablaze, with the door open, according to departmental reports.

Lt. Ronnie Baldock and firefighter Paul Brown donned airpicks to battle the fire inside the room. They and other firemen managed to extinguish the blaze on the ground level first, but had trouble dousing the flames in the ceiling and walls.

Firemen had to re-lay their hoses and lines to the building from a fire hydrant at the southeast corner of the school and then re-enter the area from the south side.

A Big Spring Independent School District employee works to clean the fire-gutted interior of the Airport Elementary school fire. Arson is suspected in the fire.

HC district tax rate remains at '84 level

By SCOTT FITZGERALD
Staff Writer

Howard College's tax rate for 1985-86 will remain at 16 cents per $100 valuation, the board of trustees decided at a special meeting Monday night.

The board also was presented with a tentative budget of $5.9 million by Howard College President Dr. Robert Riley. Last year's budget was $5.4 million.

"I think it'll be real good if we can hold our rates for the upcoming year," board of trustees chairman Harold Davis told board members before they unanimously approved a motion to hold the tax rate.

Riley said the tax levy of 16 cents per $100 will generate about $2 million dollars for the operation of the college next year.

Although this year's budget is larger than last year's, a combination of the tuition hike and a slight increase in state funds will allow the district to operate under the present tax rate, Riley said this morning.

In presenting the budget Monday, he told board members, "We worked long and hard on it. We think it's a good sound document."

The board will meet to tentatively approve the budget after pprove the budget after each member has a chance to review it.

Riley said a public hearing concerning the budget would be scheduled on or before Aug. 19. The budget must meet final approval before Aug. 20.

The SouthWest Collegiate Institute for the Deaf will operate on $1.4 million dollars beginning Sept. 1, Riley said. SWCID had been operating on a $1.9 million budget. The drop, Riley said, is necessary because the school will receive less appropriations from the state.

Riley also reported that the college's recent curriculum addition, a cosmetology program, continues to grow. About 50 persons have enrolled for the two-year program, and the college can expect approximately $30,000 in revenues from it next year, he said.

In other business, the trustees:
• Unanimously approved a $6,507.46 bid from Sherwin Williams to install glue-down carpet in the Practical Arts Building. They also approved a $7,258 bid from Keen Electric to install a suspended ceiling in the same building. Both remodeling projects are for classrooms where the cosmetology program will be offered.

Accepted resignations from SWCID instructors Marcus and Marilyn Myers, who have been offered positions at South Carolina School for the Deaf and Blind; SWCID registrar Becky Green; and interpreter Donna Alexander.

Game of strikes

Baseball players balk at contract

NEW YORK (AP) — The normal rule is "one, two, three strikes, yer out..."

But this time, just one strike would knock the nation's ball parks out of the old ball game.

And that seemed likely to happen today as neither players nor owners in "the game of inches" gave any sign they would give even one.

It would be baseball's second midseason strike in four years, this one boiling down to a war of wills over the game's salary structure.

Negotiators gave in to a plea by Commissioner Peter Ueberroth to hold one more meeting but it was thought both sides would only be going through the motions — the same kind of motions that, after eight months of talk, led to the impasse. The walkout would begin with tonight's games.

While pensions remained a primary concern of the players' union, the stalemate stemmed from the owners' demand that changes be made in salary arbitration. The owners wanted to extend the time of service needed to file for arbitration from two to three years while limiting any arbitrator's award to double a player's current salary.

The time and location of today's meeting were not disclosed. The Strike page 2-A

1st-day pot raid nets 100,000 plants

By The Associated Press

The destruction of more than 100,000 cultivated marijuana plants and the arrest of at least 54 people marked "a very successful start" to a nationwide three-day eradication effort, Attorney General Edwin Meese III said.

Police and federal officials used helicopters, airplanes and four-wheel-drive vehicles and tramped through muddy fields Monday to find and uproot marijuana crops and destroy the plants with fire or machetes.

The largest haul came in Indiana, where state and federal authorities found an estimated 7 million wild plants in an 18-acre area near South Bend. The plants are common in northern Indiana because hemp was grown in the area during World War II to be made into rope.

The Drug Enforcement Administration said that as of early today, agents had uprooted 105,058 plants.

About 2,200 law enforcement officers in 49 states joined in the nationwide hunt for cultivated marijuana and its growers in an effort to stamp out what Meese has called "a gateway narcotic" that leads users to harder drugs. Only Rhode Island did not take part in the effort because officials there say the state has no known cultivation of marijuana.

Raids in New Mexico, California, Colorado, Georgia, South Dakota, New Jersey, Arizona, Nebraska, South Carolina, Tennessee, Oregon, Michigan and Kentucky brought hauls of pot and arrests.

The biggest number of arrests — 25 — was made in Arkansas, where Meese watched from a helicopter as some of the 200 officers ripping up plants throughout the state worked their way through a wooded valley.

Hours after Meese left the state, a police helicopter was fired upon near Ben Hur, Ark. State Police Lt. John Chambers said the helicopter landed — amid 750 marijuana plants — and six people were arrested. There were no injuries.

"This massive coordinated effort signals the resolve of the Reagan administration to deal effectively with widespread cultivation and sale of marijuana grown within our borders," Meese told reporters in Arkansas.

NBC's 'Miami Vice' heads 1985 Emmy nominations

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — With NBC dominating this year's Emmy nominations on the strength of its flamingo-bright "Miami Vice" and several hit comedies, the network must be feeling as proud as the peacock that is its symbol.

CBS was second after NBC with 75 Emmy nominations while ABC had 41, PBS 39, syndicated shows got 12 and Operation Prime Time had five.

The Emmys will be awarded Sunday, Sept. 22, in an ABC telecast of the ceremonies at the Pasadena Civic Auditorium.

Other shows with multiple nominations are NBC's "Cheers," 12; NBC's "Motown Returns to the Apollo," 11; CBS' "Cagney & Lacey," 10; NBC's "St. Elsewhere" and the miniseries

New ruling integrates public housing projects

CORRIGAN (AP) — Annie Mae Reagan, 75, left her home in an all-black public housing project in the Polk County community of Corrigan to live in an integrated project in Houston.

But after eight months, she returned to Corrigan to live in her old apartment. "I asked for my old unit back," she said. "In the black section — that's where I wanted to live. Yes, sir."

Ms. Reagan and other public housing residents — whether they like it or not — will soon live in integrated public housing projects because of a ruling issued last week by a federal judge.

U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice of Tyler found the Housing and Urban Development agency's policies discriminate against minorities. He ordered HUD to respond to a desegregation plan that is part of a lawsuit filed in 1980 by hundreds of black East Texas public housing residents.

The judge also listed 36 East Texas counties — including Liberty County, in which Cleveland is located — that are not in compliance with federal laws barring segregated public housing.

While public housing officials are scrambling to comply with Justice's ruling, they say community attitudes have forced them to house blacks and whites separately in the past and will make it difficult to integrate them in the future.

"I hope that judge sleeps well. Everybody's got a right to live where they want to live," said Alice Dougherty, manager of public housing for the Liberty County town of Cleveland, located about 30 miles northeast of Houston.

"We are moving blacks into white sections and whites into blacks," she said. "We've had some refusals, but those people are being told they have to move out of public housing. We're not playing around anymore."

Ms. Dougherty said the Cleveland public housing authority for the past 20 years has put black and white residents in separate projects because that is the way both races wanted it.

DeOrville Evans, manager of Corrigan's housing authority, said public residents "flat told us" they preferred segregation. Evans said he was angry because Justice "has never been to Corrigan or anywhere near this place."

"I just don't know about what it (the order) would do here," he said. "But I think it would tear the town right up."

Mattie Terry, 88, a resident of an all-white project in Corrigan, agreed with Evans.

"The best way to do it is let it stay as it's always been," she said. "Everytime you cross up the races you have a mess. It's all silly talk, that dope. You can put blacks with whites, but you're not going to change feelings around here."

Work crews clean up massive light oil spill

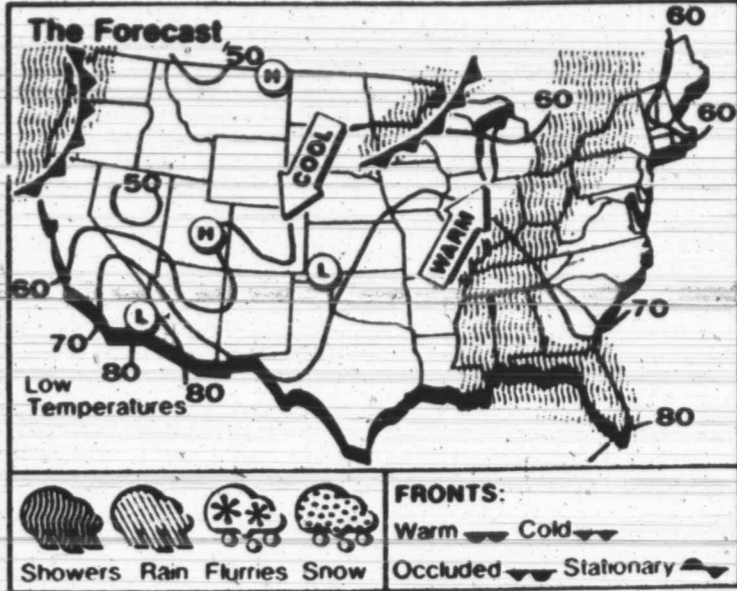

NEDERLAND (AP) — More than 10,000 gallons of light crude oil spilled into the Neches River early today after a valve apparently was left open on a Liberian tanker, authorities said.

The spill at a Sun Oil dock area near Nederland, which is located about 90 miles east of Houston, was reported about 1:10 a.m., said Petty Officer Deborah Jordan of the U.S. Coast Guard's Marine Safety Office.

The oil was being transferred from the Liberian tank ship Zenit Aurora to the Sun Oil refinery when a valve on the ship was apparently left open, Ms. Jordan said. "We can safely say the valve was opened say three or four hours," she said, adding that authorities do not believe Sun Oil was to blame for the spill.

She said the river was still open to traffic, but that the Coast Guard

Radio station names program director

Dick Fields, president and general manager of KBYG and KIOF radio stations, has announced the addition of Chuck Riley to the staff. Riley will serve as program director of KBYG and chief engineer for KBYG and KIOF.

Riley is from Green Bay, Wis., where he worked as morning drive air personality and chief engineer. He and his wife, Debbie, have three children.

Riley said he plans no major changes in programming for KBYG.

Lawyer argues tests are discriminatory

TYLER (AP) — An attorney representing several minority groups and students argued argued in federal court that competency tests for potential teachers are discriminatory.

Albert Kauffman, an attorney from the Mexican-American Legal Defense and Educational Fund, asked U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice on Monday to issue an injunction to prevent state officials from testing sophomore teacher education students this fall.

The Pre-Professional Skills Test checks would-be teachers in reading, writing and mathematics. Students must pass the test to begin taking upper level professional education courses.

"We are asking that college students be able to go on and take courses, not that the test be stopped or outlawed (at this point)," said Albert Kauffman, a San Antonio attorney for MALDEF.

Kauffman said because the state uses the PPST as the sole admission policy to teacher education institutions, it is not acceptable and promotes discrimination against minorities.

"What the state is saying is that these students are not even competent enough to go into class to learn more," Kauffman said in his opening statement. "We want students that are already in college to take these courses and we want to see the test for expert analysis."

If the injunction is issued, students would be able to take upper-level courses and receive a bachelor's degree in education. Teacher certification would be determined after the suit is settled.

Kaufman is representing the GI Forum, a group of Hispanic veterans, the League of United Latin American Citizens, the Texas chapter of National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and 14 students.

He claims the testing program will result in fewer minority teachers in the state's classrooms.

"Students will be hurt by this," Kauffman said. "They won't have enough minority teachers because of standards and levels set by the state. Minority children need these role models."

But state attorneys feel the test serves other purposes.

"This case comes down to whether the state can require students to know reading, math and writing before they are allowed to teach," said Kevin O'Hanlon, an attorney for the state.

"We may be impeding the flow of (minority) teachers into the classroom," he said, "but with the purpose of providing better teachers."

Remedial programs are offered at junior colleges for students who do not pass the test or want tutoring before taking the test, O'Hanlon told the court. Students must pay for the courses, but some financial aid is offered, he said.

School bars AIDS victim

REDONDO BEACH, Calif. — Parents who fear their children could catch AIDS are fighting to bar a 3-year-old boy who has the disease from a preschool class.

A special meeting of parents and staff at Alta Vista School in this community 30 miles south of Los Angeles was called to explain the situation after word leaked out about the boy.

But several parents said they remained unconvinced that the child's presence did not pose a danger to their children, and one teacher sought a transfer.

The boy lives with five other children in a foster home in nearby Torrance. He contracted AIDS from a tainted blood transfusion and is one of six children in Los Angeles County known to have the deadly disease.

School nurse Marilyn Ryan told the meeting Friday that other children would be safe because acquired immune deficiency syndrome is transmitted only through sexual contact, pregnancy, blood transfusions and dirty needles.

Man sells Reno brothel

RENO, Nev. — Saying 30 years in the business is enough, the man who pioneered Nevada's move into legalized prostitution has announced he's sold the nation's largest legal brothel for $18 million.

Joe Conforte and his wife, Sally, on Monday announced the sale of the Mustang Ranch, which includes two buildings with 108 bedrooms, and 400 acres of adjacent desert 10 miles east of Reno. The buyer is a California company, Strong Point Inc.

The Confortes say they owe the government as much as $10 million in back taxes. They had sought $25 million for the brothel and the land.

Conforte said he and his wife plan to return to Brazil, where they lived for two years starting in 1981.

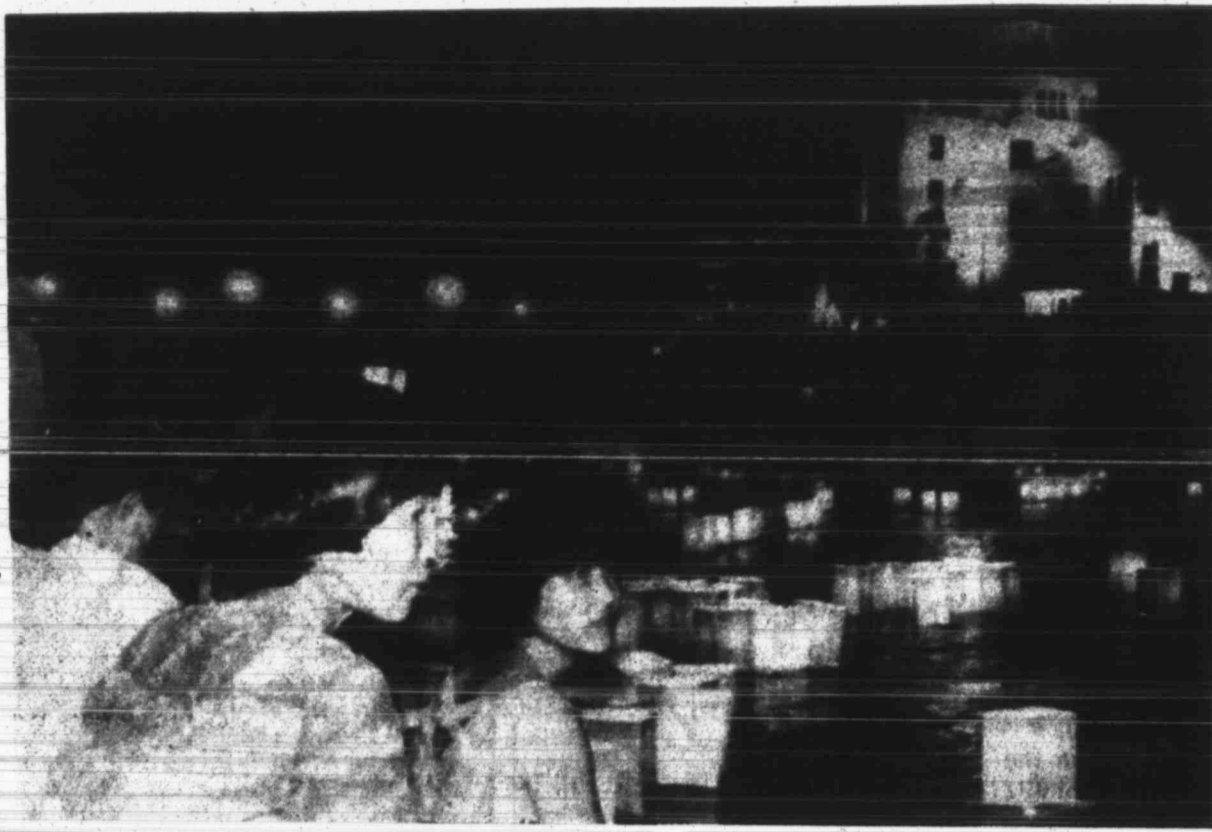

New heart disease drug

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. — Johnson & Johnson and Carter-Wallace Inc. have stopped some clinical testing of a heart disease drug, Bepridil, because of deaths among patients in a study group in the United States, spokesmen said today.

Robert Kniffin, a Johnson & Johnson spokesman, would not say how many deaths were reported, or when. The study began in 1983.

"The relationship between the drug and reported deaths is unclear and the data is being analyzed," Kniffin said. "We don't think it is in order to talk numbers now."

The deaths were reported among a test group of patients suffering from arrhythmia, or irregular heartbeats, Kniffin said.

Horrors of Hiroshima

Japanese recall the destruction left by 'Little Boy'

HIROSHIMA, Japan (AP) — The city where mankind discovered the terror and peril of the nuclear age today marked the 40th anniversary of its destruction with a minute of silence, appeals for peace and mourning for the thousands who died in the first atomic bomb attack.

Some 50,000 people at Hiroshima's Peace Memorial Park listened to the toll of a lone bell, watched doves flutter into the sky, and fell silent for one minute at 8:15 a.m. — exactly 40 years after the United States exploded an atomic bomb over the city, killing up to 140,000 people.

Some 600 youths fell to the ground in a symbolic "die-in" near the Atomic Bomb Dome, the former Hiroshima Industrial Promotion Hall whose fire-ravaged skeletal remains have become a symbol of the nuclear age.

Bereaved relatives of bomb victims tolled a Buddhist bell to summon the spirits.

At the nearby Ground Zero cenotaph that is the focal point of the park, black-clad mourners deposited the names of 4,200 people who died this year from long-range aftereffects of the bomb. The mourners left an offering of water, the final request of many people who perished in the days immediately following the inferno.

The new names bring to 138,700 the number of identified Hiroshima atomic bomb victims, whose names are inscribed at the cenotaph.

More than 90 percent of the people within a half mile of ground zero died Aug. 8, 1945, in the blast and heat of the four-ton bomb named "Little Boy."

Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone told a news conference he may invite world leaders attending next year's Tokyo summit conference of industrialized nations to visit Hiroshima.

"When I come to Hiroshima, I feel a great responsibility to see that no more atomic bombs are used," Nakasone said. "My responsibility is different from other premiers. I have a special responsibility to the human race."

He said his government planned a detailed study of some 360,000 survivors of nuclear attacks. They are eligible to receive free medical treatment for diseases that may be related to the bombings.

Earlier, addressing the crowd which included mayors from 23 countries, Nakasone called on the United States and the Soviet Union to speed "realistic development" in nuclear disarmament talks this fall.

"It is an important responsibility for each and every one of us to protect our precious earth from the tragedy of war, particularly from the horrors of nuclear weapons, and hand it down to the next generation," Nakasone said.

Among Americans attending today's ceremonies were actor Jack Lemmon, who came to Hiroshima on his own, and conductor Leonard Bernstein, who is leading a series of memorial concerts in the city. No Americans had any prominent role in the official observances.

Police escorted several anti-nuclear activists away after they shouted briefly to protest what they said were "hawkish" defense policies of Nakasone's Liberal Democratic Party.

Japan brakes for U.S.

TOKYO — Japan's largest brake manufacturer, Akebono Brake Industry Co., will establish a joint venture with the United States' General Motors Corp. for the development and production of brakes in the United States, Akebono officials announced today.

The new company, to be formally established early next year, will begin operation in July, 1987, said an official from Akebono's General Affairs Division who declined to be named.

The capital, name and site of the company have not yet been finalized, though negotiations with GM are in the final stages, he said.

The official confirmed a newspaper report that the two companies are planning initially to spend more than $33.3 million to establish production facilities. He also said it was likely that the company would be located in the midwestern United States.

Soviets blast Reagan

MOSCOW — The official Soviet news agency Tass today accused President Reagan of defying "logic and facts" in refusing to join in a Soviet moratorium on nuclear test explosions.

Speaking to reporters in Washington on Monday, Reagan rejected the Soviet proposal for an immediate five-month ban on nuclear tests, but said he will consider a permanent ban once the United States completes trials designed to "keep pace" with the Soviets.

Tass said Reagan had refused to join the Soviet moratorium, announced last week by the Soviet Communist Party leader, Mikhail S. Gorbachev, who said the test ban imposed until Jan. 1, 1986, would last as long as there were no U.S. nuclear tests.

Moslems foes seek pact

CHTAURA, Lebanon — Moslem foes of President Amin Gemayel met today to proclaim a Syrian-backed alliance aimed at winning an equal share of power for Lebanon's Moslems as a precondition to ending a 10-year-old civil war with the Christians.

A declaration by the new coalition, named the National Alliance Front, also called for increased resistance against Israel to "liquidate the enemy's direct and indirect presence" in south Lebanon.

U.S. troops in Egypt

EL-HAMMAM, Egypt — In the first landing ever staged jointly by U.S. and Egyptian forces, U.S. Navy boats and Marine helicopters landed hundreds of Egyptian troops on this deserted Mediterranean beach west of Alexandria.

The landing was part of "Bright Star 85," the code name for the largest American military maneuvers ever held in the Middle East.

Let's not forget Lebanon seven

The names of the Rev. Benjamin Weir, William Buckley, the Rev. Lawrence Martin Jenco, Terry Anderson, Peter Kilburn, David Jacobsen and Thomas Sutherland are rarely mentioned on the nightly news. Still, they are no less deserving of this nation's attention than the 39 TWA hostages who were released amid much media fanfare.

We're speaking, of course, of the seven American captives who remain behind in Lebanon.

When the Reagan administration began negotiating for the release of the TWA captives, Secretary of State George Shultz insisted "on the return of our hostages, all 46 of them, immediately, unharmed and unconditionally." President Reagan, moreover, promised the families of the missing seven that no effort would be spared to secure their release.

Then it became increasingly apparent that they would not be included in the release of the airline passengers and crew. Nevertheless, the White House assured that it would try to persuade Syrian President Hafez Assad to intercede on the seven's behalf. We assume that the administration is currently engaged in back-channel negotiations in order to free these men, two of whom have been held hostage for more than a year.

Meanwhile, their families are fighting to keep the memory of the Lebanon 7 alive by contacting politicians and the press. The relatives' cause received a boost recently when Republican Congressman Robert Dornan of California and George O'Brien of Illinois, promised to bring up the subject of the seven hostages each day on the House floor.

We hope this constant reminder will spur the State Department to redouble its efforts to liberate these Americans, who voluntarily placed themselves at risk in Lebanon. Perhaps the haunting roll call will also prod the media to pursue the story of the missing seven so they remain a part of the nation's consciousness until their eventual release.

Take me out to the ballgame

To hear team owners tell it, President Reagan's tax plan could mean that sports-crazy Americans will soon face an acute shortage of athletic events. William Giles, president of the Philadelphia Phillies, reflects the prevailing wisdom when he predicts "catastrophic" effects.

The threat lies in the administration's proposal to end the tax deduction for business entertainment. A lot of companies spend good money to take clients to baseball or hockey games, writing the tickets off as a cost of business. Most of the professional leagues have grown dependent on these ticket sales; they provide 60 percent of hockey's gate receipts, 51 percent of basketball's and 46 percent of baseball's.

This is the classic example of a deduction that finances high living for the well-off at the expense of the average taxpayer. If you want to see a professional baseball game, you pay the full price. But if a corporate vice president wants to take a couple of business friends over to the local ballpark for a pleasant afternoon away from the office, his company pays only part of the cost, with Uncle Sam effectively paying the rest. The entertainment deduction also helps to support such essential business costs as country club memberships and theater outings.

The rationale for the deduction is that this kind of entertainment is an indispensable way of doing business. But capitalists who want to dicker can find a more conducive atmosphere than a hockey arena filled with screaming fans. For most of the people who get to do this kind of thing, the game represents personal pleasure, not business.

The rules on entertainment expenses illustrate their remoteness from actual work. As the Treasury Department explains, outings qualify for the deduction "if they are directly preceded or followed by a substantial or bona fide business discussion. A business discussion may be considered substantial and bona fide even if it consumes less time than the associated entertainment and does not occur on the same day as the entertainment activity."

The rules are not only generous but absurdly unenforceable. If someone takes you to a World Series game or a Bruce Springsteen concert and you somehow never get around to talking business, you're not likely to repay him by tipping off the IRS.

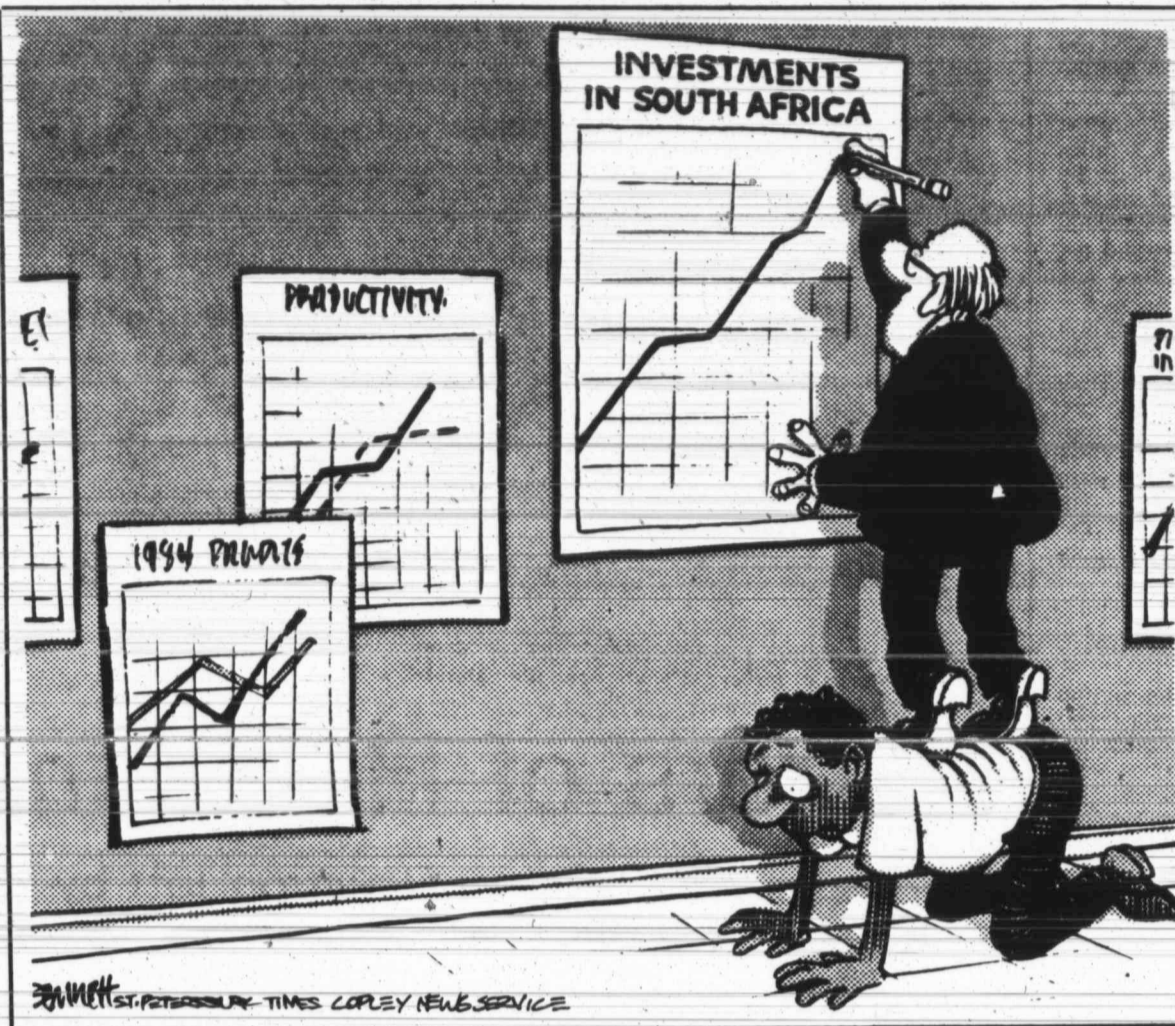

Of course, some legitimate business expenses, like office furnishings and company cars, commonly pay partly for personal consumption. But the impossibility of measuring and taxing that portion of the cost is no reason to give entertainment a pass. Here, the business value is incidental at best.

The real reason for entertainment deductions is that they let the company compensate employees tax-free. If you get an extra $100 in salary, it's taxed as income. If you get $100 worth of hockey tickets, to be used with a client, it's not.

One corporate spokesman interviewed by U.S. News and World Report admits that entertainment expenses may involve some personal consumption, but says "it's hard to determine precisely the personal pleasure element, if any, and I don't think the tax laws should try." Exactly right. The current rules do try. Reagan's plan simply treats them all as personal consumption, thus circumventing that unanswerable question.

Contrary to the warning of club owners, ending this deduction will most likely mean lower ticket prices, not higher ones. The owners say that with lower demand for tickets, they'll have to charge fans more to keep profits up. So why is it that when the demand for oil or wheat or pet rocks declines, their suppliers have to settle for lower prices? If teams could increase their profits with higher prices, they would have raised them already.

Audit report uncovers graft, hidden VIP cabins in parks

WASHINGTON — Many of the dollars that campers paid in the last few years to pitch their tents in national forests were pocketed by Forest Service employees or spent to gussy up luxurious cabins for the use of agency officials and other VIPs, according to inspector general's reports.

The inspector general's auditors followed a trail of theft, fraud and extravagance through 12 national forests from Florida to Alaska. They blamed the abuses on lax accounting procedures.

The inspector general's reports were obtained by our reporter Stewart Harris. Here are the highlights of the auditors' investigations:

- A clerk in Marion-Sumter National Forest in North Carolina stole $1,128 in cash that hikers paid for trail maps. The clerk also ripped up checks worth $759,117, which weren't missed until a timber buyer asked why his checks hadn't been cashed. The clerk was eventually convicted for theft, but officials still don't know why the checks were torn up.

- The auditors turned up $100,000 worth of fraudulent payments in two Oregon national forests, including the case of two purchasing agents at Willamette National Forest near Eugene who went "on a shopping expedition" with government purchase orders. The two were convicted after they spent $2,770 on lawnmowers for their own use.

- At several forests, the auditors found cases of double billing by suppliers.
- A favorite hideaway for VIPs is the Sweetwater cabin in Ocala National Forest near Silver Springs, Fla. Top forestry officials, a former Secretary of Agriculture and members of Congress are among the insiders who used the plush retreat, with its private swimming hole, cedar decks and canoe access to Lake George — all for $12 a day. In three years, the Forest Service took in only $8,824 in rent for the cabin, while laying out $27,000 for improvements on it. Less favored campers subsidized the cabin and four others like it by paying $5 a night for a patch of ground to put a tent on.

- Another cabin the public isn't told about — Lake Meade Lodge in Nantahala National Forest, N.C. — has 3,000 square feet of living space, two bedrooms and chestnut paneling. It was appraised at $100,000 even before the Forest Service spent $31,000 on improvements.

- Even the IG's investigators had trouble finding the Koenigsberger cabin in George Washington National Forest, Va. Forestry officials had neglected to include the 1,500-square-foot cedar-and-stone cabin on their list of agency property, though they had spent $3,000 to spruce it up.

- Sloppy bookkeeping, poor security and lax inspections "permitted embezzlements and other irregularities to proliferate," the IG reported. For example, a cashier in the Willamette forest told the auditors she often borrowed from the funds at her disposal, and knew when to repay it — because officials always gave advance notice of an inspection.

UNDER THE DOME: In the Old South, gentlemen would never refer to a woman's legs, much less what she put on them. But the New South's most rock-ribbed conservative, Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., whose state manufactures more than half the hosiery made in the United States, thought nothing of calling the Senate's attention to National Hosiery Week, Aug. 11-17. The industry is suffering from competitive imports and "deserves the support of all Americans at this difficult time," Helms said.

Investors gobbling up media companies

By ROBERT M. ANDREWS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Investor sharks are thrashing in the once-placid waters of the big city news media, hunting for companies whose big, steady profits make them tempting bait for mergers.

The feeding frenzy prompted Allen H. Neuharth, chairman of Gannett Co. Inc., to complain recently about a "media merger mania" fanned by speculation from Wall Street traders and corporate raiders looking for a quick kill.

Fred W. Friendly, former president of CBS News and professor emeritus at Columbia University, said darkly that "the business of takeovers of major news media organizations is one that ought to keep all of us up at night."

Many investment analysts, however, see nothing more sinister at work than private enterprise, and discount any serious threat to freedom of the press. Some journalists, however, expressed concern over the growing concentration of newspaper ownership in fewer and fewer hands.

The hostile takeover bid last week for the parent company of The Detroit News is the latest in a multibillion-dollar series of proposed media mergers and acquisitions this year. The others include:

- The bid by Ted Turner, the Atlanta cable television and sports entrepreneur, to acquire CBS Inc. in a complex deal involving a cashless swap of securities for CBS stock. By week's end, CBS had won a crucial court decision that killed the takeover attempt, but Turner vowed a proxy fight next spring to gain control of the network giant.
- ABC Inc., the broadcast network, publishing and entertainment conglomerate, and Capital Cities Communications, which owns several major newspapers as well as broadcast stations and cable TV systems, announced March 18 they had agreed to merge.

/// The business of takeovers of major news media organizations is one that ought to keep all of us up at night.

Fred W. Friendly, former president of CBS News and professor emeritus at Columbia University. //

The $3.5 billion deal is expected to be completed by early 1986, pending approval by the Federal Communications Commission.

- Effective July 1, Gannett acquired the Des Moines Register & Tribune Co. and other newspaper properties for $261 million. Also this year, it bought Family Weekly, the newspaper supplement, and the Triangle Sign billboard company. Gannett now owns USA Today and 85 other daily newspapers, 38 non-daily newspapers, six television and 14 radio stations, the largest outdoor advertising company in North America and numerous other communications interests.

- Australian publisher Rupert Murdoch, who owns newspapers on three continents, applied to become a U.S. citizen to satisfy legal requirements to buy the seven TV stations owned by Metromedia Inc. for $2 billion and then sell one Boston station to the Hearst Corp. To carry out the deal, Murdoch plans to sell the Chicago Sun-Times and the New York Post.

- The Tribune Co. said in May that it had agreed to buy KTLA-TV in Los Angeles for $510 million in cash, making it the biggest deal for a single broadcast station, surpassing the record $450 million that Hearst agreed to pay a week earlier for WCBV-TV in Boston. The

Today's highlight in history:
Forty years ago — at 8:15 a.m. local time, Aug. 6, 1945 — an American B-29 Superfortress, the "Enola Gay," dropped an atomic bomb on Hiroshima, Japan. The resulting fireball killed an estimated 80,000 people outright, not including those who died later from radiation poisoning.

On this date:
In 1806, the Holy Roman Empire went out of existence as Emperor Francis II abdicated.

In 1825, Bolivia declared its independence from Peru.

In 1890, the electric chair was first used, at a prison in Auburn, N.Y. The execution of convicted murderer William Kemmler raised a storm of controversy over whether use of the chair was humane.

In 1914, Austria-Hungary declared war against Russia, and Serbia declared war against Germany.

In 1926, Warner Brothers premiered its Vitaphone sound-on-disk movie system at a gala showing in New York. A short film introducing the process was shown along with a feature film, "Don Juan."

In 1926, Gertrude Ederle of New York became the first American woman to swim the English channel, in some 14½ hours.

In 1965, President Lyndon B. Johnson signed into law the Voting Rights Act.

In 1978, Pope Paul VI died of a heart attack at the age of 80.

Ten years ago: The United Nations Security Council refused to consider South Korea's application for membership to the UN.

Five years ago: In a speech to the National Urban League in New York, President Jimmy Carter denounced Republican tax proposals as "sugar-coated poison."

One year ago: Carl Lewis won the second of his four gold medals at the Los Angeles Olympic Games by leaping 28 feet, ¼ inch in the long jump.

Today's birthdays: Comedian Lucille Ball is 74. Actor Robert Mitchum is 68. Entrepreneur Sir Freddie Laker is 63. Pop artist Andy Warhol is 58. Actor Peter Bonerz is 47. Actress Soleil Moon Frye is 9.

Explaining Kawasaki's disease

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Could you please explain an illness two children from our school were diagnosed as having? It's called Kawasaki disease. I had never heard of it. The boys' feet and hands peeled and their fever went up. Is it contagious? Is it dangerous? — Mrs. J.C.J.

This illness is more common in Japan than in the U.S. and Canada, but has been reported here in recent years. I can't give you all the answers, because they're not known.

The picture of the disease was first painted by Dr. Kawasaki among Japanese children in the mid-1960s. It is for the most part a children's illness, but we don't know if it is contagious. Nor do we know the cause; the usual ones have been investigated — environmental and infectious agents — with little reward.

Typically, the youngster develops a fever and redness of the eyes. Then the lips, mouth and throat become red, and lymph nodes in the neck enlarge. The tongue takes on a strawberry appearance and the palms and soles also redden in time. Some develop a body rash with it.

Most children make a complete recovery from the syndrome. We don't know why it happens but in some there is an accompanying weakening of heart arteries, the one potentially serious aspect of the illness. But even when that does happen it is unusual for it to become a permanent problem. For now you can put Kawasaki's disease in the Medical Mysteries category.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Just a note to comment on a recent observation by you on reports of women losing fat from the thigh area when breastfeeding. I, too, am a nursing mother and have nursed all three of my children. It is true. The breastfeeding does seem to take inches off the fatty area of the thighs. I just wanted to let you know that I have noticed this perhaps little-reported benefit of nursing. I always had too much fat on my thighs. — C.N.

In fact, C.N., you were not the only one to write. I got several letters from other nursing mothers reporting the same phenomenon.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Is it possible to spread athlete's feet fungus from the foot to the hands? — F.M.

Yes, and the dominant hand (the one used in itching) is usually the one affected.

Headaches — you can beat them! Write to Dr. Donohue, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, IL 60611, for a copy of his booklet, "How to Tame Headaches." Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and $1.00.

Dear Abby

Too close for comfort

DEAR ABBY: My mother and I have a difference of opinion over the following matter: I am a 16-year-old boy and I am well respected by my relatives, teachers and friends. I do not have the problems that many teenagers have (alcohol, drugs, sex, etc.). My girlfriend is also 16 and she is a respectable young lady.

Most of our dates consist of staying home and watching movies or TV. On occasion my girlfriend and I "snuggle up" under a blanket on the couch. Between my little brother and my mother, we are usually never alone for more than 30 minutes.

My mother feels that it is improper for us to lie on the couch together because it creates temptations. I understand what she means, but I think she's being a little old-fashioned. What could possibly happen in my house that couldn't happen in a car?

My mother and I have decided that what you say goes.

THE SNUGLER

DEAR SNUGLER: Snuggling under a blanket while lying on a couch is Step One, which usually leads to Step Two and so on in the case of two normal, healthy people of the opposite sex. I am sure you and your girlfriend are both "respectable," but you would be wise to minimize the temptation.

I vote with your mother. You asked: "What could happen in my house that couldn't happen in a car?" Nothing. That's what worries your mother.

DEAR ABBY: This is for Peggy, who wanted to know how she came to be called Peggy when her name is really Margaret.

The British are great ones for rhyming names, as in Georgia Porgy. Thus William became Wil or Willy, or Bill or Billy. Robert is called Robby, or the rhyming Bobby or Bob. Edward became Ed or Eddie or Ted or Teddy. Richard became Rich or Rick and finally Dick. (Are you getting the hang of it?)

Margaret became Maggie, Meggy, and then the rhyming Peggy.

How do I know all this? Because when I was born, my parents named me Peggy after the Irish song, "Peg O' My Heart." Two weeks later I was baptized Margaret because according to the Catholic Church, all children have to be named for saints. There was no Saint Peggy, but there was a Saint Margaret, so everybody calls me Peggy, but I am...

LEGALLY MARGARET

DEAR MARGARET: Sounds logical to me. But many readers wrote to tell me the Gaelic name for Margaret is "Mairghread" or "Peigi," whence came "Peggy."

DEAR ABBY: Regarding the woman juror whose husband was angry because she refused to discuss the details of the trial while it was going on: The wife said she was sworn to secrecy and the husband said, "If you really loved me you would trust me enough to tell me everything."

Abby, it's not a matter of the juror "telling secrets." Except for some juvenile cases, and some cases involving criminal sexual conduct, nearly all trials are open to the public, so the husband could attend the trial himself if he wanted to.

A juror is instructed not to discuss the case — even with fellow jurors — during the course of the trial for the following reason: First, one side presents its entire case, then the other side does likewise. If a juror were to discuss the case before hearing all the evidence from both sides, he or she might reach a premature and unfair conclusion.

After the verdict has been reached, a juror may discuss the case with anyone he or she chooses. But not until.

Crash of Flight 191

Crew gave no clue to malfunction

GRAPEVINE (AP) — The crew of Delta Air Lines Flight 191 gave no indication anything was wrong, and by the time a cockpit voice recorder picked up the tower's order to go around, it also took in the "crackling, grinding" sound of a jumbo jet disintegrating, an investigator said.

Patrick Bursley, a member of the National Transportation Safety Board, said the sounds of destruction followed the electronic voice of an automatic ground proximity warning device that told the pilot three times to "Pull up!"

But he said Monday that the sound of the L-1011 Tristar coming apart were on the voice recorder before a frantic radio signal "Delta, go around!" from an aircraft controller in the tower at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport.

The controller's order was fruitless, Bursley said Monday, because the plane already had bounced twice, hitting a hillside and a highway. The plane crashed Friday, killing 132 people on board and a man on the ground.

Until the crash, the cockpit voice recorder tape contained a routine conversation between the pilot and copilot, Bursley said. "They were talking about the fact they were in rain and what they were having to do to deal with the flight — but there is no indication of apprehension."

The tape then picked up the voice of the ground proximity warning, which Bursley likened to buzzers on cars that tell when a door is ajar.

Investigators also confirmed that a substantial increase in power just before the crash was the result of crew initiative, rather than a response to the tower's go-around order.

National Transportation Safety Board member Patrick Bursley displays a piece of jet engine cowling from Delta flight 191, recovered from the wreckage.

BUSINESS & INDUSTRY REVIEW

Jack and Mattie's Cafe gives its customers plenty to eat

Come and see what Jack and Mattie Taylor have done to their business, Jack and Mattie's Cafe, located at 901 W. 3rd across from Chuck's Surplus. The Taylors have completely remodeled the dining room and are in the process of remodeling the kitchen.

Jack and Mattie's is known around town for its good old-fashioned cooking. The chefs use no fillers, frozen entrees, or pre-prepared foods. They cook everything to order.

Among the customers' favorites are potato soup, vegetable soup, hamburger steak, chicken fried steak, chicken strips and beef liver. The restaurant is known, too, for its homemade buttermilk biscuits and cinnamon rolls. "Everybody gets their own loaf of bread with lunch or ala carte," Mattie says. In the future, the cafe plans to offer curly-Q French fries.

The daily luncheon plate has the highest price on the menu at $3.95. It includes soup or salad, homemade bread, potatoes and two vegetables, a choice of at least seven entrees, drink and dessert.

Why do customers return to Jack and Mattie's? Customers give reasons as the food is homecooked, cooked to order and not prepared ahead of time, and customers get plenty to eat. Senior citizens receive a 10 percent discount. Children also enjoy visiting the cafe because a supply of coloring books and crayons keep them happy while they wait for their meal.

Jack and Mattie Taylor both began working in cafes when they were young teens and grew up in the business. They worked at separate places until they opened the Permian Snack Bar in the Permian Building several years ago. They opened Jack and Mattie's almost three years ago. The Taylors have been in business together about 12 years.

Jack and Mattie's is open for breakfast and lunch, from 6 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday through Friday and until 2 p.m. Saturday. They also prepare orders to go.

Big Spring Employment Agency is matchmaker for applicants, jobs

Success in finding a job or in finding the right person to fill a position is better assured by consulting a professional employment service such as Big Spring Employment Agency, located with Home Real Estate at 2600 Gregg.

Finding the right person for the right job is the duty of Ruby Taroni, experienced personnel counselor at Big Spring Employment. Mrs. Taroni joined the firm in 1961 and has 23 years of experience in the local market. She became the agency's owner last January.

Throughout the years, Mrs. Taroni has developed many contacts at Big Spring business firms and has her finger on current openings in temporary, part-time and full-time positions of all kinds. Her knowledge of local companies is of great help in placing applicants — bringing together qualified applicants with compatible companies.

Each employer has the right to demand the person best qualified for the job, considering the requirements of the work, the salary to be offered and the availability of applicants. With this in mind Mrs. Taroni carefully evaluates each applicant before he or she is sent for an interview.

She spends many hours screening job applicants so employers do not waste time interviewing persons not qualified for the job opening. The agency refers only those who measure up to the job's requirements. Thus, fewer rejections plague the employer or the applicant. The employer sees fewer people and fewer rejections make for better public relations. There also is a smaller personnel turnover, and the efficiency of employees tend to rise.

Many highly-qualified job applicants prefer to use the services of a private employment agency, thus protecting their own identity. All services at Big Spring Employment are handled on a confidential basis.

Big Spring Employment carries an extensive testing program in the area of office skills, exposing applicants to personnel tests in business and industrial situations.

From the minimum-wage clerk to the highly-paid executive, job applicants come to Big Spring Employment because they know private agencies are specialists in job-hunting and can, because of experience and contacts, place them in desirable jobs sooner than they could locate jobs themselves.

A quiet 3,000

Sunday afternoon Rod Carew etched his way deeper into professional baseball's record books by collecting his 3,000th career hit.

He joins an elite group of 16, led by Ty Cobb and the oncoming champ, Pete Rose.

It was only fitting that the California Angels first baseman's momentous hit came in Anaheim against the only other team Carew has played with in his 19 years; the Minnesota Twins. It was a grand salute when the game was stopped for five minutes as the crowd of 40,000 roared its approval.

It was even better that two of Carew's old teammates, Harmon Killebrew and Tony Olivas, were on hand for the memorable day.

The congratulatory phone calls and telegrams swarmed the 39-year-old Carew. Rightly so, because the man's baseball prowess has been overlooked during a spectacular career. He'll go down as having one of the quietest 3,000-hit careers ever.

How can I say that he's been overlooked? Well, for one thing the man has a .338 lifetime batting average and won seven American League Batting Titles, yet he has been named Most Valuable Player of the league only once. Only Ty Cobb of the Detroit Tigers (12) and Hornus Wagner of the Pittsburgh Pirates (8) won more batting titles. And they won more than one MVP award.

Carew won three consecutive batting titles, including six in an eight year stretch. He was finally voted as the MVP after his sixth title. He sure had a hard time convincing those sportswriters he was worthy of the award.

Maybe it was because Carew is considered a punch-and-judy hitter. Unlike Atlanta's Dale Murphy, who's won two consecutive MVP awards for hitting 35 homers and driving in 100 runs each season.

The Dominican Republic native came into the league in 1967 and proved right off the bat he was a player. Playing second base for the Twins he hit .292 and was named the American League Rookie of the Year.

I first became aware of Carew in 1969 when this lefthand-hitter, with the weird open batting stance, led the league in hitting with a .332 average. I noticed how well he went with the pitch, the grace in which he fielded the ball and his speed on the base paths.

In fact, he was one of the last of the daring base runners who stole home. Since my early boyhood days, I've always kept up with Carew; and always wondered, when is he going to get the recognition he deserves?

From '72-'78, Carew was at his best. He won batting titles in '72 (.318), '73 (.350); '74 (.364), '75 (.359), '77 (.388) and '78 (.333). I'll never forget the '77 baseball season for two seasons, one, because I graduated from high school and two, because of Carew's savage charge at being the first man since Ted Williams to bat .400.

That season was vintage Carew. To go along with his batting average was 239 hits, 38 doubles, 16 triples, 14 homers, 100 RBI's and 25 stolen bases. The sportswriters had to give him the MVP award or run the risk of looking like complete idiots.

After the '78 season, in which he won his last batting crown, the Twins traded their top hitter to the California Angels. It took two pitchers, a catcher and an outfielder to lure Carew away from owner Calvin Griffin's team. At California, Carew has been consistent, if not spectacular. A .319 batting average for the West Coast team is nothing shabby. Some of Carew's power and speed is gone, but the old vet still knows how to handle a bat. And he doesn't have to use the old legs as much at first base.

Well Rod, you got hit number 3,000 and the whole baseball world finally stopped and took time to acknowledge your feat.

Being the ballplayer and person he is, Carew took it all in stride. "To be mentioned with Ty Cobb, Roger Hornsby, Roberto Clemente and Pete Rose is a great honor," said Carew after collecting the hit.

I'm sure it's just as big of an honor for Cobb, Hornsby, Clemente and Rose to be mentioned with Rod Carew.

Baseball players go on strike

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball went to the very last hours today in an effort to avoid its second strike in four years, with the players' union chief talking as if a walkout was all but certain and the owners' main bargainer agreeing that the outlook was grim.

At the urging of Commissioner Peter Ueberroth, negotiators for players and owners held one last meeting — a meeting that both sides initially said was unlikely to produce any new proposals to break the deadlock involving salary arbitration. Arthur Shack, the union's general counsel, described the talks as "very informal" as they began about 7:45 a.m. CDT.

But three hours later and less than eight hours before the evening's first games, they were still talking, and one player representative said he had been told that the meeting had developed into a "serious negotiating session."

The player rep, who was not directly involved in the talks and spoke on the condition that he not be identified, stressed that bargainers "still have a long way to go" to reach a settlement.

It was also learned that at least three teams had been told by the union to be at the ballparks by mid-afternoon Eastern time today to await further instructions.

Hours before the session started in an undisclosed location, Don Fehr, acting executive director of the players' union, said a walkout that would bring an abrupt halt to the season two months before its scheduled end was all but formal.

"There's a strike," Fehr said as Monday night's final games wound down. "The strike is on as of the end of games tonight (Monday)."

"As a technical matter, the strike does not begin until the starting time of games today. As a practical matter, if we don't have an agreement, we've told the players that they should just be wherever they want to be and do whatever they want to do. This is the way it has to be."

Asked what set today's meeting apart from others in the 8½-month-old negotiations, Fehr replied: "It's being held on Aug. 6 and we're walking into a strike. Maybe that's the difference."

And Lee MacPhail, chief bargainer for the owners, conceded that one more meeting was unlikely to avoid a walkout.

"I can't say that I'm optimistic at this point," MacPhail said.

While negotiators gave it another try, ballplayers waited to see if their work would continue.

"I'll get up and listen to the news and see what happens," said Scott McGregor, the Baltimore Orioles' player representative. McGregor, scheduled to pitch tonight against the Blue Jays, had flown to Toronto early Monday.

The formal strike deadline, difficult to set in a business without work shifts or production lines, was the start of tonight's games — a full 13-game slate, the first to begin at 7:35 p.m. EDT.

Yet despite that looming deadline, no formal bargaining took place Monday. And neither side appeared to move with a sense of urgency, both remaining inside their respective offices that are just a five-minute walk apart.

Astros prevail over Giants, 7-5

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Astros pitcher Bob Knepper managed to hurl seven strong innings against the San Francisco Giants despite a busy day as player representative that left him little time to practice.

The Astros, led by Knepper and rookie first baseman Glenn Davis, defeated the Giants 7-5 Monday for their fourth consecutive victory.

Davis drove in three runs with two singles. Knepper, who evened the season record at 9-9, allowed two runs on nine hits.

After the Giants had grabbed a 1-0 lead on Chris Brown's 12th home run of the year in the second inning, the Astros scored three runs in the fourth off Giants starter and loser Atlee Hammaker, 3-10.

Davis also singled in Jerry Mumphrey who had doubled in the sixth inning in a ddition to Bass' RBI single scoring Bill Doran in the fifth giving the Astros a 5-1 lead going into the seventh inning.

Bob Brenly cut the Astros lead to 5-2 in the seventh with a one-out home run to left field off Knepper, his 14th of the year.

The Astros scored two more runs in the seventh off Giants relief pitcher Mark Davis. Tim Tolman, pinch hitting for Knepper, led off with a double to left, advanced to third on Doran's infield single and scored on a sacrifice fly by Garner.

After a wild pitch by Davis advanced Doran to second, Bass collected his second RBI of the game with a single to left for a 7-2 Astros lead.

In the Giants' ninth inning, Astros relief pitcher, Charlie Kerfeld gave up a two-out single to Jose Uribe, a walk to pinch hitter Ron Roenicke and a three-run home run to Joe Youngblood, his third of the year.

Dave Smith entered the game and recorded his 18th save of the year by getting Chili Davis to fly out to right field and preserve the 7-5 victory.
