Crash kills 524 Jet rams into Japan Alps

TOKYO (AP) — A Japan Air Lines 747 jumbo jet with 524 people aboard crashed on a domestic flight today in mountainous country after reporting that it had problems with a cabin door and was going to make an emergency landing.

Initial reports from authorities gave no sign of survivors in what could be history's worst single plane disaster. The worst previous one-plane crash was that of a Turkish DC-10 near Paris in 1974, in which 346 people perished.

Pilots of two other aircraft had reported seeing a plane afire in the air before the crash.

The Japan Self-Defense Force said one of its helicopters spotted wreckage on a mountainside in the Japan Alps in the central part of the country.

It said rescue teams had not yet reached the crash site, on the north side of 6,929-foot Mount Ogura, about 6 miles east of Saku City and 70 miles northwest of Tokyo.

However, at about 8:25 p.m., Isao Shimozaki, a Nagano prefectural police officer, said in a telephone interview that police, firefighters and Self Defense Force personnel were at or near the crash area.

Geoffrey Tudor, a Japan Air Lines spokesman, said the passenger manifest included 21 non-Japanese names, adding, "There are some Western names."

The JAL plane was on a flight from Tokyo's Haneda Airport to Osaka in one of Japan's busiest holiday travel seasons. The jetliner carried 509 passengers, including 12 infants, and a crew of 15, Tudor said.

Tudor said the pilot reported "trouble with a door" and U.S. officials at Yokota Air Base, an American base about 21 miles west of Tokyo, said the pilot asked and received permission to make an emergency landing.

However, the plane disappeared off radar screens near Saku, a city

Brian Zimmerman, 12, mayor of Crabb, awaits the results of the city's incorporation election as voters sign ballots behind him at the small gas station.

Kid's the boss

Mayor fights to keep town intact

CRABB (AP) — Mayor Brian Zimmerman can keep his job, but he lost a chance to make good on a campaign promise when voters rejected a plan designed to prevent larger cities from annexing their tiny town.

Zimmerman, 12, used his savings account to help pay for the election Saturday to decide whether the rural Fort Bend County community, should incorporate.

But voters rejected the plan in a 596-30 vote, handing a dismal defeat to the boy mayor who made incorporation part of his campaign pledge.

"It's back to the drawing board," Zimmerman said after hearing the final election results.

While Zimmerman seemed dejected over the turn of the ballots, the referendum ensures he can keep his job until the next mayoral election in November.

Incorporation would have stripped the youth of his mayoral duties because Texas law requires mayors of incorporated cities to be at least 18.

Zimmerman — who was elected when 23 of 30 voters chose him over two other candidates, ages 69 and 71 — said before the Saturday vote that he'll run for re-election if Crabb is not incorporated.

About 33 percent of the area's 1,911 registered voters turned out for Saturday's election.

Most of the opposing votes were cast by residents of the 1,000-home Tara subdivision.

"That's not surprising. I was expecting that," said Jay Foster, Tara Homeowners' Association president, after the election. "I'm surprised that 30 people voted for it."

Foster said he spoke to surrounding city governments and none had expressed an interest in annexing the Tara subdivision or Crabb.

"We are just a bedroom community, we have no industry," he said.

Tax values increase for Howard County

By SCOTT FITZGERALD
Staff Writer

County tax roll values increased for 1985, Howard County Commissioners learned today as they continue to prepare the 1985-86 fiscal budget.

The Howard County Tax Appraisal District office has listed the county's total property value at $1.584 billion, an increase from the 1984 figure of $1.537 billion, County Tax Assessor-Collector Dorothy Moore said during this morning's commissioners meeting.

Commissioner David Barr requested a breakdown from Moore of the property assessments. He was particularly interested in oil properties.

"What I want to know is that if the oil value goes down, shouldn't remaining property values decrease also?" he asked.

Barr said other property taxpayers such as farmers and ranchers were making up the difference in oil property devaluations.

"The oil companies are not paying their share of the taxes. This needs to be known," Barr said.

He also advised that the assessor's office should devise a formula to determine productivity for ranch lands.

"I don't want to cheat the oil companies one bit and I don't want them cheating us one bit. What's right is right," Barr said.

Barr praised the tax appraisal review board, which he said "has been standing up for us."

Moore told commissioners that the county's tax rate of 22 cents per $100 valuation was lower than last year's figure by 1.4 percent.

SWCID offers students 'head start' college plan

By LISA MUSSER
Staff Writer

SouthWest Collegiate Institute for the Deaf is giving about 40 students a "head start" in their college careers with a summer orientation program, Counselor Diane Linhart said.

The 2½-week program, which yields students one hour of college credit, is designed to give new students a chance to look at various majors offered by the school and learn what will be expected of them at SWCID, Linhart said.

The new students arrived on campus Sunday afternoon and the program kicked off at 6:30 p.m. that night with "get acquainted" games. Students from out-of-state and even foreign countries were present.

As part of the orientation, students will be in classes for three hours each morning. The classes will include basic instruction in the eight majors offered at SWCID and the two majors offered at Howard College for the students.

During these classes, the students will also receive extensive career testing to give them an idea of the field of study they want, Linhart said.

The career testing and class sessions, "help them (the students) in goal setting," Linhart said.

This is the second year for the summer orientation program. The school decided the program was beneficial after the success of last year's program. When school started last year, she said, the new students knew where their classes were, had a knowledge of Big Spring and had set goals regarding their course of study.

Students at the first session last night seemed excited about the year ahead of them at SWCID. Student Julio Diaz, 21, of Puerto Rico said, as he signed through an interpretor, that he is "hoping counselors and professors I work with here can help me" in deciding a major.

Diaz said he came to SWCID because the school has good interpreters, deaf instructors and the majors he was considering, which are drafting or computer science.

The students, like Diaz, will participate in activities from about 7:30 a.m. to 9:30 p.m. daily, as a member of a team. The students were divided Sunday night into four teams. Each team has a leader who will meet with students.

The end of the program coincides with the beginning of the fall semester. Linhart said that by having the program continue through until registration for the fall semester, the students would not have the added expense of making a trip home before fall classes begin.

Developer pays Settles' taxes

San Antonio developer Gil Cuadra today paid a year's delinquent property taxes on the Hotel Settles to County Tax Assessor-Collector Dorothy Moore's office.

The office this morning received a check for $8,172.

Cuadra had said Thursday he would pay one year's back taxes to the city, county, and college district by Friday.

A spokesman for Cuadra, however, called Friday afternoon and said Cuadra was writing the check but was in San Angelo and would not make it to Big Spring before the tax office closed at 5 p.m.

Under Cuadra's voluntary payment schedule, he was to pay the taxes in July. However, he said Thursday he was unable to pay then because of a temporary cash-flow problem.

According to his spokesman, Cuadra's family company, MPG Management Inc. of San Antonio, bought two apartment complexes in July — one in Angleton and one elsewhere — and that caused a temporary cash-flow problem.

His spokesman said Cuadra would pay one year's back property taxes to the Big Spring Independent School District office in September.

Cuadra has been putting funds into an escrow account to make payments on the delinquent taxes, which he inherited when he bought the building in October 1984. The spokesman said Cuadra should pay off one year's taxes to either the school district or the county tax offices every two months.

Cuadra plans on completing renovations for the first three floors and opening restaurants, convention facilities and stores there by August 1986.

He had originally planned for the hotel to open this month, but said he has changed some of his ideas for the building.

"Gil's a real optimistic person," said his architect, Joel Mills of San Antonio, when discussing the date Cuadra originally set to open the hotel.

Cuadra has said he will open the first in a chain of smokehouses by September in the building across the street from Alberto's Crystal Cafe on Second Street.

The Buffalo Soldier

Men swap tales of the Old West at old-timers' reunion

HOUSTON (AP) — The country that had called them slaves was now calling them soldiers.

In 1866 the men of the 9th and 10th cavalries, the Buffalo Soldiers, began protecting the nation that had just given them their freedom.

They guarded the mail routes and the stagecoach lines and established forts on the Western frontier. They patrolled the Mexican border and protected the settlers from Indians on the warpath and outlaw bands.

They blazed the trails of the Old West with their guns.

But in 1944 the guns were put away. The units, which had been combined into the 2nd Cavalry Division were disbanded, and the old soldiers faded away.

Recently the remaining Buffalo Soldiers got together in Houston to swap war stories and keep alive a page in U.S. history.

Bill Prince, 71, coordinating the 119th reunion of the 9th and 10th Cavalry Buffalo Soldiers' Association, says about 360 veterans of the famed units survive, scattered all over the country.

One of those who recalled the old days was Dr. Wilbert Wilson, 64, of Tulsa, Okla., who patrolled the Mexican border from 1941-43 as a member of the 10th Cavalry. Wilson's training as a medic helped launch his career as a physician.

Prince, a veteran of the 10th Cavalry, was only 14 when he entered the service in 1928. "I thought experience would teach me more than school, so I dropped out and signed up," he says, adding that his mother had to give her permission because of his youth. And Prince acknowledges, he received quite an education.

Stationed at Fort Huachuca, Ariz., the young Prince often had difficulty performing his duties as a garrison soldier. He worked alongside his older counterparts unloading bales of hay for the horses, policing the area, building roads and pulling guard duty.

He had to be able to equip his horse with a full pack saddle when they went out on maneuvers. Complete with bedroll, rain gear, feed for his horse, rations, a rifle and a saber, the 100-pound pack almost equalled the weight of the

Dr. Wilbert Wilson, 64, still owns the hat he wore as a medic when he was a Buffalo Soldier. Wilson served in the 10th Cavalry in the early 1940s, enlisting at age 14 in 1928.

114-pound private. "I was a kid venturing out to do a man's job," Prince recalls. "So many nights I cried wishing I was back home. But I grew to like it. It made a man out of me."

John Galvan liked it, too. Also in the 10th Cavalry, Galvan was satisfied with the less-than-glamorous peacetime role of a soldier.

He pulled his share of guard duty, kitchen duty and barracks policing; the details designed to keep a military post ready, never bothered him.

But he, like many others, became disillusioned when the soldiers in the units that had fought Geronimo and charged up San Juan Hill were assigned to perform menial tasks for the officers.

Galvan took care of the polo ponies for the cadets at West Point. Although Prince says he had some military duties to perform, he was eventually assigned to the living quarters detail, which involved cleaning officers' homes.

Instead of being full-time soldiers, they were part-time maids, he says.

So in 1932 Prince got out of the Army and stayed out until the beginning of World War II, during which he served in the 3rd Army.

But Prince has good memories of his days as a Buffalo Soldier and is particularly proud of his unit's contribution to the settling of the Old West.

Given the name Buffalo Soldiers by the Indians they fought, it is believed the name came from the Indians' comparison of the soldiers' hair to the mane of the much-revered buffalo.

The units patrolled from Montana to Arizona, as well as New Mexico and Texas. From their post at Fort Davis, Texas, one of the first military posts in the West open to black soldiers, the Buffalo Soldiers fought bravely against the Apaches and Comanches.

They served on the frontier of West Texas from 1867 to 1885 and were instrumental in the campaign that finally saw the surrender of the Apache chief Geronimo. They also warred against Apaches led by Victorio, and chased him into Mexico, where he later was killed.

Truck, attic blazes doused

Firefighters this weekend put out a pickup truck fire, an attic fire in a house and two grass fires, including one caused when an electrical line was knocked down.

Electrical wiring sparked and started a fire Sunday morning in an attic at 405 Sunset, causing an estimated $1,000 damage, according to department reports.

Firemen arrived at the house at 8:06 a.m. and used 15 gallons of water to douse the fire after cutting a small hole in the ceiling. The house is owned by Nancy Grantham.

Firemen late Saturday night also doused a fire in a 1962 Ford pickup truck owned by Andrew Price, reports state.

Firemen arrived at 10:13 p.m. at 206 N. Benton, where the truck was parked, to find the vehicle totally engulfed in flames. The pickup had a 55-gallon drum and three small five-gallon gas cans of diesel that ignited.

Firemen later returned at 1:17 a.m. Sunday to extinguish a fire in the front seat, which had reignited and was burning slowly.

The cause of the fire has not been determined, but damage to the destroyed truck was estimated at $1,000.

Firemen early Saturday morning also doused a grass fire in the rear of 417 Edwards. The fire was caused when a pole was knocked down, causing the guideline to the electrical line to be down in the street and alley.

Firemen arrived at the scene at 2:30 a.m. and used 5 gallons of water to extinguish the blaze.

Border Patrol officers from Big Spring arrested four men early Sunday morning near a construction site in the Big Spring area, said Captain Al Garcia of the U.S. Border Patrol.

Taxes

County Auditor Jackie Olson said the court could increase the proposed tax rate.

"If it exceeds 3 per cent, then a public hearing would be held. If it exceeds 8 per cent, taxpayers could request a rollback," Olson said.

In other court action this morning, commissioners unanimously approved County Attorney Tim Yeats' request for a county contract with the Texas Department of Human Resources for welfare fraud cases.

Yeats told commissioners that Howard County was the only West Texas county that did not have an agreement with the state's welfare office for reimbursement of court costs. He said the district and county prosecuting attorney's offices would receive $277 for guilty pleas and $600 if the case went to trial.

"If the state is going to hand us some money, I say take it," Yeats said.

Commissioners also unanimously approved a motion for the purchase of bottled water and an ice machine for the courthouse. In addition, they awarded a bid to install new shelving in the district clerk's office to Johnson Construction Co.

Crash

in Nagano prefecture (state). It crashed at about 6:54 p.m. (5:54 a.m. EDT).

The Japan Broadcasting Corp. said there was a thunderstorm in the area about the time of the crash, just before dark.

The crash site was in a remote area of mountains that is uninhabited and accessible only on foot but popular with hikers.

City councilmen to consider Auditorium roofing contract

Council members will consider a negotiated bid to repair the roof on the Municipal Auditorium at their meeting at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday.

The city's architectural consultants on the project, Parkhill, Smith and Cooper of Lubbock, have recommended that the council award a contract to Lydick Roofing of Lubbock for $51,364.

Council members twice have voted to reject bidding on the project because of what the architects termed "excessive" bids.

Director of Public Works Tom

Decell also is recommending that the council accept a bid from Western Water Proofing Co. Inc. for waterproofing walls and windows.

The council also will award bids for construction on a runway and lighting at the Big Spring Airport.

Council members also will consider applying for the state's Main Street Project, which works to revitalize downtown areas, and to designate a 40-acre tract of the city's land south of Willard Street as the site of a new sports complex.

Board studies Delta crash

WASHINGTON — The National Transportation Safety Board is still trying to determine why air traffic controllers did not relay a fresh weather forecast to the pilot of a Delta Air Lines plane that crashed in Dallas on Aug. 2.

The jumbo jet, carrying 163 people, crashed during a heavy thunderstorm, killing 132 passengers and one person on the ground.

Safety board member Patrick Bursley, who is heading the probe, said weather "is very much involved in the accident," but investigators still had not determined whether the phenomenon of wind shear was a factor in the crash. "We're certainly exploring it," he said.

"There is an indication of a weather forecast being delivered to the controllers some 10 minutes before the accident, and that was not passed along," said Bursley, who appeared Sunday on the CBS show, "Face the Nation."

Homes for greyhounds

GULFPORT, Fla. — From California to Massachusetts, from Minnesota to Florida, an organization of two dozen volunteers in 13 states is finding homes for hundreds of greyhounds that have run their last race.

The volunteers are breeders, animal lovers and adoptive owners committed to preventing the sleek, graceful racers from being destroyed.

Linnea McCaffery, for example, borrows a van on weekends for a 140-mile round trip to cart dogs from the Plainfield Greyhound Track to her Manchester, Conn., home.

Schroeder returns home

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Seeing the smile on William Schroeder's face as he visited with his grandchildren made the strain of the ups and downs since he became the world's second mechanical heart recipient "all worth it," his son said at a homecoming celebration.

Schroeder, 53, the longest-living recipient of a mechanical heart and the first to live outside the hospital, took the quarter-mile ride to the specially equipped apartment Sunday in his van, "The Heart & Spirit of Jasper," named for his Indiana hometown.

He visited with family members Sunday during the first day of his return to life outside Humana Hospital Audubon, where the device was implanted Nov. 25.

It's up to South Africa

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. — The Reagan administration says it is now up to South Africa to make a move away from apartheid, following a warning to the white-ruled government that President Reagan may be unable to hold off congressional sanctions.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said Sunday that National Security Adviser Robert C. McFarlane had laid out the "realities of the situation" in a meeting with South African Foreign Minister Pik Botha last week in Vienna.

Chemical leak

Plant emergency system fails; 135 hospitalized

INSTITUTE, W. Va. (AP) — An emergency system failed miserably in its first major test since it was put into place at a Union Carbide Corp. plant here after a chemical leak killed more than 2,000 people in India, local residents say.

Six plant employees and about 125 nearby residents went to hospitals Sunday with lung, eye, nose and throat irritations after a chemical used to make pesticide leaked. Thousands of people were asked to stay in their houses for several hours, until the chemical dissipated.

The chemical cloud spewed from a unit that uses methyl isocyanate, the substance that leaked last December in the Indian city of Bhopal. Plant spokesman Dick Henderson said the substance that leaked here, aldicarb oxime, is made from MIC, but the MIC is consumed in production.

Company officials said a cloud of aldicarb settled on nearby homes after leaking from the plant when a gasket on a storage tank failed.

Many people living near the plant said their homes already were engulfed in fumes when they first heard the plant's emergency siren. "Carbide's got to do something better than this," said Donna Willis, one of nearly 300 residents examined at an emergency clinic.

"We can't let them wait 10, 20 or 30 minutes before they let you know what's going on. We could have been dead," she said.

The company said it notified the county Office of Emergency Services of the incident within "approximately five minutes" of the leak.

Henderson said the Carbide plant sounded a warning siren as soon as the leak was detected at 9:35 a.m.

But emergency personnel in Charleston, about 12 miles away, were not told, according to Mayor Mike Roark.

"Each municipality is supposed to be notified," he said. "Our command center was not notified. Our public safety director heard it on the (police) scanner."

"If it had been something really bad, it would have been too late," said Vicky Terry, who said she awoke to find her home full of the stinging fumes. "People would have been dead in their beds," she said.

Reports of noxious fumes began spilling into radio stations about 9:45 a.m., said WCHS news director Mike Wilson. He said public notification was hampered because most radio and TV stations don't staff their news departments on Sunday mornings.

"Sunday morning is a very inconvenient time to have something like this," he said.

Emergency broadcasts beginning at 10:09 a.m. told Institute's 3,100 residents to remain indoors, close windows and shut off air conditioners.

An all-clear was broadcast shortly before noon.

Barbara Cyrus, who lives 500 yards from the plant, said the first thing she noticed was a strong odor. "I thought maybe it was the cat litter," she said. "But then I opened the door and it almost knocked me down."

A Carbide statement said "an immediate investigation will be made to establish the cause of the accident and the quantity of material released."

Aldicarb oxime is shipped from Institute to Union Carbide's plant in Woodbine, Ga., where it is used in making Temik.

'No place to hide'

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Amneh Khalifa has spent three years trekking around Lebanon with her eight children trying to avoid the fighting that has torn the country. But she has found no hiding place.

Her odyssey has taken her full circle. It started with the 1982 massacre of Moslems in Beirut's Chatilla refugee camp by right-wing Christians and then returned her to the same camp in May when it was attacked by Shiite Moslem forces.

She lost her husband and two sons in the 1982 massacre. Her shanty home was destroyed in the Shiite attack in May.

"I feel like a bird," she said in an interview. "As soon as it builds a nest someone comes and destroys it. But if God gives us another chance, I'll build another nest."

Mrs. Khalifa is 37. Her face is lined, her eyes have the patina of suffering, her hands flutter nervously when she speaks.

She is a Palestinian refugee and the Palestinians who had been entrenched in Lebanon now are targets for everyone — Israelis, Moslems, Christians, and even Syrians.

Mrs. Khalifa is known as Um Hussein, Arabic for "the mother of Hussein," the name of one of her two sons slain with their father the Chatilla massacre Sept. 16, 1982.

Man takes hostage

PARIS — An armed man reportedly demanding an airplane to fly to Algeria took at least one person hostage Monday at the Paris Mosque, then fired when police arrived, injuring a young girl, according to a mosque employee.

Police said the man entered the mosque in Paris' Latin Quarter at about 2:30 p.m. and reportedly demanded a plane to fly to Algeria.

The secretary at the mosque said the man, who carried a bag and appeared to be in his 30s, asked to speak with Omar, the receptionist.

"When Omar arrived, the man drew an arm from his bag. He fired when he saw the police arrive and asked us to help him leave," said the secretary, who identified herself only as Ghania. She fled the mosque by a side door.

The identity of the hostage was not immediately known.

Mourners kill soldier

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Mourners at the funeral of a prominent apartheid foe attacked a truck carrying soldiers of a black homeland, and one of the soldiers died in a hail of stones as he tried to run.

In a British Broadcasting Corp. radio interview Sunday, Winnie Mandela said her husband, jailed black leader Nelson Mandela, almost certainly would resume leadership of the outlawed African National Congress and press his fight to end apartheid if he were freed.

President P.W. Botha has offered Mandela and other ANC prisoners freedom if they renounced violence. Mandela refused, but on Saturday the foreign minister, R.F. Botha, said some members of the Cabinet think Mandela should be set free.

Athletic injuries declining, says study

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans are injuring themselves less often in many major sports and recreational activities, new government statistics show.

The number of bicycle-related injuries, for example, declined by nearly 17,000 between 1982 and 1984, according to figures collected from hospital emergency rooms across the nation.

Injuries associated with basketball, baseball and football were also down — although basketball edged into second place on the injury list, replacing baseball.

There was a sharp increase in accidents with mopeds and minibikes, the statistics showed.

Consumer Product Safety Commission Chairman Terrence M. Scanlon attributed the widespread decline in injuries to two major reasons — increased public awareness of hazards, and improvements to sports equipment by manufacturers.

Despite the injury decline, bicycling, which is widely popular among all age groups, retained its position as the most common source of sports or recreational injuries, resulting in an estimated 556,682 visits to hospital emergency rooms last year.

The nationwide estimates are based on information collected by the National Electronic Injury Surveillance System from a sample of hospitals.

Of mice, men and lab testing

The Food and Drug Administration is to be congratulated for introducing a measure of welcome flexibility into the workings of government.

This came about when the FDA ruled against a petition by the Ralph Nader-initiated Health Research Group in Washington. The group wanted the FDA to follow what is known as the Delaney Clause in regard to a food dye. The Delaney Clause requires the FDA to ban additives "found to induce cancer when ingested by man or animal."

That is well and good, but laboratory animals, such as rats, are subjected to massive overdoses of a substance to the extent that the dosages would exceed normal human lifetime consumption. Cancer in the rats resulting from such an application is hardly comparable to normal human usage of a substance.

That is the gist of the decision reached by FDA Commissioner Frank Young in denying the health group's petition. It makes sense. It is welcome. But Young's ruling might be overturned on appeal. Other commissioners may not show his common sense in interpreting the law. Congress should revise the Delaney Clause.

Vanity plates are for jerks

In the beginning, the automobile was a means of getting from one place to another quickly.

Sometime between then and now it acquired a second and equally important function: serving as a rolling advertisement for oversized egos.

For most people eager to inform you of some vitally interesting though unsolicited fact about themselves, bumper stickers suffice. There are stickers publicizing the owner's taste in beer, his loyalty in professional sports teams, his alma mater, his favorite radio station, his political leanings and — the overwhelming popular favorite — his sexual prowess as correlated to his occupation. You know, bricklayers do it ...

Some discriminating drivers are not satisfied with displaying a sticker that may promiscuously adorn thousands of other bumpers. They feel the same need to reach out and touch their fellow motorists, but they march to a different drummer. They need a message that expresses something unique to themselves. They need a symbol of their taste and affluence. They need a vanity license plate.

At least, that's how I interpret their motives. My own feeling is that you should get a vanity plate only if a) you are a jerk and b) you want everyone to know it. But there can't be many people who would pay $75 for that purpose, which is what it costs in Illinois. I assume people who go to the expense of getting a vanity plate do so in the belief that it will impress, amuse or titillate those who see it.

If you're one of those, I've got news for you: it won't. The world is divided into people with vanity plates and people without, and the latter group has no use for the former. Your efforts are wasted on us.

The sort of messages that proliferate do nothing to bridge the cultural gap. Unoriginality is the most common sin. If your name is Bob, you can't get that on your plate, because somebody else got it first. But you can get Bob on your plate, followed by the lowest available number — as in, say, Bob 423. Distinctive, huh?

Lewd and offensive messages are also much requested, but the Secretary of State's office vetoes any messages deemed to be in poor taste. Apparently, some people would like nothing better than to fork over good money for the privilege of tooling around town with the f-word on their license plate. Must be a great way to win friends and influence people.

Someone even once requested "Hitler." Too bad they didn't give it to him. After replacing a few windows and tires, he might have reconsidered.

Many other drivers feel the impulse to provide a reminder of the brand of car they're driving. Like "Vette" on a Corvette or "BMW" on — surprise! — a BMW. Like I said, originality is not the distinctive trait of this breed. Nor is an aversion to ostentation.

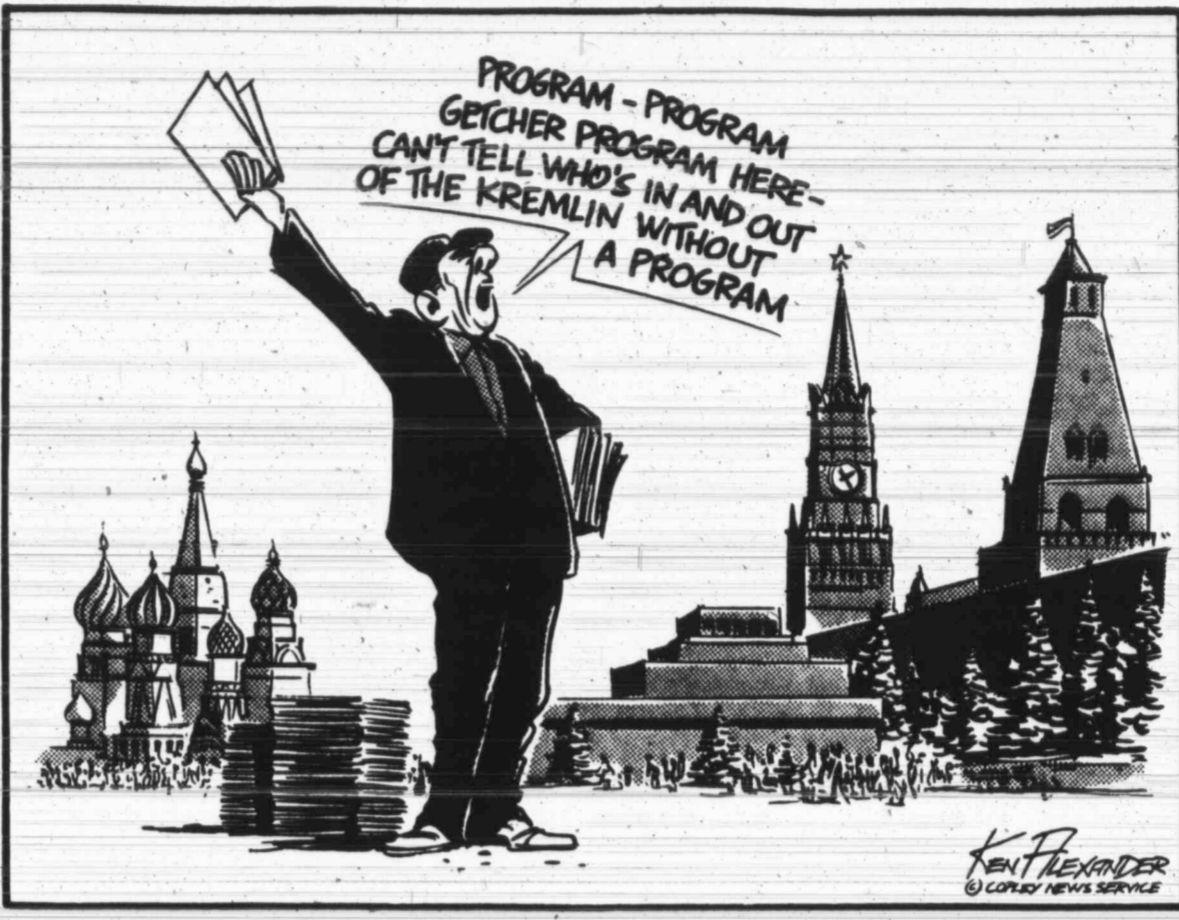

You'd think that one consolation in spending a sum greater than the median annual household income on a car would be that the peasants would know what it is without being told. If I were in charge of license plates, "Vette" would be given to the most ramshackle econobox in the state, and a Bronx cheer would be given to all Corvette owners.

Vanity plates are apparently most popular with the wealthy — if you doubt it, drive through a country club parking lot sometime. Their point has nothing to do with practical-utility. They are intended merely to remind the observer that the owner is wealthy enough to afford idiotic extravagances, and that the observer is not.

A lot of professional athletes also favor these plates, usually with their uniform number. These are the same bashful guys who complain that they can't appear in public without being pestered by fans. But they can't bear the idea that the insignificant mope in the next car might not realize he is in the presence of greatness.

The problem with vanity plates is that their only real message is "Look at me!" Maybe the state should give these people little mirrors instead. Then the owners would be sure that the people who really want to look at them will be able to.

Contract draws complaint

WASHINGTON — Behind-the-scenes scrambling for a relatively modest foreign-aid contract has already entangled two U.S. senators, a former ambassador and an inspector-general in a thicket of accusations — cronyism, improper influence, malfeasance — and the contract hasn't even been awarded yet.

Some of the charges were made anonymously, and have been neither disproved nor confirmed. One key participant refused to comment on the record. Our associate Vicki Warren has sorted out the confusing tangle. Here's what she learned:

The contract at stake is for a $5 million, five-year program modeled after the International Executive Development Project, which trained young Costa Rican and other foreign businessmen in the fine art of selling their products to American companies. The program would involve working with the young executives both in their countries and in the United States.

The project was thought up by the Washington, D.C., consulting firm of Keene, Monk and Associates, which sold the idea to the Agency for International Development in 1982. Keene, Monk was awarded a $1 million contract by AID to run the program for three years.

David Keene, a partner in the firm, is a close friend of Sen. Robert Kasten, R-Wis., chairman of the Appropriations subcommittee that funds AID.

But in late 1983, Keene, Monk was told by AID administrator Peter McPherson that future contracts for executive training would be put out for competitive bids. The following spring, AID evaluators studied the Keene, Monk project and concluded that "tangible results ... have been relatively limited to date" and "the cost per participant does appear to be higher than that of comparable programs."

Keene, Monk contacted then-Ambassador Curtin Winsor in Costa Rica, but he was far from encouraging. He wrote the firm that AID intended to award the contract for any extension of the development project to a non-profit group in Costa Rica, which would subcontract the work to be done in the United States. It looked as if Keene, Monk would be out in the cold.

It was about then, AID sources told us, that they were told by a staff aide on Kasten's subcommittee, that unless Keene, Monk "got something" in the way of a contract, money for other AID programs would be held up. Kasten has refused to comment on the record.

In July 1984, Keene, Monk officials told the AID inspector general they had been told by an anonymous caller that their firm had been "unfairly written out" of consideration for the $5 million extension of the development program. They also reported that the anonymous caller said that the AID chief in Costa Rica may have offered to cut an agency evaluator in on part of the project by subcontracting work to him.

The IG reported finding no hanky-panky. In fact, the evaluator had even recommended another Costa Rican group to handle the contract. But the IG questioned the ability of that firm to do the job.

Meanwhile, Winsor wrote to Kasten to complain about what he viewed as Keene, Monk's pressure tactics. Winsor told us he thought giving the contract to Keene, Monk would be "ripping off the taxpayers" because the Costa Rican group could do the work cheaper.

At about the same time, Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., also wrote a letter to AID, asking about Keene, Monk. He said he was interested only in the "substance of the program ... not in the selection of a contractor or the competitive bidding process."

Keene, Monk now says it wants the entire project put out for competitive bidding.

TODAY'S SECRET: Most federal agencies are quick to stamp "secret" on every piece of paperwork that could possibly be embarrassing if it leaked out. But one of the best-kept secrets in town is that often genuinely sensitive information is spread around with little thought for security.

Take the Energy Department's detailed, publicly available blueprints for a gaseous-diffusion plant at the highly sensitive Oak Ridge facility in Tennessee. We had an expert on terrorism examine the thick, slick plan; he concluded that, while technically nothing in the plans and diagrams violates the letter of the classification laws, the document as a whole would be extremely helpful to terrorists planning an attack on the facility.

A spokesman for Oak Ridge said the publication had been thoroughly reviewed, and had been deemed not necessary to classify, because all the information was available already from a variety of other sources. Our expert agreed, but insisted the compilation of the plans and information in one document would make the terrorists' job a lot easier.

FIGHTING BACK: With the CIA's help, the Turkish government is considering ways to combat Armenian terrorists, who have killed 40 Turkish diplomats in recent years. One option is a mobile commando squad for each embassy; another is "hit squads" that would seek out terrorists in their hideouts and kill them.

DILEMMA OF THE WEEK: Federal officials have refused to yank the parole of an ex-con indicted for extortion in Rhode Island. Why? They're afraid if the man returns to prison the state might then drop its case, and without the extortion conviction he could be set free as early as next year from his earlier sentence. "That has been our experience in the past," explained a parole commission official. So the ex-con is free on bail awaiting trial.

Column gets staff help

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: How do you prepare all the sermons and messages you give, since you are such a busy person? Do you personally do all your sermons as well as this daily column? — G.F.

DEAR G.F.: From time to time I am asked this question, so let me repeat what I have said on other occasions.

The writer of Ecclesiastes in the Old Testament once said, "There is nothing new under the sun" (Ecclesiastes 1:9). I have often thought of that as I have spoken or written, because I know what I say has been expressed many times before by other people.

Through the years, God has given me some wonderful people at various stages of my ministry to help with research for my sermons and writings. There have been times, however, when I have had no one to help, and I have almost broken physically under the strain of trying to do everything. Members of my team, conscious of my need for new and fresh material, are constantly handing me items they have gathered from the Scriptures, the press or other sources they feel would be helpful.

Other people also may help from time to time with comments or suggestions. But my greatest help through the years has been my wife, Ruth, who has merged her amazing capabilities into my ministry. She helps me regularly with this column, along with one of my staff members who does research and editorial work. Each column, however, represents my own answer.

I hope you and other Christians everywhere will pray that God will give us the wisdom we need as we seek to serve Him in the many opportunities we have to proclaim the Gospel. Pray that all of us engaged in this ministry will be faithful to God's Word, because we have the promise of God Himself that His Word "will not return to me empty, but will accomplish what I desire and achieve the purpose for which I sent it" (Isaiah 55:11).

Counter man knows his parts

By KIM KIRKHAM
Lifestyle Writer

A counter man at Auto Parts of Big Spring, Jimmy Butts' motto is "parts is parts," a line in a chicken commercial on television.

Butts, 22, has been employed at the store for 3½ years. His job includes ordering and selling parts and keeping merchandise stocked in the parts display area in the front of the store.

Because his father, Marvin Butts, restores cars, Butts grew up working on cars, he said.

He started out working in the parts department of Highland Pontiac. He worked there one year before getting a job at Auto Parts.

Butts went to work as a stock boy at Auto Parts of Big Spring "because it was the only thing open when I was looking for a job," he said.

"You've got to be nice to your customers to make them regular customers," said Butts. "You figure out how they are and how to talk to them when they come in. You've got to figure out which you can kid with, joke with," he said.

Although Butts enjoys working with the public, he doesn't like working six days a week, he said. He works from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday and 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Saturday.

It is difficult "trying to figure out what they (customers) are asking for when they're not sure," said Butts.

"You've got to know a little bit about everything, from Mack trucks to Volkswagens," said Butts.

"Just about everything I've learned" about parts, "I've learned from here," said Butts. He gets tips from customers about cars and gives the customers advice.

Butts enjoys "painting, rebuilding, and just all around mechanicking" vehicles, he said. "Anything I can make with my hands is fun," said Butts. His specialty is mixing paint and making speedometer cables.

He and wife Debbie have been married for 4 years.

In his spare time, Butts enjoys riding three-wheelers, working on car and building his house.

Take diets with grain of skepticism

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Is there a diet that helps arthritis? My friend insists that eating yellow vegetables, like corn, is the answer. I'm not sure if she knows what she's talking about, but she speaks with such an air of authority. Have you heard anything about fish oil? That's another cure I've heard about. I'll try anything you say will work. — Mrs. A.Q.

Faddish arthritis diets are always popping up. I hadn't heard of the yellow-vegetable version, but I have heard of ones involving just about any substance grown on earth that you can name. None to date has survived scientific scrutiny for effectiveness.

This is not to say that my mind is closed to the matter. I merely want to suggest a healthy skepticism and a sensible approach. In fact, recently some modest success has been reported with a diet low in animal fat, high in vegetable oils; and with the addition of capsules of a fish oil product, EPA (eicosapentaenoic acid). Those who went on this diet reported less morning stiffness and fewer tender joints than the control group (those who ate normal-diets). Perhaps you have heard of that since you do mention fish oil in your letter.

I don't know if such a diet will ever have a great impact on how we treat arthritis. It is interesting and it is still being studied, which is more than can be said for many of the out-and-out fad diets. Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters.

Education key to prevention of AIDS

DEAR READERS: If you have no interest in AIDS, what it is, how people get it, how widespread it is, and how to protect yourself from becoming a victim, skip this column. In an effort to get the facts, I consulted Dr. Michael Gottlieb, the eminent UCLA immunologist who discovered the AIDS syndrome in 1981. The information in this column was confirmed by an information officer at the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta.

What is AIDS? It is the name for Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome, a virus that attacks and destroys the immune system, leaving its victims vulnerable to infections and innumerable diseases, including types of cancer.

How is AIDS transmitted? The most significant route is by anal sex, oral sex and "old-fashioned" sexual intercourse with a person who has been infected by the AIDS virus. While most cases have occurred among homosexual or bisexual men who have had multiple partners, AIDS is not exclusively a homosexual disease. An increasing number of cases is being found among heterosexual (straight) men and women. All sexually active men and women, gay or straight, should be concerned.

The virus is also spread by shared contaminated needles among drug abusers. Also through blood products given to hemophiliacs and other recipients of blood. Some good news: Transmission through blood is expected to decrease since the screening of blood donors to detect the AIDS virus began in early 1985.

How AIDS is not spread: There is absolutely no evidence that AIDS is spread by casual contact with infected individuals. It cannot be spread by sharing towels, food or eating utensils with a person who has AIDS. Neither can it be spread by touching, hugging or body contact other than sexual intimacy.

What can be done about AIDS? A massive national program of public education as well as continuing research for a vaccine is now under way.

All sexually active people should avoid sex with multiple partners. They should also avoid contact with semen.

It is important for all of us in the human family to show compassion and understanding to the victims of AIDS. They should not be avoided or ignored. I repeat, AIDS cannot be "caught" by touching or contact other than sexual. And although about 70 percent of the AIDS victims are homosexual men, it is not strictly a homosexual disease.

How can one obtain more information about AIDS? A national hotline with an informative recording can be reached by calling (800) 842-AIDS. Many cities have a local AIDS information hotline. Your telephone operator can advise you.

Red-hot Verplank wins fourth LaJet

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — Scott Verplank, the amateur who won the Western Open last week, fired the best competitive round of his life Sunday — a nine-under-par 63 — to rally from four shots off the pace and capture the LaJet-Pelz National Amateur for the fourth straight year.

The Oklahoma State golfer finished with a 14-under-par 274, two shots ahead of third-round leader Brian Nelson, a University of Texas golfer who had a closing 69.

Doug Thompson was third, one stroke behind Nelson at 277, after posting his second consecutive 68.

"He could have easily have shot a 59," said Nelson, who watched Verplank from virtually every fairway as he played in the final group of the day.

Verplank parred his first four holes before he birdied the fifth hole. After missing a short birdie putt on No. 6, Verplank birdied the next four holes to take a lead he never relinquished.

Verplank made a run on the course record of 61, set by PGA tour veteran John Mahaffey in the pro-am of the 1982 LaJet Classic. However, a missed birdie putt on 16 and a missed eagle putt on the final hole left him with a 63.

Thompson sank a 15-foot uphill birdie putt on the 16th hole to cut Verplank's lead to one shot.

But Verplank quickly moved two shots up again on No. 17 when he sank a 15-foot birdie putt while Thompson was missing a birdie putt of approximately the same length.

"I think that may have taken some of the steam out of Doug," said Verplank. "He still had a chance going into 18, (a par 5 that most of the players were able to reach in two shots), but I had a two-shot lead."

However, Thompson hit his drive out of bounds on 18 and had to sink a 15-foot putt to save par. Verplank safely reached the green in two and two-putted from 18 feet for a birdie. His first attempt ended a couple of feet short of the hole.

"It probably wasn't my worst putt of the day," said Verplank. "If anybody saw me on the first four holes, they wouldn't have thought I was putting very well. On Thursday, I had a chance for a 63, but I jacked it three times (three-putted). I really wanted that putt. It's the lowest round I've ever had in competition."

On Saturday, after an even-par round, Verplank had downplayed his chances of overtaking Nelson or Jeff Maggert, an Oklahoma State teammate whose 64 round on Saturday left him only one shot behind Nelson.

Asked then if he could still win, Verplank had said, "I guess, if I had a fantasy round like Mag did. But it's going to be tough."

Then on Sunday, Verplank did Maggert one shot better.

HUBERT GREEN, the 1985 PGA golf champion, hits a chip shot on the 9th green during final round action at Cherry Hills country club in Denver. GREEN beat LEE TREVINO by two strokes.

Green scrambles to PGA victory

DENVER (AP) — A veteran of 15 seasons on the PGA tour, Hubert Green knows you don't play with fire, especially a red-hot Lee Trevino.

After Trevino rifled an approach shot that landed a foot from the cup on the ninth hole, Green countered with an 8-iron to within two feet.

Both got easy birdies and Trevino's attempt to seize the momentum had been doused. A heavy putter weighed Trevino down on the back nine, and Green emerged with his second major golf title, capturing the 67th PGA Championship Sunday by two strokes.

Green closed with a steady 1-over-par 72 for a total of 6-under 278 and pocketed $125,000.

"That was a very important shot," Green said. "When you play with The Mex and he gets hot, you've got to do something to dampen his coals quick. If he gets away from you, he'll run and hide and you won't catch him."

Trevino, the defending champion who began the final round three shots behind Green, drew into a tie after getting an eagle on the fifth hole.

Playing in the same group, they duelled neck-and-neck until Trevino three-putted for the fourth time, at the 15th hole, giving Green a 1-shot lead he never relinquished.

Trevino's final bid for consecutive PGA titles and a seventh major ended at the par-5 17th, where he drove into the rough, was unable to get his second shot out of the deep grass, pitched over the green, chipped back and two-putted for bogey, giving Green a 2-shot edge heading into the final hole.

"I didn't feel very comfortable with the putter today," said Trevino, 45. "The greens here got a little fast for me. I use a heavy putter, and it doesn't have a good history on fast greens. I found myself getting very defensive with the putter."

Last year, Green reached a low point, finishing 135th on the earnings list.

"It's nice to go in the locker room again and have guys pat you on the back," he said.

Trevino, with a final round of even-par 71, was at 280 and earned $75,000 for second place. Andy Bean, who finished with a 68, and Tze-Ming Chen, older brother of U.S. Open contender Tze-Chung Chen, tied for third at 281. Chen had the day's best round of 65.

Another shot back at 282 was South African Nick Price. At 283 were Tom Watson, Fred Couples, Corey Pavin and Buddy Gardner.

Rams slide by inoffensive Oilers, 7-3

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Coach John Robinson of the Los Angeles Rams found his first National Football League preseason victory of the summer proved his team still needed a lot of polishing.

"It struck me that we need a lot of work," Robinson said after the Rams defeated the Houston Oilers 7-3 in their preseason opener Saturday night. "We have a ways to go to get ready for the regular season, but we know that."

Running back Barry Redden, filling in for holdout Eric Dickerson, scored a third-quarter touchdown and ran for 94 yards on 17 carries to lead the Rams.

"I'm not going to spend my time comparing Barry Redden with Eric Dickerson," Robinson said. "We all know Eric is a great running back. I think Barry Redden established himself as a running back tonight."

Houston, which could only muster a fourth-quarter field goal by Joe Cooper, had a lot of problems with its offense.

"Basically, we executed poorly," said quarterback Warren Moon, who completed 8 of 15 passes for 105 yards. "We had some big plays called back by penalties and that hurt us."

The Oilers, now 0-2 in preseason play, could only come up with 205 yards in total offense, but Coach Hugh Campbell did find one bright note — running back Mike Rozier.

Rozier, signed this summer as a free agent after two years in the United States Football League, gained 21 yards on his first carry and also caught three passes for 19 yards.

"He's a good talent," said Campbell of Rozier. "In the end, he's going to be a big player for us."

Rozier said he's beginning to feel comfortable with his new team.

"I think I played better than last week," he said. "My transition is coming along real well. The first few weeks were tough but things are starting to smooth themselves out now."

Campbell said Rozier has had a lot to overcome in adjusting to the Oilers.

"He's had four offenses in the last three years to learn and master and know what everybody wants," Campbell said. "I think if he had two in three years, he could deal with that, but he's had a lot of things go through his head and I think he's doing really well."

The host Colts scored in the fourth quarter on a 6-yard TD pass by Mike Pagel and a 3-yard run by rookie Mark Brooks.

Astros sink Padres; Rangers collapse, 9-4

SAN DIEGO (AP) — As if the Padres didn't have enough to worry about trying to regain a foothold in the National League, they now have to contend with a one-man wrecking crew by the name of Bill Doran.

The Houston Astros' second baseman has hit four of his 11 homeruns this year off Padres pitchers and has driven in 17 runs against the defending National League champions.

"Doran's the new Padre killer," San Diego catcher Terry Kennedy said after Doran's three hits, including a two-run homer and a run-scoring double, helped the Astros defeat the Padres 7-2 on Sunday.

After hitting just 12 home runs in three previous major league seasons, Doran now leads the Astros with 11.

"I don't know how to explain it," said Doran. "In the past, I've had a lot of trouble against San Diego."

Mark Bailey hit an eighth-inning homer off Andy Hawkins to break a 2-2 tie. After winning pitcher Bob Knepper, 10-9, singled, Doran followed with his blast deep into the right field stands.

Knepper, who allowed only seven hits, escaped a first inning, base-loaded, no out jam, permitting the Padres only one run on Steve Garvey's double play grounder.

Houston scored a pair of unearned runs in the fourth inning when Craig Reynolds hit a leadoff single and Denny Walling was safe at first as second baseman Jerry Royster dropped a throw from shortstop Garry Templeton. After Jose Cruz hit into a fielder's choice groundout at second, Jerry Mumphy singled to right for one run and Glenn Davis' sacrifice fly gave the Astros a 2-1 lead.

The Padres tied it in the bottom of the fourth on Tony Gwynn's single and a two-out double by Terry Kennedy.

The Astros added their final two runs in the ninth, the first scoring on Royster's second error of the game before Doran doubled home Knepper.

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Sammy Stewart didn't mind that the temperature remained in the 90s well past 9 p.m. Sunday, causing even the natives to droop in the Texas heat.

Stewart didn't mind it a bit as he pitched the Baltimore Orioles through 4 1-3 innings of relief for a 9-4 victory over the Texas Rangers.

"It's been something like six or seven days that I haven't pitched," said Stewart. "This Texas heat warmed me up. They (the Rangers) got a couple of hits off me when I came in so I started to use my curve and slider more. I tried to give them low pitches."

Stewart relieved starter Dennis Martinez, who gave up eight hits and all four Texas runs, in the fifth and allowed only two hits to bring his record to 5-4.

Mike Mason, 5-11, was the loser for Texas.

Stewart was helped out by a five-run Oriole fifth and by Mike Young who slammed a three-run homer, scored two runs and had two other hits.

Young's 15th homer of the season came off Ranger reliever Dave Stewart in the sixth inning after Cal Ripken singled and Fred Lynn walked.

"It was a good pitch he (Dave Stewart) threw me," said Young. "It was a pitcher's pitch. It was down low and I just kind of golfed it out. It surprised me when it went as fast as it did."

"We came back and played a pretty good game," said Ranger Manager Bobby Valentine. "But the three-run homer really hurt. That stopped our momentum right there."

Texas took a 1-0 lead in the first inning when Wayne Tolleson tripped and scored on Pete O'Brien's groundout. But the Orioles chased scored five times in the second inning with the help of an error by Tolleson, the Rangers' second baseman.

"We gave up a lot of runs early," said Valentine. "Too many. That's a tough play when the ball went by Tolly (Tolleson) with the infield in. That really hurt."

Cowboy rookies trounce Pack

IRVING, Texas (AP) — The 1985 rookie crop of the Dallas Cowboys is shaping up as one of their best since the famed "Dirty Dozen" Super Bowl bunch of 1975.

Rookie heroes were abundant in Saturday night's 27-3 National Football League preseason thrashing of the Green Bay Packers.

Linebacker Jesse Penn, a second round choice from Virginia Tech and running back Robert Lavette, a fourth round selection from Georgia Tech, each scored a touchdown.

Defensive tackle Kevin Brooks, the first round pick from Michigan, had two sacks and Leon (Speedy) Gonzalez, an eighth round wide receiver from Bethune Cookman, made two spectacular receptions.

"It was great to see the young guys out there making plays like that," said All-Pro defensive tackle Randy White. "They made some big plays and that's always a great sign."

Penn returned an intercepted pass 77 yards for a fourth period touchdown and Lavette dashed seven yards for another in the same period.

"It was one of the best rookie nights we've had" said Coach Tom Landry.

Lavette, a fourth-round pick, averaged 6.2 yards per carry on 8 runs for 50 yards in holdout Tony Dorsett's spot. Ron Springs also had a productive night in his first start at tailback, gaining 47 yards on 7 carries.

"People chased me all the way into the end zone and I couldn't figure it out," said Penn. "Then I realized it was my own players. All the way down the field I just thought about running faster because the sooner I got there the sooner I could stop. It was hot."

Temperatures were 95 degrees at kickoff and over 100 degrees on the field.

Landry said he knew Penn was fast, but not that fast.

"I was really surprised at his speed," said Landry. "It was amazing."

Penn said "I've always had speed, I've just never had to use it before. All I wanted to do was get to the bench. I was tired."

Landry said Lavette was impressive.

"Lavette is a game player," said Landry. "He doesn't look good in practice. He's quick and he has shown some real good qualities."

"He was the same way at Tech. He had a fantastic record there and you can tell why when you see him."

Brooks said he was very happy to produce after a slow start in training camp.

"I knew I needed to work on my pass rush and that work has paid off," Brooks said. "That first sack was the biggest high of my life. I didn't know how to react."

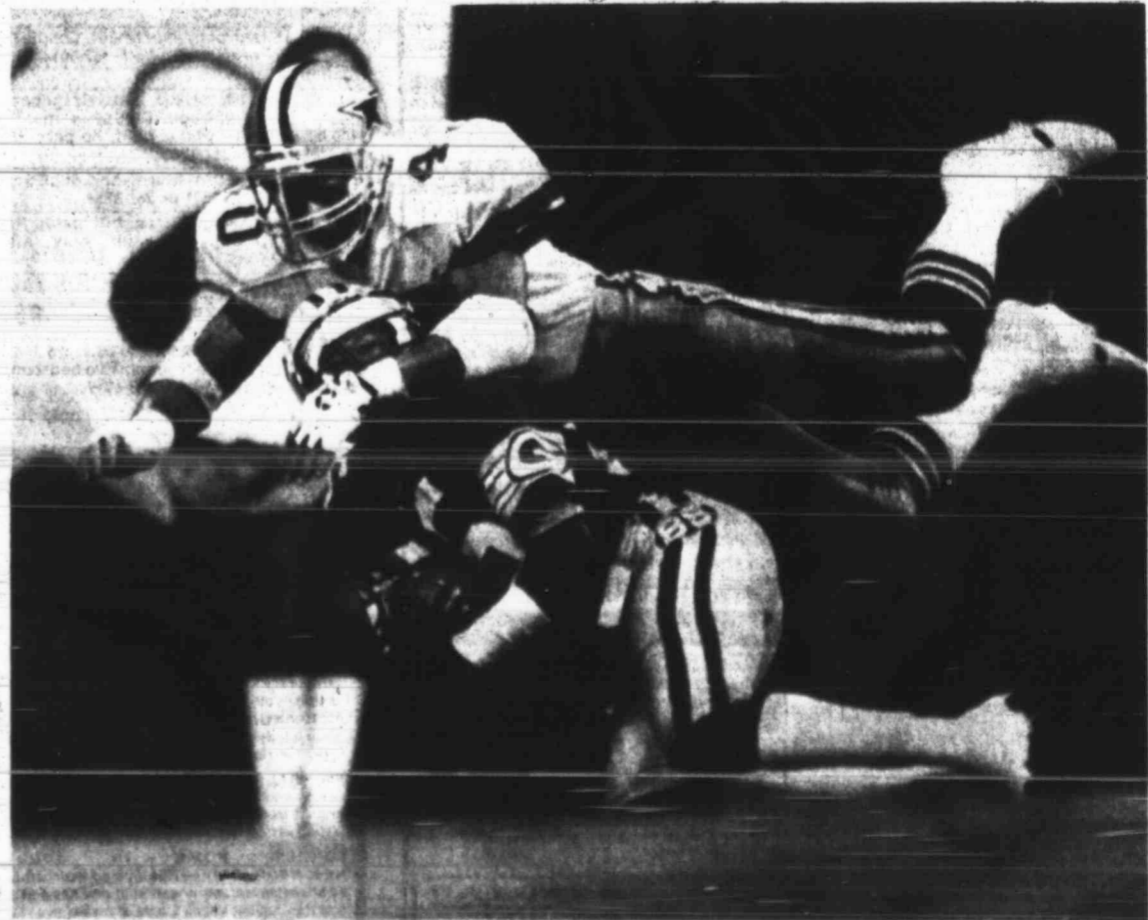

Gonzalez graded his night as "pretty good."

"It was my first game and I think I did some of the things I needed to do," Gonzalez said. "I'm just glad to get that first game over."

The game may have marked the debut and end of Bill Bates punt return career. He was knocked out returning a punt in the second half.

"Bates was very fortunate," said Landry. "He could have really been hurt. Sometimes a collision like that is the best teacher. He won't go into those big guys like that again."

The Cowboys returned to Thousand Oaks Sunday and their next game will be Saturday night in San Diego against the Chargers.

BILL BATES of the Dallas Cowboys is called for pass interference while defending Green Bay wide receiver, PHILLIP EPPS. The cowboys went on to defeat the Packers 24-3.

4 Texas prison inmates die of AIDs, officials say

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Four Texas prison inmates have died of acquired immune deficiency syndrome since June 1984, and four other cases have been diagnosed among the prison population, officials say.

Half of the victims have been homosexuals and the others drug users, said Dr. Michele McDermott, chief of the Texas Department of Corrections medical staff.

Four more inmates have AIDS-related complex, a precursor of the syndrome, Ms. McDermott said. But the disorder does not necessarily mean the patients will develop AIDS, which breaks down the body's immune system.

It is impossible to determine if the patients contracted the deadly disease in prison, Ms. McDermott said. But she said eight cases among a population of 38,000 inmates does not represent a high incidence of the deadly disease.

There have been more than 12,250 cases of AIDS recorded since 1979, when the disease was first diagnosed, according to the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta. About 6,180 have died.

Consultant targets rail for state's metro areas

WACO (AP) — By 1992, someone could travel the 240 miles from downtown Houston to downtown Dallas in just over an hour and a half on high-speed trains, a consultant says.

More than $1.5 million has been spent in the past three years researching the potential of "high-speed rail" in Texas, and some analysts believe the concept is practical not only for the Dallas-Houston corridor, but also from Houston to San Antonio and Dallas to San Antonio.

Financing for part of the project is already under consideration, and a $375,000 federal grant has been issued for a feasibility study, the Waco Tribune-Herald reported Sunday.

Herman Eisele, marketing director for German High Speed Consortium in Atlanta, told the newspaper that his company has been studying the possibility of high-speed rail in Texas since 1983.

He said he expects to meet soon with Gov. Mark White, the Texas Railroad Commission and the Texas Highways and Public Transportation Commission to present the findings of a feasibility study his company began last January.

"It shows that a high-speed line can be built together as a public and private enterprise," he said.

"But it has to be operated as a private business that must show a profit every year. And it can show a profit every year," Eisele added.

Eisele said his study estimates the Dallas-Houston line could be completed for $1.8 billion to $2.5 billion, considerably less than the $7 billion to $10 billion a recent Pennsylvania feasibility study estimated as the cost for a high-speed system connecting Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and Harrisburg, Pa.

Eisele said the GHSC system would be a steel-wheel-to-steel-rail line built with German high-speed technology.

High ridership is essential for a high-speed rail system, but Texas has one of the top growth rates in the country.

Archaeologist finds tracks alongside dinosaur prints

GLEN ROSE (AP) — Evolutionists disagree, but a Glen Rose archaeologist says he has found "man tracks" alongside dinosaur tracks near here that indicate dinosaurs and man co-existed on earth.

Carl Baugh came to Glen Rose, home of the Dinosaur Valley State Park, from St. Louis three years ago at the suggestion of his mentor. He was working toward an archeology degree, and he wanted to excavate a dinosaur track.

At what is known as the McFall site, along the Paluxy River, Baugh's team removed a foot of limestone and, during two days of excavation in March 1982, exposed 19 dinosaur tracks.

"Then we came across a man track. When I realized what it was, it really blew my mind," Baugh said. "I never expected anything this revolutionary."

He now claims to have uncovered about 50 man tracks.

Carl Baugh points to depressions in the rock. "Here was a perfect 16-inch left footprint (of a man)," he said.

"Erosion has distorted it totally. But everything is in perfect proportion to the human anatomy," he told the Waco Tribune-Herald. "We're on the verge of a revolution in science."

Baugh's molds resemble large human prints, with distinctive toes. He displays molds of tracks, the largest of which is 25 inches long, in his Creation Evidences Museum housed in a small field shed near the McFall site.

At the site, the rectangular depressions are much less distinct, which Baugh attributes to erosion.

Many of the "man tracks" are elongated depressions stemming from the heel of dinosaur tracks. Baugh suggests that man or dinosaur stepped on top of one another's tracks.

But the theory that man and dinosaur lived together debunks a major premise from the theory of evolution — that man existed at least 50 million years after the dinosaur disappeared from Earth.

Among the skeptics is Ron Hastings, chairman of the science department at Waxahachie High School and a frequent visitor to the Glen Rose site since 1982.

"We are saying this is part of a dinosaur trail," he said of a depression near a dinosaur track that Baugh claims is a human footprint.

A report compiled by Hastings, anthropologists John Cole and Laurie Godfrey and geologist Steven Schafersman concluded that the man tracks were the result of vivid creationist imaginations, conjuring up a "Fred Flintstone bestiality."

Hastings said the purported man tracks are distorted dinosaur tracks, or were left by bits of debris lodged in the limestone, which eventually rotted out.

Women miners face prejudice

TYLER (AP) — After seven years in the coal mines, Irene Ayers says she still endures hatred and bitter insults — and eating lunch alone.

"I don't think the men have accepted me yet," said Ms. Ayers, 32, a bulldozer operator at the Martin Lake coal strip mine in East Texas. "I wouldn't recommend it to anyone. Most women couldn't stand the pressure I've been under."

However, the picture may be changing. An estimated 20 women work in Texas coal mines and labor statistics show 3,800 women working in underground coal mines, the Dallas Times Herald reported Sunday.

"I think East Texas is finally coming out of its cocoon," said Donna Honeycutt, 38, of Henderson, who has applied for a coal mining job with Texas Utilities Co. "It's catching up with the rest of the world."

The Coal Employment Project, an advocacy group founded in 1977 by women who grew up in the Appalachian coal fields, teaches women the best approaches in applying for jobs in the mines, where to seek jobs, how to use affirmative action programs and how to assert themselves.

The project also provides support services for women who obtain jobs.

"One of the biggest barriers now is that the affirmative action laws are not being enforced by government agencies," said June Rostan, a project spokeswoman. "There's no strong incentive for companies to hire women."

In Texas, the number of women falls below the national average, Ms. Rostan said. Most of the mines are in remote, rural areas where women are homemakers or work in traditional jobs, she said.

The largest coal mining company in East Texas is Texas Utilities Generating Co., which employs 2,000 workers at three strip mines, including the Martin Lake mine near Tatum.
