300 die in ferry boat disaster

PEKING (AP) - About 300 people on board an overloaded ferry boat drowned after they surged to one side to watch a fistfight and capsized the vessel, a Peking newspaper said today.

The accident happened Sunday on the Songhua River in the Heilongjiang Province city of Harbin in northeast China and was reported by the Peking Evening News.
The newspaper said the boat carried more than 300 passengers and "only a few" who were on the top deck managed to swim to safety on shore.

The boat connects the city of Harbin, population 2.3 million, with the popular summer resort of Sun Island, a recreation, garden and convalescent center.

River traffic is usually at its busiest on

The boat had left Sun Island when a fistfight broke out on board. Onlookers rushed to one side to watch and the boat tipped over, the report said.

The newspaper's exclusive report gave no exact figures or other details of the accident.

Competition was hot in several events at the Crossroads Stampede held at Comanche Trail Park this weekend.

The Stampede, sponsored by area businesses and coordinated by the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce, welcomed visitors from across West Texas to get a view of Big Spring and to par-ticipate in a host of challenging events, from cook-offs to husband bomb ripped through a restaurant in Moslem west Beirut today, killing 22 and wounding 77 and triggering fighting along the Moslem-Christian dividing Green Line, police said.

The proceeds from the Stampede will go to offset expenditures of this year's event, towards next year's festival and for park improvements. The total amount raised was not calculated as of this morning, LeRoy Tillery, executive director for the Chamber, said.

The blast came a day after Christian militia commanders vowed revenge on their Moslem foes for a car bombing that killed 55 people, mostly women, and wounded 119 in Christian east Beirut's Antelias suburb on Saturday.

That was the fourth car-bombing in the Christian sector since May. Altogether, 118 people were killed in those attacks.

Moslem-controlled radio stations reported another explosion today in Beirut's Shiite Moslem suburb of Ghobeiri, and the Christian Voice of Lebanon radio said the second blast was also caused by a car bomb. Police could not immediate-

Police said they believed that today's first explosion, in the residential Karakol el-Druse neighborhood, was caused by a bomb-laden green Peugeot car.

The explosion, just after noon, wrecked the first two floors of a six-story building, including the Hamadeh restaurant, and set three floors of an adjacent nine-story apartment building on fire.

AP newsman Samir Ghattas, reporting from Karakol El-Druse, said the force of the blast hurled BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) - A car passing cars on top of each other. At least 15 were set ablaze.

The residential district is controlled by Druse militiamen, who Christian leaders blamed for Saturday's supermarket bombing.

The Ghobeiri area where the second explosion was reported is controlled by Shiites, allies of the Druse against the Christians in Lebanon's 10-year-old civil war. Within minutes of the Karakol explosion, Christian and Moslem gunners began shelling each others positions along the 3-mile Green Line that bisects the city in Moslem and Christian territory. There were no immediate reports of casualties from the fighting, but the clashes forced the closure of the Museum crossing, the main gateway between Christian and Moslem sectors of the embattled Lebanese capital. Ghattas said a filling station near the devastated restaurant was blackened by smoke. He said local Moslem militiamen cordoned off the area around the blast, firing in the air to clear the streets for ambulances.

The owner of the wrecked restaurant, Ihab Hamadeh, told Ghattas there were no customers in his place when the car bomb exploded. His staff survived with minor cuts from flying glass shards.

Texans still oppose amnesty for illegal aliens, poll shows

By DR. JAMES DYER

Harte-Hanks News Service, Illegal aliens may work at jobs Americans don't want, but Texans still oppose amnesty for those already here and think it should be illegal to hire undocumented immigrants, figures from the Texas Poll indicate.

The poll, conducted by telephone July 15-30, asked 1,000 randomly selected adults in Texas about several immigration issues affecting this border state. Most Texans (51 percent) told interviewers that illegal aliens do jobs Americans don't want. Another 28 percent said they take jobs from American citizens, while 15 percent said they do both; 6 percent had no opinion. Nearly three-fourths of those polled (74 percent) said it should be illegal to employ a person who has come into the United States without proper papers, compared to 18 percent who don't think it should be illegal and 8 percent who had no

Citizenship for illegal aliens living here seven years or more was opposed by 49 percent and favored by 41 percent, with 10 percent voicing no opinion.

In a related issue, Texans split right down the middle at 48 percent favoring and opposing whether schools should be required to have Spanish-speaking teachers available to teach children who speak Spanish in the home.

Illegal immigration has long been a problem for states bordering Mexico. Criticism of the government's failure to block entry of illegal aliens usually centers on the claim that illegal aliens are taking jobs away from Americans.

Yet in Texas, even among groups whose economic situation might be threatened by illegal aliens, more people believe they are filling unwanted jobs rather than taking jobs away. Those who think illegal aliens are working at jobs nobody else wants include blue-collar workers (50 percent), 18- to 29-year-olds (47 percent), those with less than a high school education (43 percent) and those earning less than $10,000 a year (42 percent)

One of the most controversial proposals in Congress last year was the Simpson-Mazzoli bill, which sought to produce a comprehensive immigration reform package. Among its features were penalties for employers who knowingly employ illegal aliens and granting permanent resident status to illegal aliens living continuously in this country since 1982. The bill, which never became law, was roundly criticized by border state employers and Hispanics nationwide, who feared a backlash of job discrimination against all Hispanics, regardless of citizenship.

However, Texas Poll figures show that majorities in most ethnic groups agree it should be against the law to hire illegal aliens. Among Hispanics, the majority numbered 63 percent, blacks 76 percent and Anglos 77 percent, falling into line with the 74 percent overall figure. A 1984 Gallup Poll indicated 75 percent of the national population also think it should be illegal to employ a person who has entered the country without proper Texas Hispanics are less likely to oppose granting citizenship to aliens here seven years (34 percent) than are blacks (42 percent) and Anglos (53 percent).

Other groups that most strongly oppose citizenship for illegal aliens are those with annual incomes of more than $30,000 (58 percent), adults age 45-61 (53 percent) Republicans (58 percent), political conservatives (55 percent) and longtime Texas residents (54 percent). South Texans are the most likely to favor amnesty (47 percent) and West Texans are the least likely (36 percent).

The bulk of America's illegal aliens are from Spanish-speaking countries, who when coupled with legal immigrants in this country, make Spanish the second-most common language in the United States, spoken in the home by near-

Former newspaper reporter recalls days on the beat

By CHARLES R. STEWARD III Alice Echo-News

ALICE (AP) - More than thirty years ago while a staff reporter with the Daily Echo, Caro Brown was in the hallway of the Duval County Courthouse talking with a pilot who had brought several Texas Rangers to San Diego. It was Jan. 18, 1954, and the Rangers were in town to arrest political boss George Parr for allegedly harass-down," she said.

With the Rangers was Capt. Alfred Allee, known as a hardnosed lawman who was not often compromised. Allee and Parr had crossed paths many times before and their relationship was anything but cordial, she said.

While the Rangers were cooling their heels in the Duval County Courthouse, Parr was making his appearance at the Jim Wells County Courthouse before returning to San Diego.

When Allee finally met Parr in the Duval Courthouse hallway, he flew into a rage, Brown recalls.

"Cap had George by his tie and bent over backwards with one hand, and in his other hand was his pistol shoved into George's ribs. She adds several of the Rangers and several of Parr's men had weapons drawn.

'I looked around the hall and imagined the bullets ricocheting all saw death. I knew if I could get Cap calmed down, there wouldn't be glasses that had been knocked off." A story ran on the Associated Press wire throughout the state about the "brawl" between Parr and the Texas Rangers, Brown recalls. As she puts it, "They ate that story up. George Parr was a big name in the news those days. I filed constantly with Wilbur Martin at AP, and they would follow it clear in California.'

In a story from the Jan. 20, 1954. issue of Daily Echo, Parr is quoted saying he was sure Allee intended to kill him. "The reason he didn't," Parr said, "was that Mrs. Caro Brown, the reporter from the Alice Echo, kept calling Alfred, Alfred."
She said that after the incident

Parr told her, "If there is anything in the world I can do for you, let me know." But she never asked him any favors, she said.

She continued with a laugh, "I became a saint in San Diego, the angel that saved George Parr.'

Although a person in the middle during the Duval Courthouse "brawl," she had the respect of both Allee and Parr. She remembered Allee handing her a pistol one day and saying, "Put this in your purse," as if she might need it some day.

She said she never felt threatened by Parr. "I don't know why, but I never did. I never did know him personally, but I had a strange feeling of grief when he died. He was one of a kind."

On May 2, 1955, Brown was in the Jim Wells County Courthouse covering a story when she received a call from the sheriff's office telling her to return to the Echo newsroom.

"When I went in, everyone was standing. I got on the phone and Wilbur Martin said, 'Hello you old Pulitzer Prize winner you.' They had to put a chair under me." The award came for "distinguished local reporting on a deadline."

She had come a long way from her days as a proofreader when she first started working for the Daily Echo in 1947. That was the same year the paper became a daily. Her son, Sam, was one of the first paperboys to deliver the daily paper to subscribers.

Leaks force evacuation

Weekend chemical leaks in Indiana, Illinois and West Virginia's "chemical valley" forced the evacuation of about 1,500 people, closed a highway and sent more than 14 people to

In Indiana, leaks of flammable vinyl acetate from a Conrail tank car forced the evacuation of 1,000 Pendleton residents Saturday night and about 440 workers at a factory on the west side of Muncie on Sunday

Officials said the tanker was moved after the earlier incident to a railroad siding behind the factory, Borg-Warner Corp.'s Warner Gear Division

"I don't think anybody was advised," said Kenneth Thorpe, vice president and general manager at Borg-Warner. "If, in fact, this is the same car that was at Pendleton last night, then I think that somebody is guilty of gross negligence."

Robert Libkind, a Conrail spokesman in Philadelphia, said officials had cleared the car at Pendleton. He said it was left on the siding at Muncie so it could be inspected by its owners, Celanese Chemical Corp. of Houston.

Thorpe said company employees and three houses were evacuated Sunday after a sweet smell that stung nostrils and eyes pervaded the Borg-Warner plant. No one was injured and employees began returning after about two hours.

Beating germs to punch

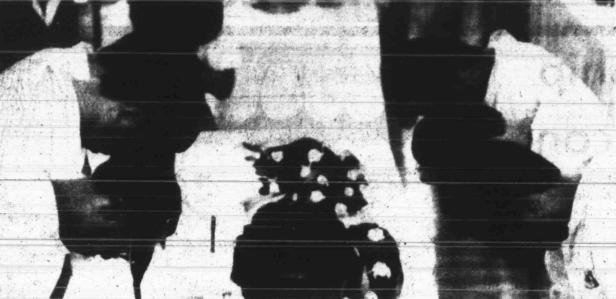

NEW YORK — Tooth decay can begin with a mother's kisses, but dental researchers hope that vaccinating children will one day beat Mom's decay-causing germs to the punch.

A cavity vaccine wouldn't replace toothbrushes, floss and fluoride, researchers say, but it could help further reduce cavities, provide a boon in areas without good dental care, and perhaps point the way to blocking other diseases whose germs enter through the mouth or nose.

Vaccine research is focusing on a bacterium called streptococcus mutans, the main cause of cavities. With the help of sugar from the diet, it colonizes teeth and produces tooth-eroding acid.

Babies are generally exposed to the bacterium by the mother, "usually through kissing (and) close intimate contact," said Dr. Michael Cole, visiting scientist at the National Institute of Dental Research.

But the bacterium can't settle in until the baby gets teeth, he said. That gap would give a vaccine the chance to go to work first to fend off bacterial colonization on teeth.

Japan Air Lines workers bow over the coffin of one of the 520 victims who died in the Aug. 12 JAL crash. Some 460 bodies have been recovered from the crash site on Mt. Osutaka, 70 miles northwest of the Japanese capital.

Tragic riddle

Experts study theories surrounding crash

TOKYO (AP) — Boeing Co. technical experts were reported today to have discounted a theory that the failure of a cabin pressure bulkhead caused the Japan Air Lines 747 disaster in which 520 people died.

JAL's own chief 747 technician, Hiroaki Kohno, meanwhile, told a news conference that yet another theory was being studied - that the plane's vertical tail fin was initially damaged by "external pressure" rather than from a sudden rush of pressurized air from inside the plane. He did not say what might have struck the tail fin from the outside hard enough to cause it to break apart. Officials originally suspected it had been hit by a flying door, but the door was found in the wreckage, still intact.

A 14.7-foot panel from the front edge of the tail fin, found floating in Sagami Bay south of Tokyo, gave investigators their first clue that the tail had disintegrated in flight. The top edge has never been

All but four of the 524 passengers aboard the Boeing 747 were killed in the crash Aug. 12, the worst singeplane crash in history

Investigators had theorized that cracks in the dishshaped aluminum aft bulkhead, which helps contain pressure inside the plane's cabin, may have caused a sudden decompression that ripped up the tail and disabled the aircraft's hydraulic systems.

An airline source, asking not to be identified, said five Boeing Co. experts expressed strong doubt about the cracked bulkhead theory after a visit to the mountaintop crash site on Thursday, along with four URS. government aviation experts and Japanese officials.

A senior government investigator, Hiroshi Fujiwara, also said pieces of the bulkhead had "numerous cracks" that might have been there before the crash.

"The Boeing people said there was nothing to indicate that the damage to the bulkhead was due to anything but the crash itself," said the source. "We know that is what they have told the Japanese.

The Boeing team members and the U.S. officials have refused to comment on any aspect of the investigation since arriving in Japan.

A JAL spoksman, Geoffrey Tudor, said on Saturday that the bulkhead had been inspected five times since being repaired following a 1978 landing mishap involving the plane, and that nothing amiss was ever found. Kohno said there had never been a problem with 747 bulkheads in 15 years of JAL service.

Meanwhile, an account by one of the four survivors offered the first solid indication that others aboard the jetliner had survived the crash, only to perish before rescuers reached the scene, nearly 14 hours afterward. Keiko Kawakami, 12, told reporters from her hospital bed that her father and a 7-year-old sister were both alive, trapped in wreckage and talking "for a long time," but that both died during the night. The mass circulation Yomiuri Shimbun said the 12-year-old also reported hearing the murmur of others in the wreckage - people asking each other, "Are you all right?" and urging, "hang on." Yoshinobu Shibakawa, a police spokesman, said in a telephone interview that 484 bodies had been recovered and airlifted out, and 363 had been identified.

Peres rejects proposal

JERUSALEM - Prime Minister Shimon Peres rejected a proposal Sunday that Israel break off contacts on the Mideast peace process if a U.S. envoy meets a Jordanian-Palestinian negotiating team, a senior official

The suggestion in a cabinet meeting came from Moshe Arens, a former defense minister and now a minister without portfolio, who apparently meant to stress Israel's objections to a proposed meeting between the joint delegation and U.S. Assistant Secretary of State Richard Murphy.

Murphy ended a six-day Middle East tour Sunday saying the United States remained conditionally willing to meet a Palestinian-Jordanian team to help launch Arab-Israeli

An senior official here, who spoke on condition he not be identified, quoted Arens as saying Israel should announce that a meeting between the U.S. diplomat and the joint delegation would "bring about the failure of the talks."

Officials had predicted Murphy might meet with such a team during his trip, but no discussions took place. Statements by American and Jordanian officials indicated there were still obstacles to the meeting, sought by Jordan's King Hussein.

Strike threatens airline

MONTREAL - Air Canada vowed to keep flying today in spite of a first-ever strike by 3,211 flight attendants that came at the peak of the holiday travel season.

"We're ready and the flights will go out as scheduled," said an airline spokeswoman, Esther Szynkarsky, as the strike by members of the Canadian Air Line Flight Attendants' Association began at midnight Sunday.

The airline trained 1,800 Air Canada management personnel and university students as substitutes for the striking attendants. It rejected union claims that the inexperience of the crews might jeopardize flight

Szynkarsky said the replacement crews' six-to-10 day training course met government standards. Passengers might receive less fancy meal service, but, "We wouldn't be flying with these crews if we thought we were putting anyone in any danger," she said.

A union spokesman, however, said nothing "compensates for experience in emergency situations" and was skeptical about the airline's pledge to maintain regularlyscheduled service.

"I can't see them operating 100 per cent," said Val Udvarhely, the union's chief

Bishop Tutu refuses to join delegation of churchmen

PRETORIA, South Africa (AP) - Bishop Desmond Tutu, rebuffed in his bid for a one-on-one meeting with President P.W. Botha, refused to join a delegation of churchmen meeting today with Botha to discuss ways to end racial violence.

But Tutu, a black, said in a telephone interview today that he was still willing to meet the head of state in white-ruled South Africa, "if he doesn't ask me to renounce civil disobedience.

Meanwhile, police said anti-apartheid rioting flared up in a half-dozen black townships around the country, but no new deaths were reported. Three blacks died in clashes over the weekend.

Also, police said they had 998 people under detention today, up sharply from the 746 that were held on Thursday and 786 on Friday.

Tutu, the winner of last year's Nobel peace prize, said earlier that he did not believe Botha genuinely wanted to talk to blacks "who don't agree with him."

The black Anglican bishop of Johannesburg and this country's best-known foe of apartheid sought a one-on-one meeting with Botha in late July after the white government imposed a state of emergency on 36 troubled black townships and cities.

Botha snubbed Tutu's request, but invited him to join the other clergymen at today's meeting in the capital of Pretoria led by the Most Rev. Philip Russell, the senior Anglican in South Africa. Russell

Tutu said in a telephone interview today that Botha wanted to meet blacks only "of his choosing. He could have met with me, clearly ... yet he couldn't accommodate a meeting with me."

"I had hoped I could talk to him as a South African to a South African, as a Christian to a fellow Christian, even as a grandfather to another grandfather ... It would have been possible to hope for a real dialogue, a real speaking to each other, a genuine meeting of minds," Tutu said.

Tutu on Sunday told The Associated Press that he wouldn't meet with Botha "under an umbrella of a delegation when he couldn't see me on a one-to-one

The churchmen, who began meeting with Botha in private at about 10 a.m., planned to discuss the year of bloodshed

The Rev. Jerry Falwell, an outspoken American conservative who is on a fact-finding tour through South Africa, earlier today met with Botha for an hour-long discussion.

British television and radio journalists staged a 24-hour strike recently to protest a decision by the government-owned British Broadcasting Corporation to cancel a television documentary about political extremism in Northern Ireland, featuring an interview with a nationalist politician believed to be a leader of the outlawed Irish Republican Army. It marks the first time a program has been suppressed by the BBC board of governors and, although technically the government only requested the action, the governors' protestations that they acted independently are not credible.

This hardly destroys the reputation of one of the most objective and respected news organizations in the world. Even so, it sets a disturbing precedent, and the BBC's plan to broadcast the program in revised form at a later date does nothing to allay that. What makes the incident doubly unfortunate is that it happened largely because the government and the BBC governors overreacted to bait planted, ironically and lamentably, by a newspaper.

The London Sunday Times, which had prepared an article on the planned broadcast, asked Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher — who had criticized the news media earlier for providing terrorists with "the oxygen of publicity" - what she would think if the BBC broadcast an interview with an IRA terrorist. Thatcher, who apparently knew nothing either of the broadcast or the article the Sunday Times was planning, said she should condemn such an action.

From there, the Sunday Times followed by publishing an article that portrayed a conflict between Thatcher and the BBC. which in fact did not exist. Overreacting, Home Secretary Leon Brittan, without even seeing a tape of the broadcast, asked the BBC not to run it. In turn, the board of governors agreed, with no visible sign of protest, to suppress it.

IRA leaders have been interviewed numerous times on British television and radio, with no attempt by the government to suppress such reports. What's more, the alleged terrorist interviewed, Martin McGuinness, is an elected official in Northern Ireland and has himself been on British television many times. By suppressing the interview, the government and the BBC have drawn the very attention to the IRA that the home secretary sought to prevent.

Doubtless the government will think twice before leaping so quickly in the future in such circumstances, and the BBC's record is too solid for the damage to its credibility by one such incident to be lasting. But it still invites public suspicion about how independent this admirable organization really is.

DEAR MRS. E.R.: You will gain nothing by dropping out of your church - in fact, you will lose a major opportunity to overcome your loneliness, even if you have not experienced any close relation-ships there so far. You need the support and encouragement other Christians can give you — so don't give up on church. In addition, God wants you to discover His love for you and the joy of knowing His presence and encouragement every day. If Christ is preached at your church, you can find the spiritual strength you need.

However, you must take the first' step and reach out to those around you. Has it occurred to you that there may be others in your church who are as lonely as you - and are wishing someone would speak to them and show concern? As you go

CIA's use of psychics isn't just a bad dream

WASHINGTON - A decade ago, an American agent penetrated a previously unknown, top-secret Soviet military base in the Urals. The spy described the base in minute detail, according to a Central Intelligence Agency report. He charted railways, machine shops and laboratories. He even reported that "an unusual proportion of women" were working at the facility

James Bond should be so successful. Unlike his fictional counterpart, this agent was not particularly bold or dashing. He didn't parachute deep into Soviet territory or even slip across the Iron Curtain under cover of darkness

In fact, America's agent was Patrick Price, a bulky, balding ex-police commissioner from Burbank, Calif. — the spawning grounds of some of Hollywood's most successful spy movies. During the entire mission, he never left the comfort of the Stanford Research Institute laboratory in Menlo Park, Price, who has since died, was a self-proclaimed psychic. His amazing "mission" was part of a series of tests sponsored by the CIA. The purpose was to determine if people who claim unusual powers of telepathy could describe scenes in faraway places.

the taxpayers should know that our government has spent - and continues to spend - millions of dollars on this hush-hush research. It began with the CIA's 'Project Scanate" in the early 1970s, and has since become the Defense Intelligence Agency's "Project Grill Flame.' But the same Stanford Research Institute physicist has been in charge all these years: former National Security Agency employee Harold Puthoff. The government uses Puthoff as the Santa Claus for psychic research; funds are channeled through him to other research institutes. Puthoff refuses to speak about the project. And Stamford Research Institute's door has rarely been opened to invite skeptical examiners into the secret sanctums. But several sources close to the mindexpanding study claim solid successes. The most striking occurred when one of the institute's top psychics, given only the geographical coordinates, described th Semipalatinsk nuclear facility in Soviet Central Asia in detail only confirmed afterward by satellite spy photos.

The psychic also described equipment resembling accelerators and electron injectors kept in an underground cavern at the facility, which has since been reported as a "directed energy" facility.

The CIA smelled fraud, though, when he talked about giant steel spheres at the location which, they

Once again, in the years that followed, the CIA found to its chagrin that the psychic was right. The Soviets had developed a process of "flux welding," which could hold the spheres together during the military research.

DIPLOMATIC DIGEST: The Soviet Union has been more than willing to sell arms to Syria, its favored Middle East client. The Kremlin has even offered discount prices to bring Syria's soldiers up to date. But it hasn't been as generous with economic assistance, and that has put Syria in a bind: It can't afford the army it would need to take advantage of WATCH ON WASTE: The Internal Revenue Service office in New York City has begun a pilot program to allow nine of its criminal investigators to work out of their homes. The IRS will foot the bill to wire the homes with telephone lines and computer terminals, a cost that will run into the thousands of dollars. A spokesman says it is part of a "morale boosting program" to keep agents on the job longer. But there's an added expense to the Treasury, and a bonus to the agents - they'll be able to write off some of their home expenses from their tax returns.

CONFIDENTIAL FILE: For all the tens of millions of dollars in security measures, and all the president's spy-masters, the nation's largest spy outfit, the National Security Agency, cannot protect itself against a single misguided NSA employee who chooses to sell the secrets. A top NSA official admitted as much to a congressional committee recently in these words: "Our most secure electrical communications could conceivably be compromised through insider espionage — (via) delivery of cryptographic key and related security information to the opposition." Read: Russia.

MINI-EDITORIAL: On Sept. 2, Washington's music community will hold the First Annual Washington Labor Day Concert on the Mall near the Washington Monument. The concert will focus attention on the capital's thousands of homeless citizens, and is being sponsored, in part, by the Community for Creative Non-Violence. Those attending are asked to bring a can of vegetables, dried food, clothing or blankets to give to the homeless. The Community for Creative Non-Violence has helped the nation's homeless in many imaginative ways. The concert is yet another example, and we applaud them.

Jack Anderson's investigative report from Washington is distributed by United Feature Syndicate.

Finally come relations with Russia. The outline of a big arms control bargain has emerged from the Geneva talks. Both sides agree in principle to large cuts in offensive weapons: The hangup is on anti-ballistic missile defense, or Star Wars. The Americans insist on the right to conduct research which they do not define very exactly. The Russians insist that research stop before testing. So testing has

At his news conference Reagan said the Russians had recently completed tests on two sets of rockets. He said the U.S. had still to test the equivalent rockets. He volunteered that after catching up, the U.S. would be "willing" to enter a "permanent moratorium"

In fact, Reagan's advisers confused him about the testing of rockets with the testing of nuclear weapons. They oppose a moratorium precisely because it would preclude testing of nuclear weapons considered vital to Star Wars. He is not so sure. But the upshot was another White House cor rection about what Reagan really

WASHINGTON - The President's news conference the other day provided a striking insight into a complicated personality. Mr. Reagan knows his own mind, but not much else.

In giving his views on himself. his associates and the American past, Reagan spoke with crisp assurance. But in discussing such business as economic policy and relations with Russia, he was way over his head

Presidential health provided the surest sign of Reagan's acuity, White House officials had run away from questions about removal of a skin cancer on Reagan's nose; Some members of the White House press corps then fashioned from their expertise in the credibility gap a theory of general cancer.

Reagan shot down the theory with the authority of an expert. He said of the skin cancer that had been removed: "It was ... a basal cell carcinoma, which is the most common and the least dangerous kind. They come from exposure to the sun ... They're very com-monplace. They do not betoken in any way that you are cancer-

A fuss had been made by many people, including the Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, about the moral stigma supposedly blackening this country because of the dropping of atom bombs on Japan 40 years ago. Reagan dismissed that nonsense in one sentence: " we dropped the bomb in an effort to end the greatest war in man's history.

When it came to larger issues of current policy, however, Reagan was stuck in the past. Consider, first, economic policy.

During the past six months, Reagan and the Republican majority in the Senate have repeatedly thwarted each other. Reagan's plans for tax reform, big cuts in domestic services, higher defense spending and more veto authority were blocked in the Senate. Reagan stymied efforts by Majority Leader Robert Dole to reduce the budget deficit drastically by raising taxes and cutting Social Security.

At his news conference Reagan ticked off exactly the agenda he had set out last February. He said he and Dole "agreed that the Senate and I ... could be working together." "Every poll shows," Reagan added, "the No. 1 concern of the people of the country today is the deficit and overspending by the government.

In fact it is the deficit - not public spending - that shows up No. 1. The American economy is headed for what former Budget Director David Stockman once called "death by a thousand imbalances" - a huge budget deficit. high interest rates, an overvalued dollar, record foreign trade deficits and stagnation of industrial activity and unemployment. Dole and the other Republicans have every incentive to block all the Reagan projects in the interest of closing the budget deficit.

Bonura said SWCID offers the programs either as a certification program or an associate degree program. Many of the classes are self-contained and held at SWCID, while several are mainstreamed into classes at Howard College.

Last year, "70 percent of SWCID students majored in occupational education" courses, Bonura said. "Most students like the hands-on experience" the courses offer.

Bonura finds her job a challenge and she enjoys her work very much. She works with instructors from both SWCID and Howard College and she likes the fact that her job gives her an opportunity to get to know many people.

One program in her division, the paraprofessional for the hearing impaired (PPHI) program, is one she would like to see more hearing students

PPHI offers a background in sign language and deafness, Bonura explained. Students with degrees or certification in PPHI can work as aides in deaf educational programs or as interpreters.

She feels the program is especially important because, 'more and more programs (for the deaf) are becoming mainstreamed." Because of this, people trained in deaf education and sign language will become needed assistants in classroom situations.

The PPHI program is also for hearing impaired students who would like to work as aides in deaf educational settings or as counselors at camps and other such events.

"PPHI helps people understand more about deafness," Bonura said. "We take many fields trips to see different programs in Texas." She has lists of job opportunities for people with PPHI training.

Helene Bonura enjoys working at the SouthWest Collegiate Institute for the Deaf as head of the occupational education division.

Although Bonura is happy with her job at SWCID, she found herself in a strange environment when she moved here

Bonura is originally from New York City. She attended an oral school program at the Lexington School for the Deaf. 'Sign language was forbidden there," Bonura said.

Bonura became fluent in sign language while attending Gallaudet College in Washington, D.C. She received her associate of arts degree there. She married her husband, Dom Bonura, during this time and "was busy for the next few years with three babies," she said with a smile.

She later attended Windham College in Putney, Vermont, where she received her bachelor's degree in history. She taught for several years at Austine School for the Deaf in Brattleboro, Vt., and later junior high students at the Manchester school district mainstreamed program in Manchester, N.H.

Bonura received her master's degree in special education from California State University at Northridge.

The Bonuras moved to Big Spring in 1981 and both work at SWCID. For Dom Bonura, change "was easy," Mrs. Bonura said. But Mrs. Bonura has always loved New England and found herself missing it when the family relocated to

But, "I'm starting to feel good about West Texas," she said. "I enjoy working at SWCID and meeting people. I feel we here at SWCID are a good team and we offer a better education for students' than might be available if SWCID did not exist.

The Bonuras have three children, including Tony, 25, Alex, 23, and Nancy, 22. All three have lived in Big Spring at various times, but Tony and Nancy are now living in Virginia, working and earning money for college. Alex works for the Texas School for the Deaf in Austin.

DEAR ABBY: My pet peeve concerns using the word "so" in place of the word "very."

Advertisers do it contantly. Example: "Our (whatever) is so soft, so beautiful, so tasty, so affordable, etc." If a product rates particular merit, the "so" is lengthened, and it becomes "sooooo beautiful, sooooo tasty, etc." My name is Robert J. Dr. Donohue

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Is it true that the older we get the more likely we are to react adversely to medicine? I work in a nursing home and notice that many of the elderly patients do seem to get all sorts of reactions from normal adult doses of drugs. — Mrs. W.B. You're perceptive. Yes, in fact several events in aging make a per-son more prone to drug side effects. Metabolism slows, permitting the drug to stay in the body longer before being eliminated. The elderly tend to have less body mass, so that a "normal" dose of a drug might have a greater impact.

After overcoming a three-shot deficit on the final three holes of regulation, Alcott knocked in a two-foot birdie putt on the second playoff hole Sunday to beat Patty Sheehan and capture the $200,000 LPGA Nestle World Championship of Women's Golf.

"There was a lot of pressure out there this week," Alcott Alcott said. "Maybe I wanted it too much, but I was smart enough to let myself play.

"I've been saying all week it comes down to desire, guts and who wants it the most. I just played the best today, I guess."

Alcott had two birdies on the final three holes of regulation and Sheehan fell into a tie at 274 when she missed a five-foot par putt on the final green.

Alcott and Sheehan, who each had final-round 69s, each birdied the first extra hole before Alcott placed her tee shot two feet from the pin on the par-3 17th.

Sheehan, hitting second, was on the fringe of the green, about 25 feet away, and her putt wasn't close. Alcott then birdied to claim the richest LPGA prize - $65,000 - and Sheehan took second place money of $35,000.

"I had a good feeling all week," said Alcott, the only player to appear in all six World Championships. "I knew I had

Gritty Alcott wins Green captures Buick Open

GRAND BANC, Mich. (AP) — Among the flock of slim, blondhaired young golfing pros who seem to be taking over the PGA Tour, there now walks Ken Green a man who lets his sister carry his bag, wears his heart on his sleeve and has the courage to admit he gets scared beyond belief standing over a 4-foot putt.

Green ended four years of frustration on Sunday by making the Buick Open his first victory on the Tour. He beat another nonwinner, Australian Wayne Grady, by four shots and set a tournament record in the bargain. Green walked away with $81,000 and the use of a new car for the next year.

"The money comes in handy," the 28-year-old Green said frankly. "I'm not what you'd call Jack Nicklaus-rich or anything. Earlier this year, in fact, I was just about

"A friend had to loan me $1,000 to play Hilton Head. I paid that back and now I've won THE tournament. I'm going to have a good time tonight. I deserve the celebration.

Green, who became the ninth first-time winner on the Tour this year, played so poorly during his first couple of years that he lost his playing card. He regained it during last fall's PGA qualifying school, which has produced five 1985 tournament winners.

With his sister, Shelley, as his caddy, plus his mother and girlfriend in the gallery, Green's victory truly was a family affair.

"I think I could say some things to Shelley that I couldn't say to an ordinary caddy," Green said. "You know, you don't maybe want to tell them how scared you are."

Shelley Green said her brother Gary Hallberg at 275.

never has fit the mold of the modern young pros.

"I was just so proud of him," she said. "It was so nice to hear that applause at No. 18. Usually it's for mebody else.

"My mother worked all her life so I wouldn't have to," Green said. "She flew in last night, and to have her here was a great feeling."

Green carded a bogey on the ninth hole and was two strokes behind Grady at the turn. However, his 25-foot chip shot bounced into the cup for a birdie on No. 11 and Green then ran off three more birdies in succession to put the tournament away.

"I have no excuse. I just played bad on the back side," said Grady; who is playing his first year in the United States after 11 years in Asia and Europe. "I'm disappointed, but it's my best finish over here, so I'm satisfied.

"Ken just played great on the back nine and that's where tournaments are won."

Grady collected $48,600.

Green's final score for the 72-hole tournament was 20-under-par 268, breaking the old mark of 17-under set last year by Denis Watson on the 7,014-yard, par-72 course at Warwick Hills Golf and Country

Mac O'Grady, who started the final round five shots behind Green, carded a 68 on the final round to finish all alone in third place at 14-under-par 274.

Gene Sauers, the youngest player on the Tour, started the final round tied for second with Grady, one shot behind Green. However, the Savannah, Ga., native finished in a three-way tie for fourth with George Burns and

RICK MEARS of Bakersfield, California, stands in victory lane after winning the CART Pocono 500 race at Long Pond, Pa. on Sunday.

Mears salvages Pocono 500 win LONG POND, Pa. (AP) - Rick moved into the season points lead

Mears salvaged what even he believed to be a lost season with a victory in the Domino's Pizza Pocono 500.

Mears, who competed in mediocre fashion in three previous races this season while recuperating from a crash that nearly ended his career, on S again showed the ability that has stamped him as one of the superstars of auto racing.

There never was a time I felt I wouldn't be back," said the 33-year-old driver from Bakersfield, Calif. "As soon as I saw both feet were still on my legs, I knew I'd be back.

Mears had won the 1984 Indianapolis 500 and was challenging for his fourth Indy-car season championship when he badly damaged both achilles tendons and suffered mutltiple fractures of both feet in a crash last September in St.

Pie, Quebec, Canada This season, barely able to walk unaided, he has been unable to drive in the road races which make up more than half the CART schedule, being replaced in those events by Al Unser. Unser, who began the season with commitments only for the three 500-mile races, has taken full with a third-place finish on Sunday behind Mears and 23-year-old Al Unser Jr.

"I knew my season was written off as far as the point standings were concerned almost from day one." said Mears, who won the pole here with a record-smashing lap over 203 mph. "My season is shot, but I don't want to take anything from him (Unser Sr.).

'But this did a lot for me therapy-wise. There are no words for it. We've got to put it (the accident) behind us and this will help.

"It's been a long road getting here (to the victory stand)," he added. "Almost a year now. It's a great feeling."

Mears beat Unser Jr. to the finish line by 2.18 seconds, averaging 151.676 mph and earning $86,284 from the total purse of $494,000.

Mears led for the first time in the 200-lap race on Pocono International Raceway's 2.5-mile tri-oval on lap 164 when Unser Jr. was forced to pit for his second stop-and-go penalty of the day.

The younger Unser, who ran at or near the front all day, was penalized once for a pit-exit violation and the other time for passing advantage of the situation. He Mario Andretti on a restart.

recent success against left-handed pitching, Pete Rose says he will continue to platoon with Tony Perez at first base as he pursues the all-time major league hit

"I've got a .335 hitter (Perez) who plays against left-handers," Rose said Sunday night after singling twice to lead the Cincinnati Reds to an 8-3 win over the Houston Astros and pull to within 15 hits of breaking Ty Cobb's all-time majorleague hit record of 4,191.

One of Rose's hits came off lefthanded reliever Jeff Calhoun.

"I think I've got eight hits in a row off left-handers but only 10 or 12 hits overall. You can't tell anything from that," said Rose. who starts only against righthanders. "What bothers me is the last five games we played against left-handers we lost.

> Max Venable, pinch-hitting for Tibbs, got a one-out single for the Reds' first hit off Ryan. After stealing second, Venable scored on Eddie Milner's single.

Milner went to second on an error by first baseman Glenn Davis and scored on the single by Rose, who went to second on the play when Astros catcher Mark Bailey mishandled the throw to the plate. After an intentional walk, Buddy Bell and Esasky hit RBI singles to give the Reds a 4-2 lead.

Houston took a 2-0 lead in the fifth on Denny Walling's sacrifice fly and a run-scoring double by Jose Cruz

Even after crew chief Jim Evans postponed Sunday's game with Baltimore leading Texas 6-0 after three innings, the manager of the

When I handed him the line-up cards," Weaver said, "I told him, You're in a no-win situation.' He had only one hope. . . to start in the rain and hope that it stopped.'

But the rain never abated, and players slipped and slid both in the field and on the bases.

Just before he was removed in the third, Texas starter Dave Stewart threw a pitch several feet behind batter Rick Dempsey, and catcher Geno Petralli did a pratfall while chasing the ball.

That may have been enough for Evans, although he permitted the inning to be completed before ordering the field covered.

"Conditions just got beyond the point of reason," Evans said. "It was getting very muddy and the runners couldn't make their cuts. The rain was changing the complexion of the game too much.

The intensity of the rain changed three or four times. I had thought about stopping it (the game) in the second, but it got lighter and I thought we could ride

Then, after Pittsburgh failed to move the football, Robinson took Harry Newsome's punt at Minnesota's 32-yard line. He cut to the right sideline and, as Steelers tripped over each other in attempts to catch him, the rookie running back raced in for the winning score.

In other games, it was Indianapolis 24, Chicago 13; Cincinnati 24, New York Jets 20; Cleveland 28, Philadelphia 14; Atlanta 23, Tampa Bay 17; Miami 27, Buffalo 17; New York Giants 10, Green Bay 2; Houston 23, New Orleans 20; New England 31, Kansas City 13; and Dallas 27, San Diego 24 in overtime.

Trailing by three touchdowns in the second period, the Vikings pulled to within seven points at alftime as quarterback Tommy Kramer twice connected with Leo Lewis within a 23-second span late in the half.

After the two hooked up on a 10-yard touchdown strike, Pittsburgh kickoff returner Anthony Corley fumbled. Minnesota recovered and, three plays later, Kramer found Lewis from 27 yards out.

The Steelers opened a 34-20 margin 4:42 into the final quarter when Scott Campbell tossed a 3-yard touchdown pass to Roderick Moore, but the Vikings' late rally was good enough

Robbie Martin scored the clinching touchdown on a 32-yard reverse after Mike Pagel's passing set up two first-half touchdowns as Indianapolis defeated Chicago. With Indianapolis leading 17-13 in the third quarter, Colts quarterback Art Schlichter handed off to George Wonsley and Martin came around the other end to score his touchdown.

Boomer Esiason fired touchdown passes to Stanford Jennings and Cris Collinsworth and passed for 251 yards in the first half as Cincinnati defeated the Jets. Esiason, battling with Turk Schonert for the No. 2 quarterback's job behind designated regular-season starter Ken Anderson, completed 11 of 17 passes, including 22 yards to Jennings and 12 yards to Collinsworth.

Gary Danielson threw three second-half touchdown passes to give Cleveland its victory over Philadelphia. Danielson. quired from the Detroit Lions in an offseason trade, completed 12 of 16 passes for 170 yards, including scoring passes to Kevin Mack, Ozzie Newsome and Willis Adams

LeMond cycles to Coors Classic win

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) - The Coors Internaional Bicycle Classic had some shaky moments its 11th year, but there were few suprises when it came time to hand out the gold medals Sunday. Greg LeMond, who'd worn the race leader's jersey since the fifth day of the 16-stage race, won the overall men's title, and his Red Zinger team took the men's team honors.

France's Jeannie Longo, who dominated the women's field with five stage victories, took the women's title, and her team also The Coors featured an impressive field of riders, including five-time Tour de France winner Bernard Hinault and several U.S. Olympic medalists. The list of teams included the Soviets, Colombians and East Germans.

The Classic ventured outside Colorado for the first time, meeting enthusiastic crowds in California and Nevada. But, also for the first time, a race was stopped 21/2 miles early, and other organizational snags included three last-minute course changes.

Most of the racers said the problems were just growing pains. Le-Mond's wish list for next year included "harder races at lower altiudes, so it gives a better chance to people who don't have time to prepare. I'd like to see longer races

LeMond came in sixth in the final stage of the race, the 61-mile, 37-lap North Boulder Park Circuit

Race, at 2:24:45. Red Zinger teammate Steve Bauer won the stage at 2:22:56, having also won in 1981 and

Olaf Jentzsch of East Germany, considered the world's finest amateur cyclist, was second in the circuit race at 2:24:14, and 7-Eleven's Ron Kiefel was third at

Bauer, who turned pro after winning the silver in the Olympic road race, was ahead of the pack with 11 laps left, then pulled away to build a 2-minute lead over the lead chase group, including Boulder's Davis Phinney — who'd won the stage in 1982 and 1983 - Kiefel, Bob Roll of Suntour Composite International and Soviets Oleg Logvin and Vitaly

Red Zinger's Bernard Hinult, 1985 Tour de France winner, controled the field and that left Le-Mond to concentrate on Levi's-Raleigh's Andrew Hampsten, his closest overall challenger.

Hampsten won King of the Mountain honors, France's Roman Pensec of the Peugeot team was named best rider under 22, and Phinney was the sprint leader.

Hampsten finished second overall in the Classic - 1:51 behind LeMond - and Doug Shapiro of 7-Eleven, the Classic's defending champion, was 4:44 behind the winner in third place.

Hinault, who finished ninth overall, said he'll be back next year and accomplished what he wanted in his first U.S. race. Longo, who was second overall in front of the field for a wheel ed this year, sponsored by the Boulder-based Celestial Seasonings. The herb tea company started the Classic in 1975 as the Red Zinger Bicycle Classic, and the Adolph Coors Co. took it over in
