City looks to raise revenue, cut costs

By KEELY COGHLAN
Staff Writer

Facing mounting costs of services and a declining economy, councilmen Monday debated several proposals to raise additional revenue and cut expenditures.

A preliminary budget shows that the estimated $171,565 beginning balance of the city's general fund will decline by $147,069 at the end of the next fiscal year. The city began the current fiscal year with $450,696 in the fund.

Total expenditures from the general fund, estimated at $6.98 million, will outstrip total revenues of $6.66 million in fiscal year 1985-86, according to a printed preliminary budget.

However, those figures will change because of decisions by councilmen Monday. The general fund and the city's airport, warehouse and utilities budgets will combine for a total budget estimated near the $12-million mark.

Councilmen, concerned that the city's beginning balance for the general fund keeps decreasing from year to year, debated several ways to come up with the $147,000, including an increase in the property tax rate.

The effective tax rate is 63 cents per $100 valuation, according to City Finance Director Tom Ferguson. That rate could be increased to 66 cents per $100 without a tax hearing.

The 1984 tax rate was 68 cents per $100 valuation. However, the effective tax rate — the one that will bring in the same amount of revenue — is lower because of an increase in the total appraised value of property on the city tax rolls.

As an alternative to raising property taxes, Councilman Russ McEwen suggested the city could add a $1.25 monthly surcharge to all parties receiving a water bill to pay for city services.

Many city-operated or -maintained services are not self-supporting, including the municipal golf course and tennis courts.

On a lighter note, councilman Johnny Rutherford drew laughter when he suggested the city operate a lottery to raise revenue.

In addition, council members agreed to increase the city's "lifeline" water rate to $9 from $5.75. The city would charge $1.53 for each additional 1,000 gallons of water, up from $1.25.

Those charges are comparable with rates in Midland, councilmen said.

The base sewer charge would remain the same, at $4.25. However, the cost per 1,000 gallons per every additional gallon would increase from 65 cents to 80 cents, the city finance director said.

Several projects that citizens want, such as the Main Street pro-

Council tentatively approves closing Central Fire Station

A proposal to close the Central Fire Station as a cost-saving measure was tentatively approved Monday by council members in a budget work session.

The Central station is the oldest of the city's five stationhouses and is located downtown on Fourth Street next to City Hall.

Because the areas protected by the other four stations overlap, "Central is a luxury," Fire Chief Carl Dorton said after the work session.

The proposal would cut an estimated $50,000 from the city budget, City Finance Director Tom Ferguson said today.

If Central is closed, men and equipment would be beefed up at other stations. Under the proposal, a minimum of three and sometimes four men would be assigned per fire engine, Dorton said.

The 11th and Birdwell station would serve as the main station, while police dispatchers would serve as backup dispatchers, a function the 11th and Birdwell station now performs, Dorton said.

Although Dorton discussed closing the station with the State Insurance Board in Austin, he has not received final approval for the proposal yet.

In addition, Dorton is asking councilmen to sell two of his oldest trucks — a 1951 and a 1956 fire engine — and to purchase a new pumper at an estimated $120,000 with revenue-sharing funds.

That would leave a pumper at every station. In addition, a mini-pumper would be housed at one of the stations, and another older engine would remain on reserve, Dorton said.

He also wants to appoint an assistant fire chief and a training officer and to eliminate three lieutenants' positions by moving the men to other jobs. The force now has 15 lieutenants, five per shift, one per station.

Dorton has not selected an assistant fire chief yet, he said.

Principal hams it up to make school fun

GOFREY, III. (AP) — Other school principals may play Santa Claus at Christmas or Count Dracula at Halloween, but Jerry Montague's incognito cameos also include Abraham Lincoln, Uncle Sam and Smokey Bear.

Montague says he has 225 reasons for donning his disguises: the students at Gilson Brown Elementary School.

"I have this basic philosophy that education should be fun, and a happy child is a learning child," Montague said recently. "When I put on a costume, it helps them see I'm a real live person who likes to have fun."

"I think it shows the kids, even though because of my position I have to remain distant, I am a human being."

He said the costumes are intended to enhance the efforts of teachers at the school in Godfrey, a town of 1,215 people north of St. Louis.

"It's not an entertainment thing but an educational tool," said Montague, principal at Gilson Brown since 1980. "We're not trying in any way to detract from the three R's."

"When the teachers work so hard to put on a program, even if it cost me $10 or $15 to rent a costume, it's worth it."

Montague, 43, said he rented the Uncle Sam outfit for an assembly on patriotism and donned buckskins for one on pioneer days. The stovepipe hat and beard were for Lincoln's birthday. His most uncomfortable costume was a stuffy Smokey Bear suit for a program on conservation.

"But the reaction of the kids was worth the discomfort," he said.

The wacky costumes are often combined with field trips. While principal at Irving Elementary School, also in the Alton School District, he took first-graders to his farm in Jersey County.

"When I walked out of the woods dressed like Smokey the Bear and started talking about the dangers of forest fires, those first-graders really believed me," Montague recalled. "They were convinced I was real."

The principal said he is a firm believer in both costumes and trips because they motivate students and make a lasting impression.

DRESSED AS Uncle Sam, Gilson Brown Elementary School Principal John Montague greets a parent at a meeting at the Illinois school. Montague, who roams the hallways as Count Dracula at Halloween, Santa Claus at Christmas, and dons and beard and stovepipe hat on Abraham Lincoln's birthday, says the costumes are intended to enhance the efforts of teachers at the school.

S. African doubts blacks want democracy

WASHINGTON (AP) — South Africa's ambassador-designate, Herbert Beukes, says whites fear South African blacks would reject democracy and the Western-oriented "value system" if they gained control of the government there.

Beukes said in an interview with The Associated Press on Monday that the white government won't trust the blacks to rule because of fears they would dismantle such rights as private property ownership, and press, judicial and religious freedoms.

"If you want an announcement that the government says our system will make provision for black rule, instead of democratic rule, then you will be disappointed," he said.

South Africa's white minority government has endeavored over the years to identify the 5 million whites with the Western world, while linking the 24 million blacks to the African world, in effect applying different standards to the two population groups.

In the interview in his embassy

HERBERT BEUKES, South Africa's ambassador-designate, said during a Washington interview Monday that his country will not agree to one-man, one-vote status for blacks because they have a different "value system."

office, Beukes said he would agree that the system that relies on rigid racial segregation practices has worked well for whites, while shutting out the black majority.

But he said the government of President P.W. Botha has now made a firm commitment to dismantle apartheid laws, and "one after the other they have fallen like dominoes."

"We are committed to political equality, to justice and to a system that will be as fair as we can possibly develop in that country within that diversity that we have," he said. "Whether we find that system, I don't know."

However, he agreed that granting of political rights, which are still denied blacks, is fundamental to ending the government's strict system of racial segregation.

Beukes said Americans should not have been surprised that Botha, in a major speech on apartheid last Thursday, ruled out one-man, one-vote status for blacks, a privilege enjoyed by the white population.

"That does not mean you can't find a democratic system in the country," Beukes said. "Why can't South Africa be allowed to find that constitutional model that would be democratic, that would be representative, that would be fair and that would extend political equality to people, whatever its name might be?"

Asked if he thought the blacks were incapable of democratic rule, Beukes replied, "They do not seem to be eager or willing to go into that process."

Moderate black South African leaders such as Bishop Desmond Tutu and Gatsha Buthelezi, chief of the Zulu tribe, say one-man, one-vote should be the goal of the black majority.

Both have also said they envision cooperation between blacks and whites. Buthelezi has said he would agree to a transition period to one-man, one-vote.

Beukes made clear that white distrust of the blacks is the chief factor in denying them one-man, one-vote status.

"When you take a democratic country, it is easier to have one government replaced in an election by the electorate if the value system will not be totally thrown out," he said, referring to the United States.

Beukes said South Africa is different because "if you have a two-party system in a unitary structure and you have a one-man, one-vote system, and one philosophy is espoused that is a total alien one to the status quo, perhaps that will undo private property or these other freedoms."

For that reason, he said, "there would obviously be a great reluctance (by whites) to be put into that position, to move into that."

Beukes, 43, was named ambassador to Washington in June but President Reagan has yet to receive his credentials. The delay is widely viewed as an expression of U.S. disapproval of South African policies.

State Department spokesman Charles Redman said Monday that many black South Africans are seeking "concrete assurances from the government that the way is open to full and genuine participation in South Africa's political future."

Redman said the administration wants "early implementation of the reforms outlined in President Botha's speech."

Estrada, Rowe to honeymoon

By the Associated Press
Actor Erik Estrada and actress Peggy Rowe, who share billing in a soon-to-be-released movie "Light Blast," will be co-starring in a honeymoon this week in Rome, where they were married.

Estrada, 35, and Ms. Rowe, 29, were married in a church service Monday in Rome, said Charlene Rowe of Long Beach, the bride's mother, and Jackie Loria, a spokeswoman for the rugged leading man from TV's "CHiPs."

"This is so exciting. I think it's great. He's gorgeous," Mrs. Rowe said.

ERIC ESTRADA PATTY DUKE ROD STEWART and CYNDI LAUPER

Estrada and her daughter met two years ago at a party and have lived together for about a year, she said. "They've talked about it, but I didn't know they were going to get married today."

It is Estrada's second marriage.

Rock stars Rod Stewart and Cyndi Lauper will perform together at a Hollywood extravaganza next month to raise $1 million for study and treatment of AIDS, a spokeswoman said.

Hosts of the Sept. 19 benefit for acquired immune deficiency syndrome include Elizabeth Taylor, Burt Lancaster, Burt Reynolds and Carol Burnett, said publicist Chen Sam on Monday.

unless I know why and what's happening."

The star of the 1962 "The Miracle Worker" and a 1979 TV version, and a 1976 TV miniseries, "Captain and the Kings," said recently that she's changed agents twice since March with no luck.

The actress, who said she's "heard the sound of laughter more than the sound of tears" in her life, was in Hawaii on vacation and to meet with local members of the Screen Actors Guild. She's running for SAG president.

Former President Jimmy Carter and comedian Bill Cosby are co-stars of a one-hour film "Kids Just Wanna Have Fun," to warn children about the dangers of drinking, smoking and not wearing seat belts.

Cosby plays a T-shirt vendor in the public television special filmed at Six Flags Over Georgia amusement park in Atlanta. Carter plays himself on an outing with his grandchildren in the film to be shown later this year.

"We hope to reach almost 3 million youngsters who could easily start turning the tide," Carter said in a statement. "They don't have to grow up to be cancer or heart disease or auto wreck statistics."

The special grew out of a project on health care issues sponsored last year by Carter's Emory University policy center.

Caroline Kennedy, daughter of the late President John F. Kennedy, has agreed to serve on a new commission that will plan a memorial to her father at the Massachusetts Statehouse.

A swearing-in ceremony and initial meeting were scheduled today for the more than 20 commission members, including House and Senate members and 11 appointees of Gov. Michael S. Dukakis.

Reporters covering a meeting of Midwestern governors on the resort island of Mackinac Island, Mich., seemed more interested in tracking Gov. Robert Kerrey of Nebraska and actress Debra Winger.

The couple was spotted Sunday night dancing to big-band music in a lounge at the Grand Hotel and later returning from a carriage ride.

Kerrey and the chief executives of seven other states are attending the 24th annual conference.

Weather

Local

Today, there is a 20 percent chance for afternoon thunderstorms. It will increase to 30 percent tonight. On Wednesday, look for temperatures to be in the upper 90s and skies to be partly cloudy. The extended forecast calls for partly cloudy skies and fair nights.

State

Texas weather was expected to remain hot and dry statewide today as a weak trough of low pressure battled with a strong upper level high pressure system to become the state's dominant weather maker.

The trough of low pressure might be expected to bring some showers and thunderstorms while the high pressure system was expected to keep most of the state free of any precipitation or cooler weather.

Forecasts called for a few isolated late afternoon or evening showers and thunderstorms. It was to be mostly sunny throughout the day statewide and skies should remain fair tonight.

Highs were to range from the 90s to as high as near 105 in portions of North Texas and in the Big Bend area of Southwest Texas and along the Rio Grande in far South Texas. Lows tonight will again be in the 70s and possibly in the 80s. Highs Wednesday will again be mostly in the 90s, ranging upward to around 105.

Early morning temperatures were on the warm side, mostly in the 70s and lower 80s. Extremes ranged from 62 at Marfa in the Davis Mountains of Southwest Texas to a warm 86 at Dallas.

Other early morning temperatures around the state included 68 at Amarillo, 73 at Wichita Falls, 80 at Fort Worth and Waco, 78 at San Antonio, 76 at Brownsville, 78 at San Angelo, 72 at Lubbock, 74 at Midland and 70 at El Paso.

Forecast

West Texas - Mostly cloudy southwest and partly cloudy elsewhere through Wednesday. Widely scattered afternoon and evening thunderstorms, more numerous southwest and South Plains tonight. Highs Wednesday near 90 Panhandle and mountains to near 100 southeast and about 105 along the Rio Grande in the Big Bend. Lows mid 60s Panhandle to 75 southeast and the Big Bend and upper 50s in the mountains.

Police Beat

Burglars hit Highland Mall

Burglars struck two stores at the Highland Park Mall this weekend, according to reports taken by police Monday.

Joyce Boyd, owner of the Highland Card Shop, told police burglars took $400 in cash and damaged the sheet rock ceiling.

Kim Dorian, owner of KK's closet, told police someone also broke into her store but did not take anything. Both burglaries occurred between 6 p.m. Saturday and 10 a.m. Monday.

Burglars took two blue bank money bags containing $300 from the Classic Laundrymat at 1107 1/2 11th Place, according to police reports.

The burglary occurred between 10:30 p.m. Sunday and 7:30 a.m. Monday. Besides the two First National Bank money bags, the burglars also took two aprons, the report stated.

Burglars stole a video-cassette recorder, valued at $400, from Hughes Rental at 1228 W. Third between 6 p.m. Sunday and 8 a.m. Monday. Burglars also stole a sofa cushion and damaged an air vent and an evaporative cooler, the report stated.

Rhonda Balthrop of 800 Marcy told police someone she knows took a portable stereo, valued at $150, and a rented stereo, value unknown, from her residence before 9:45 p.m. Monday. The front door also was damaged.

Mary Elizabeth Ramirez of 714 Willa told police someone stole clothes, dishes, towels and a lighted makeup mirror from her house between 11 p.m. Sunday and 9 a.m. Monday. In addition, a stereo was damaged.

James Woodard of 3601 Connally told police someone slashed two tires on his car between 8:30 p.m. Monday and 1:25 a.m. today. Damage is estimated at $250.

Betty Mince of 800 Main told police burglars broke into an apartment at 1202 Wood between 6 p.m. Sunday and 3:30 p.m. Monday. Taken were a $50 washer, a $20 lamp, a $15 table and tools valued at $25.

Rosemary Hunter of 1606 Lexington told police someone stole a car battery and an AM-FM cassette player from his vehicle at midnight Monday.

Richard Mirales of 805 Johnson told police someone stole two mixed breed puppies from his house between 2 p.m. and 5 p.m. Monday. The puppies are part Doberman, according to the police report.

Sheriff's Log

Two taken to state prison

Two men were taken to prison by a Howard County sheriff's deputy Tuesday morning.

Roy Dean Boyd, 30, of the Texas Department of Correction's Ellis II Unit was transferred back to the penitentiary after returning here last week to testify in a grand jury investigation.

He is serving a sentence at the TDC after pleading guilty to a burglary charge last February.

Benny Islas, 21, of Route 1 Box 420 pleaded guilty to a revocation of probation charge last Thursday. He had been placed on probation in October 1983 after he pleaded guilty to a criminal mischief charge. He recently was arrested by Big Spring police after attempting to steal a 12-pack of beer from the 7-Eleven store at 902 Willa.

Police transferred Carlos Vega, 23, of 405 Benton to county jail after he was arrested on suspicion of driving while intoxicated. He was released on $1,500 bond.

Police transferred Ramiro Lara, 31, of 1500A Wood to county jail after he was charged with burglary of a habitation. He was released on $5,000 bond.

Marciano Gracia, 25, of 1305 Kindle was arrested by police on a peace bond warrant issued from Justice of the Peace China Long's office. He was released on $1,000 bond.

Deputies arrested Susan Gail Thompson, 23, of 1109 E. Fourth on a written order charging her with issuing a bad check. She was released on $200 bond.

gram, cleanup and a new softball field were not included in the budget councilmen discussed.

"The people want these," McEwen said. "To do these, we have to cut back on services or raise taxes. I feel like it's a 'bare bones' budget already. ... We'll be cutting into muscle and bone if we cut it."

Council members did tentatively agree to make $227,000 in cuts. Included in those measures is:

- A reduction to once-a-week garbage collection in alleys in some areas of the city.
- A freeze in a number of full-time temporary summer positions in the parks and recreation division of the public works department.

- The elimination of one animal control clerk in the police department. Police Chief Rick Turner said the post has not been filled and that dispatchers' duties would be reorganized.
- A freeze in merit pay raises.
- And the closing of the Central Fire Station next to city hall and personnel reorganization in the department. This measure, expected to save $50,000, is the bulk of the savings.

Councilmen, however, turned thumbs down on proposals to decrease from five to two the number of jailers in the police department and terminate a contract with Sharlene Sparling as the tennis pro at the Figure Seven Tennis Center.

Members also tentatively agreed to use remaining revenue-sharing funds for a new fire engine, estimated at $120,000; completion of the city's golf course sprinkler system, $50,000; renovation of city buildings for handicapped access, $40,000; partial funding of the construction of a new multi-use sports complex, estimated at $100,000 minimum; and pay off lease-purchases of equipment in 1984.

The city is required to make its buildings and functions accessible to the handicapped by Sept. 1, 1986. This would include cutting a ramp to City Hall. If council sessions were to continue being conducted in the current second floor chambers, an elevator would need to be installed.

To avoid the immediate cost of constructing an elevator — estimated at between $50,000 and $70,000 — the council could meet in the Airpark office conference room, the Municipal Auditorium, the Dora Roberts Community Center or another city building. No firm decision was reached on the issue.

Council members also discussed extending to all employees vacation and sick leave benefits comparable to those received by firefighters under state civil service.

Firemen quench mattress fire

Big Spring firemen early this morning doused a mattress fire at 1810 Goliad, according to department reports.

Damage from the fire, which extensively burned a mattress and box springs in a west bedroom, was estimated at $1,500. The room also suffered moderate smoke damage.

No cause was set for the fire. The mattress was not in use, the house's occupant, Thomas Morrison, told firemen. The house is owned by William Gill.

Firemen arrived at the scene at 6:10 a.m. and returned to the station at 7:02 a.m., the report stated.

According to job descriptions in effect before the civil service election, the fire marshal served as the assistant chief. However, job descriptions are being rewritten for the institution of state civil service.

The position of arson investigator also would be eliminated, Dorton said.

One of the lieutenants would be promoted into the training officer position, he said.

However, the other two lieutenants would be returned to a driver's rank, and two drivers would be returned to firefighter rank. The men would be allowed to retest for the position at the next vacancy.

The proposal has met with the initial approval of the city's firemen, said John Branham, president of the Big Spring Professional Firefighters Association Local 2922. The men were briefed on the proposal Monday evening, after Dorton met with councilmen.

"I don't think anyone is opposed to closing Central. Overall, the plan is a progressive plan. We give up some things, but I feel like in the future it will be worth it," Branham said.

"We are concerned about losing manpower as any department is. But this is as close to justification as you can come to," he said, referring to the city finances and what he called the "out-dated" location of Central.

Union members will have a special meeting to discuss the plan, but Branham said it initially "looks very workable."

"It was something that had to be done. This plan seems to be the best alternative or one of the better," Branham said. "I really think Chief Dorton came up with a fine idea. It's one of the best ideas to come out of the department in long time."

Once the city's population begins growing, particularly in the west part of town, the city may build a new station in that area. More manpower would be added then, too, he said.

Personal incomes rise

Americans' personal income and consumer spending both rose 0.4 percent in July, but many private economists say a slowdown in income growth will lead to less spending as the year progresses.

Meanwhile, a report Monday by the U.S. League of Savings Institutions said adjustable-rate mortgage loans account for more than half the home loans made by savings institutions. It said borrowers are choosing ARMs with interest rates linked to a more volatile index than they were using a year ago.

That could make borrowers more vulnerable to a sudden rise in rates, the study said.

About 60 percent of the 0.4 percent increase the Commerce Department reported Monday in income came from a rise in government payments. The bulk of this was $5 billion growth in retroactive Social Security payments resulting from a recalculation of benefits for people working while drawing payments.

By contrast, wages and salaries, the key factor in the economic decisions made by the average family, grew by the smallest amount this year, a slight $1.7 billion, far below the $10.8 billion June gain.

The statistics were disappointing to the Reagan administration, which is predicting a growth rebound to a 5 percent annual rate in the final six months of 1985, up sharply from the 1 percent turned in from January through June.

Dr. Ruth's new game

BALTIMORE — Dr. Ruth Westheimer and a Baltimore game manufacturer hope to send countless couples racing along the Arousal Track on their way to Mutual Pleasure.

That journey is the object of a board game called "Dr. Ruth's Game of Good Sex," which will hit the stores in September.

It is based on the radio and television call-in shows featuring the 57-year-old sex therapist, who looks and sounds more like a favorite aunt than someone who gives advice on foreplay.

The game, recommended for players 21 and older, is expected to sell for $24.95.

"It fills a function in an enjoyable way," Dr. Ruth says. "If it can replace one night of TV watching, it might be very nice for interaction."

Car injuries rated

WASHINGTON — Small two-door and Japanese cars have the worst record in crashes, while large American cars generally fare the best, the insurance industry says.

European cars, as a group, have a good injury record but tend to be more to repair following accidents, according to the insurance industry's Highway Loss Data Institute.

Aircraft engineer indicted for spying

KARLSRUHE, West Germany (AP) — Prosecutors say the former chief engineer of a West German aerospace company has been indicted on charges of providing the Soviet Union with details of a multipurpose European jet fighter.

The engineer, 61-year-old Manfred Rotsch, began spying for the Soviet Union more than 30 years ago, chief federal prosecutor Kurt Rebmann said Monday.

Rotsch was arrested in September 1984 and has been jailed ever since. The indictment on charges of espionage and revealing classified secrets, was issued Aug. 1 but only made public on Monday.

Prosecutors said Rotsch, chief engineer of the Aircraft Construction Department of Messerschmitt-Boelkow-Blom outside Munich, gave the Soviets details of the Tornado jet, a joint project of Italy, West Germany and Great Britain.

Rebmann said that Rotsch, who was born in Czechoslovakia, began spying for the Soviets in 1954 when he lived in East Berlin.

Rotsch got a job with an aircraft maker in Stuttgart in 1955 on instructions from the Soviet KGB and continued to spy for the Soviets when he went to work for a different company in 1964, Rebmann said. He began working on the Tornado project in 1970.

Federal prosecutors also said an employee of an exile group was suspected of being a spy.

Alexander Prechtel, spokesman for the prosecutor's office, said Ilse Richter, a 52-year-old bookkeeper for the Association of Exiles, disappeared Friday after telling acquaintances in Bonn she was going to visit friends in Hamburg.

Prechtel said police searched her apartment in Bonn after she failed to arrive in Hamburg.

They found a container suitable for passing secret documents and "specially prepared" shaving equipment, shoes and handbags that could have held intelligence material, Prechtel said.

The exile association is an influential lobbying group for Germans who were expelled from former German territories that now are in the Soviet bloc.

Sonja Lueneburg, 61, a longtime aide to West German Economics Minister Martin Bangemann, is believed to be a spy planted by communist East Germany. Lueneburg did not return to work Aug. 6 and investigators found in her apartment sophisticated photographic equipment for document photography.

The national newspaper Die Welt said another missing woman, an aide to Economics Minister Martin Bangemann, was suspected of being an East German spy. The woman, Sonja Lueneburg, disappeared Aug. 6.

Ferry death toll lowered to 114

PEKING (AP) — A tourist ferry that capsized in the Songhua River in Harbin city, killing at least 114 people, has been raised from the river bed with 18 bodies still in the cabin, a news report said today.

The official English-language China Daily said 60 passengers had been rescued and were being treated at 19 city hospitals.

Most passengers were residents of Harbin, a northeast industrial city in Heilongjiang Province. Initial reports indicated there were no foreigners on board, the paper said.

The overloaded ferry capsized Sunday when passengers rushed to one side to watch a fistfight, according to the Peking Evening News, which first reported the tragedy Monday and said then about 300 people drowned.

An editor at the paper said today that its story came by telegram from one of its reporters visiting Harbin. He had no explanation for the inaccuracy of the count.

China Daily said it was the worst ferry accident in China in recent years.

The official Xinhua news agency reported that five salvage teams were searching for the bodies of 114 victims and were investigating the accident.

It said provincial governor Hou Jie was directing rescue operations.

The Municipal Shipping Co. ferry had set out from Sun Island, a large recreation and convalescence haven in the middle of the river, when the accident occurred midstream. The island is visited by thousands of people on summer weekends.

Car bomb war spreads

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Lebanon's "car bomb war" spread to the northern port of Tripoli today with two blasts that reportedly caused dozens of casualties.

In Beirut, Christian and Moslem artillery and rocket duels, which began with a pair of devastating car bombings Monday, killed 23 people and wounded 113, police said today.

The Tripoli blasts, three minutes and 150 yards apart, occurred outside the homes of two senior leaders of the Jundallah, or the Soldiers of God, a fundamentalist Sunni Moslem militia armed and financed by the Palestine Liberation Organization.

The witnesses identified the Jundallah leaders as Sheikh Kanaan Najj and Sheikh Abdel-Karim Badawi. It was unclear if they were hurt.

Tripoli, Lebanon's second largest city of 500,000 people, is 50 miles north of Beirut. The witnesses could not give an exact casualty toll, but said there were "dozens killed or wounded" in the blasts that began at 12:27 p.m. They said thick black smoke and orange flames could be seen in the Abu Samra neighborhood.

On Monday, two car bombs exploded in Moslem west Beirut, killing 29 people and wounded 82. An anonymous caller claimed responsibility on behalf of Lebanon's Christians and said the bombings were in retaliation for recent two car bombs in Christian east Beirut.

A Moslem radio station in Beirut dubbed the exchanges "the car bomb war." It was unclear if there was any connection between the Tripoli and Beirut car bombings.

Pope returns home

ROME — Pope John Paul II returned home from Africa today, elated by the tumultuous welcome he received in Morocco from tens of thousands of clapping, cheering Moslems.

The reception John Paul was given in Morocco on Monday, where he became the first Roman Catholic pontiff to set foot on Arab soil as an official state guest, was the most enthusiastic of his 12-day tour of seven African countries.

"It opened a new chapter in the relations between the Roman Catholic Church and Islam," said Vatican spokesman Joaquin Navarro. "The pope is very satisfied."

Crash probe launched

TOKYO — The Transport Ministry said today it was launching a broad investigation of Japan Air Lines in an effort to allay public fears resulting from the deaths of 520 people in last week's crash of a JAL jumbo jet.

Transport Minister Tokuo Yamashita addressed the Diet, or Parliament, today and said the probe "is just begun, and I cannot say at this stage when we will find a cause" behind the Aug. 12 crash on a remote mountaintop in central Japan.

VA system investigated

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's largest medical system, the Veterans Administration, is beset on two fronts with separate investigations into its physicians' licenses and the alleged coziness between employees and a drug company.

At least 49 VA doctors have been identified by the American Medical Association as having had their medical licenses revoked, suspended or restricted, officials of the AMA said Monday.

In a separate matter, the VA said between 75 and 100 employees accepted gifts, speaking fees and other favors from Smith Kline & French Laboratories.

Women Break Into New Field With H&R Block Tax Course

Women across America are moving into the business world by learning income tax preparation skills.

Learning a skill like income tax preparation is a good way to open up career opportunities and help save money at tax time, as well.

H&R Block, the world's largest income tax preparation service, is offering a basic income tax course starting September 3 with morning and evening classes available. Courses are ideal for those interested in increasing their tax knowledge. No prerequisites are required to enroll.

Classes are held over a 13-week period. An experienced Block instructor will guide students through all phases of income tax preparation. Classwork will include discussion, practice problems and actual experience preparing individual tax returns. New tax laws will be explained.

Skills learned in the H&R Block Income Tax Course could be the key to entrance into the business world as a way to earn extra money or qualify for a possible job interview with H&R Block. Many people feel that the freedom of flexible hours, Block, however, is under no obligation to offer employment, nor are graduates under any obligation to accept employment with H&R Block.

One low fee covers all textbooks, supplies and tax forms required for class. Certificates and 7.5 continuing education units will be awarded upon completion of the course. Also, the cost of the course may be tax deductible.

Registration forms and a brochure for the income tax course may be obtained by contacting the H&R Block office at 1512 Gregg. Dial 263-1931.

Time to get tough on loan defaults

The federal government is finally getting serious about collecting the $4 billion or so owed it by student-loan defaulters. The U.S. Department of Education recently notified these deadbeats that they will have 60 days to begin repayment or to make arrangements to pay their debts. Thereafter, the IRS will start withholding federal tax refunds due the defaulters, up to the total owed, beginning with the 1985 tax year.

This long-overdue crackdown was authorized by Congress, which has become increasingly restive about the burgeoning federal deficit. Indeed, the Department of Health and Human Services and the IRS have already launched a successful pilot program of withholding federal tax refunds from parents with delinquent child-support payments. To date, the IRS has pared some $221 million from their 1984 tax returns.

The Education Department began using private collection agencies to recover delinquent debts in 1981. Thus far, the department has recouped more than $400 million in outstanding loans. The government is also garnishing the wages and pensions of the 46,000 current or retired federal workers who owe nearly $65 million in unpaid student loans.

Nevertheless, there are an estimated 1 million student-loan defaulters who have eluded the department's collection efforts. The IRS should prove particularly helpful in recovering the money owed Uncle Sam.

Most of the defaulters are beneficiaries of the Guaranteed Student Loan program wherein the government guarantees repayment of the money that students borrow from banks. The remainder have received federal funds directly from the college via the National Defense Student Loan program.

These defaulters gouge the taxpayer and deplete the pool of money available to needy students who depend upon federal loans or loan guarantees to further their education. Accordingly, we applaud the Education Department and the IRS as they get tough with those individuals who refuse to meet their financial obligations.

Art Buchwald

It's all in the handshake

(Whilst Art Buchwald is on vacation he reprints some columns from the past.)

A diplomatic reception in Moscow has tremendous significance, not only because of the good food and free liquor, but because it is where most foreign observers learn what is going on in the Soviet Union.

I attended a large diplomatic cocktail party at one of the foreign embassies recently, and I was amazed at what the professional Kremlin-watchers got out of it.

This is how the conversation went later on in the evening, when everyone was comparing notes:

"Did you notice Golovsky arrived after Kubinsky?"

"That's very interesting, because at the Fourth of July party at the American Embassy Kubinsky arrived after Golovsky."

"And at the Fourteenth of July party at the French Embassy they came together."

"Very significant. By the way, did anyone see Petrov shake hands with Puchinsky?"

"I was going to call that to your attention. It's strange that Petrov should shake hands with Puchinsky when the last time they met, Petrov only nodded at Puchinsky."

"Perhaps Puchinsky's star is rising in the Presidency."

"Or maybe Petrov's star is falling."

"I think we have overlooked the real significance of the handshake. It is not that Petrov shook hands with Puchinsky, but Puchinsky's wife did not talk to Petrov's wife."

"Are you sure?"

Of course I'm sure. Puchinsky's wife turned her back on Petrov's wife to say hello to Bolgonov's wife. It was a deliberate snub."

"That's very interesting. But to me the most important thing that happened at the reception was that Bolgonov was drunk and spilled vodka all over Marshal Igorvich's uniform."

"What is so important about that?"

"Igorvich was the one who apologized."

"Bolgonov's star must be rising faster than we thought."

"No doubt about it. Marshal Igorvich even went and got Bolgonov another vodka."

"Did Bolgonov spill anything else on Igorvich's uniform?"

"No, but he stepped on the Marshal's foot and wouldn't get off it."

"I wonder if this means they're going to make Bolgonov Minister of Defense?"

"He's obviously in for something big. I've never seen Marshal Igorvich allow someone to stand on his foot for so long."

"Did anyone see Zubeikin at the party?"

"You mean the Tashkent poet who was ousted from the Writer's Union for writing a poem attacking the traffic policemen on Gorsky Street?"

"That's the one. He's been rehabilitated and is now permitted to write anything he wants, provided he doesn't ask anyone to publish it."

"The Writer's Union must be going through one of their liberal periods again."

"I don't know if this means anything, but Kavasky spoke to me."

"That is significant because Kavasky never speaks to foreigners. What did he say?"

"I asked him about the Polish problems and he replied, 'I'm sorry, I never speak to foreigners.'"

"Did anyone notice that Gogol spilled vodka on Mutiken?"

"It means nothing. Everyone in Moscow spills vodka on Mutiken. He's become a regular bar rag."

Art Buchwald's humor and satire is distributed nationally by Los Angeles Times Syndicate.

Agency defies extinction

Question: Name three creatures that have defied the natural extinction process.

Answer: The Horseshoe Crab, the Galapagos Tortoise and the California Debris Commission.

Learned people can explain why the Horseshoe Crab and the Galapagos Tortoise have survived, but the longevity of the California Debris Commission is a puzzle. It is a government entity and, as with so many other creatures of that species, it does not expire easily. Like the snakes down South, you have to cut off its head and beat it with a stick, and it still won't die until the sun goes down.

A bureaucratic adjunct of the Army Corps of Engineers, the California Debris Commission was created during Grover Cleveland's second administration to regulate the hydraulic gold mining industry.

Miners, having graduated from pans, picks and shovels, were unearthing veins of gold by washing down hillsides with streams of water. The resulting debris poured into streams and rivers and inundated farms. Following torrential rain storms in 1862, according to historians, the San Joaquin Valley became an ocean of mud and gravel.

After three decades of lobbying, farmers and shippers who wanted to preserve the navigability of California's rivers won a court battle that banned hydraulic mining. Within 10 years, the nation's gold reserves dipped below the $100 million mark and the "Panic of 1893" ensued. Railroads went into receivership; 600 banks folded; and 15,000 other commercial houses went broke.

Congress leaped to the rescue and created the California Debris Commission to resuscitate and regulate the gold mining industry. The three commissioners, all high-ranking officers from the Army Corps of Engineers, began issuing mining permits and requiring the construction of dams and stone walls to contain the debris.

The commissioners got no salary (other than their Army pay), required no staff, had no office and no stationery. In 92 years, their expenditures totaled only $3 million, or about $80 million, depending on how the figures are interpreted.

But hydraulic gold mining is a practice of the past and has been for 30 years or more. The commission's powers were considerably diminished by flood control and clean water legislation. During the 1970s, it had only one mining permit on file. The wording of its annual report hasn't changed significantly since 1962. It hasn't spent a dime for 20 years.

"It's kind of unique," said Mike Helm, chief of operations for the Sacramento district of the Army Engineers, "that you've got a commission that is no burden on the taxpayers whatever."

When Gen. Paul Kavanaugh became chief engineer for the Sacramento district in 1979, he automatically became a commissioner. "Somebody informed me I was a member of the California Debris Commission," he told our reporter Kenneth Reid, "and I thought I was going to be a glorified junk man."

A wise person, Kavanaugh convened the commission and recommended it vote to dissolve itself. The notion carried, and a historian, Joseph Hagwood, was chosen to chronicle the commission's achievements.

The recommendation for abolishment slowly climbed the Army chain of command and finally, in February 1985, the Army asked Congress to close the coffin lid over the commission.

The requisite language was inserted into a massive water bill, which was approved by the House Public Works and Transportation Committee this month. A Congressional source said it has to be considered by four other committees before it hits the House floor, some day this fall.

Even then, the critter probably won't die until the sun goes down.

APRICOTS A PLENTY: The Agriculture Department is considering the purchase of 500,000 cases of apricot juice, on top of the 400,000 cases of canned apricots it has already purchased. The sale is being pushed by unhappy apricot growers, who say that huge surpluses, and costly government safety standards have left them in a bind. Growers are hoping that the government will offer the extra apricots for the federally funded school-lunch program. The Agriculture Department, which has budgeted $350 million to buy commodities for school lunches, has also given priority to peaches, green beans and cherries.

CAUGHT IN THE CROSS FIRE: Forty American technicians have been stranded by South Africa's state of emergency. They went there last year to work in South Africa's nuclear power plants without realizing that those jobs required special clearance by the U.S. Department of Energy.

The workers say they were never told about the special clearance. Federal officials, after a fact-finding trip to South Africa, decided not to give the technicians the OK, a decision that wasn't announced until last month. The South African government says it won't pay their way back to the U.S., and the American ambassador has been called home and therefore isn't around to help.

MINI-EDITORIAL: We have a great deal of respect for retiring Budget Director David Stockman, but he is not the Oracle of Delphi. We suspect the publishers who bid up the price tag for his prospective memoirs to $2 million are the same people who tinkered with the taste of Coke.

Jack Anderson's investigative report from Washington is distributed by United Feature Syndicate.

Billy Graham

Communists get sermons

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: Several months ago I saw the television special on your visit to the Soviet Union. It was interesting to see you preach there, but I don't understand why you go to communist countries. I know these countries don't believe in God. — Mrs. T.P.

DEAR MRS. T.P.: It is true that communist countries are ruled by an atheist philosophy, which denies the existence of God. However, there are still many Christians in those countries, in spite of the pressures often put on the churches. Therefore, one reason I have gone to these countries has been to encourage the believers and to let them know that Christians in other parts of the world are praying for them and are concerned about them.

But my main reason for going has been to preach the Gospel of Jesus Christ, just as I have done in other parts of the world. In Matthew 28, Jesus gave His "marching orders" to His disciples: "Go and make disciples of all nations" (Matthew 28:19). He gave the same command in Mark 16:15: "Go into all the world and preach the good news to all creation." He did not say, "Go only to some nations," or "Go only to the capitalist nations" — His command was to go to all nations. The Roman Empire of Jesus's day was pagan and often hostile to the Christian faith, yet God used committed men and women to touch many lives for Christ.

As you read this, it is very possible that God will have again opened doors for another opportunity to preach the Gospel in eastern Europe. Our prayer is that many will come to Christ — just as they have done in the other countries we have visited. Pray for us as we return to this part of the world. There are many people all over the world today who are spiritually hungry. We who know Christ need to share with them the good news that Christ brings forgiveness and new life to all who turn to Him.

Dr. Donohue

Who says it's a ringworm?

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I've been suffering from ringworm for three months. I've been using an antifungal cream from the drugstore, and it isn't working. I now have it on my right shoulder and my right breast, below it. It's also around my neck. It seems to be spreading. What kind of medicine would help me? It is also very itchy. — Miss B.T.

I think there's a good chance you are a victim of erroneous self-diagnosis. Let me paint the ringworm picture for you. And of course, as you know, there is no worm involved at all. Some people think there is. Ringworm starts as a pinkish oval patch that enlarges to form a ring pattern with red border and more normal-colored skin in the center. It may itch but it shouldn't hurt. The medicine you selected (named in another part of your note) is an effective trade product. It often gets rid of ringworm.

I base my suggestion of misdiagnosis, on two facts: you complain of an itching and the usually-effective medicine isn't helping. There may be something else going on.

I think you need to have a skin scraping performed. If there is a fungus present, the doctor can identify it under a microscope. If that is the case, then he can prescribe a more potent medicine to help. But I really doubt your ringworm theory, and I cannot, without a look at it, tell you what is happening to cause these signs.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: What is the difference between male pattern baldness and alopecia areata that you wrote about recently? What is the medicine being mentioned in the health magazine as a hair grower? — W.E.

Male pattern baldness (androgenic alopecia) is the kind many men develop, usually at middle age. It produces the residual "horseshoe ring" of hair around the back of the head and at the temples. This kind of hair loss is usually permanent and is, as the name implies, due to androgen (testosterone) production.

Alopecia areata is, literally, "patchy baldness." Hair lost in this way tends to return spontaneously. The cause is not fully understood.

Now the drug to which you refer is, I'm sure, minoxidil, which is used primarily for treatment of high blood pressure. Its hair-regrowth potential is still being studied to confirm some earlier encouraging reports. Results from use (in lotion form) have been mixed so far, with some success reported in treating the male pattern-type baldness chiefly. For your other questions, see the booklet "Good Health for Your Hair," which other readers may order by writing me care of the Big Spring Herald, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope and 50 cents for printing and handling.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I went to the doctor to have him look at some growths I had on my back — upper back and back of the shoulders. He said they were only lipomas and that if I wanted them removed it could be done. Is it wise to have them off? Are they possibly pre-cancerous? — Mrs. B.B.

Lipomas are fatty deposits. They are not pre-cancerous. If they are bothersome, either cosmetically or as a physical annoyance (if they chafe on bra straps, for example), they can be removed easily. You were wise to have the lumps looked at and identified for what they are. It is NOT wise to assume on your own a lump is a fatty growth.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I have to know how far the kidneys are from the urinary bladder. — I.T.

About 12 inches. I'm dying to know why you need to know.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: In the office where I work your column is never missed. Now I would like some insight into my problem. I have what is called polymyalgia rheumatica. I could not move my head or my right leg. My sedimentation blood rate went way up. I was started on prednisone and am now on a maintenance dose. What causes this condition? I have been on medicine for seven months. Will it clear up and how long will it take? — Miss K.S.

Don't let the term fool you. It has nothing to do with rheumatoid arthritis. Polymyalgia refers to inflammation of many muscles. There's pain and weakness of the affected muscles, most often of those in the shoulder, hip, and thigh. The sed rate is the lab test done to help in diagnosis. Elevation indicates inflammation in the body.

Polymyalgia usually is found in people over 50. Happily, most patients recover. The response to steroids is usually prompt, but treatment may have to go on for up to two years. That's to prevent any possible recurrence.

With polymyalgia rheumatica you have to be alert to a second illness that sometimes accompanies it — temporal arteritis. That's inflammation of the arteries at the side of the head. The threat is of potential eye involvement, so treatment must be prompt at the first sign of temporalartery inflammation. Blindness can result. However, this, too, usually responds well to the steroid medicine as do the muscular symptoms.

Dear Abby

Mother feels lost without dad

DEAR ABBY: Last January, my father left home. My mother came back from shopping one day and all Dad's clothes were gone. She found a note saying, "Thanks for nothing, kid. I'll be seeing ya."

Abby, my father is 56 years old, and to tell you the truth, he wasn't the world's greatest father. He used to hit us kids with a belt and he was never around when we needed him. Mom really raised us.

Dad stops by the house on Sunday to give Mom a measly $150 to survive for the week. He keeps telling her he'll be back when he "finds himself"; meanwhile the talk around town is that he has another woman.

I can honestly say I don't miss him, but there is one fine woman who can't go on without him: our mother. She's lost 28 pounds since January, she doesn't eat right and she cries for hours every day.

When I was a kid growing up, Dad would come home from work, take his shoes off and read your column, so, Dad, if you're reading this now, please come home. You and Mom have been through a lot together the last 30 years. Why quit now? We want to become a family again.

ONE OF SIX IN WAYNE, N.J.

DEAR ONE: It will take more than a letter in this column to reunite your family. Your grieving mother needs professional counseling to help her cope with this abandonment. You can best help her by investigating the available options in your community. Call your local social services or mental health facility. The people there will guide you. Insist that your mother get into therapy to become "whole" again. Your father's returning home is secondary.

DEAR ABBY: After a person dies, do the nails and hair continue to grow? I heard they do, but I can't believe it.

BILL JONES

DEAR BILL: Nothing grows after death. The skin shrinks, however, creating the illusion that growth has taken place.

DEAR ABBY: I have been having a dispute with my brother-in-law and would appreciate your comments.

Briefly, he asked me to sign something, and I told him I would have to read it first because I never sign anything without reading it. (It was a petition.)

He became very upset, said he was "insulted," and inferred that I didn't trust him. Nothing could have been further from the truth.

I do trust him, and he had no reason to be insulted; I just want to know what I'm signing.

RIGHT OR WRONG?

DEAR RIGHT: Right! You're the kind of person every lawyer would like to have for a client.

DEAR ABBY: We know you're bombarded with questions.

Your mail likely runs into tons. After picking the questions to answer, Must they always be answered with puns?

Your wisdom we value most highly.

Your witty responses are fun. We love you, Dear Abby — but spare us

The silly, nonsensical pun! TOM IN CAMBRIDGE

DEAR TOM: Writing would be much less fun. Without the "nonsensical" pun.

I know you abhor it. But others adore it. You lose — by 10 million to one.

DEAR ABBY: Now it's 10 million to three, as both my husband and I think your puns sound like a 16-year-old smartale.

We are 68 and 69. THE DEXTERS

Business women's club hosts recent picnic

The Business and Professional Women's Club hosted their annual picnic for 50 Big Spring State Hospital patients and staff members Aug. 13 at Comanche Trail Park.

About 30 club members attended the event in addition to patients and staff. Mamie Roberts gave the invocation.

Larry Shaw, a Knott farmer, donated cantalopes for the picnic. Dick Shortes, an Ackerly farmer, donated a number of watermelons for the event.

The Hot Potato Band, a group from the Spring City Senior Citizens Center, entertained during the picnic. The band is composed of wash tubs, spoons, rub boards, small toy horns and dish pans. Helen Green played a portable organ. Joe Mitchell is director of the band.

Band members range from ages 62 to 80.

Sew and Chatter Club members prepare quilt for family

The Sew and Chatter Club met Aug. 14 in the home of Mrs. Lawrence Robinson.

Ten members worked on a quilt that was pieced by the club members. The quilt will be given to a needy family.

Members agreed to continue assisting the West Side Center and the Northside Community Center. Birthdays of Bernice Davis, Norma Murdock and Ruby Rowe were observed.

The next meeting is Aug. 28.

American Legion Auxiliary members install officers

Officers for the Big Spring American Legion Auxiliary Unit 506 were installed recently.

Officers are Lillian Rhyne, president; Olean Melton, vice president; Annie Bransom, secretary and treasurer; Ann Mackey, sergeant at arms; and Mattie Roberts, chaplain.

Jean Graham was welcomed as a new member. Annie Bransom reported on an Austin workshop for newly elected district presidents and vice presidents.

It was announced that the National American Legion will hold their convention in New Orleans next week.

Dr. Samuel Vainisi of Chicago, one of only about 100 animal eye doctors in the country, examines "Gussie," a great horned owl, as Brookfield Zoo senior keeper Joan Daniels watches.

Animal eye doctor aids strange beasts

CHICAGO (AP) — When Samuel Vainisi breaks the ice at a cocktail party with a tale of a killer whale with too much sun in its eyes, his friends know it's more than just talk.

Vainisi is a veterinarian with a speciality in ophthalmology, one of a growing number of animal doctors who are looking into the eyes of some rather strange beasts.

Take Orca, Marineland's killer whale, for example. The whale had "an eye problem caused by too much sunlight," Vainisi said. "It opened its mouth and all I could see was teeth. It was trained, but even a trained 8,000-pound whale can be frightening."

Every time Vainisi neared the whale's eye, its trainer would yell, "Get back!"

"Finally I asked why she kept telling me to get back. She said that two weeks earlier the whale had taken its former trainer and held him under water for 12 minutes.

The next time I went, I didn't try to get so close."

Then there was the time Vainisi gave a red-tailed hawk cardiopulmonary resuscitation 20,000 feet above Milwaukee as startled jet passengers looked on.

"I could hear him regurgitating (as he perched next to him in a cage), so I put him on the floor of the plane and started resuscitation."

"It must have been a funny sight, me giving CPR on the floor of the plane to a hawk with a 6-foot wingspan," Vainisi said recently.

"I remember one of the other passengers said, 'My Gawd, it must have flown in the window.'"

For all the drawbacks, Vainisi, 54, says he wouldn't change jobs for the world with his brother, who deals with another rare breed.

Jerry Vainisi is general manager of the Chicago Bears of the National Football League.

"I leave that species to him," Vainisi said.

Timex knew nothing of Niagara Falls stunt

NIAGARA FALLS, Ontario (AP) — The watch that daredevil Steven T. Trotter wore when he went over Niagara Falls in a barrel was a Timex and, just like the commercials said, it took a licking and kept on ticking.

But only time will tell if he will receive any money for the unsolicited endorsement.

Spokesmen for the American and Canadian branches of the watch company said Monday that, despite the appearance of the Timex logo on Trotter's barrel during Sunday's stunt, neither company knew in advance of Trotter's plan.

"The first I heard of it was on the morning news," said Mike Jacobi, vice-president for marketing and sales at the Timex Group Ltd. in Waterbury, Conn.

"We think it's great someone went over the falls in a barrel and proved our watch," he said, adding: "I'd like to see what (video) he has" for possible use in a commercial.

"We get a lot of letters where people do individual things (to test the watches), but this was more spectacular than the ones we usually get," Jacobi said.

Trotter, 22, of Barrington, R.I., faces arraignment Aug. 28 in Ontario Provincial Court and a maximum fine of $500 on a charge of performing an illegal stunt.

Humane Society wants to change law

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Rebuffed in its bid to overturn a state law — one of six in the country mandating sale of pound animals for medical research — the Utah Humane Society has joined a national campaign to ban the practice.

"Shelters were established to be a sanctuary for animals, not a warehouse for medical research," said Margaret Gordon, society educational counselor.

In Utah, Minnesota, Oklahoma, South Dakota, Ohio and Iowa, pounds are legally required to sell surplus animals for research, she said.

That is something the Humane Society is determined to change, despite a setback earlier this year when the Utah Legislature refused to act on a petition containing 25,000 names seeking an end to the requirement.

Research institutions defend animal experimentation as a tool without which many of mankind's medical advances could not have been made.

Each year, nearly 300,000 dogs and 150,000 cats die in experiments across the country, the national Humane Society estimates.

The society's state chapter is lobbying with the national Pro Pet Coalition for a federal ban on use of pound animals in research, Ms. Gordon said.

The University of Utah spends about $15 each for the 850 dogs and 300 cats it uses yearly in experiments that have ranged from cardiovascular research to studies of epilepsy, genetics and innovations in the treatment of fractures.

"We're certainly concerned about what (a pound animal ban) will end up doing to research," said Dwight Bird, coordinator of animal care at the school's vivarium, which buys and cares for the experimental animals.

University of Utah researchers are not using pets, but animals doomed to die anyway after exceeding shelters' holding periods, Bird said. "We haven't felt bad about using cats and dogs that are going to be put to sleep. No one's asking for people to turn in their pets for research."

At least one public shelter is not complying with the Utah law. Since June 1982, Salt Lake County has turned down requests for research animals.

"Technically, yes, there's no question we're violating (the law)," said Animal Control Director Mike McFarland. "The university calls us four or five times a year. Our response is that we have none available."

Rather than sell the animals to researchers last year, Salt Lake County put to sleep 2,762 dogs and 2,112 cats, McFarland said.

Surprisingly, he said, since the county adopted its rebellious policy, increased public cooperation more than offset the loss of $1,000 a year earned from sales to researchers.

In 1984, nearly half the 5,131 dogs and a third of the 3,033 cats impounded were claimed by their owners. Before the policy change, the figure was about 15 percent.

Bird said he understands the public's distaste for some aspects of animal research, particularly when pain is inflicted.

Steers open fall practice

By CHARLIE ALCORN

Head coach Quinn Eudy and his football staff welcomed over 60 prospective Steers football players to the gridiron as preseason two-a-day workouts started Monday for Big Spring and the rest of the 5A high schools around the state Monday.

All 5A high schools start workouts a week later than lower classified schools to compensate for the spring drills that 5A teams are allowed to conduct.

The Steers will be working out in shorts and helmets through Thursday, brushing up on their offensive and defensive game plans and working the soreness out of tight muscles.

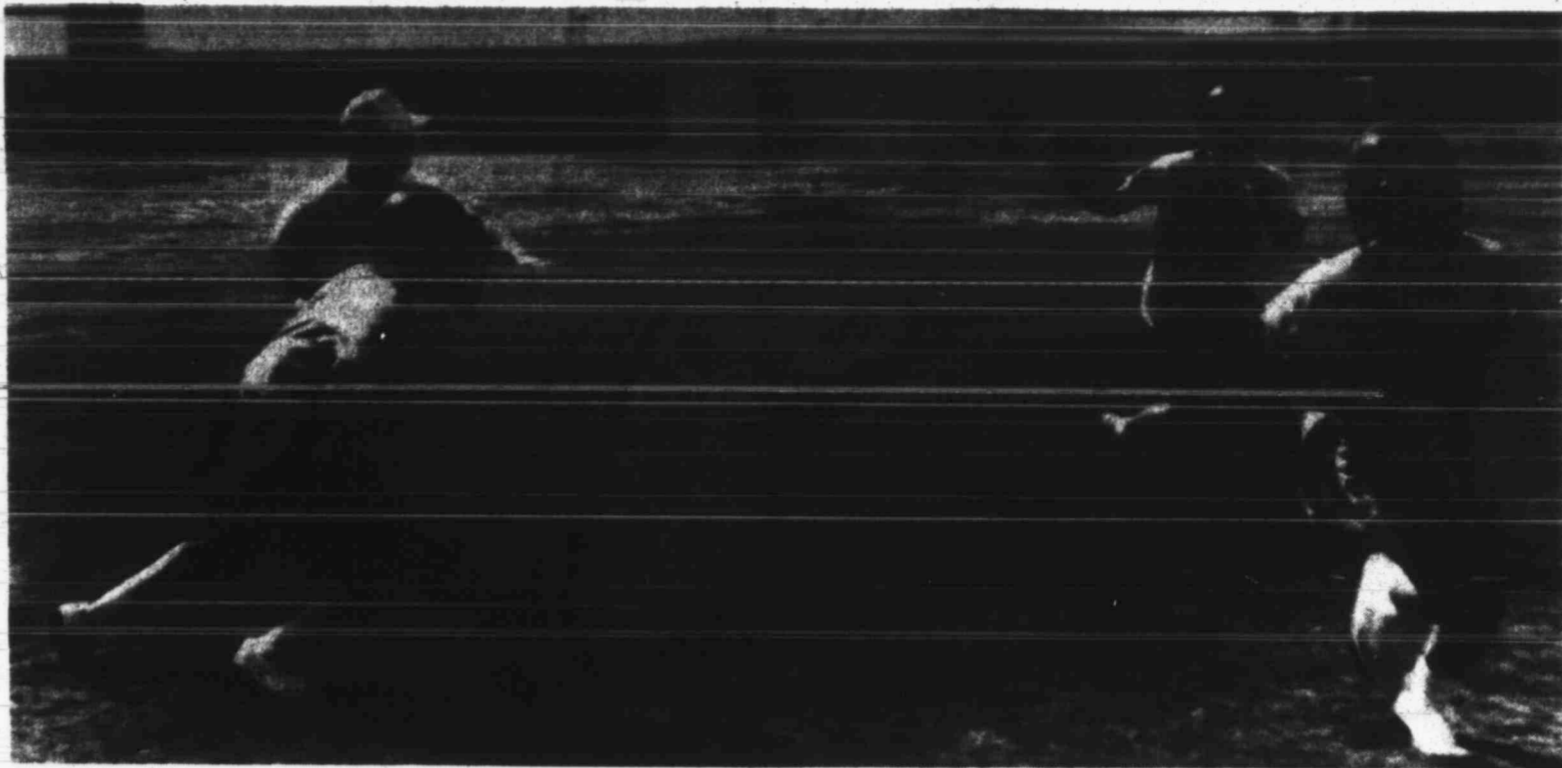

Eudy is happy with the condition of his returning Steers, the residual effect of a tough spring and summer weight and running program are readily apparent. "The boys came in with a real good attitude today," commented Eudy. "We really worked 'em hard this spring and they've come back with a lot of enthusiasm."

Eudy has the team split up with the junior varsity and varsity players working out together and freshman and sophomores forming the other squad. The coach has also brought up five sophomores to practice with the varsity. "I think that each one of these kids has a chance to start this year. Not all of them will, but they've all got an opportunity to contribute," said Eudy.

One especially promising underclassman is sophomore running back Charles White, who added substantial bulk off-season to go along with 4.6 40 yard speed. Eudy is also looking to use White at defensive end, where his size and speed will be used best. "We're excited about having a kid with Charles' potential running behind an experienced line."

Eudy has simplified the offensive scheme, scrapping the drop-back style passing game in favor of play-action passing that will better complement the experienced line and hopefully potent running game. "What we would like to do, ideally, would be to establish a running game and then pass when least expected. We would like to pass about 30 percent of the time, but you can't have that type of game plan if your through Thursday and will have their first live scrimmage Friday afternoon.

always "forced" into passing situations.

Whether on offense or defense, Eudy's troops will certainly be in good condition. A self-proclaimed "conditioning fanatic" Eudy has devised a circuit training program consisting of four five minute stations using weights, agility running, intermediate sprints and cones instead of the usual wind sprint conditioning to get his athletes in playing shape quickly. "I mix up the routine depending on what I want the kids to concentrate on," explains Eudy. "If we're working on offense, then I'll wait until the end of practice for the circuit so the boys can concentrate better. If we're practicing defense I'll usually have them run the circuit at the beginning or the middle of practice so they can get used to reacting while fatigued."

Eudy's philosophy is that there is no substitute for conditioning in a winning program. "A team with as little depth as ours cannot afford to be out of shape, especially at the start of the season. We won a couple of games early last year because we were in better shape, not 'cause we had better athletes." Come September 6, when the Steers host Snyder in the first game of the season, look to see which team is dragging in the fourth quarter. After Eudy's two-a-days, you can bet it won't be the Steers.

Streaking Orioles sweep Rangers, 9-2

BALTIMORE (AP) - The Baltimore Orioles should find out soon if winning eight of their last nine games, including the last six in a row, has any real significance.

When they open an eight-game roadtrip in Seattle tonight, the Orioles could be starting a quick descent to reality after mopping up against Texas Rangers and the Cleveland Indians, the two worst clubs in the American League.

"That doesn't make any difference," Manager Earl Weaver said of the quality of the recent opposition after the Orioles walloped Texas 9-2 Monday to complete a four-game sweep. "We might do the same thing against New York and Detroit, too. We'll have to wait and see."

But Texas, with six consecutive losses and 15 defeats in 18 games, hardly qualifies as a true test for Baltimore's hoped-for stretch drive. The Orioles have a 37-11 edge over the Rangers in the last four seasons, and outscored them 42-10 while taking six straight at home this year.

"What are you going to do?" asked Texas Manager Bobby Valentine rhetorically. "I think maybe they just wanted it a little more than we did. I've got to keep from letting that attitude prevail."

"I think it's a lot easier to wait for something bad to happen than to make something good happen," said Valentine after three walks and two Texas errors helped the Orioles score six runs in the fifth inning and take a 6-2 lead.

Mike Mason, given a starting chance when Sunday's postponement was scheduled as a make-up game on an expected off day, left five Orioles stranded in the first two innings and escaped a jam in the fourth because of faulty Baltimore base running.

But Mason was lifted quickly in the fifth after Alan Wiggins walked and came around to score on singles by Lee Lacy and Cal Ripken Jr. After that, it was mostly downhill for the Rangers.

"When Mason walked the leadoff hitter, it was a bad sign," Valentine said. "A lot of weird things happened."

On a 3-1 pitch to Eddie Murray by reliever Greg Harris, Lacy stole third and continued home when third baseman Steve Buechele failed to cover the bag in time to grab the throw from catcher Geno Petralli.

Petralli was charged with an error when the ball hit the bag and rolled into left field. Ripken reached third on the play, and Murray's RBI single put the Orioles ahead 3-2.

Before the weird inning ended, two more walks, a throwing error by Buechele, and an RBI single by Wiggins accounted for three more runs.

The rally marked the 20th time this season the Orioles had scored five or more runs in an inning. And, when Jim Dwyer rapped a two-run triple and scored on Floyd Rayford's single in the eighth, Baltimore reached the eight-run plateau for the 31st time.

But Weaver was more excited about the six-hit pitching of rookie Ken Dixon, 6-3, who notched his first complete game since April 25, and the recent turnaround of Baltimore's starters who have a 2.72 earned run average during the winning streak.

"Maybe we have our pitching straightened out," Weaver said, "and maybe we don't, but it sure has been coming around the last eight or nine games."

Texas, which has lost nine of its last 10 road games and has 10 more scheduled on its current trip, scored on a solo homer by Gary Ward in the second and an RBI single in the fifth by Curtis Wilkerson.

Young Darling gets birthday victory

MONTREAL (AP) - Ron Darling figured the odds were in his favor.

Bothered by an abscessed tooth, Darling awoke 30 minutes before game time after sleeping in the New York Mets clubhouse for four hours.

After clearing the sleep from his eyes, he went out and held the Montreal Expos to no runs on four hits over seven innings. When the Mets pushed across a run in the eighth, Darling, 11-5, was a 1-0 winner in the only game played in the National League Monday.

"I knew the good Lord wouldn't give me both a toothache and a loss on my birthday," said Darling who turned 25, an event the Mets celebrated with helium balloons around his locker.

It was the combination of pinch-hitter Danny Heep and Wally Backman who delivered a birthday present in the form of a run.

Expos starter Bryn Smith had shut down New York on three hits through the first seven innings — extending the Mets scoreless string to 17 innings. But he was removed for pinch-hitter Scot Thompson in the seventh and Tim Burke, riding a team-record-tying eight-game winning streak, relieved.

With none out Heep drilled a double into the right-field gap, a place, he said, "where I couldn't have hit it any better." Heep then moved to third on a groundout to second base by Len Dykstra.

With Montreal center fielder Herm Winningham playing shallow against Backman, who is not considered a power threat, the second baseman drove a pitch over Winningham's head. The double allowed Heep to coast home with the winning run.

"That's a situation most hitters should thrive on, and I don't mind being in it," said Backman. "It was a good pitch, a slider down and in, but I was able to make good, solid contact."

Burke, 8-1, also felt he had delivered a good pitch under the circumstances.

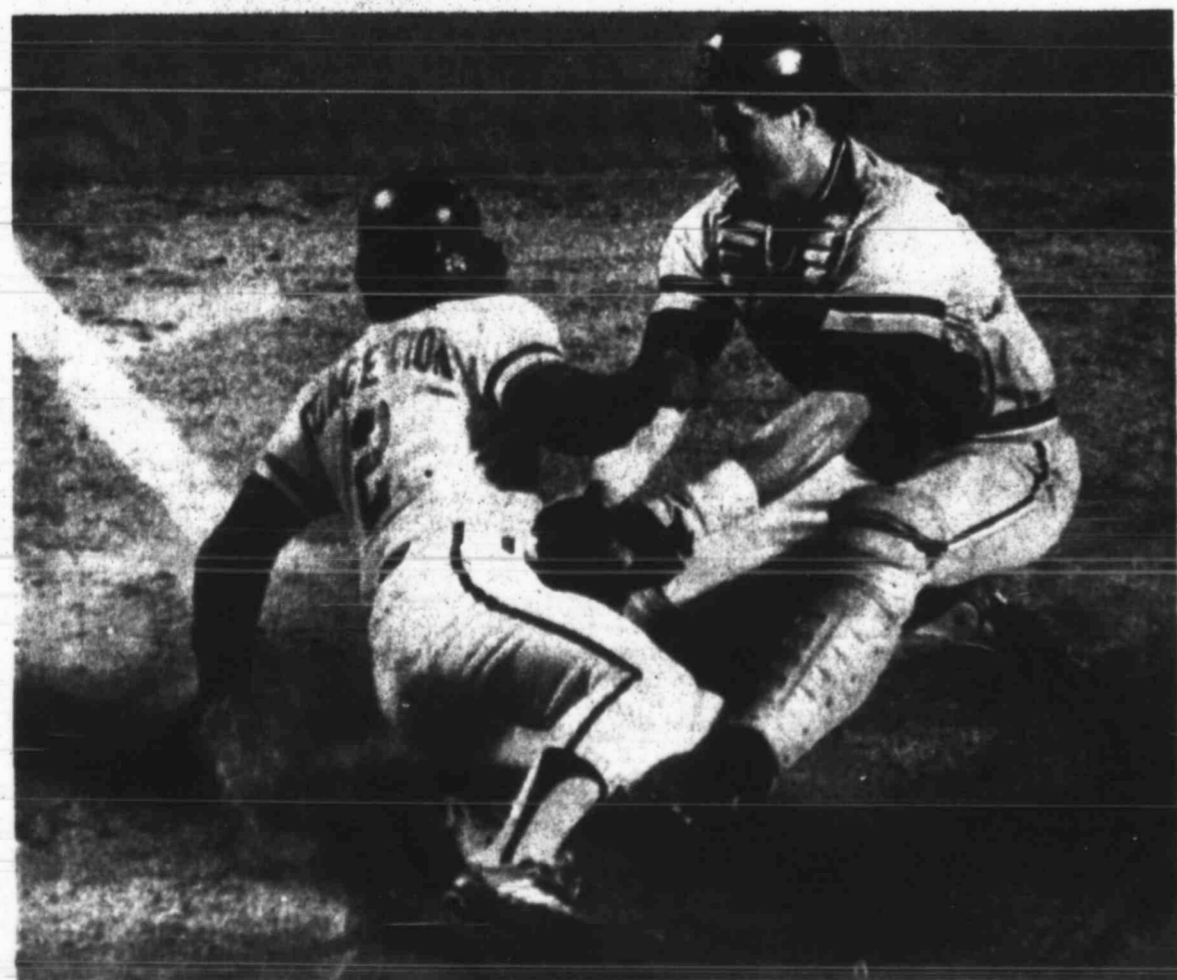

"I didn't think he had that much power," he said.

Burke blamed himself, however, for his offering to Heep. "It was a fastball right down the middle instead of being inside."

Asked about the end of his winning string, Burke said: "I knew it had to come. I would have referred it wasn't in so important a game."

Roger McDowell, who relieved Darling, retired the six Expos he faced for his 11th save.

The loss dropped Montreal five games behind the Mets in the National League East. New York was at Olympic Stadium for only one game, a makeup of one of the two contests postponed by the players' strike earlier in the month.

Kansas City Royals' ONIX CONCEPTION, pinch running for STEVE BALBONI, slides across homeplate with the winning run in the tenth inning Monday evening in the Royals 2-1 victory over the Detroit Tigers.

Leeper's hit sinks Tigers, 2-1

By the Associated Press

Dave Leeper may be gone, but the Kansas City Royals won't forget him for awhile. Neither will the Detroit Tigers.

Leeper got his first major-league run batted in Monday night with a fielder's choice in the bottom of the 10th inning that gave the Royals a 2-1 victory over Detroit. Pinch-runner Onix Conception raced home from third base on the grounder and slid underneath the tag, prompting an argument from the Tigers.

Moments after the game ended, Leeper was sent down to Class AAA Omaha in a move that had already been planned by the Royals.

"I expected it," Leeper said. "What the heck, I'm just happy I got a chance to contribute while I was here."

The victory kept Kansas City 2 1/2 games behind American League West-leading California, which beat Oakland 5-4. In other AL games, New York held off Boston 6-5, Cleveland beat Toronto 5-3, Milwaukee stopped Minnesota 4-1 and Baltimore routed Texas 9-2.

Both starters in the Kansas City-Detroit game went the distance and allowed just four hits. Bret Saberhagen, 15-5, got the victory while Jack Morris, 13-7, took the hard-luck loss.

Yankees 6, Red Sox 5

Dave Winfield homered and drove in four runs for New York, but it was a ninth-inning catch that had the fans buzzing at Yankee Stadium.

With New York clinging to a 6-5 lead with one out in the ninth, Marty Barrett hit a drive to left field but Griffey climbed the wall and reached far over the fence to catch the ball.

"I didn't think it would go out, but as I got close to the fence I saw that it would," Griffey said. "I timed my jump and leaped. The one thing I thought about after the catch was that the fans didn't interfere with me. That was a break."

The victory was the fifth straight for the surging Yankees, who moved within four games of first-place Toronto in the AL East.

Indians 5, Blue Jays 3
Tom Waddell, who beat New York's Ron Guidry in his first major-league start three weeks ago, beat Toronto ace Dave Stieb in his third career start.

Waddell, who had made 98 relief appearances before being shifted into a starting role, scattered seven hits by the Blue Jays for his first complete game. Stieb, 11-9, took the loss.

Toronto, which led New York by 9 1/2 games on Aug. 4, has seen its lead slip to four games in 15 days.

Angels 5, A's 4
Reggie Jackson hit a two-run homer in the first inning and then sparked a three-run fourth with a single to lead California over visiting Oakland.

Jackson hit his 20th home run of the season, and the 523rd of his career, off Don Sutton, 12-7. Sutton was trying to win the 289th game of his career.

Dave Kingman hit his 24th homer for the A's in the second.

Brewers 4, Twins 1
Danny Darwin came within six inches of making baseball history. Instead, he wound up with a victory which was reason enough to be happy.

Darwin, who had lost a team-record 10 straight decisions, pitched a brilliant one-hitter for his first triumph since June 11.

The only hit off Darwin came in the fifth inning when Roy Smalley homered off the right-field foul pole.

"I thought it was going foul," said Darwin, 7-14. "I've never seen a ball go down the line not hook at all."

Darwin did not walk a batter and struck out eight. He hit Mark Salas with a pitch in the fourth for Minnesota's only other baserunner, and retired the last 15 Twins batters.

Denver Broncos quarterback GARY KUBIAK is tackled by San Francisco 49ers linebacker DAN BUNZ after KUBIAK ran for good yardage in the fourth quarter Monday night at Candlestick Park. The Broncos beat the 49ers 20-13 behind the 12 of 13 passing of KUBIAK in the last quarter.

Denver nips 49ers

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Jerry Rice of the San Francisco 49ers got saved once by a television camera and caught once by a referee's naked eye Monday night.

The rookie receiver and Denver cornerback Steve Wilson made a little bit of National Football League history late in the exhibition game which the Broncos won 20-13 by scoring 17 points in the final period against the reigning Super Bowl champions.

"Were we the first guys involved in an instant replay change?" Wilson asked.

Yes, they were. The NFL is experimenting with the use of instant replay as a sideline aid for officials during some nationally televised pre-season games. The United States Football League has employed it during regular season games.

Rice, covered by Wilson, caught a pass in the fourth quarter, and the on-field decision was a fumble, recovered by Wilson. A sideline official over-ruled the decision and called it an incomplete pass.

"I never had full control of the ball. We were both fumbling at it, and I was surprised when it was called a fumble," Rice said. "I think instant replay would come in handy."

The 49ers, still leading by a 13-10 score, kept possession because of the corrected call. A few plays later, Rice caught a pass from Matt Cavanaugh deep in Denver territory, but a referee spotted him stepping out of bounds on his way downfield, so the catch did not count.

"He was pretty close to the sideline. I squeezed it pretty good on him. The sideline can be a cornerback's best friend," Wilson said.

"He had perfect position on me," Rice admitted.

Gary Kubiak, who completed 12 of 13 passes for 144 yards after taking over at quarterback for John Elway, directed the Denver offense during the last-period comeback.

He tossed a five-yard touchdown pass to rookie tight end Keli McGregor after the Broncos recovered a fumble by Cavanaugh, and he handed off to rookie running back Steve Sewell, a product of San Francisco high school football, for a go-ahead one-yard TD run with 3:06 remaining.

The 49ers held a 10-0 lead after one period, scoring on Ray Werschinger's 46-yard field goal and Joe Montana's 23-yard TD pass to John Frank.

After that, as Coach Bill Walsh said, "We fumbled just enough to keep it out of the end zone."

Denver lost a starting defensive back, Louie Wright, to a knee injury which could be serious. Several 49ers were forced out of the game, but the most serious injury appeared to be a broken wrist suffered by linebacker Todd Shell.

Both teams are 1-1 with two pre-season games remaining.

SMU Board of Governors blame overzealous alumni for sanctions

DALLAS (AP) — Contrace Southern Methodist officials sought to dissociate the Mustangs' rogue alumni from the school's football program today following a decision not to mount a legal challenge to NCAA sanctions against the school.

Former Texas governor Bill Clements, chairman of the SMU Board of Governors, said he was angry at the small group of alumni who caused the three-year probation handed to the Mustangs Friday.

"None of us at the table (SMU officials) had anything to do with it (the probation) but we all have to share the guilt," said Clements. "We must all make sure that if it's humanly possible we're never guilty of this again. I'm angry (at some of the alumni) but you have to be tolerant and have a sense of compassion."

Clements said the school was "going to take our medicine and move forward to take every effort to see that this won't happen again."

SMU President L. Donald Shields said SMU has identified nine alumni who will be "permanently disassociated" from the school's football program.

Clements said SMU decided not to sue the NCAA.

"Our judgment is that for the long term interest of SMU, it's not the thing to do," he said.

Athletic Director Bob Hitch admitted the Mustangs have some serious work ahead, eliminating out-of-control boosters from an active role in helping the football program.

"We do have a booster problem," said Hitch. "Not all SMU people are bad guys. You're talking a small percentage. There are a lot of supporters who care about SMU who don't get carried away."

SMU, charged with 36 rules violations by the NCAA, was placed on probation Friday for the sixth time. The Mustangs will have no scholarships next year and only 15 to offer in 1987.

They are also banned from television in 1986 and from playing in bowl games following the next two seasons.

Hitch and Coach Bobby Collins held on to their jobs despite the damage to SMU's reputation. Both have clauses in their contracts saying they can be fired if SMU was found guilty of major violations.

"They both will stay on," said Clements. "Both will help us take significant corrective action. They'll help us do the things we need to do."

Hitch said SMU definitely has to overcome an outlaw image.

"We'll do everything in our power to eliminate this black eye we've received over the 26 months of the (NCAA) investigation," said Hitch.

Collins said "We want to remove forever that type of image. The boosters will be out of our program for the next three years. That should help."

The infractions against SMU included a recruiting inducement of $5,000 from a supporter, extra benefits to student athletes, breach of tryout rules, and illegal expense paid trips.

The violations cited by the NCAA occurred during the coaching tenures of both Collins and his predecessor, Ron Meyer.

Hitch said strict measures will be taken against the SMU alumni.

The university's president admitted the alumni had reached the uncontrollable stage.

BUSINESS & INDUSTRY REVIEW

Bodin and Allstate can protect your future

Bill Bodin of Allstate Insurance can help you with life, auto, health, boat, house and commercial insurance, as well as auto, boat and recreational vehicle financing.

The agency also provides policy analysis and advice for existing policies from other companies, people with no insurance, and those who need to update their insurance coverage.

Allstate customers can expect fast and fair claim service. With 26 years in the business, Bodin and Allstate provide clients with good service at a convenient location.

"We handle all types of customer service," Bodin says. He keeps records of all his clients on microfiche, which makes handling information easier.

When Allstate's clients call about claims, Bodin has several toll-free service numbers available to help him solve clients' problems in almost the same day. The client only needs to provide his policy number. Toll-free calling eliminates the delays previously caused by mail.

According to Bodin, people should get comparison quotes and keep their insurance updated annually. His advice is "to come in and get a quote" before renewing your present policy.

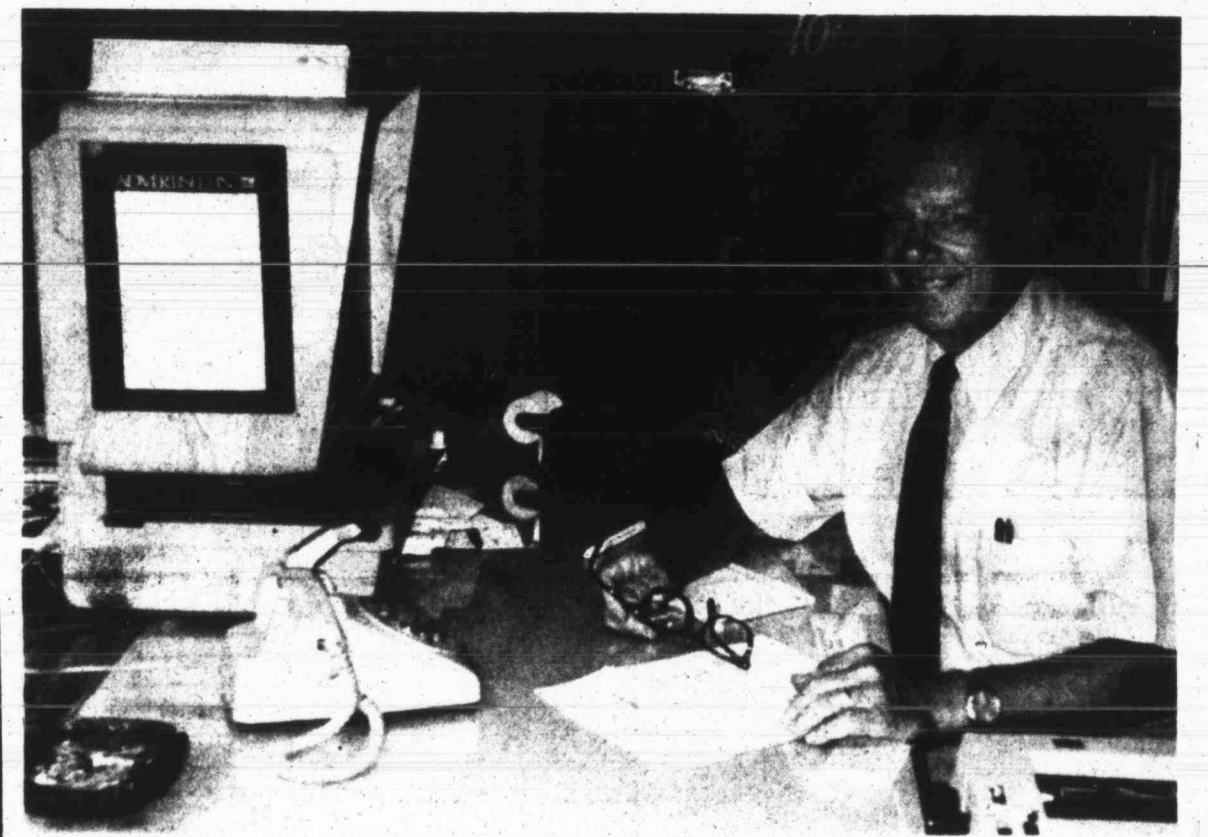

"Too many people are carrying the basic (insurance) requirements (set) by the state and that's not near enough," he says. The state requires the minimum. According to Bodin, it costs little to increase liability insurance to adequate limits.

House and automobile insurance should be kept up-to-date with replacement costs each year, he says. In the insurance business, this is called inflation guard. Renters, like homeowners, also can be protected with renter's insurance.

At Allstate, Bodin can take payments and give service to anyone who already has Allstate insurance under another agent. His office is connected with agents nationwide.

Insurance can protect you, your family, your property and your future. Will your future years be financially secure? Contact Bill Bodin at Allstate Insurance, 610 S. Johnson, 263-3811.

EXPERIENCED — Bill Bodin of Allstate Insurance has 26 years experience in the insurance business. Let him help you insure your family's property and future.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

FORECAST FOR WED., AUGUST 21, 1985

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Consider how you would like conditions to be in your life for a considerable period of time.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Show business persons with whom you deal that you communicate well with them and you will get good results.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You can come to a fine agreement with a partner if you show you understand what is uppermost on his, or her mind.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Be more skillful at your work and get better results. One whose ideas are different to your own can rope you into some scheme.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Get into the amusements with kin that have proven pleasurable for a long time.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Get your home more charming. An overly dynamic partner could get you into trouble if you follow his or her lead.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Sit down with associates and discuss how to make the future more mutually profitable. Try not to make any radical changes in work.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Think about the practical and financial side of your life and go after good advice from experts. Avoid one who spends a lot of money.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Do whatever can gain you personal goals and be with persons who are loyal. A close tie may endeavor to get you into a bad situation.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Confer with experts and plan the strategy that can gain you your aims faster and better.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Intimates and acquaintances make fine suggestions, so listen to them carefully today, and get ahead faster.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Give more attention to outside matters and civic duty now and do a very fine job. Personal matters could be more difficult to handle.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Lots of fine ideas are yours today, so put them in operation without delay. Be more concerned with advancement now.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she can follow through on some plan that has been thoroughly analyzed and thought out. Teach early that perseverance is a prime requisite for gaining success. A good education is a must here so plan for it now. A great lover of music in this chart.

"The Stars impel; they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!
