Water shoots toward the sky Sunday afternoon as city workers scramble to repair a tapline leak which left parts of the city without water for several hours.

Geyser!

City crews scurry to repair tapline break

A break in a tapline from a 20-inch water main Sunday afternoon caused a spectacular geyser on 19th Street near Virginia, sending a two-inch stream of water shooting as high as 100 feet into the air for several hours.

City crews began work on the break — which was initially reported Sunday morning — about 1:30 p.m., Public Works Director Tom Decell said.

"It was spectacular," he said. Occasionally, the stream became a dark red from the mud that fell into the hole and was spurted back out.

"It was throwing two- to three-inch diameter rocks from the site as far as 60 feet away. It was throwing smaller-sized rocks up 100 feet," Decell said.

The break was caused by electrolysis, which had eaten away a galvanized brass nipple that brought a two-inch tap from the main into a one-inch service line, he said.

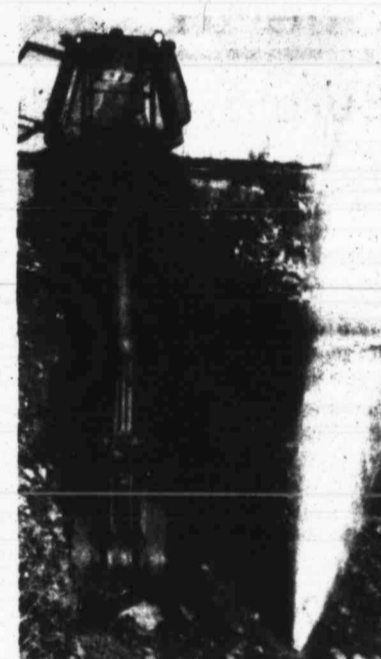

Decell said the crews delayed shutting off the water until they determined what had caused the break, because the main serves a major portion of the southside of town. That main feeds all of the town south of 11th Place, including Kentwood, Coronado Hills, Highland South and Douglas additions.

About 280,000 gallons of water was lost through the break. In a normal day, the city's residents will use 9 million gallons, he said.

Repairs were fairly easy, Decell said. City crews began shutting down the water flow about 3:30 p.m. Some residents were without water or had low water pressure for as long as three hours, Decell said.

"Even after the water was shut off, we were still working with a head of water four to five feet high," Decell said. The stream was caused by remaining pressure in the line, he said.

The water main was turned back on about 6:30 p.m., Decell said.

Samantha Smith dies in plane crash

AUBURN, Maine (AP) — Samantha Smith, the schoolgirl whose wish for peace led to a highly publicized tour of the Soviet Union as the guest of Yuri Andropov, was killed along with her father and six other people in a plane crash, her mother said today.

The Bar Harbor Airlines Beechcraft 99 turboprop plane crashed and exploded Sunday night in rain a half-mile from the Auburn-Lewiston Municipal Airport, authorities said.

At daybreak today, officials were still attempting to make positive identification of the six passengers and two crew members, but the mother of 13-year-old Samantha said her husband and daughter were dead.

"They haven't showed up anywhere else," Jane Smith said in a telephone interview from the family's home in Manchester. She visited the crash site, she said, adding, "It's just a pile of ashes."

Samantha attracted worldwide attention two years ago when she wrote to then-Soviet leader Andropov expressing concern about the potential for nuclear war. Kremlin leaders responded by inviting the girl and her parents on a two-week, expenses-paid tour of the Soviet Union.

In her letter Samantha asked Andropov: "Why do you want to conquer the whole world, or at least our country?"

The Soviet leader replied in his invitation that his country wanted "nothing of the kind."

She and her parents got VIP treatment during the tour three months later but she never met Andropov, who died Feb. 9, 1984. She was widely hailed by some as a

2 hearings set on city's new budget

City councilmen will conduct two public hearings Tuesday night on their proposed budget.

The first, on the city's revenue-sharing budget, will be at 6 p.m. It will be held in the police department which is accessible by wheelchair. The budget shows the city expects to receive $309,000 in revenue-sharing funds next year, the last year the program will be in existence.

The second hearing will be at 6:30 p.m. in the council chambers on the second floor of City Hall at the beginning of the regular council meeting.

No action will be taken at this meeting on adopting the budget.

However, councilmen can act on approving proposed increases in the sewer and water rates.

City proposals show the water rate, now at $5.75 for basic service, will jump to $9. The cost for each additional 1,000 gallons used a month would increase from $1.25 to $1.53.

The basic sewer rate will remain the same, $4.25 a month, under the proposal. However, the cost per each additional 1,000 gallons of sewage is projected to rise from 68 cents to 80 cents.

Councilmen also plan to discuss a proposed five-cent increase in the property tax rate, to 73 cents per $100 valuation from last year's 68 cents per $100. Because of higher property valuations, the effective tax rate — the rate needed to bring in the same amount of revenue as last year — is calculated at 63 cents per $100.

City officials say they need the increased revenues because they have increased services in the last few years and because of a downturn in the economy.

Firefighters accuse city of retaliation in budget

By KEELY COGHLAN
Staff Writer

Union firefighters today accused city administrators of retaliation in proposing a city budget that calls for demotions and reductions of fire department manpower.

In a news release, the union said administrators were retaliating against the union because voters approved state civil service rules for the department during a special election this year.

Fire Chief Carl Dorton was out of town this morning and could not be reached for comment.

City Manager Don Davis said he could not comment on the release because he had not seen it.

"When civil service was voted in last April, firefighters were assured there would be no reprisals," stated the release from the Big Spring Professional Fire Fighters Association Local 2922.

"Carl Dorton made a statement to certain firefighters last Wednesday morning that the closing of Central and the demotions and loss of manpower was done in retaliation by the city council because of the passage of civil service," the statement reads.

Council members adopted a proposal by Dorton to close the Central Fire Station downtown and reduce manpower. The show of support for the cost-cutting measure came at a budget work session last Monday.

According to the statement, the "majority of firefighters" do not believe the city council is "responsible for the cuts nor do we believe they are retaliating against us for civil service."

"In our opinion, it is not the elected officials who are a problem. It is the vindictive attitude of the city administrators," the statement reads.

According to Dorton, the proposal will save $50,000. Included in the proposal is the elimination of three lieutenants' jobs and the creation of an assistant fire chief and a training officer with the rank of captain.

One of the department's 15 lieutenants would be promoted to the rank of captain, either as the training officer or as a regular shift captain.

Two lieutenants would be demoted to the rank of driver, two drivers demoted to the rank of hoseman, and two hosemen's jobs would be eliminated through attrition. Because one firefighter quit last week, only one remaining slot will be lost through attrition.

Firemen say the proposal would reduce costs only by $100 a month, or $1,200 a year. Dorton last week said he had not determined the actual savings in personnel costs through his proposal.

Under the proposal, the Central Fire Station would be closed and an addition to another station would have to be constructed to house the department snorkel. None of the other buildings are tall enough to house the snorkel.

Dorton also said last week he did not know what such an addition would cost.

The union statement also claims that firefighters have been "verbally cursed and intimidated while on duty by certain city officials with language no city employee should have to put up with." The release does not name the city officials.

Firefighters are opposing the reduction in manpower, calling it a lessening of fire protection.

"Anyone who says the reduction of three firefighters and the closing of Central will not hurt the response time or effectiveness of the fire department is mistaken," the statement reads.

"This action not only affects the downtown area but also citizens in the west part of Big Spring," it continues.

The news release also states that Dorton told union president John Branham that if the union opposed Dorton's proposal, the fire chief would "make it extremely hard for everyone within the fire department when civil service was adopted."

"He indicated there were several grey areas in the civil service law he would use to his advantage and he would use 1269M (the state civil service statute) against us."

Marfa art museum plan falters

MARFA, Texas (AP) — It was a bold concept: one of the world's largest outdoor displays of modern art, a monument to a lifetime of work by a renowned sculptor, a museum in vast isolation of West Texas.

But after six years, $5 million and countless hours, the unfinished project is faltering badly, perhaps fatally.

"I am sorry I ever got involved," says sculptor Donald Judd, whose works languish in Marfa warehouses and adorn the sparse rangeland. "The misery has just been too much. I've spent a lot of time on this and I'm not getting any younger."

Judd and project's benefactors, the Dia Art Foundation of New York, are embroiled in a bitter funding dispute over the ambitious project to build a modern art museum in this town of 3,000 residents.

Judd, an internationally acclaimed sculptor, says the Dia foundation has cut back its funding, allowing the museum to deteriorate.

He also says he suspects the foundation plans to sell the museum and its art collection, which includes dozens of valuable works by him and other well-known modern artists such as Dan Flavin and Barnett Newman.

Officials of Dia, which is having financial problems, deny the charges.

Negotiations by two New York law firms intended to head off a lawsuit are stalled. Money is a sticking point. Judd says he needs $2 million more for maintenance and additional construction.

"This thing was supposed to be about art," Judd said. "It was supposed to be about art being public. Now it's really about neither of those things."

The project began in 1979, when the Dia foundation, which is known Internationally known sculptor DONALD JUDD sits inside his museum in Marfa. The project to create a museum there has stalled and may not be completed.

for lavishly funding esoteric projects, signed a contract with Judd to construct, supervise and design the project in his adopted home for a monthly salary of more than $17,000.

The project encompasses 345 acres and more than 150 pieces of art. It is centered at Fort D.A. Russell, once a U.S. Cavalry outpost.

Fifteen groupings of Judd's immense, plain gray concrete box sculptures sit in a pasture at the fort. Inside two renovated ammunition and weapons storage buildings are 76 of his aluminum pieces lined up in long, straight rows.

In downtown Marfa, an old wool warehouse has been turned into a gallery of sculpture by John Chamberlain, whose medium is crushed car parts.

"It's world-class art out in the middle of nowhere," says Rick Hernandez, a Texas Commission on the Arts official.

Judd, 57, moved from New York, where he owns a seven-story loft building in the trendy SoHo area, to Marfa in the mid 1970s.

He settled in, buying and restoring a square-block compound that now contains much of his private art collection, several residential buildings, a vegetable garden and chicken coops, all enclosed by a 9-foot adobe wall.

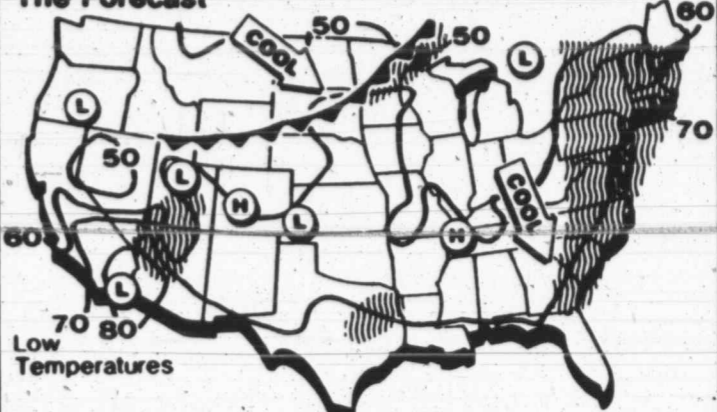

Dia's founders, Philippa de Menil Friedrich, an heir to the Schlumberger Ltd. oil services fortune, and her husband, West German art dealer Heiner Friedrich, were longtime admirers of Judd's work.

They visited him in Marfa, were impressed with what they saw and decided to create a museum with Judd at the project's helm.

But now signs of deterioration are evident. The roofs of some buildings leak and several pieces of sculpture have been damaged.

Bank tax goes to localities

AUSTIN — State Comptroller Bob Bullock has sent checks totaling $61.6 million from the first collection of the state's new franchise tax on banks to 1,996 local taxing jurisdictions, including the Howard, Mitchell and Martin county areas.

In a special session last year, the Legislature brought banks under the franchise tax for the first time and allocated receipts from the tax to cities, counties, school districts and other local taxing units where the banks are located.

Banks are taxed at the same rate as other Texas corporations. Previously, bank stocks were subject to local property taxes. The Legislature exempted the stocks from property taxes, substituting the new bank franchise tax. Collec-

Area taxing jurisdictions received the following amounts:

- City of Big Spring — $53,000.
- Big Spring Independent School District — $66,000.
- Howard County — $17,000.
- Howard County Southwest Collegiate Institute for the Deaf — $308.

Electric cord blamed for fire

Big Spring firefighters Sunday morning doused a house fire started by an extension cord, according to department reports.

Firemen arrived at 11:32 a.m. at a wood-frame house at 1103 N. Gregg, owned by Hubert Perkins, the report stated. No one was injured in the blaze.

The fire caused $15,000 damage, and completely gutted the living room, where the fire occurred, the report stated. The rest of the house suffered heavy heat and smoke damage.

Smoke was pouring out of the windows in the living room and around the eaves when they arrived. Seven firefighters used 125 gallons to extinguish the flames.

Earlier, neighbors had sprayed water through the windows in all the rooms in an effort to fight the fire, the report stated.

After cleaning up and checking the house for embers, firemen returned to the station at 2 p.m.

An extension cord to the air-conditioning unit in the living room caused the fire, the report stated. In addition, firemen doused a dumpster fire and two grass fires this weekend.

Friday night they also put out a small private plane that ignited on the runway at the Big Spring Airport. Damages from that fire were set at $15,000.

Premature fall

MONTPELIER, Vt. — Drought conditions in northern New England are expected to cause the foliage season to start about a week earlier than usual, but foresters are divided on how the dry roots will affect the colorful blazes that lure millions of visitors from around the country.

"The colors will be there; they will just be a little early," said Jack Sargent, chief of forest protection in New Hampshire.

"My 20-odd years of work in the field seems to tell me, though, that in a dry year you don't have the brilliant reds or oranges, but you never know."

Pockets of land across New England have been hard-hit this year by lack of rain. Officials say some areas are suffering their worst drought since the early part of the century.

Sargent and other foresters said Friday that the drought had placed additional stress on the trees, causing many of the leaves to turn color earlier than usual.

For northern New England, fall foliage season is the busiest time of the year for tourism.

Superpowers to meet

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. — President Reagan says he will tell Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev the United States has no hostile intentions toward the Soviet Union but has "good reason to think" Moscow is bent on conquest.

The convalescing president said he hopes his November meeting with Gorbachev will help "eliminate hostilities and suspicion" between the two superpowers.

Reagan, nearing the end of a three-week vacation at his ranch in the Santa Ynez Mountains 30 miles north of this coastal city, was interviewed by telephone Saturday by representatives of Washington Broadcast News, WSB Radio in Atlanta and WRHC Radio in Miami.

Prior convictions

WASHINGTON — Ten percent of the nation's death row inmates at the end of 1984 had a prior homicide conviction and one in 20 had been on parole at the time of the murder, government figures show.

The Justice Department, surveying the records of the 1,405 people who were under a sentence of death at year's end, also found that about two-thirds of them had previous felony convictions.

Bishop Tutu's son arrested in South Africa

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Police detained black Anglican Bishop Desmond Tutu's eldest son today for allegedly swearing at a black policeman, witnesses said.

The witnesses said Tutu's son, Trevor, was at the Protea Magistrate's Court where hearings were to begin for some of the more than 300 youngsters arrested last week for allegedly boycotting schools in Soweto, the black township outside Johannesburg. Protea is part of Soweto.

Trevor Tutu remarked aloud about the suspects being so young and a policeman took him to the prosecutors office where he was warned about speaking out in court, witnesses said.

Police took the younger Tutu into custody when he used a profanity to characterize the officer's advice, the witnesses said.

The son of the Johannesburg bishop, a leading opponent of apartheid and 1984 Nobel Peace Prize winner, was driven to a police station in another part of Soweto.

It was not immediately clear if any charges were filed. Neither the bishop nor his wife, Leah, were at their offices or home to comment on the incident. Police in Soweto said they had no immediate comment.

Elsewhere, the Rev. Allan Boesak, a leading campaigner against apartheid, did not appear for a court date today, two days after saying he feared being arrested for demanding the release of Nelson Mandela.

More than 600 blacks have been killed during the year in rioting against apartheid, South Africa's system of racial segregation under which 5 million whites govern 24 million voteless blacks.

Police said South Africa was "relatively calm" overnight. However, they reported that a policeman fired his handgun on a crowd of blacks throwing stones near Burgersdorp in northern Cape province, "seriously wounding a black woman."

Arsonists set fire to government buildings, which were "gutted" near Port Elizabeth, 610 miles south of Johannesburg, police said.

Boesak, the president of the World Alliance of Reformed Churches, was due to appear in Wynberg Magistrate's Court near Cape Town this morning. The fiery preacher and 18 others face charges of trying to enter a riot-torn black township at a time last month when police had said no one but residents could go into the area.

Scores of policemen ringed the court building, apparently fearing a demonstration, but none developed.

Boesak, who is of mixed racial ancestry, did not show up for the court date. One of his lawyers said he sought to have the hearing postponed.

The minister on Friday announced a mass march in Cape Town, set for Wednesday, for the release of Mandela, the most influential leader of South Africa's blacks.

The next day, after police detained 27 anti-apartheid activists, Boesak said he feared being arrested for announcing the march on Pollsmoor.

Trevor Tutu, eldest son of the Nobel Peace Prize winner Bishop Desmond Tutu, was detained by South African police today for allegedly swearing at a black policeman.

Mandela, president of the outlawed African National Congress, South Africa's main guerrilla group fighting white rule, is at Cape Town's Pollsmoor Prison serving a life term imposed in 1964 for plotting sabotage.

Almost all public marches are illegal, and Law and Order Minister Louis le Grange says police will be "stern" with anyone responding to Boesak's call.

Under a state of emergency imposed July 21, police said they held 1,094 people — without access to lawyers or family — while 1,103 had been released since the outset of emergency rule.

An ailing 75-year-old anti-apartheid leader began serving a five-year jail term Sunday on a terrorism conviction after officials refused to waive his sentence.

The Prisons Department in Pretoria confirmed that Oscar Mpepha, one of three co-patrons of the multiracial United Democratic Front, entered a prison. The South African Press Association said Mpepha was in Cape Town's Pollsmoor prison.

Oil terminal hit

MANAMA, Bahrain — Marine salvage executives said Iraqi jets inflicted substantial damage on Iran's Kharg Island oil terminal during their second bombing attack in 10 days, but Iran issued a statement today denying the claim.

Ships in the Persian Gulf near the stricken terminal radioed that the oil terminal sustained heavy damage in the attack Sunday, said one Gulf-based shipping executive.

"Kharg has been hit again by Iraqi military aircraft, apparently to aggravate an already unfavorable oil loading situation caused by the mid-August raid," said the source, who spoke on condition he not be identified.

A European salvage company executive said at least one of Kharg's three jetties had been closed for repairs from the first attack. Sources said it was too early to determine precisely how much damage the Iraqi planes caused.

Spy scandal continues

BONN, West Germany — A secretary to a presidential aide was arrested in connection with a spy scandal that is being called the worst ever in West Germany, and authorities said today they've begun investigating a military purchasing employee on suspicion of spying.

Alexander Prechtel, a spokesman for Chief Federal Prosecutor Kurt Rebmann, identified the secretary who was arrested late Saturday as Margarete Hoeke, whom he said worked for an aide to President Richard von Weizsaecker.

Prechtel told The Associated Press in a telephone interview that authorities were investigating a man who worked for an army office in Koblenz that handled purchases of sophisticated equipment and arms. Prechtel declined to provide the man's name.

60 dead after quake

PEKING — Troops today began building makeshift shelters for some 16,000 people left homeless by a major earthquake that jolted western China, while rescue workers distributed burial cloth, food and other essentials, officials said.

The state seismological bureau in Peking said the official toll from the Friday disaster remained at 60 dead and 125 injured. However, local authorities in Xinjiang Uighur autonomous region reported 63 fatalities.

California's 'Night Stalker' claims two new victims

MISSION VIEJO, Calif. (AP) — Residents installed locks on their doors and talked about moving after a couple became what police believe were the 34th and 35th victims of a serial killer called the "Night Stalker" who is blamed for 14 deaths.

The curly-haired killer with stained and gapped teeth extended his trail of terror to Orange County, south of Los Angeles, on Sunday, shooting a man in the head as he slept and sexually attacking a woman, authorities said.

The shooting victim was in critical condition Sunday, a hospital official said.

"We do believe it is the work of the Night Stalker," said Orange County sheriff's Lt. Richard Olson.

The news sent a chill through other residents of the neat, middle-class neighborhood, about 55 miles southeast of Los Angeles.

"People ... are pretty upset," said Steve Janovick, who was installing deadbolt locks on the doors of his home, two houses away. "I don't believe in guns. It's just too dangerous."

But neighbor Elsa Sorel, 80, said she had set a series of traps in her home, which is fortified with steel bars over windows.

"If he comes back, I'll probably kill him," she said.

The killer has been blamed for 14 slayings during 35 attacks over a 600-mile range from Mission Viejo to San Francisco, most of them in or near Los Angeles, since Feb. 8.

In the latest attack, the woman called police at 2:40 a.m. to say her boyfriend had been shot in the head and that she was sexually attacked by a man in their home, Olson said.

The man, William Carns, 29, was in extremely critical condition after surgery at Mission Community Hospital, according to a nursing supervisor who asked not to be identified. He was not expected to live, Olson said.

The woman, also 29, was treated at Saddleback

Hospital and released in good condition early Sunday, said nursing supervisor Janet Pittone.

Just 30 hours before the latest attack, Los Angeles County Sheriff Sherman Block said the Night Stalker was responsible for 33 attacks, including 14 slayings.

Olson, as well as Los Angeles deputies, refused to say why authorities attributed Sunday's attacks to the killer. Over the weekend, Block voiced outrage over the release of information about similarities in the case.

Until recently, the slayings blamed on the serial killer occurred only in Los Angeles County — from Northridge, 27 miles northwest of downtown, to Diamond Bar, about 30 miles to the east.

But ballistics tests linked the killer to the Aug. 17 slaying of San Francisco resident Peter Pan, 66, and the attempted killing of his wife, Barbara, 64, said San Francisco Mayor Dianne Feinstein.

Neighbors said the Mission Viejo couple bought their home six months ago after moving from North

Next-door neighbor Jim Brafford, 35, who worked with Carns at the Burroughs Corp. in Mission Viejo, said he and his wife, Sheila, rent their home and planned to move next Friday to a home they are buying.

But after Sunday's attack, "my wife wants to move today," Brafford said as he held his 2-year-old daughter, Jessica. "My wife is beside herself with this thing. We were wondering why them and not us."

"All of us leave our windows open," said Diane Cox, who with her husband and two children lives across the street. "Who would think this could happen in this area?"

In San Francisco, where police appealed to the public for information, more than 500 telephone tips had come in by Saturday night.

"We're getting a call every 10 seconds," said Officer Jack Smoot.

County defers downtown request

By SCOTT FITZGERALD
Staff Writer

Howard County Commissioners want county attorney Tim Yeats to draw a contract for the court's review before action is considered on a fund request from the Chamber of Commerce's Downtown Steering Committee.

Committee Chairman Troy Fraser told commissioners Monday that the committee was in its funding stage and desired county representation.

"We'd like to hire somebody to do a master plan for the downtown area," Fraser said about the committee's goal to renovate downtown.

The committee requested $20,000 from the county for a three year period.

Fraser told commissioners that the committee had received commitments from the city, the Industrial Foundation Board, the Economic Development Committee and private donors.

Yeats told commissioners it would be best to draw up a contract that would list expenditures for operating and maintaining the erection of historical markers, monuments and objects.

"The contract will provide that each expenditure be approved by the commissioner's court," Yeats said.

Yeats said counties can provide funds to community projects but only within the context of statutory law. The law prohibits county funds to be budgeted for salaries for hired consultants or architects. Yeats said other gray areas would include printing brochures and advertisements.

Commissioners were expected to continue discussion of the request during the afternoon session Monday.

The court also approved the Chamber of Commerce's Crime Stoppers request for $5,000 to be used for reward money. The money will be paid to anonymous informers who provide local law enforcement agencies with information on certain crimes, said Crime Stoppers program representative Ralph McLaughlin.

Charles Ginn's request for a monthly $1,500 increase in subsidized county funds for Lee Ambulance Service was tabled by the court. Commissioner William Crocker requested that Ginn provide the court with the same information that he provides his certified public accountant.

Patients' rights must be upheld

Thirteen states have enacted legislation this year to ensure that a terminally ill person has the right to refuse medical treatment, even though the decision will result in death.

This brings the total number of states which have adopted laws on the right to die through "living wills" to 35, plus the District of Columbia.

Unfortunately, right-to-die declarations sometimes are frustrated or countermanded by hospitals, doctors and even relatives of the terminally ill. They consider them more of a request or an advisory than a binding decision and continue to hook up life-support equipment and prescribe drugs and intravenous feeding.

California passed the nation's first living-will law in 1976. It was tested last year by William Bartling, a 70-year-old terminally ill patient at the Adventist Medical Center in Glendale, who suffered from five usually fatal diseases.

When the medical center refused to disconnect Bartling from a respirator, he took the matter to court. Even though Bartling had succumbed while his case was an appeal, the state's Second District Court of Appeal ruled unanimously that:

"The right of a competent adult patient to refuse medical treatment is a constitutionally guaranteed right which must not be abridged."

Since the Bartling decision, according to the Hemlock Society, more and more physicians are accepting the decision of patients to refuse life-support equipment and drugs. Some doctors even say they dislike overtreating the terminally ill and welcome the standards established by right-to-die legislation.

We should consider the fact that polls show the right-to-die philosophy is favored by 81 percent of the people. Patients do have rights, and one of them is the right to decide when it is time to refuse heroic medical measures.

Don't let 'em marry your sister

(Whilst Art Buchwald is on vacation we reprint some columns from the past.)

Is there organic life in outer space? This is one of the major questions being asked in scientific circles today. Does this organic life resemble ours, and if not, what type of life exists on other planets? What effect will it have on us, first of all as Americans, and then secondly as human beings?

It is not too early to worry about these problems and to prepare for them. I have already started an organization to hate life in outer space. I feel, as do many of the people who have joined my society, that life in outer space presents a danger to every man, woman and child in the world, and the public must be alerted to these dangers before we make the fateful step of being taken in by beings on other planets, who will in all probability try to dominate us.

There are some Munich-minded individuals who are prepared to make friends with the organisms in outer space. They are willing to trade our way of life for ways of life foreign to us. They are blind to the dangers of taking up with people — if you wish to call them that — who have none of the culture, the background or the intelligence that we have on earth.

It is for this reason that the Society to Hate Life in Outer Space, or HALO, as it is known for short, was formed. We must combat all attempts to come to terms with life in outer space or lose our own in the attempt.

My society believes that there is something inhuman about life in outer space. If they were our friends, as they pretend to be, why haven't they made themselves known? Why haven't they come out and declared that there is life on other planets? What have they got to hide?

Obviously they're waiting for us to make the first move. They want us to go to them. They prefer to tackle our boys on their own territory. Surely they must know about our attempts to get into outer space, the money and time and effort being expended to reach them.

But have they cooperated in any way? Have they offered to pay part of the cost to get one of our people out to them? They have not. All attempts to reach them by radio and other communications have failed. They refuse to answer our calls, they ignore our wave lengths, they are probably laughing at us right now. It is typical of life in outer space to be sneaky, uncooperative and treacherous.

But once we make it to one of their planets, then what? Will we be greeted as scientists in search of new worlds to conquer? Will they understand that all we want to do is study them and find out what makes them tick? I hardly think so.

First, they'll try to kill us. If their weapons are not up to ours, then they'll try to win us over and prey on our naivete. If this doesn't succeed, they'll try to go to school with our children.

HALO is not waiting until men conquer space. We are preparing an educational program now which will prevent life in outer space from getting into our lives.

I think all books on outer space should be censored, and only those that affirm our way of life should be allowed on library bookshelves. I think all our astronauts should be briefed on the dangers of life in outer space. They should be able to recognize the enemy. Congress should hold hearings and call witnesses who have defected from outer space to show what could happen on our planet if outer-space organisms infiltrated our government and labor unions.

We have the money for such a program. What we need now is the cooperation of every citizen. It isn't too early to join. Our slogan is: "Would you want someone from outer space to marry your sister?"

French claim AIDS credit

WASHINGTON — French medical officials have accused the United States of stealing their research for a blood test used to screen patients for AIDS, the frightening virus that has stricken actor Rock Hudson and killed more than 6,000 people since it was first detected four years ago.

The dispute about who should get credit for the blood test has been simmering beneath the surface, apparently bringing to a standstill cooperation between French and American scientists searching for a cure for AIDS. That might explain why Hudson had to fly to Paris for treatment, and why that same treatment wasn't available here.

The feud has pitted the French Pasteur Institute against the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, and now Pasteur officials have quietly threatened to take the United States to court if its demands for recognition — and royalty rights — aren't met.

The details are contained in a series of Health and Human Services memos, seen by our associate Corky Johnson.

Research by doctors in both France and the United States led to the identification of the AIDS virus, the first step in finding a cure. Dr. Robert Gallo, of the National Institutes of Health, and the Pasteur Institute's Dr. Luc Montagnier are credited with discoveries that led to the isolation of the virus.

An AIDS blood-test kit went on the market in March. But while Gallo's name was on the U.S. patent, Montagnier's was left off. And with 11 million kits already sold — some of those in France — royalties have netted the United States $1.5 million. France hasn't earned a franc from the U.S.-made test kit.

That led to an angry letter sent July 4 from the Pasteur Institute to Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret Heckler, protesting the patent given to Gallo and the National Institutes of Health.

"The French are claiming they were the true inventors — not Dr. Gallo, and that he got the necessary information for the invention from the Pasteur Institute during collaborative efforts between the Institute and NIH," U.S. officials wrote in one memo.

Gallo called the French allegations "outrageous," and said that the French have been unable to adequately reproduce the AIDS virus. And according to one government memo, other U.S. researchers have charged the French with refusing to share certain AIDS information, then secretly filing for their own test patent in Europe.

But at an Aug. 6 meeting between U.S. and Pasteur Institute officials, the French presented two documents supporting their claims. One was a report by Montagnier that was given to Gallo a year before his patent was filed. The other was a receipt signed by a National Institutes of Health doctor for a sample of AIDS virus sent to the United States by the French.

At the meeting, the French set a one-month deadline for the U.S. to meet three demands: full recognition that Montagnier is the true inventor, a cut of all past and future royalties for the Pasteur Institute, and a new patent with both doctors' names on it.

If the ultimatums are not met, one memo warns, the French will sue on the grounds of "deprivation, or a polite way of claiming theft."

That apparently doesn't worry U.S. officials, who believe they can refute the charges. But they are concerned about the repercussions of such a suit, including the possibility of a "class action by AIDS victims."

"Regardless of the French motive," one official wrote, their "oral demand deserves the dignity of an oral response, thereby avoiding any boxing-in effect contemplated by the French."

Footnote: Gallo calls the rumors of a scientific feud "poppycock," and insists that researchers around the world are cooperating on a cure for AIDS.

UNDER THE DOME: Congress has survived bomb threats, terrorists and Sen. Joe McCarthy, but it may have finally met its match: cockroaches. After a number of congressmen complained their offices were being taken over by roaches, the Longworth House Office Building — in danger of becoming Washington's newest luxury "roach hotel" — was shut down and fumigated. In true Washington style, the Capitol's architect sent around a long memorandum explaining the fumigation procedure.

FUEL FUSS: A proposal by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration to lower the gas efficiency standard for 1985 cars, called Corporate Average Fuel Economy, has forced the Big Three automakers onto opposite sides of the street. Ford and General Motors want the rules changed to 26 miles per gallon, while Chrysler favors keeping the current 27.5 miles per gallon. And to prove this isn't a polite, CAFE-society argument, Chrysler Chairman Lee Iacocca sent a letter to Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole last month: "Chrysler will pay a competitive penalty for obeying the law. The others, meanwhile, reap a windfall for scoffing at that law."

MINI-EDITORIAL: Washington is a town of workaholics, and it's good to see highly successful professionals once in a while who have a healthy perspective on their careers. Dr. Steven Rosenberg, the physician who headed President Reagan's surgical team, is a family man who reads Westerns and science fiction for relaxation. Charles E. McClure Jr., recently returned to academic life in California after two years as a deputy assistant secretary of the Treasury. One thing that bothered him about Washington, he said, was all the people who asked "whether I worked on Sundays." It's kind of unacceptable not to work on Sundays. In this town, these are rare displays of sanity.

Water rate hike hits wrong people

To the editor:

The progressive water rate that is proposed under the new city tax plan puts the extra burden on the wrong property owners. Those who water and try to present an attractive place are to be penalized and will be subsidizing those who don't ... some may decide that it is not worth the additional cost.

Those property owners who make no effort to present a green look and those who pile junk in the yard and let weeds grow at will may be the beneficiaries of the new tax levy.

Teamwork makes day camp work

To the editor:

The city of Big Spring, how helpful so many were to the Girl Scouts for the Day Camp that was held August 5 through the 9. So many donated time, some merchandise or merchandise at a reduced rate.

Not enough can ever be said of people who donate their time — the volunteers. So many adults pitched in and donated their time and effort to make this Day Camp a possibility. Older Girl Scouts, ages 11-17, spent many long hours working on programming with the adults and contributed so much to the younger girls by their skills and examples.

With so many people and organizations like this helping, the Big Spring Girl Scout Day Camp could not be anything but a success. A BIG "Thank You" to so many here and so many others who made the Day Camp a possibility for 58 girls.

Deliveries make people happy

By KIM KIRKHAM
Lifestyle Writer

Emmitt Bartee's job brings smiles and joy to the people he encounters.

Bartee, 20, has been delivering flowers for Rita's Flowers since January.

When delivering flowers, "you never make anybody mad," he said. "Everybody's always happy to get flowers."

But Bartee doesn't like to leave people out. "When you deliver to one person and there's other people around, they always want to know, 'Where's my flowers?'"

He also cleans the flowers when they come in, answers the telephone, waits on customers and sweeps up petals and stems that fall off flowers.

Working at the shop, Bartee has learned the names of different flowers and how to do some arranging, he said. "It's a lot harder than it looks arranging the flowers."

Bartee works from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday and 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. on Saturday.

A sophomore, Bartee is active in theater and Phi Theta Kappa at Howard College. He will attend Angelo State University in San Angelo during the spring

Dear Abby

Exuberant teen becomes highway tragedy

DEAR ABBY: Recently my 16-year-old son was a pallbearer at the funeral of his friend, Juan Carlos, also 16.

Juan was a fine boy, clean-cut, courteous, an honor student (second in his class of 132) and an altar server of his church. He was an only child — his mother was 45 and father was 51 when he was born. They loved this boy so much — he wasn't spoiled and had many friends.

Juan was driving a small car, a birthday present from his parents. He changed lanes and was speeding to pass a "slow" car. He was killed in a head-on collision with a truck. He never had a chance.

It could have happened to my son, or any other boy who took a chance and drove too fast. Please run your article, "Please, God, I'm only 17." It may save a young life.

BEVERLY GRAHAM,
BROWNSVILLE, TEXAS

DEAR BEVERLY: Here it is, with my heartfelt sympathy to the family of Juan Carlos:

PLEASE, GOD, I'M ONLY 17

The day I died was an ordinary school day. How I wish I had taken the bus! But I was too cool for the bus. I remember how I wheeled the car out of Mom. "Special favor," I pleaded. "All the kids drive." When the 2:50 bell rang, I threw all my books in the locker. I was free until 8:40 tomorrow morning! I ran to the parking lot, excited at the thought of driving a car and being my own boss. Free!

It doesn't matter how the accident happened. I was goofing off — going too fast. Taking crazy chances. But I was enjoying my freedom and having fun. The last thing I remember was passing an old lady who seemed to be going awfully slow. I heard a deafening crash and I felt a terrible jolt. Glass and steel flew everywhere. My whole body seemed to be turning inside out. I heard myself scream.

Suddenly I awakened; it was very quiet. A police officer was standing over me. Then I saw a doctor. My body was mangled. I was saturated with blood. Pieces of jagged glass were sticking out all over. Strange that I couldn't feel anything.

Hey, don't pull that sheet over my head! I can't be dead. I'm only 17. I've got a date tonight. I'm supposed to grow up and have a wonderful life. I haven't lived yet. I can't be dead.

Later I was placed in a drawer. My folks had to identify me. Why did they have to see me like this? Why did I have to look at Mom's eyes when she faced the most terrible ordeal of her life? Dad suddenly looked like an old man. He told the man in charge, "Yes, he is my son."

The funeral was a weird experience. I saw all my relatives and friends walk toward the casket. They passed by, one by one, and looked at me with the saddest eyes I've ever seen. Some of my buddies were crying. A few of the girls touched my hand and sobbed as they walked away.

Please — somebody — wake me up! Get me out of here! I can't bear to see my mom and dad so broken up. My grandparents are so racked with grief they can hardly walk. My brother and sisters are like zombies. They move like robots. In a daze, everybody! No one can believe this. And I can't believe it, either.

Please don't bury me! I'm not dead! I have a lot of living to do! I want to laugh and run again. I want to sing and dance. Please don't put me in the ground. I promise if you give me just one more chance, God, I'll be the most careful driver in the whole world. All I want is one more chance.

Please, God, I'm only 17!

Dr. Donohue

Diabetes can pop up during pregnancy

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Would you please discuss diabetes during pregnancy? Why does it happen then? Does it affect the size of the baby? Mine were nine and 11 pounds. What are the chances of my developing this later? I got my diabetes during my second pregnancy. My doctor discovered it two weeks before I delivered the 11-pound boy. — M.A.S.

I'm sure you are referring to the kind of diabetes (high blood sugar) that appears during a pregnancy, then disappears after delivery. It's called, gestational diabetes, and it occurs in about one of 100 women, usually in the second half of the pregnancy. It happens then because that is when hormones from the placenta are at their peak levels, and those hormones work against insulin to cause the insufficient burning of blood sugar.

It does affect the size of babies; they tend to be bigger. Conversely, for reasons that aren't clear, the size of the baby affects the progress of the diabetes problem. Note: Any woman who has a baby heavier than nine pounds should be tested for diabetes.

Can you now become a true diabetic? Yes, the woman who has had gestational diabetes has about a three in 10 chance of becoming permanently diabetic within five years.

Whether you have gestational diabetes is important for the doctor to know, because controlling it during subsequent pregnancy is very important, whether it is the gestational type or the regular kind. Meanwhile, many people can manage with diet and moderate exercise. Some may have to take insulin. And future pregnancies must be monitored for sugar problems.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Is it possible to have a positive ANA blood test and not have lupus? — S.Y.

It's more than just possible, and for some people without other signs of lupus it's even likely.

You can show positive and have some other illness causing it, like rheumatoid arthritis. Sometimes certain drugs will cause a positive finding, too, and some people with liver disease or thyroid disorder will show positive.

In fact, about 5 percent of all people 60 and older will have positive ANA without attendant lupus. The same goes for younger people, although in them it may augur development of lupus later. The initials stand for anti-nuclear antibody.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: At age

88 I just had a blood scan test covering 26 items. My blood pressure was 142/76. The only item reported out of the established safe range was triglycerides (at 232). When I asked the doctor what I should do to lower this count, he replied, "Nothing." Can you give me help through your greatly-appreciated column? — H.D.H.

That would have been my comment to an 88-year-old man with such a slight elevation of blood triglycerides. Don't change a thing that you're doing. No one is even sure if triglyceride elevation alone is a dangerous thing. If levels are very high or elevated along with high cholesterol; then you try to lower both. Often, just getting weight to normal brings triglycerides down.

Here's a case where I have to agree in spades with the popular maxim, "If it ain't broke, don't fix it." And from what I can gather, you seem to be ticking like a $500 watch.

Arthritis victim determined to battle disease

DOYLESTOWN, Pa. (AP) — To be dependent upon others, for B.J. Gregor, is just about the worst thing possible.

For the past 30 years, Gregor has waged a tough battle against arthritis, which has spread to practically every joint in her body. Both her knees and four finger joints on her right hand have had to be replaced with artificial parts.

Each day, Gregor exercises to ensure her independence, which allows her to dress herself, paint, write poetry, move around the house and be active in the community.

At age 69, Gregor helps others cope with a disease that has no cure. She is a self-help counselor for Quakertown Community Hospital's arthritis program.

Mrs. Gregor says she can help other people in the program because she is well aware of the problems different people can have with arthritis.

"Different people have different needs and different ways of using the information," she said.

Through the program, she says she is able to teach people things that took her 20 years to learn.

"When most people want to give up, they look to Gregor, who has such a great attitude," said Ann Duerst, coordinator of community education at Quakertown Community Hospital. "Just to see her in action, it is great for the people in the (self-help) class."

Gregor says arthritis patients are not handicapped or crippled — just people with "a heck of an inconvenience."

Individuals with arthritis must remain busy, she points out. In order to reduce the pain the patients have to continue to stay mobile. They must realize that they cannot go back to the way things used to be, she says. "This is now, so let's do something about it."

Gregor says a lot of people don't realize that they enjoy being dependent on others. She cautions people with arthritis not to enlarge the pain of their disease to gain attention.

The trick to helping others is to let them know they are helping you, she explains. "Every place I go, I learn more than I teach."

Her husband, William, a retired construction supervisor, has helped her and others continue their independence. In a workshop near their home in East Greenville, Gregor makes various items out of wood to enable arthritic patients to turn on the television or microwave oven, or even pull up their own socks.

Gregor says she tries to continue to learn about the disease and she attends as many seminars on it as possible.

She would eventually like to set up a program to talk to people who have just been diagnosed as arthritic. She says the people who attend the self-help program have already accepted the disease and are on the long road back toward rehabilitation.

Ex-Cowboy ready for former team

IRVING (AP) — Chicago's Mike Ditka returns tonight as a coach for the first time since he played and worked as an assistant under Dallas Cowboys Coach Tom Landry.

The unbeaten Cowboys, featuring the return of holdout running back Tony Dorsett, and the winless Bears, who recently welcomed back middle linebacker Mike Singletary, play at 7 p.m. CDT at Texas Stadium in the nationally televised National Football League exhibition game.

Dallas defeated Chicago 23-14 last year at Soldier Field as Ditka, the former student, went against the old master, Landry.

Chicago is 3-7 against Dallas in regular season games and 2-1 in preseason play.

"We'll find out more about our team this week going against the guys from Texas," Ditka said. "They're going to come out and play their veterans and come to kick the hell out of us because they play us later in the year.

...ready for boos

"We've got to be ready because they're playing pretty well right now," he said.

The Cowboys have defeated Green Bay and San Diego in preseason play, while Chicago has lost to St. Louis and Indianapolis.

Dorsett, who missed 20 days of training camp before his contract was renegotiated, said he is ready to go.

"I'm in excellent shape," he said.

Dorsett, the sixth leading rusher in NFL history, ended up with a five-year pact that has deferred payments well into the next century.

At one point during his holdout, Dorsett called the Cowboys "double-crossers." He meekly apologized when he returned to camp.

...faces former team

Landry fined him $20,000 and held him out of last week's game against San Diego. He also has worked Dorsett hard in practice, getting him into a goalline scrimmage early this week.

"The contact was good so I must be in shape," said Dorsett. "I can't wait to get back into the starting lineup. I don't plan to hold anything back. If you get out there and try to keep yourself from getting hurt, you'll get hurt."

7 p.m.
Channel 2

Dorsett said he expects a cold reception from some fans.

"I imagine there will be some boos and cheers, sort of mixed reviews," he said.

"I haven't given it much thought. It's not something I'm concerned about one way or the other. Those who support me I think them. Those who are against me, I apologize."

When he's pressed, however, Dorsett realizes he won't be the most popular man in Texas Stadium tonight. "I've seen the fans boo the best in the business, even Roger Staubach. But when you do good they'll cheer for you just as loud."

Singletary renegotiated his contract and reported to camp last week, vowing "I'm ready to play right now. I'm playing against Dallas."

Dallas quarterback Danny White, who suffered a torn cartilage in his left rib cage, will not play for the Cowboys, turning the starting duties over to Gary Hogeboom.

South Koreans maintain supremacy in LL World Series

WILLIMSPORT, Pa. (AP) — Little League coach Seong-Yeol Kwag says he wants to spend more time in America.

"I want to learn the American way of baseball, then go back and teach to the Korean boys," he said.

Maybe Americans could learn something from the Koreans. For the second straight year, a team from Seoul, South Korea, coached by Kwag has won the Little League World Series.

On Saturday, Seoul beat Mexicali, Mexico, 7-1, getting a one-hitter by You-Yong Jung. On Tuesday, after a visit to New York City, the Korean team plans to head for home, where "we expect a big celebration," Kwag said.

Asian teams have won 15 of the last 19 Little League World Series. The Asian dominance started with Japanese teams in 1967 and 1968 and continued with the Taiwanese winning 10 of the next 12.

Is that an indication the tide may be shifting to Korea?

"I still think the (Nationalist) Chinese teams are the best," Kwag said.

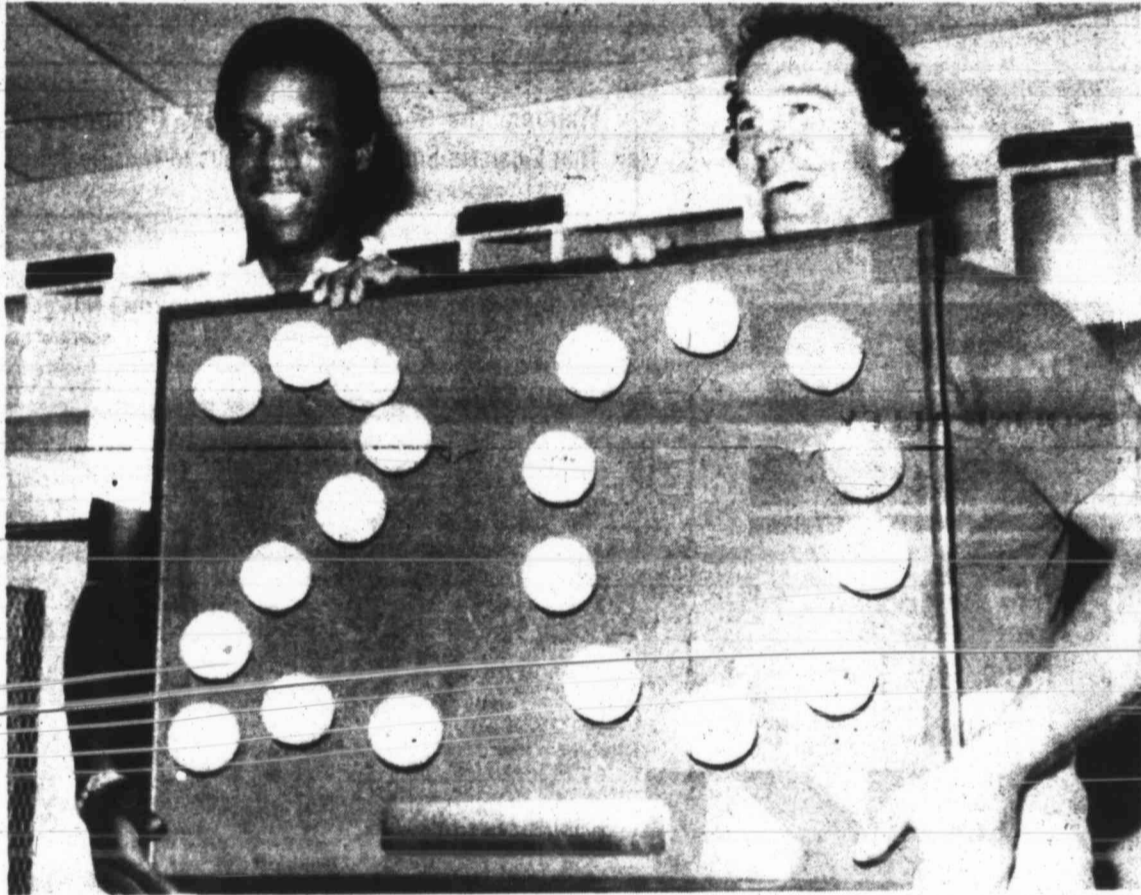

The game Saturday was the first championship without a U.S. team. Mexicali, a border city in Baja Calif., played in the West region for 22 years before reaching Williamsport. The Mexicans defeated teams from Staten Island and Morristown, Tenn., to reach the final.

Several members of the Morristown team crowded into the Koreans' quarters Saturday night to trade Little League pins and to cautiously sample Korean food.

"I learned about the Little League spirit," Kwag said. "Everybody doesn't just care about winning, just friendship. This is a series by children, for children."

Jae-Jin Jung was impressed with the welcome the two teams received from the 35,000 fans.

Bronx Bombers stay hot with three-game sweep

By The Associated Press
Thanks to a rookie, the New York Yankees did a little better in a traditional troublespot.

Dan Pasqua drove in four runs with three hits, including a three-run homer, leading the Yankees to an 8-5 victory Sunday over the Seattle Mariners.

The victory at the Kingdome, where New York has often had problems in recent years, completed a three-game sweep and was 10th triumph in the last 11 games for the Yankees. New York moved within three games of American League East leader Toronto, which lost to Chicago 5-3.

In other AL games, California beat Detroit 7-1; Texas stopped Kansas City 7-3; Oakland routed Baltimore 10-4; and Cleveland swept a double-header from Milwaukee, 6-2 and 2-0.

Pasqua, with just two hits in his previous 15 at-bats since being recalled from the minors Aug. 16, hit a three-run homer in the first inning.

That quickly changed as Pasqua homered off Mike Moore, 8-11. It was the fifth home run of the season for Pasqua, who added a single in the fourth and an RBI double in the sixth.

Don Mattingly hit a two-run homer in the seventh for New York and increased his major league-leading RBI total to 104.

fielder Chet Lemon.
The victory, coupled with Kansas City's loss, moved the Angels 2½ games ahead of the Royals in the AL West.

California trailed 1-0 when Gary Pettis drew a leadoff walk from Walt Terrell, 12-7 in the sixth. Rob Wilfong then sacrificed and reached when first baseman Darrell Evans made an error.

Bob Boone singled home Pettis, and Wilfong also scored when Lemon overran the ball. Dick Schofield scored later in the inning on an error by catcher Marty Castillo and a single by Rod Carew. Rangers 7, Royals 3

Pete O'Brien drove in four runs and Toby Harrah knocked in Texas' other three runs to back the five-hit pitching of Charlie Hough.

O'Brien singled home the tiebreaking run in the sixth inning that gave the Rangers a 3-2 lead, and then lined a bases-loaded triple in the seventh. Harrah had an RBI single, a sacrifice fly and a bases-loaded walk.

Hough, 13-12, struck out five during his 11th complete game of the season. He allowed home runs to George Brett and Lonnie Smith.

Brett's homer was his 20th of the season, marking the sixth time he has hit 20 or more in a year.

The Royals got 11 of their 14 hits off Bud Black, 8-13, who lasted only 5 1-3 innings.

A's 10, Orioles 4
Dave Kingman and Steve Henderson hit two-run homers and rookie Tim Lincecum pitched a five-hitter as host Oakland finally beat nemesis Mike Flanagan.

Flanagan entered the game with a 15-4 career mark against the A's, including a 10-0 record at the Oakland Coliseum.

Birtzas, 10-4, gave up three Baltimore home runs. Lee Lacy homered twice and Floyd Rayford connected for a two-run shot with two outs in the ninth.

Indians 6-2, Brewers 2-0
Tom Waddell pitched seven strong innings in the opener, and Ramon Romero and Bryan Clark combined on a six-hitter in the second game as Cleveland swept visiting Milwaukee.

Bob James finished up for the White Sox and earned his 22nd save, ending the Blue Jays' three-game winning streak.

Harold Baines hit a three-run homer during a four-run uprising in the first inning against Jimmy Key, 10-6.

Mets cruise by Padres, 9-3

By The Associated Press
Although he's yet to finish his second season it seems Dwight Gooden joins the ranks of one baseball immortal or another after every start.

The 20-year-old right-hander became the youngest pitcher ever to win 20 games in a season with a sub-par six-inning stint as the New York Mets defeated San Diego Padres 9-3 Sunday.

Gooden, 20-3, the NL strikeout leader with 212 and earned run average pacesetter with 1.78, benefited from a 16-hit attack by the Mets, led by Darryl Strawberry, who knocked in four runs with an RBI single, a two-run double and his 20th homer.

The Mets scored three unearned first-inning runs against Eric Show, 9-8, after an error by second baseman Tim Flannery. Strawberry hit his two-run double on a misjudged fly to center and scored on a single by Howard Johnson.

NL Roundup

Cardinals 5, Braves 2
St. Louis stayed a game ahead of the Mets in the East by winning its fifth straight and handing Atlanta its sixth consecutive loss and 12th in 13 outings.

Kurt Kepshire, 10-7, hurled a five-hitter for 7 2-3 innings and Andy Van Slyke homered for the Cardinals, while Terry Harper had two solo homers for the Braves, one off Kepshire and one off reliever Jeff Lahti.

Expos 6, Dodgers 1
Montreal snapped Bob Welch's personal eight-game winning streak as Hubie Brooks knocked in three runs and Bob Gullikson pitched a five-hitter against Los Angeles.

Gullikson, 12-9, had a three-hit shutout until the ninth, but two more hits, a walk and a sacrifice fly by Greg Brock got the Dodgers their only run. Brooks, the Expos' leader in RBI with 74, one more than his previous career high, went 3-for-3, including a sacrifice fly, an RBI single and a run-scoring triple.

Reds 5, Cubs 3
Tom Browning became the major leagues' winningest rookie this year, improving his record to 13-9 by scattering seven hits for six innings for Cincinnati against Chicago.

Nick Esasky aided Browning's cause with a homer and an RBI single. Bo Diaz doubled home the tie-breaking run and John Franco pitched the last three innings for his seventh save.

Esasky hit his 15th homer in the third and he added an RBI single in the fifth to put Cincinnati ahead 3-2. Ron Cey tied it 3-3 with his 17th homer for the Cubs in the sixth.

Pirates 9-10, Astros 3-9
Last-place Pittsburgh blew a 9-4 lead to Houston in the second game, then won it in the ninth when Sammy Khalifa singled home Mike Brown with one out.

Brown, who had a two-run double in Pittsburgh's five-run seventh inning, reached third when losing pitcher Jeff Calhoun, 1-3, fielded his routine grounder and threw the ball into right field. One out later, Khalifa, who hit his second homer earlier in the second game, bounced a single off the left-field wall to give Don Robinson, 4-8, the victory.

Pittsburgh scored five runs in the seventh inning to take a 9-4 lead, but the Astros rallied with four runs in the eighth and one in the ninth to tie it.

In the first game, Rick Reuschel drove in three runs with a solo homer and a double and pitched a four-hitter, allowing only one earned run.
