Lighter side

MAPLEWOOD, N.J. (AP) — Robert Jackson would have made a good mail carrier.
The 65-year-old NJ Transit Corp. employee retired Friday after never missing a day of work since starting with the company in 1940, having conquered blizzards and an occasional cold.
"I tried to be the best I could," said Jackson, a payroll manager for 5,300 bus system employees of the state's mass transit agency.
Jackson said he has no secret formula for staying healthy and recalled that several times he went to work with a nasty cold.

Car bomb

Damage but no injuries results from explosion

By KEELY COGHLAN
Staff Writer
Big Spring firemen and police are investigating a car bombing that occurred Saturday night on Owens Street.
The bomb, apparently triggered by a time mechanism, ripped open the top of a passenger car at 9:30 p.m. in front of 1708 Owens, throwing one quarter panel of a car at least thirty feet away, assistant fire chief Burr Lea Settles said.
No one was injured in the blast, which could be heard from blocks away, said onlookers.
The car, a 1980 yellow and white Ford LTD, is owned by Terry Watkins of 1708 Owens. Watkins usually is the only one who drives the car, said his wife, Eva.
"I don't understand it," said Mrs. Watkins. "My husband was asleep and I was inside when it blew up."
"We're in no trouble that I know of. We've never had any trouble," she said. The Watkins and their son, Gary, have lived in the house 11 years, she said.
"What upsets me is that I think we could have been in there" when it exploded, Mrs. Watkins said.
Police and firemen had cordoned off the block shortly after the explosion and were waiting for explosives experts from the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms office in Lubbock to arrive. They were expected to examine the area at daylight.
The bureau's officials would conduct the investigation, said Settles. Settles said they had no suspects in the bombing, which blew out two front windows of the house. The force of the blast also dented an insulation panel at the front of the house overlooking the driveway. The house was under repairs, according to neighbors.
A metal panel from the car lay in front of a tree near the sidewalk at a neighboring house.
Settles said firemen and police did not know where the bomb had been placed in the car and did not have a motive for the bombing.

Terry Watkins of 1708 Owens examines his car, a 1980 Ford LTD, which was ripped apart by a bomb Saturday night in front of his house. The Big Spring fire and police departments are continuing to investigate the case.

Gary Watkins and his friends were gathered in a tight group next door to the Watkins, watching as police snapped pictures of the wreck and the house.
"It's insane," Gary said. "I guess someone was trying to kill my dad." He said he did not know of anyone who wanted to harm his father.
"Terry Watkins doesn't have any enemies," said Abel Carrillo of 811 E. 14th, who was talking to Gary. Carrillo had been next door at the time of the explosion. "It sounded like thunder, loud thunder," he said.
David Williams, who lives at 13th and Donley, said he heard the blast from his house. "It's crazy," he said.
"It's too wicked," agreed another of the youths talking to Gary.
Three fire department vehicles were called to the scene, and about 10 to 15 policemen were present as well, Settles said. Police Chief Rick Turner said the fire department would handle the investigation.

Fate of affirmative action in Supreme Court's hands

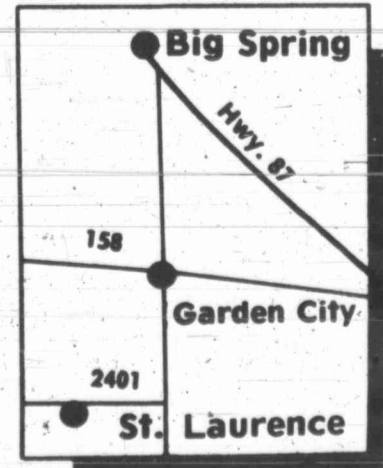

WASHINGTON (AP) — Amid Reagan administration attacks on affirmative action, the Supreme Court is the focus this week of a legal battle expected to have a profound impact on women and minorities in the American workplace.
The court will hear arguments Wednesday on whether black school teachers in Jackson, Mich., lawfully were given racial preferences that forced the layoffs of whites with more seniority.
The case is one of three under high court study in which the administration is asking the justices to call for a virtual halt to preferential employment treatment for women and minorities — an idea launched 20 years ago.
Justice Harry A. Blackmun said in a speech to federal judges that the Michigan case "very abruptly raises the question of the validity of affirmative action these days."
At issue are preferential programs undertaken by public agencies. But the court's eventual ruling, expected by July, likely will have major repercussions for private employers as well.
The outcome "will be extremely crucial" to the future of affirmative action, said Rutgers University law professor Arthur T. Kinoy, who is helping civil rights groups oppose the administration's position.
He accused the administration of trying "to bury the mandates underlying affirmative action. They are attempting to turn the clock back almost to the pre-Civil War period."
The administration contends that favored on-the-job treatment for some is reverse discrimination against those excluded, primarily white males, and violates the Constitution and a federal law banning employment bias.
In a document submitted to the court, the Justice Department said it does not oppose affirmative action to help individuals who were victims of discrimination.
But the department said preferential treatment for all members of a minority violates the constitutional "principle of equal treatment for all persons regardless of race, and our republic's basic moral vision of the unity of all mankind."
The department said such preferences "will teach... that 120 years after the end of slavery government may still advance some and suppress others not as individuals but because of the color of their skin. Laws granting preferences to members of enumerated minority groups... inevitably harm innocent individuals... (and) perpetuate and foster racial and ethnic divisions."

Hobby says deficit proposal could force special session

Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau
AUSTIN — Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby has warned Texas congressmen that a proposal to eliminate the federal deficit could force a special session of the Legislature.
If Texas is forced to make up for cuts in federal funding under the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings balanced-budget plan, lawmakers may need to reconvene early, Hobby wrote in an Oct. 25 letter to the Texas congressional delegation.
"Because Texas' budget is locked into place through August 31, 1987, the governor could be forced to call a special session of the Legislature if this federal legislation obligates the state to pick up the costs of federal programs," Hobby wrote. Hobby urged the lawmakers to push for provisions that would let the state cut services, rather than replace funds, should federal money be cut.
"Until we get a clearer fix on what the final version of the bill will be, any talk of a special session is premature," Bob McPherson, an aide to Gov. Mark White, said Friday. McPherson said the cuts would come not automatically unless Congress failed to reach the deficit targets.
"If the cuts were effective immediately, then perhaps a called session would be needed," said Jim Yancy, an aide to Sen. Grant Jones, D-Abilene. Jones co-chaired the joint committee that wrote the 1985-1986 state budget earlier this year.
"The cuts would take effect at the end of fiscal 1986 at the earliest," Yancy said. "They could handle it as an emergency matter at the beginning of the 1987 session."

Deutsch treat Homemade sausage highlights fall festival

By SPENCER SANDOW
Staff Writer
ST. LAURENCE — Ground meat was everywhere. It covered the tables and filled many big, square bowls. A hundred men in jeans and long aprons worked with the meat, stuffing it into long, thin, balloon-like containers, making German-style sausage.
The preparation was Saturday for the annual St. Laurence fall festival, which takes place today. St. Laurence residents made 7,700 pounds of country-sausage, and they say it will all be gone before noon.
Alfred Schwartz, a third-generation German-American and chairman of the sausage-making, said the whole community turned out to help with the festival, an estimated 250 people. While the men spent about 4½ hours making sausage, the women prepared the cole slaw and plenty of homemade breads, pies and cakes for the occasion.
St. Laurence sausage is made entirely by the townsfolk, even to raising the hogs for the meat. Schwartz said 32 hogs and nine steers were slaughtered to make the sausage, which is 60 percent pork and 40 percent beef.
The facilities looked primitive — a big, airy barn, the floor covered with clean sawdust, tables were big wood slabs over barrels. But many stressed the sanitary conditions taken with the sausage making. Clean hands, clean tools and clean tables were assured.
Most of the ones handling the meat wore rubber gloves, Schwartz said. "There's no problem keeping it clean," he said.
The raw meat was ground and seasoned with a secret spice recipe. Small machines compressed the meat and stuffed it into long, edible cases to make the familiar sausage ropes. Men tied strings on to the ends of the ropes.
"It's all beef and pork. There's none of that weird stuff, no filler," said sausage maker Roger Lange. "That's what makes it good."
Young boys pushed plastic-lined wheelbarrows full of raw sausage out of the big, barnlike room to the smokehouse nearby. There it was hung by bunches onto nails. The smoking was set to begin at noon Saturday and would last about 18 hours, Schwartz said.
People had been collecting oak wood from the hill country for the smoking. The smokehouse would be sealed off and the burning wood placed on the dirt floor to fill the room with thick, pungent smoke to flavor the sausages.
This morning, the smoked sausage was to be boiled in huge vats for about 20 minutes, Schwartz said. It will be sold in booths at the festival today.
Left over was a wagonload of hog and steer bones. People take the bones home to feed their dogs or just to eat, Schwartz said.
Along with the sausage at the festival today, the Bavarian Two band will play. There will be barbecue, carnival games and homemade pies and cakes sold. The festival is at the St. Laurence Catholic Church on Highway 2401, about five miles from the Garden City highway.

Lawrence Jost, left, and Alfred Schwartz hang homemade country sausage to be smoked Saturday for the St. Laurence fall festival, which opens today.

Fine day for parking meters

Scorned objects become stars on 50th anniversary

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — The 50th anniversary of the parking meter, long loathed by motorists, was celebrated Saturday with a parade, songs, poems and awards for the most ingenious excuses for failing to keep the coin-eaters fed.

All 1,100 of the often-cursed parking meters in this borough halfway between New York and Philadelphia wore hats and sported gold and blue balloons that said, "Happy 50th Birthday Parking Meters."

"My hands are still numb," said Becca Miller, 11, one of about 40 children who received ice cream and cake after dressing up the meters during a steady drizzle in temperatures in the low 50s.

John Jackson, chief of city parking operations, said meters bring in $1 million annually here and have been a way of life in the borough for 35 years.

The meters require a lot of "tender, loving care," he said as he displayed pictures of parking meter inventor Carlton C. Magee, early meter prototypes and Oklahoma City police officers ticketing early violators in the city where the meter was invented in 1935.

"This is my first meter parade," said a beaming Art Korfin, regional sales representative for Park-O-Meter of Russellville, Ark., one of the nation's two major meter companies. The company donated $600 to help cover the loss in meter revenues during the party.

Korfin said the original intent of the parking meter was to help cities keep traffic moving so merchants could have a greater turnover of customers.

Korfin said he did not know how many meters there are nationwide, but he noted that there are 70,000 meters in New York City alone.

Princeton Mayor Barbara Boggs Sigmund watches as Nancy Hughes, 11, puts a birthday hat onto a parking meter in Princeton, N.J., Saturday morning. To celebrate the 50th anniversary of the meters, the borough decorated them with party hats and balloons.

The borough also celebrated a $17,000 windfall in overdue parking tickets paid under an amnesty program that began a month ago and ended Saturday.

The Borough Council declared the partial amnesty as a way to collect the fees and clear borough records. A $10 fee is imposed if a warrant is issued.

Meters along the streets of Princeton, home of Princeton University, cost 30 cents an hour while meters in public parking lots cost $2 for 10 hours.

Mayor Barbara Boggs Sigmund said she was amazed at the community response to what "one would think is such an unlovable object."

The highest fine paid by a single person was $736 and that person, who was not identified, will receive a free day of parking at any meter.

A parade of about 50 people around Tiger Park was led by two often-maligned borough employees, meter maid Mary Copper and meter man Andy Anderson, who were queen and king of the celebration.

Later, a crowd of about 100 people at the park were treated to music by local musicians who called themselves "Barry Peterson and the Meter Men."

Gift certificates were awarded for most ingenious excuse, most generous involuntary contributor to the tax coffers and best theory on how the meter maid "always knows when you're only one minute overtime."

The most ingenious excuse came from Bruce Whitlock of Pennington. When he got his ticket, he said he had just returned from Poland.

"When I parked my car, I noticed that all the meters of nearby cars pointed to a word," he said.

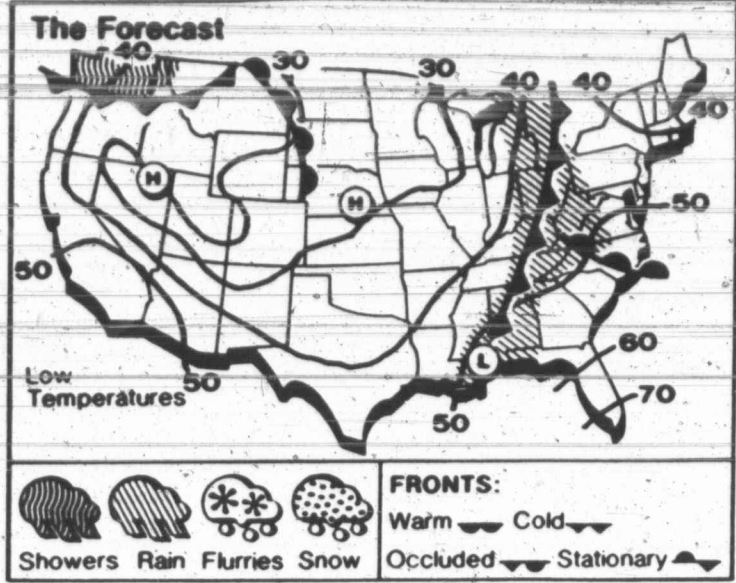

He said he looked up the word "expired" in his Polish-English dictionary and found it defined as "dead."

"So I figured the meter wasn't working... as they say in Poland, 'Never stuff oats in a dead horse,'" Whitlock said in his entry, one of about 100 entries in each category.

The winner of the most implausible excuse was Oscar Bascara, who said, "How could one trust a meter that has been around for so many years?"

"They're senile. You expect them to keep time?" he said.

Weather

State

By The Associated Press

An upper-level low pressure trough over Central Texas continued to trigger light rain over the eastern third of the state Saturday, while more isolated showers dotted the Hill Country from Kerrville to Austin.

Meanwhile, scattered patches of light rain were off the upper Texas coast in the Gulf of Mexico. Otherwise, skies remained mostly cloudy over East and South Texas and were fair over the rest of the state.

Statewide, temperatures were in the 50s and 60s. The late-afternoon extremes ranged from 52 at both Lufkin and Tyler to 67 at Del Rio. South to southwest winds breezed the High Plains and the Trans Pecos, while north to northwest winds continued over the rest of the state, the National Weather Service said.

Wind speeds were generally in the 10 to 15 mph range, but gusty winds in excess of 25 mph were clocked at Beeville in South Texas and at both Brownsville and McAllen in the lower Valley.

The forecast calls for rain to end over all but Southeast Texas early Sunday. Temperatures should be slightly warmer Sunday with highs in the 60s and 70s.

Forecast

West Texas — Generally fair most sections Sunday through Monday. Highs Sunday and Monday in the 60s most sections except lower 70s Big Bend. Lows Saturday night mid 30s north to the mid 40s Big Bend.

Special

Possible targets for cuts mentioned by Hobby include Medicaid, Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) and programs for educating the handicapped.

Other state officials also are bracing for a broadside blow to programs for the poor, elderly and handicapped, should the bill pass.

"We're cringing. We don't know how hard it will hit," J. Livingston Kosberg, chairman of the state Department of Human Resources, told the Sunset Advisory Commission on Friday. Kosberg and other agency heads appeared before the commission, which reviews the performance of state agencies.

Kosberg estimated that Medicaid cuts in Texas could reach $100 million a year.

Diane Stewart of the Texas Office of State-Federal Relations in Washington said Medicaid cuts could range from $47 million to $193 million annually, depending upon economic conditions and whether Congress meets deficit reduction goals set by the bill. Any estimates of cuts are rough, since the bill's final form has yet to be seen, Stewart said.

Under the budget-reduction plan, federal spending would be cut automatically if Congress fails to reduce the deficit to target levels. Certain programs would be exempt from the cuts. The Senate-passed version of the bill would not exempt any of the welfare programs referred to in Hobby's letter. The House version, passed Friday, exempts some, but not all of the programs from the cutting process.

Snyder protest planned to keep cable stations

Citizens are planning a stand-up in front of the Snyder Courthouse Monday to call attention and gather support for keeping WFAA and KERA channels on local cable TV, said Bill Nehls, local organizer of a petition to keep the two channels.

The gathering will be at 5:30 p.m.

About 2,000 area residents are expected to participate in the stand-up, Nehls said. The Snyder high school band will play and a drama instructor from South Plains College in Snyder will emcee a program to inform participants of happenings regarding the stations, Nehls said.

Participants will have a chance to sign a petition in support of keeping the television stations, he said.

The petition drive began when Times Mirror Microwave, the company that brings WFAA and KERA to West Texas, informed local cable companies it stop offering the service as of Nov. 15. The microwave company had lost the Sweetwater tower, officials said, and would be unable to broadcast WFAA, KERA via another route, the officials said.

When cable customers began protesting, Times Mirror offered a contract to four West Texas cable companies to keep WFAA and KERA for a fee nearly double the current rate, Big Spring Cable systems manager Paul Thoman said.

Texas Communities Antenna, the Big Spring cable company's home office, is in the process of reviewing the proposed contract and will decide whether WFAA stays on local cable, officials said.

Affirmative

So far, the administration has had little success in convincing federal appeals courts of its arguments.

"They've lost every challenge," said Barry Goldstein, a lawyer with the NAACP Legal Defense Fund. He added that the administration's attack on goals and quotas also has not been welcomed by the captains of industry.

"There is tremendous support" for affirmative action by employers, he said. "It's almost remarkable."

The Equal Employment Advisory Council, representing many of the nation's leading corporations, has urged the high court not to tamper with affirmative action for private employers.

Council members "would view with great concern any limitation on the ability of employers to adopt voluntary policies" to aid women and minorities, lawyers for the business group said.

The business leaders said the current system — reinforced by a 1964 federal civil rights law and previous Supreme Court rulings — generally shields them from lawsuits by women and minorities on the one hand and white males on the other.

The administration campaign against affirmative action was slowed last month when officials were unable to agree on a proposed revision of a 20-year-old presidential order requiring affirmative action for companies that receive government contracts.

That internal dispute involving the private sector does not bear directly on the Supreme Court battle over affirmative action in such public jobs as police officer, firefighter and teacher.

But administration critics cite the effects of the 1965 executive order — a product of President Lyndon Johnson's "Great Society" — to urge continued support for affirmative action.

In a study of more than 16 million workers from 1974 to 1980, University of California economist Jonathan S. Leonard concluded in 1984 that affirmative action works.

2 suffer injuries in wreck

A man and woman were treated and released from Malone-Hogan Hospital after suffering injuries in a two-car accident Saturday, said a hospital spokesman.

The accident occurred at 12:35 a.m. on U.S. Highway 84, 1.6 miles north of Big Spring.

Injured were driver Teresa Gonzales Aguilar, 39, of Lamesa and Arthur Aguilar, 38, address unavailable. Another passenger, Albert Aguilar, 39, of 1902 N. 13th suffered minor injuries but was not treated at the hospital, the spokesman said.

Aguilar's car, a 1982 blue Chevrolet Cavalier, was traveling in the wrong lane when the accident occurred, according to the Department of Public Safety accident report. It was traveling northbound on U.S. 87 in the inside traffic lane for southbound traffic, the report stated.

The other vehicle, a 1979 red Chevrolet van, was driven by Jaime Cruz, 18, of Knott Route Box 37, who was uninjured. The van was traveling southbound in the inside lane with and a truck was traveling in the outside lane, according to the report.

Three van passengers were uninjured, and no citations were issued, according to the report. DPS trooper Glen Redmon is investigating the wreck.

Man arrested after wreck

A Big Spring man was arrested after a one-car accident at 113 N.E. Ninth at 5:22 p.m. Friday.

Jose Costilla, 25, of Apache Bend Apt. No. 4 was arrested on suspicion of driving while intoxicated and failure to maintain financial responsibility, according to police reports.

A witness told police Costilla was traveling west on Ninth Street in his 1963 blue Chevrolet pickup when the truck began skidding. It veered right, the driver fell out, and the truck struck a dumpster, according to the accident report.

The unoccupied truck was turned around by the impact and headed east, running over the north curb and striking a police, the report stated.

No injuries or damage estimates were listed in the police report.

Shuttle has cabin leak

SPACE CENTER, Houston — An air leak traced to a furnace and a loss of communications caused by a fire on the ground plagued the international crew of the space shuttle Challenger on Saturday, but officials said there was no threat to the astronauts or to their science mission.

Space agency officials said the leak caused the flow of oxygen and nitrogen gas from supply tanks to more than triple for a short time, and forced the astronauts to search for the source of the atmosphere loss.

Flight director Larry Bourgois said the problem was believed to be in a vent in one of five furnaces used to melt metals and glasses in the laboratory carried in Challenger's cargo bay.

2 questioned in slayings

DAYTON, Ohio — A man was charged with murder Saturday in the beating and shooting deaths of two women and three children in what one investigator called the city's worst homicide in at least two decades.

Three other children were seriously injured in the incident, and two of them were in critical condition Saturday.

Sammy Moreland, 31, was arrested and charged after he came to the house about an hour after the bodies had been discovered late Friday night by a relative, said police Sgt. Kevin Smith.

A second suspect also was questioned, Smith said, but no charges had been filed by Saturday afternoon.

Ford to offer air bags

ORLANDO, Fla. — Ford Motor Co. plans to become the first domestic auto maker to offer the air bag safety device to the general public as optional equipment on some models, a former federal safety official says.

Joan Claybrook, who headed the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration during the Carter administration, said Friday that Ford will announce the air bag option on Monday.

The air bags, which automatically inflate during a crash to cushion occupants, would be offered for the driver's side of the vehicle.

5 bodies found in mine

ORANGEVILLE, Utah — The bodies of five of the 27 miners who died in a coal mine fire last year were found by crews who entered the Wilberg Mine early Saturday, an official said.

Twenty-six men and one woman were working in the mine's 5th Right section when a fire erupted in a main tunnel into the mine. Three days later, the fast-spreading blaze forced officials to evacuate the mine and seal it in an effort to choke off the flames.

Rescue crews carry a man away from a mudslide near Marblemount, Wash., after he was trapped under mud, rock, water and fallen trees for more than nine hours.

One man rescued, 3 die in slide debris

MARBLEMOUNT, Wash. (AP) — Rescuers working frantically below a shaky debris dam dug with their bare hands early Saturday to save a man trapped in the wreckage of a mobile home buried by a mudslide near a Cascade Mountain river. The bodies of two women and a man were found later in the debris.

The bodies of the women were found Saturday morning, while the third body, that of a man, was found at about 3:30 p.m., said Skagit County sheriff's Deputy Dave Willard.

The survivor, Claire Wilson, 63, of Marblemount, was taken to United General Hospital in Sedro Woolley, about 40 miles away, said hospital spokeswoman Geneva Sasnett.

Wilson, who was treated for hypothermia and a crushed arm, was in critical condition after surgery, Ms. Sasnett said.

She said others in the trailer were believed to be Wilson's wife, Betty, and the owners of the mobile home, Bill and Alice Bower.

Crews using hand tools and a backhoe worked in a soft, steady rain to probe the silt and logs that engulfed the tangled sheet metal.

The mudslide had overrun a compound of mobile homes and summer cabins near the normally swift and shallow Cascade River near this remote community on the North Cascade Highway, about 80 miles northeast of Seattle.

The slide, which followed heavy rains in western Washington on Friday, also destroyed one cabin and damaged two others, said Tom Sheahan, county director of emergency services. The rain was expected to taper off later Saturday.

Dewey Hyatt, a private contractor who brought a backhoe to the site, said a boulder in the slide "cut the trailer in half. It just cut it all to pieces."

Rescuers believed Wilson survived because he apparently heard the mudslide and went to see what it was, said Don Hundahl, a Seattle City Light worker and volunteer firefighter.

"He was supposed to have gone to the door last night and when it hit him, it threw him clear," Hundahl said. "He wound up under a cot. He had an air pocket but his legs were trapped, his arms were trapped, his whole body was trapped under there."

At times using their bare hands, crews began digging for survivors about 8 p.m. after Wilson cried out in response to rescuers' shouts. The trailer wreckage was covered in places by eight feet of mud, said Steve Schroeder, chief photographer for the Skagit Valley Herald, who was at the scene.

For hours, rescuers clawed at the mud, rock and fallen trees, removing logs with chainsaws and digging with shovels. They were hastily evacuated at one point when the dam, formed by the slide and holding back more mud and water, threatened to collapse, Schroeder said.

"It made the rescue difficult because water kept seeping in and the mud kept caving in," Schroeder said. He estimated the mudslide was about 200 feet wide and up to 15 feet deep.

The trailer was the year-round home of an "older couple" who had two visitors when the slide hit, said sheriff's Sgt. John Hunter. Those inside the trailer were a "grandmotherly type, grandfatherly type, maybe (in their) 60s," he said.

More than 40 deputies, county Public Works Department employees, volunteer firefighters and Seattle City Light workers from nearby hydroelectric dams formed the rescue crews, Hunter said.

Rescuers freed Wilson's arm about 1:15 a.m. and soon began giving him oxygen and covering the exposed parts of his body with thermal packs, Schroeder said.

S. Africa restricts media

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Foreign correspondents on Saturday condemned a new ban on photographing unrest in emergency areas as an attempt to "prevent South Africa's social conflict from reaching the outside world."

Minister of Law and Order Louis le Grange said the restrictions were imposed Saturday because television crews and photographers had "proved to be a catalyst to further violence" in black townships where rioting took place.

Peace accord expected

DAMASCUS, Syria — Syrian leaders met top Lebanese warlords and politicians Saturday, as efforts to end Lebanon's 10-year-old civil war gained momentum. One top Syrian said a peace accord may be completed in days.

Syrian officials conferred in Damascus with Lebanese Moslem leaders. Maj. Gen. Mohammed Kholi, Syrian President Hafez Assad's national security adviser, met Christian politicians in Lebanon.

Schultz goes to Moscow

HELSINKI, Finland — Secretary of State George P. Shultz headed for Moscow on Saturday to see if new U.S. proposals to cut nuclear weapons and end five regional wars have improved prospects for President Reagan's summit meeting with Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

Less than three weeks remain to try to settle some of the "major differences" Shultz says stand in the way of an improved superpower relationship.

Time short, says Soviet

MOSCOW — A Kremlin foreign policy adviser wrote in a Sunday newspaper article that too little time remains before the U.S.-Soviet summit this month to work out a full-scale disarmament accord.

But the article by Henry A. Trofimenko called for an agreement on general arms control principles and regional disputes.

'Hammer gang' kills 5

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan — A "hammer gang" beat three adults and two children to death and injured five people in what newspapers said Saturday was the latest in a series of such attacks.

Police in the southern city of Hyderabad said unidentified assailants forced their way Friday into the homes of two families in a poor neighborhood.

The attackers killed two adults and an 8-year-old boy in one family and an adult and a 2-year-old girl in the other, police said. An adult and four children were injured, they added.

Raid on 2 shops nets illegal fish

DALLAS (AP) — About 75 illegal and potentially dangerous tropical fish were confiscated in a raid of two area shops, authorities said.

A four-month investigation led federal agents and Texas game wardens to Southwest Tropical Fish, a Grand Prairie wholesale outlet, and Tropical Seas Pet Shop in Oak Cliff on Friday, said Skip McBride, district law enforcement supervisor for the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department.

Electric catfish, which produce up to 650 volts of electricity, and fresh water stingray were confiscated, McBride said.

No arrests were made Friday. McBride said importation, sale or possession of the illegal fish is a Class-C misdemeanor carrying a fine of up to $200 per fish under state law, and is also a violation of federal laws regulating interstate commerce.

Raids on other area fish shops will continue, he said.

Key amendments demand turnout

Tuesday, state voters will go to the polls to decide constitutional amendments. It is important that Crossroads Country voters take the few minutes necessary Tuesday to ensure passage of at least the statewide water plan, amendments one and two on the ballot.

Our position on several key amendments are outlined below, and a more comprehensive summary of the issues is elsewhere on this page.

• PROPOSITIONS 1 and 2: These make up the "statewide water plan" you've heard so much about. There is little to no organized opposition to amendments, and a mountain of support. The amendments provide a coherent water plan for the entire state. If you do nothing else Tuesday, vote "yes" to Propositions 1 and 2.

• PROPOSITION 11: We support Amendment 11 even though it could open the door to an erosion of civil rights. The amendment would allow the Texas Legislature to redefine what makes a properly worded criminal indictment. For one thing, defendants would be required to object to improper wording of a charge prior to trial, not on appeal. Abuses of the current system, such as a case overturned on appeal because an indictment alleged drowning but not specifically "by water," demand repeal — and a "yes" vote to Proposition 11.

Around The Rim

Let's not dwell on the failures

By ROBIN WARD
 Reform in Texas schools was long overdue when House Bill 72 came along, and it looks like many good things are coming out of the legislation. But sidelining kids from extracurricular activities for six weeks for a single failure is not one of them.

If the purpose of the no-pass no-play rule is to encourage students to study harder and pull their grades up, then a one- or two-week ban should be sufficient, perhaps even more effective as an incentive.

There's a danger in restricting children from activities they enjoy because they don't do well in all their classes. Leo Buscaglia, professor of education at University of Southern California and author of several books on love, tells a thought-provoking story he calls The Animal School.

The animals got together in the forest one day and decided to start a school. There was a rabbit, a bird, a squirrel, a fish and an eel, and they formed a Board of Education. The rabbit insisted that running be in the curriculum. The bird insisted that flying be in the curriculum. The fish insisted on swimming, and the squirrel insisted that perpendicular tree climbing be included. They put all these things together and wrote a Curriculum Guide. Then they insisted that all the animals take all the subjects.

Although the rabbit was getting an A in running, perpendicular tree climbing was a real problem for him; he kept falling over backwards. Pretty soon he got to be sort of brain damaged, and he couldn't run any more. He found that instead of making an A in running, he was making a C and, of course, he was making an F in perpendicular climbing. The bird was really beautiful at flying, but when it came to burrowing in the ground, he couldn't do it so well. He kept breaking his beak and wings. Pretty soon he was making a C in flying as well as an F in burrowing, and he had a heck of a time with perpendicular tree climbing.

The moral of the story, says Buscaglia, is that the person who was valedictorian of the class was a mentally retarded eel who did everything in a half-way fashion.

Buscaglia's point was that conformity governs success in the educational scene.

But a more important point, it seems to me, is the effect of over-penalizing on children who can't do well in all their classes. Maybe more time should be spent encouraging growth in areas that individual students enjoy and have an aptitude for, and not making them feel like failures because they can't do everything well.

GOP cautious on brown vote

The debate over whether Hispanics in Texas are leaving the Democratic party and switching to the Republican party will be tested in only a matter of months if San Antonio Judge Roy Barrera Jr. enters the race for the Republican nomination for attorney general.

While Barrera evidently will not base his campaign for the nomination alone on his ability to attract Hispanic votes, his success or failure in May will be viewed as a measure of the future of Hispanics in the party.

That may not be fair to Barrera. The vast majority of Mexican-Americans in Texas — like most Texans — will vote in the Democratic primary because local races will feature local candidates — and those involve Democrats.

More likely, it is how the politics of the campaign develop that will be used to judge his campaign moreso than how he actually does.

Democrats are ready to pounce on a dismal Barrera showing as proof-positive that there is no room in the Republican camp for Mexican-Americans.

That, of course, is the argument right now. As the maneuvering leading up to the filing deadline for candidates in February approaches, Republican pollster Lance Tarrance says many Mexican-Americans have found a home in the GOP. Forty percent of the Hispanic vote, he said recently at a University of Texas conference on the problems of polling the Hispanic community, voted for Ronald Reagan in 1984. More are coming, he said, to the Republican view of things because of the party's stance on the so-called social issues of abortion, prayer in schools, etc.

If Tarrance is correct, then many Mexican-Americans should be excited about the impending decision by Barrera to take on incumbent liberal Democrat Attorney General Jim Mattox.

The Democrats dismiss Tarrance's assertions. They believe only 25 percent of the Hispanic vote in Texas went for Reagan, and they believe the vote will remain Democratic, the way it has been since Franklin Roosevelt.

But a Barrera race could do more than settle the ongoing argument over numbers. It could throw a loop into any Democratic strategy if in fact Tarrance is correct and younger, professional Mexican-Americans do vote in the Republican primary.

And what a loop it would be. If Mexican-Americans helped the Republicans actually nominate Barrera, the Republican party would have an attractive, clean-cut Henry Cisneros-type with which to run a statewide campaign to loosen up what used to be the solidly Democratic Mexican-American bloc vote.

An aggressive campaign by Barrera in the fall, the theory goes, might even tilt the race for governor and return the governor's mansion to the Republicans, who lost it three years ago this month.

But before they start counting on Hispanic votes, Republicans are going to have to cross a few hurdles that could give Democrats, in turn, heavy ammunition to use against the entire Republican party.

If Barrera fails, in a four-man race, to make a run-off, Republicans should get ready to hear the Democrats scream with delight in every corner of every Hispanic neighborhood that there is no room for Mexican-Americans in the GOP. Would that seal Republican attempts to make inroads into the brown community?

Many Democrats are convinced that would be the case, and herein lies another problem for Judge Barrera. If liberal Democrats vote in the Republican primary for candidates they consider would be the weakest and therefore the easiest to beat, most would scratch Barrera's name but quick. No reason to give the brown-brethren any reason to be tempted by having Barrera's name appear on the ballot in November.

Barrera's emerging candidacy is all the more interesting in light of a recent in-depth analysis of past elections...which reportedly influenced another prominent Mexican-American not to run statewide this coming year. The results showed no Hispanic could win statewide.

In that respect even Governor Mark White has been forced to pull some strings to deter would-be challenges within the Democratic party against his appointment to the Texas Supreme Court, Raul Gonzalez of Corpus Christi.

To have an Anglo Democrat jump up and challenge Gonzalez — and beat him — would open the same kinds of problems the Republicans face if Barrera fares poorly.

A chance of a lifetime

They'll do anything to get you to peek inside. They use an official-sounding sender's name, like "Auditing Department." Sometimes they stamp the envelope: "Official Letter of Notification."

If you get one, it doesn't mean you've won the Reader's Digest Sweepstakes; it means you're on the junk mail lists like I am.

I got one just the other day. I should have been tipped when the return address was Hicksville, N.Y., but a bold, bottom of the envelope box caught my eye. It said, "$2,000 fine or 5 years imprisonment or both for any person who interferes with or obstructs delivery of this letter or otherwise violates Article 18 United States Code."

Believe me, no one would want to obstruct this letter.

To the left of the address window on the envelope, it said:

"This is to inform you that your name has been picked as winner in the publicity sweepstakes of a well-known national company. The prize you have won is already yours: there is no cost or purchase obligation. Your prize is identified inside. To claim it, complete and return the enclosed Prize Claim Form to the company within the next 21 days. Your prize will be shipped from the company's New York corporate vault and delivered to your home by a U.S. Government employee."

I know who the government employee is. It's the postman.

It was such an obvious sham that I don't know why a sophisticated consumer like myself would give it a thought.

I ripped open the envelope.

And I found an invitation to order a Fabulous Pearl Necklace Collection (includes 7-inch wristlet, 18-inch after-five and 30-inch opera necklaces) for the low, low price of $19.95 (normally a $59.95 value).

The prize ID card said I was a winner of either $25,000 cash or a Tamiz Emerald.

That was much better than some of the prizes, like Gemstone Tweezers.

Even though I knew, beyond a shadow of a doubt, that this was one sweepstakes I didn't want to get tangled up with, I read through the material. If you're the winner of $25,000, I was asked, how do you want your payment — cash, U.S. bonds or gold?

Cash.

If you win the genuine Tamiz Emerald, do you want a Certificate of Authenticity?

Certainly.

I was tempted to enter. I was even tempted to throw $19.95 away as a good faith gesture. After all, they were promising me $25,000; it wouldn't be nice to appear uncooperative.

Then I caught a glance of the addressee's name. It wasn't John Rice. It wasn't even J.P. Rice or J. Rice.

It wasn't my name at all.

It was addressed to Mr. B.S. Herald.

I tossed it. Don't know that guy.

Handguns don't kill people...

To the editor:
 After reading the Opinion Page in USA Today, dated October 22, 1985, that stated Maryland Supreme Court Ruling of October 3, 1985, making the manufacturer of small handguns liable for damages committed during a crime. If laws of this nature are allowed to stand, future headlines might read:

GENERAL MOTORS SUED FOR SELLING CARS THAT ARE INVOLVED IN FATAL ACCIDENTS

These types of laws skirt the true problem and do not allow the blame to be placed on the criminal that commits the crime. Inanimate objects DO NOT commit crimes, PEOPLE DO! Let's not complicate issues, we do not punish criminals now days, they serve fractions of their sentences in most cases and that is the problem.

In closing, I realize Gun Control is a very emotional issue. I could write a short novel with the facts and figures proving gun control does not work in areas of our country where handguns have been banned. We do not need more complicated gun laws towards inanimate objects. What we do need is to punish habitual criminals severely and consistently!

Constitutional amendments outlined

By REP. LARRY DON SHAW
 Once again, it is time to go to the polls and cast your vote on various proposed changes to our Constitution. On Nov. 5, voters across the state will decide whether to add 14 amendments to the Texas Constitution.

In addition to the much publicized state water plan, there are several other key issues on the ballot this year. Each of these amendments was passed by a two-thirds majority in both the Texas House and Senate before it was placed on the ballot. Below, I have summarized some of the major proposals affecting my district in the hope that it will help you make a more informed decision on election day.

• PROPOSITION 1, the "Texas Water Plan," proposes to authorize the issuance of $900 million of water development bonds for various water-related purposes including water conservation, water development, water quality enhancement, flood control, drainage, subsidence control, recharge, chloride control, agricultural soil and water conservation and desalinization.

• PROPOSITION 2 is also considered part of the water package. It would allow the state to issue up to $200 million in state bonds for agricultural water conservation. Supporters say the money, to be spent within four years on projects approved by two-thirds of each house of the Legislature, will enable farmers to continue irrigation while seeking new water supplies and farming methods.

• PROPOSITION 5 would authorize the Legislature to regulate the provision of health care by hospital districts. The recent indigent health care legislation only set standards for public and county hospitals. Supporters say this amendment would allow for standardization of requirements for minimum care and save hospital districts money, but opponents argue that hospital districts have already agreed to whatever care their indigents need.

• PROPOSITION 6 would enable Texas to take advantage of the Interstate Corrections Compact by sending inmates to prison in other states. Thirty one states have already adopted the agreement and supporters say it will help break up prison gangs and control prison violence. Opponents believe trading prisoners won't help reduce violence in our prisons.

• PROPOSITION 8 would provide $500 million in additional bonding authority for the Veterans Housing Assistance Program. The board is now authorized to issue $500 million worth of general obligation bonds to fund low interest loans to help veterans buy homes. Board officials say the money will run out at the end of the year. Supporters say these loans have been administered in Texas at no cost to taxpayers and the program should continue. Opponents claim that veterans are already eligible for an array of federal benefits and this program isn't necessary.

• PROPOSITION 9 would permit the Legislature, when not in session, to require state agencies to obtain approval before making an emergency transfer of appropriated funds. Supporters say the amendment could prevent wasteful spending during the legislative interim, but opponents argue the proposal is a rehash of two previous efforts to give the Legislature interim budget authority, and does not say who will exercise the power.

• PROPOSITION 10 would authorize general obligation bonds to provide financing assistance for the purchase of farm and ranch land. The proposed $500 million in bonds would offer family farmers and ranchers up to $95,000 financing for at least 50 acres of land. Supporters say it is designed to help young farmers and ranchers acquire their first land and help owners of small farms or ranches add to what they have now. Opponents argue that the farmers and ranchers, already in distress over mounting debt, do not need to borrow more money.

• PROPOSITION 11 would allow the Legislature to decide to eliminate certain technical requirements in criminal indictments. Backed by prosecutors, supporters say this amendment would prevent criminals from going free because an indictment contained a meaningless error in language. Opponents, which include the Texas Criminal Defense Lawyers, argue it would open the door for vague and general charges in criminal indictments and jeopardize the basic rights of the defendant because the Legislature may give prosecutors too much leeway in the presentation of criminal charges.

Mexico disaster lends new meaning to ancient Day of the Dead ritual

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The Day of the Dead, an ancient ritual reflecting Mexicans' mystical relationship with the deceased, was observed with special solemnity Saturday in the capital, where thousands died in September's earthquakes.

In cemeteries and at the wreckage of buildings crumpled by the huge Sept. 19 quake, survivors began late Friday arranging flowers and fruit, wine, a special "bread of the dead" and other offerings that observers feel would please the dead on their annual visit to the Earth.

Those left homeless by the collapse of the big Nuevo Leon apartment building returned Friday night to the site to honor the 800 people believed to have died there. They erected a makeshift altar on a pile of wrecked cars and dusty rubble, approaching it in groups of two or three to light candles and place flowers. Some wept for their dead relatives and friends.

Others spent the night in cemeteries, some of which now have common graves holding the remains of hundreds of victims who were never identified. The government says at least 6,000 people died in the Sept. 19 quake and one that followed the next night.

"Well, there are more dead people this year," said Antonio Torres, 26, who comes from a family of 10 brothers and estimates he has 50 cousins. His mother created an altar for the day laden with candles, fruits and other offerings to ancestors.

In an unusual observance, about 50 homeless people held a vigil in the middle of the great Zocolo Square in front of the National Palace downtown. To one side, a group of Indians from the states of Oaxaca, Veracruz, Michoacan and San Luis Potosi placed flowers on the ruins of an Aztec temple.

"We Mexicans did not exist before the clash and amalgamation of Indians and Spaniards," Miguel de la Madrid wrote in his book, "One Hundred Thoughts on Mexico," published a few months before he became president in 1982.

The Day of the Dead blends the Aztecs' regard for death as a transition to the next life, with the Roman Catholic conquerors' observance of Nov. 1 as All Saints' Day and Nov. 2 as All Souls' Day.

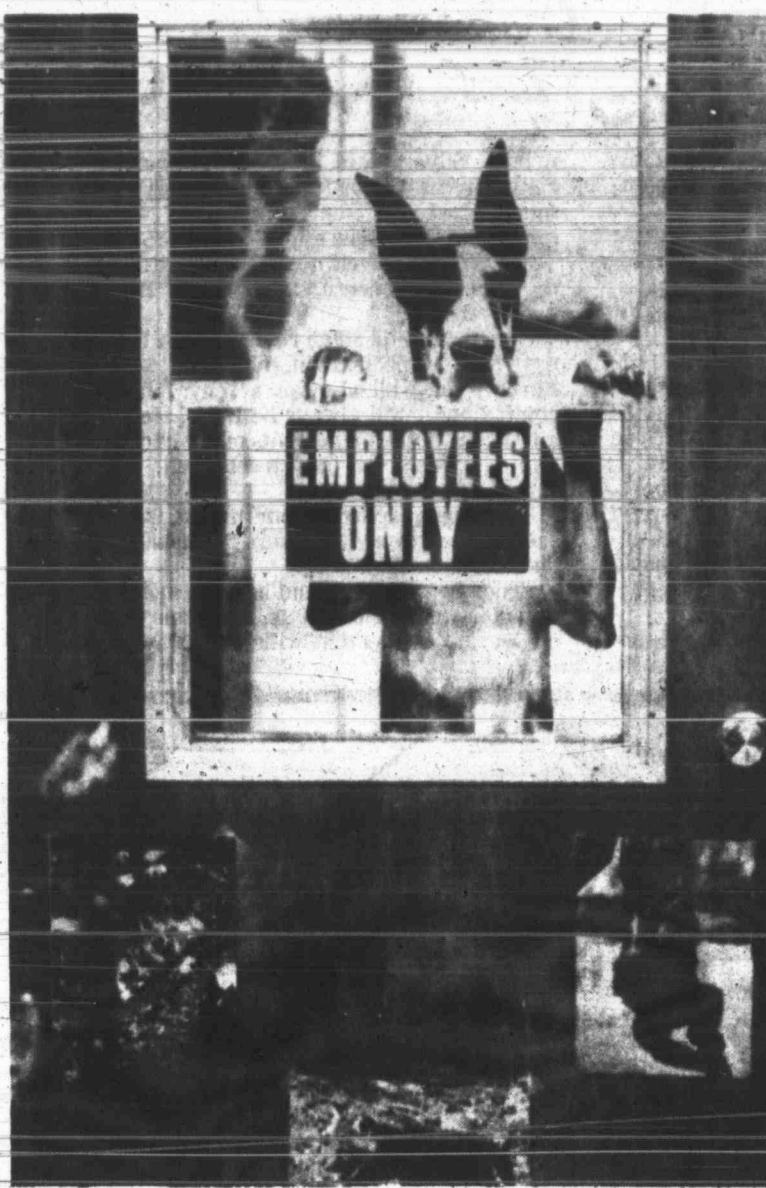

For modern Mexicans, the Day of the Dead is the annual chance for reunion with deceased relatives, who remain vivid in many people's conversation.

The dead are believed to visit briefly, attracted by the altar candles that light their way to the treats laid out for them.

This year, the usually festive atmosphere was subdued in the capital, where pockets of destruction still dot the city. Stores cut down on usually huge displays of sugar skulls and cardboard skeletons, out of respect for those who died last month.

Ceremonies vary from state to state in the countryside, each Indian group adding its own details. In nearby Tlaxcala, observances start Oct. 28 with the arrival of souls of people who died in accidents or by suicide.

This year, the capital was to see the revival of an ancient tradition, still carried on in the provinces, in which the sugar and cardboard skulls and skeletons amuse themselves by making fun of politicians.

INTRUDERS BEWARE — Any robber might have second thoughts about trying to break into this pet shop in Phoenix, Ariz., and running into Trinity, a year-old Great Dane. Standing on her hind legs, she is about as tall as an average adult, and according to the owner of the shop, she makes a good watchdog.

Dentists launch program to I.D. teeth by microfilm

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A nationwide program to glue microfilm dots to people's teeth was announced Saturday by the American Dental Association, which hopes to ease identification of missing persons and accident victims.

The announcement spurred criticism by a company that already sells metal identification disks. Dr. Richard Elggen, principal stockholder of Exactident Inc. in Sandy, Utah, threatened a patent lawsuit against the ADA and said plastic microfilm won't work as well as metal disks.

Ken Beacham, secretary to the dental association's Council on Dental Practice, told the association's annual convention the group wants to create a centralized identification system to reduce confusion when authorities attempt to learn the identities of missing or dead people. He said eight companies now sell various types of disks.

Under the ADA's voluntary program, dentists will bond plastic microfilm dots to the upper right front molars of adults who request them or to the equivalent baby tooth in children. The task takes about 15 minutes and no anesthetic is needed.

The microfilm is about the size of a typewritten letter "o," and has a 10-digit identification number plus a telephone number.

Coroners, doctors and others who try to identify dead or missing people would use a magnifying glass to read the identification number, then call the 24-hour hotline to reach a computerized registry at dental association headquarters in Chicago.

The registry will contain the person's name, birth date, sex, address, phone number, Social Security number and name of the person's dentist.

Beacham said the program will start on a nationwide basis by May, after trial use of the system in Maryland beginning in February.

The microfilm will be useful in identifying abducted children, elderly or handicapped people who become disoriented and victims of accidents or foul play, said Dr. James Cottone, head of forensic dentistry at the University of Texas in San Antonio.

"All frequent flyers should have one of these put on because of the possibility of untimely death," said Cottone, who helped identify victims of the Delta Air Lines Flight 191 crash in Dallas in August.

Dentists will pay $10 for the disks, Beacham said, adding he expects patients will be charged $20 to $25.

Elggen argued that his firm was first in line for a patent on the process of placing identification disks on teeth.

"The free enterprise system is being jeopardized by the ADA," Elggen said. "If it means going to court to determine who has the patent rights, then that's what we'll have to do."

Elggen argued that resins used to glue microfilm to teeth will erode the plastic, eventually making identification numbers unreadable.

Police say device discovered near Bush talk was harmless

HOUSTON (AP) — A device found in a parking garage near a hotel where Vice President George Bush spoke was not an explosive, police said Saturday.

"It was a hoax," said spokesman J.C. Mosier of the Houston Police Department.

The device — a Coke can with wires attached — was found Friday night on top of a car parked in a garage at the Westin Galleria hotel, where Bush earlier had received the Herbert Hoover Humanitarian Award from the Boys Clubs of America for his work with youth.

The vice president had left the hotel before the device was found, said police Capt. Jack Hamel.

"From what I understand a security guard found this thing sitting on top of a parked car and called the police in. Our officers got there and apparently didn't know what they had. The bomb squad went over picked it up," he said.

Early Saturday, Bush donned his jogging suit and fired a pistol to start End Houston's Hunger, a two-mile run to raise money to eliminate hunger in the nation's fourth largest city by 1990.

About 200 runners waited in rainy, 50-degree weather for the vice president, who arrived about 15 minutes late.

Later, Bush attended a barbecue and Salute to America rally in Bay City, about 90 miles southwest of Houston.

"America really is the last best hope of man on Earth. Sometimes we have to remind ourselves how lucky we are," Bush told some 1,000 supporters who gathered at the Matagorda County fairgrounds.

Bush also was scheduled to attend a fundraiser Saturday night in Wichita Falls.

Milton Berle to eulogize comedian Silvers

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Phil Silvers, best known for his television comedy role as the conniving Master Sgt. Ernie Bilko, was "not only one of the nicest men I met, but the most talented," says fellow comic Milton Berle, who will deliver his eulogy.

Private funeral services for Silvers, who died Friday at the age of 73, will be held at Mount Sinai Memorial Park. Invitations were posted at the Friars' Club, a show business gathering place in Beverly Hills that Silvers-favored, a club spokesman said.

Silvers' career as a comedian spanned the vaudeville, burlesque, movie and television eras, and was highlighted by four television Emmy awards and two Tony awards for stage shows.

But he was always identified with the frenetic Sgt. Bilko, who gambled and schemed through his tour of duty at the mythical Fort Baxter in the hit 1950s television series "The Phil Silvers Show."

"He lived his life as Bilko," said Freddie Fields, Silvers' agent and manager for more than 30 years. "That gregarious, blustery, crazy. That's where it came from."

The series won three Emmys in 1955. Silvers was named best comedian and best actor in a continuing performance, and the show won best comedy. The show won another Emmy in 1957 for best comedy.

Bilko made Silvers' trademark horn-rimmed glasses, bald pate and mischievous grin familiar to U.S. audiences. Re-runs of the series were popular long after production stopped in 1959, particularly in Britain.

"As Bilko I was the world's worst con-river," Silvers said in a 1977 interview. "But I never won out over a rookie. It was me against the Pentagon. That's what made the Bilko show a hit."

But Silvers sometimes complained that the constant identification with Bilko bothered him.

During the 1972 stage revival of "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum," for which he won a Tony, Silvers complained: "I'll always be Bilko. Here I am, in one of the biggest hits of my career, and ... people on the streets yell, 'Hi, sarge!'"

Bob Hope, reached on tour in Reston, La., said he used to invite Silvers to appear on his television show.

"Then he got Bilko, and he went against us on television and beat us. And I sent him a telegram that said he will never play my house again," Hope joked.

"He was not only one of the nicest men I met, but the most talented. I think it's a big loss to his public and to our audience," said Berle, a close friend for more than 60 years.

Berle's wife Ruth said he was out of town Saturday but planned to return to deliver the eulogy.

Silvers started in show business as a vaudeville singer at age 13.

As vaudeville waned, he became a burlesque comic, then made his film debut in such films as "Hit Parade of 1941," "You're in the Army Now" and "My Gal Sal."

His film credits in later years included such comedies as "It's a Mad Mad Mad Mad World," and "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum."

Tale tellers gather 'round

DENTON (AP) — Eyes sparkling in the jack-o'-lantern's glow, his face contorts and his voice trembles with anguish like that the mother must have felt as she knelt over her daughter's corpse.

"Only 16 years old, never married, and she's dead," Finley Stewart wails. "It just isn't fair. She can't be dead!"

He glances at the fellow storytellers gathered around him and notes with satisfaction that their attention is wrapped around every word of "The Calico Coffin."

The story was Stewart's contribution to a night of ghostly tales, and it was all part of a Texas Storytellers Guild attempt to revive the almost-lost art of storytelling in the Southwest.

Tale-telling is already on the rise along the Eastern seaboard and some Southern states, where some storytellers are so particular about their art that they will only record — never write — their tales, says Dr. Ted Colson, a North Texas State University professor who founded TSG last month.

"People here just don't think that much about storytelling in this age of media saturation," Colson said. "But of all places, Texas, with its rich history, should be a place where storytelling thrives."

Nearly 25 people, some of them professional tale weavers, have signed on with the Texas Storytellers Guild, and Colson hopes to garner interest in the art form from residents across the state.

Listening to artfully spun tales is only one of Colson's aims. As member Will Powers says, "If we can teach parents here how to tell good stories, then they can use that skill to help teach their children better."

After all, he adds, "many parents aren't good storytellers, and their kids know that. They'll look up and say, 'Oh God, here comes dad with another story about how he had to trudge to school' through five miles of snow."

Besides, the stories are simply fun. Members like Stewart — who with James Howard founded his own business, the Krum, Texas-based Story Weavers — take their skills to schools and libraries, where they can keep kids enthralled with stories like "The Calico Coffin."

That tale, which Stewart told at a recent TSG meeting, involves ghostly screams, weeping parents and a burial that turns out to be horribly — and fatally — premature.

Many of the stories have been around for centuries and become mixtures of the artist's imagination as well as his recollections.

Tale-teller Julie Judd told one called "The Wooden Box" that warns of the pitfalls of laziness and greed, and Howard noted his repertoire included the same tale — only his involved a jug instead of a box.

Schools' insurance bills show dramatic increase

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

School districts across the country are staggering under the weight of insurance bills that have doubled, tripled and even shot up eightfold in the past 12 months.

Schools, like municipal governments, the medical profession and others that routinely carry large amounts of liability insurance, are being squeezed by a crisis in the U.S. insurance industry, which last year lost $3.8 billion before taxes — its worst showing since 1906, the year of the San Francisco earthquake.

Insurance industry officials say some companies are shunning the schools' business because of a rash of million-dollar jury judgments for students paralyzed in football or gym accidents.

But some educators suspect the insurance companies have panicked and may be pricing themselves out of what has been a profitable business.

Increasingly, districts are banding together to provide self-insurance pools that could wind up offering serious long-term competition to the commercial industry.

However, even the pools buy some insurance to guard themselves against catastrophes, and it is the catastrophic coverage that is the hardest to come by.

In Pontiac, Mich., where the school insurance bill soared from $189,000 to $810,000, Deputy Superintendent Byron K. Love laments, "It's costing four times as much for half the coverage.... It's as though General Motors announced (that) not only are Chevrolets going to be scarce, but anyone who buys one is going to pay eight times as much."

The industry's reaction, Love said, "has just dumbfounded those of us out here in the field. I could understand an increase in premiums of 20 percent or even 50 percent. But to do this is simply beyond reason."

In Illinois, District No. 205 paid $100,000 in 1984-85 to insure its three high schools in Thornton Township south of Chicago. This summer, it had to scramble to get any insurance at all and finally paid $300,000 for a policy that leaves the schools liable for the first $125,000 in major claims.

"It comes as a shock when one year your premiums go down and then the next year you're told you may not even be able to get insurance to cover your operations," Assistant Superintendent Dave Ely said.

In Vermont, a group of districts in the Rutland Northeast Supervisory Union saw premiums climb from $30,000 to $87,000 for less coverage. "It's comparable to the energy crisis of 1974, with both soaring prices and short supply," said David Gibson Jr., administrator of the Vermont School Boards Insurance Trust.

In Lincoln Park, Mich., the schools paid $61,638 for insurance policies last year that included $5 million umbrella protection against catastrophes. This year, when the bills came in, they totaled $501,882 — for only $1 million in coverage.

Business manager Thomas M. Perry is still trying "to whittle it down through higher deductibles, eight-month policies instead of 12 months, all types of manipulations. Hopefully, I'll be able to bring it in at no higher than $239,000."

Michigan recently boosted state school aid, but "we'll have to take a good share of that money and plow it into insurance," Perry said.

The $600,000-plus tacked onto Pontiac's insurance bill "is the equivalent of eliminating programs and services for over 200 students," Love said. "We're making all sorts of reductions across the board."

For day care centers, concerns about child abuse by staff have driven insurance premiums through the roof. But for schools, it is accidents that make them a risky business in insurers' eyes.

"We have six swimming pools and three stadiums. In a public high school district in an urban environment, we have a lot of exposure," said Ely, the Thornton Township schools' manager.

"What we have to be most concerned about is a real crisis: a school bus wreck, or some terrible accident on the football field or in the stadium."

Insurance industry officials concur.

"Look at their activities: physical contact sports, machine tool shops, driver education programs, operation of school buses, not to mention the general difficulty of insuring minors. They're all creating risks," said Marc H. Rosenberg, vice president for federal affairs of the Insurance Information Institute in Washington.

"We don't see ourselves as the cause of the problem. We see ourselves as being as much a victim as are the schools, as are the cities and towns, as are the doctors," said Thomas P. Bonaros, vice president and general counsel of Utica Mutual of New Hartford, N.Y.

Earlier this year a Utica Mutual subsidiary dropped liability coverage of 580 districts in Ohio.

It began insuring them in 1983 after an Ohio court ruled that the state's school districts were not immune from lawsuits. "We were forced to withdraw from that market in the face of just absolute unacceptable loss exposure," said Bonaros.

Bonaros blames both the million-dollar jury verdicts, such as the $1.4 million his company was ordered to pay in New York to the family of a parent who fell from a ladder while decorating for a school play.

'Good Morning America' marks 10th year

NEW YORK (AP) — On workday mornings before 1975, you could flip on the "Today" show or you could go back to sleep. Then a brash upstart came calling with flowers, soft chairs and a folksy host from prime-time, and morning TV would never be just dry cereal again.

Ten years ago, on Nov. 3, 1975, David Hartman and "Good Morning America" came to ABC and rocked the dawn tranquility established by NBC's upright "Today" show.

"We set out to be different," said Hartman. "You can't re-invent the wheel. We hoped to put on the air a program that was comprehensive to a broad audience."

Before "GMA," "Today" was designed to appeal to males, particularly businessmen and, more specifically, those traveling white-collar types in hotels and motels who would turn on the TV for some familiar faces on the road.

But "Good Morning America," armed with research data that said morning television could attract an additional audience of women and young viewers, staked out distinctive territory. Instead of a news desk, "GMA" built a living room set, adorned by couches, comfy chairs, fresh floral arrangements and amiable, congenial hosts.

"I said I won't sit behind a desk. That puts a wall between me and the viewer," said Hartman. "I wanted conversation with the guests and the viewer. I wanted to break down false barriers and de-stress. The set was carefully designed to be comfortable."

"We also decided if we were going to juxtapose the program with interviews with heads of state, cover the news from Hollywood and provide the latest in medical information, we would try to do it in the most relaxed interview setting possible."

"GMA's" perception of what television viewers wanted and the growing acceptance of "happy talk news" at the local level eventually led to all three network morning shows striving for cozy, family atmospheres amid bright, cheerful sets.

But "GMA's" innovations didn't stop there. As tough a competitor as Steve Friedman, executive producer of "Today," acknowledges that "GMA" in the late 1970s was the first to take remote cameras outside New York to find the stories and interviews. For a long time, Friedman said, "Today" was content to rest with its No. 1 status and wait until the guests came to

New York or Washington. "GMA" not only changed the design of the anchor seats, it revolutionized who sat there and, in the process, broadened the definition of news and information.

Unlike news division products "Today" and the "CBS Morning News," "GMA" is produced by ABC's entertainment division. In 1975, when Tom Brokaw was on "Today" and a procession of CBS News correspondents were on the "Morning News," ABC didn't hire trained journalists who had risen through the ranks; it picked two actors, Hartman and Nancy Dussault.

Dussault eventually gave way to Sandy Hill who was replaced in 1980 by current host, Joan Lunden. But the male presence for all 10 years has been the steady, ever-curious Hartman, whom former Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin used to call "my good friend David."

Hartman starred in two prime-time series in the 1970s. He was a dedicated doctor on "The Bold Ones," then a dedicated teacher on "Lucas Tanner." In a recent interview, Hartman said the move to dedicated host was a natural progression.

"I was always challenged by television," he said. "Going back to the mid-'60s and later with 'The Bold Ones' and 'Lucas Tanner,' I was working behind the scenes doing research and producing. My goal was to make programs that were interesting and present information that people could use to make their lives a little better."

At the time, ABC was not the only organization hunting Hartman. He was known to have been included on a list of prospective anchors for a local newscast in Los Angeles.

Before he agreed to do the "GMA" job, he met with ABC executives and asked for a one-year guarantee, then requested that the network not promote the program extensively.

"I was concerned with overexpectations," Hartman said. "We needed time to find ourselves and for audiences to find us."

The first week, "GMA" had a 2.1 rating (percent of the nation's TV homes at the time) to "Today's" 4.6. It was an uphill battle, but "GMA" gradually crept closer to NBC, helped by the fact that young viewers were making ABC No. 1 in prime time and then tuning in to "GMA" the next morning. The crowd watching "Mork & Mindy" and "Happy Days" was, for the first time, waking up to morning television.

By January 1980, "GMA" caught "Today" for the first time. It gained the dominant position when Brokaw left the next year and then won 163 consecutive weeks from February 1982 to March 1985. Currently, "Today" and "GMA" are engaged in a nip-and-tuck race for morning supremacy.

It's a measure of how far Hartman has come that he now travels in the same circles as the network's seasoned journalists. While Peter Jennings will go the Geneva summit for ABC's "World News Tonight" later this month, Hartman will go there to anchor "GMA."

"I won't call myself a journalist and I won't not call myself a journalist," said Hartman. "My job is to elicit from my questions as much useful information in a short period of time that people can use in their lives."

"Every person interviews differently. There are a lot of ways to skin a cat. ... I try to ask those questions that might be in the minds of our viewers. I'll also ask questions from a news point of view that need to be asked. The two things are not contradictory."

Hartman bristles at suggestions that "GMA" is less substantial than its counterparts. "The fluffy charge was unfair then and unfair now. The program was, from the beginning, news and information. ... I think some of the criticism comes because I didn't go to journalism school and we're produced by the entertainment division."

Video game makers show what's new

CHICAGO (AP) — Pinball wizards can shoot for new highs and eagle-eyed dart throwers can target bigger scores with new games being offered by coin-operated amusement game manufacturers. And then there's this game where you can stomp bugs.

More than 170 manufacturers gathered last week to show their wares to an anticipated 7,000 owners, distributors and other manufacturers.

A Gallup poll estimated that 113 million Americans played video games in 1984, according to the Amusement and Music Operators Association, whose 1985 Expo wound up Saturday.

Among the new products was the latest brainstrom from Nolan N. Bushnell, inventor of the pioneering video game Pong and now chairman of Bally Sente Inc. of Sunnyvale, Calif. Called "Stompin,'" it is "the world's first no-hands video game," said Robert W. Lundquist, company president.

A player stands on a mat marked with a grid. On the screen in front of him is another grid with a picture of Swiss cheese, which is attacked by spiders, mice and frogs that the player tries to squash by stomping appropriate squares on the mat.

As the game progresses, the critters advance faster, forcing the player to switch to a vigorous shuffle.

Gaffe injects flash into campaign

HOUSTON (AP) — Despite millions of dollars spent for consultants, polling and a bombardment of radio and television commercials, it took a slip of the tongue to inject some flash into Houston's mayoral race.

Louie Welch, 66, who served five consecutive two-year terms ending in 1974, pulled the campaign between him and incumbent Kathy Whitmire out of humdrum by making a wisecrack about his four-point plan to halt the spread of the disease AIDS in the nation's fourth-largest city.

"One of them is to shoot the queers," he joked as he awaited a live television interview less than two weeks before Tuesday's election.

The joke, however, was on him. A technician inadvertently left Welch's microphone on and his comments were broadcast over the city's highest-rated 5 p.m. news show.

Suddenly, a campaign that started out months ago and wallowed in such mundane issues as water and sewers, traffic congestion and police protection, gained some attention, although not the kind either candidate would have preferred.

The city's gay community was enraged. Welch donned a bulletproof vest after getting death threats, including one at his church. Police protection around him was expanded.

"I don't think I had the gay vote anyway," said Welch, a Republican who has sought to characterize public health — specifically the fear of AIDS — the No. 1 issue in the non-partisan race. Welch subsequently termed the gaffe a "blooper" and insisted no harm would come of it.

Mrs. Whitmire, 39, bruised

Incumbent Houston Mayor Kathy Whitmire stands with former mayor Louie Welch. The two are running against each other for the city's top job.

early in the year when a gay rights referendum she supported overwhelmingly was rejected by voters, refused to jump with both feet into the controversy.

"I would certainly hope that neither one of us would make any statement in the campaign that would reflect badly on our city," she said. "One of the concerns I've had about the campaign this year is that perhaps too much attention would be paid to the problems we're still working on."

Mrs. Whitmire's comment summarizes the classic campaigned that Houston's 1.8 million residents have witnessed. Challenger Welch thinks the city has gone downhill. Incumbent Whitmire contends Houston is good and getting better under her rule.

Polks have given Mrs. Whitmire as much as a 20 percentage point edge.

Welch, who quit as president of the Chamber of Commerce to run for mayor, has insisted that the luster has left Houston, once referred to as the "Golden Buckle of the Sun Belt." Families don't want to settle in the city because of what he terms an AIDS epidemic, proliferation of adult bookstores and peepshows, snarled traffic and rampant crime.

Mrs. Whitmire, a Republican accountant who gained fame as a tight-fisted city controller in the late 1970s, answers that her administration is educating people to the dangers of AIDS, has passed laws to oust the porn peddlers, widened and repaired streets, improved the mass transit system and hired additional police officers, resulting in a lower crime rate.

Political analysts termed Welch's television gaffe unfortunate but not fatal.

"It has to be a negative aspect for his campaign," according to Richard Murray, a University of Houston political scientist.

Bob Stein, a political science professor at Rice University, said Welch's problems are more fundamental because the former mayor's campaign has been directed to his own supporters instead of reaching out to marginal and undecided voters.

"He's got cheerleaders and he's cheering them on," Stein said. "The mayor has run the best campaign and Louie the worst."

Welch went from a double-digit advantage in the polls when he announced his candidacy in May to a similar deficit within weeks of the election because he failed to capitalize on Whitmire's weaknesses, like the botched hiring of a fire chief earlier this year, Stein said.

"Welch had her on a rope but he left the city and his campaign staggered," Stein said, referring to Welch's summer-long teaching stint at Abilene Christian University, his alma mater.

Wandering whale tagged with radio transmitter

PITTSBURG, Calif. (AP) — Humphrey the whale was tagged with a radio transmitter shot from a crossbow Saturday and scientists said they were receiving beeps from the device designed to track the meandering mammal.

The humpback whale, which had moved five miles downstream Saturday on its 23rd day in inland waters, was swimming in the Sacramento River near where it is joined by the San Joaquin River.

The transmitter hit Humphrey "a little low" and was not coming out of the water every time the whale surfaced to breathe, so the beeps couldn't always be heard, said Hal Alabaster of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

The scientists were trying to hit Humphrey with a second transmitter, he said.

The whale, dubbed Humphrey since it swam into San Francisco Bay and continued upstream, still was 35 to 40 miles from the Golden Gate, the entrance to the bay. At one point it had been trapped in a narrow slough some 70 miles from the sea.

Scientists said they planned to try Sunday to herd the 40-foot, 45-ton whale back toward the Pacific Ocean by using 33 boats to set up a sonic curtain of annoying sounds produced by banging on pipes held underwater and air gun percussion.

A second whale, a gray, appeared in San Francisco Bay on Friday, but swam back into the Pacific. The whales are migrating down the coast from summer feeding areas off Alaska to calving grounds along the Mexican coast.

Last week, scientists from Oregon State University failed to stick a satellite-linked radio beacon to Humphrey but never got closer than 40 or 50 yards.

The small crossbow-launched transmitter to aid in tracking Humphrey is designed to cling to the whale's blubber with stainless steel sutures that would penetrate 1 to 2 inches but cause no discomfort.

Prison probe allegedly quashed

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Former Texas Department of Corrections investigators say they were pressured to drop inquiries into inmate gang violence and drug abuse within the nation's second-largest prison system.

"Those investigators that could not turn their heads but continued to try and put an end to drugs being brought into their units were continuously harassed and their jobs threatened," said former investigator Bill Griffith.

Prison Director O.L. McCotter denied the allegations made by former prison investigators in interviews with the Houston Chronicle.

Griffith and two other former investigators worked in the TDC's Internal Affairs Division, created a year ago to fight corruption and mismanagement in state prisons. The division also was touted as a future replacement for monitors overseeing TDC's compliance with a federal court order demanding widespread reforms.

But the former investigators contend the division does not have enough independence to look into some prison problems.

"Investigators need to go where they need to go and do what they need to do," said Mike Sutton, who quit after four months and joined the Copperas Cove police department. "That's not the way it is in the TDC."

Prison officials waited a year before launching a major effort to quell gang violence, the investigators said.

One investigator checking a prisoner's claim that several guards were involved in a stabbing death of an Eastham Unit convict was removed from the case.

"The investigators' hands are tied," said James Todd, a former investigator who resigned two months ago to become an Anderson County justice of the peace.

"In a sense, all we were, I guess, were paper shufflers to impress those looking at the system. We were told that we weren't supposed to get into drug cases, but with all the violence, now is the time to be doing those investigations."

Fear of AIDS showing in small communities

By JANET WARREN

Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau
AUSTIN — A Florida man racing to California for AIDS treatment was arrested in Amarillo about a month ago on suspicion of driving a stolen van.

The police panicked when he told them he had acquired immune deficiency syndrome. This was Amarillo's first case of AIDS.

They isolated him and fed him on disposable dishes. People worried that other inmates and deputies could catch the virus through the air.

"The news media jumped on it and whipped it like a dead horse," said Capt. Gary Butler of the Potter County Sheriff's Office. "Everybody was afraid of an epidemic right here in Amarillo." The episode ended when Florida officials decided not to prosecute and the man was admitted to a Houston hospital.

That type of stir is not uncommon in small Texas communities when an AIDS victim is discovered, said Dr. Charles Alexander, chief of the Texas Health Department's epidemiology bureau. "That's what happens when the first case of AIDS is assigned to a county."

Most Texas AIDS victims — 661 of the 746 reported since 1980 — were living in Houston, Dallas-Fort Worth, San Antonio or Austin when their illness was diagnosed.

The Texas AIDS registry lists one case of AIDS in Howard County.

Alexander said he doesn't like to furnish registry listings that include counties with less than five cases. It creates unnecessary panic, he said.

"You would be surprised what one case can do in a small town," Alexander said.

An AIDS case will be credited to the county where the victim lived when he or she first developed the symptoms, Alexander said. "This is not necessarily where they were living when they were diagnosed. They may have moved away. So don't go around looking for the Jones boy."

AIDS patients living in smaller communities often can be identified, said Dorothy Gibson, an AIDS information specialist at the health department. "Then that family is sometimes isolated because of the myths of transmission of AIDS. The community may be very unpleasant to the family, where they are no threat to the community at all."

AIDS is not transmitted through casual contact, she said, but through sexual relations, blood transfusions and contaminated needles. Gay men and intravenous drug users are the most common victims.

The Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta studied members of households where someone had AIDS or was infected with the AIDS virus. Only those family members who had sexual contact with the victim were infected, and not all of them caught the virus, Gibson said.

Alexander said one reason there are not more AIDS cases in small towns is that gay communities seldom exist there.

Also, intravenous drug use is more of a big city phenomenon. "To support a drug habit, you might need the resources of a city. You can rob only so many shops in a small town," Alexander said.

Some AIDS cases in medium- and smaller-sized towns result from "weekend exposure," where a person goes to a big city for a weekend and returns with the virus, Alexander said.

"In terms of Abilene, Wichita Falls, the High Plains, many of the sexual contacts we know about for syphilis or gonorrhea are in Fort Worth or Dallas, a weekend exposure situation. There is no reason that wouldn't fit the HTLV-III virus," he said, using another name for the AIDS virus.

"Gays in many towns have not 'come out of the closet,' so they may tend to leave town for the larger cities to spend their free time, Gibson said.

Other reasons for cases popping up in smaller communities could involve blood transfusions, which are not as much of a problem now since a test has been developed to detect the virus, Gibson said.

"Before the antibody testing, from a smaller town, someone may go to a large metropolitan area for surgery and receive blood transfusions" that carried the virus, Gibson said.

A spokesman for the Austin Lesbian and Gay Political Caucus said the only AIDS victims he knows of in small towns have gone home to their parents to die.

"One very, very close friend of mine went home. It's not the kind of thing where you ask the parents what the neighbors are saying. My guess would be that because small towns are one step removed from the information sources, they probably react a little more fearfully initially," said spokesman Bill Foster.

Soldier killed in tank accident

MINERAL WELLS (AP) — One soldier was killed and another injured Saturday when a tank turret struck the two men as they tried to repair the vehicle during a training exercise at Fort Wolters in Mineral Wells, according to Texas National Guard officials.

National Guard Pfc. James C. Haugland, 19, of Glen Rose was killed when the turret of the tank rotated, crushing him, said Maj. David Cottom, a National Guard spokesman. Haugland was pronounced dead at Palo Pinto General Hospital in Mineral Wells, Cottom said.

Pfc. Raymond H. Roper, 19, of Glen Rose, suffered head injuries when he was struck by the turret, Cottom said. Roper was treated and released at Palo Pinto General Hospital after the 2 p.m. accident.

When the turret of the M-60 tank rotated, Cottom said, it caught both of the crewmen. He said Roper was wearing a helmet, and when it struck him in the head he reached up and turned off an emergency switch.

Haugland was in a different position partially inside the tank, Cottom said.

The two men were preparing the tank to go out to the training field after it malfunctioned, according to Cottom. The tank commander inside the tank said he was going to rotate the turret, but apparently the two men did not hear the warning, said the guard spokesman.

An investigation by the Texas Army National Guard is under way.

The practice session was part of the regular once-a-month training for guardsmen, Cottom said.

Central bops Lady Steers

By STEVE BELVIN

For the San Angelo Central Bobcats, it was a case of winning the battle and losing the war. The Bobcats downed the Big Spring Lady Steers 15-11, 15-10 yesterday in the regular season finale for both volleyball teams. The win keeps the Bobcats from having an extra playoff game with Abilene High to decide the second place finisher.

It was a bit of revenge for the Bobcats who were soundly defeated at home by the Lady Steers. But their bid for their third consecutive district title fell short as Big Spring wins the crown with a 12-2 record. Central finishes with a 11-3 slate and Abilene High finishes with a 10-4 mark.

But this game belonged to the Bobcats, from start to finish. Although the scores never got out of hand, everytime the Lady Steers would make a run at them, the team in orange and blue would unload an arsenal of heavy hits.

Doing the heaviest of hitting was senior Anita Allgood and junior Linda Davis. The duo was a two-woman show as they kept the Lady Steers on the defensive, taking away from Big Spring's offensive attack.

Allgood, an All-Stater, played the role superbly. She riddled the Lady Steers defense for 15 kills in 23 attempts. Not to mention three big blocks at crucial times.

Davis was equally as effective, especially in the first match when she nailed down 7 of 8 kill attempts. The lefty ended the afternoon with 9 kills in 10 attempts.

As a team the Bobcats converted 28 of 38 kills for sizzling 74 percent. By contrast the Lady Steers converted only 12 of 32 attempts for 37 percent kill percentage.

About the only Big Spring player that had any success against the Bobcats front line was Monique Jones who downed 7 of 10 attempts. Time and time again she would break Bobcat rallies with one her her fine crosscourt hits.

The packed Parent's Day crowd had Steer Gym rocking as Big Spring jumped out to a quick 5-2 first match lead. That's when the Bobcats took the game in their own hands.

Lisa Eubanks served a point, cutting the margin to 5-3. After a side out, Freda Lackey and served up six straight points and Central took a 9-5 lead.

Big Spring battled back to cut the margin to 11-10, behind some good net play by Tammi Green and Jones. But that's when Central took charge again.

After Lackey served over two more points and Big Spring added another. Central ended the game with two Allgood spikes and a ace by Jody Fillpot, giving Central a 15-11 first match win. "I think the kids might have been trying to hard," said Big Spring coach Susan Sharp. "We were tight when we took the floor an very much aware of the crowd. Now they know they have to get use to playing in front of big crowds."

Just like the first match, Big Spring jumped out to an early lead in the second match. Tammi Green served a point and Sheri Myrick and Lisa Hale added two more as the Lady Steers again jumped out to a 5-2 lead. Hale and Jones each got kills in the rally.

Behind the spirited play of Allgood the Bobcats roared back. In a short time period she got four kills and two blocks and Central soared to a 12-5 lead.

But Big Spring gamely battled back. The Bobcats had several mishits along with a dink by Tammi Green and a spike by Jones, the Lady Steers pulled to within 13-10.

Central ended the rally with Pam Klepac at the service line. Katrina Thompson hit two kill attempts into the net and the Bobcats had earned themselves a trip to the state playoffs.

Coach Sharp took the loss in stride. "We really didn't play that badly. They (Central) made some changes since we've met them and it's helped. We got a couple of bad breaks but that shouldn't keep anybody from winning. This will make Lady Steers page 2-B

Hawks fall short in comeback attempt

By STEVE BELVIN

The Howard College Hawks saw a furious last period rally fall short as they fell to the Angelina Roadrunners 94-92 in non-conference action at the old Howard College Gym.

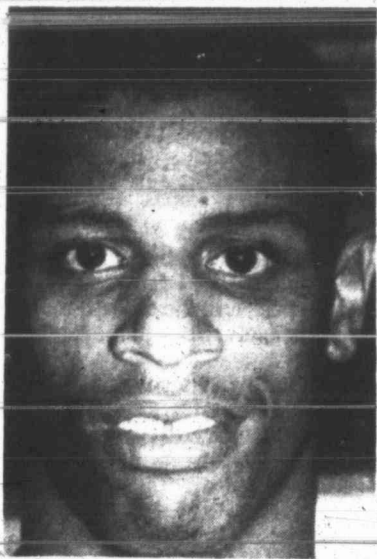

Just like last night in their season-opening win over Jacksonville Baptist, the Hawks trailed for most of the game, but this time their effort was just a little short against the Roadrunners, now 2-0 for the season.

Coach Ed Sparling's Hawks freshmen-dominated squad had turnover problems with the Roadrunners trapping press. Howard committed 22 turnovers. Meanwhile the Roadrunners had some problems of their own with the Hawks press. Led by Nate Archibald Jr., the Howard press caused 19 Angelina turnovers itself.

Angelina took a slim 46-45 lead into halftime. That lead could be credited to Hawks turnovers and the Roadrunners offensive rebounding, led by Jeff Chumbley and Jerome Wilson. At the half, Angelina had six offensive rebounds to only one for Howard.

Angelina looked like it might blow the game wide open midway through the second half as it opened up a 77-65 lead at the 8:55 mark. The Hawks looked like they were lost for a short span as the Roadrunners turned five straight Howard turnovers into four baskets.

But Howard, behind the play of Archibald and El Paso freshman

Longhorns pass by Texas Tech, 34-21

AUSTIN (AP) — Quarterback Bret Stafford revived Texas' offense with a 3-yard scoring run and pinpoint passing Saturday as the Longhorns defeated Texas Tech 34-21 in Southwest Conference football.

Stafford's on-target throws against the nation's top-ranked passing defense moved Texas into position to score and chewed up large amounts of time.

Texas' offense had scored only one touchdown in the last three games, but Stafford capped a 39-yard drive with a quick cut over the left side with 8:32 left in the first quarter.

On Texas' next possession, Stafford threw long to wide receiver Everett Gay, who caught the ball after it was tipped by cornerback Carl Carter and completed a 69-yard scoring play.

Jerome Johnson scored from the Tech 1 after Stafford had guided Texas 68 yards for a 21-0 Longhorn lead.

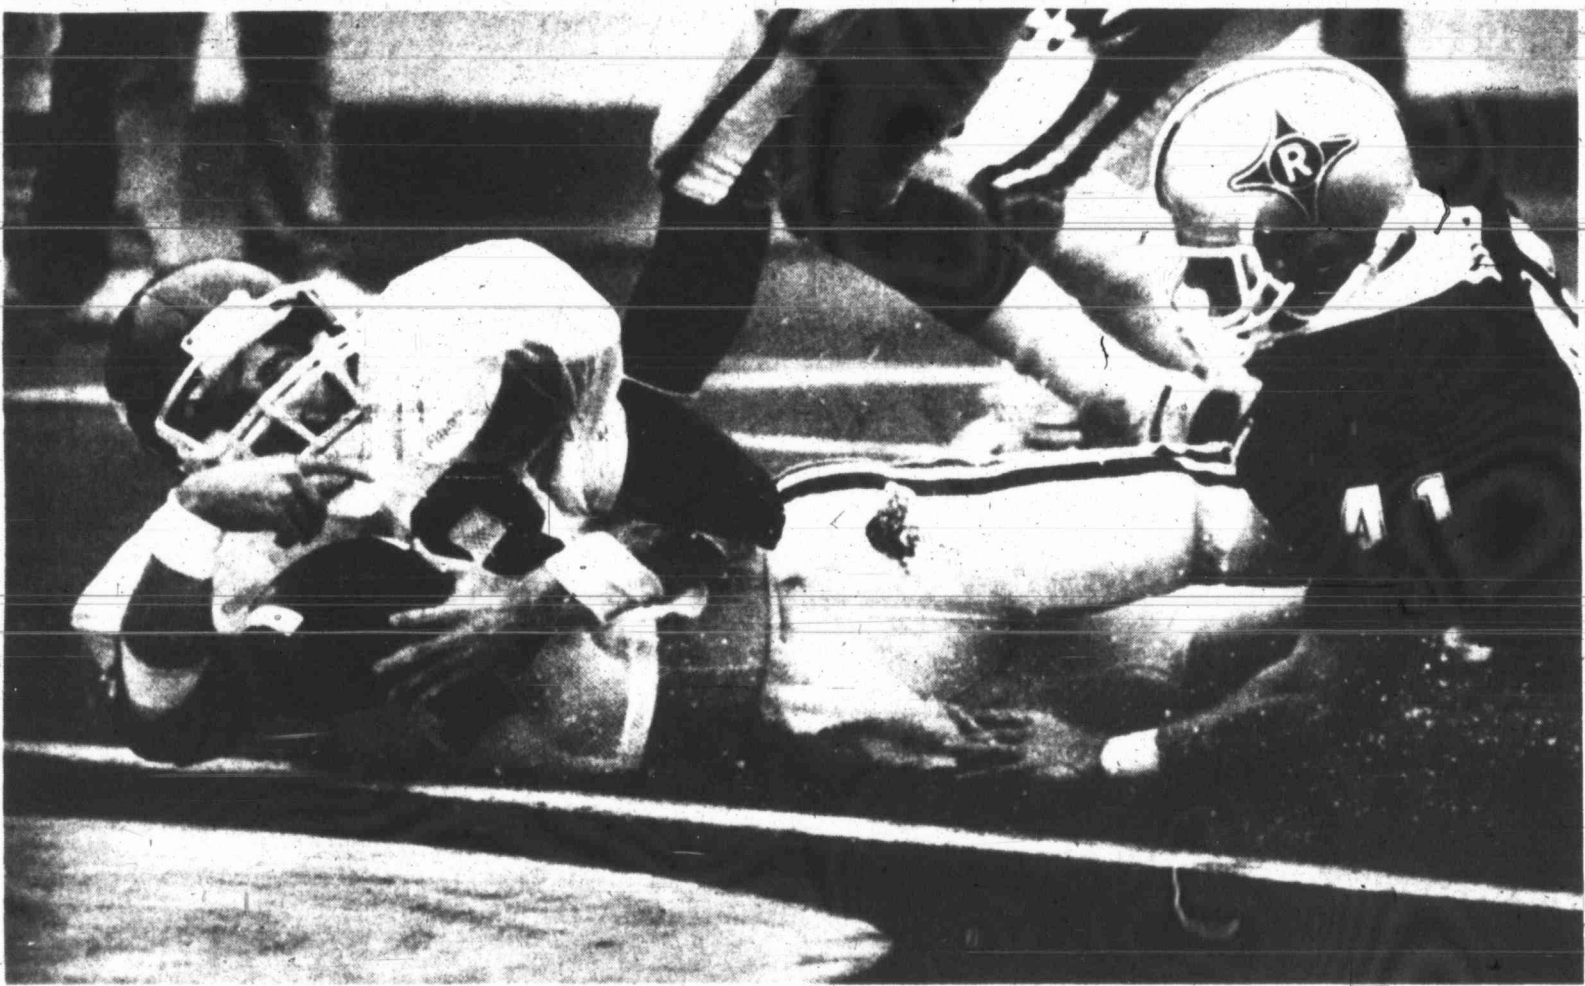

losing streak with a wild 26-21 Southwest Conference victory over Texas Christian.

Hood, a sophomore, bolted 15 and 47 yards for touchdowns and quarterback Gerald Landry dove a yard for another as the reigning SWC co-champs won their first conference game of the year.

The Cougars are now 2-6 on the season and 1-4 in the SWC. TCU falls to 3-5 and 0-5.

With Houston leading 26-7 in the fourth period, TCU quarterback David Rascoe winged a pair of touchdown passes to end Ricky Stone and flanker Keith Burnett. He just missed on a third touchdown shot as the Horned Frog rally fell 17 yards short.

The pass to Stone covered 4 yards and after a successful onside kick, the touchdown shot to Burnett was good for 29. Moments later, defensive end David Spradlin recovered a Houston fumble at the Cougar 35 and the Frogs had their chance to win it.

Arkansas Razorback quarterback MARK CALCAGNI makes a wet slide for an option right touchdown ahead of the tackle by Rice Owls free safety STEVE KIDD on the Razorbacks first touchdown of the game in first quarter action of the SWC matchup Saturday in a steady drizzling rain in Houston.

Third-string quarterback Billy Tolliver of Tech completed his first college pass — a 45-yarder to Bouvier Dale — and scored from the 1 for his first touchdown and a 21-7 halftime score.

Jeff Ward kicked a 51-yard field goal for Texas after the Longhorns had used over six minutes in the third quarter and overcome 41 yards in penalties.

A fumble at the Tech 15 by Ansel Cole led to Texas' final touchdown, a 4-yard run by Darron Norris in the third quarter.

On the first play after the ensuing kickoff, split end Wayne Walker raced 80 yards untouched on a reverse for Tech's second score with 45 seconds remaining in the third quarter.

HOUSTON (AP) — Arkansas senior quarterback Mark Calcagni scored one touchdown in his first collegiate start and David Dudley returned an interception 49 yards for another score to lead the 14th-ranked Razorbacks to a 30-15 victory over Rice Saturday.

Calcagni, substiting for injured starter Greg Thomas, rushed 160 yards on 22 carries and more than doubled his season's rushing output. He started the game with 116 rushing yards on 20 carries this season.

Rice's James Hamrick kicked a 38-yarder in the first quarter to give the Owls a 3-0 lead before the Hogs rallied for 24 unanswered points.

Dudley's 49-yard interception return to a touchdown came with 40 seconds left in the half and helped the Hogs surge to a 24-3 halftime lead.

Hamrick added second-half field goals of 32 and 37 yards for the Owls, who dropped to a 3-5 record and 2-3 in the Southwest Conference.

On the game's final play, Eddie Burgoyne hit freshman Chris Mixon on a 17-yard touchdown as time expired. The two-point conversion attempt failed.

Calcagni ran 6 yards for a touchdown in the first quarter. Carl Miller scored from 3 yards out and Kendall Trainor booted a 42-yard field goal in the second quarter.

Trainor added second-half field goals of 26 and 46 yards to match Hamrick.

Calcagni set up his own touchdown run with a 55-yard run to the Owl 8. The fifth-year senior from Youngstown, Ohio, had runs of 14 and 17 prior to Miller's touchdown.

Arkansas is 7-1 for the season and 4-1 in the SWC.

Dudley's interception was his third of the season and his second touchdown return of the year.

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Eric Franklin, whose miss of an extra point looked like it would cost Texas A&M the game, kicked a 48-yard field goal with 1:46 to play Saturday night to lift the Aggies to a 19-17 victory over 20th-ranked Southern Methodist.

The Southwest Conference victory snapped Texas A&M's five-game losing streak to the Mustangs and was the first for Aggie Coach Jackie Sherrill over SMU Coach Bobby Collins.

Jeff Atkins' 4-yard touchdown run with 4:46 to go and Brandy Brownlee's perfect placement gave SMU a 17-16 lead before Franklin got another chance to redeem himself.

A&M, now 6-2 overall and 4-1 in SWC play, clinched the game when Kip Corrington intercepted a pass and returned it 25 yards to the SMU 26 in the final minute.

The Mustangs, 4-3 overall and 3-2 against SWC foes, drove 91 yards in eight plays for the go-ahead score after Shea Walker caught a 6-yard touchdown pass from Kevin Murray.

But Franklin missed the vital extra point after A&M was penalized for an illegal procedure.

The Aggies seized a 10-7 third-quarter lead on Anthony Toney's 2-yard touchdown run after Rod Harris returned the second-half kickoff 71 yards.

SMU's Brownlee, who had a 20-yard field goal attempt blocked by Domingo Bryant, tied the game 10-10 on a 33-yarder with 10:22 to play.

SMU managed a 7-3 lead in a penalty-plagued first half that saw the Aggies flagged 11 times for 105 yards in violations.

A personal foul against A&M aided a 47-yard SMU scoring drive capped by Reggie Dupard's 5-yard touchdown run in the first quarter.

The penalty bugaboo cost the Aggies a touchdown late in the second quarter when offensive interference was ruled during a 6-yard Kevin Murray to Jeff Nelson pass in the end zone.

With the 15-yard penalty and loss of down, A&M had to settle for Franklin's 38-yard field goal that barely floated over the crossbar.

Upstart Eagles set to square off with 49ers

By The Associated Press

When the National Football League season began, the San Francisco 49ers were the Super Bowl champions and the Philadelphia Eagles your standard last-place team. When they open the second half at Candlestick Park Sunday they're just two more 4-4 teams looking for a wild-card playoff berth.

But they approach the game from different perspectives — the Eagles are getting confidence, the 49ers are trying to regain it.

"I think we're darn close to being a playoff team," says tight end John Spagnola of the Eagles, who have won three straight after scoring just one offensive touchdown in their first four games.

"We've gotten ourselves into something of a jam," says San Francisco Coach Bill Walsh.

The 49ers were in a bigger jam until they ran up 28 first-half points to hand the Los Angeles Rams their first loss last Sunday. But they still trail the Rams by three games in the NFC West and their chances of a division title are at best marginal.

There were signs in Los Angeles that the 49ers are back. Joe Montana threw for 306 yards, his best afternoon of the season and San Francisco's quick-strike offense was reminiscent of their best games last year.

The Eagles, on the other hand, have been unbeatable since Ron Jaworski was re-installed at quarterback by Coach Marion Campbell midway through a 23-21 loss to New Orleans that dropped them to 1-4. Since then, they've upset St. and Dallas and last week they overcame a 17-0 third-quarter deficit to beat Buffalo 21-17.

That left them tied with Washington for third in the NFC East, a game behind the Giants, two behind the Cowboys and thinking of better things.

"We're what, a game outside of a wild-card position?" asks Spagnola. "And some teams are starting to fade from that playoff picture. A couple of weeks ago we were in a bottleneck, about eight or nine teams."

Other featured matchups include the troubled Miami Dolphins at New England in a game that will break a second-place deadlock in the AFC East and the Los Angeles Raiders, winners of five straight, at the Seattle Kingdome against the Seahawks, a disappointing .500.

There's also an interesting wrinkle involving the AFC Central where Cleveland is at Pittsburgh, Houston at home to Kansas City and Cincinnati at Buffalo. If the Steelers, Oilers and Bengals all win — and all are favored — the entire division would be 4-5.

Other games Sunday include unbeaten Chicago at Green Bay; Detroit at Minnesota; Tampa Bay at the Giants; Washington at Atlanta; New Orleans at the Rams; the Jets at Indianapolis and Denver at San Diego 4 p.m.

The Cowboys are at St. Louis on Monday night.

Miami (5-3) at New England (5-3)

Don Shula, whose Dolphins already have lost more games than they did in last year's regular season, says his team "is doing the things losers do."

And how.

They lost to Detroit 31-21 last week following a narrow escape against winless Tampa Bay and a loss to the Jets. In those three games, the Miami defense has surrendered an average of 31 points and 436 yards per game.

So Shula says he needs a win just to restore confidence.

"All of the doubts are still there," he says. "We just need something good to happen, and there couldn't be any better time than now."

It won't be easy.

With veteran Steve Grogan replacing the injured Tony Eason at quarterback, New England beat the Jets and cruised past the Bucs 32-14 after falling behind 14-0. Eason is healthy now but Grogan remains the starter.

The defense has been New England's strength. Anchored by outside linebackers Andre Tippett

Ohio State stops No. 1 Iowa Hawkeyes, 22-13

By The Associated Press
A fired-up Ohio State defense intercepted four Chuck Long passes and forced a fumble Saturday as the eighth-ranked Buckeyes upset top-ranked Iowa 22-13 in college football.

Defensive back Terry White credited an emotional pre-game speech by injured tailback Keith Byars with helping Ohio State to victory.

"Keith was more emotional than I've ever seen him," White said. "He said he was tired of hearing things about our defense. ... When we left the room, the defense took it upon themselves to win the football game."

Ohio State quarterback Jim Karsatos agreed.
"I've known Keith Byars for four years and I've never seen him so fired up about a game," Karsatos said.

The victory knocked Iowa out of the unbeaten ranks and more than likely out of the No. 1 spot in the Associated Press poll.

"I feel sad for my football team," said Iowa Coach Hayden Fry, whose team has topped the AP poll for the past five weeks. "They've never been No. 1 and undefeated and then lost, and they don't know how to act."

Air Force 31, San Diego State 10; No. 9 Oklahoma 48, Kansas 6; No. 11 Miami of Florida 35, No. 10 Florida State 27; No. 12 Oklahoma State 14, Colorado 11; No. 14 Arkansas 30, Rice 15; No. 16 Louisiana State 14, Mississippi 0; No. 17 Brigham Young 59, Wyoming 0; No. 18 58, Tulane 3; and No. 19 Tennessee 40, Rutgers 0.

In a night game, No. 20 Southern Methodist played at Texas A&M. "This was a disheartening loss," Fry said. "On this day, we weren't good enough."

Although the injured Byars couldn't play, Ohio State ran for 219 yards in the rain, led by 104 yards on 17 carries by fullback George Cooper.

Ohio State scored 15 consecutive points in the first half, beginning with a 28-yard field goal and a safety when Sonny Gordon blocked an Iowa punt that rolled through the end zone.

After Long threw his second interception, OSU's tailback John Woodriddle slashed 57 yards up the middle for a TD. Another interception led to a 26-yard field goal.

Other Top Ten
Kerwin Bell and Ray McDonald combined on two touchdown passes to lead Florida, now 7-0-1 overall and 4-0 in the Southeastern Conference, to its narrow victory over Auburn, 6-2 and 2-2. The Tigers played most of the second half without star runner Bo Jackson, who gained only 48 yards on 15 carries before suffering a bruised thigh.

It was only the third time that Florida has won at Auburn in 24 previous visits and extended Florida's unbeaten streak to 18 games, the longest in the nation.

Defensive tackle Mike Russo grabbed a tipped pass and lumbered 21 yards for a touchdown to lift undefeated Penn State, 8-0, over Boston College. The BC Eagles had led 12-3 before D.J. Dozier keyed an eight-play, 74-yard drive with a 42-yard run. When quarterback John Shaffer dove into the end zone from the one, Penn State had pulled to within two points at 12-10, setting the stage for Russo's heroics.

Illinois almost upset Michigan, but Chris White's 37-yard field goal as time ran out was tipped and hit the crossbar. White hit a 36-yard field goal in the third quarter, matching a 49-yarder by Michigan's Mike Gillette.

Nebraska crushed Kansas State as Tom Rathman and Paul Miles ran for two touchdowns apiece; undefeated Air Force overcame a lackluster performance as halfback Kelly Pittman scored on two short runs and cornerback Tom Rotello returned an interception 30 yards in the Falcons' victory over San Diego State; freshman quarterback Jamelle Holieway rushed for 162 yards and a touchdown as Oklahoma trounced Kansas; and Vinny Testaverde passed for 339 yards and four touchdowns as Miami stopped Florida State.

Second Ten
Sophomore tailback Thurman Thomas rushed for 201 yards and two touchdowns to lead Oklahoma State over a surprisingly tough Colorado. Thomas dashed 60 yards for a score early in the third quarter to give the Cowboys a 14-3 lead.

CHRIS CARTER (2) leaps high between Iowa defenders DEVON MITCHELL (21) and GEORGE DAVIS (37) for a 17 yard gain in the first quarter yesterday in Columbus.

Senior quarterback Mark Calcagni, making his first collegiate start, scored one touchdown and David Dudley returned an interception 49 yards for another as Arkansas stopped Rice. Calcagni rushed for 160 yards on 22 carries.

Louisiana States used two short touchdown bursts by Dalton

Hilliard and a stingy defense to blank Mississippi. The Tigers ran their record to 5-1 overall and 3-1 in the Southeastern Conference.

Quarterback Robbie Bosco passed for 266 yards and three touchdowns and fullback Lakei Heimuli bolted over for three more scores and Brigham Young crushed Wyoming. BYU scored all of its points in the first three quarters.

Freshman tailback Tim Worley ran for two touchdowns and caught a 44-yard pass for another as Georgia bombed winless Tulane.

Tennessee blanked Rutgers behind a two-touchdown performance by freshman tailback Keith Davis.

Queens drop tourney game

WACO — The Howard College Hawks Queens dropped their third game of the season as they were defeated by Temple 69-64 in the third round of the McLennan Highclassie Tournament Friday afternoon.

Coach Don Steven's Queens fell behind early, made a run at Temple; only to come up short. Temple held a commanding 42-26 halftime lead and the Queens came out smoking in the second half.

Howard narrowed the margin to 55-53 quickly, behind an aggressive zone press. But thanks to some Queen turnovers, Temple pushed their margin to 12 with four minutes left in the game.

That's when Howard made another run at them, only to see it fall 5 points short.

Freshmen guard Terri Powell led the Queens, now 0-3 for the season, with 16 points. Sophomore guard Lorri French added 12 points.

Ex-Howard College player Joyce Broudaux led Temple with 19 points.

Detroit gets past Pacers in NBA action

Pistons 128, Pacers 117
INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — John Long scored 24 points and Isiah Thomas added 20 Saturday night as the Detroit Pistons beat the Indiana Pacers 128-117 in the National Basketball Association.

Detroit, beating the Pacers for the second straight night, outscored Indiana 12-1 in a 3:18 span of the fourth quarter to break open the game. Thomas and Bill Laimbeer each scored four points during the rally, which boosted the Pistons to a 117-105 advantage.

The Pistons, leading 68-64 at the half, moved to a 90-80 advantage on Kent Benson's layup with 3:05 left in the third period. But the Pacers closed two within two at 90-88 and later gained a 100-100 tie on Quinn Buckner's jumper with 8:48 left in the game.

Vern Fleming, who had 27 points, gave Indiana a 102-100 lead with 8:19 left. After two ties, Long sank a free throw to give Detroit a 105-104 edge, setting up the 12-1 run.

Clark Kellogg scored 16 of his game-high 30 points in the first half when the Pacers led by as many as eight at 18-10.

Rockets 111, Spurs 98

HOUSTON (AP) — Guard John Lucas sparked Houston with 13 of his game-high 31 points in the third quarter to lead the Rockets to a 111-98 National Basketball Association victory over San Antonio Saturday night.

Lucas also hit five points over the final 28 seconds to help blunt a late charge by the Spurs. He also sank three of four free throws and hit the final basket to clinch the victory.

The Rockets, 3-2, held a 16-point lead going into the final six minutes, but had to hold off a late Spurs rally that included the ejection of Spurs Coach Cotton Fitzsimmons.

The Rockets led 97-81, but the Spurs ran to a 104-98 deficit when Fitzsimmons charged onto the court to protest a foul called against Jon Sundvold. He was then ejected by referee Jess Thompson.

Celtics 88, Bullets 73

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Danny Ainge scored 20 points and Kevin McHale 18 to pace the Boston Celtics to their fourth consecutive victory, 88-73, over the Washington Bullets in a National Basketball Association game Saturday night.

The Bullets, 2-2, suffered their second consecutive home court defeat after opening the season with a pair of victories on the road.

Boston, 4-1, opened large leads early in each half. The Celtics made 11 consecutive shots in taking a 22-10 advantage midway through the first quarter, and though the margin dwindled to 28-20 at the end of the period, Washington could get no closer than six points in the remainder of the half.

After three quarters, the Celtics retained their 18-point advantage, 69-51, and maintained a lead of at least 14 points the rest of the way.

Hawks 114, 76ers 113 (OT)

ATLANTA (AP) — Dominique Wilkins scored a game-high 28 points, including seven in overtime, to lead the Atlanta Hawks to a 114-113 victory over the Philadelphia 76ers Saturday night in a National Basketball Association contest.

Wilkins scored the first two points of the overtime period on free throws and also scored on a three-point play with 1:16 left.

Wilkins made a free throw with two seconds remaining to make it 114-110, and Leon Wood scored on a three-point play for Philadelphia to account for the final score.

The victory snapped a five-game losing streak to Philadelphia for the Hawks and brought both teams' records to 2-3.

Atlanta jumped off to a 12-2 lead, behind the shooting of Cliff Livingston who scored six of those points, but the Sixers rallied and went into halftime trailing by two points at 57-55.

The game was tied 82-82 at the end of the third quarter, and the teams traded leads several times to open the final period.

The 1985 District 4-5A Volleyball Champions end the regular season with a 23-9 record.

It has not been determined where or when the Lady Steers will play their first playoff game. They will play the runner-up of District 3-5A.

JV'S COMEBACK

Coach Elaine Stone's junior varsity Lady Steers closed out their season in style by taking a 13-15, 15-10, 15-13 win over Central.

It looked like the Lady Steers were doomed as Central led 8-2 in the second match. But behind the fine net play of Michelle LeGrande and Priscilla Banks, the Lady Steers prevailed to win the match.

In the final match Big Spring jumped out to a commanding 14-5 lead, only to see it shrink to 14-13. The Lady Steers won the game when LeGrande served over a ace.

The Lady Steers end district with a 10-4 record and 21-9 overall mark.

Raiders (6-2) at Seattle (4-4)
The Seahawks, one of the favorites to take the AFC title, are another team that has yet to meet expectations. They now have lost as many games in a half-season as they did all of last year and quarterback Dave Krieg is in a slump — he's just 18 of 52 for 263 yards with five interceptions in consecutive losses to the Broncos and Jets.

But Raiders Coach Tom Flores says Seattle's main problem is that opponents point to them.

"When you're a preseason pick to go to the Super Bowl, other teams read that, too," Flores says. "You don't sneak up on anybody."

The Raiders, who had been living on defense, found an offense in a 34-21 win over San Diego Monday night, although the Chargers aren't a real defensive test.

Dallas (6-2) at St. Louis (3-5) (Monday night)

What looked at season's start like a battle for the NFC East lead now looks like just another Dallas victory. The Cards have lost four straight and made two changes this week — they cut erratic kicker Neil O'Donoghue in favor of Jess Atkinson, just released by the Giants and made scout Harry Gilmer the quarterback coach to help the troubled Neil Lomax.

Tony Hill leads the NFC in receiving, and the Cowboys surprisingly lead the league in offense, although Danny White's ribs still hurt. Warns Coach Tom Landry: "St. Louis has as much potential as anybody in the league. They just aren't scoring and I hope that continues one more week."

Chicago (8-0) at Green Bay (3-5)
These two met just two weeks ago in the Monday night game highlighted by William "The Refrigerator" Perry's appearance in the Chicago backfield. The Bears won that one 23-7.

Green Bay, which lost 37-10 last week in Indianapolis, will go with Jim Zorn at quarterback in place of Lynn Dickey, who threw three interceptions in the first meeting. Zorn is far more mobile, the better to escape Chicago's confusing assortments of stunts and blitzes.

Cleveland (4-4) at Pittsburgh (3-5)

The Steelers have been one of the NFL's major disappointments. But they can still tie for the AFC Central lead with a victory.

David Woodley replaces the injured Mark Malone at quarterback for Pittsburgh, while Gary Danielson likely is to start in place of Bernie Kosar for Cleveland. Danielson took over in the third quarter of last week's 14-7 loss to Washington.

New York Jets (6-2) at Indianapolis (3-5)

The Colts are Demers. All their wins have been at the Hoosier Dome and the contrast is gripping — they beat Buffalo 49-17 at home and lost 21-9 on the road.

The Jets won the first meeting 25-20 with the aid of a fourth-quarter goal line stand and a questionable spot by an official. But they have the incentive this time of knowing a win will keep them in first place in the AFC East.

Denver (6-2) at San Diego (3-5)

This is the first of two games in three weeks between the Chargers and the Broncos.

Denver, co-leader with the Raiders in the AFC West, have been doing it once again with defense and special teams — Randy Robbins blocked two punts in last week's 30-10 win over Kansas City. San Diego is in the assimilation stage — Dan Fouts and Kellen Winslow have just returned from injury and there are 21 new players from last year's team.

New Orleans (3-5) at Rams (7-1)

The Rams have a 7-1 mark despite minimal help from the offense. Coach John Robinson now says he treated the 49ers game as too important and adds: "Our game against the Saints is every bit as important to us."

The Saints, who have lost three straight, had almost no offense in a 21-13 loss to the Giants — their only touchdown came in the last minute and they would have been further behind had not the Giants self-destructed in scoring position.

Tampa Bay (0-9) at New York Giants (5-3)

The Giants, who have activated holdout All-cornerback Mark Haynes, have the best offense-defense ranking in the league. They're first on defense, fifth on offense and would be 8-0 or 7-1 but for a penchant for turnovers — they've fumbled four times inside the opponents' five.

The unfortunate Bucs lost to the Bears, Rams and Dolphins by a combined 15 points and led the Patriots 14-0 last week. They ended up losing 32-14.

Detroit (5-3) at Minnesota (4-4)
Detroit, which numbers Dallas, San Francisco and Miami among its victims, has been one of the league's big surprises. So have the Vikings, who have already won one more game than they did last season and have the softer half of their schedule coming up.

They're demers like the Colts — they're 4-0 in the Pontiac Silverdome. "We need more home games," says Detroit Coach Darryl Rogers.

Washington (4-4) at Atlanta (1-7)

One statistic says a lot about the Redskins' offensive troubles — Joe Theismann ranks last among quarterbacks in the NFC and Washington has scored just 17 points the last two weeks in a loss to the Giants and a win over Cleveland. But Atlanta's David Archer is next-to-last and the Falcons have a penchant for self-destruction — they led the Cowboys 10-0 in the second quarter last week and ended up losing 24-10.

Cincinnati (3-5) at Buffalo (1-7)
The Bengals can vary from super to awful from game to game, even quarter to quarter — they rebounded from a 44-27 loss to Houston two weeks ago with a 26-21 triumph over Pittsburgh last Sunday and moved up from last to 26th in the NFL in defense. The Bills, with help from recently signed Joe Cribbs, are coming on — they won their first game two weeks ago, then rolled up 339 yards against a good Philadelphia defense, but blew a 17-0 lead and lost 21-17.

Kansas City (3-5) at Houston (3-5)

These two have arrived at the same place from different directions. The Chiefs have lost four straight and are unraveling; the young Oilers have won two in a row and are just a game out of first in the NFC Central, which may be won this year by an 8-8 record.

Hawks

contention.

By the 6:19 mark, Howard had cut the lead to 80-77.

Howard grabbed one of its few leads when Steve Blanchard canned in two baskets, and the Hawks led 84-83 with five minutes remaining. Howard stretched the lead to 90-86 when Archibald turned in another three-point play, and it looked like Howard might have another come-from-behind victory.

But Chumbley brought Angelina with two baskets, tying the game at 90-all with three minutes left. Chumbley, who led all scorers with 25 points, hit his third consecutive basket and Howard trailed 92-90 with 1:55 left.

Howard held the ball on its next trip down, looking for the high percentage shot. Bruce Kimble's shot from the corner wouldn't fall but sophomore forward Walt Reynolds rebounded, scored and was fouled on the play by Wilson.

Reynolds failed on his free throw to put the Hawks ahead and Angelina brought the ball down. Wilson's shot was off and Kimble rebounded, but had the ball stolen by Freddie Williams. Williams then converted a eight-foot jumper for the winning margin.

McCall led the Hawks with 24 points. He hit a hot 10-14 from the floor. One time during the first half, he hit seven-in-a-row. Archibald ended the night with 19 points and three steals.

Americans make it to finals in European Champions tennis

ANTWERP, Belgium (AP) — Ivan Lendl thrashed Sweden's Anders Jarryd and John McEnroe stopped West Germany's Boris Becker Saturday to advance to the final of the $850,000 European Champions' Championship of Tennis tournament.

Lendl convincingly beat Jarryd 6-3, 6-2 in a two-hour semifinal in the world's richest indoor tennis tournament after McEnroe stopped the 17-year-old Becker 6-3, 6-4.

If Lendl, the world's No. 1 ranked player, beats McEnroe, who is ranked second, on Sunday, he collects $200,000 in cash plus the Antwerp Diamond Trophy, a life-size, 13.2-pound gold racket studded with 1,420 diamonds totalling 100 carats.

The racket, valued by ECC organizers at $700,000, is for the player who wins the ECC event three times in a five-year span. Lendl won the ECC in its 1982 inaugural year and last year. McEnroe won in 1983.

Lendl's victory against Jarryd, 24, was never in doubt. The 25-year-old Czech served well and passed sharply from anywhere along his baseline.

By contrast, his Swedish opponent, who is ranked eighth in the world on the Hewlett-Packard-ATP computer, often missed after rushing to the net or found his groundstrokes going long or wide.

"It is tough to play Lendl," Jarryd said. "He plays with a lot of confidence. I did my best, but he is so much better than I am."

A crowd of about 9,000 at the Antwerp Sports Palace saw Jarryd quickly serve himself into a deficit as Lendl broke his opening service in the first game of the first set and again in the last game.

On the hardcourt surface, Jarryd made 20 unforced errors during rallies, twice as many as his opponent, who rifled five aces against a disputed single one for Jarryd.

Lendl broke Jarryd's service in the second and last games of the second set, during which the Swede quickly ran out of responses to Lendl's forceful play.

"I feel good now," said Lendl. "My confidence is really high. If I do not win tomorrow, I hope I can come back next year and play John (McEnroe) for the racket," he said of the glittery ECC trophy.

Sunday's Lendl-McEnroe match will be the first clash between the two since they met in the U.S. Open final. The New Yorker lost that match as well as his No. 1 world ranking to Lendl.

Doll House home to bears, babies

By KIM KIRKHAM
Lifestyle Writer

The Doll House at 1305 Gregg St. is home to hundreds of dolls and teddy bears, both old and new.

With a real house as its setting, the shop has dolls and bears in every room. A family of bears is having tea at the table in one room. There are cribs and strollers and high chairs filled with bears and babies all around.

The older dolls and bears have the look of years about them. They've been around. Each was probably some little child's best friend.

And they are destined to more years of make-believe lives with their "mommies" and "daddies" or added to a collection by the older doll and bear lovers.

"I try to fix it up so it will appeal to people," said Joan Haynie, who owns the store. "Doll furniture is part of the business."

The store is filled with dolls made in the 1800s to the more recent Cabbage Patch Kids.

Collecting dolls is "pretty popular," said Haynie. "They're second now to coins. They used to be third."

"I prefer the old things, but I get some new things in occasionally to appeal to everyone," said Haynie. "We've got old; we've got new."

Haynie became interested in dolls in the mid 1970s when her mother gave her a doll that she had received in 1907 at the age of six. "I wouldn't sell it for nothing," said Haynie.

She then began purchasing dolls at antique stores and auctions. Haynie opened the store in September 1984 because her home had become overcrowded with dolls.

"When you're a collector, you want to save everything," she said. But now that she has a store, it's easier for her to part with her favorite dolls, Haynie said.

When she receives a doll, Haynie tries to identify it and figure out how old it is by using catalogs on dolls. "That's the fun of it, looking them up and figuring out what they are," she said.

Haynie also sells teddy bears. "With the bears, the more jointed they are the more expensive they are," she said. "If they have a hump in their little back, that's better, and if they have growlers, they're even better," she said.

"I do a little with antiques," said Haynie. She has a spinning wheel from 1892, Victorian aprons and other items. She also sells costume jewelry.

Haynie said she buys items from people "if I can afford it or if they're sad," she said. She sometimes takes things on consignment and sells them at the store.

Dorothy McMurray works with Haynie. She makes handsewn items and crafts which are sold at the store.

The shop is open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Friday. There will be an open house Nov. 30-Dec. 1.

"As soon as I saw the inside of this place, I knew it was the Doll House," Haynie said.

Joan Haynie adjusts the glasses on one of the teddy bears having tea at a table. Owner of the Doll House, 1305 Gregg, Haynie sells new and old dolls and bears as well as antiques and jewelry.

Local art association plans weekend show

Malone-Hogan Hospital to be site of annual show for area artists

By CAROL BALDWIN
Lifestyle Editor

Big Spring residents will have a chance to view the work of local and area artists during the Big Spring Art Association's annual fall membership show Friday and Saturday at Malone-Hogan Hospital.

Paintings and other art objects will be displayed in the hallways between the hospital and clinic buildings. Categories include: Oils, watercolors, pastels, acrylics, graphics, photography, sculpture, novice and classroom, miscellaneous crafts, mixed media and wood carving.

Judith Tereletsky, Goliad Middle School art instructor, will be the judge. Entry fee is $4 per entry, and entries will be accepted for registration Thursday from 1 p.m. to 6:30 p.m.

The show is open to the public from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. Friday and from 8 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. on Saturday. Entries may be picked up between 6:30 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. Saturday.

Becky Smiley, art instructor at Howard College and a member of the Big Spring Art Association, said the Big Spring Art Association "originated more than 25 years ago." The organization and the newly formed Crossroads Fine Arts Association give people in Big Spring the opportunity to participate in workshops and learn new techniques.

"It's good to socialize with fellow artists," Smiley said of the organization. "It's an outlet to share ideas. It's a chance to compete with each other and with area artists."

The Big Spring Art Association brings in guest artists four to five times a year to give workshops for members. Each month, the association gives the "Tipping of the Brush" award. This is voted on by the membership and winners are displayed at area locations.

"There are a lot of talented people in this area," Smiley said. "There are people interested in doing work that pleases others, and people whose primary interest is in entering shows and winning awards."

Others are just interested in art for their own pleasure, Smiley said.

interested in art to study and not be afraid to try their hand at a craft.

"One can't learn enough about art. The more people you can study under, the better," Smiley said.

The Big Spring Art Association has a number of members whose interest in arts dates back for several decades. Nancy Payton is president. Payton is primarily interested in handcrafts such as embroidery, crochet, knitting and sewing, as well as silversmithing, painting, stained glass and ceramics.

Payton discovered spinning in 1981 and has since begun teaching courses to others. Member Johnny Zitterkopf has loved art since he was five. Today, he enjoys wood working and wood sculpture and ink drawings.

Paul Warren has been woodworking since high school. During the Depression, he wanted a lathe to work on, but he knew he didn't have the money for one. Warren invented his own from an old treadle sewing machine. Warren makes lamps, furniture and decorative plaques.

Roberta Ross used her art talents to prepare visual aids for students she worked with in the public schools. During her career she produced more than 80 charts and portfolios and she sold her work to several companies.

Madeen Blair bought some paint and brushes about 30 years ago and began working with them. She entered her first painting in a show and won a second place award. Throughout the years she has studied under a number of teachers.

Ernestine Day had planned to go to nursing school but married and changed her career plans. While her children were growing up, Day worked with different arts and crafts and took lessons from various teachers. Today, she owns an arts and craft shop of her own.

Another woman making a career with her art is Doris Vierge, who owns a screen print shop. Vierge has won numerous awards for her work in local and area shows.

Letha Lewis is Big Spring's representative to the Big Country Art Association in Abilene. She has won several awards for her work and paints in several media.

Robert Traylor didn't become interested in woodcarving until he reached 55. He did his first carving with a pocket knife, a couple of wood chisels and a child's set of carving tools. Former public school teachers who are now accomplished artists include Betty Conley, Emilee Beckham, Oma Anderson and Hazel Duggan. Conley taught home economics for 27 years. Beckham taught music in public schools, and Anderson taught drama, history and civics. Duggan taught at Central Ward School and Bauer before retiring in 1978.

Linda Rupard, a Big Spring native, has studied art for several years. She has numerous awards from membership and area shows. She is teaching adult and children's classes at a local craft shop.

Arlis Scott was working for a radio station when she met her husband, Al. Scott later opened West Texas Printing and now owns a video store.

Her art work decorates her work place and she has studied under a number of professional artists.

Jean Baker's love of art got her a job as an art therapist at the Big Spring State Hospital. She is working toward an associate degree in art and has won numerous awards.

Several members of the association started out as hobbyists but became serious about their work. They include Marjorie Tipton, who now teaches classes; Alice Webb, who took mechanical drawing in high school because "it was the closest thing to art," Shirley White, who has now been painting for more than 15 years; and Norma Porter, who took her first classes while in Germany. She began lessons again about four years ago and has studied under a number of teachers.

With Our Growing Chemical Pollution Problems, What Kind of Water Do You Plan on Putting In Your Body? Before You Make That Final Decision, Consider These Facts:

According to the director of the United States Environmental Protection Agency, Mr. Ruchelshaus, chemical contamination is the #1 environmental problem facing this nation. According to the news media (nationwide T.V., Radio, major magazines [Newsweek, TIME, Consumer Report, etc.]), recent independent and government sponsored studies show that the drinking water throughout our nation is rapidly becoming a threat to life itself, due to chemical (including chlorine) contamination.

MULTI-PURE THE SOLID BLOCK VS

WATER PURIFIER

EFFECTIVELY REMOVES CANCER CAUSING CHEMICALS

(America's #1 Health Problem... As reported by News, TV Media & EPA.)

PLUS PESTICIDES (DDBP, DDT, ETC.) CHLORINE BACTERIA ALGAE DIRT, ETC.

MULTI-PURE does all of the above without stripping away the healthful and essential natural minerals.

NOTE: All proven by tests conducted by independent laboratories and submitted to the EPA and FDA.

People interested in good, quality water at affordable prices and people who want additional income as distributor call or write:

LEAVING NO MINERALS WHICH ARE NECESSARY FOR A HEALTHIER LIFE!

Some people then have to go under a doctor's care to determine their mineral deficiencies — OR —

Pay the price later in life with severe illnesses caused from these deficiencies

R.O.'s and distillers have no independent ability to effectively remove the #1 problem — CHEMICALS.

Don't be fooled by sales presentations showing how bad the minerals look, or by the count in the water you drink. Ask for certified proof of claims to remove chemicals

Shirley Shroyer discusses comparable worth

Shirley Shroyer spoke at the Oct. 24 meeting of the Altrusa Club. She explained the origins of comparable worth, its concept and how it can be measured. The concept of comparable worth maintains that wages for jobs dominated by women should be equal to those of men holding jobs of comparable skills and responsibilities. Shroyer cited examples of comparable worth cases. Opponents of this concept maintain that the labor market and law of supply and demand should dictate the value and salary of the job.

Shroyer said the key to making comparable worth obsolete is helping women develop individually through training — particularly in the area of science and technology — and joining with workers to make employers more responsive to women's career needs.

Dear Abby

Spouse regrets old agreement

DEAR ABBY: When I married Sheldon (not his real name), we were very much in love, but he was a poor struggling college student, and my parents never thought he'd amount to much. I wasn't exactly an heiress, but my grandparents had left me a little money, so my father thought I should have a prenuptial agreement — in case my marriage didn't work out. That way I wouldn't have to share my "inheritance" with Sheldon. We had a lawyer draw up an agreement stating that what was mine would be mine, and what was Sheldon's would be Sheldon's. We both signed it.

To make a long story short, it's 19 years later and we have two great kids. As you probably have guessed, Sheldon has become a very successful businessman. (He just paid $120,000 in income taxes.)

My problem is obvious. Now I regret having signed that prenuptial agreement. Don't get me wrong, we have a very good marriage and I'd never consider leaving him, but what if he gets crazy a few years down the road and decides to leave me? Would that prenuptial agreement prevent me from sharing in what he has?

NERVOUS
DEAR NERVOUS: Your question is a good one. Much would depend on which state you're living in. Talk to your lawyer today. You'll sleep better tonight.

DEAR ABBY: I went to a baseball game with a friend. A man sitting directly in front of me kept smoking one cigarette after another. The smoke kept drifting back to me and I actually had to leave my seat several times because it bothered me too much to sit there and take it.

Did I have a right to complain? After all, we were sitting out of doors, and there is no special "smoking section" in a baseball stadium.

SMOKED OUT AT DODGER STADIUM

DEAR SMOKED: You had every right to complain. Most smokers need only to be politely told that their smoke is offensive and they promptly react with courtesy and consideration.

DEAR ABBY: Please settle a giant family dispute. Is your mother's or father's new spouse your stepfather or stepmother only if you are living with them?

You are the only one who can settle this, so please put your answer in the paper as soon as possible.

C.J. IN NEWPORT BEACH

DEAR C.J.: A stepmother is the wife of one's father by a subsequent marriage, and a stepfather is the husband of one's mother by a subsequent marriage. The relationship remains the same whether you live with them or not.

Dr. Donohue

Strengthening stomach muscles

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Would you please comment briefly on the function of the stomach muscles in physical activity? I noticed that after strenuous exertion (tennis, heavy yard work), my stomach muscles are often sore. Would you recommend sit-ups to strengthen these muscles? — R.G.

sometimes underrate their importance. They come into play in any sport you can mention.

A pitcher throws with his legs and abdominal muscles as much as with his arms and shoulders. When you hit a tennis ball, you do it more with the legs and abdominals than with your shoulder and arm muscles. You do, that is, if you are hitting correctly. If you don't, you are losing power. And of course, all rotation and bending depends on abdominal muscles.

There are many exercises to strengthen the abdominals. The sit-up is a good one, and one most people can do. I have on occasion recommended sit-ups to those who want to trim a paunch. It strengthens the abdominals, preventing the sag that loose "abs" can permit.

But no matter what your goal is, the sit-up has to be done properly. That means with the knees bent (or your lower legs up on the seat of a chair). If you don't do them this way you're exercising back and hip muscles, not the abdominals so much.

Another point: The most important part of the sit-up is the very beginning, until your shoulders blades have left the floor. Do that part slowly, and when you return backdown, do that slowly and exert force to resist the downward path.

Ham radio operators receive thanks

The Howard-Glasscock Chapter of the American Red Cross met Oct. 16 at the Veterans Administration Medical Center.

Members thanked the Big Spring Radio Ham Club and all ham operators who volunteered their time and skills in communication efforts between Big Spring Mexico City during the recent earthquake.

Members also expressed thanks for money, food and clothes donated, and to the Ryder Truck Company for delivering donations from Big Spring to the Midland Airport.

The next meeting is Nov. 19 at 7 p.m. at the Veterans Administration Medical Center.

By LILA ESTES

Q.: Aside from the fact that there is a lot more money involved, why does it take so much longer to transact the purchase of a house than it does, say an automobile?

A.: A good question and one in which several points are involved. First, inasmuch as there is quite a lot more money involved, a rather comprehensive study of the buyer's financial situation is required — to satisfy and protect the lending institution. Second, there is quite a lot of in-depth checking which must be done — for your protection. An investigation of the title should be made to insure there are no outstanding liens, judgments or encumbrances — all of which you would end up with if you signed the deal without knowing. Occasionally, a problem does show up, an instance when red tape worked in your best interest... time well spent.

Joe Pickle visits son in Summit, New Jersey

By CAROL BALDWIN
Lifestyle Editor

JOE PICKLE recently returned from a trip to Summit, N. J., where he visited his son and daughter-in-law, THOMAS and SHERRY PICKLE. Joe toured the Hudson Valley area, including West Point, and New Hope, Pa., before returning to Texas.

Joe made the trip with his sister-in-law, ELEANOR MATHENY.

Once he was back in Texas, Joe headed for his 53rd reunion at Baylor University in Waco. There he visited with son DAVID, who is also a Baylor graduate. David is working for the Houston Chronicle. Joe then make a quick trip to Austin to see son GARY and his family. Gary owns a television production agency.

Joe recently received word that DR. FRANK FISHERMAN, a former Big Spring resident, died in Houston. Frank and his brother, HENRY FISHERMAN, grew up in Big Spring, attended Texas A&M University, and then opened a veterinary practice in Houston. Henry still resides in Houston.

SCOTT FITZGERALD of the Herald had a guest this weekend from New York City. Visiting is CHRIS LANDIS, an architect. Scott is a former New York City resident and the two met while Scott was living in New York. This is Chris's first visit to Texas.

GARY STEFFEN had a special surprise on his 28th birthday Friday. Gary's wife, TINA, hired a belly dancer to surprise him at work at JC Penney's Friday. Tina went to the store under the pretense of business to share in the fun.

The Steffens had a number of visitors this weekend, including Gary's parents, MR. AND MRS. MILO STEFFEN of Panhandle, and Tina's parents, MR. AND MRS. LYNN BAVOUCETT of Albuquerque, N.M., and Tina's grandmother, LOUISE ODELL of Truth or Consequences, N.M.

MARY and RICK KENNY, former Big Spring residents now living in the Salt Lake City area, recently returned from a Caribbean cruise. Reports from friends are that the Kennys had a great time.

JERRY AVERY is in Dallas this week where he is undergoing surgery on his eyes at Presbyterian Hospital. Hope everything goes well for him.

CECELIA MCKENZIE, director of Rape Crisis Services, and students from the Howard College School of Nursing attended a conference Thursday in San Angelo on child sexual abuse, led by Dr. Susan Sgroi, one of the forerunners in the prevention of this crime. Cecelia said the conference was "excellent."

MARGARET LLOYD, new president of the Big Spring Humane Society, said TERRY BROWN and other employees at Seawings Restaurant voted to give all of their tips for a month to the Humane Society. That amounted to about $362 dollars which went for medicine and food.

In addition to Margaret, other officers of the Humane Society are KAREN MCCARTHY, vice president; POLLY MAYS, secretary; and CHERYL BEAUCHAMP, treasurer.

VERNON HARTIN, a Big Spring High School basketball coach 25 years ago, was in Big Spring Friday. Hartin is coaching the Jacksonville Baptist College team now. Hartin said he retired from public schools a couple of years ago, but returned to coaching at the request of Jacksonville College.

Xi Pi Epsilon holds '50s party

The Xi Pi Epsilon chapter of Beta Sigma Phi met in September in the home of Mackie Hays. The program, "Loveliness," was presented by Jan Jordan.

A September social, a '50s party, was held in the home of Linda and Mike Coskey. Members dressed in '50s clothes, ate hamburgers and made ice cream sundaes.

In October the chapter had two meetings and a social. The first meeting was in the home of Linda Coskey. Cecelia McKenzie of the Rape Crisis Services gave the program on rape prevention.

Prior to the second meeting in the home of Dorothy Pereira, members met at the Country Flower Shop for a demonstration on making dried and live arrangements.

The October social was a Mexican fiesta. The Mu Zeta chapter were guests. Members went on a scavenger hunt won by Chuck Ogle, Ron Howell and Rose Stukel.

Kitchen and Bath Specialists

by Bob and Jan Noyes

STEAM BATH

Steam generating appliances that convert recessed tubs and shower stalls into steam baths are small, suitcase-size units. They can be built into a vanity, closet, basement, or attic up to 20 feet away from the bath. The generators are built with electronic controls and timers. As a result, there is little chance of the bather being scalded. Unit size depends on the cubic-foot capacity of the bath. Any tub or shower stall can be used for steam bathing provided that the walls and ceiling are surfaced with tile or plastic which is not damaged by steam. The opening to the tub or stall must be tightly closed with glass or plastic doors which extend to the ceiling.

Before you invest in a combination shower/steam bath, try one. Many motels have installed them in guest rooms. If you're remodeling, consult the specialists at BOB'S CUSTOM WOODWORK. We design, build and install new baths and kitchens from floor tile to custom cabinetry. Come to 613 N. Warehouse Road in the Industrial Park, or call 267-5811. We're open M-F, 8-12, 1-5 or by appt.

HINT
A 240-volt electrical circuit brings power to the steam generator.

Malone-Hogan Hospital's Substance Abuse Unit is scheduled to open in early January. Officials are in the process of developing policy and procedures and selecting members of an Advisory Board which will include both medical-related professionals and community representatives.

In the meantime, the Big Spring State Hospital has had to cut the alcohol unit there to 40 beds which has caused a waiting list and created some problems in the community and area. At the same time, a crisis hotline is being established to communicate with outreach service areas.

Iris Correa of STC Builders and Cabinet Shop shares this poem that was published in the Halliburton Company newsletter. It is pertinent...

Are you an active member

The kind that would be missed,
Or are you just contented
That your name is on the list?
Do you attend the meetings
And mingle with the flock,
Or do you meet in private
And criticize and knock?
Do you take an active part
To help the work along,
Or are you satisfied to be
The kind that just belongs?
Do you work on committees,
To this there is no trick
Or leave the work to just a few
And talk about the clock?
So come to meetings often
And help with hand and heart,
Don't be just a member
But take an active part.
Are you an active member
Or do you just belong?

BABY'S VISION
A sure sign of old age creeping up on me is when I examine the eyes of babies whose parents were my baby patients a "few" years ago. It gives me great pleasure to see these babies and this week's column is for them.
There isn't much a baby can see clearly when he's first born. He doesn't have the ability yet to focus quickly or accurately. It takes a while before he learns how to use both eyes to see well. In the beginning each eye acts independently on the other.
As times goes on, if baby still doesn't seem to be seeing well, he should have an eye examination. There are certain telltale signs a parent can watch for. Does your child find it difficult to pick up small objects? When he reaches for a toy, does he miss it completely? And when he starts to walk and hustle around the house, do you often see him stumbling over things that he should have seen and avoided?
There are other signs to look for. Check to see if he is using both eyes to focus on an object. If he tilts his head to look at something or squints or closes one eye to look closely at something, there may be a vision problem. An eye examination is the only way you can be sure.
If you have questions about your baby's vision I will be glad to discuss them with you.
