Lonnie Gary suggested that the building's original front be restored to reflect its "historical facade.'

He said remodeling the facade to its historical state would be the least expensive method.

War is hell, so the adage goes. Each of three service veterans who observed Veteran's Day ceremonies at the Veterans Administration Medical Center have differing perspectives on war, but for each the memory of service is vivid. World War I veteran Rivers Drake of Odessa, 90, is the oldest member of the Odessa Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 4372. Injured in Army service in President Woodrow Wilson's "War to End All Wars", Drake says war is indeed hell.

Drake, a patient at the VA hospital, served in the newly created First Army's 90th Infantry Division during the Ste. Mihiel offensive in France, a six-day battle that began Sept. 12, in which 7,000 Americans died and the Allies captured 6,000 German prisoners. He was 22.

The day he remembers most vividly is

Drake said. "We went and defended our country. You've got to do it."

"Would I do it again? You bet!" he said. Drake is a member of his VFW post's honor guard, a "Member of the Order of Cooties," an honor group, and he received a National Aide de Camp award from the VFW. He also plays Uncle Sam in the post's annual Fourth of July parade.

BIG SPRING WORLD WAR II naval veteran Rosendo "Wimpy" Santellan, 70, is proud of serving his country. "I like to be a veteran," he said. "I come over every Veteran's Day for the celebration and I volunteer at the hospital once a month."

He picked up his nickname when his best friend was labeled "Popeye," Santellan said.

Santellan served aboard a Naval repair ship, the Mindanao, and is a member of the VFW Post 2013 in Big Spring.

Nation honors veterans

By The Associated Pres

The nation saluted its soldiers on Veterans Day with parades for those who fought and lived and wreath-lavings for those who fought and died, while Vietnam veterans remembered the war with events in snowy Colorado and Spokane, Wash.

Parades were planned today in Los Angeles, Columbia, S.C., Boston and New York, where a gay veterans group was excluded from the march sponsored by the American Legion.

"We wouldn't have minded them marching as individuals; we have gays in our organization. But we didn't want them coming in with signs about AIDS," said John Morahan, a spokesman for the New York County American Legion.

John Paine, president of the Gay Veterans' Association, denounced the legion's decision and two court rulings upholding its action. The group said it would protest the decision today, holding a silent vigil at Madison Square Park.

At Fort Mason, near San Francisco, where President Reagan once served, veterans and World War II war brides gathered for a nostalgic celebration with a big band backbeat.

Ed Fisher, 67, who was captured in the Philippines and survived the Bataan Death March, said he was glad Americans remembered the Bataan veterans on Veterans Day.

"But if they forget, that's OK, too," he added. "Maybe the war should be forgotten -maybe all that pain should be left alone.

"We're just glad to be here," said Dale Doss, who spent five years as a prisoner of war in Vietnam, as he addressed a crowd of 1,500 in Tallahassee, Fla., where a new granite memorial honors Florida's 1,939 Vietnam dead.

"Bring 'em home!" some of those in the audience shouted as speakers asserted that some American servicemen may still languish in Southeast Asia,

Texana Museum holds on to history

JACKSONVILLE (AP) - It may represent a vanishing era, but the evidence itself is alive and well in its own corner of the Jacksonville

Public Library. The Vanishing Texana Museum, a capsule of Cherokee County history, was established by a group of people who wanted to see the relics of a bygone age appreciated.

And, who wouldn't appreciate a 19th century sidesaddle placed thoughtfully next to an American flag that has been to the moon and

"It's a primitive form of transportation right next to a representative of a very modern form of transportation," said Bernard Mayfield, a member of the Jacksonville Public Library board of directors.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Ebaugh were the real initiators of the museum. Mrs. Ebaugh is the daughter of J.L. Brown, an early merchant and benefactor of the city of Jacksonville.

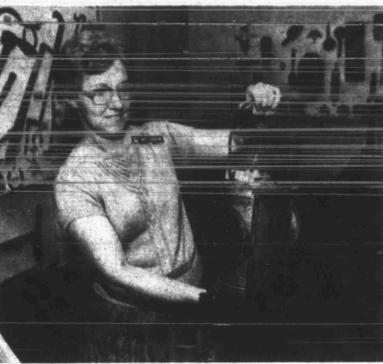

In the early 1960s, the Ebaughs donated funds to build an annex onto the library building on Jacksonville's South Bolton Street. The annex was specifically to house a collection of papers and artifacts of the late Mr. Brown.

Through the efforts of Mr. and Mrs. Ebaugh, the museum soon filled with donations or loans from other East Texans.

When Jacksonville built a new library in 1983, provisions were made for the museum pieces to have a new and permanent home.

Mayfield said that now that the new library is paid for, the board is 'enlisting foundations" to help build a new wing to accommodate

A third suspect has been released on bond, said Lt. Jerry Edwards. Arrested at 8:30 p.m. Saturday on suspicion of burglary were Bill Barber, 21, of 612 Caylor; Buddy Ryerson, 34, of 1901 Scurry; and Vernon White, 31, of Gail Route.

Barber has been released on bond, Edwards said. The three were arrested when a burglary alarm went off at the store, and police found the three men there, he said.

The suspects used a screwdriver to pry open the rear door, Edwards said. A few vending machines inside the store had been broken into before the men were arrested, he said.

Mayfield said he didn't know what the oldest item in the museum was, but that there was a spinning wheel displayed that goes back to 1847 or 1848.

Since many of the items were brought to the area from other places by settlers, he added, it is difficult to place exact dates on them. But, the axes or chopping tools are probably the oldest, he said.

Mrs. Ebaugh said the different stories behind the individual artifacts are not as relevant as "the whole story.

Plane forced to return

NASHVILLE, Tenn. - Passengers aboard an American Airlines jetliner forced to return to the Metropolitan Nashville Airport shortly after takeoff spent a tense six minutes between the time the pilot noticed a fire warning light go on and the landing.

Flight 449 left the airport for Dallas-Fort Worth at 1:29 p.m. CST and landed safely at 1:50 p.m. after circling the airport, said Al Becker, an airline spokesman in Dallas.

Emergency chutes and hatches were used Sunday to evacuate the 142 people aboard the MD-80, an updated version of the DC-9, after the pilot noticed the warning light.

Unconventional choice

NEW YORK - About half of all Americans would try medical treatments rejected by established medicine if they were seriously ill, according to a Media General-Associated Press poll.

And half of the 1,412 adults interviewed by telephone also said that cancer clinics should be allowed to operate in the United States, even if the treatments they offer are opposed by the medical community.

Movie can't move them

COLORADO CITY - Residents of this West Texas city say they were unexcited when actors, actresses and camera crews arrived to begin filming a $2.5 million murder mystery. 'People are like that around here," says Pat Furlong, manager of the town's Dairy Queen and a resident in the area for a "jillion years" or so. "They just don't get too excited about anything - ball games, whatever."

Pat Poole, director and co-producer of the film "Shadows on the Wall," said the quiet nature of this city of 5,400 allows him, his cast and crew the freedom to film undisturbed.

Career is attractive

WASHINGTON - A Carnegie Foundation report says the nation is making "slow but steady progress" in addressing a crisis in the teaching profession, with pay increases outstripping inflation and more people choosing teaching as a career than predicted.

Ernest L. Boyer, the president of the foundation, said Sunday there are "grounds for cautious hope," but added: "The challenge confronting teaching in this country is far greater than its achievements.

Rocky road to Geneva

WASHINGTON - In another indication that the road to the Geneva summit has become a rocky one, a top Reagan administration official says Moscow has rejected virtually every item in the U.S. draft of a proposed joint communique.

Prince Charles gets a guided tour from Gervase Jackson-Stops, curator of the "Treasure Houses of Britain" exhibition as Princess Diana views a Van Dyck painting of the Stuart Brothers with J. Carter Brown, director of the National Gallery of Art, Sunday at the gallerry.

Jolly good visit

Prince Charles to promote 'things British'

WASHINGTON (AP) - As the future king of England tells it, Princess Diana of Wales needn't pick out anything for him on their visit to J.C. Penney today, since Americans already are turning out by the thousands just "to see my new clothes.

With wry humor, Prince Charles says he's finally put his finger on why he's getting more attention in the United States now that he's brought a wife along. It's his new shirts and ties, he claims.

The glamorous Diana, 24, was another photogenic hit Sunday, especially when she showed up at a British Embassy gala wearing a cream-colored gown with lace bodice and taffeta skirt - and a glittering diamond and pearl tiara once worn by Queen Mary.

The royal couple planned a busy day today, starting with their promotional visit to a J.C. Penney store in suburban Springfield, Va., on behalf of the chain's $50 million line of British merchandise. Charles told reporters that "I don't know if I can be described as a salesman - but I do try to create some interest in things British.'

The royal couple had little problem at that task Sunday. More than 12,000 people turned out when they attended religious services at the National Cathedral, and thousands more waved and chanted "Diana, Diana," when they visited the "Treasure Houses of Britain" exhibit at the National Gallery of Art.

Sunday night, Charles told Vice President and Mrs. George Bush and a score of other Reagan administration officials, "When we were in the National Gallery, a gentleman of the press asked me, I thought rather tactlessly really, why there was a bigger crowd outside the cathedral than when I was last there, on my own. 'The answer, of course, is that they all turned out to

Peace proves elusive

BOGOTA, Colombia - President Belisario Betancur's unprecedented efforts to end peacefully years of insurgency face an uncertain future following the guerrilla siege of the Palace of Justice that left more than 100 people dead, including 12 Supreme Court justices.

More than 72,000 people have been killed in guerrilla violence in Colombia during the past two decades.

But Betancur has done more than any other Latin American president this century to try to get leftist guerrillas to disband.

Rebel raid repulsed

GENERAL SANTOS CITY, Philippines -Government militiamen repulsed an attack by a band of 100 communist rebels in the southern Philippines and killed 25 of them, the military said.

Military Commander Col. Orlando Soriano said Sunday two militiamen were killed and another was injured during the clash in Alabel, about 635 miles south of Manila.

AIDS patient dies

PARIS - An AIDS patient undergoing experimental treatment with the drug cyclosporene has died, one of the developers of the treatment announced today.

Dr. Philippe Evan of Laennec Hospital in Paris said in a communique that the unidentified patient died Saturday night. But he said other patients were responding well to cyclosporene treatment and that clinical tests of the treatment "will soon spread to other French centers."

Science doesn't require cruelty

The use of animals in medical research has contributed enormously to advances in human health care. But this highly affirmative achievement has been marred lately by reports that laboratory animals in various parts of the country are being subjected to unnecessarily torturous experiments and intolerable living conditions.

Last year, videotape footage of skull experiments on baboons was stolen from the University of Pennsylvania's Head Injury Clinical Research Center. An edited 30-minute version of the film has been circulated by an animal-rights group and has generated widespread national outrage.

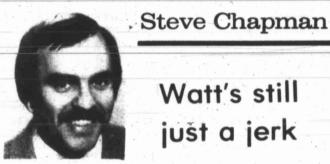

The film contains gruesome scenes of baboons, reportedly under only minor anesthesia, who have their brains bashed in so that researchers can study head injuries. The film also shows mirthful lab assistants clowning around with the dazed, bloodied and brain-damaged baboons and manipulating then into crude poses.

What makes these appalling cruelties even more upsetting is that no less than the head of the National Institutes of Health, Dr. James Wyngaarden, reports that this NIH-funded clinic is "one of the best laboratories in the world."

To be sure, few of the 100 million animals used annually in medical research endure such brutality. But, as we see, horrible abuses dooccur. Even in research facilities simply holding animals, numerous violations of the basic veterinary care required by law have been found by Department of Agriculture investigators

A bill recently passed by the U.S. Senate will help end casual and callous mistreatment of animals. Inspections of research facilities will be increased and penalties stiffened for violators. Painkillers and sometimes euthanasia will be required in certain experiments to protect animals from extended suffering.

Animal experimentation is necessary for medical research in advancing human life. Animal torture isn't.

WASHINGTON - General Motors has refused a request by the federal auto safety agency that 1.3 million Cadillacs be recalled to correct what government experts regard as a "significant safety-related defect" that can cause fire in the passenger compartment

A company spokesman defended the decision, noting that from the 1.3 million 1981-83 Coupe de Ville models in question there have been only 41 reports of flames, five reports of high heat and two reports of smoke. The incidents "occurred very early in the life of the car," the spokesman said, adding: "They basically have stopped happening.

Kay Hall of Farmington Hills, Mich., would hardly agree. She told our associate Tony Capaccio that last Feb. 8 she came within a few seconds of fiery death or serious injury, apparently caused by the very pro-blem that is being investigated by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration.

Returning from a trip to Indianapolis in her 1983 company-owned Coupe de Ville on Interstate 94, she said, "I all of a sudden smelled a burning smell and saw smoke forming" inside the power-window control panel. After accelerating to pass a truck, Ms. Hall pulled off the road and tried to get out on the passenger side.

agency's request for a recall, the company wrote that the number of reported fires was small compared with the number of cars involved, and added: "To the best of our knowledge, no injuries have occurred as a result of an alleged door lock switchrelated fire

The absence of injuries was "not unexpected," the company wrote, explaining that "reports of door fires indicate that vehicle occupants usually smelled or saw smoke prior to seeing any flames, and they were able to exit without incurring personal injury.

General Motors spokesmen said they were "surprised" that the safety agency recommended a recall after only a preliminary evaluation. The agency has now upgraded the investigation and is actively reviewing complaints about the 1983 models to decide if a defect does, in fact, exist. A positive finding could result in an order to recall the cars.

Footnote: The Cadillac's electrical problem was first brought to the safety agency's attention by the Center for Auto Safety.

Billy Graham Nursing home isn't for her

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: My children are trying to get me to move to a nursing home. I want to stay in my house, although they say I am not able to take care of it. How can I get them to see things my way? - Mrs. C.V.

DEAR MRS. C.V.: I do not know your full circumstances, of course, and I cannot tell you what is the right decision for you or your children to make. But let me call attention to three things

First, your children undoubtedly love you and want what is best for you in the long run - even if it is difficult at first. Talk with them and tell them why you are unwilling to leave your home; if this is what is best for you, they will be open to that.

If you are not as able as you once were to take care of yourself and your home, suggest other alternatives to a nursing home - such as getting someone (perhaps one of the family) to help out each day. In addition — although I know you may be reluctant to do so — it might be wise for you to agree together now on the circumstances under which you would be willing to go to a nursing home (such as if you become bedridden or could no longer cook meals for youself).

Second, both you and your children should be seeking God's will for this decision. God has His perfect will for every part of our lives - and His way is always best for us, even when we do not understand it at first.

It may be, for example, that it actually is God's will for you to move into a smaller apartment or a retirement home, because He knows that is what is best for you now. (You may be surprised at how pleasant some retirement homes can be today.)

Above all, the most important thing is to be sure of your true home - your home in heaven. Are

which suggests that anyone entering the land of conservatism had best surrender his brain at the border

The book, The Courage of a Conservative, achieves the unlikely feat of making Watt look worse than before. Nonetheless, what is supposed to be the thinking conservative's magazine, National Review, praises it as "a respectable call for solid conservative action "Watt's book is useful for the glimpses it offers of the peculiar temperament and skewed perspective of the neanderthal Right.

Only a strange mind could believe that in 1985, it takes extraordinary bravery to publicly advocate conservative ideas. But Watt does. "There is indeed a battle for America," he warns. "Time is running out. Those who have the courage to stand up and speak must do so now." His book is dedicated to "those few who have the courage to make a difference.'

James Watt is counted as one of these. He says the administration needed him, "a tough political 'street fighter' to take the heat from the press, the special-interest groups and the liberal members of Congress." And whatever the public impression to the contrary, he was a success as Interior Secretary: "I had successfully implemented the president's revolution to restore 'America's greatness.

This revolution, however, is incomplete. Watt strums all the familiar New Right chords: The courts have to get tough with criminals, prayer has to be restored to public schools, pornography and drugs have to be stamped out, a "Star Wars" defense against nuclear attack has jecting his president's professed commitment to free trade. Watt calls for massive protectionism to "protect our industrial strength and create the jobs needed in this country." Walter Mondale

Well, the press often was unfair to Watt. But press bias didn't make him a liability to Reagan; his own failings did. After all, any leftward tilt among reporters didn't help Jimmy Carter, who felt just as abused as Watt. Other inflexible conservatives like Caspar Weinberger have done just fine despite an unsympathetic press. On the other hand, no liberal ever got a more admiring treatment from the news media than David Stockman, scourge of the welfare state. Watt also forgets that the 'liberal'' press has developed brigades of conservative pundits on op-ed pages and TV news programs.

What doomed Watt was his simple mind, his unnerving persecution complex, his sanctimonious insistence that he was a better friend of true environmentalism than the environmentalists and, not least of all, his knack for embarrassing the President. He omits most of these latter episodes, including the wisecrack about his diverse advisory panel that forced his depar-"I have a black. I have a ture: woman, two Jews and a cripple.'

Watt thinks his crucifixion by the Liberal Establishment was the inevitable price to be paid by anyone challenging their comfortable dominance. In fact, he mainly proved that in Washington as elsewhere, it's no asset to be a jerk.

Ed Neal, a city council member in Vista, Calif., north of San Diego, billed the city for $1,136.12 in expenses for his trip to Washington, D.C., for the Republican blow-out. That was bad enough. But what really peeved the city fathers was that $450 of Neal's claim was to cover his girlfriend's plane ticket

Neal has repaid the city, and blames the whole thing on simple error. "I'm a lousy bookkeeper," he told our reporter Jenny Cunningham.

Deputy District Attorney Allan Preckel is unforgiving. Neal has been charged with grand theft, misappropriation of public funds and submitting a fraudulent claim. If convicted, he'd be removed from office and could wind up with four years in the pokey and a $10,000 fine. "It's upsetting to know that you've given your whole life to public service, and then see your whole career ruined because of a poor bookkeeping mistake," mourned Neal.

COMMUNIST CRUSADE: The Kremlin has undertaken an ambitious program to convert Moslems in its central Asian territories to atheism. More than 100,000 Communist Party "missionaries" have been assigned to the task. The problem of Islamic solidarity with the beleaguered Afghans just across the border is reportedly most acute in Uzebikistan.

Youth deserves our best

By NANCY PATRICK

A subject currently being discussed which concerns juveniles is "How is Howard County going to provide separate housing for juveniles who must be detained?"

Some of our best minds in Big Spring have been and are giving attention to this question. Formerly juveniles had to be placed in adult lock-up facilities. Then temporary arrangements were made on the fourth floor of the county courthouse adjacent to the adult county iail. After December 8 of this year. it will not be legal to detain juveniles in this arrangement as it now exists. It is within sight and sound of adult offenders.

It has been established in the minds of most people, even those least aware of juvenile needs, that young law offenders should not be confined with adult law-breakers. The reasons are obvious. Youth is an impressionable age which seeks and finds role models. Children with problems need positive guidance from law-abiding adults. They do not need to be exposed to with deliberate law breaking.

There are definite guidelines which our public officials who work with juveniles must follow. They are specific and allow little room for deviation if any at all. Each individual case is considered separately and there are provisions for individual considerations. However, the handling of the majority of cases is clearly prescribed. by law.

Juvenile rights and privileges are defined in a code which has been developing over years of experience of working with children. Federal and State, as well as local authorities, are constantly looking for ways to deal effectively with collective and individual juvenile problems.

As it has been my privilege to talk to some of the local public officials whom we have charged with the responsibility of working with troubled children in our city and county, I have been impressed with they have talked openly with me.

persons who have been involved They have answered questions in ways that show insight gained from years of experience. They and I have honestly shared our concerns and our ideas for improvement in what is currently being accomplished. In the spring of 1982, after a series of articles appeared in our Big Spring Herald on the subject of juvenile delinquency, I decided that I, for one, would cooperate with every person, institution and agency working for the good of youth. It has been an exciting three years. In our schools, public and private agencies, neighborhoods and churches I have seen dedicated people expending themselves on the behalf of the youth of our city. We are a strong community which seeks to protect and guide its youth. The current issue before us will be resolved wisely by men who pray for wisdom and guidance. There will be women there, too; for it is a cooperative effort. We will seek the best answers and provide the caliber of people who are doing an adequate detention center for this job for us. Without exception, young people learning how to live. Today

By The Associated Press Today is Monday, Nov. 11, the 315th day of 1985. There are 50 days left in the year. This is Veterans Day

Today's highlight in history: On Nov. 11, 1918, fighting in World War I came to an end with the signing of an armistice between the Allies and Germany inside a railroad car in the forest of Compiegne in France.

On this date:

In 1620, 41 Pilgrims signed a compact aboard the Mayflower, which was anchored off the Massachusetts coast. The compact called for a "body politick" to enact "just and equal laws.

In 1778, Iroquois Indians in central New York state killed some 40 people in the Cherry Valley Massacre.

In 1889, Washington became the 42nd state.

In 1921, President Warren G. Harding dedicated the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington National Cemetery. The inscription on the tomb reads, "Here rests in honored glory an American Soldier known but to God."

In 1939, Kate Smith first sang Irving Berlin's "God Bless America" on network radio.

In 1942, during World War II, the Germans completed their occupation of France.

In 1965, Rhodesia proclaimed its, independence from Britain in a broadcast by Prime Minister Ian D. Smith.

In 1966, Gemini 12 blasted off from Cape Kennedy with astronauts James A. Lovell and Edwin E. "Buzz" Aldrin Jr. aboard. Gemini would circle the Earth 59 times before returning. In 1972, the U.S. Army turned over its base at Long Bihn to the South Vietnamese army, symbolizing the end of direct U.S. military involvement in the Vietnam War. Ten years ago: Both houses of Congress condemned the vote of the U.N. General Assembly equating Zionism with racism.

Pads may ease excessive sweating

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I Now, I understand, a company has perspire more than others. Antideveloped devices suitable for perspirants and deodorants don't home use. help. This may sound like a fake I cannot vouch for their effectiveness personally, but some reports have been positive. The devices are battery-operated and deliver very low current (measured in milliamps) to turn off sweat glands in the palms, for example, through pads molded to things like heavy and constant fit the contours. Others are available for underarm areas. The name of the device is Drionic, and I am sure any dermatologist would be familiar with it.

I want to stress the need for personal advice about such therapy. Let me know how you make out.-

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I have been diagnosed as having thoracic outlet syndrome. I can't even vacuum my carpets because of the pain. I can't imagine this as a permanent problem. I have been told that short of avoiding all exercise involving my arms, surgery is the only answer. This seems like a major step, and I am looking for a third solution. Do you know of any other treatment being used for this problem? - L.S.

In thoracic outlet syndrome nerves and blood vessels are compressed as they emerge from within the chest cage to serve the arms and fingers. The symptoms range from numbness and a prickly feeling to outright pain in those areas with exertion. The outlet refers to the open area at the top of the rib cage (thorax) where the nerves and vessels emerge.

This thorax opening is sometimes narrowed by bands of tissue or from a larger-than-usual neck muscle, sometimes from an extra rib.

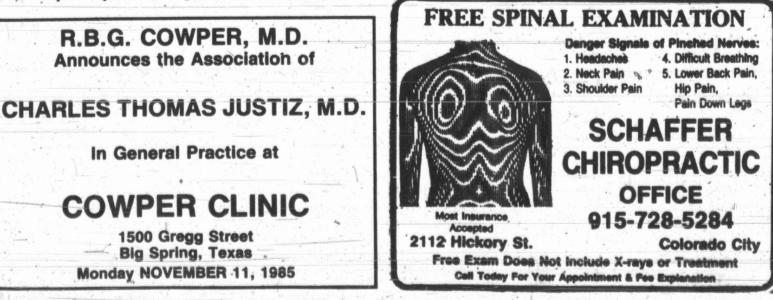

What about treatment? Has physical therapy been suggested? Sometimes, if the person with thoracic outlet syndrome can alter his posture sufficiently, he can relieve the stress against the emerging nerves and vessels. If you have attempted this and have not had results, then surgery can be considered. That would be to remove whatever it is causing the narrowing.

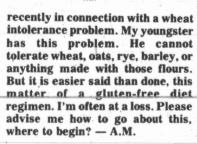

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: You

"The fact that we were able to beat them twice offsets a game like Detroit (a 26-21 loss) and those games that you lose that you should win," said Landry.

Redskins quarterback Joe Theismann, who was intercepted eight times in the two Cowboy games, including three on Sunday, doesn't need anyone to tell him how well the Cowboys are playing.

"They are playing as well as I've ever seen them in 12 years of lining up against the Cowboys," said Theismann, who completed 14 of 31 for 195 yards.

After spotting the Cowboys their 13-point lead, the Redskins rallied briefly in the fourth quarter behind Theismann's 11-yard scoring pass to Gary Clark.

But the Cowboy defense, which held the Redskins, to just 267 yards total offense, shut the door on the Washington attack for the remaining 13 minutes.

The loss, Washington's fourth against divisional opponents, all but ended their hopes for a fourth consecutive division title.

'We know we have to win them all, that's the bottom line. We're not going to get into the playoffs with 9-and-6," concluded Redskin cornerback Vernon Dean.

Dallas Cowboy tight end Doug Cosbie (84) is brought down by Washington Redskin defensive back Curtis Jor dan (22) during Sunday's action in RFK Stadium. The Cowboys beat the Redskins 13-7 and gained a tie with the New York Giants for the NFC East lead with a 7-3 record.

SAN ANGELO TURNING POINT

"I think the key to our defeat was not scoring in the second quarter when we had the ball deep in their end of the field and couldn't get any points. We were down 14-7 and could have tied the game up, but we didn't take advantage of our opportunities."

"Another big factor was our defensive breakdowns on third and long situations. We let them out of the bag several times in second half in those situations where if we had stopped them, we would have had the ball and good field position. But you have to expect those kind of things with the type of talent Central had in the backfield.

"I was pleased with the kids effort in the game. They were chasing'em as hard in the fourth quarter as they were in the first. Central just played an outstandng game.

OFFENSE SUMMARY

"This was the best offensive team we've had since I've been here, period. And we've got the stats to prove it. I thought we had a good game plan which resulted in as balanced an attack as I've seen out of a high school football team since I've been coaching. We took advantage of the talent available and if we had handled the ball better in the first part of the season, we would have done better record wise.

"Of course Carl (Speck) had an outstanding year throwing the ball. He had only 10 interceptions the entire year and four of those were off a receivers hands.'

DEFENSE SUMMARY

"We were awfully young starting out and you expect mistakes from an inexperienced group. Another big factor in the defensive breakdowns, during the first of the year, had to do with being on the field too long. Any defensive unit is going to look bad if the offense is turning the ball over all the time. They were forced to play too hard to early.

"By the end of the year I thought our defense was as good as any. They proved to themselves against Odessa, Abilene that they could beat good football teams and our effort was great against Central, we just had some costly breakdowns. The defense was probably the key to our late season success.

SEASON SUMMARY

"I was real excited about the way the kids hung in there and proved to themselves they could play with the best in this district and win. They showed a lot of character. This team had every opportunity to fold up after those early district losses but they came back. It really speaks well of the kids.

We have a solid nucleus of 16 lettermen returning next year and I'm very excited about next season. We've got some good lineman and a bunch of good skill people coming back.

Flyer goalie Lindbergh

brain-dead after crash

STRATFORD, N.J. (AP) hia Flyers All-Star goalie Philac Pelle Lindbergh, left brain-dead after an automobile accident, was being kept alive today by a respirator and his family faces "a very hard decision" about the lifesupport system, the National Hockey League team's doctor said. Lindbergh's red turbocharged Porsche ran off a Camden County road before dawn Sunday and crashed into a concrete wall, causing severe injuries to his spinal cord and brain stem, doctors said.

Lindbergh, 26, the Flyers' Most Valuable Player and the league's top goaltender last season, did not breathe for 10 to 15 minutes after the accident, according to team physician Edward Viner.

The chance of recovery is really nil, to be objective about it," Viner said

Lindbergh's fiancee, Kerstin Pietzsch, his mother, Anna Lisa Lindbergh, and a brother-in-law gathered at John F. Kennedy Memorial Hospital-Stratford Division, where the life-support system kept the former Swedish Olympian alive. The team said his father was due to arrive today after flying in Sunday from Sweden.

Viner said family and doctors would discuss after a couple of days whether to continue the lifesupport.

A spokesman at the hospital said late Sunday night that Lindbergh was in the intensive care unit and his condition was "still critical."

'I've warned (the family) that that decision might have to be made," Viner said. "It may be that it won't have to be made. It may be that Mother Nature will decide this.

"But because he is so strong and healthy otherwise, it may well be that it will be a very hard decision that will have to be made, but that won't be an issue for at least 48 11 hours

Two passengers in the car were also injured. Edward T. Parvin, 28, of Mount Ephraim was listed in critical condition with a skull fracture in Cooper Hospital-University Medical Center in Camden. Kathyleen McNeal, 22, of Ridley Park, Pa., was in stable condition at the Stratford hospital with injuries to her liver and spleen.

Viner said Lindbergh had been drinking, but said he did not know how much alcohol Lindbergh had consumed. Blood samples have been sent to a state police laboratory for blood-alcohol analysis, police said.

"Obviously he had something to drink," Viner said. "I don't know if that had a role in the accident. This was not a young man that was out Tomas Jonsson of the New York Islanders, a teammate on Sweden's 1980 Olympic team, said, "He was so young. I can't believe it. ... He was a lot of fun, and he always liked cars: big cars, fast cars

Lindbergh also owned a speedboat and had a collection of miniature cars in his Marlton home

"I've just got this hollow feelsaid Boston Bruins' goalie ing,' Pete Peeters, who once played with Lindbergh on the Flyers. "He was such a lovable guy, so flamboyant, so charismatic. I just can't believe Lindbergh's last game was a 6-2 victory over the Chicago Black Hawks last Thursday.

Lindbergh, born in Stockholm on May 24, 1959, was drafted by the Flyers in the second round of the 1979 NHL entry draft from the Aik Solna Club in Sweden. In 1981-82, he was named to the NHL All-Rookie team.

Last season, his fourth in the NHL, he posted a 40-17-7 record, leading the league in victories, and was voted the Vezina Trophy as the league's top goaltender. His teammates voted him the Bobby Clarke Trophy as the Flyers' Most Valuable Player. The Flyers lost in the Stanley Cup finals to Edmonton.

Lindbergh this season had a 6-2-0 record, with 23 goals scored against him for an average of 2.88 per game. He had one shutout.

drinking all the time. For Pelle to have a beer or two was the most we ever saw.

Pietzsch, who is also Swedish, said Lindbergh had gone to The Coliseum, a restaurant and athletic complex in Voorhees, where the team practices, to meet some teammates about 1 a.m. Sunday following a victory over the Boston Bruins in Philadelphia Saturday night.

At about 5:40 a.m., Lindbergh's sports car, moving at a high rate of speed, failed to negotiate a sharp curve on Somerdale Road and smashed into a wall in front of an elementary school, police said.

Lindbergh stopped breathing at the time of the accident. Emergency personnel said he had a pulse when they arrived, but that he went into cardiac arrest moments later and cardiopulmonary resuscitation was used.

The brain stem controls the body's basic functions, such as breathing.

"I want him to live, but I want him to be a person," Pietzsch said, crying. She and Lindbergh had been engaged since last fall and were planning to marry within a year.
