Spring Bentsen vows to resist oil tax

By WILLIAM GARLAND Harte-Hanks Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON - Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, said Wednesday that he and several other senators would fight attempts in the Senate Finance Committee to further increase tax reform's financial impact on the oil and gas industry.

The House Ways and Means Committee's tax reform plan, passed Tuesday, would increase the industry's taxes by about $4.2

Oil and gas industry representatatives, as well as Texas congressmen, said they hoped the Senate would lower the cost of tax reform to oil and gas and other industries when the Senate takes up the measure next year.

But Bentsen told reporters that the pressure would be heavy in the Finance Committee to increase revenues as part of the tax reform "There will be an attempt by some in the Senate to gain some addtional revenues from oil and gas, but I think that would be a terrible mistake for an industry that's already in a deep recession," said

"I think we'll be able to defeat these efforts," Bentsen said. He added that the committee might also pass an oil import fee as a way of raising funds in the tax bill.

Oil and gas industry officials said Wednesday they are looking to the Senate to be rescued from the oil and gas provisions in the House

"I can't imagine that the Senate would go along with this approach in any way," said Raymond H. Hefner, chairman of the Independent Petroleum Association of gas producer from Oklahoma City, said the near-defeat of the plan in the House last week "sent a clear signal to the Senate that something is really wrong with this legislation.

He said the plan's effects would "mean even greater retrench-ment" for the oil and gas industry. chairman of the Senate Finance

Sen. Robert Packwood, R-Ore., Committee, said at a press conference Wednesday that significant changes in the tax plan would have to include accompanying changes Hefner, an independent oil and that would replace lost revenue. He said such adjustments would be necessary to keep the plan "revenue neutral," meaning that the tax plan would provide about the same amount of revenues for the federal government as under the current tax system. Packwood did not comment on whether the committee would change the provisions on oil and gas, including the phasing out of the percentage depletion allowance for all but small stripper wells and

Gun thefts may be linked to narcotics trade in city

By HANK MURPHY Staff Writer

During the past week, three revolvers, two rifles and a couple of shotguns have been stolen from five Big Spring homes and businesses

While burglaries of homes and businesses have been a serious and ongoing problem in Big Spring - 45 burglaries have been reported to police this month — all but one gun was stolen during a four-day period beginning last Thurdsay.

"These things always seem to happen in fits and starts," said chief police investigater Lt. Jerry Edwards. In most cases burglaries, and the theft of firearms in particular, are related to the narcotics trade, he said.

"Firearms are always a good item if you're going to steal," he said. "They can be traded very easily for narcotics and just about anything else you want. They're considered hot items, like color televisions and VCRs.

Burglaries and gun thefts in Big Spring are usually the mainstay of bands of thieves, Edwards said. FIREARMS page 2-A

house during holidays

Leaving for the holidays? Before you go there are some things you can do to discourage would-be burglars from preying on your property and cashing it in for a pound of pot, an ounce of cocaine or some fast money. This year 543 burglaries have been reported in Big Spring, according to police. To stop your home from being the next target, Sergent Fred Pace, head of the department's crime prevention program, recommends that you contact the police department and ask them to do a patrol watch on your home.

"We'll do this while you're gone. We call it a security check on the home, and we do it at no charge as a service to people and homeowners," he said.

Pace said police will check homes at least three times in a 24-hour period, usually more.

Pace also recommends that holiday travelers "make sure somebody gets the newspaper and the mail and leave a light or two on in the house.

"Make sure it looks like somebody is living there," he said. "Of course, have your neighbors watch your house for you," he

Pace said the police department offers neighborhood watch pro-"We will be glad to come out and help people set them up in their neighborhoods," he said.

Staff Writer Why would a starlight beauty such as Nicole Stone, 18, of Granbury wish to reign as the state's pecan queen?

"To help promote pecans in a different fashion," she answered Wednesday afternoon during a visit to The Big Spring Herald. Stone was in Big Spring Wednesday to make an appearance at the Western Regional Pecan Show at the Highland Shopping Mall. The show began Tuesday and ran through Thursday.

Entries that were awarded blue ribbons in the regional show, will be submitted to the State Pecan Show in Austin in the spring. Stone, a freshman at Texas

Wesleyan, said she was picked as this year's pecan queen at the state show last July in Fort Worth. At the state competition she was required to give a five-minute presentation of pecans, answer questions about pecans from a judge's panel, and model in an evening gown. "During the judge's interview, you had to talk about pecans and QUEEN page 2-A

Reagan to ratify farm bill Monday

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Reagan will sign the 1985 farm bill on Monday, despite its expense and the mixed policy outcomes for the administration, congressional sources said today.

Agriculture Secretary John Block scheduled a news conference to announce the decision, and sources on Capitol Hill said the president had decided to approve the massive legislation despite objections from some in the administration.

Many members of Congress, which passed the bill on Wednesday, had urged the president to approve it as a compromise that would restore market competitiveness to American agriculture while offering farmers an income safety net

The House endorsed the 1,397-page compromise bill on a 325-96 vote, and the Senate approved it 55-38 a few hours later.

Block was said by members of Congress to have recommended approval by Reagan, and some farm-state GOP members of Congress sought Reagan's signature to spare them the harsh political fallout of a veto.

"This gives the president everything he wanted in the way of change, except for the schedule on which he wanted those changes to occur," said Rep. Edward Madigan, the senior Republican on the House Agriculture Committee.

A presidential veto would be "a political disaster in the farm belt for the Republican party," the Illinois lawmaker added.

And a hopeful Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, gesturing to wrapped packages under a decorated Christmas tree in his office, quipped: "That big one's the farm bill

But administration sources said other forces within the executive branch had weighed in against the bill, citing policy problems on trade and foreign policy and objections to the bill's cost. The five-year farm bill is the result of a year of struggle to reconcile powerful and competing forces: a deep and extended depression in the farm economy; massive budget deficits and the need to cut federal spending; and a slump in farm exports, which traditionally have been the backbone of U.S. foreign trade.

"Based on how things have gone in the past — the burglaries that we have solved up to now - it seems like it's always a large group of people. But we don't have anything to indicate that per se right now,'

Chances are good, Edwards said, that once a gun is stolen it is quickly wisked out of town.

'Based on information we have more than likely the weapons are going south of here to one of the border towns and across into Mexico and traded for narcotics. That's pretty well standard procedure everywhere," Edwards said.

Should you have a gun stolen, chances are you will not see it again. Most guns taken in burglaries are never recovered, Edwards said. The reason, he said, has to do with the secret nature of drug and burglary rings.

"There's very little that you can really work on," he said. "It's like anything that is narcotics related, everything is real tight."

Edwards said that knowing the serial number on the gun or marking it with an engraver can help police recover the firearm. Like any thing else, a good description of the weapon will aid police in finding it, he added.

NEW ORLEANS — A mistrial declared after jurors deadlocked in favor of acquittal in the racketeering trial of Gov. Edwin Edwards and four others is a "clear vindication," Edwards said, declaring victory in "the 16th and most important election of my life."

At a news conference after U.S. District Judge Marcel Livaudais declared a mistrial on Wednesday, Edwards said he won't resign, even if U.S. Attorney John Volz insists on trying him again.

Edwards faced a 50-count racketeering, mail fraud and wire fraud indictment in connection with an alleged $10 million hospital investment scheme. Lawyers confirmed that 10 jurors wanted to acquit him on some charges and 11 wanted to free him on others. Specific votes on specific charges weren't made public.

Defense attorneys said the vote ranged from 11-1 to 9-3 on acquitting Edwards' four co-defendants, including his brother Marion.

Ever since he was indicted in February, the popular Democratic governor had said the charges were a political vendetta by Volz, a Republican.

"I never was concerned about it because I knew what had happened ... I knew what the truth was," Edwards told 100 cheering supporters as the 3-month-old trial ended. He vowed to run for re-election for an unprecedented fourth term in 1987.

He called it "clear vindication," even though the charges against him remained in effect. "The government won nothing," he said.

"The probabilities are there will be a retrial," Volz said, adding that he was disappointed at the mistrial, but insisted the case against Edwards was sound. "If you think about what happened, the question is, are the feel like an 11-1 vote is pretty persuasive.

citizens of this state ready to change this type thing? And apparently, they aren't."

Edwards estimated that he spent about $500,000 defending himself that the government spent five

Volz said, "I don't know how much it cost, but it was worth every penny of it because we demonstrated what's going on.

Juror Geneva Converse, 51, saw it differently. 'When it came down to black and white, they couldn't prove he was guilty," she said.

Echoing Edwards' line of defense, she said she and 10 other jurors thought the defendants were simply sharp businessmen.

The Edwards brothers and their business associates - Ronald Falgout, James Wyllie Jr. and Gus Mijalis were charged with violating the conspiracy section of the complicated federal Racketeer Influenced Corrupt Organizations Act.

Edwards, Wyllie and Falgout also faced 49 counts of, mail and wire fraud. Mijalis faced three counts of mail

Jurors found Marion Edwards innocent on 41 fraud counts on Monday, but couldn't agree on eight other fraud counts or the RICO charge against the gover-"I'm going to go on with my life," Marion Edwards said. "I'm not going to let it bother me." "I don't see any cloud over my future business dealings," Wyllie said after the mistrial. "I would certainly wish we had been acquitted, but I'll take what I got," said Falgout. Mijalis added, "I

MOSCOW (AP) - The Soviet prehensive ban on nuclear testing.

The Communist Party daily Pravda said in an editorial that the Soviet Union, which in August decreed a unilateral five-month test ban that expires Jan. 1, was interested in prolonging the moratorium.

But Pravda reiterated this could only be done if the United States followed suit. U.S. officials have said the ban is one-sided, contending the Soviets have already completed their atomic testing

Pravda said the United States had objected that a test ban would be difficult to verify, and repeated the Soviet contention that the superpowers possess "very sophisticated national technical means to enable them to reliably verify the moratorium.'

Opinion

Justice Stewart was pragmatist

Potter Stewart's colorful candor and his common-sense approach to the law made him a rare figure on the U.S. Supreme Court. Among the many opinions that he delivered during his 23-year tenure on the high court, he is best remembered for his pithy definition of pornography. Having conceded the difficulty of establishing the precise meaning of obscenity, he concluded in 1964: "I know what it is when I see it."

Justice Stewart, who died recently at the age of 70, lamented that this phrase would doubtless become his epitaph. But court historians are more likely to recall the pragmatic judicial philosophy he applied to problems that split the court and the country along ideological lines.

A frequent dissenter from the activist decisions of the Warren Court, Justice Stewart was an eloquent advocate for judicial restraint. "A judge," he said, "is not free to inflict indiscriminate damage when-ever he acts in his judicial capacity." Generally supportive of police and prosecutors, he objected to the controversial Miranda rule that required criminal suspects to be informed of their rights to remain silent and to have legal counsel before interrogation by the police. His was the lone dissent in the 1962 decision that it was unconstitutional for students in public schools to be led in voluntary, nondenominational prayer.

On First Amendment issues, however, Justice Stewart assumed a more liberal stance. He was part of the sixmember majority in the 1971 Pentagon Papers case that approved the publication of classified documents. And he dissented sharply from a 1972 majority view that reporters could be required to identify confidential sources to grand juries. He chided the court in this famous case for its "disturbing insensitivity to the critical role of an independent press in our society."

From 1958, when he was appointed to the high court by President Eisenhower, until his retirement in 1981, Potter Stewart combined an unswerving commitment to the Constitution with a refusal to take himself too seriously.

These rare qualities and his eloquent, pointed opinions will be the enduring legacy of this gentle, learned man.

Have some pity on contractors

Since it is Christmastime I am making a fervent pleat to my readers for the "Hundred Neediest Defense Contractors

Suspended by the Navy, shunned by the Air Force, and boycotted by the Army, the hundred neediest defense contractors will be wandering the streets for the holidays unless each one of us comes to their aid. Let me give you a case history of just one of these unfortunate souls. His name is Corporal Dynamics. He was formerly a general and the most successful defense contractor in America — which is why he had a private jet, a chauffeured limousine, and a hot tub in Dynamics was a founder of the military industrial complex, and a friend to five presidents. Fifty senators were beholden to him because he gave them PAC money. Then one day tragedy struck.

But let him tell it as he told it to me from his wooden bench in Lafayette Park. "I woke up one morning and discovered that without my knowledge a sales clerk had piled on extra costs for spare parts on our all-weather Army barracks night-lights. It wasn't much money — a million here, 10 million there, an occasional 50 million when no one was looking. While each overcharge was chicken feed compared to what the night-lights cost, there is always some wise guy in the Pentagon who tries to make a big deal of it.

"As soon as I heard what was going on I became dumbfounded. I called in the sales clerk and asked him why he had been overcharging our best clients. He said they were getting the stuff too cheaply as it was. Besides, since we were the only ones making night-lights, how could they say what they cost? After some persuasion he agreed to drop the light overcharge, provided we jacked up the research and development costs for a canteen cup we were testing.

with me. Everyone was happy until some malcontent in Army procurement blew the whistle on us.

"The next thing I knew the FBI demanded to speak to me. Then I demanded to speak to my lawyers They said they would talk to me in exchange for my house, my car and my cellular telephone.

"To save his neck my sales clerk started talking to the Justice Department. Everyone was getting surly so I decided to plead 'no contest' to bilking millions of dollars from the Defense Department. I was tossed out of the company.

"You are now looking at a man who faces the grimmest holiday season of his life. I have no money, I have no job, and because of the scandal I can't play golf at the Army-Navy Country Club for three months. But I still have my pride and I don't want charity

I asked him what he did want. "I'd like my title of general back. Who ever heard of the Defense Department giving a contract to a corporal?" And so you have heard the story of just one of the neediest contractors in America. Can you enjoy your holidays knowing Corporal Dynamics will be huddled over a grate this festive season?

Before you go to sleep this evening think of Corporal Dynamics and put yourself in his place. Try to imagine what it is to be hounded by a power-mad Justice Department.

And then multiply Dynamics by 99 more who are sharing the same grate - contractors who have been indicted, are waiting to be indicted, or have offered to testify against their closest friends. No matter what the status of his case right now, a defense contractor still deserves a decent Christmas

While all the neediest contractors march to a different drummer, they have one thing in common. They all wanted the biggest buck for the bang.

Coast Guard can blame itself for budget woes

By JACK ANDERSON and DALE VAN ATTA WASHINGTON — The Coast Guard is between the devil and the deep blue sea: At the very time the Senate is trying to cut $230 million from its budget, the service is being asked to take an even bigger role in the government's war against drug smugglers.

Budget restraints have already rendered the Coast Guard's interception patrols so scattered and predictable that only the most inept or careless smugglers have serious trouble avoiding the cutters and aircraft on their appointed rounds. The Transportation Department inspector general reported a year ago that "predictable or detectable operating methods rendered patrols ineffective.' Coast Guard officials say steps are being taken to change that.

But at least some of the Coast Guard's financial shortfall can be laid at the service's own door. Over the past eight years it has spent $269 million out of its modest budgets for a fleet of 41 Falcon jet aircraft that have proved highly unreliable. Our associates Donald Goldberg and Corky Johnson pieced together the Falcon fiasco from a series of audits, memos and internal reports by the inspector general.

One problem is almost unbelievable. "The entire fleet of 41 Falcon jets was purchased without sufficient testing of prototypes to obtain reasonable assurance of the aircraft's performance and reliability," an IG report notes, adding this understated reproof: "Procuring a total fleet of aircraft with unproven engines is not a sound procurement practice.'

So the Coast Guard learned the hard way that the et engines, manufactured by Garrett Corp. of Phoenix, Ariz., had a few bugs. So many, in fact, that an alarming number of the planes were in the repair shop instead of on patrol during the 18-month period from 1983-84 studied by the inspector general.

"For example," the investigators reported, "at Air Station Cape Cod, each of its four aaircraft had one or more periods that the aircraft was not operationally ready for two to four consecutive months. "At Air Station Miami" — the hub of the antismuggling effort - "six of its 10 aircraft were not operationally ready for two to five consecutive months."

Insiders tell us the problem is still just as serious. Late last month, only two of Miami's 10 Falon jets were available for missions.

This continuing unreliability has been more than just a logistical headache for the schedule makers. It has made it virtually impossible to complete the testing of an infrared device called Aireye, which is supposed to help locate the "motherload" ships that bring drugs to offshore rendezvous with smaller boats

The trouble is that it takes about two days to switch the Aireye from one plane to another, and that's too long to have one of only two flyable Falcons out of service.

In addition, an "unreasonably high failure rate of components has resulted in a significant shortage of certain critical spare parts adding: "Meanwhile, extensive cannibalization has continued in an effort to keep the Falcon jets flying. At various air stations, cannibalization was so severe that some Falcon jets were used strictly for

Why not put in new engines? This would "be very costly, and is out of the question," a Coast Guard memo states flatly. In fact, replacing the bothersome engines would cost about $300 million, or more than the entire original cost of the Falcon fleet.

The Coast Guard, Falcon and Garrett have been working on the problems, but so far without success. "The problems with the engines will probably take years to resolve, if ever," the inspector general predicted

Eradicate illiteracy

By SPENCER SANDOW In a bold move to combat illiteracy, two television networks are joining forces.

The American Broadcasting Co. and the Public Broadcasting Service have organized Project Literacy U.S., to include national broadcasts on both networks coupled with follow-up efforts in local communities.

A new group called the Public Television Outreach Alliance will help organize seminars and workshops around the country to train community task forces to respond to the national telecasts.

Illiteracy is a big problem in America, despite free public education. An estimated 23 million adults in the U.S. are functionally illiterate.

The problem is worse in Texas than other states, where a higher percentage of illiterates are said to

With the recent reforms in and widespread concern about the quality of education, combatting illiteracy is a logical step. Kids won't get a better education if they can't even read.

Rudolf Flesch in his books on Why Johnny Can't Read," contends the problem lies with faulty teaching methods.

Children in most schools nationwide are taught to read by memorizing what a word looks like instead of learning a logical system of phonetics, he said, and that makes learning to read difficult.

In the phonetic system, children learn the sounds of letters and combinations of letters, so they can figure out what a word is if they haven't seen it before.

I am an example that the system works. I learned the phonetic system at age six at a private school. Before the end of the first grade, I could figure out the pronunciation of words like 'ecumenical" and "diversification." Not many public school firstgraders can do that, but virtually everyone in my private school

The first step in changing the situation is making the public aware of it, as the networks propose to do. The first program, assumably in production now, will run in September.

History shows that things change when the American public demands it. Let's support Public Television Outreach locally and help illiterates learn to read.

Baby boomers prove different

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Baby Boom generation, that huge group of Americans who burst forth after World War II to flood the schools and reorient American society toward youth, is about to start turning 40.

The first 9,000 or so members of that generation, a group that has had an unsettling effect on America since it began arriving, will mark their 40th birthday with the start of the new year, said Cheryl Russell, editor of American Demographics magazine. Throughout their lives, Baby

Boomers have placed stresses on American society, said Leon F. Bouvier of the Population Reference Bureau, a private research group in Washington. "The problem is, it's a one-shot phenomenon. Never before, and maybe never again, will we have a generation surrounded by smaller ones. That alone is wild," Bouvier said in a telephone interview.

The Baby Boom generation has flooded the nation's schools, then the colleges, the work force, the housing market and so forth building demand for goods and services and leaving in its wake a smaller generation with fewer requirements

While academics disagree over the exact span of the Baby Boom, most concur that it began with the return of the military personnel after World War II, lasting into the early 1960s when birth rates dropped off sharply.

The war ended in 1945 when the United States had a birth rate of 20.4 births per 1,000 women aged 15 to 44, or a total of 2,858,000 live

The following year, the boom got under way as the rate jumped to 24.1 with a total of 3,411,000 births. And the rate remained high — total births averaged more than 4 million annually for 17 years - until the early 1960s when the Baby Boom generation itself began arriving at childbearing age. But they didn't reproduce.

"... They are not following in their parents' footsteps. All the expectations that people have had for this generation for years are basically that they would settle down. The generation is not fulfilling those expectations." Ms. Russell said in a telephone interview. Her magazine, which specializes in population analysis, carries a detailed study of the U.S. population at mid-decade in its January issue.

Although there has been a widely reported increase in total births in the last couple of years, Ms. Russell said that figure is misleading. It results from the large number of women' - Baby Boomers - in their childbearing years, not from any increase in the birth or fertility rates.

Indeed, the only age group show-ng an increase in children at home is that between 35 and 44.

This group is the leading edge of those who postponed marriage and childbearing to complete their educations and get careers under way — a process that become widely identified with the Baby Boom.

But, Ms. Russell added, this group is relatively old to begin havng children, "and they are not having as many children. At the rate women are delaying, a lot of people are going to end up being disappointed that they can't have children, that they have become infertile while waiting.

Bouvier of the Population Reference Bureau observed that when a trend develops in a large group of people, the result has to affect society at large. And when two phenomena combine, he said, "that's awesome." For example, he said, the Baby

Boom generation flowed into the labor force at the same time the women's rights movement was growing. The result was a giant bulge in the workforce. 'By the 1990s, the Baby Boom will be at right age to start looking for better houses," Bouvier said. When people first get married they buy cheap houses. Now the kids are leaving home — and they only had 11/2 kids anyway - they are both working, and will be looking for an expensive home," and other luxuries.

The reported rise in births won't mean a return to the traditional family life of the 1950s, Ms. Russell suggested.

"Many of the demographic trends of the '80s - the decline in married couples with children, the growth in singlehood and divorce, the rise in two-earner families belie a return to traditions," she

The Howard County Soil and Water Conservation District is still taking orders for windbreak trees, according to an agency news release.

Windbreaks can provide up to 15 percent savings in heating and cooling bills by keeping the wind form sapping energy from the outside walls of a home, according to the release.

Besides beautifying the areas they protect, windbreaks offer protection and nesting quarters for birds and other wildlife, the release stated.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing out of concern for others who may have to go through what I have. I lost both my parents recently in an automobile accident. #### Some asthma comes only at night

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I'm a 28-year-old male, married, in prety fair health, stay active and keep my weight down. For the past several months I have been bothered practically every night with waking up wheezing and breathing hard. I'm fine during the day. What's going on with me? -

I want you to confirm this with your doctor, but I think you have nocturnal asthma. The person is clear during daytime hours, but has attacks at night. The dust and feathers in a bedroom can trigger attacks. For some, the prone position allows the lungs to fill with more than the accustomed amount of fluid, and that sets off an attack of wheezing and coughing. The person wakes up.

If you are being treated for asthma, which I assume you are now, I might suggest another cause. The asthma drug taken during the day often wears off by night, leaving the person prey to attack-triggering forces.

There are simple ways to alleviate such a problem, beginning with efforts to make your room as allergen free as possible. That means pulling up carpeting, removing dust collector items, and changing pillows from feather to years. So please, fill in the gaps;

If you do have nocturnal asthma, your doctor can begin you on medicines to control it, including drugs that have a slower release time, that stick around in the body longer and act during night hours. Let me know what your doctor has to say and what he tells you to do.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: My daughter, age 2, has congenital heart disease. Could you tell me more about it and will she outgrow it? Please answer soon. — J.M.H.

Please write and be more specific. There are so many forms of congenital heart disease that I can't begin to be helpful. And each has its own particular outlook. So I must know just which defect you're talking about. In a very general way, the phrase, congenital heart, refers to things that go wrong with development of the organ's structure during fetal months. That something can be as insignificant as a small opening between two heart chambers that requires no treatment, or so grave that the baby needs immediate corrective surgery shortly after birth in order to survive. Even in these cases, success rates of operations have climbed dramatically in recent give me more detail.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I read, and it may have been in your column, that there was no magic in ced liver oil. My mother used it for her children. Now I am hearing that it may be a good thing. What about cod liver oil? Does it have a role in good diet? — A.H.

We are learning a lot more about cod liver oil these days. It turns out that mom was right. It's great.

Its chief advantage now is thought to be the presence of a substance called eicosapentaenoic acid. Don't try that phonetically. Just call it omega 3 acid, another

This is a hot subject in nutrition. It protects against heart attacks. And a little over an ounce of it a day (an ounce of the oil, that is) not only prevents heart attacks, but lowers blood pressure. The same acid is found in other fish mackerel, salmon, and sardines.

A.J. (another writer) asks if there is cholesterol in cod liver oil. I can't find a reference that says that, but I would imagine there is some, for all animal products have some cholesterol. And cholesterol content of liver is especially high. But that notwithstanding, I would not advise anyone to give up their cod liver oil dosage to lower cholesterol, given all these other wonderful qualities it has. We'll probably hear more about cod liver oil in the years ahead as more studies are done.

FOR R.O. - The best chances for fertility resulting from vasectomy reversal are when it is done within three to five years of the original surgery. After five years the odds start dropping. The reason for this is a lessening of the sperm's ability to successfully negotiate the distance to the fallopian tubes, where conception

Although cholesterol has been implicated in heart attacks and other circulatory troubles, it is at the same time vital to human life. For a copy of his booklet, "Control Your Cholesterol Sensibly," write to Dr. Donohue, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, 7L 66611, enclosing a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope and 50 cents.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever Four Ways to Win With PIZZA INN

The Zips, who played this season in the Ohio Valley Conference, have applied for membership in the Mid-American Conference, which has an opening because of the withdrawal of Northern Illinois. The MAC already includes five other Ohio schools: Ohio, Miami of Ohio, Kent State, Bowling Green and Toledo.

If they are not accepted by the MAC, the Zips plan to play as a Division I-A independent, as Notre Dame does. At Akron, Faust is replacing 13-year coach Jim Dennison, who was appointed associate athletic director. Dennison, 47, the school's winningest coach with a career record of 80-62-2, took the Zips into the Division I-AA playoffs after an 8-3 regular season. Akron lost to Rhode Island in the first round of

The 6-foot-6 Barkley and the 6-10 Malone combined for 55 points and 31 rebounds and completely outclassed 7-4 Ralph Sampson and 7-0 Akeem Olajuwon as the Philadelphia 76ers defeated the Rockets 126-108 Wednesday night. Both Sampson and Olajuwon fouled out after totaling 31 points and 10

"We knew that they were the league's best rebounding team, so it was important for us to be aggressive on the boards," 76ers Coach Matt Guokas said. "I was suprised by the dominant effort of our club. We attacked them before they could come after us."

Barkley was 12-for-16 from the field and scored 31 points for Philadelphia, and he led the 76ers' 52-32 rebounding advantage with

Houston, undefeated at home this season, lost for the 19th straight time in Philadelphia, a streak that dates back to 1974.

The 76ers never trailed in the game and built a 48-32 lead on a layup by Bobby Jones with 7:48 left in the second quarter.

The Rockets, who were led by John Lucas with 18 points and Sampson with 17, closed the gap to 10 in the third quarter. But an 13-2 streak restored the 76ers' advantage to 99-78 with 51 seconds to go in the period.

"Plain and simple, Philly did what they wanted to do," Houston Coach Bill Fitch said. "Barkley and Malone did a great job inside. I don't subscribe to any theory as to why we lost. Whether it's home or back-to-back on the road, we would have lost tonight playing on the Lakers 107, Bucks 105 Los Angeles improved its leaguebest record to 22-3 as Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 31 points in a narrow victory over Central Division-leading Milwaukee.

The Lakers trailed 70-59 with 7:14 left in the third quarter, but they got back into the game with a 15-6 spurt that cut the deficit to two. Los Angeles finally took its first lead, 98-96, with 3:50 left on two free throws by Worthy, who scored 22

Terry Cummings led the Bucks with 23 points, while Sidney Mon-crief had 17 points, 10 rebounds and 11 assists.

Celtics 137, Mavericks 117 Larry Bird scored 17 of his 35 points in an 81/2-minute span of the fourth quarter as Boston improved its record against Dallas to 11-0 since the Mavericks entered the NBA in 1980.

The Celtics led by 20 points in the third quarter, but the Mavericks cut the margin to 93-86 with 11:15 left in the game. Bird then led a 35-20 spurt with 17 points as Boston rebuilt its advantage to 128-106 with 2:30 remaining.

Kevin McHale scored 28 points and Danny Ainge had 20 points and 13 assists as Boston set a team record with 46 assists. Rolando Blackman had 21 points and Detlef Schrempf 20 for Dallas.

Clippers 103, Warriors 99

Cedric Maxwell scored six points in the last minute of play as Los Angeles defused a furious fourthquarter rally by Golden State.

The Warriors trailed 89-69 with 9:47 left, but they outscored the Clippers 28-8 over the next 8:09 to tie the score 97-97.

Maxwell then took a pass from Marques Johnson, who led the Clippers with 22 points, for a layin and scored again after a miss by Norm Nixon. His free throws with 10 seconds left gave Los Angeles a 103-97 lead.

Junior Bridgeman had a seasonhigh 20 points for the Clippers, while Purvis Short and Chris Mullin paced Golden State with 22 and 20 points, respectively.

Nets 113, Jazz 98 Otis Birdsong scored 24 points and Micheal Ray Richardson added 21 points, 11 rebounds and nine assists for New Jersey against

After the Nets rolled to an 86-60 lead in the third quarter, the Jazz came back as Adrian Dantley and Rickey Green had 10 points each in the fourth period. But when Utah cut the deficit to 101-94, Darryl Dawkins scored nine of his 18 points in the final 2:26 to secure the victory for New Jersey.

Dantley finished with 32 points for the Jazz, and Green had 24.

Rookie AFC's top player

NEW YORK (AP) - Rookie quarterback Bernie Kosar of the Cleveland Browns was named Offensive Player of the Week and safety Glenn Blackwood of the Miami Dolphins was chosen Defensive Player of the Week Wednesday by the American Football Conference.

Kosar threw three touchdown passes and ran for one TD Sunday in Cleveland's 28-21 victory over the Houston Oilers. Blackwood had two interceptions, including a potential game-saver on his 9-yard line with 58 seconds remaining, in the Dolphins' 30-27 victory Monday night over

College players using steriods

NEW YORK (AP) - Several University of Nebraska football players purchased anabolic steroids in 1983 and 1984 and were taught how to pass urinalysis tests, according to Anthony Fitton, the former Auburn strength coach.

Fitton, 36, is serving a 4½-year prison sentence at San Diego's Metropolitan Correctional Center for offenses that included two counts of illegal trafficking in anabolic steroids. He was quoted in the current issue of Sports Illustrated magazine as saying he had sold or given counsel on the use of steroids to strength coaches or athletes at several schools, including Baylor, South Carolina, Virginia and Temple.

Jazz rent reduced

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) - Salt Lake County and the Utah Jazz have reached an agreement, hammered out in months of negotiations between the National Baskerball Association club and the county's Salt Palace Advisory Board, that would reduce the club's annual rent by

The agreement would have the city, the state and the county, which owns the facility, contribute $70,000 each to the reduction, according to principals involved in the negotiations. The Jazz paid $450,000 for use of the facility in 1984.
