How's that?

Gas price

Q. The gasoline price has gone down by 6 1/4 cents in the past week. Why isn't the decrease showing up at the pumps?
A. Ray McCutcheon of McCutcheon Oil Gasoline Distributors said the price of gas hasn't gone down by 6 1/4 cents, to his knowledge.
You may be confusing gasoline with crude oil. The price of crude oil has dropped dramatically. It will take time for the decrease to show up at the pump, and some experts are predicting consumers may never feel the decrease.

Calendar

Stock show

- TODAY
- The Howard County FFA and 4-H stock show begins at 6 p.m. in the fair barn. The show continues throughout the day Saturday.
 - The first practice for the Lakeview Elementary School talent show is from 7 to 9 p.m. at the school. That is also the sign-up deadline.
 - The senior citizens dance will be at 8 p.m. in Industrial Park Building No. 487. It's birthday night, and salads and deserts will be served. The Country Jammers Band will play.
 - The Permian Bird Dog and Sportsman Club will meet at 7:30 p.m. in the Permian Building conference room.
 - The Merry Mixers will have a Square Dance at 8 p.m. in the Square Corral. James Moore will be caller.
- SATURDAY
- The March of Dimes Mothers March will take place today, Sunday and Monday evening. Marchers can be identified by official name badges.
 - Malone-Hogan Hospital Wellness Department will have a Winter Wellness Shape-Up at Highland Mall.
 - Louise Burgess and the Osborn Family Singers will give a gospel music concert from 7 to 9 p.m. at Canterbury South. The public is invited.
 - The American Heart Association celebrity waiter dinner will be at Highland Mall at 7 p.m.

Outside

Windy

Skies are sunny today with a high in the upper 60s and winds west to northwest at 15 to 25 miles per hour and gusty. Lake wind advisories are in effect for area lakes. Tonight, skies should be fair with a low in the mid 30s. Saturday, look for continued fair skies and a high in the upper 50s.

JP's ex-secretary found guilty

By SCOTT FITZGERALD
Staff Writer
Lee Winchester was found guilty Thursday night of misapplication of fiduciary property after her former employer testified that money was missing from his office only during her term of employment.
District Judge James Gregg will set her punishment Feb. 25.
Justice of the Peace Lewis Heflin, called as a rebuttal witness by the state, said of his former secretary, "I never had no money

Earlier, Winchester had testified that as part of her duties in Heflin's office she collected money on behalf of creditors. The money, she said, was put in white envelopes and kept in her desk drawer on Heflin's instructions.
She claimed she had noticed money missing from her desk and that she and Heflin had the only keys to the desk.
Wednesday, Assistant District Attorney Robert Morris called

several witnesses who said they gave money to Winchester for creditors and several creditors who claimed they never received the money.
Defense attorney Wayrie Basden summoned four former secretaries in Heflin's office, who testified that part of their duties was collecting debts for creditors. Former secretaries Theresa Henry and Winchester said Heflin was aware and participated in all phases in the collection of and distribution of civil debts.
During Heflin's testimony Thursday afternoon, he denied allegations that he was using his office as a collection agency for creditors.
He also said he could not recollect making agreements for collection of payments for persons named in each indictment count.
He did say, however, that he occasionally delivered money to Gray Jewelers.
When asked by assistant district attorney and prosecutor Robert Morris why he let Winchester collect and handle money, Heflin said,

"because she was a secretary. She's supposed to handle it."
Heflin also said he didn't remember being told by county auditor Jackie Olson, Texas Ranger Charles Brune or District Attorney Rick Hamby to stop his office's procedure of collecting bad debts for merchants.
"When you were provided with a photo copy of the statute explaining this could be a criminal charge, is that when you stopped collecting civil debts?" Basden asked Heflin.

Oil prices

Slump worries W. Texas producers

By HANK MURPHY
Staff Writer
Plummeting oil prices on the world spot market are causing more "worry than impact" for the local oil-related economy, said Harry Spannaus, president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association.
Spannaus pointed out that the rapidly plunging oil prices occurring in the spot market do not reflect the price of area crude sold here on a day to day basis.
While acknowledging some drop in West Texas oil prices, Spannaus said the dip in price to roughly $25 a barrel for contract oil is modest compared to the deep plunge of spot market prices.

With the average price on the world spot markets hovering around $20 per barrel and as low as $18, Spannaus said their is panic situation in the oil industry. Referring to the tumbling prices, Spannaus said: "I think it's temporary. It's a scare."
Just how low prices will go is anyone's guess, he said. Furthermore, nobody can predict when prices will climb back up. "Oil prices will go back up," he said, "We just don't know when."
The lingering slump in petroleum prices has "caused a tremendous decline" in the purchase of oil rigs and drilling equipment, Spannaus said. He cited the shut down in 1984 of O.I.L., a local manufacturer of off shore drilling rigs, as a prime example.

Although Spannaus expects the oil industry to rebound from its present panic and turmoil, he expressed concern about the small petroleum companies. "I'm a little worried about the smaller type of operator who will not meet the expense of getting oil out of the ground."
A possible way for the government to protect U.S. oil producers from the wild swings of the foreign oil market would be for the United States to stop importing so much foreign crude, Spannaus said. He added that the main goal of his association is to lobby for a tax on

Saudi remark shakes spot market

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil prices have slipped again, shaken by a Saudi warning of possible world economic chaos, but stronger prices for futures contracts indicated that some stability remained in the market.
Unconfirmed reports that oil from the Soviet Union was not being sold because of customer dissatisfaction with higher proposed Soviet prices helped bolster the market Thursday, analysts said.
When trading on the New York

Mercantile Exchange stopped Thursday, contracts for March delivery of West Texas Intermediate, the benchmark U.S. crude, stood at $19.82 a barrel, while prices of all other monthly contracts through August were higher.
The Thursday price for West Texas Intermediate was down from Wednesday's $20.39 close, but its opening price on the exchange was sharply lower — $18.75.
That price reflected turmoil in the London market, where trading had been conducted for several hours. When it ended, Brent North Sea crude for delivery in February was selling at $18.30 a barrel, up from a morning low of $17.70 but down from Wednesday's late price of $19.90 a barrel.

The turbulence began when Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani, the Saudi Arabian oil minister, told an interviewer that Britain and other non-OPEC producing nations must

Teachers to cram for competency exams

By SPENCER SANDOW
Staff Writer
Two state teachers' associations are staging workshops statewide Saturday and Feb. 1 in a mammoth effort to prepare teachers and school administrators for the required competency exam March 1.
The Texas State Teachers Association, which filed a lawsuit in August to block the test, will conduct a workshop for this area Feb. 1 from 9 a.m. to noon in the fine arts theater of Western Texas College in Snyder.
The Association of Texas Professional Educators will have a similar workshop Saturday from 9 a.m. to noon in the Big Spring High School cafeteria, said local chapter president Kathy Terrazas, a teacher at the high school.

The TSTA workshop will have a pretest to determine each individual's strengths and weaknesses, followed by testing strategies and reading, writing and composition exercises, according to a news release. Participants will then take a post-test to assure that all materials have been sufficiently covered.

TSTA president Charles Beard said in the news release that the practice tests at the workshops will closely resemble the actual tests administered by the Texas Education Agency.
The ATPE workshop Saturday will be similar in content, Terrazas said. It will cover reading skills, a writing sample and test anxiety. It is "very thorough," she said.
All certified teachers and administrators must pass the Texas Examination for Current Administrators and Teachers test to keep their jobs next year. Those who don't pass the test March 1 may retake it in June.

"I don't expect anyone in the Big Spring ISD to fail the test," said Superintendent Lynn Hise, who also must take the test.
The State Board of Education has established a passing score of 75 percent on the reading and multiple choice. Educators also must produce an acceptable essay, the board said in a news release.
"In developing the test, we asked our contractors to provide an instrument that would distinguish between those who could read adequately and those who could not," said W.N. Kirby, commissioner of education, in a letter to the board. "The readability level (of the test) was 12th grade level or less and the skills to be tested were basic or minimal."

Skills to be tested are placement of words in a dictionary, extracting facts from charts and lists and determining the main idea in a paragraph, Kirby said.
Test results will be sent to each individual at his home, Hise said. The district will only be notified of those not passing the test, he said.

Unidentified pedestrian hit by car

An unidentified man was in critical condition this morning at Malone-Hogan Hospital after he was struck last night by a car while walking along the south service road of Interstate 20.
A hospital spokeswoman said the man underwent surgery last night and is responsive but cannot answer questions.
The accident victim had no identification with him, said police Lt. Jerry Edwards.
The man was walking east when struck by a car also east-bound, driven by Eugene Broadle, 23, of 111 Jefferson St.

Voyager zeroes in on Uranus

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Voyager 2 raced toward "the crescendo of discovery" today as its 8 1/2-year journey to the outer reaches of the solar system carried it ever closer to the stormy cloud tops of Uranus, the farthest planet ever visited by a spacecraft.
Voyager's sweep about 50,600 miles from the seventh planet, with the closest approach scheduled at nine seconds before 9:59 a.m. today, was being hailed as the latest milestone since the probe was launched Aug. 20, 1977.
It explored Jupiter in 1979 and Saturn in 1981. If all goes according to plans, its next planetary encounter will be with Neptune in 1989.
"We've been waiting 4 1/2 years for this," said Ed Stone, Voyager project scientist at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory, which runs America's unmanned space exploration program for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. "We're quite excited. It's the crescendo of discovery."

The itinerary for Voyager's grand tour of the solar system's third-largest planet included:
• More than 80 snapshots, including a picture of moon 1985U1, the first of nine tiny moons discovered by Voyager.
• A 20,000-mile flyby of Miranda, the smallest and innermost of Uranus' five dark, larger moons, all discovered through Earth telescopes.
• More distant encounters with the other four large moons — Ariel, Umbriel, Titania and Oberon.
• A passage through the flat plane in which nine, skinny, charcoal-black rings orbit the planet.

• Studies of the structure of the charcoal-black rings as they come between Voyager and light from a distant star.
A search for more "shepherd moons," whose gravitational forces herd the planet's rings into their narrow shapes. Two of the nine moons discovered by Voyager are shepherd moons.
Much of the data collected by the probe will be transmitted during the next few days because transmissions will be blocked during the 82-minute period when Uranus is between Earth and Voyager 2.
Stone announced Thursday that Voyager 2 discovered Uranus emits weak radio signals, almost certainly caused by electrons spiraling out along magnetic field lines. The existence of a magnetic field could reveal the length of a day on the planet and whether it has a molten, rocky core or liquid oceans.

"If you want to know how long a day is on Uranus, you have to measure the magnetic field," he said. "It's the way we will know how rapidly the planet is rotating."
Movements of wind-blown clouds detected by Voyager suggests a Uranian day lasts 15 to 17 Earth hours.
Because a magnetic field is powered by an electrical current, Uranus must have flowing, electrically conductive material in its interior, which is hidden by the planet's thick atmosphere, Stone said.

Child of hope

Woman finds fulfillment raising abandoned baby

DALLAS (AP) — Sally McKenzie never expected the heartache and the happiness, the trials and the triumphs.

At first, it was just a routine babysitting job.

Three years ago, a young woman came to Ms. McKenzie with a newborn in her arms. The woman said the baby's name was Joey.

"She asked me to watch him while she worked for a grooming salon," McKenzie says.

What was supposed to be a part-time job turned into a lifetime of devotion when Joey's mother abandoned him with Ms. McKenzie.

"When she brought him to me, he had an empty bottle, one diaper and no shirt," Ms. McKenzie says. "She was paying me good, though. Never skipped out on a payment until she left for good."

Ms. McKenzie says she is glad Joey's mother left him with her.

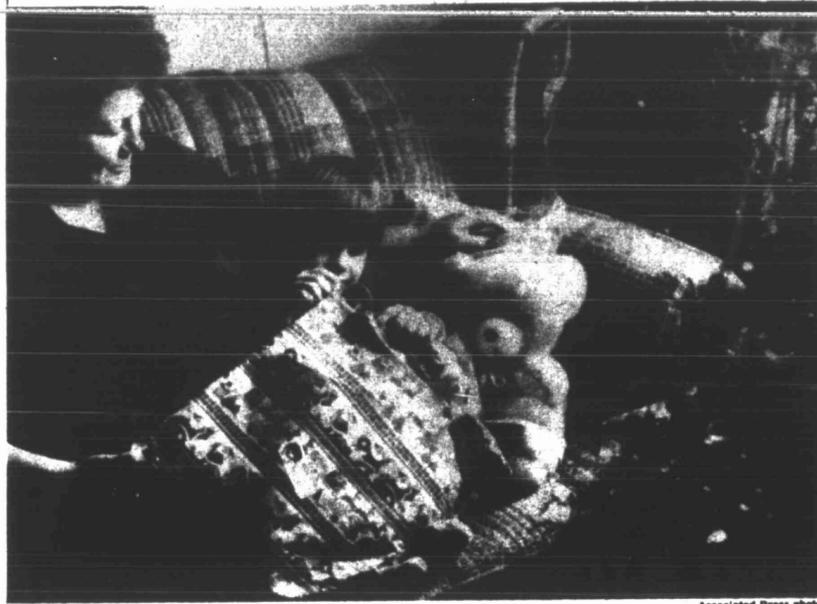

"At that time, I really needed him, like he needed me," she says. Ms. McKenzie, 37, says she was just getting through a rough divorce from her third husband. "I just transferred all my love to him."

She says she eventually would have adopted Joey, but one thing gave the legal proceeding a special urgency. Joey had a heart defect that required an immediate operation — generally, something only a legal guardian could approve.

A hole in the heart's wall and a blocked ventricle made Joey's chances of survival slim, doctors at Children's Medical Center in Dallas told Ms. McKenzie.

"He couldn't suck a bottle like a normal baby," Ms. McKenzie said. "You had to keep taking the bottle away, he would gasp for breath."

Ms. McKenzie, single with three children of her own and not a lot of money in the bank, started a campaign to adopt Joey.

Sally McKenzie and her son, Joey, open Christmas presents last year at their Balch Springs home. Ms. McKenzie has found fulfillment in raising Joey, who was left as an abandoned baby three years ago.

"I couldn't afford to hire an attorney to help me get the adoption, so I printed up some fliers and asked people to raise money for the adoption and surgery," she says.

With the help of friend Keith Barber, she went to bars and clubs with a pickle jar to collect money, she was able to raise $500 — enough to pay the legal fees to adopt the then 20-week-old boy.

"I'm going to tell him, 'Your momma may have left you, but here's a hundred and more people that did love and care for you,'" Ms. McKenzie says. "Maybe he'll appreciate life a little more."

After she adopted Joey, the state helped pay for his operation.

A heart specialist used a patch of dacron to repair the hole, and removed some tissue to clear the ventricle obstruction. Unfortunately, during the procedure, the heartbeat was interrupted. A pacemaker was implanted and will be checked periodically, doctors and Children's Medical Center say.

Despite the unusual circumstances of his adoption, and the heart condition that will follow him the rest of his life, Ms. McKenzie is determined to give Joey a normal life.

"He'll have a typical home life, except he doesn't have a daddy," she says. "If I find the right guy, I'll get him a daddy."

Police Beat

Terry's Drive In burglarized

Terry's Drive In, 1307 E. Fourth St., was burglarized between 11 p.m. Wednesday and 6:20 a.m. Thursday, according to a police report. An undetermined amount of damage was done to a cigarette machine, a juke box and a glass door, according to the report. An undetermined amount of money in coins was also reported stolen.

● Ingra Grisham of 7-Eleven told police Thursday morning that as many as 60 to 100 cartons of cigarettes have been discovered missing from various 7-Eleven stores in Big Spring. The theft of the cigarettes is thought to have occurred between Jan. 9 and 7:10 a.m. Thursday, according to the police report.

● H.G. Martinez, custodian at Big Spring High School, told police Thursday morning that someone broke into the office area of the school causing $350 damage to two windows between 9 p.m. Wednesday and 6:45 a.m. Thursday. Nothing was discovered missing, according to the complaint.

● Sandra Kounce of 3910 Parkway told police Thursday evening that someone she knows struck her at her home Thursday evening.

● Robert Gonzales, 18, of 407 W. Ninth St. was arrested Thursday night on an outstanding warrant for speeding and fleeing an officer to avoid arrest.

● Terry Don Schaefer of Coahoma told police someone he knows struck him in the face with his fists while in the parking lot of the 7-Eleven store on Fourth and Birdwell Thursday night. Schaefer also told police someone caused an unknown amount of damage to the fender and antenna of his car while it was parked at the store.

Sheriff's Log

Men arrested on burglary

Howard County sheriff's deputies arrested Dale Francis Ortofer, 25, of 506½ Nolan and Jerry Lee Bacot, 25, of 506½ Nolan Thursday night on burglary warrants issued from a justice of the peace's office.

Both remained in custody this morning in lieu of $15,000 bonds.

● Deputies arrested Mitch Harris, 25, of 1 Courtney Place Thursday afternoon on a warrant charging violation of probation. He was placed on probation after pleading guilty Dec. 19 to credit card abuse.

He remained in custody this morning in lieu of bond.

● Deputies arrested Dennis Hefington, 20, of 200 Circle Thursday night on a warrant from Jasper, Mo., charging him with failure to appear.

He was released on $1,500 bond.

● Deputies arrested William Sharp, 41, of 3706 Connally Thursday afternoon on a peace bond warrant issued by a justice of the peace.

He was released on $1,000 bond.

● Police transferred Jana Lynn Wegner, 24, of 1211 Harding to county jail Thursday morning after she was arrested on suspicion of possessing a controlled substance, criminal mischief and violating her probation.

She remained in custody this morning in lieu of bond.

Guilty

"I don't remember that. It could have happened," Heflin said. Jurors deliberated about an hour Thursday night before finding found Winchester guilty of 18 counts of misapplication of fiduciary property.

Winchester, 44, of 538 Westover faces a punishment of two to 10 years in the state penitentiary and a fine up to $5,000. Morris, who prosecuted the case, said Winchester is also eligible for a probated sentence.

According to the charge read by Gregg to jurors before they heard closing arguments and went into deliberation, Winchester was charged with misapplying $1005.91 in fiduciary properties from August 1983 to August 1984.

The charge defined fiduciary as applying to any person who occupies a position of peculiar confidence toward another. The expression includes those informal relations that exist where one party trusts and relies on another.

She was indicted in October by Howard County grand jurors on 21 counts of misapplying fiduciary properties during her employment in Heflin's office. Three of the counts were later dropped.

Morris said this morning the defense and state agreed to a motion that Gregg set the punishment on the condition that Winchester waive her right to ask for a new trial and a right to appeal the case.

cooperate with the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries in limiting production to control prices.

Otherwise, "There will be no limitation to the downward price spiral which may bring crude prices to less than $15 a barrel, with adverse and dangerous consequences for the whole world economy," he was quoted as telling OPEC's official news agency.

In New York later, prices generally strengthened throughout the day but still closed lower than Wednesday's prices. February contract prices for gasoline and heating oil were down sharply.

Futures contracts for April through August delivery of West Texas Intermediate settled between $19.88 and $20.50 a barrel.

Such material could be molten rock in the planet's core or electrically charged particles in super-cold oceans, kept from freezing by incredibly high atmospheric pressure, he said.

Recent photos of some of Uranus' major moons showed patches of bright material, probably water ice that perhaps collected in craters.

Voyager also has discovered wind-blown clouds in Uranus' atmosphere — some of them speeding 220 mph faster than others due to wind shear — and a high smog-like haze over the south pole.

Uranus appears to have a rocky core, surrounded by deep oceans and topped by a thick layer of hydrogen, helium and other gases,

"What the day tells us is, yes, in fact, there may be a floor to this whole thing," said Peter Beutel, an analyst with Rudolf Wolff Futures Inc. "People just said, 'Maybe we've gone too far too fast in the last eight weeks.'"

William Byers, an analyst with the Bear, Stearns & Co. securities firm, said he thought "the one single factor helping to firm things up was the Soviet announcement that they would restrict their crude sales at these price levels."

Since late November, prices have dropped more than one third, reaching the lowest point in six years.

Producing countries have been pumping more oil than the world needs, hoping the inevitable price fall will encourage other producers to cooperate in restraining production.

Stone said. "It's a big gas ball," said meteorologist Andrew Ingersoll. "You wouldn't want to live there unless you had a nice balloon."

Uranus is about 1.84 billion miles from Earth, but Voyager took a curving, 3 billion-mile route, using the gravity of Jupiter to change course for Saturn, and Saturnian gravity to head for Uranus. The close encounter with Uranus sets the probe toward its 1989 encounter with Neptune.

The incredible distance of Voyager's exploration was explained by analogy by JPL astronomer Richard Terrile. If Earth were the size of a pinhead, the sun would be "about the size of a grapefruit" 45 feet away and Uranus would be "the size of a green pea about 900 feet away," Terrile said.

foreign crude when ever its price falls below a certain point.

The soft market conditions for oil has, of course, impacted the men who work the oil fields.

"We've had quite an influx of roughnecks and drillers," said Joe Wallis, local office manager at the Texas Employment Commission. But he noted that there is always an annual lag in employment at this time of year. "It usually picks up in the spring," he said. The area's unemployment rate stands at 5.1 percent.

Band to get new uniforms

The Big Spring High School marching band will get new uniforms this year, school board members decided Thursday at special meeting.

The board approved a $41,559 bid for 200 uniforms from the Fruenaur company.

The uniforms are in the "Blue Devil" style with waist-length coat, longer cape and plumed hat, said band director Ricky Mitchell.

The style "looks good on the field and on the stage as well," he said. "It's got a formal look."

The current band uniforms are worn out, he said; buckles and buttons are missing and the white cloth is not dingy. They are 10 years old, "about the average life span of a uniform," Mitchell said.

Changes in the uniform include a longer, red and gold cape, a white plume on the hat, a ruffled dickie underneath the coat and a red cummerbund and chain, he said. The uniforms are black with gold trim and have a 4-inch white sleeve cuff, which gives a gauntlet effect when worn with white gloves, he said.

The new uniforms should arrive in late August, he said.

Three transferred to prison

Howard County sheriff's deputies transferred three men to the Texas Department of Corrections Thursday morning where they will begin serving sentences for felonies.

Robert Luis Salazar, 19, of 1403 Mesa pleaded guilty to a sexual assault charge Monday in 118th District Court and was sentenced to 15 years in prison.

He was arrested in November 1984 and charged with aggravated sexual assault of a woman in her early 30s at a westside apartment complex.

The charge later was reduced to a sexual assault as part of a plea bargain.

Bobby Lee Edmondson, 25, of 608 Goliad will serve 10 years in the state penitentiary after he pleaded guilty Monday to an involuntary manslaughter charge arising from an car accident last May.

He was arrested by a Department of Public Safety trooper after the two-car accident on Birdwell Lane, north of Big Spring.

Gary Hankins died from injuries suffered in the accident.

Robert Lee Baker, 28, of Snyder will serve 12 years for committing an aggravated robbery at Big Mike's Liquor Store on Jan. 10. He pleaded guilty to the charge Tuesday.

Deaths

Charles Knightstep

Graveside services for Charles E. Knightstep, 77, of Walter Road were set for 10 a.m. today at Trinity Memorial Park with Chaplain Carroll Kohl of the Veterans Administration Medical Center officiating. Services were directed by Myers and Smith Funeral Home.

Knightstep died at 12:45 p.m. Tuesday, Jan. 21, at the VA hospital after a long illness.

He was born Nov. 27, 1908, in Bowie and grew up there. He was a veteran of World War II, serving in the Navy in the Pacific theater. He was a retired cook and had lived in Big Spring since 1976.

He is survived by a sister, Mrs. Parker (Pauline) Harden of Big Spring, and a nephew.

Una Mae Allison

Graveside services for Una Mae Allison, 91, of Mountain View Lodge nursing home will be at 10 a.m. Saturday at Trinity Memorial Park with the Rev. Herbert McPherson, pastor of the Calvary Baptist Church, officiating. Directing will be Nalley-Pickle and Welch Funeral Home.

She died Thursday evening at the nursing home after a long illness.

She was born Sept. 18, 1894, in Coryell County and married Horace B. Allison in Walters, Okla. He died April 13, 1949. She lived in the Big Spring community since February of 1943. She was a member of the Church of Christ.

She is survived by two daughters, Lela Kerly of Carlton and Letha Chandler of Big Spring; a brother, Pat Gallagher of Duncan, Okla.; four sisters, Lucy Seay of Comanche, Okla., Olla Jackson of Hot Springs, Ark., Meta Orr of Chickasha, Okla., and Vera Whittington of Sulphur, La.; eight grandchildren; 17 great-grandchildren; and four great-great-grandchildren. She was preceded in death by two sisters and two brothers.

Grandsons and great grandsons will serve as pallbearers.

Workers robbed of cash

DALLAS — A masked gunman robbed seven construction workers of about $700 in cash and credit cards as the men were working to install water pipes in southwest Dallas, police say.

Police said the gunman, who wore panty hose over his head, forced the men to give him their wallets.

Two of the workers chased the man as he fled from the site, but they lost him. Several police officers and officers in a police helicopter also searched for him, but were unable to spot him, police said.

INS crackdown works

EL PASO — A new program targeting alien commuters who collect public aid is expected to save thousands of dollars to agencies in Texas and New Mexico, immigration officials said Thursday.

There are about 7,000 people who are legal United States residents but who live in Juarez, Mexico, and commute daily to the El Paso area to work or attend school, said Al Guigni, district director for the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service.

It is illegal for them to benefit from public assistance programs, such as food stamps or Social Security.

Flu treatment urged

ATLANTA — With deaths and illness from influenza on the rise, the national Centers for Disease Control has urged preventive treatment, where possible, for some types of flu.

The CDC, which monitors deaths in 121 leading U.S. cities, said Thursday that flu and pneumonia were responsible for 6 percent of the 13,895 reported deaths last week, up from 4.9 percent six weeks earlier.

Head of VA quits

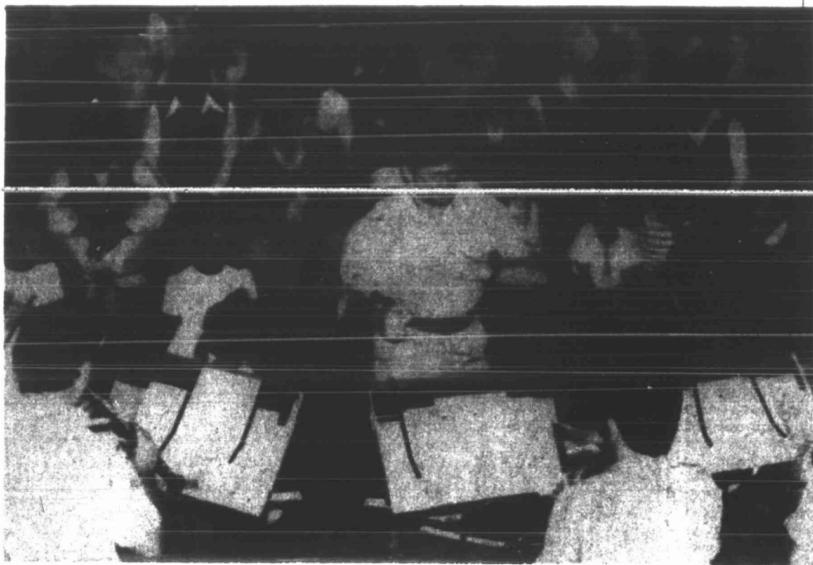

WASHINGTON — Harry N. Walters is leaving as head of the Veterans Administration as the agency faces a period of reducing many benefits to the nation's 30 million military veterans.

Walters, 49, a former West Point football star credited with improving morale in the government's largest independent agency, was expected to leave the agency by the end of the month to return to business.

Byrd pushes address

WASHINGTON — Senate Democratic Leader Robert Byrd wants Mikhail Gorbachev to become the first Soviet leader ever invited to address a joint session of Congress.

The White House, however, wants to know more details about Gorbachev's next session with President Reagan before going along with the idea.

South Yemen

Marxist conflict leads to anti-Soviet force

MANAMA, Bahrain — South Yemen's president was assembling a 40,000-man force for a "decisive battle" with hardline Marxist rebels, Persian Gulf-based diplomats said today, and some said an anti-Marxist group had joined the fighting.

Meanwhile, British Royal Navy vessels were braving rough seas in a continuing effort to pluck foreigners off the beaches of the pro-Soviet nation on the Arabian Peninsula's southern tip.

At least 350 foreign nationals were still feared trapped by the fighting, which broke out Jan. 13 when the rebels apparently tried to oust Marxist President Ali Nasser Mohammed following his overtures to pro-Western Arab countries.

Since then, nearly 5,000 foreigners have been evacuated by a multinational flotilla that has included Queen Elizabeth II's yacht, the Britannia, and Soviet and French freighters.

Arab diplomatic sources estimate 12,000 people have been killed and 20,000 wounded in the struggle for power. Arab diplomats in the Persian Gulf, in contact with their nations' missions in South Yemen, today said fighting continued in some seaford suburbs, with the rebels claiming supremacy in Aden, the capital, and loyalist forces there "largely pinned down."

The diplomats, who spoke on condition they not be identified, said Mohammed was assembling 40,000 regulars and tribal warriors in Abyan province for a "decisive battle" in Aden and the Lahaj region 32 miles north of the capital.

The Abu Dhabi newspaper Al-Ittihad reported Mohammed was "out to regain control" of the areas from the rebels, reportedly led by former president and diehard Marxist Abdul-Fattah Ismail.

Citing unidentified Arab officials in San'a, capital of neighboring North Yemen, Al-Ittihad said "fierce fighting" with tanks and armored vehicles raged late Thursday between government troops and rebels in Lahaj.

Some of the Arab diplomats said a third, anti-Soviet faction had apparently joined the fighting, although it was not immediately clear who its leaders were or what part it was playing.

"The intra-Marxist conflict has given birth to a third column of combatants who appear to hate ... Moscow so much they shelled the Soviet Embassy in Aden half-a-dozen times," said one diplomat.

Associated Press correspondent Khawla Mattar, telegraphing from aboard the British Royal Navy frigate Jupiter off Aden, said the British ambassador to South Yemen had confirmed that the Soviet Embassy had come under fire.

"Tanks used to come along the coastal road and fire directly at the Russian embassy," diplomat Arthur Marshall told reporters aboard the Jupiter Thursday night. "The front part of the top floor of one of the (embassy's) annexes was demolished."

The Persian Gulf-based diplomats said that according to information reaching them from Aden, the anti-Marxists have traded shellfire with pro-government militiamen and rebels alike.

"We believe the 'third column' politicians ... have so far deliberately concealed their political coloring and affiliations," said one diplomat.

Marcos decries report

MANILA, Philippines — President Ferdinand E. Marcos, whose war record has been a major asset in his long political career, says he will ignore a news report that a U.S. Army investigator found his anti-Japanese guerrilla group to be "fraudulent."

"I don't know where they get such foolishness. You who ... fought under me, you be the ones to answer these crazy individuals, especially the foreign press," he told the crowd, which included many World War II veterans.

Oil tanker on fire

YARMOUTH, England — A Greek tanker loaded with more than a half-million barrels of crude oil collided with a Dutch fishing trawler and burst into flames in the stormy North Sea early today, the Coast Guard said.

The tanker's 32 crew men abandoned ship, and were plucked from the icy sea by Royal Navy helicopters, said Coast Guard spokesman Tim Pickard in Yarmouth. They were taken to a hospital near Yarmouth, and "as far as we know all are safe," he said.

Staff blamed for fire

NEW DELHI, India — The city's chief fire official said today the staff of a luxury hotel failed to contact firefighters fast enough or tell them of the seriousness of a fire that killed 37 people, including an American, and injured 46 others.

The Statesman newspaper today quoted the same official, S.K. Dheri, as saying, "If they had handled the situation properly and their system had worked, the casualties would not have been so high."

Lebanese war drags on

SOUK EL-GHARB, Lebanon — The Lebanese army soldiers who hold this strategic mountaintop base overlooking Beirut come under fire day and night from Druse militiamen using everything from Soviet-made rockets to sticks of dynamite taped to stones.

Faced with the prospect of another full-fledged outbreak of fighting in Lebanon's 11-year-old civil war, the soldiers loyal to President Amin Gemayel say they are prepared for a decisive battle.

British freighter sinks

VILES, Spain — A British freighter sprang a leak and sank in heavy seas about nine miles off this southern port town, leaving two crewmen drowned and a third missing, port authorities said.

The authorities said 14 other crew members escaped in life boats and were picked up by other British ships in the area.

Cost shelters fail to fuel rail plans

"A horizontal elevator to nowhere" was how Time magazine described Detroit's People Mover, one of many highly touted mass transit projects that hasn't met expectations. That's a good way to characterize the federal government's program of aid to local transit systems, which has cost billions of dollars without accomplishing much.

In an era of comparative fiscal austerity, this program has thrived, mainly because tail-borne transit is regarded as the only alternative to ever-increasing highway congestion. An interesting paradox: Ambitious rail systems, though supposedly critical to the health of America's cities, aren't so important that the cities will pay for them.

That anomaly has fueled brisk federal spending to subsidize not only vast capital projects but also day-to-day operations. Last year, Washington's share of the bill was $4.1 billion, representing an increase of 120 percent since 1976. But in its 1987 budget, the Reagan administration reportedly will ask for a reduction of at least 40 percent.

What has the money bought? Nothing resembling mass abandonment of the automobile. The popularity of public transit has fallen steadily since World War II, and infusions of federal money haven't altered the trend. In the 1970s, despite soaring gasoline prices and new rail systems in Atlanta, Washington, D.C., and San Francisco, the percentage of Americans using public transit to get to and from work fell by 28 percent. Since 1979, total ridership also has fallen.

Washington's growing role in what was once a local responsibility has had two effects, neither desirable. The first is to spur the construction of extravagant and largely unnecessary rail systems — not surprising, since the federal government covers up to 80 percent of capital expenses. This generates a perverse measure of cost-effectiveness. If a city thinks the benefits of a rail system will amount to 20 percent of its costs, it makes sense to build.

Miami built a $1 billion Metrorail system that has attracted only about one-tenth as many riders as projected. The annual operating deficit amounts to nearly $7,000 per rider — enough to buy each one a car. Washington's half-finished Metro already has cost more than twice as much as originally planned.

Detroit's People Mover has doubled in cost, even as expected ridership has fallen precipitately. Other systems now in the works will cost an estimated $19 billion just to build. Los Angeles, whose sprawling layout makes it a poor prospect for mass transit, plans to spend more than $3 billion on a rail system that will extend less than 19 miles.

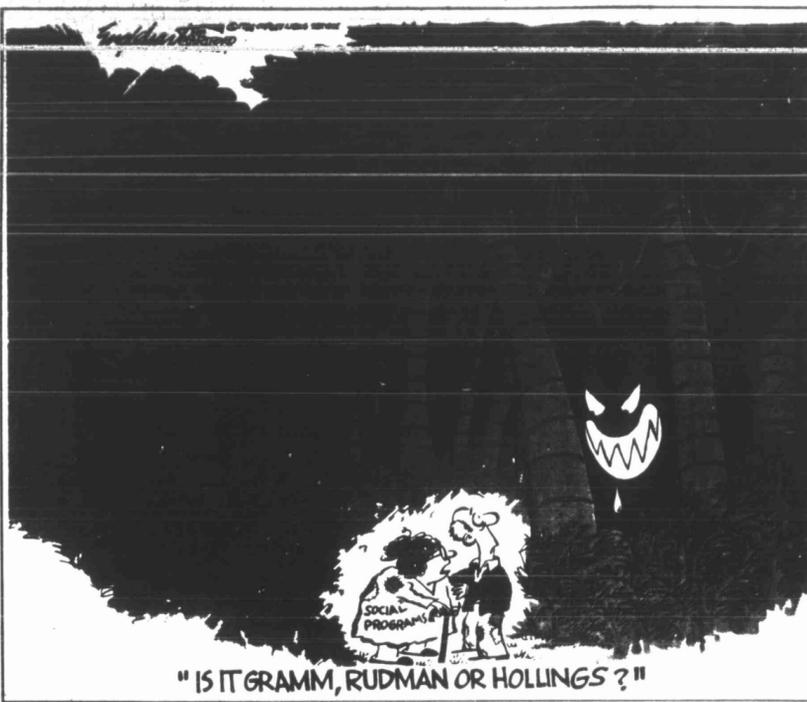

The second result has been to inflate costs. As federal aid was rising during the 1970s, says Richard Mudge of the Congressional Budget Office, labor costs rose 43 percent more than the consumer price index. Besides buying peace with transit unions, the federal help has allowed local politicians to indulge voters by keeping fares down. In 1963, passenger fares paid 98 percent of operating costs. Today, they cover less than half.

The effect on road congestion has been trivial. In Washington, for example, the volume of rush-hour traffic rose by 6 percent in the six years after the subway opened. The best that can be expected of new or expanded transit systems is to slow the growth of commuter traffic.

Fortunately, there are other remedies, which may not be as glamorous as a new rail system but are far cheaper. The simplest is reserving highway lanes for buses and carpools, encouraging more people to leave their cars at home. Another is to contract some service to private bus firms, relieving the taxpayer of the cost of buses that are needed only a few hours a day. Another is to remove the restrictions many cities place on private competition, easing the rush-hour strain and forcing public transit to perform more efficiently.

But none of these changes is likely to come about as long as Washington shelters cities and states from the costs of their transit decisions. Both commuters and taxpayers would gain from ending the free ride.

Depression is eased by faith

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: Please pray I will get better. I am in a mental hospital and am depressed and confused about a lot of things. I feel all alone and abandoned. Will God help me get better if I turn to Him? — Mrs. K.B.R.

DEAR MRS. K.B.R.: The most important thing I can tell you is that God loves you and cares for you. He has not abandoned you, and He wants to come into your heart and help you if you will let Him.

I know this is true because Jesus Christ loved us so much that He was willing to lay down His life for us. And why did He do that? So that our sins could be washed away and we could become part of God's family.

You see, when we accept Christ as our personal Lord and Savior, God adopts us into His family. We become His children — and some day we will go to Heaven to be with Him throughout all eternity. Yes, God wants us — He wants you — as part of His family.

The Bible says, "How great is the love the Father has lavished on us, that we should be called children of God! And that is what we are! Dear friends, now we are children of God" (1 John 3:1-2).

What difference can this make in your life? Your letter does not share in detail what your problems are, but this much I know: No matter what you are facing, you will be able to face it better if you know Christ is with you. I cannot guarantee that all your problems will be solved instantly if you come to Christ. But I know He can help you, and you need Him.

Jesus said, "Come to me, all you who are weary and burdened, and I will give you rest" (Matthew 11:28). That is Christ's invitation to you. Will you ask Him to come into your heart right now? He wants to come in, and He will if you ask Him. Today can mark a new beginning for you — and for every person who turns in faith and trust to Christ.

Iranian infiltrators hope to profit from subversion

By JACK ANDERSON and DALE VAN ATTA
WASHINGTON — Fanatical Shiite Moslem terrorists, ready to die for Ayatollah Khomeini, are in position in the United States, hoping to make 1986 the year when Middle Eastern terrorism strikes on this side of the Atlantic.

In fact, the FBI has been concerned for some time about the underground Iranian network of potential murderers and saboteurs that is being built up in this country. The G-men know there are already at least 100 trained Khomeini agents in place — a far greater danger than anything Libyan dictator Muammar Khadafi presents, for all his bluster.

In addition, a recent highly sensitive intelligence report indicates that 100 or more Khomeini agents have entered the United States during the past year alone by way of Mexico, and possibly Nicaragua.

Iranian-controlled terrorists have already demonstrated the virulence of their hatred for Americans: At last count, Khomeini's minions were responsible for the violent deaths of at least 264 Americans in the Middle East.

That's what lent added urgency to a highly confidential message sent last Nov. 15 to U.S. airport security offices and Federal Aviation Administration regional divisions. The bulletin, not publicly reported until now, warned:

"Information has been received that approximately 400 individuals, of various Middle Eastern nationalities, have been training in hijack operations inside Iran.

"There were indications that Iranian authorities were seeking passports in preparation of a hijack operation. The Iranians obtained 176 Algerian passports to use by these persons...who are reportedly to undertake a hijack late in November of December 1985.

"It is unknown at this time where the hijacking will take place or what airliner may be involved."

(It's possible that the intelligence information that led to this warning actually foretold the recent Rome and Vienna terrorist attacks, which were intended to be hijackings. The terrorists were trained in Isfahan, Iran.)

U.S. intelligence agencies know the Shiites' orders to begin operations in the United States this year come right from the top: the Supreme Council of Islamic Revolution, formed by Khomeini in September 1981, to oversee all such terrorist organizations.

One of the council's key components is the Committee for North America, which has several regional centers in this country and Canada. Among its members, Sheik Majdeddin Mahalati, arrived in the United States last summer. Mahalati's terrorist pedigree includes the executions of hundreds of followers of the late shah in Shiraz during the 1979 revolution.

Khomeini has allocated millions of dollars to build up a Shiite terrorist organization among the more than 60,000 students from Islamic countries who attend U.S. universities. Recruiters are reportedly paid $1,200 a month to sign up potential assassins.

Even before the Iranian revolution, Khomeini's recruiters were proselytizing black militants in U.S. prisons, under the guise of teaching them about Islam. One recruit, David Belfield, was charged with killing anti-Khomeini exile leader Ali Akbar Tabatabai at his home in Bethesda, Md., in 1980.

Within hours of the shooting, Belfield had been spirited to Canada, provided with a fake passport by Iranian diplomats, and flown to Zurich and then Tehran. Today, calling himself Daoud Salhuddin, he is an adviser to Khomeini's terrorist plotters. He serves as liaison between the Khomeini regime and Iranian-backed underground networks in the United States, organized under the Assembly of United Arab Movements.

Once before, in November 1983, the FBI and other agencies learned of plans by the Khomeini underground to conduct terrorist operations in this country. The information was regarded as reliable enough to require defensive measures. Concrete barriers and other security devices were installed outside the White House and the State Department. They are still in place.

Jack Anderson's investigative report from Washington is distributed by United Feature Syndicate.

Rhetoric envelopes budget legislation

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
WASHINGTON (AP) — Year No. 1 of Gramm-Rudman budget balancing is under way, and so far, a lot of the key players in the contest are trying to get by with the rhetoric of former years.

President Reagan met Tuesday with congressional Republicans who said later that he was adamantly against raising taxes or accepting anything less than a 3 percent increase in defense spending.

In budget battles of past years, the differences between the White House and Congress were never fully resolved and the deficit kept growing like Jack's beanstalk. But this time there is a budget-balancing law bearing the names of Sens. Phil Gramm, R-Tex., and Warren Rudman, R-N.H., that says it must come down.

So, the latest round starts with brave talk. The Republican chairman of the Senate Budget committee brushed off the hard line from the president and said, "I look for a compromise early on."

Also backing compromise was Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., who predicted that about a month from now Republicans, Democrats and the White House will try to "hammer out a budget that we could all agree on."

There are three general ways Congress and the White House can deal with the new law:

- Meet its deadlines for deficit reduction. So far, no one has come up with any firm proposals for accomplishing that.

- Hope the courts take them off the hook by declaring the law unconstitutional.

- Repeal the law, which, in an election year, would be lot tougher than passing it was last year.

As the capital hunkers down to try to come to grips with this new law, the critical deadline in the process is next September when automatic across-the-board cuts would go into effect unless $60 billion in reductions are enacted.

Coincidentally, September will find many American voters beginning to turn their attention to whether they think it's time for a change in the makeup of Congress. It also may be the time Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev comes to the United States for his second summit with Reagan.

No September crisis will occur if the deficit reduction goals are met.

Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., chairman of the Budget committee, says the goals cannot be met without raising revenue. Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., has a big say on taxes as chairman of the Finance committee, and he came out of the meeting with Reagan saying the goals can be met "without any new taxes."

Of course, Packwood said Reagan would have to give up his goal of a defense budget increase of 3 percent above the rate of inflation.

The president's new budget director, James C. Miller III, said in a television interview Sunday that Reagan's new budget "will not increase taxes and it will have a 3 percent real growth in national defense. ... And it will protect, however, those programs for the poor and the elderly."

Miller was a little short on details of how that could happen.

In an unusual bit of public soul-searching, Domenici suggested several possible scenarios in an op-ed article printed in Tuesday's Washington Post.

His most optimistic outline describes a compromise which would include "fundamental reforms and reductions in domestic spending, a slowing of the defense buildup, and new revenues." "New revenues," are the taxes Domenici says are necessary and Reagan insists he won't accept.

But if that compromise occurs, Domenici wrote, and the Gramm-Rudman goals are met: "The stock market surges, interest rates drop, and the economy takes off. America soars into the future."

Domenici conceded "that scenario may be unlikely for many reasons." So, he offered another, much gloomier one. Under that, the goals are not met and with the 1986 campaign in full swing, Reagan, citing the impact on national security, refuses to sign the order putting the across-the-board cuts into effect.

Domenici then foresees a great scramble in Congress to "find a way to get out from under the new law."

He goes on to predict that "huge numbers of incumbent senators and representatives of both parties are defeated at the polls, saddled with explaining their position on Gramm-Rudman."

S. Mountain idea reflects progress

To the editor:

In regards to the letter to the editor dated Jan. 21, 1986, by Mrs. Baird, pertaining to the project on South Mountain. It seems to me that this type of attitude falls under the category of apathy toward the growth and advancement of Big Spring.

It's common knowledge that the oil industry in West Texas is in for reductions of all types, and many of the towns and cities in this area are going to have to come up with drawing cards to keep the economy growing.

As for Big Spring, it's had several chances to SPRING forward and draw interested businesses to the area, but for its unwillingness to negotiate and deal with interested firms, it chooses to remain the crossroads of West Texas with nothing to substantiate that claim, except for the location.

There have been restaurants (nice ones) that wanted to locate here but found out later that Big Spring did not have liquor by the drink, so the idea was tabled and some other town or city in the area reaped the benefits of the taxes and added income to their economy. Industries that were only offered out-of-the-way locations at twice the going rate for the land, and manufacturing companies that were done the same way. And the list goes on.

As for the present owner of South Mountain! What is wrong with a dream? What is wrong with his enthusiastic attitude toward growth and advancement and for his offering of modern, updated facilities that all ages of individuals can enjoy?

His enthusiasm and dedication toward the growth of Big Spring is unequalled and his outlook on the future is as optimistic as any I have seen. He is definitely not just sitting back and watching the world go by.

HOUSTON (AP) — Lloyd Bentsen said he feared the sharp price increases would prompt the government to allow the OPEC Petroleum Exporting countries to regain control of the oil market. "Once you get oil control again, it (the price) goes up," Bentsen said at a conference.

Bentsen is expected to propose a fee on imported oil that would keep the price of oil in the $22 range.

If the actual price of oil falls below that level, the fee could offset because of the balanced-budget deficit.

According to the Treasury, the $1-per-barrel fee would contribute $1 billion to the Treasury.

The oil price future market has shown signs of settling near $20 a barrel, following a long trading frenzy for crude oil that has lasted six years.

Prices have fallen downward since the mid-1970s, reducing nations, deterring them from pumping more oil into the world has needed.

In late November, West Texas Intermediate oil prices were at a benchmark U.S.

Bentsen: Oil price plunge will revive OPEC

HOUSTON (AP) — U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen said Thursday he feared the sharp decline in oil prices would prompt Americans to forget about energy conservation and allow the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to regain control of the oil market.

"Once you get OPEC to get control again, it (the price) will really go up," Bentsen said at a news conference.

Bentsen is proposing a floating fee on imported crude oil that would keep the price in the United States in the $22-$24 per barrel range.

If the actual price of oil dropped below that level, revenue gained by the fee could offset dollars lost because of recently approved balanced-budget legislation, he said.

According to Bentsen, each $1-per-barrel fee annually would contribute $1 billion to the Treasury.

"If you had a $5 tax, you'd have $5 billion of revenue," he said.

The oil price futures market has shown signs of settling at levels near $20 a barrel, following a week-long trading frenzy that left prices for crude at their lowest levels in six years.

Prices have been driven downward since November as producing nations, determined to hang on to their share of the market, have pumped more oil than the world has needed.

In late November, a barrel of West Texas Intermediate — the benchmark U.S. crude — cost $31.70 on the New York Mercantile Exchange. The spot price Wednesday was $20.90, down 34 percent from November and off 17 percent in barely more than a week.

"My deepest concern is that as they further go down, the people will go back to being wasteful like before 1973," Bentsen said. "No question, the oil glut is temporary. The question is: How long?"

"What you want is some stability in prices."

Already, he said, the government has moved to relax automobile mileage standards.

Bentsen insisted his sentiments were not provincial, since he represents an oil-producing state like Texas.

"Concern is growing around the country," he said. "The financial institutions in the Northeast — they too are concerned."

The Texas Democrat said he has taken his import fee proposal to Treasury Secretary James Baker and White House Chief of Staff Donald Regan.

"They didn't say 'Hell, no!' so that's encouraging," Bentsen said.

The senator said the White House would be forced to look for new money sources because of the budget-balancing law.

"You're going to see such a crunch in the '87 budget," he predicted. "We have a problem of correcting some $60 billion. That's going to be exceedingly difficult."

"We're going to have a difficult and arduous session."

Dear Abby

Artificial conception kids

DEAR ABBY: Now I've seen everything. "Still Shaking," the retired parents of a 35-year-old "lovely, unmarried, highly respected, professional woman," were called by their daughter to inform them that she is pregnant and thrilled. It seems that she has always wanted a child, and since her biological clock was running out and she had no man in her life, she had herself artificially inseminated!

The parents were stunned and asked you what they should tell people. Your advice, "Tell them the truth," was correct. But what does the unmarried daughter tell her child when confronted with the question: "Who is my father?" Couples and/or singles who are having children by artificial insemination, surrogate parenting and the like give little consideration to the psychological effect of these procedures on the offspring so produced.

"Yes, dear, you were conceived when I was impregnated with a turkey baster with sperm of some unknown guy whom I never met." Reassuring, isn't it?

JOSEPH H. DAVIS, M.D.

PEDIATRICIAN, MENLO PARK, CALIF.
DEAR DR. DAVIS: Reassuring or not, children conceived by sperm bank fathers, surrogate mothers and any way other than the conventional method should be told the truth about how they came into the world. Embarrassing and complicated as it may seem to adults concerned only with morals, ethics and what-will-the-neighbors-think, the simple truth told with patience, love and caring will be sufficient for the moment, and eventually understood and accepted.

DEAR ABBY: I, too, am shaking after reading that letter about the single woman having artificial insemination because she wanted a baby and didn't have a man in her life.

You seemed to think it was perfectly all right. Why didn't you speak out against that stupid, selfish woman's bringing a child into a one-parent home? That woman has no more right to have a baby than an unmarried 14-year-old!

Every child deserves a mother and a father. Thanks to all these hot-pants teen-agers, we already have enough one-parent families without your approving artificial insemination for unmarried women whose biological clocks are running out.

If a single woman wants something to love and thinks motherhood would be fun, tell her to get a pet!

DISGUSTED IN HORNELL, N.Y.

DEAR DISGUSTED: Two-parent homes are, of course, ideal when both parents are ideal parents, but many well-adjusted children have been reared in one-parent homes. So, who am I to say that an unmarried woman (or an unmarried man, for that matter) has no right to be a parent? And by the way, who are you to make that judgment?

DEAR ABBY: I've been thinking about the letter signed "Still Shaking" — the parents of a 35-year-old unmarried, professional woman who wanted a baby, so she had herself artificially inseminated.

If I were the parents, I wouldn't buy that story.

Blind dating can be fun

Blind dates are cheaper than taking out a personal ad, safer than chance encounters at a singles bar — and they don't have to be dating disasters.

There are ground rules for minimizing blind-date blues, according to an article in the January issue of Cosmopolitan, and even the worst blind date lasts only a few hours.

The first thing is to consider the source. If you like the person making the introduction, chances are you will like that person's friends. If you have doubts about the matchmaker, ask a few pertinent questions — almost everyone has at least one wild card among his acquaintances.

The initial phone conversation will provide clues as to whether this is a friendship you want to pursue. The man who suggests sipping wine in his hot tub is obviously a dubious choice. If the man seems like a good bet, take the next step. Since he made the first call, you suggest a meeting.

Before you meet, get as much information as you can from your source — if possible, a photograph. Practice a smile of greeting — you'll need it whether he's a doll or a dog.

A blind date should be set up on either party can escape. Lunch is the best setting because it will be brief and you really do have to get back to work.

Saturday and Sunday afternoons also are good for blind dates. You can walk through a park or drop in to an art gallery.

Moving about keeps the conversation going. Shared activity helps you get to know each other and fills the gap if your interaction fizzles.

Taking a blind date to a party can be risky. It may be hard to introduce a man you hardly know to other guests. He may not be presentable. Or he may be terrific and you will have to introduce him to other women before he has had a chance to know you.

Don't invite him to your place for drinks or dinner — it's too intimate for a date with a virtual stranger.

If you find yourself stuck for a whole evening with someone you dislike you can either gracefully endure it or make up a respectably plausible excuse to get away. He will know it's an excuse, but that's better than getting cranky or hostile.

If you like him but he's trying to slide away — let him go.

Don't forget the third party in your date — the person who introduced you. If you enjoyed the date, a call telling her you had a good time is in order. Details aren't necessary. If it didn't work, just say he was nice but the chemistry wasn't there.

Don't insult the matchmaker by complaining about the blind date unless he behaved so badly that future blind dates should be warned. And don't badger her for information about how he liked you — you'll find out if he calls.

The best matchmakers are those who have nothing to gain by an introduction. Less well qualified are those who want to curry favor with one of the parties.

Would-be matchmakers should not introduce a man friend to a new woman if they have even the most lingering romantic interest in him. He could look better once he starts dating someone else.

Be honest, advised Kiki Olson in Cosmopolitan. "Don't say, 'She's got a great sense of humor' when you mean she weighs 170 pounds, or tell her, 'He's very laid back' when you're warning her that she'll have to pay for the pizza."

Most important for a matchmaker — be sensitive to the needs and desires of the people you are trying to match.

Ethridge honored at ABC wedding shower

Robin Ethridge, bride-elect of Scott Robinson, was the guest at an ABC wedding shower at the home of Mrs. Wendell Shive recently.

Guests presented the honoree with gifts representing their assigned letter of the alphabet and told about the letter and gift.

Ethridge was presented a red corsage which was centered around a demitasse spoon in Michael Angelo stainless, the bride's chosen pattern. Marie Ethridge, mother of the bride-elect, and Sue Robinson, mother of the prospective bridegroom, were presented similar corsages.

A table overlaid with a linen cloth with lace insets was set with silver and crystal appointments. The bride's colors of red and white accented the centerpiece and the table.

Hostesses were classmates of Ethridge. They were assisted by their mothers. They included: Suzanne, Louise and Helen Shive; Kristi and Betty Franklin; Stacey and Neva Swann; Teresa, Liesa and Leota Reid and Paula and Virginia Allen.

The bride's grandmother, Dorothy Fowler, and the bridegroom's grandmothers, Vaughnea and Ima Robinson, were guests.

The couple will wed Valentine's Day at the First Baptist Church in Coahoma.

PUBLIC NOTICE

TEXAS UTILITIES ELECTRIC COMPANY hereby publishes NOTICE that, pursuant to the provisions of the Public Utility Regulatory Act and the Public Utility Commission's Substantive Rule 23.23(b)(2), it filed an application on January 14, 1986, with the Public Utility Commission of Texas seeking authority to refund to its customers a prior over-recovery under its fixed fuel factors (base rate fuel component) in the amount of $78,002,807 as of November 30, 1985, including applicable interest, and to reduce its current fixed fuel factors.

Texas Utilities Electric Company has proposed that the refund be made and its fixed fuel factors be reduced effective with customers usage beginning with the billing month of March 1986. The proposed change in fixed fuel factors is expected to result in a $233,413,145, or 11.88%, decrease in fuel revenues for the twelve months ended September 30, 1985, adjusted only for customer growth. All customers and classes of customers whose electric service rates include charges for fuel cost pursuant to Texas Utilities Electric Company's Rider FC, entitled "Base Rate Fuel Component," and all territories in which Texas Utilities Electric Company provides electric service through its Dallas Power & Light Company, Texas Electric Service Company and Texas Power & Light Company divisions will be affected if the application is granted.

A complete copy of said application is on file with the Public Utility Commission of Texas.

Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should notify the Public Utility Commission of Texas as soon as possible. A request to intervene, participate, or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. Further information may also be obtained by calling the Public Utility Commission Consumer Affairs Division at (512)458-0223 or (512)458-0227, or (512)458-0221 teletypewriter for the deaf.

Dr. Donohue

Some people are born to have bunions

Dear Dr. Donohue: Could you explain exactly what a bunion is? I know I have them. I have purchased toe aligners. Could you tell me how this will help? Also, what causes it. My age is 23. — Mis M.C.

A bunion is (exactly) "lateral deviation of the great toe secondary to medial deviation of the first metatarsal." Not so exactly, a bunion is a big bump at the outside of the big toe down where it joins the rest of the foot. This forces the tip of the toe in toward (and sometimes over) the neighboring toe.

You are somewhat young for bunions. Usually they result from chronic stress as a result of weight. The function of the big toe is largely unappreciated. It takes a lot of beating. It helps you spring forward with each step. Anyone who had had this toe removed can attest to its importance.

Added to such functional stresses are those we impose on it with unwise shoe selection. Women are the worst offenders. In any event, as the weightbearing function of the toe is lost, abnormal stress is exerted. The bone might overgrow and the bunion may enlarge.

Yet, a person can get bunions without having misused the toe. A bony misalignment can be inherited. Or a person can be born with too tight heel cords that contribute to the abnormal stresses on the feet.

At your age, this kind of problem might warrant investigation. Your toe aligners, while they won't alter the inherited tendency toward bunions, might prevent aggravation and further deviation. If you don't now, you should wear broad-toed, low-heeled shoes to avoid deviating pressure. If things become too uncomfortable, you should certainly see a foot doctor, who might suggest surgical correction.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I am an elderly man. Quite often, at night only, I have quite severe pain in my toes. This continues until I get out of bed. I have been tested for arthritis, and it's not that. — J.S.

All I can do is offer possibilities. Nerve damage is one worth noting.

Painful or burning feet can often be traced to nerve disturbance, and causes of that are numerous. Let me mention one, nerve entrapment. You've heard me speak of carpal tunnel syndrome, where the nerve serving the hand gets pinched in its access tunnel. That causes similar pain in the hand and fingers. This can happen in the foot. The only difference is the nerve involved (the tarsal). So you have tarsal tunnel syndrome. A good reason for suggesting a problem is that with it pain is usually worse at night.

A doctor will have to see you to start getting some answers. It's interesting that you mention the nighttime pain. Many people react to warmth in just the way you do. They feel the heat of the temperature around them rises. Then their feet turn bright red and they have great discomfort. That's called erythromelalgia. Some patients with this simply sleep with their feet outside the bedcovers.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Your answer to the writer about distended neck veins was rather vague. I have this problem, and my doctor was as vague as you were in explaining the cause and significance. He said not to worry. My mind is not satisfied. Please elaborate. — F.N.W.

Let me try again. Distended neck veins usually mean only that they have lost a little elasticity and they're sagging a bit. It's one of the prices for years on this earth.

They become significant only when they are part of a larger problem. In heart failure — shortness of breath, for example.

Your doctor didn't get excited about your neck veins because he could not relate them to a greater problem. If I am still being vague, I guess I can always ask for one more chance to redeem myself.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Steffen is shower honoree

Tina Steffen, wife of Gary Steffen, was honored with a baby shower Jan. 19 at First Christian Church.

Hosting the event were: Mildred McFall, Connie Fritzer, Carolyn Sedinger, Martha Poss, June Waters, Jeane Carney, Erma Dunne and Cindy Alderton.

Guests were served from a table decorated with an arrangement of pink, blue, yellow and white flowers, accented with two baby rattles and a cake decorated with a baby boy and a baby girl sleeping at each end of a rainbow. The hostesses presented the honoree with an infant car seat.

Special guests attending the event were: Jan Steffen, sister-in-law of the honoree; Rachel Steffen and Valerie Steffen, nieces of the honoree.

Steffen was given another shower by co-workers at the Big Spring Herald on Jan. 22. Co-workers presented her with a stroller and an infant carrier.

Baby Steffen is due Feb. 1.

Personal spending increases at record pace in December

WASHINGTON (AP) — New car financing deals and a brisk Christmas shopping season helped propel Americans' spending up by 2 percent in December, the biggest monthly rise in more than a decade and outpacing an accompanying 1.4 percent gain in personal incomes, the government said Thursday.

The Commerce Department report showed consumers are continuing to spend more than they make — increasing their debt and drawing down savings to the lowest levels since before the Korean War.

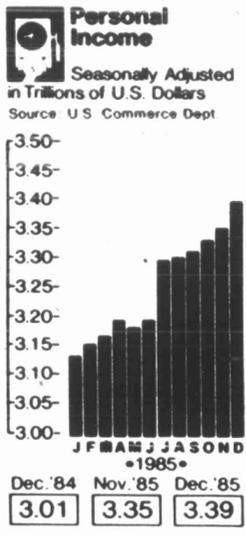

The department said the increase in personal consumption was the largest monthly gain since a 2.5 percent increase in May, 1975.

A resumption of easy-term financing for new cars by major U.S. automakers in mid-December was credited with part of the increase, as were better-than-average Christmas sales.

However, December spending was almost equally strong across other sectors of the economy.

Analysts said the report dispelled fears that consumer spending was on the verge of a sharp decline and brightened the outlook for economic growth in the months ahead — despite a government report Wednesday that the economy grew by a anemic 2.3 percent throughout 1985.

"Consumers are alive, well, kicking and spending," said Allen Sinai, chief economist for Shearson-Lehman Bros., a New York brokerage and investment performance since a 1.5 percent rise in January 1984. The firm. "It indicates the considerable resiliency of consumer spending. Consumers will only slow their spending under great duress."

Although rising at a slower clip than spending, personal income continued to expand through the year. The 1.4 percent December gain was the best monthly performance since a 1.5 percent rise in January 1984. The firm. "It indicates the considerable resiliency of consumer spending. Consumers will only slow their spending under great duress."

Bill limits banks' check holding time

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans living from paycheck to paycheck could get at their money faster to pay for mortgages, food and other expenses under a new House-passed bill that limits the time banks can hold checks before allowing customers to use the cash.

But one consumer organization expressed disappointment with a key amendment that would give banks a loophole if tellers suspect a check would fail to clear because of fraud, bankruptcy or similar circumstances.

By a vote of 282-11, the House on Thursday passed and sent to the Senate the Expedited Funds Availability Act. It sets a maximum number of days a financial institution can hold a deposited check, cash or funds transferred by wire without freeing up the money for the customer.

However, Senate Banking Chairman Jake Garn, R-Utah, wants to include the check hold bill in an omnibus banking package, a move that could delay final passage until much later in the year.

House Banking Committee Chairman Fernand J. St Germain, D-R.I., chief proponent of the check hold bill, said in floor debate Thursday that banks play "the float" game with customers' money to earn billions of dollars through interest and fees on checks inadvertently bounced by depositors.

For the first three years of the bill, local checks would be available for withdrawal in just one to three business days. Most out-of-state checks could be withdrawn on the seventh business day after deposit.

Thriffs and credit unions would be given one extra business day to comply with the timetable.

After three years, local and in-state checks would be available for withdrawal the next business day after deposit.

Sportscaster slanders Bear QB

McMahon on hot seat

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — It was as if the controversy Jim McMahon had been looking for finally found him.

The anti-hero quarterback of the Chicago Bears, who already had stamped his own bizarre imprint on this Super Bowl with his clothes, his comments and one very sore behind, got caught up Thursday in turbulence partly not of his own doing.

A local television sportscaster, passing along an unfounded, third-hand rumor as fact, said McMahon had cast some disparaging remarks about the ladies and gentlemen of the Crescent City.

By the time the rumor was shot down, death threats and bomb threats had been fielded by the Hilton Hotel where the Bears are staying — and a handful of women, unaware that McMahon had denied saying those nasty things, had staged a little protest.

Each Super Bowl has found its own niche in history one way or another.

Usually it has come from the game itself — Garo Yepremian's laughable pass for Miami, Lynn Swann's acrobatics, Jim O'Brien's game-winning field goal.

Sometimes it has come from one character or another — brash Joe Namath and his "guaranteed" prediction, boisterous John Matuszak and his pregame howling of the French Quarter, outspoken John Riggins and his costumes.

McMahon is this year's Riggins. In his outrageous adidas ensembles, his sunglasses, his headband episodes and his to-hell-with-everything attitude, he was the focal point even before the notorious Bears and the anonymous New England Patriots arrived here.

At first it seemed he would have to share center stage with William "Refrigerator" Perry, Walter "Sweetness" Payton, Dan "Danimal" Hampton, Otis "Mad Dog" Wilson and the rest of the Bears.

But McMahon will never be mistaken for Roger Staubach, for Bob Griese, for any of the clean-cut quarterbacks adored by American motherhood as role models for their children. He is more in the mold of Ken Stabler, Bobby Layne or Sonny Jurgensen, a player about whom almost anything will be believed, true or not. It is called having a reputation.

Within hours of his arrival, McMahon grabbed the Super Bowl by the throat with his comments that his rump was sore and his complaints that the Bears' management wouldn't allow his acupuncturist to accompany him on the team plane.

The saga continued Tuesday and Wednesday with updates on his highness' soreness, the arrival of Hiroshi Shiraishi, acupuncture treatments, McMahon's rapid improvement — and his mooning a helicopter during a workout.

"That's no big deal," he said by way of admission. "Just letting 'em know where it hurts."

Where it hurts, he's been receiving three acupuncture treatments a day. "I'm 100 percent better than I was yesterday (Wednesday)," he said. "If it keeps healing the way it's been healing, I won't have to have treatments on Saturday or Sunday."

McMahon also said he will be wearing a protective pad on his sore spot during the game.

He went through a full practice Thursday, taking most of the snaps from center as the Bears worked out for two hours. Two helicopters passed by during the session.

"I'm very happy," Coach Mike Ditka said. "We need him. He'll be OK if they don't shoot him down by helicopter."

The hottest news — having nothing to do with football or McMahon's anatomy — hit the fans Wednesday night.

At 10 p.m., Buddy Diliberto, a local TV sportscaster, told viewers that McMahon "really ripped New Orleans" on an interview on a Chicago radio station. "He ripped the people. He ripped the ladies. He ripped a lot of things," Diliberto said. "Basically, I understand he said most of the ladies he ran into were sluts. He said most of the people he ran into were stupid."

Diliberto understood wrong. Chris O'Kelly, manager of a New Orleans radio station, said one of the station's disc jockeys received calls that McMahon had made such a statement, that the deejay called Diliberto "and Buddy went with it." By mid-afternoon, Diliberto had been indefinitely suspended by his station.

"I had a message this morning from some lady (snapping) at me for calling them all names," McMahon said. "I had no idea what she was talking about. I've been getting phone calls from different women and men around New Orleans. I'll be lucky to be alive, I guess, after today."

"What makes me mad is the guy went on the air with that and he had no proof. He just had this guy's word. I've enjoyed the people of New Orleans. I was down on Bourbon Street last night, had dinner and cocktails, and they've treated me nicely. I signed a lot of autographs and I don't think I've been abrasive to anybody."

At noon Thursday, Diliberto and his station apologized on the air. Diliberto said he heard the denials by McMahon and the Bears' management and said, "I have no reason to doubt their denials.

"I sincerely apologize ... for the problems caused by these unverified statements," he said, adding that he wished McMahon and the Bears well. "I hope the remainder of the week is devoted to preparations for the game without distractions caused by my comments."

The remaining distractions were minor and seemingly misguided. About two dozen women — and four times as many sports writers and two TV crews — materialized at the Hilton for a protest. One woman carried a sign proclaiming,

"Only a true Patriot would recognize a New Orleans lady."

Pat runners key to game plan

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The problem, Tony Collins said, is that teams abandon their running game too soon after the Chicago Bears shut it down.

Although banging your head into a stone wall isn't the wisest activity, Collins thinks the wall will crack before the head does in Sunday's Super Bowl.

"We believe we're going to be successful on the run," said Collins, the New England Patriots' starting halfback. "We think a lot of teams stopped too early against them on the running game."

"We're going to keep pounding them. We've been a second-half team and we wear teams down in the fourth quarter."

The Patriots had the sixth-best rushing attack in the National Football League, averaging 145.7 yards a game. They have done even better in the playoffs with 170 yards a game, including 255 in the American Football Conference championship contest at Miami.

In the Patriots' second playoff game, against Los Angeles, fullback Craig James became the first rusher to gain more than 100 yards — he had 104 — against the Raiders this season.

"They've built a soapbox they can stand on," said Chicago defensive end Dan Hampton. "The run is something they're going to go to and stay with throughout the game."

"James makes the offense go. He's their bread and butter. If we can stop him, we'll be in good shape."

Against 13 of their 16 regular-season opponents, the Patriots ran for more yards in the second half than the first half. One of those opponents was the Bears, who allowed the Patriots 20 rushing yards in the second half after giving up a grand total of seven in the first two periods. Chicago won 20-7 in the season's second game.

The Bears gave up an average of only 82.4 rushing yards on the ground, fewest in the NFL, and 59 yards per playoff game.

One reason teams didn't run well against the Bears is because they didn't run often. Opponents, frequently behind, decided to pass. The 359 regular-season rushing plays against Chicago were 60 fewer than against any other team.

"The key is for us to be patient and not lose what other teams have lost," Collins said. "That's the confidence in the running game."

Bears defensive tackle Steve McMichael said he hoped the Patriots would do exactly what Collins said.

"We've got eight men on the line of scrimmage. Come on at us," he said. Collins' running mates weren't as eager to pound their skulls into Chicago's solid wall and said the Patriots' offensive strategy would depend on the game's circumstances.

"When they put eight men on the line of scrimmage, they're basically saying, 'We're going to stop your running game,'" said James, the AFC's third-leading rusher with 1,227 yards. "If we see that, we'll have to recognize that and change."

"You just don't keep running into a stone wall," Robert Weathers, Collins' backup, said.

Traveling too much by air, however, has proved disastrous. The Patriots lost just five regular-season games. In four of them, they threw more than 30 passes.

"In reviewing film, you see plays that break and say, 'Maybe we can run,'" Weathers said.

Queens down Lady T-Birds

HOBBS, N.M. — The Howard College Hawks Queens won their second straight conference game, 71-65 over the New Mexico Junior College Lady T-Birds Thursday night in the first game of a WJCA C doubleheader.

The Queens used an aggressive full court press the entire game to build a 16-point lead several times in the second half and held off a late NMJC rally to raise their Western Junior College Athletic Conference record to 2-4.

Queen post Carolyn

Willandt sank four consecutive free throws in the last minute to preserve the victory.

The Queens were led by Willandt with 18 points and a team-high 11 rebounds. Freshman forward Terri Powell continued her fine outside shooting with 17 points. Sophomore forward Lorri French drew praise from Queen head coach Don Stevens for her heady floor play dishing out a season-high 11 assists and nine rebounds in the game. Freshman guards Trina Allen and Pam Franklin both added ten points.

Hawks losing skid continues

HOBBS, N.M. — The New Mexico Junior College Thunderbirds used a distinct height advantage and four players in double figures to register a 83-68 victory over the Howard College Hawks Thursday night at NMJC gymnasium.

The Hawks were devastated by foul trouble early in the game when post Walter Reynolds and Mike Duran each picked up their third foul in the first eight minutes of the game.

The Thunderbird starting five, featuring three 6'5" players and a 6'8" post took advantage of the Hawks' inside frequently in picking up their fourth Western Junior College Athletic Conference win of the season.

Freshman guard Walter Walker was the lone Howard College brightspot hitting for a game-high 22 points on the night.

Indiana nips rival Purdue in Big Ten overtime upset

By DICK BRINSTER
AP Sports Writer

His Indiana Hoosiers had just beaten bitter Big Ten rival Purdue by a point in overtime, and all Coach Bob Knight would tell was a fish story.

"What an unbelievable (warm) day we got for January. I sat on this lake fishing and I thought how insignificant basketball really is," said Knight, who refused to answer any questions following Indiana's 71-70 victory Thursday night over the 15th ranked Boilermakers.

College Roundup

"I hate to leave you, but I think I'm going to go plan my fishing trip tomorrow," said Knight, who frequently crosses swords with the media.

And that had to stand as the Indiana story, because all the players — including the hero of the night, Steve Alford — left without saying anything, either.

Alford's presence was felt at both ends of the court, however. He scored 13 of his foul-plagued team's last 17 points, made the only field goal of overtime and stole the ball to deny Purdue a final chance to win.

Alford wound up with 27 points as the 12-4 Hoosiers improved to 4-2 in the Big Ten. The visiting Boilermakers, led by Melvin McCants and Todd Mitchell with 14 points apiece, fell to 5-2 and 16-4.

Elsewhere, it was No. 7 Kansas 81, Missouri 77; No. 10 Nevada-Las Vegas 88, New Mexico State 79; No. 11 Kentucky 74, Georgia 69; No. 17 Bradley 67, Illinois State 63 in overtime; No. 18, Alabama-Birmingham 81, North Carolina-Charlotte 63, and No. 19 Texas-El Paso 65, Colorado State 57.

Top Ten

No. 7 Kansas 81, Missouri 77. The was no relaxation among the Kansas Jayhawks, particularly after they blew most of a 13-point lead in the closing minutes of the game at Missouri.

"I was thrilled, thrilled to death to win," said Kansas Coach Larry Brown, who has lofty ambitions. "We desperately needed to win if we're going to fight for the top spot."

Forward Ron Kellogg led the Jayhawks with 27 points, the last two coming on free throws that clinched the game for Kansas, now 18-2 overall and 4-0 in the Big Eight Conference.

No. 10 UNLV 88, New Mexico St. 79. New Mexico State was playing — and winning — before the largest crowd in its history, but most of 13,709 were disappointed by Nevada-Las Vegas sharpshooters Anthony Jones and Freddie Banks.

Jones scored 28 points for the Runnin' Rebels, now 18-2 and 7-0 in the Pacific Coast Athletic Association. Banks added 21, including five three-pointers. Three were in succession as UNLV erased a 66-59 deficit.

The Aggies, who had won seven straight games, got 25 points from Gilbert Wilburn and 21 from Kenny Travis. New Mexico State is 5-1 in the PCAA and 11-4 overall.

Second Ten

No. 11 Kentucky 74, Georgia 69. It was easy for Kentucky, which led 8-0 and was in front all the way. But Coach Eddie Sutton was not satisfied. He had the Wildcats practicing shortly after the last of the crowd had filed out of Rupp Arena.

Ed Davender led Kentucky, 15-2 overall and 6-1 in the Southeastern Conference, with 15 points. Willie Anderson topped Georgia, 10-6, and 3-4 in the SEC, with 14 points.

No. 17 Bradley 67, Illinois State 63

OT. Bradley, led by center Mike Williams' career-high 30 points, scored the first five points of overtime and hung on for its 10th straight victory. The Braves are 19-1 overall and 6-0 in the Missouri Valley Conference.

Illinois State, 9-8 and 4-2 in the league, got 17 points from freshman guard Todd Starks.

No. 18 UAB 81, UNCC 63. It's a 40-minute game, and that was 20 minutes too long for North Carolina-Charlotte. Alabama-

Birmingham, 18-4 overall and 6-1 in the Sunbelt Conference, recovered from a 30-29 deficit late in the first half and ran away to lead by as many as 22 points.

Steve Mitchell scored 19 points and James Ponder added 14 for the Blazers. Mike Milling had 17 points for the visiting 49ers, who dropped to 5-11 and 0-6 in the league. They haven't beaten UAB in six years.

No. 19 Texas-El Paso 65, Colorado State 57.

Texas-El Paso didn't figure to have to much trouble with 7-11 Colorado State, but the Miners — who trailed by two points early in the second half — had to press.

Led by Juden Smith with 15 points, UTEP hiked its record to 16-3, including 5-2 in the Western Athletic Conference. Dave Feitl had 13 points for the Rams, now 3-4 in the WAC.

Unranked Ken Norlman, who scored a game-high 27 points, and Bruce Douglas hit two free throws each in the final 23 seconds as Illinois edged Ohio State 67-65 in the Big Ten.

Todd Alexander grabbed his own rebound and scored with one second left to give Minnesota a 67-65 victory over Wisconsin. Also in the Big Ten, Iowa routed Northwestern 76-43.

Two free throws by Alvin Robinson — his only points of the game — with seven seconds left lifted Virginia Commonwealth over Jacksonville 81-80 in double overtime in the Sun Belt Conference. Old Dominion topped South Florida 47-43 in another Sunbelt game.

Elsewhere in the South, North Carolina State got 20 points from Shelly Shackelford to beat Maryland 67-55 in the only Atlantic Coast Conference game, and Linwood Moye sank two free throws with eight seconds remaining as South Carolina edged rival Clemson 65-64.

Craig McMillan picked up a loose ball and sank a layup at the buzzer as Arizona beat Oregon State 63-62 in overtime. In other Pacific 10 games, it was Arizona State 76, Oregon 58, and Stanford 76, UCLA 70.

Rockets remain invincible at home

By The Associated Press
It takes more than injuries and ejections to keep the Houston Rockets from winning at home.

"When teams come in here now, it starts with the skycaps at the airport telling them how the Rockets are going to whip them," Robert Reid said after he came off the bench to lead Houston to a 124-107 NBA victory over Sacramento, the Rockets' 22nd victory in 23 home games this season.

Starting forward Rodney McCray played only two minutes because of a bruised leg and Ralph Sampson was ejected in the third period when he was whistled for his second technical foul. The first followed a brief scuffle with the Kings' Otis Thorpe and the second came when Sampson argued an official's call.

The Rockets won 43 games and lost 119 in the two seasons that ended in 1984, but their near-invincibility at home has left them with the league's third-best record overall this season.

"In the old days, teams would say, 'chalk up a victory, we're going to Houston,'" said Reid, who had 23 points on 11-for-17 shooting and 10 rebounds. "Now we say,

'thank you for showing up, the victory will be ours.'"

In other NBA games, it was Washington 114, Phoenix 112; New Jersey 108, Utah 106; and Portland 117, Seattle 107 in double overtime.

Akeem Olajuwon, who scored 22 points, also avoided disqualification for the Rockets, playing the whole fourth quarter with four fouls.

Sampson had 12 points and five rebounds in the first half, leading Houston to a 59-53 advantage. Despite his ejection, the Rockets extended the margin to 98-85 at the end of the third period and pushed their advantage to 105-87 in the fourth quarter.

"I would have been happier to see Akeem go out," Kings center LaSalle Thompson said. "He consistently hurts us more than Ralph."

Thorpe and Sampson shrugged off their shoving match that resulted in each getting a technical.

"He grabbed me in a head lock when I came down for a rebound and I pushed him off," Thorpe said. "His hand got under my arm and that was it," Sampson said. "I haven't landed a punch yet."

Thompson led the Kings with 22 points and 14 rebounds, and Eddie Johnson added 21. Reggie Theus and Mike Woodson each scored 18 points. "Everything went sour for us," Theus said. "They are an explosive team and they got hot. Then we missed quite a few shots and that was the game."

Trail Blazers 117, Sonics 107
Guard Steve Colter salvaged a tie after the first overtime, then scored six more points in the second extra session to lift Portland over Seattle.

The Sonics, losers of six straight, led by two points with only seconds remaining in both regulation and the first overtime period. Layups with four seconds left by Terry Porter and by Colter with seven seconds remaining tied the score at 91-91 and 103-103, respectively. Kiki Vandeweghe scored 31 points, Mychal Thompson 24 and Clyde Drexler 22 for the Trail Blazers. Jack Sikma had 26 points and 19 rebounds for Seattle, and Al Wood added 24 points.

Nets 106, Jazz 105
New Jersey took a 106-102 lead on Otis Birdsong's basket with a minute remaining, then held on to win when sharpshooter Adrian Dantley missed a free throw for Utah with four seconds left.

A basket by Dantley, who scored 36 points, cut the Nets' lead to 106-104 before he was fouled by Darryl Dawkins, giving the Jazz a chance to tie.

Old veteran getting touch back

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — There was a time, "back in the 70s, when I was a much younger player, I could work the ball both ways," pretty much make the golf ball do what he wanted it to do, Hubert Green said.

"Then, for five or six years, I lost it. I couldn't do it," said Green, now 39, who scored his 19th career victory last season in the PGA national championship.

But it's coming back. "I'm close to doing it the way I want to," Green said Thursday after he had scattered nine birdies across his card in an 8-under-par 63 that provided him with the first-round lead in the $500,000 Phoenix Open.

"It was a fun round of golf" and was much closer to the standards he sets for himself, Green said.

"It's better to the extent that I'm more relaxed standing up there. It's better to the extent I'm not hitting those oh-my-gosh-not-over-there shots now."

"It's still not there," Green said. Then he smiled. "But I can hear the footsteps. Sometime this year, it's going to show up."

But Green was not alone in the scoring heroics on the friendly little Phoenix Country Club course that yielded subpar scores to more than half the 144-man field.

Jack Nicklaus and Tom Watson were not among them, however. Each struggled to a 72 in his opening round of the season, and each faces the need for improvement today in order to qualify for the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday.

"A marvelous day. It seemed like I couldn't do anything wrong," said Calvin Peete, the defending title-holder and a runaway winner a couple of weeks ago in the Tournament of Champions.

He was among the quartet that was tied at 64, a single stroke off the pace. Also at that figure were former PGA champ Hal Sutton, Larry Mize and Australian Greg Norman.

"The weather was gorgeous (warm and sunny with a slight breeze) and the golf course was set up extremely well. It enabled you to play right down the flagsticks and I was just able to take advantage of it," Norman said.

Phoenix Open defending title-holder Calvin Peete tips his hat to the crowd after making birdie during Phoenix Open action.

Baseball drug trial ends on quiet note

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The federal government's case against seven men accused of dealing cocaine to major league players, which peaked last fall with the trial of a former Philadelphia Phillies' caterer, has ended quietly with the guilty plea of an unemployed bartender.

Jeffrey Lynn Mosco, 30, of Pittsburgh, pleaded guilty Thursday to three counts of dealing cocaine to former outfielder John Milner in exchange for the Justice Department's dismissal of eight other cocaine distribution counts.

"I'm guilty, your honor," Mosco told U.S. District Judge Donald Ziegler, who freed the former Forbes Field vendor on bond pending his March 7 sentencing.

Mosco's unexpected plea came as a jury empaneled on Wednesday was preparing to hear evidence that Assistant U.S. Attorney Jeffrey Manning said would include testimony from former Pittsburgh Pirates Milner, Lee Lacy, Rod Scurry and Dale Berra.

It was the testimony of seven players that attracted worldwide headlines last September during the three-week trial of Philadelphia cook Curtis Strong, who was convicted on 11 of 14 cocaine distribution counts. Strong is now serving a 12-year term in the Danbury, Conn., federal prison.

Among the players who testified they purchased and used cocaine in varying amounts in various National League cities were several of baseball's biggest stars, including Keith Hernandez of the New York Mets and Dave Parker of the Cincinnati Reds. All of the players testified under federal grants of immunity.

Baseball Commissioner Peter Ueberroth has held closed-door meetings this month with 24 players implicated in testimony for alleged involvement with cocaine or amphetamines. He has not yet announced whether any players will be disciplined.

Although no cases are pending now that Mosco's trial has ended, U.S. Attorney J. Alan Johnson's baseball drugs investigation may not be over. Shelby Greer, who gained access to players through his friendship with Parker, and Strong testified last week before a federal grand jury under grants of immunity.

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY, JAN. 25, 1986

GENERAL TENDENCIES: This morning finds you feeling frustrated in gaining the various activities you would like to make work in your behalf, but then the afternoon brings a considerable amount of upsets.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Don't permit conditions at home to upset you in the morning, but tonight causes changes in recreational activities.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Unless you are careful, errands may not turn out right as you expected them to. Be sure to drive with particular care.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You may feel lack in the morning so plan a wiser budget and stop entertaining so much and soon you will build a next egg.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Forget personal wishes since the aspects are not favorable right now. Pamper yourself and revitalize your energies.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) First handle important home duties, and then take health and beauty treatments you need. Take no risks with your friends.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You may not gain some personal wish early in the day, and later don't try to put your talents across to others.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Some worldly matter can bring criticism in the morning if you are not careful and in the evening the same is true in personal matters.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Get rid of that temptation to get out to new outlets in the morning, and get your home affairs in order.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Be sure you keep a promise you have made even if annoying and tonight enjoy your home. Be happy at home with your mate.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Don't argue with an associate who has prejudices in the morning. You can deal with this person later.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Be kind with an overly sensitive fellow worker in the morning, who is still a tenderfoot. Avoid the public in the evening.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) A friend cannot join you in some pleasure so forget about it and amuse yourself alone. Buy a nice gift for your mate.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will love to solve problems that are difficult for others to do so be sure to send to right schools where this fine talent can be perfected. Much success is possible in the right profession. One who is family oriented, although seems to take this in a casual manner.

Church celebrates 25th anniversary

By CARLEEN EVERETT
Religion Editor

Father Stephen White, M.S.C., outlined the history of the Catholic church in West Texas as he and other members of the Immaculate Heart of Mary Church prepared for a 25th anniversary celebration.

"The earliest Catholic church in West Texas was founded in Stanton in the 1880's by Carmelite monks from Germany," White said.

Church was built and became a mission in 1961 when The Immaculate Heart of Mary Church was built. A school and convent also opened at this time.

Though many attempts were made during the 24 years to maintain a Catholic school and convent, they were closed in May 1984 because of lack of parochial school population, White said.

1971 ended the era of Oblate priests and began a new era of Diocesan priests. Father Luis Moeller came to the church at this time.

Father Stephen White and others from the Immaculate Heart of Mary Catholic Church will celebrate the church's 25th anniversary today.

According to the information compiled by the church, a severe drought brought the early Catholics from Stanton to Big Spring. At that time there were no churches so they held masses in private homes.

Father Boniface Peters ministered to the spiritual needs of Catholics along the railroad from Colorado City to Toyah. In 1885 he directed the building of St. Mary's, the first Catholic church in Big Spring.

1887 marked a year of history, when the Bishop, Bishop Neraz, visited Big Spring for the first time and conferred the sacrament of Confirmation upon the children of the parish.

In 1907 the Oblate order took over all the churches in the area and evangelized the greater part of Texas, White said.

In 1911, St. Thomas Catholic

Missionaries of the Sacred Heart came to pastor the church when White came in 1965. White and Father Jeremiah McCarthy, M.S.C. are the current pastors of the parish.

The Immaculate Heart of Mary Catholic Church is celebrating its 25th anniversary tonight. The celebration will begin with a 6:30 Mass, followed by dinner, entertainment and a dance.

Bishop Michael Pfeifer, OMI, Bishop of San Angelo diocese, and Bishop John Morkosky who was Bishop at the time the church was dedicated will be present. Former Pastor Father Bernard Gully and Father Bob Bush will also be present.

Church briefs

By CARLEEN EVERETT
Religion Editor

Church is subject of article

"The United Methodist Church in Coahoma is changing and growing," said Betty Barr member of UMC in Coahoma, in an article printed in the United Methodist Reporter recently.

"Attitude change, positive faith, prayer and feedback to the pastor has increased our awareness of one another and through personal contacts we have increased our attendance," Barr said.

Barr added that the United Methodist Church in Coahoma would like to express thanks to the Rev. Loren W. Gardner for his many hours spent caring and visiting his church members.

A special thanks also went to Dawn Gardner, a college student who organized the youth into an active and growing asset for the church.

Barr added, "Although we have increased our attendance over the last year, there is much work left to be done. We need to keep working on our goals. Change is gradual, but with the Holy Spirit, which is available to all, guiding and directing us, we will complete our goals."

Nazarene service slated

The sermon entitled, "God isn't dead, but he's getting sick" will be given by Dr. Carl Powers, pastor of the First Church of the Nazarene Sunday at 10:50 a.m.

The reJoice Choir, directed by Otis Thompson and accompanied by Vanessa Burchett, will sing. Phyllis Powers will be soloist.

Children's church meets in Kid's Korner concurrently providing worship experiences for four and five year olds and youngsters in grades one through five.

Sunday school classes are provided at 9:45 a.m. This will be the last Sunday for the January "Teacher of the month" award. December's recipients were Helen Doll and Candy Chesworth. Points are awarded for attendance, visitors, visitation efforts and outside class activities.

The congregation will join in a "Celebration of Praise" at 6 p.m. It will feature rejoice choir, testimony and praise time, congregational singing and family prayer.

Church votes in new pastor

The Primitive Baptist Church located on Willa and W. 8th recently voted in a new pastor.

Elder J.S. (Spence) Kirkpatrick will be ministering the services on Sundays. Services are at 10:30 a.m.

Everyone is invited to attend.

Unity House lists hours

The Unity House of Prayer, 1104 S. Benton, is open to everyone for spiritual conversation from 7-8 p.m. on Thursdays and from 3-4 p.m. on Sundays.

A collection of metaphysical books is also available.

Study says democracy depends on religion

NEW YORK (AP) — A study by a noted "think tank," the Brookings Institution, has concluded that the stability and future strength of American democracy depends on the underpinnings of religion.

Without it, "democracy lacks essential moral support" to sustain it, the report says.

After three years of examination and analysis of basic ingredients holding society together, the report concludes that secular value systems fail "to meet the test of intellectual credibility" for doing the job.

Representative "government depends for its health on values that over the not-so-long run must come from religion," the report says.

Through religion, "human rights are rooted in the moral worth with which a loving Creator has endowed each human soul, and social authority is legitimized by making it answerable to a transcendent moral law," the report says.

The Washington institution, one of the country's largest and most prestigious independent organizations for scholarly research, generally has been regarded over the years as liberal in its appraisals.

The new 389-page report, entitled "Religion in American Public Life," takes several positions regarded as conservative, suggesting civil policies more accommodating to religion.

It advocates allowing a "moment of silence" that could be used for voluntary prayer in public schools, making school facilities available for student religious meetings, and giving tax credits for tuition paid to religious schools.

Rejecting arguments of strict church-state separationists that barring all expressions or symbols of religion from public life would mean government neutrality about religion, the report says:

"Banishment of religion does not represent neutrality between religion and secularism; conduct of public institutions without any regard to religion is secularism."

"A society that excludes religion totally from its public life, that seems to regard religion as something against which public life must be protected, is bound to foster the impression that religion is either irrelevant or harmful."

The report was written by A. James Reichley, a government specialist, in consultation with other Brookings scholars. He formerly was an editor of Fortune magazine and legislative adviser to former Pennsylvania Gov. William Scranton.

Exploring various non-religious value systems, such as those based on self-interest or social interest, the report says they would leave human rights at the mercy either of "selfish interests" or "established secular authority."

In those cases, "either the self or society must finally be regarded as sovereign," the report says, providing no definite, solid basis for individual rights.

"Persons subscribing to a classical humanist ethic are driven to hypocrisy or cynicism" — either pretending a "fellow feeling for the masses" not sustained by that value system, or scorning their ways, the report says.

"In either case, social bitterness between humanist elites and the mass of working-class and middle-class citizens is bound to follow," the report adds. It says:

"In a highly mobile and heterogeneous society like the United States, the values based on religion are even more essential to democracy than they may be in more traditional societies, where respect for freedom, order, and justice may be maintained for some time through social inertia or custom."

However, the study points out that "religious fanaticism may easily lead to social tragedy," citing the turmoil in Northern Ireland, Iran, Lebanon and India.

"Democracy, while largely based on values that come ultimately from religion, must be ever on guard against abuses that some tendencies within religion foster," the report says.

"The key role of religion in maintaining the health of democracy gives all citizens, including those who are themselves without religious faith, a large stake in the way the churches carry out their roles in secular society."

The report examines at length various philosophies and value systems, finding them insufficient to safeguard democratic rights without religious concepts securing them in an anchorage transcending human powers.

"The First Amendment is no more neutral on the general value of religion than it is on the general value of free exchange of ideas or an independent press," the report says.

Volleyball star collapses and dies

TOKYO (AP) — American Flo Hyman, a member of the United States' silver medal-winning women's volleyball team at the 1984 Olympics, died of a heart attack while playing in the Japan Volleyball League since 1982, collapsed during a game Friday and died, Japanese news reports said. She was 31.

Hyman, of El Toro, Calif., collapsed in the third set of a match in Matsue, 380 miles west of Tokyo, and was rushed to a nearby hospital. She died of heart failure, according to the Japan Broadcasting Corp. (NHK) and the Kyodo News Service.

NHK showed film of Hyman carried out of the gymnasium on a stretcher.

Calls to Matsue's Red Cross Hospital, where NHK said Hyman died, went unanswered. An official of the Matsue Police Department said he had received no information.

Hyman was a member of the volleyball team of Daiiei, Inc., a major Japanese supermarket chain. Near the end of the third set of a match with archrival Hitachi, Ltd., she collapsed. She was pronounced dead at the hospital at 6:30 a.m. EST, Kyodo said.

The 6-foot-6 Hyman, the tallest player on the U.S. squad, was a graduate of the University of Houston. She was a key member of the U.S. national volleyball team in the 1977 and 1981 World Cup tournaments, the 1978 and 1982 world championships and the 1984 Olympics.

She had played for Daiiei, which has fielded top women's teams in Japan's company league, since November, 1982.

Hyman was considered one of the most dominant players in the sport. In 1981 she was among six players selected to the All World Cup Team, and was honored as the best hitter at that competition.

She became a member of the U.S. team in 1975, and competed in every major competition that the U.S. squad ever qualified for.
