County adopts overtime policy

By SCOTT FITZGERALD
Staff Writer

Howard County Commissioners this morning approved a written policy drawn by County Attorney Tim Yeats regarding overtime pay for county employees.

The approval was made, however, with no apparent motion being raised and approved. Yeats said later it was understood at a Feb. 10 commissioners court meeting the stipulations he drew up for the written overtime policy would be generally agreed on by commissioners.

Yeats said under the policy county employees would be paid 1 1/2 times their regular hourly wage for hours exceeding 40 hours per week.

The policy also allows department heads the discretion of awarding overtime hours or compensatory time which must be used within six months. Approval from both the department head and the county judge will be necessary before the money will be allotted.

The policy excludes department heads — which are elected, executive, administrative and professional employees — from being awarded overtime pay.

Sheriff's deputy Barney Edens later addressed the court about the mandatory 48-hour workweek that county law enforcement officials were to abide by, according to federal mandate.

"Law enforcement personnel doesn't like it," Edens said, "it restricts us to so many hours."

During Edens' discussion with commissioners, Commissioner Bill Crooker pointed out while reviewing time sheets from the sheriff's office personnel, that too much overtime pay was being claimed by the deputies. "The deputies were going by 40-hour workweeks," Kirby said about the excessive hours. "I don't think they understood that their hours are to be based on 48-hour weeks."

Crooker suggested to Edens that sheriff office personnel not use monthly time sheets, but use weekly time sheets instead.

City TG&Y store to close down following Easter

By HANK MURPHY
Staff Writer

Between 45 and 50 employees stand to lose their jobs when the TG&Y Store at the College Park Shopping Center closes its doors sometime after Easter, store manager Charles Dalton said today.

TG&Y Stores Co. was bought by McCrory's Jan. 7, and plans are to convert more than 500 TG&Y stores nationwide to McCrory's Variety Stores. The move will make McCrory's the nation's second largest variety retailing chain with more than 1,200 stores, said Larry Ritchey of the store's corporate office in York, Pennsylvania.

About 200 TG&Y stores, including the one in Big Spring and 25 more in Texas, did not fit into McCrory's plans, Ritchey said. He said demographics, location, sales data, competition and other factors were used to determine which stores would be converted to McCrory's and which would be put up for sale to other retail firms.

Dalton's comments reflected those of Ritchey when he said today his store did not meet the strategic plan drawn up by McCrory's.

Shortly after Easter, the store will be turned over to a company that specializes in liquidating store merchandise, Dalton said.

Dalton said McCrory's was "doing everything possible" to see that employees are compensated when the store closes. The store's employees, he said, will be provided with a severance package that he called "real fair."

Ritchey said there has been a lot of interest shown by retailing firms in the 200 TG&Y stores that will be offered for sale this spring, but he would not say by whom. He said it is McCrory's hope that if the stores are sold the current personnel will be retained by the new owner.

Education faces financial crunch

AUSTIN (AP) — Just as Texas is trying to improve its education system, the state's fiscal crisis and the federal budget-cutting law could mean a $46.5 million reduction in funding for state education, officials say.

A reduction of about $44 million in federal funds is expected because of the Gramm-Rudman deficit reduction plan. That amounts to a 4.3 percent decrease in federal education funds for Texas and cuts will be deeper in subsequent years, said Maria Elena Flood, chairman of the state Board of Education's finance committee.

Compensatory education programs, which provide help to educationally disadvantaged children, and vocational education are two large programs that will be affected by the federal cutbacks, according to a funding forecast from the Texas Education Agency. "We had counted on the federal dollars being our partner" in financing educational programs, Ms. Flood said Saturday.

Officials say that Gov. Mark White's call for state agencies to reduce spending will cost the education system another $2.5 million. Education Commissioner William Kirby said that represents a 9.6 percent decrease in the TEA's operating budget for 1986.

Promotions, merit pay and travel are being frozen or cut and the agency has imposed a hiring freeze to meet the governor's request.

The $4.8 billion that flows to school districts from the state is unaffected by the state cuts. The TEA will have to look for "imaginative ways to get funding" for some programs, such as a cost accountability study to reveal the prices of various educational programs, said board Chairman Jon Brumley.

Brumley said state officials may have to go to private foundations to secure full funding for the cost study.

Searchers have found remains of Challenger's astronauts in the debris of the shuttle's crew compartment 100 feet down on the floor of the Atlantic Ocean, NASA announced Sunday. ## Crew cabin debris located

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Some remains of Challenger's astronauts and crew cabin debris have been recovered from the ocean floor, space center sources say, but NASA said it will respect family wishes and not comment until the operation is completed.

That could take several days, officials said in announcing Sunday that the remains had been found in the shuttle wreckage 100 feet below the surface of the Atlantic Ocean about 15 miles northeast of Cape Canaveral.

Some remains and parts of the cabin were brought into nearby Port Canaveral on Saturday night and taken to a hospital at Patrick Air Force Base 25 miles south of here, a source, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said today.

The source said the Navy salvage ship USS Preserver came into port in darkness and without running lights and was met by astronaut Bob Overmyer, who is involved in the investigation, and other National Aeronautics and Space Administration officials.

Personnel from the Armed Forces Institute of Pathology began attempting to identify the remains today, the source reported.

Five men and two women died when Challenger exploded 73 seconds after launch on Jan. 28. NASA said Sunday's announcement was withheld until families were notified, but members of several families said they weren't told about the finding of the remains.

Tony Smith, the younger brother of pilot Mike Smith, said his family had been told Friday that searchers had found the crew cabin but he knew nothing about remains being found.

In an interview with WCPX-TV in Orlando, Bruce Jarvis, father of astronaut Gregory Jarvis, said he was relieved that his son's remains had been found, but expressed frustration at having learned of it from television.

"It's not going to bring anybody back," Marvin Resnik, father of astronaut Judy Resnik, said Sunday. "There's nothing we can do about it. As far as I'm concerned, services have SHUTTLE page 2-A

Even best spellers heave a sigh of relief

By SPENCER SANDOW
Staff Writer

Nerves were on edge at the Coahoma Elementary School spelling bee Friday afternoon. Contestants fidgeted in their chairs until the contest began, then sat quietly on the edge of their seats.

All over Howard County, elementary and junior high schools were holding bees to choose the best spellers for the county bee Monday, March 17 at 4 p.m. in the Howard College auditorium. All schools with fourth through eighth grades are eligible to participate. The county bee is open to the public.

Rachel Phillips of the fifth grade won the Coahoma bee when she correctly spelled the word "cartwright." She was the alternate last year.

Jennifer Cooper of the sixth grade won second place. She missed the word "carriageable."

Four students each from the fourth, fifth and sixth grades competed in the school bee. They were the winners of bees for their grades, said principal Tom Spell, the contest announcer.

Spell went to call for one girl who was late. "No, don't — she's hard to beat," urged another contestant. The others giggled.

The twelve students sat in a row in the staff dining room, the shorter ones swinging their sneaker-clad feet. Spell reviewed the rules.

"We'll take the first round spelling words first," he said. "Thank God," a young speller breathed, to the laughter of the others. Spell called out the words in a booming voice. Round one saw one contestant eliminated and round two saw two more. The contest began getting tougher.

No one was eliminated the third time around, but only six contestants were left after the fourth.

Students moved in to fill the vacant seats and made a collective sigh.

"Dallied," the principal boomed. "Could you use it in a sentence?"

asked a contestant. "He dallied along instead of going straight to class," replied librarian Sue McDowell, a judge.

At last only two spellers were left. If one missed a word, the other had to spell that word and one more to win.

Round after round passed with either both spelling words correctly or both missing the word. Then Phillips spelled the winning word. The bee was over, but the challenge of countywide competition is still to come.

 But Cmdr. Johnson said he later talked to the actor's Hollywood press agent, Lili Ungar, who said he did not want to cause the police department any problems and would pay the fine.

 already been performed."
 Carl McNair, the father of astronaut Ronald McNair, told CBS News he did not find out about the discovery until Sunday evening.
 Mark Weinberg, a spokesman for the presidential commission investigating the shuttle disaster, said he could not comment on the significance of the find to the commission's probe.
 "I would not want to characterize its importance. That's to be determined. Clearly all pieces of evidence are important," he said.
 Meanwhile, astronauts involved in the shuttle program, including Sally Ride, a member of the presidential commission, say they want shuttle safety issues resolved before they fly again.
 A sharply critical memo by chief astronaut John Young, made public over the weekend, charged that NASA has allowed "launch schedule pressure" to outweigh safety considerations in the shuttle program.
 The Navy search ship LCU's sonar tentatively located the crew compartment late Friday, and divers from the USS Preserver on Saturday positively identified compartment debris and crew remains, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration statement said.
 Spokesman Hugh Harris said he could provide no information on the condition of the compartment or the remains or whether remains of all seven astronauts had been found.

 A source who requested anonymity said the cabin was not intact and that "some remains" had been spotted.
 A Navy spokesman also told the Washington Post that neither the crew compartment nor the bodies were intact. "We're talking debris, and not a crew compartment, and we're talking remains, not bodies," said Lt. Cmdr. Deborah Burnette.
 Data tapes that were in the cabin could shed light on the cause of the explosion, but it was not known how well the tapes survived.
 Recovering the cabin wreckage depends on weather and sea conditions, NASA said. High waves hampered search efforts for the last week.
 Among the victims was Christa McAuliffe, a New Hampshire schoolteacher who was flying as NASA's first private citizen in space. The others were commander Richard Scobee, Smith, Ellison Onizuka, Miss Resnik, McNair and Jarvis.
 Officials said private boats and planes will be barred from an area two miles around the search zone to keep news media and sightseers away.

Overtime

 "Overtime is an insidious thing and can be taken advantage of very quickly," Crocker said, "and we hope this doesn't happen."
 He earlier addressed his concerns to the possibility of county employees later trying to claim overtime pay for hours undocumented.
 "When they (employees) leave, we don't want any of this coming back like the city," Crocker said.
 Commissioners also listened to a presentation from Main Street

Project Director Teri Quinones which was not listed on the meeting's agenda.
 Quinones said the latest development on the Downtown Steering Committee's application for a grant from the Texas Community Development Program was that committee matching funds had been lowered to $6,675 from the initial $10,000 allotment.
 The county had approved a motion last summer allocating $20,000 in the 1985-86 budget to be paid to the steering committee in its attempts to revitalize downtown.

West Texans hit Washington to lobby for atom-smasher

Several members of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce committee promoting the Garden City site for the proposed superconducting supercollider (SSC) project journeyed to Washington, D.C., in a fact-finding, lobbying effort.
 Ralph McLaughlin of Big Spring, committee chairman, said the group met with officials from the Department of Energy, in charge of the proposed project, and key members of legislative committees who will influence the location of the proposed massive project.

 He said the group told officials the Garden City site has the lowest cost, $2.8 billion, and asked a ceiling be imposed requiring the project to be built on the lowest cost site.
 The SSC, or atom-smasher, is a research project that would propel particles of matter at high speeds into head-on collisions with the aim of studying minute particles.

Reagan pushes for aid

WASHINGTON — President Reagan, trying to stave off a foreign policy defeat on Capitol Hill, plans to meet with groups of congressmen this week to personally lobby for support of his plan to provide $100 million to the U.S.-backed guerrillas fighting Nicaragua's leftist government.

The president also will make a nationally televised speech Sunday to try to rally public support for his fight against a Soviet-supplied nation he says is a threat to its Latin American neighbors.

Snake hunters busy

SWEETWATER — Hunters from all over the Big Country turned in 15,919 pounds of rattlesnakes by the time the 28th annual Rattlesnake Roundup ended.

The roundup, attended by more than 35,000 people, ended Sunday after hunters had combed the area within an 80-mile radius of Sweetwater.

The three-day collection brought in the second highest numbers of the creatures.

Army recruits abound

ODESSA — West Texas high school graduates are abandoning the oil fields and lining up for a stint with Uncle Sam, but military recruiters say they have the luxury of being particular about who they sign up.

Sgt. Kirk Ogden, a U.S. Army recruiter in Odessa, said the declining petroleum industry in West Texas has prompted larger numbers of high school seniors to opt for a guaranteed income and a secure future in the service.

Fake degrees prevail

WASHINGTON — The FBI says about 200 federal employees, including a former White House staffer and a high-level aide to the Joint Chiefs of Staff, hold phony academic or medical degrees, but the disclosure doesn't seem to be creating much of a stir in government circles.

A subcommittee of the House Select Committee on Aging, which reported the FBI's findings at a hearing in December, says that of the 18 federal agencies involved, only the U.S. Postal Service has reported taking disciplinary action against such employees in its midst.

Farmers face crunch

WASHINGTON — Agriculture officials are saying this year's spring credit crunch will be somewhat worse than the one farmers lived through a year ago, when it took a frenzied last-minute scramble to get loans in time for crop planting.

Even then, about 5 percent of producers who wanted to plant crops were unable to get the financing they needed.

Philadelphia Mayor W. Wilson Goode faces a camera at a Philadelphia television station just prior to giving a 15-minute television address in response to the report issued by the special commission investigating the city's confrontation with the radical group MOVE Sunday evening.

Tenders apology

Mayor Goode says it's time for 'recovery'

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Mayor W. Wilson Goode, ignoring calls to resign, has apologized to the people of Philadelphia for his handling of the siege of the MOVE stronghold last year in which 11 members of the radical cult died and 61 houses were destroyed.

In an emotional "heart-to-heart talk" Sunday night, he said he "accepted responsibility for all the actions of city government — the good, the bad and the tragic," and brushed aside charges that he "abdicated his responsibilities as a leader" during the incident.

It was his response to last week's condemnation of Goode by the special investigation commission he appointed to probe the causes of the MOVE disaster.

The mayor subtly overlooked the harsh criticism while praising the 11 members of the panel, most of them his friends and supporters, "for their forthrightness, integrity and commitment."

Eleven people died and 61 homes were destroyed in a fire sparked by a bomb that police dropped on the MOVE stronghold to blow up a cache of weapons on the roof.

Goode said he is sorry for the tragedy that has torn the city and asked the people "to bring about recovery and renewal."

"And when the bad and the tragic touch us and we lose momentum, I too must take responsibility to bring about recovery and renewal," he said in the 15-minute televised speech.

Goode said he proposed to take note of the commission's 38 recommendations, including use of explosives and guns, in reorganizations of city departments. He said he would present details of some of the changes at a news conference today and outline steps to implement others.

Beyond that, Goode swept aside charges by the commission that he was grossly negligent when he allowed police to drop the bomb.

He also ignored the suggestion that a grand jury be empaneled to investigate what the commission called the "unjustified homicides" of five children in the MOVE house.

District Attorney Ronald Castille has appointed three assistants to investigate whether a grand jury should consider criminal charges to be brought against city officials involved in the siege.

In sorrowful tones, Goode called May 13 "the most tragic day in my life (and) I wish it had never happened."

"To say that I am sorry, for lives lost, for (61) homes destroyed, for damage to our spirit, somehow, can never be enough."

"All of you deserve much more. You deserve and you have my solemn pledge that I will work hard to make sure that it never happens again."

Scientists watch comet

MOSCOW — The Soviet Union's Vega 2 space probe gave scientists their closest look yet at Halley's comet, but damage from comet dust increased concern for a European probe that will pass within a few hundred miles of the comet later this week.

Vega 2 passed Sunday within about 5,125 miles of the comet, which swings around the sun every 76 years.

About 100 of the world's top space scientists gathered at the Soviet Institute for Space Research to watch Vega 2's electronically produced images as they arrived back on Earth.

Tribal feud kills nine

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Police said today that nine blacks were killed in tribal clashes near Durban, and that two other blacks died in a Cape province township torn by unrest.

Fighting among Ndlovu, Kwela, and Magagani clans of the Zulu tribe broke out in the Umbumbulu district south of Durban, an Indian Ocean port, on Sunday, and was continuing today, police said.

Analysts warn Aquino

MANILA, Philippines — The communist insurgency in the Philippines has suffered a major setback, but may rebound if the new government of President Corazon Aquino fails to end abuses by landlords and the military in the provinces, analysts say.

Rebel ranks have swelled at a rate of about 20 percent a year. U.S. officials say from 16,000 to 20,000 fighters now operate in virtually every province.

Shiites claim capture

BEIRUT, Lebanon — An anonymous caller claiming to represent a radical Shiite Moslem group claimed the organization detained four members of a French television crew, and police said they had no clue where the Frenchmen were.

Last week the same radical group, Islamic Jihad or Islamic Holy War, claimed it killed French hostage Michel Seurat in retaliation for the deportation of two Iraqis who sympathize with Iran.

Envoys meet Assad

BEIRUT, Lebanon — French envoys today met with the Syrian president and Lebanese officials in a diplomatic campaign to free eight French hostages believed held by Islamic Jihad.

But the Iranian government refused to issue a visa to a third French emissary involved in the effort to free the hostages, a government spokesman in Paris said.

"The Rattlesnake"

by Frederic Remington

Available in a single limited edition issue of 9500 serially numbered sculptures.

An outstanding museum quality reproduction in the great tradition of Frederic Remington.

One of Frederic Remington's best known and dramatic works — "The Rattlesnake" depicts in vivid detail the classic moment as horse and rider encounter a startled snake, while on the trail. The few original bronzes, made by Remington in 1905, are rare and have sold at auction for over $135,000. Now this 1/2 size reproduction is available for the unusual offering price of only $195.00 per sculpture.

The fine reproduction was produced under the direct supervision of Ms. Christine Roussel — former Director of the Reproduction Studio of the Metropolitan Museum of Art and creator of fine Remington reproductions for The Nelson Rockefeller Collection.

Each Rattlesnake replica will be created in cold-cast bronze — a medium that enables the casting of finer detail than the traditional hot-cast method. Every sculpture will be individually cast from a blend of powdered bronze and resins. Once the casting is completed, it will be finished with a rich patina, similar to the original. Each Remington Rattlesnake will be serially numbered and hallmarked. The edition will be limited to 9500 pieces and after that, all molds will be destroyed forever.

To reserve this important Remington reproduction, simply return the application. No payment need accompany your order at this time.

Texas our Texas, where liberty lives

On March 3, 1836, a 26-year-old cavalry officer commanding a besieged force of 184 men at a small fort in San Antonio wrote a letter to the provisional government of the new Republic of Texas, asking for reinforcements and ending with a flourish: "God and Texas. Victory or Death."

William Barrett Travis was the rare Texan who underestimated his prospects. He and the other defenders of the Alamo perished three days later at the hands of the Mexican army, but their deaths did not preclude ultimate victory. Six weeks later, Sam Houston's army wiped out Santa Anna's, securing the independence Texas had declared on March 2. One hundred fifty years later, Texans and others have reason to commemorate that event.

Not just because of the state's fabled size and wealth, though Texas is bigger than most countries and, if still a separate country, would rank 11th in the world in gross national product. No just because of its increasing importance, though it is the fastest-growing state, with more people than any but California and New York. Not just because American history would be considerably different, and less congenial, if Texas had remained part of Mexico.

On its sesquicentennial anniversary, Texas deserves the attention of all Americans because of what it represents about themselves. It stands to the rest of the country as America stands to Europe, evoking both loathing and admiration for its uncultured vitality, its ramunctious individualism, its celebration of financial success, its disdain for encrusted tradition. Texas is a 160-proof distillation of America's most distinctive characteristics.

That makes for some friction in its relations with the rest of the country. Texans venturing north of the Red River, including this one, soon get used to being regarded with a mixture of condescension, puzzlement and humor, like a deranged but harmless relative. Texans tend to respond with defiance, an habitual posture, adorning their cars with "Secede" bumper stickers and scorning Yankee ways.

The Dallas man who proposes to build a wall around the state to keep out non-natives expresses a popular fear, less of outsiders than of the hazards posed by Texas's growing assimilation into the nation's mainstream. While relentlessly transforming a desolate frontier outpost into a monument to 20th Century enterprise, Texans have always worried about the results of change.

The old cowboy song was popular at the turn of the century, but it still expresses a common sentiment: "I'm going to leave old Texas now."

For they've got no use for the Longhorn cow. They plowed and fenced my cattle range.

And the people there are all so strange."

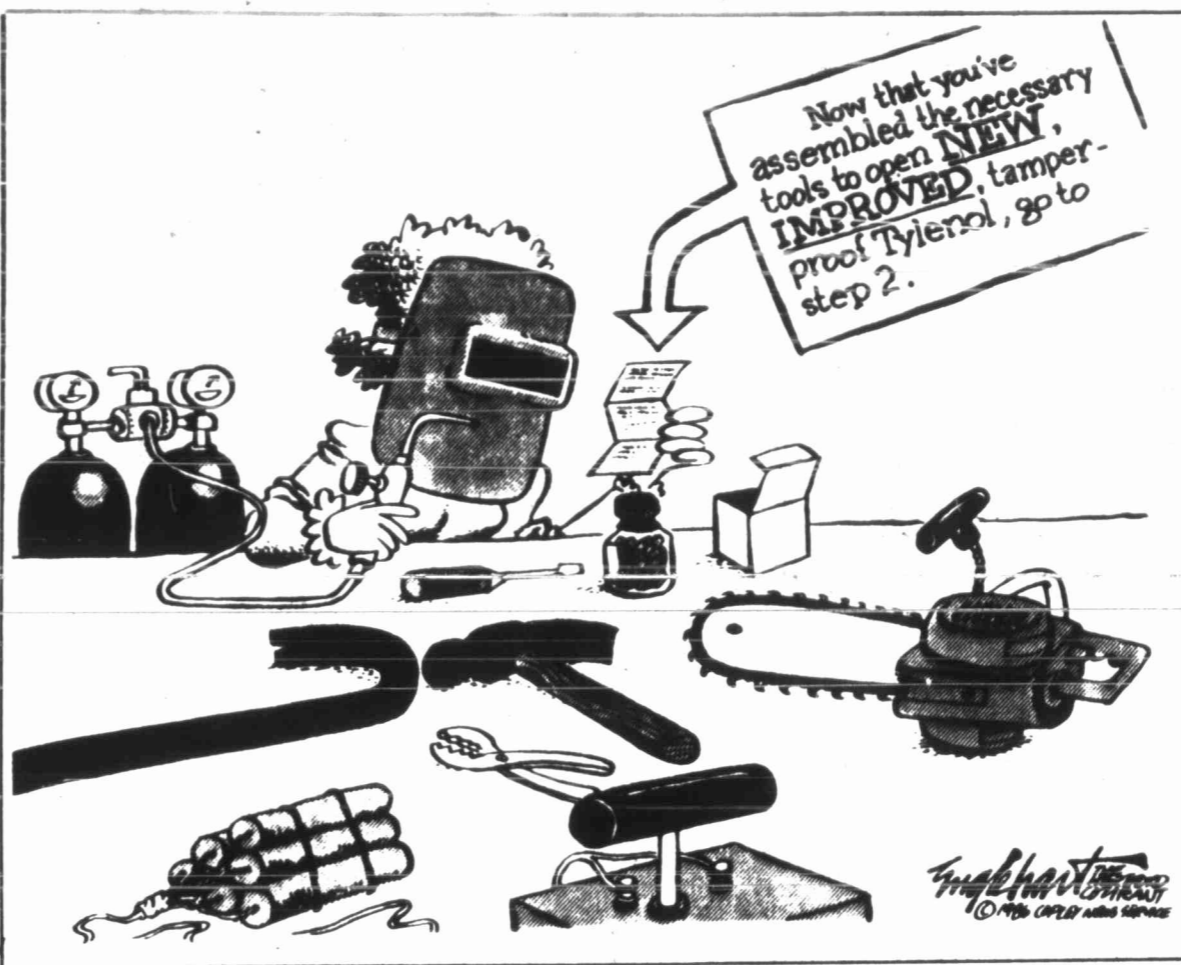

A lot of Texans agree with Roy Blount, who said he wouldn't want to live anywhere where the road signs didn't have bullet holes. A streak of anarchy is part of the state's peculiar disposition.

Love us or hate us, Texans think, but don't lump us together with everybody else. Like F. Scott Fitzgerald's protagonist, Dick Diver, they harbor one fear above all others: "God, am I like the rest, after all? Am I like the rest?"

So far, at least, they aren't. What Texans and non-Texans instinctively know is that Texans are different. The rest of the country may not care whether they stay different, and might prefer that they didn't, but Texans care profoundly about preserving their distinctive traits — their admiration for individual enterprise, their attachment to the land, their relentless friendliness and their refusal to acknowledge limits to human achievement.

These are all virtues worthy of preservation, and even of cultivation elsewhere. Texas, it has often been said, is not just a state but a state of mind. As such it transcends geographic boundaries, like the sentiment of the Latin slogan on an early flag of the Republic, which when translated read: "Where liberty lives, there is our homeland." In celebrating that spirit, we all grasp its exhilarating sense of possibility; we all claim a place in the boundless realm of Texas, our Texas.

Watch out, Sean Penn

By TIM AFFEL
Alright, you have now been warned.

Yeah, I'm talking to you, Sean Penn, so don't turn your back to me. I mean business.

We've all heard about your introductions, meeting photographers with your fists. But we're onto your game, chum, and we're not to be denied.

Each of us has a job to do in life. Some are accountants, some are lawyers and some of us record actions on film for the world to see. Whether good or bad, we save moments to show life as it is, including movie stars such as yourself.

So why bite the hand that feeds you? You were made popular through the media like so many others in our society, so don't you dare forget it. You could have made hundreds of movies, but where would you be without the publicity?

And because we happen to crowd you a bit, you decide to do some impromptu acting of a boxer for your benefit. Just who do you think you're dealing with?

Photographers are, by nature, a violent type. You may think autograph hounds are pushy. Try being down on the floor of the Cotton Bowl during the Texas-OU game with a few hundred other photographers, each jostling for the best position. It can be a blood-bath, with the longer lenses becoming weapons.

Not scared yet? Try running around all day long shooting shots, worrying about finding a decent front-page picture in-between assignments, and then being chewed out by an angry parent at the end of the day, because you happened to cut their kid out of a picture that ran the previous day.

Tensions build up to a point day by day, just waiting for the fuse to be lit by some clod like you.

Now we're not here to start no trouble. We like having subjects that cooperate. Kinda like the "you scratch my back, and I'll scratch yours" theory. You can find that we're a rather nice group of people.

But we don't like hassles. We get enough of it each day without people like you. So just cool out for we protect our own.

Just remember, you heard this friendly advice here first.

The day Marcos resigned

By JACK ANDERSON and DALE VAN ATTA
WASHINGTON — At the height of the tension that threatened to envelop the Philippines in a bloody civil war on Feb. 24, President Reagan appeared remarkably at ease.

In fact, the only thing the president seemed uneasy about was the willingness of Corazon Aquino, soon to become president of the Philippines, to continue the strong alliance between her country and the United States — and the lease of the two huge American bases that symbolize that alliance.

The president received Dale Van Atta for an exclusive interview in the Oval Office at 2:35 p.m. on Feb. 24 — just as the Philippines crisis reached its critical juncture. Literally minutes before, Ferdinand Marcos had called Washington to find out if Reagan wanted him to resign as Philippines president. The answer he got would mean the difference between a peaceful end to Marcos's 20-year rule and a civil war that could have destroyed the Philippines — and seriously damaged U.S. strategic interests in the western Pacific.

Here's the story: Marcos had spent the weekend barricaded in the Malacanang Palace, while the two top military leaders who had broken with him were in an army camp across town, protected by thousands of unarmed civilians defying Marcos' tanks.

In Washington, Reagan had spent the weekend trying to figure out how to keep Marcos from escalating the sporadic violence that could lead to full-scale civil war. Around dawn on Monday (Washington time), Reagan made a painful decision: Marcos, an ally who had been loyal to the United States, must be asked diplomatically to step down. This wasn't disclosed until the next day, but we had heard rumors of Reagan's message to Marcos.

"Was it difficult for you to come to a decision to ask Marcos to step down?" Van Atta asked the president at about 2:38 p.m.

"Well, actually, I have not specifically said that to him," the president replied. "The message that I have sent has been for — to find a solution to this without violence. These last few hours it seems we've come very close to beginning a civil war there."

Reagan alluded to the historic bonds of friendship

"between two peoples, ours and theirs," and said earnestly: "It's a very difficult situation. We have to face the fact that this is a sovereign country over there, and there is a limit to (what we can do). Some of those people, particularly on (Capitol) Hill, are talking as if we've got some claim where we can dictate. We can't tell them what to do. The solution should be a solution by the people of the Philippines, and it should be one with no violence."

Asked whether he thought he could work with Mrs. Aquino, who at one point said she favored closing the U.S. bases after 1990, when the current leases expire, Reagan replied:

"Well now, I know she's turned around and claims that she would do whatever had to be done." His body language suggested that he was not fully confident that Mrs. Aquino would allow the bases to stay after all.

But he added: "Again, I have to say that we would make every effort to work with a government that was chosen and decided by the Philippine people."

At the time of the interview, Reagan had no way of knowing that Marcos was unsure of the signals he had been getting from the State Department and other American emissaries.

A few minutes before the interview began, Marcos had telephoned Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., a trusted Reagan friend who had recently visited Marcos.

The embattled Philippine president asked Laxalt whether the State Department messages, hinting that he should step down, had come from Reagan himself. Laxalt confirmed that they had.

But to make sure he had not misrepresented the president's latest thinking, Laxalt rushed to the White House. He arrived just as Van Atta was leaving.

Laxalt conferred with Reagan and then called the discouraged Marcos back. Laxalt later gave us this account of the conversation:

Marcos: "Does the president want me to resign?" Laxalt said Reagan wouldn't presume to tell Marcos what to do.

Marcos: "Well, what do you think?" Laxalt: "I think your time has come. You ought to cut and clean."

Teachers turn away from White

AUSTIN — Mark White's problem with teachers is one of the great political reversals of recent years.

Was it only four years ago that White used strong teacher support to unseat Republican Gov. Bill Clements and reclaim the Governor's Mansion for the Democrats? Yes, it was.

White strategists in 1982 credited the teacher groups with putting their man over the top. These groups had suffered under Clements, who had largely won office four years earlier without their support. They lacked a strong voice in state government and saw White as their opportunity for a surge in political power.

Teachers couldn't put the kind of money into the campaign that the richer special interest groups controlled. But they had manpower and energy fueled by a hunger for political clout.

They provided workers for White's campaign offices, they manned the phones and walked door-to-door.

He seemed to be their natural candidate: son and husband of former teachers, a strong supporter of public education and a proponent of a significant increase in teacher salaries in Texas.

Victory was sweet that November of 1982, but the sweetness was brief. The Legislature came to town in January and showed little enthusiasm for a quick financial reward for teachers.

Most of the lawmakers had won office without strong teacher support, and they felt no obligation to help the new governor pay off his campaign pledge regarding higher salaries. And under Texas' weak-governor form of government, there was little White could do but plead, fuss and worry.

Legislative leaders said they couldn't support a big teacher pay hike without general improvements in education. They said Texas was far behind most other states in the quality of its education system. And there was a feeling that that lag was hurting the state's economic development.

If I recall correctly, House Speaker Gib Lewis first proposed a special committee to look at the overall quality of education, although Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby was an early supporter, too.

White, whose name has come to be synonymous with the school reforms of the resulting House Bill 72, actually played more of an opportunistic role than a leadership role in those early days. The study committee was a way to achieve his primary goal: a salary increase for teachers.

His stroke of genius (or, at least, so it seemed at the time) was to appoint Dallas billionaire H. Ross Perot as chairman of the committee.

Perot's committee produced a long list of significant reform proposals, and the chairman used all his influence and a sizeable chunk of his own money to push those ideas, along with a teacher pay hike, through the Legislature in a 1984 special session.

White, who started off with a campaign pledge for a pay hike, ended up leading the movement that produced those reforms, which have won attention and much praise in education circles nationwide. And, according to recent polls, the reforms are supported by a majority of Texans.

But they have brought the governor only problems with teachers, who claim they have to deal with more paperwork and who are upset over a test they must pass to continue teaching, which is being given today. Significant salary improvements notwithstanding, the teachers are angry, and their former hero is now their favorite target.

Stranger reversals have happened in the history of Texas politics, but not many.

CORRECTION: This writer had a slip of the memory regarding politics and the Bible in last week's column. I referred to a "Republican Golden Rule" about GOP candidates not saying bad things about each other. That is more properly known as the Republicans' 11th Commandment.

Husband's insults strain marriage

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: My husband is a good husband in many ways, but he hurts me by cutting me down in front of other people. I don't think he realizes what he is doing, but I wish you would say something about this because he might read it. — Mrs. B.V.W.

DEAR MRS. B.V.W.: It is possible for us to deeply hurt others with our words and not even be aware of it. The Bible warns, "He who guards his lips guards his soul, but he who speaks rashly will come to ruin" (Proverbs 13:3). The Bible also compares our tongues to a spark which, although it is small, can destroy an entire forest (read James 3:3-10). That is why the writer of the Psalms prayed, "Set a guard over my mouth, O Lord; keep watch over the door of my lips" (Psalm 141:3). This should be our prayer as well.

Let me first urge you to speak frankly (and yet lovingly) with your husband. As you say, he may not even be aware that you are hurt by the things he says, and although he does not intend to hurt you he needs to be aware of your feelings.

Communication is important in a good marriage, and you and your husband need to learn to share your concerns (as well as your joys) with each other. At the same time, avoid the temptation of trying to hurt him verbally. Praise him and support him in your conversations with others — and your example may help him to learn to do the same for you.

Beyond this, however, make sure that Christ is at the center of your marriage. When a husband and wife are truly seeking to honor Christ, they will not want to hurt each other — quite the opposite. The Bible says, "Husbands ought to love their wives as their own bodies... no one ever hated his own body, but he feeds and cares for it" (Ephesians 5:28,29).

As you pray together and learn from God's word together, God will help both of you become the loving partners He wants you to be.

Dear Abby

Parent girl scouts sell cookies

DEAR ABBY: This past week I was approached by 12 co-workers who were selling Girl Scout cookies for their daughters. I feel this is cheating, these girls of the opportunity to be part of a team who agreed to help their organization by selling cookies.

I am 100 percent for the Girl Scouts of America. I went through the entire program myself many years ago, and when my doorbell rings and there is a Girl Scout asking me to buy a box of her cookies, I always buy a box. I would never refuse a Scout who has the courage to come to my door to sell her wares. I do, however, refuse to buy from a parent who indirectly encourages laziness in her daughter by selling the cookies at her office for her child.

It is important for parents to realize that they are sacrificing character building when they take over a job for their child.

NO NAME OR TOWN, PLEASE
DEAR NO NAME OR TOWN: I share your view, but there are those who think the bottom line is racking up as many sales as possible. And speaking of selling Girl Scout cookies, read on:

DEAR ABBY: I am a concerned 71-year-old retired businessman. Less than an hour ago, my doorbell rang. When I opened the door, I saw a pretty, young girl in a Girl Scout uniform. She had long, blond hair, large blue eyes and a winning smile. "I'm selling Girl Scout cookies," she announced brightly. Of course I bought some. She thanked me politely and proceeded on her way.

As I watched her walk away with her blond hair blowing in the wind,

I thought: "My God, that child is going from door to door facing strangers. How easy it would be for some sick or evil person to grab her and pull her inside, and do God only knows what to that lovely, trusting child! You read about it in the papers nearly every day."

I telephoned the Girl Scout headquarters and suggested that they have girls go either in pairs or with an adult to sell their cookies. Then I thought I would reach an even wider audience by writing to you.

I hope you think this is worth publishing.
GRANDFATHER OF FIVE
DEAR GRANDFATHER: It is, and I thank you for an important message.

DEAR ABBY: My common-law husband of five years has given me an ultimatum: the dog or him. I find this a hard choice to make as I love them both. Mind you, I love my man more, but the dog has been my pet for five and a half years — since she was 6 weeks old.

Keeping a dog in the city is hard, especially a Doberman pinscher. She is intelligent, protective of the people she loves, but as you know, Abby, all animals, no matter how well-trained, do slip up occasionally, especially when confined in the house during the winter months.

My husband wants me to put her to sleep. I don't think I could do it, but it is coming to a showdown, and I must make a decision.

I take care of the dog, feed her, walk her twice a day and pay all the expenses of owning her, as well as half the rent and household expenses. (I do all the housework.) In other words, the man I live with does not support me and/or my pet.

MS. CATCH-22
DEAR CATCH: No contest. If you need help with this decision, send the heartless scoundrel packing. So what will you lose? A man who would rather kill your pet than find another home for it. Good riddance! You (and the dog) deserve better.

DEAR ABBY: I take exception to the letter from the retired schoolteacher who asked you to advise the general public to never walk up to a former schoolteacher and say, "I'll bet you don't remember me."

Having worked in the public school system for 42 years, I've enrolled over 20,000 boys and girls and signed some 15,000 diplomas.

When a former student comes up to me and says, "Mr. S., do you remember me?" I always smile and say, "I certainly do; you were one of the 20,000 students in the Portland school system; now, please, tell me your name." This always brings a chuckle, followed by a pleasant conversation.

(Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents) self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

For your gardens

'Tis the season for patio planning

By DON RICHARDSON
County Extension Agent

Spring and early summer days are ideal for out-of-door enjoyment on the patio... or for planning and constructing the patio, an important element of outdoor living.

Have a complete and well thought-out plan on paper before beginning work on the new patio, or on the patio addition. By planning, less mistakes will occur, new ideas will be generated and the area will surely be more beautiful and functional. Consult a professional landscape architect for professional planning and ideas.

Plan to locate the patio where it will be most useful and enjoyable. Have the outdoor area relate to indoors, to the kitchen, and indoor living areas. Take advantage of existing shade trees, or plan for overhead structure for protection from summer rain and sun.

Be certain that the patio location is so placed to take advantage of the prevailing summer breezes, or in a south-southwest exposure. Often, outdoor areas which are on the west, east, north, or one that is protected by walls and fences are unusable in the summer due to the lack of air movement. The patio, too, should be located and planned for privacy and unity to the overall garden design and home. Do not isolate it to itself, but allow it to be a part of the total design.

Make the design simple. Too many angles and complicated shapes and different structural materials will destroy the clean, crisp beauty of the design and may call for extra maintenance and extra cost. A complicated design is usually less functional than a simple one.

Design the patio area with a minimum of maintenance in mind. Consider drainage, choice of materials, surfacing, edging, and the complications of plantings in regard to upkeep and care. Know the plants you choose and their growth requirements. Plan for plantings when you design the patio. Allow open planting pockets in key locations on and near the patio to create a relief from the often harsh structural surfaces and to allow for interest and beauty. Be sure raised planters have adequate drainage for good plant growth. Patios which integrate indoor-outdoor living lose their outdoor appeal when void of plants.

Detailed and accent plantings are offered a key location on or near the patio.

Make the patio design large enough for your family's usage and enjoyment based on your individual family needs. Because functional landscapes are based on individual family needs, it is unadvisable to attempt copying garden or patio designs from popular gardening books and magazines. What works for one family in California will not necessarily adapt for one in Texas. It is, however, good to glean ideas from well designed gardens and adapt them to your own location and landscape needs.

Careful and thoughtful planning of the patio now will pay off in rich dividends of pleasure and beauty for a long time to come.

Dr. Donohue

Balloons in medicine

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I am greatly overweight (5 feet, 3 inches and 190 pounds). I have found a friend of similar circumstances with which to commiserate. She tells me of a rather bizarre weight-loss plan. A doctor puts a balloon in the stomach and blows it up. I guess the principle is fairly obvious, but since she says it is a pretty new technique, I'd like to know a bit more about it. Would you recommend such a step for a person like myself (or my friend)? — S.W.

Balloons seem to be very much "in" of late, as doctors find more and more uses for them, most notably, of course, in clearing away plaque from inside arteries. The gastric (stomach) balloon is a new idea in obesity control. And by obesity I mean overweight that is health or life-threatening. You are in that category.

I think you have a good idea of what happens. The doctor inserts a collapsed balloon into the stomach with a special tube. He then inflates the balloon to its 4-by-5 inch dimensions. It floats free in the stomach cavity to give a feeling of satiety. This permits the patient to adhere to a very strict calorie-restricted diet.

From a study among 100 patients, it was found that some were able to lose up to 75 pounds with balloons in place for 10 months. Others had lesser reductions. The balloon is removed every few months, and, if desired, a replacement inserted.

Most of the patients in the study were twice what their normal weight should have been, but the procedure is approved for some who are only 20 percent overweight.

I cannot recommend or disapprove. Doctors using this method will select patients carefully. Complications from the technique were few, and they include instances of stomach outlet obstruction, requiring balloon removal. A few patients experienced accidental deflation of the balloon, necessitating removal via endoscope (a special tube). In a few, the balloon passed naturally. All in all, it's far from a first-choice answer to obesity.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: How does minoxidil (the blood pressure medicine) grow hair? — I.T.

Apparently, the cream application stimulates hair follicles by expanding skin blood vessels.

Diet Pill Sweeping U.S.

New Super "Dream Pill" Lose Weight As You Sleep!

No Dieting — Eat All You Want

NEWPORT BEACH, Calif. — An amazing new super "dream pill" has recently been developed and perfected that reportedly "guarantees" that you will easily lose up to 10 pounds in 10 days. Best of all, it allows you to "eat as much as you want of your favorite foods and still lose a pound a day or more starting from the very first day until you achieve your ideal weight and figure."

This remarkable new diet pill combines two natural substances which cause adults to lose weight fast by "tricking" the body into acting like a teenager. These nutritional substances, called L-arginine and L-ornithine, stimulate the body's production of growth hormone. Dr. Robert Harris, a specialist in nutritional medicine in Stafford Springs, Connecticut, was recently quoted as explaining: "Growth Hormone may be what's responsible for allowing teenagers to down thousands of calories in hamburgers and other foods and still be thin as a rail."

"Growth Hormone is present in people up through the teenage years, then slowly diminishes with age. But L-arginine and L-ornithine make the body 'think' it belongs to a teenager again, allowing adults to eat as much as they want — and still be thin and wiry."

"Pill Does All The Work" According to the manufacturer, "the pill itself does all the work while you quickly lose weight with NO starvation 'diet menus' to follow, NO calorie counting, NO exercise and NO hunger pangs." The pill is not a drug! It is 100% safe consisting of natural amino acids just like those found in the foods you eat everyday.

Life Extension Authors Confirm Results
Durk Pearson and Sandy Shaw, graduates of MIT and UCLA respectively, introduced these miracle substances to the public in their runaway best selling book, Life Extension. They discovered the weight-loss effects by accident.

Sandy fell and broke her foot and started taking L-arginine because of its well-known healing qualities. Much to her amazement Sandy lost 25 pounds of fat and put on 5 pounds of firm-toned muscle in six weeks. According to Durk's calculations, the pill caused Sandy to lose 400 times as much fat as she would otherwise have lost — without dieting!

Lose Weight While You Sleep
One beautiful thing about these miracle pills is the ease with which they work. You don't have to count calories and you don't have to follow special diets or eat special foods. You don't even have to exercise. The best time to take the pills is just before you go to bed at night. That way, the pounds melt away even as you sleep. You wake up every morning, slimmer, happier and feeling younger!

The super dream pill is already sweeping the country with glowing reports of easy and fast weight loss from formerly overweight people in all walks of life who are now slim, trim, and attractive again.

Extraordinary Guarantee
Place your order now. If you are not completely satisfied with the thinner "new you" simply return the empty container for a full refund of your entire purchase price. No questions asked. Now what could be fairer than that?

You can order a 30 day supply of these remarkable capsules for $19.95 or a 60 day supply for $34.95.

To order simply call Dream Pill TOLL FREE 1-800-453-4903, and use your VISA or MasterCard. Operators are standing by 24 hours a day, seven days a week. If you don't have a VISA or MasterCard, Dream Pill will also accept C.O.D. orders right over the phone! But please don't wait. Order today. You won't risk a thing. ## Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGTER INSTITUTE

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, MARCH 11, 1986

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The early part of the day brings potential benefits by taking an understanding attitude towards others, but soon a confusing influence enters the picture and you need to know all your facts.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) In the morning, use your charm with others to gain your aims, but later do nothing to irritate a prominent person.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) If you are charming with an advisor, you get good results. Put aside that new project for a while during daytime.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) One who has ideas that are different from your own can become an admirer, but don't get involved in any shady affairs.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Make your environment more charming and functional. Don't be off on some new tangent with a person you barely know.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Do only that work which is necessary, and concentrate upon having a good time whether for now or in the near future.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You can handle some home or family affair wisely in the morning, but later don't upset conditions around you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Show your finest ability to a newcomer you want to have join you in a project you've been thinking about.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Put more zest into your regular tasks, which is easy to do now. Forget money matters for a while.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) During spare time in the morning, enjoy a little recreation and postpone an important financial deal.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You may be somewhat confused now, so listen to what kin have to suggest and later go to trusted advisors.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You can be very productive in the morning, but later don't get involved in any secret maneuverings.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Keep plugging away at financial matters in the morning and don't let an advisor depress you later in the day.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she can quickly understand what is new and inventive and can easily go along with such, so don't try to force many of the old-fashioned methods which could confuse your progeny. Much work is in this chart early in life, but later on the mind turns to philosophical ideas.

Red Raiders shock Aggies for title

DALLAS (AP) — They were fifth-seeded, overlooked, and didn't have a player on the first team all-conference.

But the Texas Tech Red Raiders had a coveted prize today no other Southwest Conference basketball team could claim — a bid to the NCAA Tournament.

The Raiders earned an automatic bid from the NCAA the old-fashioned way on Sunday with a 67-63 victory over second-seeded Texas A&M, a team that had whipped the Red Raiders twice during the regular season.

Tech was the lowest seed in history to win the 11-year-old SWC Tournament.

Meanwhile, four other SWC teams — Texas Christian, Southern Methodist, Texas and Texas A&M — got invitations to the National Invitation Tournament, as did Lamar University. The NIT tournament begins Tuesday.

The 17-13 Raiders drew a tough cookie in the first round of the NCAA meet. They'll face high-powered Georgetown of the Big East Conference Thursday night in the Midwestern Regional at Dayton, Ohio.

A&M and Texas Christian were passed over by the NCAA although both had 20-win seasons. Texas, the other tri-champion, had 18 victories.

"Strength of schedule was the determining factor and it hurt the conference," said Frank Windegger, TCU athletic director and a member of the selection committee. "This is a message to teams in the conference to start beefing up their non-conference schedules."

Tech Coach Gerald Myers said the season looked dark for the Raiders when they dropped to 10-12 at one point in the season.

"A month ago I would have never believed we would get this far," said Myers. "This team came farther than any I've ever had."

"We kept pulling together and it just shows what can happen if you don't quit. I couldn't be prouder of our team."

Myers lost all five starters from his 23-8 championship club a year ago.

Tech guard Tony Benford scored 21 points and earned the tournament most valuable player award. Benford was a second team selection on The AP All-SWC team, one of the few he made.

"I'm just kind of in shock," said Benford, a senior from Hobbs, N.M. "I've been shooting good and they kept getting the ball to me. This team really stayed together through some adversity."

Tech is now 21-8 in SWC Tournament games, best of any league team.

Aggie Coach Shelby Metcalf said, "Benford absolutely killed us. He has no flaws in his game. He's a big strong athlete and does it all. He's a complete player."

After winning three games with last-second shots early in the season, Benford went into a slump.

"Tony tried to carry the whole load when the season started," Myers said. "He made mistakes but kept working and became our leader."

Benford also played great defense, holding A&M's top scorer Don Marbury to a 5 for 17 day from the field and 16 points. Marbury had been averaging 22.

"Our progress this year was just amazing and unbelievable," said Myers.

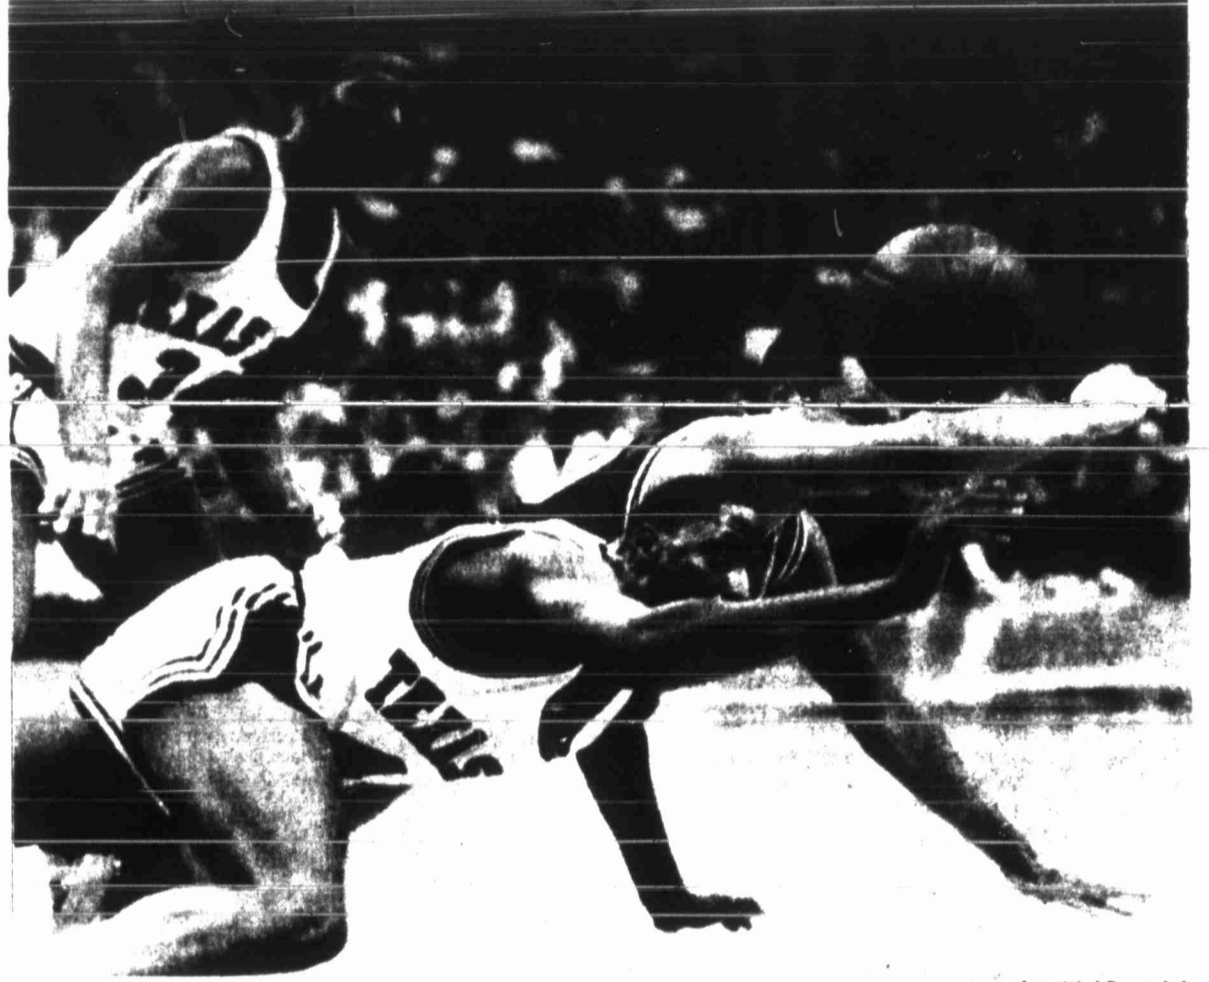

The outcome provided a measure of revenge for Chism, who missed a dunk that cost Tech a game against A&M earlier in the season.

Chism had two slam dunks and hit three free throws as the Red Raiders beat back an Aggie rally.

"We did it," said Chism. "We thought when we came here we might be able to do it. Everybody was overlooking us. I've watched the NCAA playoffs on TV all my life and now I'm going to get to play in one."

Winston Crite scored 15 points for the Aggies, and Jimmie Gilbert had 13 but it wasn't enough for the cold-shooting Aggies.

"They forced us to shoot from the outside and we didn't do that too good," said Metcalf. "They deserved to win. I would have voted for Benford for MVP if I had a vote."

Gary Lewis (10) of Texas A&M and Dewayne Chism (44) of Texas Tech, both dive for the ball during the second half of Sunday's Southwest Conference Post-Season Basketball Classic finals.

Curry destroys Panamanian

FORT WORTH (AP) — Donald Curry, an easy winner in his first defense of the undisputed welterweight championship, said he will be a spectator tonight at the Las Vegas fight of Marvelous Marvin Hagler, the fighter whose middleweight title he's set his sights on now.

Curry knocked out No. 1 contender Eduardo Rodriguez of Panama at 2:29 of the second round Sunday afternoon before an excited, full-house hometown crowd in the 8,600-seat Will Rogers Coliseum.

Negotiations are under way for a fight between Curry and Mike McCallum, the World Boxing Association's 154-pound class champion, at Caesar's Palace in Las Vegas on June 23.

But the 24-year-old Curry left little doubt he's looking at McCallum's junior middleweight title as just a stepping stone in his bid to capture three straight world championships, culminating with Hagler's undisputed middleweight title.

"I am definitely looking forward to fighting Marvin," Curry said after collecting his 20th knockout and raising his record to 25-0. "McCallum first, then Hagler."

His manager, David Gorman, said Curry will hold onto his welterweight title while he pursues the junior middleweight crown. He isn't required to make another welterweight defense for nine months.

Curry brought the partisan crowd to its feet when he hurt Rodriguez with a left hook to the jaw 40 seconds into the second round.

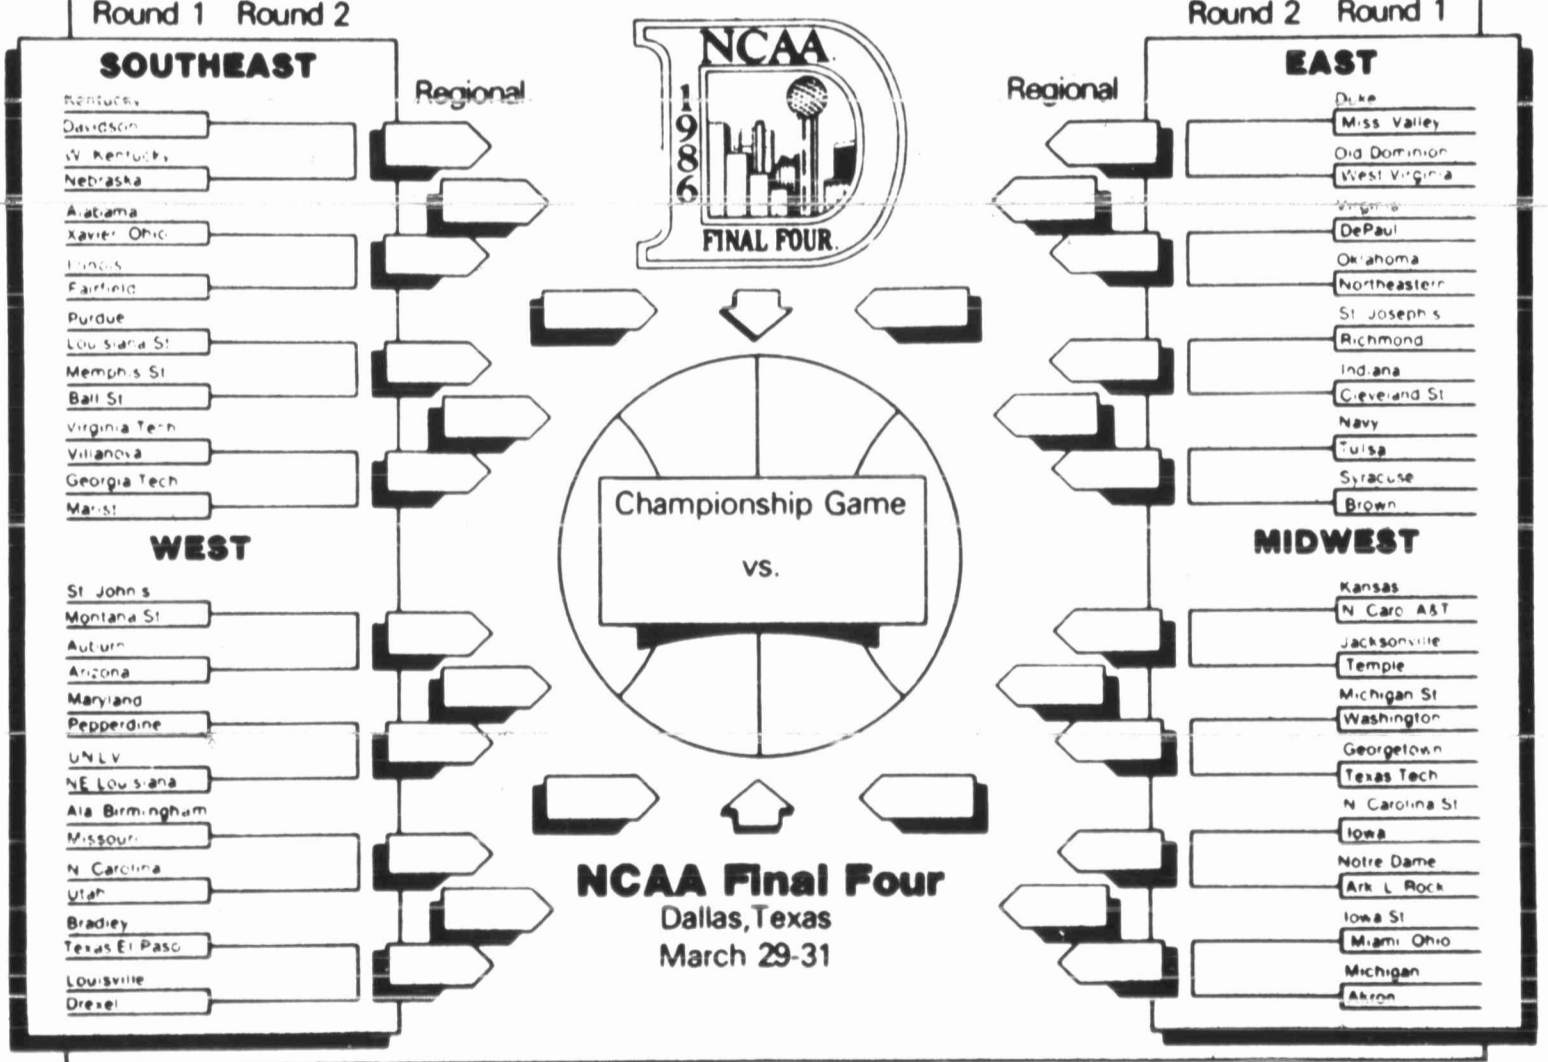

Curry, who weighed 146½, then shook the challenger, who weighed 146½, with several combinations to the head before Rodriguez escaped halfway through the round.

Then, with 50 seconds left in the round, Curry knocked Rodriguez into the ropes with a left-right to the head. Curry, nicknamed the "Texas Cobra" for his quick jabs, then closed in and connected with another left-right that dropped Rodriguez onto his back, ending the fight.

Rodriguez, 26, who brought a record of 20-1, with 13 knockouts, into the bout, was stretched out on the ring for almost five minutes while ring physician James Marr examined him.

Marr said Rodriguez "was out for over two minutes." The fighter finally opened his eyes and moved into a sitting position, and a couple of minutes later finally stood up and left the ring under his own power.
