Mannequins help

DETROIT (AP) - Four-yearold Amanda Cook just wanted to take a close-up look at the mannequin's paper poppy at a trade show. She wasn't expecting the mannequin to blow her a kiss.

"She was frightened," said her mother, Diane, of Carleton. "He scared me a little, too."

Shoppers and other people are seeing increasing numbers of mannequin models, and some retailers say that very still humans help sales.

Men's wear sales went up 100 percent at some Hudson's department stores that used mannequin models as part of a Father's Day promotion last year, said Gretchen Snow, director of events for Hudson's department stores

Overtime pay sparks debate

By SCOTT FITZGERALD

Staff Writer County Commissioner Bill Crooker and County Sheriff A.N. Standard squared off against each other this morning in a heated debate concerning overtime pay for sheriff's deputies. The court was presented with a request from the sheriff's office that some deputies within the department be awarded a combined total of 112 hours of overtime worked in February. Standard explained to commissioners that the overtime was worked when deputies were called in to search for a missing child and Crooker said the sheriff's department was taking on the image of 'Mother, God and Country" and "waving the flag" before the court. He also added that overtime policy is "an insidious thing" that could be taken advantage of easily.

He cited the recent city case of former utilities superintendent William Windham being awarded 815 hours of compensatory time retroactively that resulted in a lump sum payment.

Standard countered Crooker's argument by saying that even though the county has decreased in OVERTIME page 2-A

Murder linked to family feud

A family feud is the possible cause of the Saturday shooting death of Albert Gonzalez Jr., 23, of 1205 Mulberry St., Police Chief Rick Turner said this morning.

However, police have no suspects in the murder, he said.

Color Guard takes state championship

place in the state Class A color guard competition held here

The 24-member guard, fresh from a regional victory last week in Tulsa, Okla., scored 73.7, more than 20 points higher than the second place finisher.

Mariah will compete in the national preliminary meet April 4, in Dayton, Ohio.

The guard is comprised of Big Spring High School, Snyder High School, Texas Tech University and Howard College students ranging in ages from 15 to 20, said Cheri Sparks, the group's Howard College adviser.

The contingent is coached by in-

HOUSTON — Big Spring's structor Tracy Burch and Mariah Color Guard flagged first assistants Victor Mellinger and Gregg Hartfield.

Sparks said the success of the guard can be attributed to the effort put forth by its members. "These kids work hard," she said, while noting they practice nearly every night and on weekends.

"It's something some of these kids have been working on for years," she said, adding that the experience provides the leadership necessary for a quality drill team.

It takes "a lot of discipline and commitment on their part," she said. Last year the contingent took second place in state, she said, while noting that Mariah has a long history of success

Touring Soviet kid pins hope on world peace

NEW YORK (AP) - Soviet schoolgirl Katerina Lycheva said today she wants to meet 'as many American kids as possible" on her peace mission to five U.S. cities

Spending her first full day in the nation's largest city, Katerina appeared on network TV today, then headed for a meeting with American schoolchildren and a visit to the Statue of Liberty

The 11-year-old's visit was prompted by a 1983 Soviet tour by Maine schoolgirl Samantha Smith, who died in a plane crash

"Samantha was very much like our Soviet girls," Katerina said on NBC-TV's "Today" program. "We all saw something very familiar and very nice and she was close to our hearts.'

"I like the people here, I like the kids here a lot. They are so good and kind," she said on the CBS Morning News. "And I've been really welcomed everywhere.

Katerina arrived Sunday in New York from Chicago, accompanied by a 10-year-old San Francisco girl selected to travel with her on the tour, which will take them to Washington, Houston and Los Angeles.

Both girls lighted a candle after they arrived at LaGuardia

"I light this candle because if we don't have peace in the world, we have no world," said Star Rowe.

"I light this candle and I hope the sun will always shine as bright as this candle," Katerina said. "And I think that it will shine to all children in the world, and for this we must

Weekend Rattlesnake Roundup nets $8,500

More than 4,000 people attended the annual Rattlesnake Roundup which raised $8,500 over the weekend, according to spokesman Kirk Kirkham

The roundup, sponsored by Coors and the American Business Club, had "a better turnout than last year," Kirkham said. About 3,000 people attended the event last year and $6,500 was raised, he said.

First place winner for Heaviest Snake was Bill Fletcher of San Angelo for his 8-pound rattler. He was awarded $150 and a trophy. Julian Acosta of Forsan won second place, $75 and a trophy, for his 7-pound snake.

Fifty dollars and a trophy went to both third place winner Johnny Mills of Forsan for his 6-pound 12-ounce rattler and fourth place winner Kenny Copeland of Midland for his 6-pound 51/2-ounce rattler.

Bill Fletcher was also the winner of the Most Rattles competition for a snake that had 17 rattles. He was awarded $50 and a trophy. The Arts and Crafts Show also had "an excellent turnout," Kirkham said today, with more than 55 booths of exhibits.

Oscar night excitement

LOS ANGELES - Star-struck movie fans gathered outside the Los Angeles Music Center overnight for the 58th Academy Award vigil, a chance to grab a glimpse or a snapshot of a screen legend in the flesh.

The faithfuls who crowded the "Artists' Entrance" screeched their approval as such stars as Barbra Streisand, Cher, John Huston and Alan Alda arrived by limousine for Sunday night's less-than glittery rehearsal.

Provocation denied

WASHINGTON - U.S. forces have crossed or approached Col. Moammar Khadafy's 'line of death'' off the Libyan coast numerous times since 1981, and the Navy exercises there are not meant to provoke a military confrontation, Reagan administration officials say.

White House Chief of Staff Donald T. Regan and Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger both said Sunday that U.S. intentions were to declare the right of American ships to pass unmolested through international waters.

Garlic fights cancer

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. - Calcium and the chemical that gives garlic its aroma might help prevent colon cancer by inhibiting early changes in the colon that can lead to the disease, researchers say.

The links are suggested through a method of research that can indicate promising leads in cancer prevention without full-blown experiments that can take years, said one scientist reporting the results.

Proposal looks at stars

WASHINGTON - A presidential panel is proposing an ambitious, $700 billion space program that would put manned settlements on the moon and Mars and vastly expand space travel to perhaps 1 million travelers a day, a published report says.

The National Commission on Space, appointed by President Reagan a year ago, said in its study that it envisions a time within the next half century when outposts on the moon and Mars would become permanent installations furnishing the necessities of life and sustaining exploration, scientific work and resource development, Aviation Week & Space Technology reports in its March 24

Public shortchanged

WASHINGTON — Private hospitals charge higher rates but provide poorer service, according to a study that calls for-profit health care facilities a "growing danger to our health care system.

The National Council of Senior Citizens charged Sunday in a 60-page report that investor-owned hospitals also shortchange the public by failing to serve the poor or contribute to medical education and research.

Marchers shout anti-government slogans in the streets of the southern port city of Pusan, South Korea, Sunday during a raily by the major opposition New Korea Democratic Party to support its drive for constitutional revisions. Signs and sashes carry expressions of support for the opposition campaign.

South Korea

Anti-government platform gains strength

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) - About 20,000 people gathered in Pusan for the largest anti-government rally in six years, and opposition leaders demanded direct presidential elections in policy addresses today to a special session of the National Assembly.

But supporters of President Chun Doo-hwan stood by the president's position that constitutional changes allowing direct presidential elections can be considered only after Chun's term expires and Seoul hosts the 1988 Olympic Games.

Political leaders debated the issue, which has become a rallying point for Chun's opponents, in their policy addresses to the National Assembly. The assembly convened a 20-day special session Friday to debate the proposal which has brought the government and opposition forces to stalemate.

The opposition party and its political allies charge that the present electoral college system unfairly favors those in power and does not reflect the will of

On Sunday, the main opposition New Korea Democratic Party staged the biggest anti-government rally since Chun took power in 1980. A crowd estimated by neutral observers at 20,000 people gathered in a peaceful demonstration in Pusan as the party kicked off a regional signature campaign to support constitu-

One of the government's leading opponents, Kim Young-sam, said in a speech that the overthrow of President Ferdinand E. Marcos in the Philippines last month "gave us a good lesson," and that he hopes Chun pays heed and "will not be a second Marcos.

Kim's call for changes in the 1980 constitution was received enthusiastically by the crowd in the port city. Authorities did not interfere with the rally, which had been well publicized in advance, and police were restrained in their handling of the throng that surged around the meeting site.

In today's plenary session of the National Assembly, New Korea Democratic Party leader Lee Min-woo reiterated his party's calls for a new constitution by the end of this year; a direct, popular presidential election in 1987 to choose a successor to Chun; and hosting the 1988 summer Olympics under the new government.

Lee said his party would boycott any presidential election held before 1988 under the present system.

Lee Man-sup, president of a smaller opposition party, the Korea National Party, supported the proposed constitutional changes

But Roh Tae-woo, chairman of Chun's Democratic Justice Party, termed the call for early changes to the constitution "radical reform" and said the nation's "silent but powerful middle class, by no means supports such radical changes.'

Chun says revising the constitution now would cause unrest at a time when the nation must be united for the Asian Games this fall, the 1988 Olympic games, and the expiration of his term.

The present constitution, enacted in 1980 by the Chun government, stipulates a single, seven-year term for any president, and Chun says he will step down when his term ends in March 1988

However, Lee Min-woo questioned whether the government's interest in keeping the constitution as is until 1989 might not be meant to allow Chun to run for the presidency again. Chun's government reacted harshly when the NKDP launched its signature campaign last month, blocking off party headquarters and placing many key party officials under house arrest. Chun backed off a bit when he met with opposition leaders on Feb. 24, indicating that a peaceful, indoor petition drive could be considered legal.

Snowstorm kills 13

TOKYO — The worst spring snowstorm in Tokyo history killed at least 13 people, caused a train collision in which more than 200 passengers were hurt, and brought the city of 12 million people to a soggy halt.

Maritime Safety Agency officials said they had recovered the bodies of 10 sailors who had been aboard two ships that sank Sunday after being buffetted by winds of more than 54 mph. Air and sea rescue missions were being conducted in the Pacific Ocean south of Tokyo today for one other sailor who still was missing.

Soviet test ban to stay

MOSCOW - The Soviet moratorium on nuclear weapons tests will remain in force at least until March 31 despite the United States' weekend nuclear test, a government news agency said today.

Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev imposed a five-month ban on nuclear tests last Aug. 6, and in January extended it for three more months. He announced earlier this month that the moratorium would be extended beyond March until the United States conducted another test, which it did Saturday beneath the Nevada desert.

Pakistanis voice protest

RAWALPINDI, Pakistan - Tens of thousands of people crowded city streets calling for President Zia ul-Haq's resignation and shouting anti-American slogans in one of the biggest opposition rallies since martial law was lifted Dec. 30.

The Movement for the Restoration of Democracy, an alliance of 11 opposition parties, staged demonstrations throughout the nation Sunday commemorating Pakistan Day, celebrated as independence day here.

Ad campaign falls short of objective

Continental Illinois Bank, which has imposed enough on the American public, is this time taxing only our patience. The annoyance is a new advertising campaign, which is supposed to inspire awe with the revelation that at Continental, "We work hard. We have

One ad shows a forlorn pooch waiting vainly for his master to finally trudge home from the office. One consists of the word "work" printed a couple of hundred times, followed by the punchline: "A list of our 1986 objectives." Another features an empty pinstriped suit - which is how I recall most of the bankers I've dealt with - and informs us, "To a Continental banker, this is a sweatsuit.'

The text of a typical ad expands on the point: "Nobody works harder than the people at the New Continental Illinois ... So if you want a banker who works hard for you, come to the bank where working hard is a way of life.'

Now, hard work may be a new phenomenon at Continental. It probably doesn't take a lot of long hours and elbow grease to buy loans, as the old Continental did, from a banker given to wearing Mickey Mouse ears and drinking beer out of a cowboy boot. Or to apply for a federal bailout when your loan portfolio goes bad, all your depositors head south and your business threatens to collapse.

But to the rest of us, work is pretty routine, not something that deserves the Congressional Medal of Honor. So Continental's selfcongratulation irritates. The news that its bankers now work hard is bound to elicit one of two responses: (1) "So what?" and (2) "It's about time." The more audacious claim, that "nobody works harder," is likely to evoke well-justified skepticism, if not derisive hoots

The people at Continental seem to be enmeshed in an old economic fallacy known as the labor theory of value, which assumes the worth of a product is the sum of the work put into it. In fact, prices — which is to say values - are established by supply and demand. The market rewards those who provide goods and services that buyers want, not those who simply slave away without regard to consumer needs. The unemployment lines are full of people who worked hard at the wrong jobs.

A journalist, to use an especially poignant example, can work 20 hours a day for a month on an article that, if no one wants to publish it, is worth less than the paper it's printed on. On the other hand, the same journalist may be paid a handsome sum to spend 15 minutes on a TV show spouting uninformed that hard work is unnecessary, merely that it's insufficient. I personally don't care if my banker rolls out of bed at noon, spends the lunch hour being marinated in gin and plays golf all afternoon - as long as I get easy terms on loans, high rates on deposits, wellfunctioning cash machines and a roughly accurate monthly statement. If the banker across the street can't match those lures, it won't matter if he stays at his desk until 3 a.m.

Granted, Continental may not really want the business of a smalltimer like me. It's really aiming at businesses. But business executives are even less likely than ordinary consumers to choose a bank because of the appealing image created by its advertisements. Their only question is: What can you do for me? Continental's ads don't tell them.

This campaign may be taken as a variation on Avis's old "We try harder" spiel. The difference is that the Avis line sounded like a resolute pledge to please every customer, while Continental's comes across as an irrelevant and unsubstantiated boast.

So these ads may drive away more customers than they attract. But hard work can be beneficial. If the people at Continental want to find out how, they should get to work on a new ad campaign.

Cost overruns of Stealth bombers are substantial

By JACK ANDERSON and DALE VAN ATTA WASHINGTON — The Air Force's fast-talking salesmen for the super-secret Stealth bomber are winning adherents in Congress by minimizing the plane's astronomical costs and clamping a lid of secrecy on its potentially serious design drawbacks. In one closed hearing after another, insiders have told us, the Air Force hucksters have assured members of Congress that the Stealth bomber will cost about the same as its chief rival, the B-1, which is already in production.

The point of this maneuvering and manipulating is that Congress must soon decide whether to fund the new Stealth program or buy an additional 100 B-1 bombers. Even though the B-1 program is a rarity in defense procurement — ahead of schedule and under anticipated cost — conservatives and liberals alike on Capitol Hill generally like the idea of the futuristic Stealth bomber, which supposedly can penetrate Soviet air defenses by being invisible to

Defense Undersecretary Donald Hicks has told Congress the Pentagon wants a plane that will set the Soviets "back on their rears." What he hasn't told Congress is that likely cost overruns on the Stealth bomber could set the U.S. Treasury back on

The true cost of the Stealth program is a closely held secret. Our associate Donald Goldberg has learned that the Pentagon, in a classified report ordered by Congress, predicts that the 132 Stealth bombers the brass wants will cost $36.6 billion. This is misleading at best, because it is based on 1981 dollars and doesn't include everything

When it comes time to pay for the Stealth bombers, our sources say the real price — including inflation and research and development costs — will be more like $80 billion. And that's not counting possible overruns. Even at $80 billion. Stealth would be the most expensive aircraft project in U.S.

But the chances of cost overruns are high. Unlike the B-1, which flew thousands of hours of tests before full production began, the Stealth will go directly from drawing board to assembly line, bypassing critical tests that might uncover design flaws, according to our sources.

Despite these obvious fiscal dangers, Air Force briefers persist in assuring Congress that the Stealth bomber will cost about the same as the B-1. Here again, the Pentagon is not telling Congress the whole

Research, development, plant construction and worker training for the B-1 have already been bought and paid for. So an additional 100 B-1s would clearly be a lot cheaper to produce than the all-new Stealth with its need for R&D, new plants and worker training.

Our sources estimate the cost of additional B-1 bombers at about $190 million apiece; each Stealth bomber wold cost about $540 million, not including research costs. And the taxpayers would be getting an untested plane rushed into production to meet a political timetable.

Cost aside, insiders insist that the Stealth bomber simply won't be the plane it's cracked up to be. It will be dangerously slow and unstable.

CONFIDENTIAL FILE: Iran has never been known for the humane attitude of its jailers. During the shah's regime, human rights groups regularly protested the brutal treatment of political prisoners, and under the Ayatollah Khomeini the complaints have multiplied. But intelligence analysts have detected some light at the end of the dungeon corridor: Ayatollah Hussein Ali Montazeri, Khomeini's designated successor, reportedly has taken steps toward prison reform. A onetime victim of the shah's less-than-tender turnkeys, Montazeri apparently feels that the Islamic revolution is getting a bad name from its torture chambers.

TWICE VICTIMIZED: Because of their obdurate state senate, an estimated 5,000 victims of asbestosrelated injuries in New York are barred from claiming their share of the $2.5 billion set aside for damage claims by Johns Manville Corp., the former asbestos manufacturer. Six years in a row, the state assembly has passed a "discovery" law that would start the three-year statute of limitations running only upon discovery of asbestos-related disease, which often comes years after exposure. But the senate, reportedly under pressure from other companies that manufacture chemicals with long-range poisonous effects, kills the legislation each year.

MINI-EDITORIAL: The effort of White House aide Pat Buchanan to impugn the patriotism of those members of Congress who oppose aid to the Nicaraguan contras resulted in a richly deserved backfire. Now some of the administration's supporters — and some distinguished media figures who ought to know better are trying to say that Buchanan's vitriolic attack on those who would choose "Ortega and communism" over "Reagan and democracy" didn't really question the patriotism of administration opponents. The truth is, it was a very low blow and ought to be ruled a foul. Even Joe McCarthy was open about his red-baiting.

Inside story of addiction

By AN ANONYMOUS PHOTOGRAPHER (Tim Appel)

No one asks to get hooked. Not making excuses or anything, but I was young and vulnerable to the wickedness of the world. I was satisfied with my little 35mm camera the way it was, taking pictures one frame at a time.

But then came the peer pressure. Guys coming up to me and saying "Say, wanna try this camera with motor drive?" The temptation became too great and eventually I

I enjoyed it. In fact, I craved it. I had to buy an auto-winder for my own camera. I could now blaze away film at some 2 frames per second. It gave me a great rush to do

My friends kept saying, "Don't get yourself mixed up with that type of fast life." But I paid no heed because it was cool.

I never thought it would lead to the heavy stuff. How wrong I was. Two frames per second was too slow. I had to have more. I bought a camera that could go 5 frames per second and began shooting rolls of film without a shot.

Life in the fast lane drove me to the brink. After shooting some 11 rolls of film at a single football game, I realized that my money was getting scarce. After a massive basketball shooting, I'd find myself on a bad trip of developing 8 rolls of film. There was nowhere to turn.

I needed help. I joined the same support group other photographers had joined to control their shooting habits; the college newspaper. In front of our adviser, we made it look like we had cut back on our film consumption, but in private, was a different matter. We would brag in the darkroom of how we'd shoot up 15 rolls on a major feature assignment

After graduation, I was broke and unemployed. I had to go cold turkey on my craving for film consumption.

It was tough going at times, but eventually I learned that there was more to photography than burning up the frames. At last I could lead a normal, productive life.

And now I'm living in the real world again. I can now shoot pictures by concentrating on the subject, instead of motoring off 20 shots and picking the best one. Oh, I still shoot up 10 rolls when I'm around my peers at an event like a pro football game. But I'm not worried about it

I'll never get hooked again.

Talks fail to extricate oil cartel

GENEVA (AP) — A week of OPEC oil talks has done little to raise the cartel's hopes of pushing prices much higher. But it spotlights the internal tensions that leave OPEC almost powerless to act.

They are the same sources of friction that have dogged the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries since the world oil glut began chipping away at prices and confounding OPEC in early 1982.

They help explain why many oil industry analysts see little chance that OPEC can muster the unity to decide in Geneva on common action to lift oil prices back above $20 a

Prices over the past three months have plunged to about $15 a barrel, on average, from nearly twice that level. Alarmed at the pace and depth of the decline, the 13 OPEC oil ministers began deliberations March 16 on ways of reversing the downward spiral.

The fundamental split in OPEC is between a faction of Persian Gulf monarchies, led by Saudi Arabia, and a radical group headed by Iran and the North African Arab states of Libya and Algeria

The Persian Gulf nations, with more oil in the ground and more money in the bank than other OPEC members, want to keep their production relatively high and their prices fairly low. They figure this will keep the world hook ed on their oil well into the 21st century.

The other group, with bigger populations, more foreign debt and smaller oil reserves, wants to tighten the spigots. These countries are eager to get the highest price possible now, since most, if not all, of them will be too oil-poor to export any by the year 2000

The past week's deliberations in Geneva underscored this conflict of interests.

Algeria and the others in its faction pressed for a big cut in OPEC's total production. The Algerians suggested cutting about 3 million barrels a day from OPEC's current output of about 17 million barrels daily

Iran, which usually voices the most extreme positions on OPEC policy, urged that the cartel stop oil production altogether for a month or so, then keep it to no more than 12 million barrels a day.

The Saudi-led faction seemed to have done little more than reject the radicals' proposal. Publicly, the Saudi government said during the course of the talks that it wanted to reach an agreement to limit production and push prices higher

But some delegations at the Geneva talks said they remained unconvinced the Saudis were ready to end the oil-price war they helped engineer last December. Early that month OPEC said it was no longer willing to restrain its production, since oil producers outside its ranks were pumping at full speed and reaping the benefits of high prices that only OPEC was defending.

The cartel said it would battle for a bigger piece of the market, even if it meant oil prices could tumble. Prices did fall, with a vengeance that even OPEC members apparently had not expected.

So shortly after the Geneva talks bewgan, most of the oil ministers made it clear they were ready to back off. They still did not like being squeezed out of the market by competitors such as Britain and Norway. But the price plunge hurt even more.

They invited five independent oil producers to their conference and tried -but failed - to persuade them to cut their production. OPEC said it might cut its output by about 10 percent if Mexico, Malaysia, Egypt, Oman and Angola cut theirs by 20 percent.

"They tried to bully us," said a source who participated in the talks on the non-OPEC side. He spoke afterward on condition of anonymity

That OPEC even found itself pleading with five independent producers is clear evidence that the cartel, whose every move once was feared throughout the oil-importing world, has lost most of its clout.

Whereas it controlled nearly two-thirds of the oil market in its heyday of the late 1970s, OPEC today is struggling to hold barely a third.

Whether it left its marathon Geneva conference with an agreement or not, the cartel was likely to remain hamstrung for years to come by its internal conflicts and sagging financial fortunes.

A spokeswoman for the show said its executive director, Christopher Gilbert, saw Duke in an interview with NBC Nightly News host Tom Brokaw, and with the show idea already in mind, knew the bespectacled Hillsboro native fit the part.

"His (Gilbert's) concept about health is you ought to make it interesting, fun and not at all typical. And that's what I think," said

Duke certainly is not typical. With his rounded, gold-rimmed spectacles, lanky frame, shaggy reddish-brown hair and bushy upper lip, Duke looks more like a rural apothecary than the respected Texas physician he is.

For 3½ years, Duke has drawled the complexity of diseases, remedies and preventatives, a la a nasal twang, for audiences of his 90-second Texas Health Reports featured on local evening newscasts.

Duke's health snippets are proach works. Despite celebrity status, Duke brushes off suggestions that he is going commercial or abandoning his medical profession for TV glitter.

"I don't have any intention of not being a doctor," he said. "I've always wanted to be a doctor. I still want to be a doctor and I always will want to be doctor.

"I'm not a spokesman for Nutrasweet (the show's sponsor), and I'm not a spokesman for Bodywatch. I stand for good health and public education.

In fact, Duke calls himself a 'loner'' who prefers the backroads and mountains to television lights.

"I love to get stranded in the wild. One time I was left on an ice glacier for a week. It was one of the most important times in my life." he said.

Before catching a plane after addressing the Texas Public Health Association meeting on Wednesday, Duke traded his brown loafers for a pair of worn black western

"I'da worn blue jeans if I could'a gotten away with it," said Duke, accent on the vowels.

Duke, founder and president of the Texas Bighorn Society which reintroduced bighorn sheep to Texas and Montana, says he tries to mix his profession and wilderness interests.

"What I think is very important is application of science and technology to the conservation of Duke says his group is now trying to organize a 23,000-acre ranch south of Alpine in the Davis Mountains, which will be used to raise the sheep and serve as a "giant lab to deal with the issues of human invasion.'

He also is the 20th president of the Boone and Crockett Club started by President Theodore Roosevelt and responsible for establishing Yellowstone National Houston's Hermann Hospital Life Flight Operations, a helicopter paramedic program, is another Duke project.

For your garden

Preparing garden soils

The soil in your garden beds is the mainspring, or key, to successful gardening. Spring days will allow the opportunity to prepare soils in anticipation of

The success or health of any plant depends directly on the oil in which the plant is growing. Basically, the soil holds the plant in place in an upright position and provides necessary moisture, oxygen, and food for the plant. As simple as this may seem, many backyard soils do not supply these essentials for proper production, be it in the vegetable garden or flower bed.

The best method of assuring plants of adequate moisture is to incorporate generous amounts of humus or organic materials into the soil. Organic materials such as peatmoss, leafmold, compost, processed bark, and animal manures, are of a coarse texture which insures good soil aeration or oxygen, proper drainage or movement of water through the soil and proper water retention, as well as prevention of soil compaction and oftentimes food for the Proposed planting areas should be well spaded and worked prior to adding organic or humus materials so as to remove all undesirable weeds and grasses and to better work the organic additives into the bed area. The organic material may be spread evenly over the surface of the cultivated soil, then turned in-

The amount of organic material required for a garden bed depends on the conditions of the existing soil. Heavy clay type soils or very sandy soils demand greater amounts of humus or organic materials to insure proper aeration, drainage, and water retention. The amount will depend on the depth and size of the proposed planting area. With experience, the gardener can feel the soil and recognize the desired tilt and soil texture for desirable plant growth. The soil should appear and feel "fluffed" and loose in texture.

Perhaps the most popular and best organic material for soils is sphagnum peat. This material is lsoose and coarse in texture and long-lasting in the soil. Normally, peat is bought in a compressed bale or block. Because of its dry, compressed conditions, it should be spread and fluffed over the bed area, moistened, then worked well into the soil. The average soil will require two to four inches of peat over the soil surface to be spaded in to provide a desirable soil texture.

Animal manures, compost, and leafmold not only provide organic matter, but slowly available food for the plant as well. Because they are not as coarse as peat, usually more is required for a good soil mix. Oftentimes, when available, well rotted manures, compost, or leafmold is added to a peat and soil

Processed barks are available in a number of grades or sizes and are popular and useful as longlasting soil conditioners and decorative mulches.

Commercial fertilizers may also be added when preparing soils in advance of planting, if they are applied at least two weeks prior to planting. The best formula is a complete and balanced fertilizer such as 8-8-8, 10-10-10, or 12-12-12, at the rate of approximately one-half cup per square yard of soil area. Fertilizers, like organic materials, should be well worked and distributed into the prepared soil.

If times does not allow for a fertilizer treatment prior to planting, the wise gardener will wait until plants are well established and growing before applying the raw fertilizer at the same rate.

Prepared annuals, perennials, and vegetable beds should be dug to a 12 to 18-inchd epth. Areas for trees and shrubs should be prepared 8 to 12 inches beyond the width of the plant's existing root area. All planting beds should be raised slightly above normal ground level to allow for settling and to insure sur-

The extra time, expense and labor of properly prepared soils are well worth the effort in good plant growth and production, less soil compaction, and summer watering. The wise gardener abides by the theory: "It is by far best to plant a two-bit plant in a two-dollar hole, than a two-dollar plant in a two-bit

Focus on the family

Master money management

What is your total income? Where does it all go? Can you get more satisfaction from its use? You can answer these questions when you have the information that comes from keeping a record of the money flow into and out of your household. You must keep records for a month to form a workable spending plan. If you have kept accounts before and wish to use that system, fine. if not, try the following suggestions.

Mastering Recordkeeping -Keeping records may not be enoyable to you, but it is necessary. It must be a cooperative effort between all members of your household. The person best qualified should assume major responsibility. However, everyone must cooperate and contribute. To master recordkeeping, first organize a work space. You will need a table and facilities for storing records. Second, develop a recordkeeping system. This is a step-by-step procedure that helps you forecast income, estimate money needed for goals, plan spending, record how money was used, and review family money management. Develop a system to get started. Then, as you use it, make changes if necessary. You might + Keep all cash register tapes and receipts for bills paid in one place (box or drawer) until they can be filed or recorded in a monthly recordkeeping book or on a computer. Be sure that each tape or receipt identifies the amount of money spent and for wht (groceries, personal items, household items).

• Have each person record money spent and its use, then give it to whomever is keeping the mon-

 Decide which family member(s) will pay the bills and record the spending plans and expenditures. Also decide when the recording will be done - weekly, every 2 weeks, or monthly. Accurate plans and records must be kept for all money. Otherwise, you cannot spot leaks and improve your finances

When you have all expenditures for the month, total them by category and record. You might set up 2 charts one for tax deductible items. The non deductible chart would need columns for Food (at home and away) housing, household operation, furniture and equipment, clothing, personal expenses, insurance, transportation, education-recreation - gifts, and

Two heads beat one when deciding to have surgery

DEAR ABBY: Re: the woman who hated her thin legs and inquired about silicone injections to make them more shapely: You advised her to consult three plastic surgeons before making that decision. Very good advice, Abby. I hope she took it.

Seventeen years ago, I consulted a plastic surgeon about the identical problem. My big mistake was consulting only one doctor. He assured me that silicone augmentation to fill out my calves was a simple procedure and involved very little risk.

I went ahead with it, and within a few days I noticed that the silicone had started to run down my ankle area! Not only did it look terrible, it was very painful when bumped. Shortly afterward, this doctor left town suddenly and was not to be found. A few years later, I read in the newspaper that he had been charged with wrongful death and malpractice suits in another state. Now I must wrap my legs with

Ace bandages daily and elevate my legs periodically to keep the silicone out of the ankle area. However, the silicone still gradually migrates down to my ankles.

Please keep repeating your advice to those who inquire about any kind of surgical procedure to get a second opinion. And a third is bet-

SORRY I DIDN'T DEAR SORRY: And I am sorry I didn't repeat this column that ran a year and a half ago:

DEAR ABBY: I am a healthy, active, 46-year-old man whose doctor told me I needed a triple (and possibly a quadruple) bypass operation immediately! It came as a shock to me because I had never had heart trouble of any kind. This news came to me on May 2, 1983. On the following day, I read something in your column that I believe was more than a coincidence. It was as though the good Lord had sent a message to me through you.

I acted on your recommendation and got not only a second opinion, but a third, and both doctors told me I did not need heart surgery. When I told my first doctor about the opinions of the other two doctors, he suggested that since I had so little confidence in his professional judgment, I should find another doctor. I did

It's easy to see why - credit (or blame) for the headlines you titled your column "Second Opinion Likely to Offend Doctor." It's been my experience that asking your original doctor for the name of a second-opinion specialist poses no problem for him. He will simply refer you to someone down the hall, in the same building or belonging to the same country club who will invariably corroborate his own opinion.

I cannot stress enough the importance of seeking out specialists totally independent from one another for second (and third and fourth) opinions in surgical or medical matters. Find a different doctor who will really take an objective look at your case, without regard to ego, fear of loss of control over a patient, his wallet, or any other irrelevant (to you) issues. Bacteria usually a friendly bunch

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I have recently heard that on a restricted diet one may kill off all the intestinal bacteria and this may lead to digestive problems. Could you explain the role and upkeep of these bacteria? - Mr. G.

Let me put aside the diet-related question for the moment and deal with the general question of bacteria in the digestive tract.

Soon after we're born our digestive tract becomes populated with various kinds of bacteria. The farther down the tract you get, the more you find - a relative few in the stomach, more in the small intestine, and hordes of them in the colon (the large intestine). They illustrate the harmony between life forms living next to one another without causing problems, indeed, actually helping each other. Bacteria digest food, break down waste, and make vitamin K, for

There's a name for this special symbiosis — commensalism, which in Latin means "coming together." There are some negatives to the friendly bacteria story, though. For example, they have to be kept in their place (in the intestines), and some of their products may be linked to cancer. friends and serve us well. In fact, animals that have been maintained

systems that don't function

This brings us to your diet question. It is next to impossible to kill all the bacteria simply by altering the diet. The bacteria will, if necessary, survive by feeding off the lining of the digestive tract itself. They really don't need much sustenance. If you let me know the exact nature of the diet you have in mind I might be able to answer more completely. A diet might destroy one kind of bacteria, but not another. In fact, if you kill off one kind you might give others greater opportunity to grow. Certain medicines may do the same Pronounce it KRIP-toe-cock-OHsiss. It's a fungus infection.

The fungus involved is quite widespread in nature and most people exposed to it handle it easily with no effect. But if a person's defenses against infection are weak, the fungus can be a troublemaker. Once breathed into the lungs it can spread via blood to other body organs and do damage. The brain is a favored target, and that's quite serious, of course.

There are drugs effective in fighting the fungus. I hope your friend is recovering from the experience. Sometimes certain illnesses, like cancer, can create the weakened situation where the fungus thrives.

The Metropolitan Guild for Collectible Art has commissioned nationally renowned sculptor Carver Tripp to create a sculpture that captures the raw power and winged majesty of the American Eagle..."Our country's symbol of freedom!" The artist has meticulously carved over 1000 feathers onto the body of "The Golden Eagle". The wings open gracefully to a span of 6 inches and each feather is layered in pure 24K Gold. This is the fine detailing you would expect from the Metropolitan Guild for Collectible Art.

Manning leads KU

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) There was always a piece missing in the Danny Manning puzzle.

Quick and graceful with a sure shot and a penchant for passing, Manning was hailed as the "Second Coming of Magic Johnson," if one could imagine any player at 6-foot-11 doing the things Magic does. At the same time, Manning was criticized for his wandering concentration and his lack of assertiveness

The doubts about whether Manning would ever fully realize his potential may have been laid to rest for good after Kansas' splendid sophomore riddled North Carolina State with six straight baskets Sunday, powering the Jayhawks to a 75-67 basketball victory in the final of the NCAA Midwest Regional and into the Final Four.

Kansas, 35-3, will face top-rated Duke, 36-2, on Saturday. LSU goes against Louisville

"What Danny did today I haven't seen many guys do," said Kansas Coach Larry Brown. "He and Greg (center Greg Dreiling) just took over the game.

Trailing 57-52 with 8:53 left, the Jayhawks were given up for dead by even their loyal fans.

But then some one-sided things started to happen. Wolfpack guard Ernie Myers had given his team its big lead on a layup. He was fouled on the play but missed the free Manning, whose jumper with 10:03 left preceded State's six-point flurry that produced the 57-52 advantage, scored four straight baskets and, after a Washburn free throw, added a follow shot for a 62-58 Javhawks lead.

Then the 7-1 Dreiling, battling his way out of a late-season slump, bulled his way into the middle and scored the Jayhawks' next nine points Brown said he wasn't surprised at the play of either big man. Manning finished with 22 points on 11-of-17 shooting, while Dreiling had 19 points and 12 rebounds.

Manning, a native of North Carolina whose departure from the state created ill feelings, said he was upset with a premature celebration along the North Carolina State sideline after the score went to 57-52.

NIT Final Four ready for action

NEW YORK (AP) — Wyoming forward Fennis Debo, the hottest shooter in the 49th National Invitation Tournament, doesn't count himself among the players and coaches who moan about not being invited to the NCAA championship tournament

"We're trying to prove how good a team we are, but I wasn't upset with not getting an NCAA bid," said Dembo, who leads 23-11 Wyoming against Florida, 19-12, tonight in the opening NIT semifinal at Madison Square Garden. "I don't think we would have made as good a showing as we have in the NIT.

Ohio State, 17-14, meets Louisiana Tech. 19-13, in the second semifinal. The winners meet in the championship game Wednesday at 263-6470.

Dembo, one of four sophomores who join senior Les Bolden in the Cowboys' starting lineup, is averaging 16.5 points per game this season, but has scored 22 or more in six of his last nine outings. Dembo, nicknamed "Buck" by his teammates, scored 24, 23 and 19 points in Wyoming's NIT victories over Texas A&M, Loyola Marymount and Clemson, respectively.

in the NIT for the third consecutive year, but the Gators did not reach New York the other two times. Florida Coach Norm Sloan, who coached North Carolina State to the NCAA title in 1974, breaking a streak of seven straight titles for UCLA, also believes that the NIT is better for the team's program than the NCAA.

Florida is making an appearance

'This is a much more positive thing than if we had been sent to leading scorer with 16 points per Ogden, Utah, and lost in the first round of the NCAA tournament,' Sloan said. "For us to be in the NIT and play three games at home has done more for our program than anything, other than going to the NCAA and reaching the Final 16, could have done. Sloan uses a three-guard starting lineup, including two 6-footers. Vernon Maxwell, a 6-4 sophomore, is the leading scorer with 19.9 points per game, while 6-0 junior Andrew Moten contributes 17.3

Ronnie Montgomery, 6-0, also starts with 6-7 center Kenny Mc-Clary and 6-6 forward Joe Lawrence for the Gators.

That small lineup will be countered by Wyoming's 6-11 sophomore center Eric Leckner, who follows Dembo as the team's

In the other semifinal, Ohio State's victory over Brigham Young last Friday guranteed that Eldon Miller, fired as the Buckeyes' coach effective at the end of the season, will stay at the job for two more games. Even if Ohio State loses to Louisiana Tech, a third-place game will be played Wednesday.

Gary Williams already has been hired as Ohio State's coach for next year, while Miller has signed on with Northern Iowa.

The Buckeyes are led by 7-0 center Brad Sellers, the team Most Valuable Player, averaging 19.8 points. But their leading scorer is 6-5 guard Dennis Hopson, averaging 20.7, who scored 42 against

Duke sinks Navy, 71-50

(AP) — It was just what one would basketball team in the country: a outrebounded like that.

It was thorough, business-like, well orchestrated and, if you'll excuse the use of the word, professional in appearance.

The NCAA East final was all Duke. The 36-2 Blue Devils eased on down the road to Dallas on Sunday, riding a 28-point performance by All-America Johnny Dawkins and dominating the backboards to rout Navy 71-50 at the Brendan Byrne Arena.

The Blue Devils' 20th consecutive victory sent them to Dallas for a matchup on Saturday with the 35-3 Kansas Jayhawks, who captured the Midwest Regional on Sunday by knocking out North Carolina State. Louisville plays LSU in the other semifinal game.

"Right now, I'm so happy," Dawkins said. "It's one step at a time. That's our attitude. We're not subdued. We're happy about being in the Final Four, but we realize we still have work to do. Duke's job against Navy was just about over at halftime despite a woeful 35 percent shooting percentage from the field. The Blue Devils rarely hit any of their initial shots from the field in the opening 20 minutes, but they were deadly on their second and third chances in building a 34-22 lead.

Of the 34 points the Blue Devils scored in the opening half, 20 came on second-chance opportunities.

"This and the DePaul game were two of our better efforts," Duke Coach Mike Krzyzewski said. "If we don't get rebounds, we are losing at the half.'

Duke needed an 18-2 burst over the final 7:18 of the first half to overcome a 20-16 Navy edge. The run was capped by a spectacular reverse dunk by Dawkins off the

"I expected their guards to be really quick, but I didn't expect them to rebound like that," said David Robinson, the talented 6-foot-11 junior center who once again led the Middies, with 23

The first half rebound margin was 34-15 in favor of the Blue Devils and it stood 49-29 at the end of the game.

'We normally send three guys to the boards," Krzyzewski said. "In the last two games we felt we could send four guys to the boards without getting hurt by their fast break. So we sent Dawkins in and kept Tommy (Amaker) back.' Navy managed to cut Duke's lead to 10 points on two occasions early in the second half, but Dawkins hit his first seven shots after intermission to key a 20-9 burst that gave the Blue Devils a 54-31 lead with 11:01 to play.

The Middies never got closer than 15 points the rest of the way as their 16-game winning streak came to a halt and their season ended at

Robinson, the nation's leading rebounder and shot blocker, did not get the usual scoring help from seniors Kylor Whitaker and Vernon Butler, who had a combined average of almost 30 points per

They scored 18 between them against Duke, but only three came in the opening half. Most of the rest came when it didn't matter "We knew we had to keep an eye on David Robinson," said Duke forward Mark Alarie, who scored 18 points. "But we didn't want any of their other players to have a good game. We concentrated very much on stopping Butler.

"Johnny and Tommy concentrated very well on stopping Whitaker," added Alarie. "This allowed us to get a big lead in the first half.

"We got out of our game plan in the end of the first half and we panicked a little," Navy Coach Paul Evans said. "We are not the type of team that is quick enough to press or go man-to-man. We couldn't do that in the last 10 minutes and I'm not sure Mike (Krzyzewski) didn't go into a stall

The top-ranked Texas Lady Longhorns may have last season's semifinals on their minds when they play for a shot at this year's NCAA women's basketball championship.

Four, has other ideas. In fact, CBS, which is televising the championship, has an opportunity to get the No. 1 team against the No. 1 player if Cheryl Miller and her thirdranked Southern California teammates can beat No. 15 Tennessee in the other semifinal Friday night (ESPN)

Western Kentucky became the only team to return from last year's finals when it defeated No. 10 Rutgers, 89-74, in Philadelphia for the East Regional title.

Lillie Mason scored 18 points and grabbed 16 rebounds, while Kami Thomas' outside shooting produced 22 for the Hilltoppers. Regina Howard scored 18, while Sue Wicks had 14 for Rutgers, 29-4. "These kids really wanted to get to Lexington," Sanderford said. "They really played with a purpose. Texas, meanwhile, almost suffered a fourth straight disappointment before gaining the upper hand over No. 11 Mississippi, 66-63, for the Midwest title as Beverly Williams scored 20 points. For a good part of Saturday's game against Mississippi, the Texas women seemed headed for Mississippi, 24-8, with 25 points and 10 rebounds. Tennessee, 24-9, gained its seventh national semifinal and third in the NCAA, by downing Southeastern Conference rival Louisiana State, 67-65, at Iowa City for the Mideast title. "I was very upset with this team at halftime," said Tennessee Coach Pat Head Summitt, who led the U.S. to an Olympic gold medal at Los Angeles in 1984. "You couldn't feel the electricty that you could feel on Thursday." On Thursday the Vols eliminated another SEC rival, No. 2 Georgia, 85-82. Shelly Sexton was a factor in both games. Against No. 9 Louisiana State, 27-6, she scored 17 points in helping the Vols' rally.

In the West, Miller and Cynthia Cooper led USC, 30-4, to a chance to win its third national title in the last four years by beating No. 4 Louisiana Tech, 80-64, at Long Beach, Calif. to avenge an earlier defeat to the Techsters this season. Miller, the tournament MVP, scored 23 points, while Cooper add ed 19. The two played key roles in 1984 when USC won the championship over Tennessee.

"I was most impressed with the way Cheryl blended in with her teammates," Louisiana Tech Coach Leon Barmore said. "The key to their improvement is the play of freshman center Cherie Nelson.

"I'm really happy with our play the last two games and we're ready to go to Lexington," USC Coach Linda Sharp said
