Bombs 'sent a message'

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
AP White House Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House today declared the U.S. military strike against Libyan terrorist targets a success that "struck a blow against terrorism and sent a message" to Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy.

Spokesman Larry Speakes confirmed that American military and diplomatic facilities have taken security precautions across the world, and said it was too early to say whether an attack in Japan was retaliation for the bombings.

Speakes, summed up the White House view in a mid-morning briefing for reporters that provided little new detail on the extent of damage to terrorist facilities in Tripoli or Benghazi.

He did confirm that one Air Force F-111, and its crew of two, remained unaccounted-for and is the subject of a naval and air search.

He said the middle-of-the-night air strikes had "successfully accomplished" their objective. "We're determined to put an end to terrorism and make Khadafy pay the price," he said.

"When we can clearly identify persons responsible for terrorist attacks we will hold them accountable," Speakes said. He repeated statements from Monday night that American intelligence had considerable evidence that Khadafy had planned a series of future anti-American attacks.

"The president said he would be prepared to do it again," Speakes said when asked about the prospect of Libyan retaliation.

He said 5,836 telephone calls to the White House gave the president "an 80 percent approval rating."

"In our assessment we believe we have struck a blow against terrorism and we have sent the message to Khadafy," Speakes said.

Speakes was asked about reports from Japan concerning an explosion at a U.S. military facility and he told reporters in the White House briefing room:

"At 6:10 Eastern time this morning, a truck exploded at the gate of the U.S. facility. Japanese police responded. There was no loss of life or injury. The truck contained rocket launchers which exploded."

He said it was the only such incident at an American facility. Speakes declined to say whether or not the military operation against Libya was complete.

"I don't think it serves any purpose for me to discuss the tactical operations of the United States government in this mission... we have done that (sent a message), now we will wait and see (what Khadafy's reaction is)," he said.

Students react in sharp disagreement

By SPENCER SANDOW
Staff Writer

America's retaliatory strike on Libya was the topic of hot debate in Howard College instructor David King's political science class this morning.

Student reactions were strong, ranging from delight to fear to "disgust."

"We were right," said James Salvato. "There's only so much our country should have to take. We gave them (Libya) what they deserve and we should do it again" if necessary.

George Smith said simply, "Amen!"

But Paul Davis said he thinks the move is "disgusting."

"It was played out in advance even before they crossed the line," he said. He was referring to the "line of death" Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy drew in international waters in the Gulf of Sidra and dared the U.S. to cross.

Davis said the U.S. had to have given orders for the attack as much as five days in advance, and that it didn't wait for evidence Libya was responsible for the terrorist activity before bombing the country.

"I don't want to see our whole country go to war with a cover-up if the real reason is to help our economy," he said.

Roger Stafford said the U.S. should have learned its lesson with Hitler in World War II, indicating the U.S. action was proper.

Deanna Smith said she fears the events will lead to the start of World War III.

But Kristi Wise said, "We're already in war."

"I'm scared — that's all I'll say," she said.

Instructor King said he too was afraid of a war.

Wise said she's also afraid for the Americans that are in Libya. The Soviets are in with the Libyans, said Tony Barrera.

U.S. attacks Libya

This picture transmitted by Libyan news agency JANA is described as showing wreckage from a U.S. jet downed over Tripoli Tuesday morning. The U.S. reported that one attacking F-111 fighter bomber was unaccounted for.

Search for one missing U.S. bomber continues

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. forces are making every effort to locate an F-111 missing in the wake of a lightning strike by American bombers on two Libyan cities, Secretary of Defense Caspar W. Weinberger said today. Eighteen F-111 bombers based in England participated in the raid. Sixteen returned to their bases today. The 17th made an emergency landing at Rota in Spain after an engine overheated, and the 18th was missing. "We are continuing to make every effort to locate the one plane that is still unreported," Weinberger said on ABC's "Good Morning America" show. "We don't think that there were any planes that we know of that were hit by fire. As far as this one plane is concerned, we just don't know what has happened to it," he said. Weinberger said the bomber had been reported missing after it failed to link up with a tanker after the aerial raids. U.S. military bases and embassies around the world went on full alert and girded themselves against terrorist attack today in reaction to the bombing. "From the initial reports, our forces have succeeded in their mission," President Reagan said Monday evening in a nationally broadcast address. There were no immediate official assessments of damage. But it was clear that American officials were preparing U.S. installations for possible retaliation. "I would add that the military installations around the world are also on full alert for attacks — terrorist attacks of any kind from any quarter," Weinberger said Monday night. "All our embassies are on alert, of course," added Secretary of State George Shultz. Weinberger today sidestepped questions about civilian casualties and damage to residential buildings and the French embassy in Tripoli. The secretary said there were military targets very close to the French embassy "that we believe were hit, and we'll have full reports on the damage assessment later this morning." "We don't know what hit it (the embassy) at this point. What we know is that Libyan sources are reporting it and there were also a substantial amount of attempts through machinegun and other local air-defense systems to try to hit the planes. They didn't succeed, but they may have hit a lot of other things." In Tripoli, foreign reporters taken for a tour of one of the city's residential neighborhoods by the Libyan government press office said the back of the French embassy was heavily damaged, and windows were blown out. They also reported five or six heavily damaged civilian houses. Weinberger said the U.S. planes "made every effort to avoid collateral damage," but he added: "There were people of all nationalities working in and around the headquarters of the Libyan terrorist activities and we made that as one of our targets. "One way or another, you have to show that there is some cost to terrorist acts. And that's essentially what the president's decision was to do last night." In other developments this morning, Pentagon spokesman Robert Sims dismissed claims by the Libyan news agency JANA that the American attacks were continuing and that "at least 20" U.S. planes had been shot down. "Those are as false and misleading as all the other reports out of there," the spokesman said flatly.

Air raid leaves many scars on Tripoli area

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — Several buildings in a Tripoli neighborhood lay in ruins after today's early morning U.S. bombing raid. An elderly man in his nightgown was found dead half buried in rubble, and residents feared that relatives might be among the casualties. Foreign reporters who were escorted by government press officers to the upper middle-class neighborhood of Bin Ashur, saw collapsed buildings, shattered cars, spouting water mains and people wandering in a state of angry shock. The reporters were not immediately taken to the raids' military targets. Dr. Fathi Benghazi of the Central Hospital said 60 to 100 people were brought in with wounds, but that many of them had received superficial injuries and had been treated and released. Benghazi said some were admitted but there was no tally of the number seriously injured. Near the damaged neighborhood is a security headquarters that some foreigners said might have been the target of the bombing. Residents said the building, with a tall, red transmitting tower standing atop it was the Central Security Organization. "I think they aimed at that point ... the central security building," said Japanese Ambassador Eiji Tanaka, who was cleaning the damaged porch of his home two blocks from the worst-hit area. More than five hours after the attack, a Greek doctor limped down a street with the help of a uniformed guard. "Those bloody bastards. They put us in the worst condition, they destroyed our house," shouted the doctor, who did not give his name. The Greek said his wife had been wounded and taken to the hospital. He had cuts on his face. He said he had been in Libya for 21 years. Taher Gubbia, a professor of English at Fatah University with a degree from Georgetown University, denounced the Americans who had bombed his neighborhood. "These bloody Americans," he cried. "They say they don't hurt children. My four children and I were in the house. I heard the cries of my children, and I didn't know what to do." Gubbia said all the members of his family got out without injuries, but that he felt dazed. Near the top of a two-story villa, the body of an elderly man was buried in rubble up to his chest. Apparently killed when the roof collapsed, he was wearing a nightgown and one of his hands clutched a bedside table. Several mattresses in one house were soaked with blood, and in another reporters had to step through pools of blood to inspect the damage.

This's how it happened

IN LIBYA: Beginning at about 2 a.m. local time, loud explosions rocked the city. As bombs struck Tripoli, rounds of anti-aircraft tracer shells lit up the sky. Within 10 minutes, all lights were out in some parts of the city. The state radio said the home and headquarters of Col. Moammar Khadafy were hit in the raid. An official said Khadafy was not hurt, but government sources said two of his sons were injured. They provided no details. Libyan media quickly called on its Arab neighbors to attack the United States and its European allies to avenge the raid, which apparently hit a civilian area in Tripoli in addition to military targets. A Libyan government spokesman said civilians were killed in the raid. Libya also claimed 20 U.S. planes were downed in the raid. Foreign reporters saw five or six heavily damaged civilian houses in the 7th of April district, and evidence of at least some casualties. The back of the French Embassy was heavily damaged, and windows were blown out. IN WASHINGTON: White House spokesman Larry Speakes announced that the United States, acting to "pre-empt and discourage" terrorism, carried out a series of air strikes against Libya. He said administration officials had succeeded in tying Khadafy "very directly" to the attack last week at the West Berlin disco, in which an American soldier and a Turkish woman were killed. President Reagan then addressed the nation on television, saying "Today, we have done what we had to do. If necessary, we shall do it again." Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said one Air Force F-111 and its two-man crew were unaccounted for after the raid. He and other Pentagon officials refused to say the missing plane had been shot down. Weinberger said laser-guided and similarly controlled 500- and 2,000-pound bombs were dropped by about 18 F-111 bombers from U.S. bases in England and 13 Navy A-4 and A-7 attack jets from the carriers America and Coral Sea. Jet fighters, refueling tankers and support aircraft accompanied the bombers. IN CONGRESS: Reagan has won praise for ordering air strikes against Libya, but there also is apprehension about what the United States will do if the bombings spark further terrorism. "Once you start down this road, there isn't any turning back," said Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan. While legislators also had concerns over whether they had been adequately consulted, there was nearly unanimous bipartisan support for the decision to strike in retaliation for terrorism against Americans. IN GREAT BRITAIN: Sixteen American F-111 fighter bombers returned to U.S. Air Force bases after raids on Libyan targets. The first jets touched down shortly after 1:30 a.m. EST at Lakenheath, northeast of London, headquarters of the 48th Tactical Fighter Wing, a spokesman said. A few minutes later, a fleet of KC-10 tanker aircraft began landing at the nearby Mildenhall base, headquarters of the U.S. 3rd Air Force, which is the overall U.S. Air Force command for Britain. Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher was reported to have given backing for the U.S. planes to take off from British bases for the raids.

Funeral scene Alice Beecham leans down to comfort her son, Pvt. Robin Beecham, at the funeral of her other son, Sgt. Kenneth Ford. The services for Ford, killed in a terrorist bombing of a West Berlin disco, were held in Detroit Saturday.

ROTA, SPAIN: The national news agency EFE quoted a Defense Ministry spokesman as saying a U.S. Air Force F-111 fighter bomber made an emergency landing at dawn today at a joint Spanish-American naval base. He would not provide details about any proposal for banning oil sales to the United States or other Western countries. Libya itself ships no oil directly to the United States and OPEC as a group supplies about 10 percent of U.S. oil consumption. IN GENEVA: The Libyan oil minister said today he would ask

Khadafy calls for strikes against American targets

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — Col. Moammar Khadafy's government today called on Arab nations to strike American targets worldwide after the nighttime U.S. bombing raid of military targets near the port cities of Tripoli and Benghazi. Libya state radio called it a "cowardly" attack, and said scores of innocent people were killed and residential areas were bombed. Several buildings in downtown Tripoli were blasted to rubble. Khadafy did not appear in public today, did not immediately make any broadcast statements, and there was no indication of his whereabouts. A government official said Khadafy survived the bombing raid. U.S. military bases and embassies around the world were reported on full alert to guard against terrorist attacks. President Reagan said the raid was to retaliate for Libyan-sponsored terrorism, in particular the April 5 bombing at a Berlin nightclub frequented by American soldiers. Eighteen British-based F-111 fighter planes joined 15 A-6 and A-7 U.S. Navy attack jets based on carriers in the Mediterranean and thundered over Libya at 2 a.m. (6 p.m. CST Monday), the Reagan administration said. Anti-aircraft fire could be heard at the time of the bombing raid. It resumed later in the Tripoli area, and a bright blue flash exploded over the harbor, where Libyan naval ships had been seen. There was no immediate explanation for the later activity. By 6:15 a.m., life appeared to be returning to normal in the Libyan capital. Cars drove down the streets and people gathered at shops. The international airport at Tripoli was reported open. Libyan radio monitored in London said the attack caused "extensive destruction" of civilian targets in Benghazi, the North African country's second largest city with about 650,000 people. Homes, schools and a center for disabled people were destroyed, as well as some civilian aircraft at the airport, the broadcast said. The Soviet Union, China and the 101-nation Nonaligned Movement condemned the bombing raid, but Britain's foreign secretary, Sir Geoffrey Howe, said it was "essential." (Pentagon spokesman Robert Sims said 16 of the two-seat F-111s returned to bases in England. One F-111 landed in Spain after reportedly experiencing mechanical trouble, and one plane was unaccounted for. The Libyan government press office today took reporters on a tour of Tripoli's 7th of April residential district, an affluent neighborhood by the French Embassy where five or six civilian houses were heavily damaged. The back of the French Embassy also was damaged, and windows were blown out, but French officials said no one was injured in the embassy. Some foreigners in the damaged neighborhood said a Libyan security headquarters in the area might have been a target.

Secretary of State George Shultz and Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger speak about the U.S. attack on Libya during a news briefing at the White House Monday night. A map showing the route U.S. bombers took from bases in England was used during the briefing.

Congressional review mixed

Harte-Hanks Washington Bureau
WASHINGTON — The U.S. military strike in Libya Monday night drew mixed reviews from Texas congressmen — from Sen. Phil Gramm's commending the president to Sen. Lloyd Bentsen's expressing doubts the bold move will do any good in combating terrorism.

Bentsen, a critic of President Reagan's military posturing in the Mediterranean Sea, said he doubts the strikes by U.S. war planes in Libya will stop terrorism inspired by Moammar Khadafy.

"The president and I agree that Col. Khadafy's been responsible for much of the terrorism in the world today. We agree that we must put a stop to his activities. We disagree, though, on the best way to go about this.

"Unfortunately, I doubt that military strikes are going to stop Khadafy's bringing about acts of terrorism," Bentsen said.

"I believe Khadafy is ripe for a coup and that we should be supporting dissidents in Libya — particularly in the military — and overthrow Khadafy," the Texas Democrat said.

U.S. Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Stamford, said the attack was fully justified in light of evidence that Libya had been involved in the disco bombing in West Berlin.

If Libya responds with further terrorism, "We should hit them again and hit them harder," Stenholm said.

Earlier Monday in a news conference and again during a speech in the Senate, Bentsen called for the Reagan administration to shift from a policy of military muscle flexing to one of providing aid to dissident Libyans.

He said the United States should provide money and intelligence to Libyans who want to overthrow the government.

Bentsen told reporters he saw no need to send U.S. military personnel to Libya.

Gramm, R-Texas, said by its actions Monday in Libya, the United States has set a new policy on terrorism — a policy with which he totally agrees.

"That policy is that any country that trains, supplies or harbors terrorism to attack the United States is going to be held responsible and where we can identify the culprit, we are going to use military power to retaliate.

"I am sorry we have reached the state of affairs that calls for this policy," he said. He praised Reagan for being "deliberate and meticulous in putting together the evidence against Khadafy."

Gramm said that there is overwhelming evidence that Libya was responsible for the attack on American servicemen in West Berlin.

Thatcher faces tough questioning

LONDON (AP) — By using U.S. Air Force bases in Britain to launch today's attack on Libya, President Reagan focused attention on a potent relic of World War II bomber commands.

The question of who controls the bases, never given a full public answer, will face Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher today in Parliament where the opposition Labor Party is certain to demand a thorough explanation of Britain's role in the attack.

Mrs. Thatcher's office refused early comment on the multiple strikes against installations claimed by Reagan to be used by terrorists.

Sometimes called just another U.S. aircraft carrier, Britain is home to just under 30,000 American military personnel, about 300 combat aircraft, seven major air bases, one working base for nuclear-tipped cruise missiles and another cruise base under construction.

The F-111 fighter-bombers that attacked Libya in coordination with U.S. Navy jets from aircraft carriers in the Mediterranean are capable of carrying a wide range of nuclear weapons. With the cruise missiles recently deployed in Britain and other West European countries, the fighter-bombers are a major arm of U.S. nuclear forces abroad.

The Air Force keeps about 150 of the swing-wing supersonic planes at two bases in England — the 48th Tactical Fighter Wing at Lakenheath and the 20th Tactical Fighter Wing at Upper Heyford.

In addition to fighter-bomber versions of the F-111, 12 of the Raven version of the plane, which is designed for electronic warfare are located in Britain.

The F-111 bases are among 64 U.S. installations in Britain, according to a list published by the Ministry of Defense in 1983, when the U.S. military presence became a dramatic political issue with the approaching deployment of cruise missiles. The Labor Party wants U.S. nuclear weapons removed from Britain.

The question of control bedeviled Mrs. Thatcher's government in the argument over deployment of the cruise missiles. Her opposition argued for a "dual-key" arrangement in which Britain would have to approve any U.S. decision to launch cruise missiles.

But then-Defense Secretary Michael Heseltine said dual-key control would be expensive and unnecessary. He said it also implied that Britain did not trust the United States as leader of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

The U.S. air bases, most of which date from World War II when the U.S. Air Force and the Royal Air Force bombed Nazi-held Europe from Britain, are officially listed as RAF bases, though one seldom sees British uniforms after passing their main gates.

Over the weekend the U.S. Air Force in Britain was reinforced with additional KC-10 tanker planes for in-flight refueling. There was speculation that they would be used to help the F-111s fly to Libya, but Air Force spokesmen said they were only part of a NATO maneuver and rejected speculation about an attack on Libya.

British television news reports late Monday, before the attack was announced, showed film of the bases crowded with the giant tanker planes and sentries wearing protective gear against chemical warfare. Camouflage-painted F-111s were shown taking off.

At the same time, British officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, added to the element of surprise by saying that Mrs. Thatcher was reluctant to permit the use of British bases for attacks on Libya.

Mrs. Thatcher was said to have told special U.S. envoy Vernon Walters on Saturday that first the United States would have to prove conclusively that any military action against Libya would be in self-defense.

But in Washington, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said Britain had given approval for use of the bases.

Britain itself has been a victim of Libya-related terrorism, and has identified Libya as a major source of terrorist acts.

Iran warns of reprisal on Americans

Iran warned today of attacks against Americans in retaliation for the U.S. air raid on Libya, China condemned the strike by American warplanes, and Thailand said it was ordering about 30,000 workers out of Libya.

Many U.S. allies had no immediate comment on the raid that occurred early today. On Monday, Common Market foreign ministers signalled their opposition to any U.S. military attack on Libya by urging "restraint on all sides." They also imposed diplomatic sanctions against Libya.

But Britain's foreign secretary, Sir Geoffrey Howe, said today the U.S. raid, lauded partly from bases in Britain, was "essential."

"Are we to stand by and allow terrorism directed by Libyan authorities to continue absolutely unchecked when they have been appealed to by peaceful means through the U.N. Security Council?" Howe said in a radio interview.

However, Neil Kinnock, leader of Britain's opposition Labor Party, condemned the U.S. action, saying in a radio interview with the London Broadcasting Co.: "I am horrified, and I'm sure that people right across Europe and a lot of people in the United States will share that sense of horror, because this is not the way to fight or defeat terrorism."

Iran's Islamic Republic News Agency, monitored in Nicosia, Cyprus, quoted Iranian Prime Minister Hussein Musavi as saying the "U.S. will receive the due response for its stubborn attitude."

"It has been repeatedly announced that an attack against Libya is an attack against the Islamic world, as a result of which U.S. institutions and citizens in the Islamic world would no longer be secure," IRNA quoted Musavi as saying.

Thailand's Labor Department said it was in close contact with the Foreign Ministry in arranging the evacuation of Thai workers in Libya, who number about 30,000. Labor officials did not say where the workers would be evacuated to, or give any other details.

A statement from the Chinese Foreign Ministry said the Peking government is "against encroachment upon the territory of a sovereign state under the pretext of striking terrorism."

In Moscow, a commentary by political news analyst Vladimir Goncharov in the official Soviet news agency Tass said the United States "has started speaking in its true tongue — the tongue of bombs, flames and death."

Goncharov said, "American imperialism has perpetrated a new bloody crime" and then referred to U.S. actions in Vietnam, Nicaragua and Grenada.

In a statement broadcast on Dutch radio today and monitored in London, Dutch Foreign Minister Hans van den Broek said he deplored the U.S. attack "because the 12 European Community (Common Market) countries had made efforts to achieve a political solution and to prevent a military escalation."

Australia's prime minister, Robert Hawke, called on Libya to renounce "recourse to terrorism," but urged Khadafy and Washington to suspend hostilities.

In a statement released by his office, Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney said his government "has been fully consulted by the United States all along and was notified in advance of its intentions with respect to Libya."

"We accept President Reagan's statement that Libya was involved in the perpetration of terrorist attacks," Mulroney said.

In Seoul, Ministry of Foreign Affairs officials privately expressed concern for the safety of an estimated 21,000 South Koreans in Libya, many of whom live in Tripoli and Benghazi, where the U.S. attacks were made.

Japanese Foreign Minister Shintaro Abe, on a three-day visit to Washington with Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone, was quoted as saying his country is watching developments and hopes "the situation will not worsen and expand."

A Foreign Ministry official in Tokyo also quoted Abe as saying, "though I have had no immediate details, the United States may have had reasons for the military action against Libya as it is explained that the measure was taken for self-defense."

Soviet media condemns air strike

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet media today said the U.S. air strike on Libya was a "barbarous attack" that caused dozens of civilian casualties, and dismissed charges of Libyan involvement in terrorism.

Swedish Prime Minister Ingvar Carlsson said after meeting today with Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev that the Soviet leader expressed "strong concern" about the situation in Libya. He refused to provide further details.

But there was no official government statement on the attacks, nor any hint at what action, if any, the Kremlin would take in support of Libya.

The official news agency Tass said it was too early to consider the consequences of the attack. "But the infamous action launched by the American politicians and military will certainly end in ultimate failure."

Soviet officials have skirted questions about a possible Soviet reaction to an American attack on Libya.

In Geneva, however, a top Soviet disarmament official said the U.S.

attack was "an act of war" which will have a very negative impact on U.S.-Soviet relations.

Viktor Issraelyan, chief Soviet delegate to the 40-nation Conference on Disarmament, told a news conference that Moscow had "tried in quiet talks, with quiet diplomacy, to convince the United States to abstain from any actions like this one."

"I have to confess we failed," Issraelyan said. "Many wars have started with acts like that. Theoretically one cannot exclude" that the action might lead to World War III, he said.

On Monday, First Deputy Foreign Minister Georgy Kornienko said Soviet and American diplomats had been in contact about Libya but that it would be "counterproductive" to reveal whether the Kremlin had made any warnings about U.S. military action.

Tass reported from Tripoli that a Soviet delegation headed by Konstantin Katushev, head of the state committee for foreign economic relations, had concluded trade talks with Libyan officials on Monday.

It said Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy had given Katushev a message for Gorbachev, but did not say whether Katushev had left Libya.

Tass issued a stream of short bulletins and flashes on the U.S. attack, starting nearly two hours after the White House announced the raid at 7 p.m. EST Monday.

The bulletins quoted Libyan radio reports that members of Khadafy's family were injured and that anti-aircraft forces shot down three American planes.

In a longer dispatch from Tripoli, Tass said U.S. planes "bombed twice the residential blocks of the Libyan capital and of the city of Benghazi. Among civilians, there are tens of killed and wounded, including foreigners."

Tripoli correspondent Georgy Shelekov said the attack violated the U.N. Charter and that the U.S. administration used as a pretext for the raid "unfounded accusations against Libya that it is involved in terrorism."

Writing from Washington, Tass correspondent Nikolai Turkatenko said "the United States made a barbarous attack on Libya ..."

"In a nationwide address, President Reagan tried to justify the direct armed aggression ... with assertions that the U.S.A. was ostensibly fighting terrorism and that the act was taken in 'self-defense.'" Turkatenko wrote.

State-run radio Moscow said the U.S. attack "ignores the wishes" of American allies in western Europe and noted that European Economic Community foreign ministers had called for restraint in the Mediterranean.

It did not report that the EEC also said Libya was "clearly implicated" in terrorism and ordered diplomatic sanctions against it.

Tass analyst Vladimir Goncharov likened the air raids to the U.S. invasion of Grenada, support for Nicaraguan rebels and the Vietnam War.

"American imperialism has perpetrated a new bloody crime: from words ... Washington has moved to naked aggression," he said.

Commissioner says county won't hire weights officer

By DOUG BAUM
 Colorado City Correspondent

COLORADO CITY — Several people who said they represented oilfield contractors expressed fears Monday over speculation that Mitchell County might hire a weights and license officer.

County Commissioner Johnny Shackelford said "There's nothing to this rumor. We have our weights man here in the county and we're having good cooperation from all of the truckers." He added that the commissioners could see "no reason to expend county funds to hire a weight man."

"We have the authority, as do our sheriffs, to ask truckers not to cross bridges. We're told how much weight they can carry and these trucks are liable to repair any bridge they tear up," Shackelford said.

Also brought up at Monday's meeting was the road and bridge fund. "We're spending all the money we can afford to at this time," Shackelford replied to concern over the condition of some county roads.

Stanton teacher is selected to office by educator group

Patty Ruth, third-grade teacher at Stanton Elementary School, was elected secretary of the Association of Texas Professional Educators at the sixth ATPE Convention here Thursday through Saturday.

Ruth has been with the Stanton school system six of her 15 years as a teacher. She has been active in ATPE since it organized six years ago.

ATPE is a non-union teacher organization with 43,000 members statewide.

About 1,000 educators from across the state participated in the convention which heard gubernatorial candidates Sheila Bilyeu, Andrew Briscoe and Don Crowder, Democrats; and Bill Clements, Kent Hance and Tom Loeffler, Republicans. Linda Gale White spoke on behalf of her husband, Gov. Mark White.

VA, prison camp to hear entertainers' performance

The Katie Brooks Show will perform for the Veterans Administration Medical Center and the Big Spring Federal Prison Camp Wednesday at 7 p.m. at the prison auditorium.

The show is made up of five entertainers who sing a variety of songs which appeal to hospitalized veterans, according to a news release. It is one of three groups touring VA centers across the country.

The performance is sponsored by the BVL Fund, a non-profit organization administered by the National Bowling Council; the Bowlers of America charity for hospitalized veterans and Recreation Inc., which replaced the United Services Organization (USO) as Veterans Administration programming agent for live entertainment. Performances have been made at more than 156 VA hospitals over the past two years.

All proceeds from the sale will go to benefit the patients at Big Spring State Hospital.

Free stress kit is offered

A free take-home stress kit is being distributed by Medicine Shoppe pharmacy, 1001 S. Gregg, Thursday through Saturday as part of the store's second National Stress Program.

The kit includes a 40-question stress test, answer key, personal stress profile and an eight-page "Coping With Stress" booklet.

St. Louis University's Stress Management Group developed the stress kit. According to the American Academy of Family Physicians, stress is linked to two-thirds of all doctor's visits and six of the leading causes of death.

Commissioners nix holiday

County employees hoping to have Monday, San Jacinto Day, off as a holiday, had those hopes dashed Monday as the county commissioners decided against allowing workers to take off.

Indications are that state and school employees will have the day as a holiday and county workers had hoped for the same.

The commissioners weighed the fact that some county staff will be needed Monday because the liquor-by-the-drink petition is due that day. The commissioners said it would not be fair to make some employees work while giving others a paid holiday.

The court also held a public hearing on the county's budget for collecting taxes for the Big Spring Independent School District.

Don Crockett, business director for the school system, reviewed the budget and found it acceptable, the commissioners said.

Also the court approved this year's summer hiring plan for four area high school youths.

The program will pay the students $4.20 per hour to serve on a supervised county cleanup crew during the summer.

Texans cheer U.S. bombing

By The Associated Press

Texans at home applauded the U.S. bombing of strategic sites in Libya for terrorist acts against American citizens, but some questioned whether the raids will end terrorist activity.

Many who fear reprisals by Libyan Col. Moammar Khadafy said it is now the terrorists' next move and their target is uncertain. But one Texan who has defied President Reagan's order to leave Libya said Reagan was "insane" for ordering the attacks.

A random poll conducted by the Dallas Morning News Monday night showed 75.9 percent of respondents in favor of the air strikes. But only 48 percent of those polled said they believe the air strikes will stop future terrorism.

The air strikes were opposed by 13.4 percent of those polled, and 10.7 percent of respondents had no opinion.

In a copyright story Tuesday, the newspaper reported 30.6 percent of respondents said they do not believe the strikes will curb terrorist activity and 21.4 percent had no opinion.

The poll questioned 702 people selected at random from Dallas, Tarrant, Collin and Denton counties and has a margin of error of no more than plus or minus 4 percentage points.

The poll showed a slight difference between male and female respondents, with 81 percent of the men supporting Reagan's actions compared to 70.9 percent of the women.

Much of the reaction across Texas indicated a growing frustration, starting with Vietnam and building up through the Iranian hostage situation and subsequent terrorist attacks.

"It's about time we did something," Jessica Mowad of El Paso said Monday. "We can't just let people like Khadafy tell us what to do."

British vie to buy an airport condo

Since the Reagan Administration has put parts of the United States up for sale, everyone is bidding on our more valuable properties. A British company has tendered an offer through the N.M. Rothschild Bank to buy Dulles and National airports. The Brits are willing to pay $1 billion. This seems like a lot of money if you're thinking landing strips. But it's a spit in the bucket if you're talking real estate.

Jeff Doranz, America's leading developer, hopes to outbid the British for the two airports. He believes that air terminals have a great untapped potential for mass housing.

"If you bought Dulles and National airports, would you tear down the present terminals?" I asked him.

"On the contrary, the terminals are very decorative and fit in with our housing and shopping architecture."

"Will you still permit planes to take off and land?"

"We will not only permit it, but encourage it. What we'll be selling with our condominiums is access to the airports. We're aiming our sales at the person who is always on an airplane. As a matter of fact we want to put flashing signs at the ends of the runways which will say, 'If you lived here you'd be home now.'"

"Where on the field do you plan to construct your housing developments?"

He took out his blueprints. "Right here, along both sides of the runway. We want to make this place a family community. On warm nights we hope people will sit in their back yards, drink beer and wave at the passengers as they whiz by."

"The houses don't leave much room for the pilots to land," I pointed out.

"The pilots don't need much room as long as the town house gaslights act as beacons for them."

"Will the frightful noise be a negative factor for your homeowners?"

Doranz said, "Why should it be?"

Residents will have pride of ownership in what the airports do. When they hear a roar overhead they'll sleep better knowing People's Express is bringing another payload safely home.

I studied Doranz' blueprints. "What's this circle located in the middle of the runway at National Airport?"

"That's the golf course."

"You are seriously building a golf course on the National runway?"

"Where would you build one if you owned an airport? As the primary developers we don't have much space to work with. We have the Potomac on one side and this highway on the other. The only place for golf links is here, unless the government wants to sell us 1-95."

"How do you play golf with the planes taxiing up and down all day long?"

"Golfers who buy into the development will have priority over the planes. Our flight tower will be instructed to hold up on all landings and takeoffs until the members play through."

"Where are you going to put the shopping center?"

"Here on the first three floors of our 40-story hotel and office tower. We have to build up because we can't spread out."

"Does that mean you will raze all these giant repair hangars?"

"Of course not. We're just going to move the planes out and the cars in. Airplane hangars make marvelous parking garages for automobiles. When you buy a terminal you have to use every inch of the ground for revenue. The reason airports are losing money these days is they spend too much on servicing planes."

"Tell me the truth, Doranz. If you buy National and Dulles airports from the government, will you still allow air traffic to use them?"

"We will for the time being. But all bets are off if we need another golf course."

Constitution commission serves only to generate controversy

By JACK ANDERSON and JOSEPH SPEAR
WASHINGTON — In nearly two years of bureaucratic wheel-spinning, the Commission on the Bicentennial of the United States Constitution has yet to accomplish anything more substantial than creating an occasional controversy.

First the commission angered the press and other interested parties by closing its meetings to the public. Then, as we reported recently, historians were outraged at a commission staff proposal to erect a $150 million monument to the Constitution on the already overbuilt Mall in Washington — even though the precious document's existing repository, the National Archives, is badly in need of repairs.

Now the commission is beset by rumors of another strange plan: sending an actual page of the Constitution aloft in the space shuttle.

A commission spokesman told our associate Donald Goldberg he had no knowledge of such a proposal, but added, "That doesn't mean it didn't happen." National Archives officials acknowledged having heard the bizarre rumor, but no memo or formal proposal was ever received from the commission or the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

But an internal Archives memo indicates the idea was taken seriously, if only for a short time.

"This is not to say that NASA was not interested in the idea," the memo states in reference to a Dec. 10 interagency meeting sponsored by the commission. "At that meeting a woman representing NASA suggested that her agency might like to borrow a page of the Constitution to send up in the space shuttle. ... There was no discussion of her offhand remark."

According to the Archives memo and interviews with a number of officials, the commission prepared a fall-back position for a spaced-out Constitution: sending posters of the document up in the shuttle if Archives declined to make the real thing available.

The proposal almost got off the ground. Commission staffers contacted Archives production officials about the possibility of obtaining 100 copies of the Constitution poster that tourists have been buying for years. The posters would be sent up in the shuttle, then autographed by the astronauts and "other dignitaries" on the shuttle's return.

The signed posters would be distributed to state governors for display in their capitol buildings; commission members would also get copies for their recreation room or office wall. ColorTone Press, a Washington printer, was contacted about providing the posters and agreed to do it for free.

Unfortunately, the posters are printed on heavy stock, and would have taken up too much room. Officials could not say whether consideration was given to an obvious alternative: printing smaller, lighter posters.

Archives officials say that's the last they heard about the aborted project. "To the best of our knowledge," the memo writers stated with evident relief, "that is the extent of (Archives') involvement in the 'Constitution in Space' fiasco."

WHAT'S IN A NAME: Henry E. Hudson, county prosecutor in the Washington suburb of Arlington, Va., has been nominated for a U.S. attorney's opening by President Reagan. Local police admirably dubbed him "Hangin' Henry" for his dogged pursuit of crooks, while civil liberties activists have been upset by his anti-pornography zeal, which led to the removal of soft-core magazines from local stores. Would Hudson's conservative fans be shocked to learn that he is a charter member of the Hookers Club, made up of Arlington cops and prosecutors? No cause for alarm; it's a fishing club he has belonged to for more than 10 years.

UNDER THE DOME: One reason so many members of Congress are opposed to aid for the Nicaraguan contras is that, no matter how staunchly anti-communist the rebels may be, they're not the kind of people you'd want to leave your wallet with for safekeeping. The General Accounting Office recently reported that it had been unable to trace tens of millions of dollars given to the contras over the past five years. But our sources say the auditors' disclosure of what actually happened to the millions was censored out of the final report. "They stole it," one source said of the contras. "But they couldn't put that in the report."

MINI-EDITORIAL: Will wonders never cease? A high Justice Department official has actually admitted that it was a mistake to pay a consultant to read sexually explicit magazines and report on their treatment of children in articles and cartoons. A $734,371 mistake, it was. When we broke the story last year, Justice officials stoutly denied that it was a waste of the taxpayers' money to pay people to read Playboy, Hustler and Penthouse looking for kiddie porn. We're gratified that the bureaucrats have finally come around to our view, but frankly, we'd rather they'd had their second thoughts before spending the money in the first place.

Pets are good for people

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I am elderly and live alone, and I get a great deal of comfort and companionship from my two pets. Do you think there is anything wrong in that, and does the Bible say anything about pets? — Mrs. H.D.

DEAR MRS. H.D.: The Bible mentions pets, and it is clear that people in Bible times had various animals as pets. In the book of Job (which many scholars believe may be the oldest book in the Bible), God speaks about a large ferocious animal (perhaps a crocodile) and then asks, "Can you make a pet of him like a bird or put him on a leash for your girls?" (Job 41:5) — thus indicating pets were common and accepted even then.

When the prophet Nathan rebuked David for his sin with Bathsheba, he told a parable about a poor man who had a lamb that "grew up with him and his children. It shared his food, drank from his cup and even slept in his arms. It was like a daughter to him" (2 Samuel 12:3). The Bible also underlines our responsibility to take care of animals: "A righteous man cares for the needs of his animal" (Proverbs 12:10).

Be thankful, therefore, for what your pets mean to you. At the same time, let me caution you not to let them become the center of your attention and take the place in your life that properly belongs to other people and to God.

For example, although it may be hard for you to do everything you used to do, ask God to help you reach out to other people who may also be lonely, or who need the wisdom and love you can give. Even if it is mainly through a letter, or by praying for them, you can help others.

In addition, realize that you are never alone if Christ is in your heart, and let these years be ones in which you grow closer to Him. If you have never opened your heart to Christ, take that step of commitment today. He loves you, and He wants you to know the joy of his presence every day.

Drinking's worse than cigarettes

To the editor: My hat off to the lady that wrote you the 4-8-add. I was asked to sign the petition for liquor by the drink. That was Saturday, 5th at the 18th St. Fire Station "outside." I told them I would not. But if it came up for a vote I would vote against it.

They say cigarettes kill more people than anything. I say that I don't believe that. Did you ever hear of someone smoking 20 cigarettes, getting a car or a gun and going out and killing a lot of people because of the cigarettes? "Drink 20 beers yes" it could happen and does.

I quit drinking alcohol in 1975. I quit smoking 1983. I have 2 sons one daughter and 3 grandchildren. I wish they did not do either. But I rather see them smoke than drink! When they smoke they hurt themselves more than anyone else. But when they drink they hurt everyone that loves them and others too.

Reagan honors teacher

WASHINGTON — Guy R. Doud, the 1986 Teacher of the Year, believes education makes society a better place to live in.

Doud, who was honored Monday at the White House, said he was inspired to enter the profession because his own teachers transformed him from a "fat little boy with very low self-esteem" into a teacher whose guiding philosophy is, "who I teach is always more important than what I teach."

President Reagan presented Doud with a crystal apple during a ceremony honoring the teacher.

House to discuss aid

WASHINGTON — President Reagan and supporters of his plan to aid the Nicaraguan rebels are trying to defeat a move by Democratic opponents that would tie the $100 million package to an unrelated spending bill that may be vetoed by the president.

Reagan denounced the move on Monday as "subterfuge and backroom deals" and Republican leaders in the Democratic-controlled House said they would try to separate the two issues.

The House was scheduled today to again take up Reagan's plan to provide aid to the Contras fighting Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government.

Shuttle debris salvaged

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — A huge piece of Challenger wreckage with a 2-foot-square hole burned through its steel casing is the most important piece of debris recovered because it may show why a joint failed and caused the shuttle explosion.

The two-ton section contains the portion of the joint that ruptured and spewed flame 15 seconds before the Jan. 28 tragedy that killed seven astronauts.

The Navy reported Monday that the salvage ship Stena Workhorse had recovered the 10-by-20-foot chunk Sunday in 650-foot-deep water 40 miles offshore.

Tax deadline is today

WASHINGTON — Midnight is the deadline for most Americans to settle accounts with Uncle Sam for another year, but a private study shows the average worker will have to put in another 15 days on the job before reaching "Tax Freedom Day 1986."

Perhaps 10 million couples and individuals waited until the final day of the tax-filing season to drop their returns into the mailbox. The Internal Revenue Service estimates another 4.4 million were taking automatic four-month extensions. Some were leaving the country today, which won them an extension to June 16. And still others were simply planning to miss the deadline and pay a penalty.

The great majority of the 104 million couples and individuals who are expected to file returns this year had done so before the last-minute crush.

Alabama sweep sidetracked by Strait

BUENA PARK, Calif. (AP) — Singer George Strait's two awards prevented another sweep by Alabama at the Academy of Country Music Awards, but the quartet won entertainer of the year and top vocal group for the fifth straight year.

Strait won the album of the year award Monday night and was named top male vocalist, an award he also won last year.

Alabama's two awards gave the group a record 14 "Hat" trophies.

"It's probably more important than the first one, because we've outdone ourselves," Alabama member Jeff Cook said backstage at the end of the nationally televised show from Knott's Berry Farm.

Strait said he was stunned to win the top male vocalist again.

"I never expected this two years in a row," Strait said after "Does Ft. Worth Ever Cross Your Mind?" was named best album. "I really didn't think I was going to win, but I'll take it."

Ronnie Milsap's "Lost in the Fifties," a nostalgic mix of country and doo-wop, won song of the year. Earlier this year, Milsap won a best country male vocal Grammy for the same tune.

"I knew I loved it when I heard it," Milsap said of the song. "It's like a page out of my life when I was younger."

Milsap, who is blind, read Reba McEntire's name in Braille after opening the envelope for top female vocalist award.

"It's more nerve-racking, because once you win it you want another one," said Miss McEntire.

Libya pushes oil ban

GENEVA — The Libyan oil minister said today he would ask an OPEC conference to consider imposing an embargo on oil shipments to the United States in response to American military strikes against Libya.

Fawzi Shakshuki was asked by reporters in a Geneva hotel whether he would ask his OPEC partners for an oil embargo in retaliation for the U.S. air strikes against Libya early today. He replied: "We did ask it one time. We did ask it." Asked if he would renew the call, he said, "Yes, we will ask it again."

He would not provide details about any proposal for banning oil sales to the United States or other Western countries. Libya itself ships no oil directly to the United States and OPEC as a group supplies about 10 percent of U.S. oil consumption.

Duvalier's assets frozen

BERN, Switzerland — Swiss authorities announced today they have moved to freeze any assets that deposed President Jean-Claude Duvalier of Haiti might have in Switzerland.

The action was requested today by the new Haitian government in a telex to the Swiss Federal Police, a Justice Ministry statement said.

Haiti asked for a freeze on any Duvalier accounts in banks in Geneva, Zurich and Lausanne, the statement said. It did not list the banks or how much money was believed involved.

Crank mail spills hatred

VIENNA, Austria — The Jewish Center here recently received an anonymous postcard addressed to the "Jewish Swine Department," advising Austrian Jews to clear out for Israel and adding, "Hitler should have gassed you all."

Jewish community leaders say prominent Jews are being harassed by a flood of anonymous telephone threats, and some parents have begun escorting their children to religious instruction out of fear a Jewish school bus might become a target of violence.

OPEC ministers meet

GENEVA — OPEC oil ministers gather today for a new round of talks on ways to boost oil prices, but industry analysts said they saw little chance of a meaningful agreement.

Crude oil prices on the open market fell sharply Monday, one telltale sign that oil traders doubted OPEC could reach an accord. May contracts for the most popular grade of American oil fell 64 cents a barrel, to $12.97, in light trading on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Oil industry sources in London who spoke on condition they not be identified quoted Kuwait's oil minister as saying Monday that he held out little hope the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries could resolve its differences soon.

Tributes paid to slain Miami officer

MIAMI (AP) — Hundreds of law officers, their badges banded in black, filled a small church as the FBI eulogized one of its own slain in the bureau's bloodiest day.

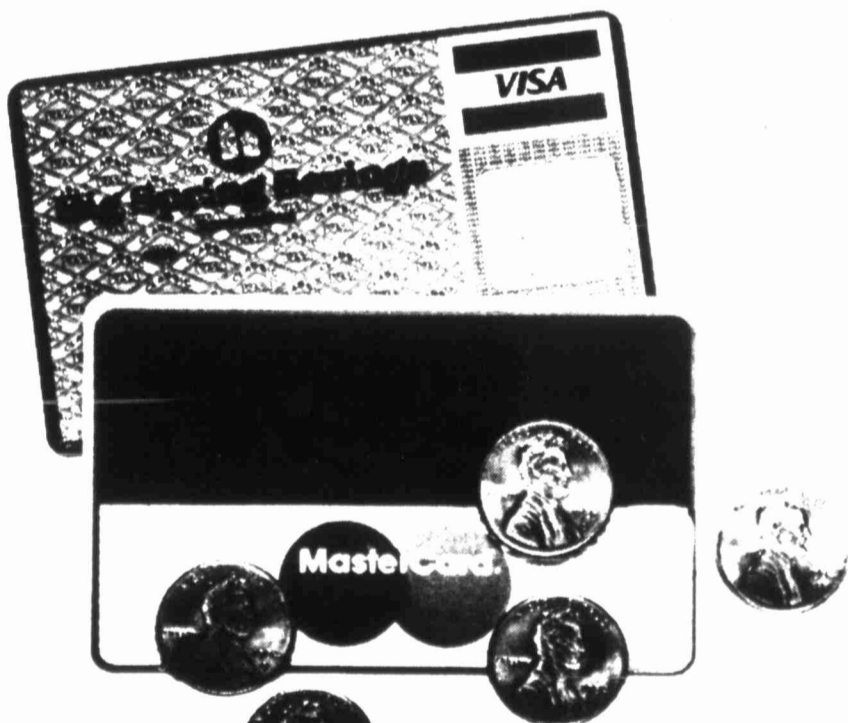

FBI Director William Webster, who flew by helicopter to visit two hospitals where wounded agents are recovering, joined about 1,500 others for the funeral of Benjamin

J. Grogan, 53. Webster planned to attend the funeral today in Charleston, W.Va., of Gerald Dove, the other agent killed in the shootout Friday that also left two robbery suspects dead and five other agents wounded.

Webster, who met privately with Grogan's widow after the Roman Catholic service, vowed an intensive investigation of the two suspects, William Matix, 34, and Michael Platt, 32.

"We have not yet connected them to anyone else," Webster said. "Before we're through, we going to know everything about them from the time they were born to the time they died."

By the Associated Press
NEW YORK (AP) — Actress CATHERINE OXENBERG says Richard Burton "sparked the fantasy of acting" in her as a youngster, when he dated her mother.

"He was a brilliant man and I was fascinated by him. We'd sit for hours and he'd teach me crossword puzzles and coach me in Shakespeare for school," the "Dynasty" star said in the May issue of McCall's.

Miss Oxenberg said Burton also "taught me how to drive his Mercedes when I was 13. Can you imagine me propped up on six pillows, peering over the steering wheel like a little dwarf?"

The actress is the daughter of Princess Elizabeth of Yugoslavia, but has no title of her own. "I'm very happy about that," she stated. "I think in many ways it's an obstacle and a hindrance. People look at you as a dodo bird, a strange, obsolete creature who's not quite real."

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Entertainer WILLIE NELSON wants to stage a repeat performance of the FarmAid concert on the Mall in Washington, officials say.

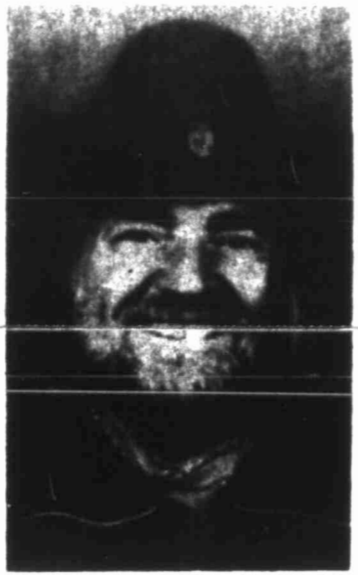

The 1985 14-hour concert was organized by Nelson, who wants a second show in the nation's capital on Labor Day.

Sandra Alley, a spokeswoman for the National Parks Service, said Monday that Nelson has asked about using the Mall but made no formal application.

music acts last September at the University of Illinois, raised pledges of $9 million for the nation's farmers.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — IRENE CARA, star of the film "Fame" and winner of an Oscar and Grammy for the title song from the movie "Flashdance," has married a veteran stuntman atop a sea cliff, her spokesman said.

"I knew he was the guy for me when, after a career of jumping off tall buildings and being involved in high-speed car chases, he told me I brought the excitement to his life," said Miss Cara, 27.

She married Conrad Palmisano, 27, president of the Stuntmen's Association, Sunday in Palos

Verdes on the cliffs above the Pacific Ocean, her spokesman, Mitchell Schneider, said Monday.

Miss Cara met Palmisano in 1984 on the set of "A Certain Fury," a film in which she starred.

NEW YORK (AP) — The daughter of columnist Ann Landers says she rejected the only bit of advice her mother ever offered.

"If she ever gave me a substantial piece of advice, I think it was that people are better off marrying within their own religion," said MARGO HOWARD, a Jew, who married actor Ken Howard, a Christian. "I ... have been deliciously happy."

In interviews published in the May issue of McCall's magazine, other women recalled advice their mothers gave them.

Former Rep. Geraldine Ferraro, D-N.Y., said: "Long before the nation recognized in 1984 that 'women can be whatever we want to be,' my mom assured me that nothing except a lack of will would prevent me from reaching goals I set for myself. I took her seriously!"

And Actress Sophia Loren said: "My mother taught me to walk proud and tall, 'as if the world was mine.' I remember that time, and I think it brought me some luck."

NEW YORK (AP) — Country singer WYNONNA JUDD says her relationship with her mother was anything but harmonious until the Grammy Award-winning duo became singing partners.

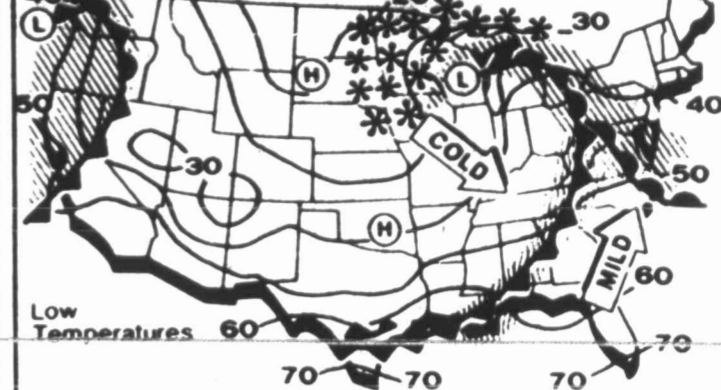

"When I say country music saved us, I'm not kidding," Wynonna, 21, said about her partnership with 39-year-old mother, Naomi. "Suddenly we were on the road together in each other's faces 24 hours a day. We had to work it out. If not for the music, I'd probably be like a lot of the other girls in the world and not even communicate with my mother."

Wynonna, in an interview in the May issue of McCall's magazine, said the problems began before the two became a singing team because her mother was overprotective.

"She was always asking me where I was going, who with, what time I'd be home, all the time," said Wynonna, who moved out of her mother's house and in with a friend after high school. "There were times when we really hated each other."

City sales tax rebate up

A surge in retail sales strength in February and early March pushed the city's year-to-date rebate total 4 percent ahead of 1985's level.

The rebate is the City of Big Spring's 1 percent share of the state sales tax on most non-food items. Rebates are a barometer of retail sales.

The April rebate to Big Spring was $81,232, up from $62,342 for the same period of 1985. Year-to-date, rebates have totaled $488,357, about 4 percent up from 1985.

April checks represent taxes collected on sales made in February and reported to the state comptroller's office by March 20.

For all of Howard County, the rebate so far this year is 3.6 percent ahead of 1985.

Coahoma posted a $1,390 rebate, bringing its year-to-date total to $9,225, down 10.6 percent from 1985.

Dr. Donohue

Drugs beat Wegener's disease

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I am recovering from Wegener's disease. It involved my kidneys, which failed, also my upper respiratory tract. I had biopsies of both the kidneys and the nose. I hear that in severe cases it can be fatal. Now my blood and urine tests show I am back to normal, so my medicine is being reduced gradually. My doctor has told me that not much is known about Wegener's as to cause. He said the big breakthrough was use of cancer drugs for it. I wonder if you can expand on this. — B.M.

the upper and lower parts of the respiratory system. In those systems the parts involved in getting oxygen to the blood are affected. The person with this disease has a destructive form of sinus inflammation, perhaps eventual ulceration of the nasal passages. The lung, too, becomes involved. Sometimes, the kidneys are affected as targets of the same destructive process.

The guess is that it is another of the immune related self-destructive processes. Cancer drugs have turned things around for Wegener's patients. Even though it is not cancer, drugs used against cancer seem to turn off the Wegener's process. Grim statistics used to be part and parcel of this illness. Now, eight times out of 10, it can be controlled with the chemotherapy. I am happy to hear you are coming back from it so nicely.

What about constipation? Many can be relieved of it, both mentally and physically, by reading Dr. Donohue's booklet, "The Way to Stop Constipation." For a copy write to Dr. Donohue in care of the Big Spring Herald, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, IL 60611, enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 50 cents. Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

'Celts, LA teams to beat in playoffs

By The Associated Press
Nothing has changed, even after six months and 943 games. When the National Basketball Association season began, everyone figured the Boston Celtics and Los Angeles Lakers would meet in the finals for the third straight year.

Sixteen playoff qualifiers start championship play this week, and nothing has changed. Form still favors the Celtics, owners of the league's best record, and the Lakers, who were second overall.

The best-of-five first-round series begin Thursday with Chicago at Boston, Detroit at Atlanta, Sacramento at Houston and San Antonio at the Los Angeles Lakers.

The rest of the field plays Friday, with Washington at Philadelphia, Utah at Dallas, New Jersey at Milwaukee and Portland at Denver.

Matchups in the first round of the NBA playoffs, with the team with a homecourt advantage in the five-game series listed first and each team's seeding position in parentheses:

EASTERN CONFERENCE
Boston (1) vs. Chicago (8) — The Bulls, buoyed by the return of Michael Jordan after an absence of 64 games with a broken foot, won six times in a nine-game stretch to squeeze past Cleveland and get the last playoff spot in the Eastern Conference. Jordan has some capable help in Orlando Woolridge and rookie Charles Oakley, but the Celtics' front line of Larry Bird, Robert Parish and Kevin McHale, with Bill Walton in reserve, is too big and strong to be stopped by the Bulls. Milwaukee (2) vs. New Jersey (7) — The Bucks finished with the third-best record in the NBA after Boston and the Los Angeles Lakers and won the Central Division for the sixth consecutive season. The Nets started well, with a 23-14 record, but the loss of Micheal Ray Richardson to drug abuse and center Darryl Dawkins to back problems left the team in turmoil, and they finished 16-29.

Philadelphia (3) vs. Washington (6) — The 76ers finished the season 6-1 without injured center Moses Malone, the only loss by one point at Landover, Md., on the final day. Malone still is questionable for Friday's opener against the Bullets, which evens the odds considerably, and guard Andrew Toney definitely is out after a succession of injuries. Manute Bol, the 7-foot-6 rookie, replaced injured Jeff Ruland for most of the season and won the NBA shot-blocking title, but his all-around game doesn't approach Ruland's.

Atlanta (4) vs. Detroit (5) — Befitting their seeding positions, this should be the best of the Eastern Conference pairings. Dominique Wilkins, who had a NBA season-high 57 points last Thursday to take control of a close individual scoring race with Adrian Dantley and Alex English, took more than twice as many shots as any of his teammates. But Randy Wittman, Kevin Willis, Glenn Rivers and 5-foot-6 rookie reserve Spud Webb all proved they could have outstanding performances during the Hawks' team record-equalling 50-win season.

WESTERN CONFERENCE
Los Angeles Lakers (1) vs. San Antonio (8) — The Spurs were a solid team, 24-20, in January, but injuries to starters Artis Gilmore, Johnny Moore and Steve Johnson took their toll in the second half and they won only 11 of their last 38 games, barely holding on to win the last playoff spot. The Lakers, who coasted to a 62-20 record after leading the division by more than 10 games since the All-Star break, have everyone healthy and are anxious to start defending their title.

Houston (2) vs. Sacramento (7) — This series could be tougher than Rockets fans expect, especially if the Kings can avoid losing the first two games in Houston. The Kings, with some of the loudest fans in sports, can be very tough at home, and the Rockets are 11 games under .500 on the road.

Denver (3) vs. Portland (6) — The Nuggets are even worse than Houston on the road, finishing 13-28, which makes them vulnerable if they slip at home. But the Trail Blazers, who finished 22 games behind the Lakers in the Pacific Division and had a 12-game losing streak in February, are just plain vulnerable since losing defensive standout Sam Bowie with a leg injury.

Unknowns pace

Padres

By The Associated Press
What should have been Bob Welch's night to remember became a night Bruce Bochy and John Kruk — two very unlikely heroes — may never forget.

Welch had a career-high 12 strikeouts and was within an out of pitching the Los Angeles Dodgers to a 3-2 victory. But Kruk, a 25-year-old rookie, singled for his first major-league hit to drive in the tying run in the last of the 10th inning.

In the 11th, Bochy, a seldom used 30-year old catcher, with 16 career homers in eight seasons and a sore left knee, hit a pinch homer off reliever Ed Vande Berg.

NL

Cardinals 6, Mets 2
Willie McGee is hitting 462 against Dwight Gooden and defending NL East champion St. Louis is 5-1 and 2½ games ahead of New York.

McGee, the Most Valuable Player and batting champion last season, is 12 for 26 lifetime against the Mets' 1985 Cy Young Award winner. He singled home the tying run in the sixth inning, and put St. Louis ahead 2-1 with a sacrifice fly in the eighth.

Gooden was behind 2-1 when he left after eight, but Darryl Strawberry's RBI single in the ninth got the 21-year-old right-hander off the hook.

Pirates 3, Phillies 1
Pittsburgh, the critics' choice to finish last in the NL East for the third straight year, apparently isn't reading its reviews.

Reynolds' hit came off reliever Steve Bedrosian, 1-1. Rafael Belliard, pinch running for Steve Kemp, who had walked to start the inning, scored from first base. Joe Orsulak singled in Reynolds to make a winner Cecilio Guante, 1-0, who has appeared in four of the Pirates' five games.

Rookie winning hearts of Texas Ranger fans

ARLINGTON (AP) — Pete Incaviglia of the Texas Rangers knew things were going to be different when he saw Dave Stieb's breaking pitches on opening night.

"Ain't nobody in college can pitch like that," said the raw rookie in awe of the Toronto Blue Jays' ace right-hander.

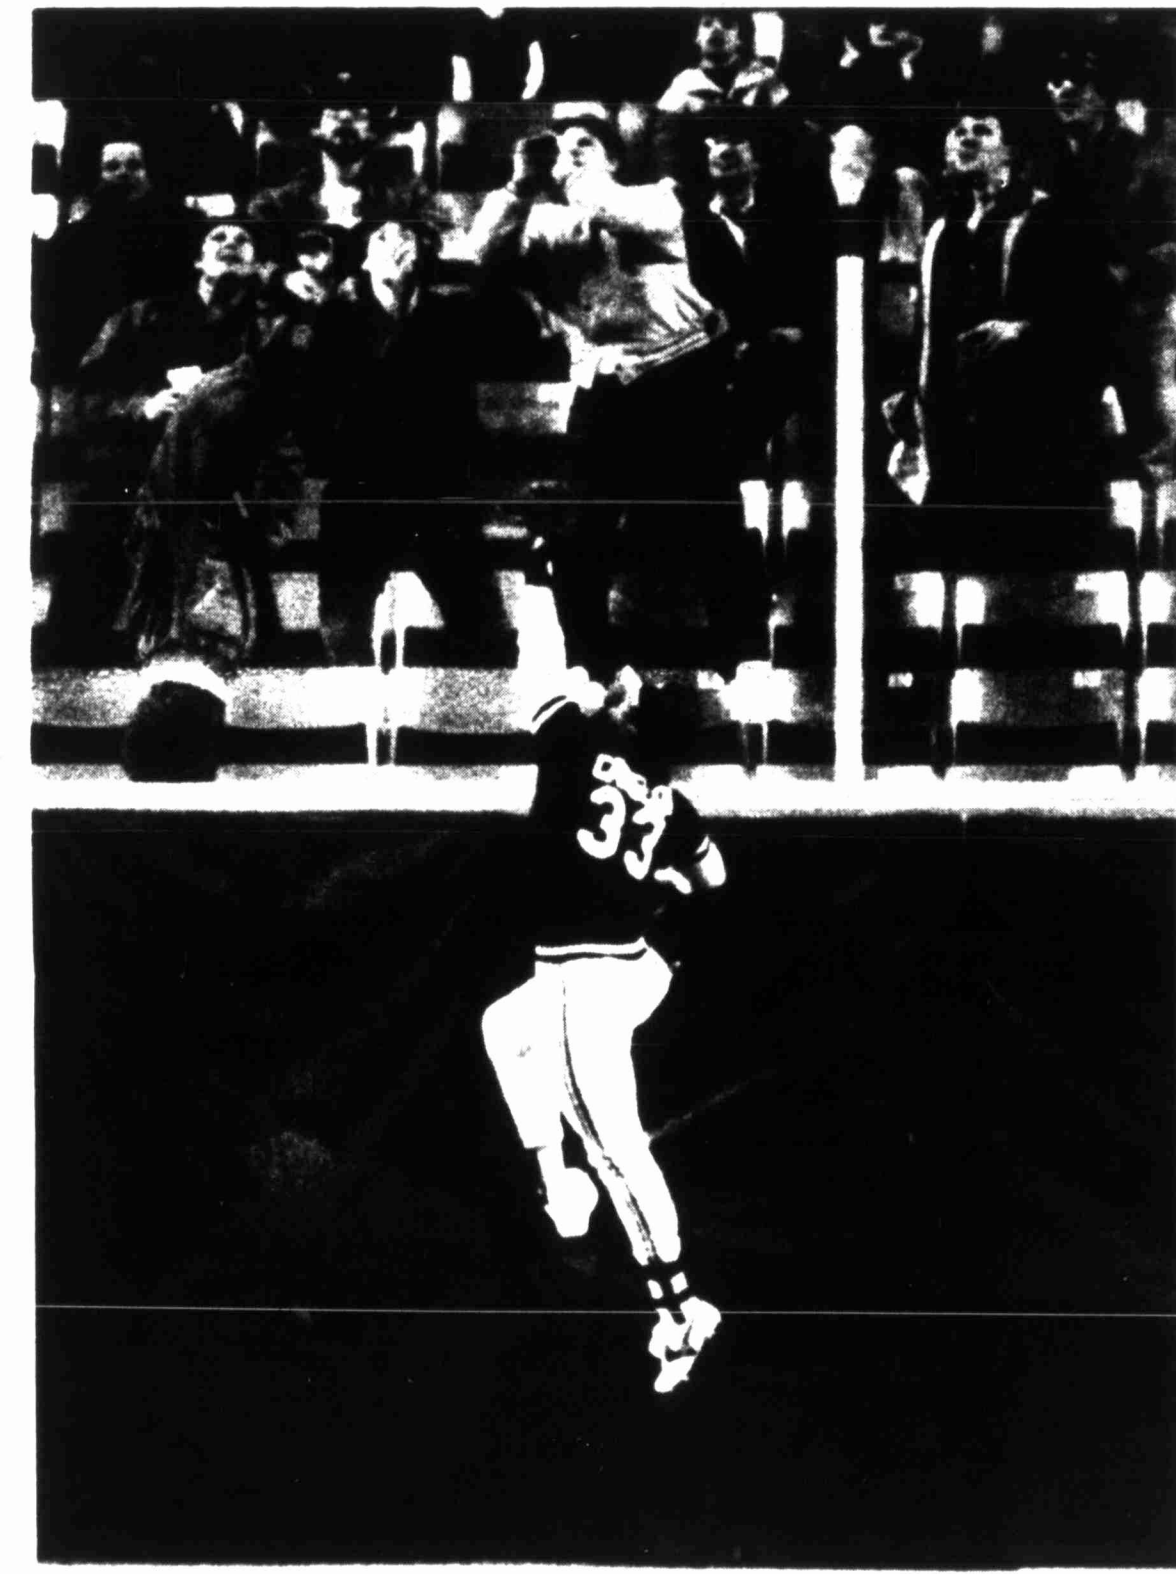

The Rangers' heralded right fielder came directly to the major leagues out of college where he set an all-time NCAA record at Oklahoma State with 48 homers and 143 RBI.

Incaviglia displayed tremendous power in spring training. Once, he knocked a hole in the fence with a line drive. His seven homers were a Rangers' record for Pompano Beach.

The Rangers' fans couldn't wait for his debut. They put up "Inc Spot" signs all over Arlington Stadium awaiting their hero's first major league blast.

On opening night, Incaviglia blistered a one-bounce double off the leftfield wall but had trouble hitting the curve. There were no shots to the "Inc Spots" although he hit a memorable foul ball that traveled over 375 feet.

However, his 12 homers in batting practice had the fans buzzing. After 10 straight groundouts and some strikeouts, Incaviglia finally got his first major league homer on Friday night. He timed a fastball from Baltimore reliever Tippy

Oakland A's outfielder Jose Causeco makes a futile jump up the left field fence on the first of two home runs off the bat of Minnesota Twins Tom Brunansky.

Martinez and the ball carried over the center field fence at the 400 foot mark.

Team officials, who took a big chance on bringing Incaviglia directly to the major leagues, breathed easier.

Incaviglia completed the home stand on Sunday with another double but his batting average after a week of big league pitching was 3-for-24 and .125.

"It's going to take time for him to find his groove," said Grieve. "We believe he will. And nobody hits a ball harder than Pete does. He absolutely crushes it."

However, Incaviglia found out something about the infamous Texas prairie wind Sunday. He hit a shot he thought was out of the park and was into his home run trot.

"That one's out of here," Incaviglia said. "Then I saw Fred Lynn patting his glove."

Incaviglia also still has a lot to learn about fielding. He made two errors in the first homestand, dropping pop fly and later kicking a ground ball.

"Pete's a better fielder than our scouting reports showed," said Valentine. "It's just going to take some time for him to get adjusted out there. We're glad he's on our side."

Despite four homers, Twins still fall to A's

By The Associated Press
In baseball, it's not necessarily how far you hit the ball or how many you hit over the wall that makes the difference.

The Oakland A's proved that Monday night by edging the Minnesota Twins 7-6 despite being outthromered 4-0. Tom Brunansky had two of those home runs for Minnesota, while Gary Gaetti and Kirby Puckett also connected.

In the end, however, it was Carney Lansford's seventh-inning single that scored two runs to lift the A's to a 7-6 victory over the Twins at the Metrodome.

Rangers 10, Brewers 1
Milwaukee's home opener was delayed by rain for two hours, nine minutes, then ruined by four Texas home runs and staunch pitching by rookie Edwin Correa, who allowed only three hits over eight innings. Darryl Porter's solo homer in the second inning gave the Rangers a 1-0 lead, and they scored twice in the third before Oddibe McDowell led off the fifth with a solo homer.

AL

Texas also got a solo homer from Steve Buechele in the eighth and a three-run blow from Larry Parrish to cap a five-run ninth.

"It's kind of hard sitting around for a couple of hours, but it worked," said Correa, 19 and the youngster player in the major leagues. "I was rushing my tempo a little early in the game, so I had to slow myself down."

"I feel confident. I had it in my mind that I was a big leaguer."

Angels 7, Mariners 6
Rookie Darrell Miller's run-scoring single won the game in California's home debut. Losing pitcher Pete Ladd opened the ninth inning by hitting Brian Downing with a pitch. George Hendrick, who had three hits (including a homer) and a walk in the game, hit a grounder under the glove of shortstop Spike Owen for an error as Downing took third. Miller then collected his second hit of the

Tigers 10, White Sox 8
Darrell Evans contributed a two-run homer and also singled to spark a six-run sixth inning. Lance Parrish and Harry Spilman added homers for the Tigers, while Greg Walker hit a pair of solo shots for Chicago, which is 1-6 — all at home — this season.

Evans opened the sixth with a single. Larry Henrdon singled, then Chet Lemon greeted reliever Gene Nelson with a run-scoring single to give Detroit a lead. Alan Trammell walked to load the bases.

Dave Collins' foul pop was dropped by third baseman Wayne Tolleson for an error and Collins followed with a two-run single.

Darnell Coles sacrificed and pinch-hitter Tom Brookens tripled, then scored on a single by Parrish.

Royals 8, Red Sox 2
Kansas City lost its home opener and one in Yankee Stadium in the first week of the season, no way for the defending champions to behave. So the Royals put together a six-run eighth inning to spoil Boston's home debut. Willie Wilson triggered the eighth with his third consecutive single.

George Brett also singled and Wilson easily scored on a slow grounder to the left of the mound by Hal McRae. Frank White doubled in another run, Steve Balboni, who had three hits, and Darryl Motley followed with RBI singles.

The other runs scored on an error and a Rudy Law RBI single.

Orioles 2, Blue Jays 1
Mike Boddicker threw a four-hitter to outpitch Toronto's Doyle Alexander. Consecutive two-out doubles by Rick Dempsey and Alan Wiggins produced Baltimore's tying run in the third. Successive singles by John Shelby and Juan Bonilla and Dempsey's double gave the Orioles their winning run in the fifth.

Tony Fernandez singled to lead off the first, stole second and came around to score when Dempsey's throw hit him and rolled into left field for Toronto's only run.

Rubber match on tap for Blues-North Stars

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — It has come down to a one game season for the Minnesota North Stars and the St. Louis Blues in their NHL playoff series and the outcome may be decided on the power play.

The teams meet tonight in the final game of the best-of-five, first-round Stanley Cup playoffs at the Met Center. The winner will face the Toronto Maple Leafs, who eliminated the Chicago Blackhawks, the Norris Division champions.

In Minnesota's victory on Sunday, St. Louis went 1-for-8 on the power play and is now 1-for-23 for the series.

"They've really got to be wondering what they have to do to get a power play goal," Minnesota's Tony McKegney said.

The North Stars' tenacious penalty killing also has had a great deal to do with the Blues' inability to score on the power play.

"Penalty killing is not a glory role, but we take a lot of pride in it," North Star center Keith Acton said. "It's one little piece of the puzzle, but we take a lot of pride in it."

"When the season comes down to one game, anything can happen," North Stars Coach Lorne Henning said. "It's all going to come down to who wants it more and who works harder."

Minnesota forced the final-game confrontation by beating St. Louis

7-4 on Sunday night to knot the series at 2-2. It will be the second time in three years that a playoff series between the two clubs has come down to the final game. Two years ago, the Norris Division finals went down to game seven at the Met Center and the Stars won 4-3 on Steve Payne's overtime goal.

"I think we have an edge in the fifth game," North Stars forward Dirk Graham said after Sunday night's victory. "We've proven we can come on awfully strong when we have to win. I don't know if their backs have been to the wall like ours have. We were there (Sunday) and played one of the most intense games of the year. That should give us an edge."

St. Louis Coach Jacques Demers said his club is "going to Minnesota with confidence. We didn't want to go there. But we put ourselves in the situation where we have to go."

"I told our players there's no use putting our heads down. We knew it would be a long series and I told them that we did not lose the series (Sunday)."

St. Louis wing Mark Hunter said the Blues have failed to stop the North Stars from playing their free-wheeling offensive style. He added the Blues need to play a tight-checking game to beat Minnesota.

Last year, the Stars beat the Blues in three straight games in the division semifinals. This year, it has been a see-saw battle.
