Spring Allies unite to fight terrorism TOKYO (AP) — Summit leaders rorism was essential. "Why should this summit con-

today put their governments behind a six-point campaign against terrorists and their accomplices, "and in particular Libya," and issued a statement prodding Moscow to reveal details immediately concerning the Cherbonyl nuclear accident.

The leaders agreed to steps making it harder for terrorists to travel or obtain arms, essentially endorsing measures adopted by Europeans nations last month in the wake of the unilateral U.S. air attack on Libya.

Practically ignoring trade and finance concerns on the first full day of their economic summit, leaders of the industrialized democracies acted on the two issues being pushed extraordinarily hard by President Reagan and his aides. The statement on terrorism, while hailed as a victory by Reagan aides, contained no commitment to specific economic sanctions against Libya or other sponsors of terrorism and no specific endorsement of military action to combat terrorists. But U.S. officials said it was significant that the group, including Libya's two major trade partners — Italy and West Germany — specifically branded Libya for its role in sponsoring terrorism.

Reagan came to Tokyo with his campaign against Libyan terrorism at the top of his summit the leaders of Canada, Great Britain, France, Italy and Japan he said concerted action against ter-cern itself with terrorism?" it asked. "One reason that is mentioned is the need to do something so that the crazy Americans won't take matters into their own hands again.'

One of the six points was apparently written to restrict the activities out of Libyan embassies and consulates. The leaders agreed to "strict limits on the size of the diplomatic and consular mission and other official bodies abroad of states which engage in such activities, control of travel of members of such mission and bodies, and, where appropriate, radical reductions in, or even the closure of, such missions and bodies."

Secretary of State George P. Shultz said the document sent a strong message to Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy: "You've had it, pal. You're isolated. You are recognized as a terrorist and as far as terrorists are concerned, more and more the message is - no place to hide.

However, summit partners steered clear of some of the toughest anti-terrorist measures suggested by the United States. Reagan had mentioned to Italian Premier Bettino Craxi and West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl, whose nations are heavily dependent on Libyan oil, that they look for other suppliers. Yet, the sum-COMPETIT MIGUE HO MICHEROM OF any economic sanctions.

New tax plan may pose threat to workers

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Senate Finance Committee is setting to work on a new tax-overhaul plan that threatens some special tax breaks widely used by middleincome Americans

The new bill, drafted by Chairman Bob Packwood, R-Ore., would allow no further tax-deferred Individual Retirement Accounts for the millions of workers covered by a company pension plan. It would permit no medical-expense deduction until outlays for doctors and medicine exceed 10 percent of income. It would crimp the write-off for car and education loans. And the preferential tax treatment of capital gains would end.

In return for those special benefits, the plan offers a general reduction in individual tax rates the maximum would drop to 27 percent from 50 percent; a $2,000-perperson exemption for all but the wealthiest people, and increases in the standard deductions. Most people would get a small tax cut from the plan; the biggest winners would be about six million working poor who would be swept off the income-tax rolls.

Packwood and others who endorsed the new effort hailed it as the most-sweeping tax-overhaul plan seriously considered by

"This dramatic departure from our existing federal income tax TAX PLAN page 2A

Democratic runoff elections for JP, commissioners June 7

By SCOTT FITZGERALD

Staff Writer A justice of the peace seeking a third term before his death last month still carried enough political impact to force a runoff election between the two remaining Democratic Party

The runoff, which will feature two Democratic County Commissioners races as well, will be June 7.

Voters will also be going to the polls sometime in June to cast votes in an independent election on liquor by the drink, but according to state law, the liquor election cannot be combined with the runoff election.

Howard County commissioners are expected to set a date for that election when they meet next Monday, said County Judge Milton Kirby this morning.

According to law, commissioners have between 21 and 30 days to declare an election when the certified petition is presented to them from the county tax collector's and auditor's office. Kirby said the item would be included on the upcoming meeting's agenda. The late Lewis Heflin was on the Democractic ballot for the Justice of the Peace, Precinct 1 Place 2 when he died April 3. He 6.86 percent of the 3,453 ballots cast in that race. The remaining candidates in the justice of the peace race, Stanley "Bogie" Bogard and William H. "Bill" Shankles will square off in a June 7 runoff election. Bogard received 1,697 votes that amounted to 49.15 percent. He carried Precincts 202, 203, 204, 301, 302, 401, 402, 403 and 404 plus the absentee vote.

Shankles received 1,519 votes that amounted to 43.99 percent. He carried Precincts 101, 102 103, 205, 303 and 304

White, Clements in rematch of their 1982 election battle

DALLAS (AP) - The ballot for statewide offices in Texas will have a familiar look in November after primary eleco in which Gov. Mark White and former Gov. Bill Clements won party nominations and only one incumbent was defeated.

White and Clements will replay their 1962 battle, in which White halted Clements' tenure as chief executive at one term, and Clements wasted no time going after his Democratic opponent Saturday.

'I think we've come out of it (the primary) in great shape . I don't think it's so much what I've done. I think it's what Mark White has done," Clements said. "An overwhelming number of Texans are supporting this adobserving that nearly twice as many voters cast ballots for him as for Clements.

In other races, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower won easy renominations. Fellow Democrats Attorney General Jim Mattox and Land Commissioner Garry Mauro had no party opposition.

But Sears McGee, a Supreme Court justice for 18 years, ran primary. A June 7 runoff will match state Sen. Oscar Mauzy against Shirley Butts, an apneals court hiden seeking to become the first woman ever elected to the Supreme Court.

Eight other nominations for statewide office still must be decided in runoff elections.

Texans showed little enthusiasm for supporters of political extremist Lyndon LaRouche, with the lone LaRouche candidate for statewide office losing badly and 10 candidates for congressional nominations finishing

Adventurers talk of learning experience

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) 500-mile trek to the North Pole taught six adventurers "the powers of faith and perseverance" as they faced bitter cold and the grueling existence of life at the top of the world, the team's leader

"It's great to be back in Minnesota," Will Steger told well-wishers Sunday. "Your prayers certainly have power because they got us to the North Pole. We certainly didn't do it alone."

About 600 people cheered and waved American flags Sunday as four of the arctic adventurers returned to St. Paul's downtown airport following their 56-day

"What a fantastic, miserable and wonderful trip," team member Geoff Carroll told the crowd.

'We all love you," Gov. Rudy Perpich told the team. "And on behalf of all the people of Minnesota congratulations on a wonderful journey."

Steger, Carroll and six other members of the International Polar Expedition set out March 8 from their base camp in Resolute Bay, Northwest Territories, hoping to be the first surface expedition to reach the polar icecap without resupply from air or ground since Robert Peary made the trip in 1909. Peary is credited with being the first to reach the pole.

The modern-day journey was not an easy one for the eight-member team. Temperatures would often plummet to minus 70 degrees. One member was airlifted out after a sled rolled over him; another came home because of frostbite.

"It was a very difficult trip, a very educational trip in terms of learning about faith, endurance, perseverance, prayer and so forth," Steger said in an interview. "It was quite an enlightening experience."

When team members reached the pole Thursday, they were greeted with a temperature of 15 degrees above zero, which Steger characterized as "a balmy paradise" compared to what had come before.

It was in the 80s when the four adventurers stepped off the plane

Tax plan

Continued from page 1A system will spur capital formation and economic growth by directing that investment decisions be based on real economic considerations rather than artificial tax benefits," said Sen. John C. Danforth, R-Mo.

Packwood told a news conference Friday he thinks a majority of the 20-member committee supports the plan, including Republican Leader Bob Dole. But a few hours after Packwood spoke, Dole issued his own statement.

The plan is a good start in principle, the Kansan said, and he supports Packwood's efforts to produce a bill. "However, there are still a number of items that merit attention" and "if these questions can be worked out, then the chairman will have my full support."

The Reagan administration has offered no endorsement of Packwood's proposal, which is based on the plan that President Reagan sent to Congress last year. The new proposal meets Reagan's demands for a top individual tax rate no higher than 35 percent; a $2,000 personal exemption for most, and sufficient incentives for business investment

But one area that could cause problems for the bill is the section that would repeal preferential tax treatment of individual capital gains, which are profits from the sale of stock and other assets owned more than six months. Members of both parties have fought for years to preserve that preference on grounds it is necessary to woo investors to risky ventures.

Packwood is proposing to repeal it on grounds that the sharply lower individual tax rates are all the investment incentives that are

Although the summit statement contained general references to improving methods of dealing with terrorism through international

The United States, with the sole support of Britain, launched a reprisal bombing raid against Libya on April 14 to punish Khadafy for the fatal attack on a Berlin nightclub and hobble what it called the nerve center of his international terrorist operations

By Associated Press Pentagon jobs multiply

WASHINGTON — The Defense Department now employs more people than at any point since 1975, and it is charting a small baby boom among the families of its active-duty personnel while supporting the largest number of retired individuals in its history.

Today's active-duty military force also is slightly older, better educated and includes more women than a year ago. It also has grown in overall size and has more men and women deployed overseas.

The Pentagon had 2,151,032 men and women on active duty and 1,171,054 civilian employees around the world, including foreign nationals.

GOLDEN, Colo. - An earthquake capable of causing considerable damage shook an area about 250 miles southwest of Mexico City late Sunday, the second temblor to hit the area in five days, U.S. officials said.

There were no immediate reports of damage or injuries

The quake, which measured 5.4 on the Richter scale of ground movement, struck the south coast of Mexico at 11:47 p.m. MDT, said John Minsch, a geophysicist with the National Earthquake Information Center reported, part of the U.S. Geological Survey.

Waldheim falls short of absolute majority

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Voters narrowly denied Kurt Waldheim an absolute majority in an election dominated by charges that he covered up a Nazi past, forcing the former U.N. chief into a runoff election for the Austrian presidency. Waldheim received 49.64 percent of the votes Sunday, just 16,746 ballots short of absolute majority he needed. He will face socialist Kurt Steyrer in the June 8 runoff, Austria's first such election since 1951.

Of the 5,436,726 eligible voters, 89.5 percent cast ballots. Waldheim, who was U.N. secretary-general from 1972 to 1981, received 2,343,387 votes. Steyrer received 2,061,162. Both candidates agreed that Waldheim, candidate of the center-conservative People's Party, had been aided by sympathy votes from people who thought he was being victimized by foreign accusers.

The World Jewish Congress in March publicized the first in a series of accusations: that Waldheim was enrolled in Nazi youth groups, that he knew of deportations of Greek Jews from the Balkans and that he was connected to atrocities against Yugoslav partisans and Waldheim, 67, has said he served in a German army unit that killed partisans, and whose commander was executed as a war criminal. But he denies belonging to Nazi organizations, knowing of the deportations or par-

Leftists fire missiles

TOKYO - Police blamed Japan's most notorious radical leftist group today for a brazen missile attack during welcoming ceremonies for the Tokyo summit, and authorities distributed 100,000 leaflets asking citizens' cooperation in identifying 'suspicious persons.'' Five missiles were fired from an apartment building Sunday and arced more than two miles over Tokyo neighborhoods, falling about 700 yards from Akasaka Palace, the state guest house, just minutes before President Reagan arrived there for an outdoor welcoming ceremony.

Afghan leader replaced

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan - The head of the secret police, Najibullah, replaced Babrak Karmal as leader of Afghanistan's communist government and vowed to use his experience and abilities to crush Moslem rebels.

Radio Kabul, in a report monitored Sunday in Islamabad, announced that Karmal was resigning as the head of Afghanistan's ruling Communist Party because of poor health, and that he would be replaced by the 39-year-old

The government radio said Karmal would retain his lesser post as president of the Revolutionary Council and his seat on the seven-member Politburo.

Campaign to continue

SEOUL, South Korea - The major political opposition to President Chun Doo-hwan has decided to press ahead with an antigovernment campaign despite the violence that aborted a weekend rally in Inchon, news reports said today.

Meanwhile, government and opposition politicians traded charges of responsibility for the Saturday strife in Inchon that left scores in the port city injured. Authorities said 126 policemen were hurt, and that 12 remained in

There still was no report of the total number of demonstrators injured, but reporters saw many being helped from the sites of street clashes with police.

Radiation views differ

MOSCOW - Soviet television showed scenes of the Chernobyl nuclear disaster area and assured viewers there had been no massive destruction, but a top Kremlin official on a visit abroad said the site was radiation-saturated and dangerous.

Boris Yeltsin, the Communist Party chief for Moscow, said in Hamburg, West Germany, on Sunday that 49,000 people had been evacuated from four communities around the Ukrainian power plant since fire swept through one of its atomic reactors on April 26.

Immigration isn't a threat to U.S.

In its recurring impulse to do something, anything, about the illegal entry of foreigners into the United States, Congress is preparing to consider once more an overhaul of the nation's immigration laws. The proposal is a remedy in search of a problem.

The alleged problem is a flood of illegal immigrants that threatens to overwhelm something — our public resources, our political heritage, our capacity to absorb newcomers. The idea is nonsense. Most of the alarming numbers tossed around are pure guesses, aimed at inflaming public opinion.

Nor is it a new phenomenon for large numbers of foreigners to come to this country. Hoover Institution scholar Annelise Anderson, who served on the attorney general's task force on immigration and refugee policy, notes that even granting the inflated estimates of illegal immigrants, the number is "well under 4 percent of the population" — "far lower than for long periods in our history."

The supposed dangers are equally dubious. In the late 19th and early 20th century, the nation accepted a tide of foreigners that was proportionately larger than the one now being decried — and not only survived but flourished. Given that the U.S. is far richer now than it was then, it should have no trouble coping with the transient problems presented by a continuing influx of newcomers.

But those members of Congress who favor a crackdown don't let facts get in their way. The bill to be considered by the House Judiciary Committee, approved last year by the Senate, tries to dam the flow of foreigners mainly by denying them jobs. For the first time, anyone knowingly employing an illegal immigrant would be subject to federal penalties.

Employers would be expected to require any suspect applicants to certificate, driver's license, U.S. passport. Those guilty of a "pattern and practice" of hiring illegal workers could go to jail for six months.

This new requirement will be burdensome to both employers, who will be required to police the immigration laws under threat of imprisonment, and to foreign-looking legal workers, who will be under particular suspicion from companies eager to avoid unnecessary risks.

But it probably won't work. The weak link in the chain is the required documentation. Nothing is easier than to produce fraudulent driver's licenses, birth certificates or passports and enactment of this law would merely stimulate greater supplies to meet expected demand.

Experience elsewhere provides no grounds for optimism. The General Accounting Office studied employer sanctions in 20 countries and found none of them effective. Wayne Cornelius, a professor at the University of California at San Diego and one at the nation's leading experts on immigration, says "There is not a single documented case of successfully using employer sanctions laws to reduce the population of illegal immigrants anywhere in the world."

Only one part of the bill makes sense — a general amnesty for illegal foreigners who have been here for at least six years. However, this too is flawed, since proving long-term residence won't be any harder than "proving" legal status. A few forged documents will do. An amnesty should be enacted, but it ought to apply to all illegal foreigners, except those posing some genuine danger.

It also should be coupled with a strict policy of denying welfare benefits to newcomers for their first few years. Americans have every reason to resist inviting foreigners to become public charges, but those who are willing to earn their own way ought to be welcome. And it should coincide with a new emphasis on integrating foreigners into American life — by emphasizing the need for a common language, English.

With those dangers removed, we would have nothing to fear from immigration. Then we could get on with the only plausible solution to the "problem" of illegal immigration — not futile punitive measures, but a realistic expansion of legal immigration.

U.S. mends Iranian fences

By JACK ANDERSON and DALE VAN ATTA WASHINGTON — Iran's Ayatollah Khomeini, not Libya's Moammar Khadafy, directs the world's most deadly terrorist network. Yet incredibly, the Reagan administration has begun a hush-hush, barely perceptible tilt toward Iran.

Take the question of hostages, for example. The implacable Khomeini, not Khadafy, controls the fate of American hostages. Washington has been quietly conciliatory in the behind-the-scenes negotiations with Iran over the American hostages held by pro-Iranian terrorists.

This dramatic, subterranean shift in policy toward Iran goes beyond the fate of the hostages into the realm of global geopolitics. President Reagan has been convinced by his advisers (though there are still some dissenters) that an effort must be made to establish relations with Ayatollah Khomeini.

Their concern is that, without an American presence at all in Tehran, the Soviets may be tempted to occupy northern Iran during any post-Khomeini period of confusion or chaos. When we asked about the warming-up with Iran, one high-level State Department official tacitly confirmed the development by snapping testily: "We deal with the Soviet Union. We deal with Syria. So why not Iran?"

A clue to the surprising change in direction toward Iran can be detected by reading between the lines of President Reagan's hard-line denunciations of Khadafy. Reagan appears to hold Khadafy primarily responsible for the murders of Americans at the Rome and Vienna airports last December, as well as for subsequent terrorist attacks.

However, the terrorist Abu Nidal is known to have master-minded the airport attacks and may have engineered the later ones. Yet in 1983, when Iraq expelled him because it wanted better relations with the United States, Nidal went to Khomeini for help—and got it. Our sources estimate that the ayatollah has been giving Nidal about $25 million a year for his murderous ventures.

In addition, we've seen a classified U.S. intelligence report to the effect that the Rome and Vienna coordinated assaults were aproved by the foreign ministers of Iran, Syria and Libya at a meeting in Tripoli on Dec. 23. The three governments' intelligence chiefs oversaw the twin operation, which was carried out by Nidal.

Finally, Nidal was spotted in East Berlin about the time of the discotheque bombing earlier this month. Intelligence sources say he may have had a hand in the atrocity — probably on loan to Khadafy from his protector and bankroller, Khomeini.

Yet Reagan has singled out Libya as the source of all anti-American terorrist evil, even when the evidence suggests that Iran and Syria are at least equally guilty.

In addition to the geopolitical reason for rebuilding bridges to Iran, a senior White House official mentioned a similarly hardheaded inducement: money. It costs the United States a bundle to defend against the chaos that Iran sponsors.

"We have one (sensitive) report that indicates we are spending $10-$12 billion more than we would have to if relations with Iran were normal," he said.

As to what hopes of success the administration has for its overtures to Iran, the White House source said that Iranians in general, and even mainstream Shiites for that matter, are not as viscerally anti-American as they may seem. They have been stirred up by Khomeini to distract them from other troubles, such as the appalling slaughter of the war with Iraq and their declining living standards.

THIS IS A STICKUP: Bonnie and Clyde would be appalled. The FBI estimates that eight times as much money was stolen by bank officials and other insiders in one recent year as was extracted by bank robbers and burglars. Criminal misconduct by financial institution insiders was a major factor in about one-half of all bank failures in recent years. And the situation isn't helped by the punishment meted out: The small number on insiders who are convicted spend less than a year in prison.

CONSTITUTION CAPER: You remember the $150 million monument to the Constitution we told you was being pushed by the staff of the Constitution's bicentennial commission? Well, we may not have to worry about it much longer. A bill, already cleared by a House subcommittee, would ban further construction on the Mall beyond five structures already approved. The Constitution building is not one of the exempt.

MINI-EDITORIAL: Jimmy Carter apparently never learned what the presidency is all about. In 1980, he claimed that he had asked his daughter Amy's advice on nuclear disarmament — a revelation that understandably turned off voters who didn't want national policy set by a 12-year-old girl. Now Carter criticizes the air strike against Libya because Moammar Khadafy's infant daughter was killed. If someone had killed Amy, Carter said, "as long as life lasted I would seek to retaliate." Regrettable as any child's death is, it's worrisome to think that an American president thinks it would be acceptable to use his high office to settle personal scores.

Lightning fast weather art

By TIM APPEL

Many times, people ask me about how I take a certain picture that was in the paper. And when I hear stories of how I may have taken a picture, the story is not even close to how I actually did it.

So as a service to my fellow photographers out there (and when I can't think of anything funny to write about), I'll occasionally write about photo techniques that may help you take pictures that you'll be proud to display in your living room. And to keep things simple, my columns will deal exclusively with 35mm photography unless specified.

This week, I'll talk about lightning pictures, since this is an easy subject to capture on film, yet people seem to think it's a tough task. Safety for yourself should be the

No. 1 priority when standing outside with your camera. When the lightning is close by, forget any attempt. And one should never go standing on top of hills to take pictures unless one has had a few too many, or unless ones' lightbulb is fairly dim. I'm paid to be the latter.

Once you feel the coast is clear, load the camera up with some 400 ASA film, attach the camera to a tripod if shooting at night and pick yourself a good spot to shoot. Any lens from a 28mm to a 135mm will work, depending on how much horizon you wish to get. Observe for a few minutes where most of the lightning is coming from in the sky before you decide where to point the camera.

Night shooting is fairly easy, and regardless of what most people think, a 30-second exposure is not needed. A one-second exposure will do the trick, with the lens aperture on f/5.6 or so. Some lightning bolts last for more than one second, so just wait until you see the flash, then press the shutter button as quick as possible.

For a more creative approach, try a 30-second exposure. Don't forget to stop the lens down to f/16 or so. With any luck, you may get multiple lightning bolts in that time frame.

Lightning during the day does not give you the luxury of long exposures, but the principle is still the same. Simply meter your camera off any dark cloud, using a shutter speed you are comfortable with (I recommend 1/500 of a second). Then just sit and wait until you see a flash of light in the viewfinder. Press the shutter button as quickly as possible, and hope you have some image.

It may take a couple of rolls to get a suitable picture, but after some experimentation you should find yourself taking great shots in no time. Good luck.

People find faith in different ways

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I have no quarrel with those who think they need some kind of dramatic religious experience, but that is not for me. I have been an active church member all my life, and that is the important thing as far as I am concerned. — F.F.

DEAR F.F.: God deals with different people in different ways. The Apostie Paul, for example, met Jesus Christ in an intensely dramatic and decisive way on the road to Damascus. On the other hand, Paul's young companion Timothy had been taught the Scriptures "from infancy" (2 Timothy 3:15), and apparently did not have the same dramatic experience that Paul had.

This is still true today. Some people come to Christ through a decisive and dramatic conversion experience; others may be able to look back and realize that at some time they quietly came to faith in Christ.

The important thing is not how dramatic our experience is, but rather this: Are we truly trusting Christ alone for our salvation?

Paul and Timothy had different experiences — but they both were trusting Christ. He is the basis of our salvation, and our faith is in Him alone.

We cannot save ourselves by our own good works, for no matter how good we are, we are still sinners. But Christ came to take away our sins, and when we turn to Him and trust Him alone (and not our goodness), God has promised to forgive us and save us.

Do you know Christ personally? Are you trusting Christ, or are you trusting in your own good works and your loyalty to our church? The Bible says, "For it is by grace you have been saved, through faith ... not by works, so that no one can boast" (Ephesians 2:8-9).

If you have never made your commitment to Christ, accept him and trust Him alone for your salvation. Christ, "has saved us ... not because of anything we have done but because of his own purpose and grace" (2 Timothy 1:9).

If you butter your toast, fry your eggs, season your vegetables, baste your meats and add salad dressing to your salad, you can easily get 5 or 6 tablespoons of fat. And that's not even counting the "hidden" fats in baked goods and processed foods.

As a result, most of us could cut back some on our fat intake and still be getting enough of its positive effects for good health. MILK VERSUS A CALCIUM SUPPLEMENT

Mavs trip Lakers; knot series at 2-2

The Dallas Mavericks believe they may be the team that knocks the defending NBA champions out of the playoffs for the 17th consecutive year.

'We have a good chance to win the series," Dallas Coach Dick Motta said after the Mavericks defeated the Los Angeles Lakers 120-118 on Sunday, deadlocking the Western Conference playoff series at 2-2. "Now our team knows what we have to do to win."

The Lakers, seeking to become the first team since Boston in 1969 to repeat as champions, won their first five playoff games by an average of 22 points and appeared ready to breeze to their fifth consecutive appearance in the finals. But two consecutive two-point losses in Dallas have put Los Angeles in a dogfight.

'We've got a good chance now, but the Lakers are still the Lakers and we won't have the upper hand until it's over," said Mark Aguirre, who scored 21 of his 39 points in the first quarter took the lead for good.

Abdul-Jabbar, who scored 33 points, scored 10 in the fourth quarter, and when Maurice Lucas tipped in a shot with 1:04 to go, the Lakers trailed only 118-116. But Aguirre, who scored only four of his 39 points in the fourth quarter, then hit the 15-foot turnaround jumper with 38 seconds left

USFL readies for open draft

NEW YORK (AP) - On Tuesday, the USFL will show whether it has returned to its original philosophy of bargain-basement football.

The former spring-summer league, which began in 1983 as a self-proclaimed low-budget alternative to the high-priced NFL, quickly shifted gears, going head-to-head with its entrenched counterpart in the bidding for star players.

Last year, though, it reversed itself in its open draft, concentrating primarily on players one or two levels below stardom, players the NFL might rank as worthy of selection in the fourth round or lower.

On Tuesday, two weeks after the eight-team USFL conducted its territorial draft, thereby laying claim to some of the premier college players without ranking them by round, the young league will run through 12 rounds of open drafting.

That comes one week after the NFL's draft, a far more publicized spectacle. That draft also served as a guideline to USFL management and coaching staffs left without a league scouting program. It was disbanded last year as an economy measure. That left the teams with limited scouting capabilities. Said Jack Pardee, former head coach at Houston and now head coach in New Jersey since the assimilation of the Gamblers and Generals: "Although we have gone out and scouted the playrs who interested us the most and did have people at the Senior Bowl, we don't have the same number of people as the NFL and we haven't been able to go to hundreds of colleges.

'Some of our teams will be looking for top players to be competitive," Pardree said, "but we'll be most interested in the middle-round picks. ... We've got a budget to work with and all things being equal, we'd probably go after the player who was drafted lower in the NFL.

There may actually be more drama, in a manner of speaking, surrounding the first USFL draftee than the NFL's. After all, everyone knew the NFL's Tampa Bay Buccaneers would select Bo Jackson, the Heisman Trophy-winning tailback from Auburn.

The Orlando Renegades have the No. 1 pick in the USFL's draft, but if they want Jackson, they'll have to work out a trade with Birmingham. Auburn was one of the Stallions' schools in the April 22 territorial draft and they made him one of their picks then.

The first-round selection order behind Orlando is Arizona, Jacksonville, Tampa Bay, Memphis, New Jersey, Birmingham and Baltimore. Each team will have 10 minutes in which to make its first-round pick, five minutes for each pick in the second through fifth rounds and three minutes in the sixth through 12th rounds.

Reds continue to struggle

By The Associated Press Those losses continue to pile up for the Cincinnati Reds ... and the New York Mets aren't helping any. "We've played good, hard baseball," said second baseman

Wally Backman, who had a two singles and a pair of doubles in Sunday's 7-2 rout of the Reds that swept their three-game series. "I think the other ballclubs knew we were a good club, but we've turned some heads.

While the Mets have turned some heads with their 16-4 start, best in the club's history, the Reds have raised some eyebrows by losing 12 of their last 13 for a 5-15 mark, the worst in the majors. Their 10 consecutive losses at Riverfront Stadium is their worst home streak in more than 27 years.

dres Galarraga to score Montreal's winning run from third base. Galarraga led off the ninth with a double off Dave Smith, 0-1, and took third on Tim Wallach's infield single. Newman then chopped a 2-2 pitch which Davis couldn't handle.

Jeff Reardon, 4-2, pitched one in-
