Kindergarten decision put off

By HANK MURPHY
Staff Writer

The Big Spring school board delayed a decision Thursday on whether or not to open a new kindergarten center next year at the Airport School, which is now closed.

After about 45 minutes of testimony and discussion, the board voted 3-2 to call a special meeting Tuesday at noon to decide the measure. Trustee Dan Wise's motion for delay was supported by board members Dock Voorhies and Ford Farris, with Billy Pineda and Jimmy Anderson opposing the delay. Dewayne Fraser abstained.

School Superintendent Lynn Hise told the board and about 30 parents that the kindergarten center was proposed to benefit teachers and youngsters as well as meet compliance with House Bill 72.

Currently, kindergarteners in Big Spring are programmed for two hours and 40 minutes of education a day. However, the state ruled in October 1985 that these children must be taught for at least three hours a day. The school system was able to skirt the law this year by getting a waiver so as not to disrupt the entire elementary school day schedule.

Hise said the new center would enable three hours of instruction without lengthening the school day of older students. Also, he told trustees the Airport center could staff a full-time physical education teacher, and provide a playground tailored to kindergarteners. Physical education is one weakness now in the kindergarten program, he said.

Bringing in a gym teacher, he said, would not only upgrade fitness, but free teachers for 40 minutes of lesson planning and 30 minutes of duty free lunch, which is also mandated by the state.

State program extends relief to ailing banks

Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau
AUSTIN — State-chartered banks hit with economic hard times will be able to take advantage of a state program that provides more leeway to recover.

Richard Nun, an assistant examiner with the State Banking Department, said letters have been recently sent to the approximately 900 state-chartered banks explaining the "capital" requirements policy.

Under the policy, eligible banks will be allowed to let their capital holdings fall under required limits. The Banking Department will then supervise a recovery plan that could take as long as seven years.

The program is similar to recent federal policy granting flexibility to banks with large amounts of oil and agriculture loans.

But the state program extends relief to all banks that can prove difficulties stemming from external causes, such as the devaluation of the Mexican peso, or banks suffering in tourist-oriented regions.

Nun said banks will be accepted under the program on a case-by-case basis. He said only banks that can show problems resulting from external factors, will be eligible. Banks suffering from mismanagement will not be eligible, he said.

Banks are required to maintain a capital level of 6 percent of total assets. Bank capital includes stocks, surplus, and reserve funds.

Banking Department staff members have said many banks have seen their capital level drop below the 6 percent limit because of decreasing oil prices and problems in agriculture.

Nun said there are almost 100 banks "that we're watching more closely than others."

CRMWD working for Stacy permit

Colorado River Municipal Water District directors recommended to General Manager O.H. Ivie Thursday that the district continue working with the U.S. Corps of Engineers to obtain a 404 environmental permit.

Without the permit, construction of the proposed Stacy Dam Reservoir cannot begin by mid-1987 as projected.

Ivie told board members that one 876-acre tract of land at the site has been acquired and condemnation proceedings have been filed in Coleman County for acquisition of 4,100 additional acres. The two properties account for most of the land needed in the area for construction of the dam.

Robert Thompson of Freese & Nichols in Fort Worth told board members construction plans of the dam and spillways were more than 50 percent complete, and the firm anticipates announcing for bids after March 1987.

The board also decided, upon recommendation of the finance committee, not to refund the 1985 bonds issued for the project. They will, however, continue to monitor the bond market. The 1985 bonds total $53,590,000.

In other action, the board: • Decided not to purchase liability insurance for the weather modification project. The Texas Water Commission said the action was in compliance with its rules and regulations.

• Gave Ivie authorization to check with other water districts WATER page 2A

Big Springers, too, have felt the warm temperatures this week. Highs are expected to continue hovering in the 90s, though the forecast offers partly cloudy skies with a chance of isolated thundershowers today and tomorrow.

House panel endorses budget with tax hike

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Budget Committee approved a fiscal 1987 budget that endorses a tax increase but, unlike the Senate, puts most of that money toward deficit cutting instead of Pentagon programs.

Democrats on Thursday pushed through a $994.2 billion spending plan over Republican complaints that it would cripple the military and that Democrats would spend any new tax dollars.

Only a single Republican, Rep. Vin Weber of Minnesota, joined Democrats in the 21-11 final vote to send the package to the floor.

Full House action could come next week. The budget, proposed by committee Chairman William H. Gray III, D-Pa., would increase taxes by $7.3 billion over President Reagan's budget plan — the same increase passed by the Senate last week. There also were similarities in domestic spending priorities for the year beginning Oct. 1.

But while the Senate's bipartisan plan boosted military spending to cover its deficit, the House plan would freeze the military buildup.

The deficit in the House plan would be $137 billion, $7 billion below the statutory limit which the Senate's budget just met.

"They pumped all their dollars into military spending," Gray said of the Senate proposal, while his committee budget "would result in a lower deficit than the Senate plan, and achieves this by spreading the cuts more equitably. Spending cuts are divided almost equally between defense and domestic programs."

Republicans said they couldn't go along with the military cuts or new taxes.

"The Defense Department can't live with that budget," said Rep. Delbert L. Latta of Ohio, senior Republican on the committee. Latta proposed more cuts in domestic programs to bring military spending up to the Senate's level, but was defeated as Democrats muscled their plan through.

Democrats also defeated a Republican amendment to eliminate the tax boost.

"We were getting rolled all day" by the Democrats, Latta complained. He predicted some Pentagon spending would be restored later in conference with the Senate.

The committee plan would cut military budget authority next year to $285 billion, $1.8 billion below this year's level. The plan would hold $3 billion of that aside until Pentagon audits show how past years' increases were spent.

The Senate approved a $301 billion budget for the military, while President Reagan requested $320 billion. Budget authority includes some money actually spent over several years, so actual cash spending totals differ.

The low House figure would constrain new military programs, while actual outlays of cash during the year would rise $6.7 billion to $276.2 billion, about $5.8 billion below the Senate's budget figure.

Even before the final vote, Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger said the House budget was designed for "political bargaining" without regard to "the greatly improved U.S. military posture that adequate resources during the last five years have produced."

In a statement, Weinberger said the committee plan would plunge the Defense Department "back in to the chaotic, unstable, roller-coaster defense budget trends which led to previous inefficiencies and caused large weapon unit cost increases."

Conservative Democrat Marvin Leath of Texas blamed Weinberger for the cut. Congress has been embarrassed by stories of weak military spending controls and has not been told where large inflation increases have gone, he said.

"The Pentagon has addressed this institution," he said.

Animal house

Cat lover adapts habitat to care for endangered species

EULESS (AP) — Past the hamburger stands and convenience stores along Main Street, down a tree-lined residential avenue, behind John Stokes' brick ranch-style house, jaguars, cougars, leopards and ocelots prowl a tree-shaded backyard.

Across the fence, the neighbors' dogs chase and yap at one another, ignoring the large cats that pace just 50 feet away.

Inside, Stokes cradles a 3-week-old leopard in his arms and feeds it from a baby bottle.

"It's something I always wanted to do," says the 41-year-old medical X-ray systems engineer whose hobby is collecting and caring for the cats. "When I was a kid, my parents had to watch me closely at the zoo because I always wanted to climb in with the lions and tigers."

It started four years ago, when he bought a 2-week-old cougar named Mashanta. It accelerated 18 months ago, when he took in a 6-year-old jaguar named Bo and a pair of ocelots named Mork and Mindy.

"I didn't name the ocelots," he says apologetically. "I try to choose more exotic names."

A year ago, he picked up his largest cat, a 165-pound leopard named Wimpy, and Cujo, a 3-year-old cougar. Soon after that, he acquired two more leopards: Sahara, 3, and Maya, 6 months.

Recently Wimpy and Bo got together, and then there were nine. He hasn't named the cub.

With the exception of the leopards, which are native to Africa and Asia, all of the cats are native to Mexico and the Southwest. With the exception of the cougars, all of the cats are considered endangered species.

These are not inexpensive animals. Depending on size and age, cougars run $700 to $1,500. An ocelot can easily cost $3,000. Stokes says he only bought the first cougar and the 6-month-old jaguar. All the others were given to him by people who could no longer care for them or by veterinarians on whom the cats had been dumped.

Maya lives off-the-leash in the house with Stokes and the cub. Among the others, only Mashanta is occasionally allowed out of her cage without a leash. The others remain secured at all times.

As Stokes strolls through the runs and cages in the backyard, each cat shows a distinct personality. Mashanta lays her powerful jaws on his shoulder and rumbles a purr as he scratches her neck and speaks to her in a gentle sing-song voice.

Wimpy perches atop his house, snarling and snapping for several minutes, then abruptly abandons the show to give his paws a thorough cleaning. "He got his name for two reasons," Stokes says. "He eats just like the cartoon character and, aside from all this growling, he really is a wimp. If I went inside the cage, he'd run into his house."

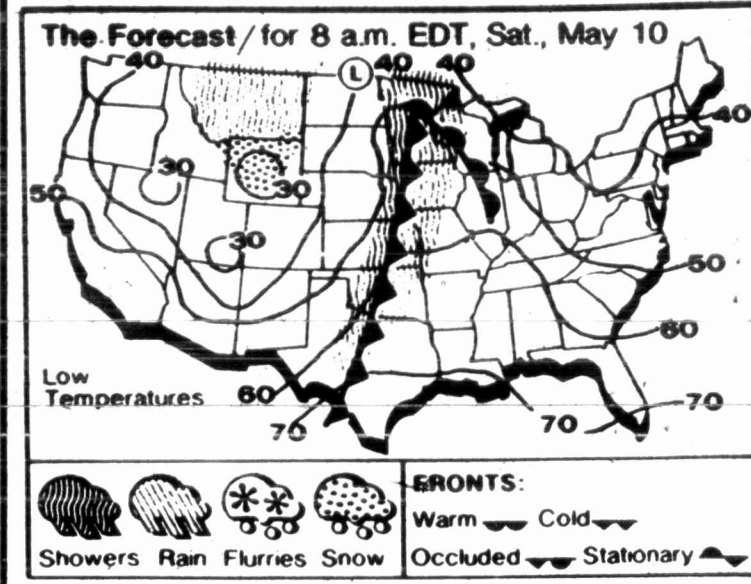

Maya, the 40-pound adolescent, greets visitors by bounding across the patio, pouncing on their feet, tussling with their shoelaces. The favorite toys of young and old, however, are plastic soda pop bottles and bowling balls. "They could go through a basketball a day," Stokes says.

As he enters Bo's 6-by-40-foot run, Stokes moves slowly and steadily. "If I got nervous around her, I'd be lost," he says. As she lolls on top of her house, Stokes playfully bats her huge paws.

John Stokes get a grip on a 6-month-old jaguar that roams in his backyard in Euleus. Stokes started collecting exotic cats four years ago when he bought a 2-week-old cougar.

for kindergarten through fourth grade is due to be phased in by 1988, he said. Already, the ratio applies for kindergarten through second grade.

Hise said the proposed center would free classrooms in Kentwood and Marcy Schools, which are now full, thus allowing the ration to be met.

"Aside from conforming with state legislation, Hise said the center would give "teachers more opportunity to communicate with each other, share ideas, materials, equipment and have more continuity and cohesion in the program."

The center would utilize 13 classrooms, with seven set aside for children who receive full day instruction because of special needs, Hise said. Other rooms would be used for physical education, a teacher lounge and perhaps a school clinic, he said.

"The opportunity exists to improve our kindergarten program from being a good one to a great one, perhaps a model program," Hise said.

But some members of the Kentwood PTA view the new center as a cause for concern.

Kentwood PTA president Douglas Morris told board members that many Kentwood parents see advantages to keeping their kindergartners in the same school as the children's older siblings.

"They (Kentwood parents) feel that there is an advantage of having an older brother or sister taking a younger brother or sister by the hand and making that child feel more secure in the kindergarten situation."

He also said parents told him the transition from kindergarten to first grade would be smoother if a child was allowed to continue school at the same building.

Moreover, Morris said many parents bought homes in the Kentwood addition for the specific reason of having their kids taught by "the great staff at Kentwood."

Morris also expressed concern about kindergartners spending as much as an hour each day on the bus. "There's a negative aspect to a child spending that much time on a bus," he said.

But Wise said he timed the ride and authorities for retaining a representative who would monitor proposed legislation and other matters affecting water interests in the 70th Legislature.

Approved expenditures for three projects. Those projects and costs are $15,000 for an electronics shops building, $15,000 for automation of the Snyder pump station and $10,000 for purchase of a heavy-duty disc plow for brush control in the reservoir basins.

Approved, upon recommendation of the recreation committee, a deviation from structure requirements at a certain location at Lake E. V. Spence.

The deviation allows structures to have mounds or pilings to make a base level at the required elevation, but below the flood easement of 1912.00 feet. Disposal facilities must also comply with state health department standards.

Approved a contract clause with Maybee Oil Company that allows the company to reduce its current 105,000 gallons water usage per day to 52,500 gallons per day that is retroactive to the first of the year.

Approved a request from Sun Oil Company for an easement to construct a power line across the upper end of Lake Spence.

El Paso leads in pollution

EL PASO (AP) — This West Texas city leads the rest of the state in air pollution, but since about half of it comes from next-door Juarez, Mexico, it's hard to decide who should pay to clean up the problem.

Oil supertanker sinking

LONG BEACH, Calif. — A supertanker loaded with 860,000 gallons of crude oil was taking on water and sinking off the coast of Puerto Vallarta, Mexico, today, the Coast Guard said.

The 869-foot Prince William Sound, an American ship, had a crew of 27 on board, said Coast Guard Petty Officer James MacPherson. He didn't know the vessel's home port.

"They are flooding through the engine compartment and have no dewatering capabilities," MacPherson said.

The Coast Guard was notified at 1:30 a.m. today by the supertanker, which has two lifeboats on board. The ship, about 90 miles from the Mexican coast, lost communications almost immediately, he said.

Study focuses on juries

HUNTSVILLE — Women and blacks — groups thought to generally oppose the death penalty — have less of a chance of serving on capital murder juries even though an appeals court ruled minority groups must be fairly represented on such panels, a university study shows.

"It appears clear that the two groups most opposed to the death penalty are also those most often excluded from serving on juries," said Frank P. Williams III, a Sam Houston State University criminologist.

The school released the study examining the death penalty Thursday in the wake of a recent U.S. Supreme Court ruling that may expedite executions in Texas.

Twisters hit homes

EDMOND, Okla. — A supertime tornado that bounced through the southwest part of this Oklahoma City suburb injured 12 people, destroyed dozens of homes, and left residents stunned that no one was seriously hurt.

Police spokesman Lt. Mike Wooldridge, whose home was one of those damaged in the Fairfield housing addition in southwestern Edmond, said 12 people were treated at a local hospital for minor injuries, but there were no fatalities in the Thursday evening storm.

Fire Marshal Ron Williamson said at least 35 homes were destroyed and another 30 or more were damaged.

Candidate withdraws

SAN ANTONIO — A Lyndon LaRouche candidate in a runoff with a Democratic Party regular for the Bexar County chairmanship has withdrawn from the race.

Air Force retiree Donald Varella Thursday withdrew his bid for county chairman and severed all ties with the LaRouche organization.

"Recent developments have made it necessary to re-evaluate my candidacy," Varella said at a news conference.

Varella, 50, said he has learned through the "official grapevine" that Democratic Party officials would begin a smear campaign against him, making it impossible for him to have a fair runoff and work within the party.

Dorothy Labbe, seated, is comforted by her daughter, Rita Jauss, right, and granddaughter Lisa Jauss at an evacuation center in Philadelphia Thursday.

Arson suspect

Man held in apartment fire that killed 8

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A man charged with setting apartment fires that killed eight people was suspected of calling in several recent false alarms, and his picture had been circulated to police and fire stations, authorities said.

Frank A. Jordan, 20, was being held without bail today on eight counts of murder and nine of arson in connection with Thursday's early morning fires at the Latonia Apartments, where he sometimes lived with his mother.

Jordan used a cigarette lighter to ignite material in storage lockers in the basements of the two buildings in the 55-unit garden apartment complex, said Roger Ulshafer, deputy chief fire marshal.

The death toll was the highest due to arson in the city's history, said Fire Commissioner William Richmond.

Police had seen Jordan about two hours before the fires, near the scene of a small house fire about four blocks away, said Chief Inspector Frank Scafidi, head of the homicide division.

He was arrested Thursday at a hospital where he had gone complaining of injuring his back while helping people escape the fire, Scafidi said.

He had been suspected of causing numerous false alarms in the area in recent weeks, and his picture had been circulated at police and fire stations, Ulshafer said.

Residents said a small fire had broken out at the complex two weeks ago, and threats were later painted on a washing machine in a utility room.

The word "death" was painted on the lid of one machine and "You are dead" was written on its side, said Arthur Tizer, 25, who escaped the fire with his wife and their 8-month-old daughter.

Police did not say if they suspected Jordan of writing the words.

The flames moved quickly from the basement, "creating a lot of smoke and felling a lot of people," said Richmond. Heat caused an explosion in one building.

Residents described groping through apartments and hallways filled with acrid smoke, or breaking windows and pushing wives and children to safety.

Air raid heats up talks

WASHINGTON — The atmosphere at the first day of the renewed nuclear arms talks was more tense than usual, with Soviet and American negotiators clashing over the U.S. air raid on Libya, the chief U.S. representative said today.

Max Kampelman, in an interview on NBC-TV's "Today" show, said he was reserving judgment on the talks, the fifth round since last November.

But he said the sessions started off on the wrong note Tuesday, when the Soviet Union's chief negotiator, Victor Karpov, read a statement at the airport in Geneva criticizing the American attack.

Food imports banned

BRUSSELS, Belgium — The Common Market, which already has banned selected food imports from seven East European countries affected by radiation from the Soviet nuclear accident, was seeking today to expand the ban to include all fresh foods.

But a Common Market official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said at least two of the trading bloc's 12 member countries, including Italy, had failed to approve a text declaring a general ban on fresh food imports from Eastern Europe.

The official said Italy obtained a one-day extension of today's deadline to act on the text.

Latin American meet

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica — Ten Latin American leaders ended a meeting here without producing a statement on peace in Central America, dashing the hopes of Costa Rica's new president that his inauguration would launch a new drive toward a regional peace treaty.

The inauguration did, however, produce a statement by the Contadora nations and their support group calling for the Central American nations to sign a peace treaty without delay.

The meeting Thursday night, arranged by Costa Rican President Oscar Arias Sanchez after his inauguration, was aimed at reviving peace talks that have been stalled for nearly seven months.

Attack plan denied

TEL AVIV, Israel — Prime Minister Shimon Peres said today Israel has no intention of attacking Syria.

He blamed Palestine Liberation Organization Chairman Yasser Arafat for stirring up a war scare in the past two weeks by sending reports to Arab countries claiming Israel was planning such an attack.

"I can't see immediate indications of a Syrian attack upon us and the Israeli position is clear: We have no intentions to attack the Syrians," Peres said on Israel radio.

The Israeli prime minister denied reports he also attributed to Arafat that the Soviet Union had intervened to persuade Israel not to launch a pre-emptive strike against Syria.

Sticking by Salt II for convenience

Political leaders often choose to conspicuously refrain from small sins, in order to facilitate large ones. That tactic partly explains President Reagan's reported decision to continue complying with the unratified SALT II treaty on nuclear weapons.

Over his entire career in politics, Reagan has made clear his rejection of the very concept of arms control. His administration, while professing its deep yearning for a treaty with the Soviet Union to reduce each side's nuclear arsenal, has embarked on a program of missile defense — the "Star Wars" initiative — that makes any such agreement practically impossible.

Yet the President knows the political risk of dashing all hope of a deal. Early in his first term, he found that his gratuitously negative attitude backfired. Instead of making converts, he only roused public concern about the arms race and helped to mobilize a well-organized movement in support of a nuclear "freeze."

So he changed tactics, proposing to reduce weapons stockpiles, during the removal of all nuclear weapons from Europe, pledging to erect a defensive shield that would end the threat of a holocaust, meeting with Mikhail Gorbachev in Geneva to discuss a possible treaty.

Coming from a different president, these gestures could have been legitimate grounds for optimism — and even in Reagan's case they served to assuage public fears. But no one should take much solace from them. In fact, they are meant not to end or even slow the nuclear arms race, but to ratify it, by making its continuation politically possible.

That is one of the points of sticking by SALT II, which requires the Pentagon to dismantle two old Poseidon submarines when a new Trident II sub goes to sea next month. The decision reached with a great display of presidential soul-searching, again allows Reagan to portray himself as the dogged champion of arms control, while lamenting its violation by those incorrigible Russians.

This choice is better than the alternative, but it's ridiculous to say, as press secretary Larry Speakes did, that it shows the President has decided to "go the extra mile" for SALT II. If he's so committed, why doesn't he ask the Senate to ratify it? Apparently Reagan will do anything for arms control — except formally commit himself to abide by it.

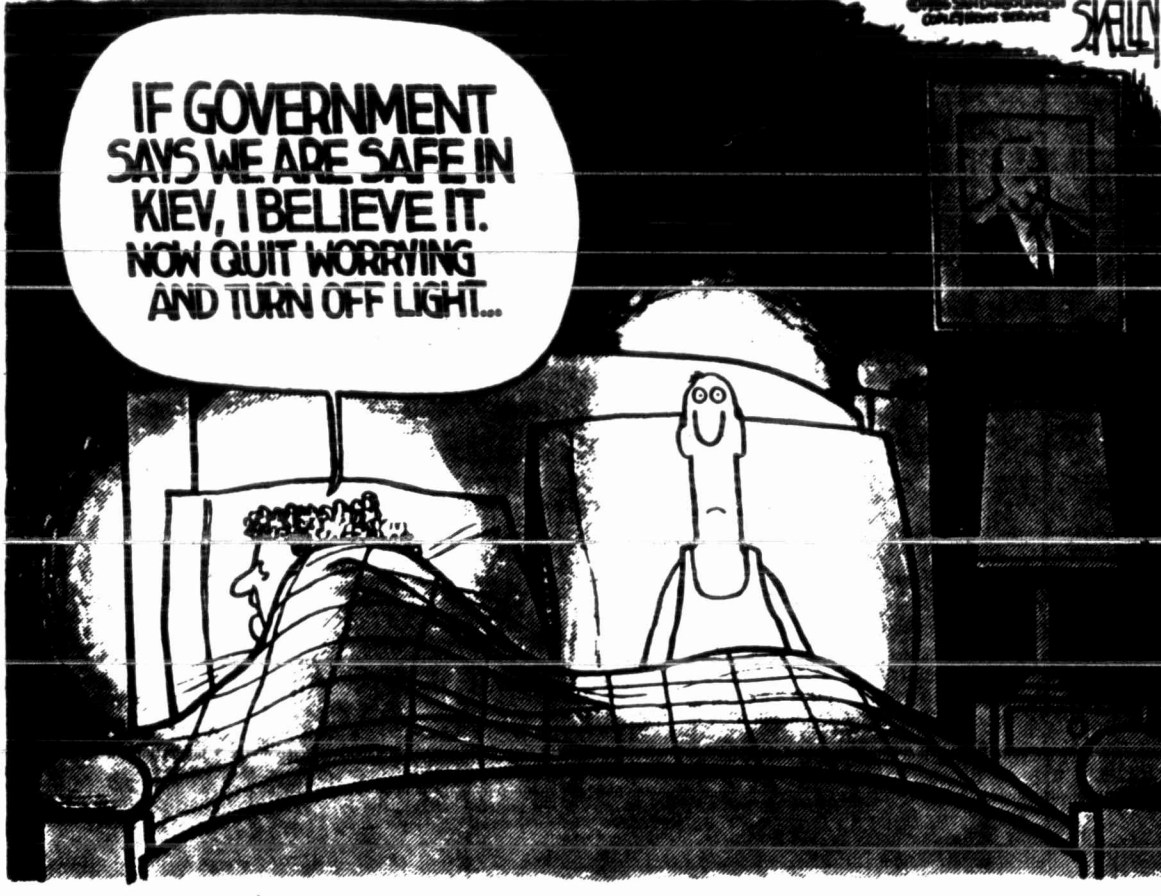

How come? One reason is that doing so would validate the idea of arms control, which would make it harder for Reagan to keep his negotiators stonewalling in Geneva. And it would be a little embarrassing for the man who led the opposition to Jimmy Carter's treaty to have to admit that his predecessor was right after all.

Scrapping the treaty altogether would not only ruin Reagan's effort to portray himself as a sworn enemy of the arms race, but also undermine U.S. security. The alleged Soviet violations of the treaty are all either doubtful or militarily insignificant, and on the important provisions, they have dutifully complied. Over the years they have gotten rid of more than 1,000 land-based missiles, 200 submarine-based missiles and 14 missile-carrying submarines.

If they were to really stop complying, as a presidential decision to abrogate SALT II would have invited them to do, the U.S. would be exposed to the greater risk. Democrat Les Aspin, chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, notes that if both sides were freed of the treaty's constraints, the Soviets could expand their arsenal about 50 percent faster than the U.S. over the next three years.

In this case Reagan, faced with the unyielding military facts and the obvious political considerations, let them overrule his ideology. For that he deserves a small measure of praise. A president who can move from damning this treaty to preserving it, at least temporarily, is not beyond hope. But it is the negotiations in Geneva that will show whether this decision is aimed at advancing arms control or killing it.

Narcotics post nominee at center of controversy

By JACK ANDERSON and DALE VAN ATTA
WASHINGTON — Should a 34-year-old former press secretary for Nancy Reagan, with neither drug enforcement nor diplomatic expertise, be given a key post in the administration's war on international drug smuggling? Is the White House nominee being unfairly picked on by her critics?

Even if the answer to both questions is yes, Senate insiders tell us that Ann Wroblewski, acting assistant secretary of state for international narcotics matters, doesn't stand much chance of confirmation. For starters, some influential senators are miffed because they weren't consulted by the White House before Wroblewski's nomination was sent to Capitol Hill.

But the main reason for senatorial displeasure on both sides of the aisle is Wroblewski's almost total lack of experience in dealing with law enforcement officials and diplomats. Before going to the State Department, she had held jobs as press assistant to a series of Republican members of Congress from Florida and then served in that capacity for the first time.

In fact, some critics grouse that Wroblewski's sole diplomatic experience to date was to set up a luncheon for Mrs. Reagan with the queen of Thailand during the president's Far East trip this month.

As an indication of the State Department's attitude toward Wroblewski, she was bypassed twice for U.S. delegations to important international conferences on narcotics. The first meeting was spearheaded by Attorney General Edwin Meese; the second was set up by the Organization of American States. In both cases, lower-ranking officials in her office were chosen to represent the State Department.

Senate critics are concerned that Wroblewski's nomination signals a denigration of the drug post. Sources told our associate Donald Goldberg that Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, is quietly searching for an alternative candidate.

Meanwhile, Wroblewski apparently got a bum rap from one staunch Reaganite, Customs Service Commissioner William von Raab. In an in temperate private letter to Wroblewski, von Raab accused her of embarrassing and offending him personally. The reason: Wroblewski's office had invited Customs officials from Bulgaria and East Germany to a regional drug conference in Spain late this month.

"I have heard of the bias of some in the (State) Department in being soft on communists, but this is too much!" von Raab wrote. "You have not only embarrassed me in front of all my counterparts in other customs services, but also personally offended my own principles."

Von Raab proceeded to lecture Wroblewski on Bulgaria's implication in arms and heroin smuggling; as for East Germany, he asked querulously: "What will the most vile, oppressive regime in the world add to this session, other than to embarrass the U.S. Customs Service...?"

He concluded in the same contemptuous vein, asking: "Has the State Department developed an institutional form of Alzheimer's disease or just plain taken leave of its senses?"

Neither one, apparently, Wroblewski replied that Bulgaria and East Germany were included in a "draft letter of invitation" sent to her office — by the Customs Service. Not only that, but von Raab's agency indicated it would pay the travel expenses of the two communist delegations, she noted.

Wroblewski told von Raab it was too late to withdraw the invitations, and suggested a diplomatic solution: Cancel the conference.

KREMLIN WATCH: Soviet boss Mikhail Gorbachev has been trying to stir up mischief in Iran and Pakistan by playing on the separatist inclinations of the dissident Baluchis. The Soviets have set up a Baluchi language radio station in Afghanistan, operated by Iranian Baluchis who managed to escape the Ayatollah Khomeini's brutal purge of the communist Tudeh Party a few years ago. The "Movement of the Baluchi People" has been established under Kremlin auspices, and some guerrillas have been trained. Incitement of separatist minorities is a dangerous game for the Soviet Union to play, considering how many it has itself.

Junk mail can sober one up

By SCOTT FITZGERALD

Once your name makes a mailing list, forget it. You're a dead duck.

Sorting through a recent collection of junk mail, I'm amazed, simply amazed.

Free Trial plus Special Introductory Price, the brochure says, if I merely pick up the phone and dial an 800 number to request "The Iacocca Tapes — An Autobiography."

The tapes, according to an enclosed personal and confidential letter addressing me as Mr. Fitzgerald, contain Lee Iacocca's expert ideas and no-nonsense advice on how to get to the top and what to do when you get there.

Have any doubts? Well — go on, read that brochure.

Car and Driver magazine says of Iacocca that he's a "very tough man. One does not rise to the top of an animal farm like the Old Ford Motor Company and then drag on a plug horse like the Old Chrysler Corporation back onto its feet by behaving like Rebecca of Sunnyside Farm."

That did it. No more Rebecca of Sunnyside Farm image for me.

I'm gonna get me those tapes and become as the brochure states, one of those people "with fire in their bellies" who "tend to make their own luck."

Another brochure I received this week was from Effective Learning Systems Inc. of Edina, Minn. — "The Love Tapes" now available in Subliminal Version.

These, according to the brochure, are powerful effective tapes for: self-image, deep relaxation, attracting more love, money, you know — all the goodies of life.

If I wish, I can listen to the Love Tapes interchangeably. Two a day. One a day. Another tomorrow.

Two particular tapes that caught my eye — "Loving Your Body" and "The Joy of Loving."

According to the brochure, one woman after listening to "Loving Your Body" took a quantum leap in an upward positive movement.

She found the tapes "transforming."

That did it. I'm sold. I'm gonna get me those love tapes and love my body up.

I'll take a few of them quantum leaps in the air and transform.

And when it's all over, I'll know I've been suckered again.

On this date:

In 1754, Benjamin Franklin's Pennsylvania Gazette ran the first American newspaper cartoon, depicting the colonies as a divided snake. The caption read: "Join or die."

In 1864, during the Civil War, Union Gen. John Sedgwick was killed by a Confederate sharpshooter at Spotsylvania, Va. (His last words: "They couldn't hit an elephant at this dist...")

In 1913, the 17th amendment to the Constitution, providing for the election of senators by popular vote rather than selection by state legislatures, was ratified.

In 1926, Americans Richard Byrd and Floyd Bennett became the first men to make an airplane flight over the North Pole.

In 1936, Italy annexed Ethiopia. In 1980, 35 people were killed when a Liberian freighter struck the Sunshine Skyway Bridge over Tampa Bay, Fla., causing the collapse of a 1,400-foot section.

Ten years ago: An uneasy quiet settled over Beirut, Lebanon, one day after the country's Parliament had elected Elias Sarkis president.

Five years ago: Secretary of State Alexander Haig was cheered and heckled as he delivered a commencement speech at Syracuse University in upstate New York.

Asian trip has left some frayed feelings

By MICHAEL PUTZEL

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan proclaimed his 13-day trip to the Far East a "triumph," but he had a bumpy ride that left some bruised feelings which may take time to heal.

At the Tokyo economic summit, the most productive agenda items were U.S. initiatives. And although it is too soon to judge their long-range effects, the summit leaders at least made a start toward closer cooperation in fighting terrorism and better coordination of trade and monetary policy.

On his way to the summit, however, the president stopped for a rest in Honolulu and telephoned deposed Philippines leader Ferdinand Marcos in a call some senior advisers wished he hadn't felt obligated to make. It would come back to haunt him later.

And before it did, another problem intervened.

Reagan went on to the Indonesian island of Bali primarily to rest and adjust to time zone changes before Tokyo and three days of intensive talks there over lunches, dinners and in between.

But while taking it easy on the lush tropical island, the president was to meet with his host, President Suharto of Indonesia, and address the foreign ministers of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations.

The administration's interests in Indonesia and its ASEAN neighbors are largely strategic and economic. The Indonesian archipelago of more than 13,500 islands is a non-Communist bastion that survived a close call 20 years ago when an insurrection nearly established it as another Asian Communist country similar to China, North Korea and what was then only North Vietnam.

Since then, the country has experienced stupendous economic growth, and Reagan wanted to stress the progress that had been made in a non-aligned but friendly nation.

There was no intention of focusing attention on human rights issues in a country that has no true democratic tradition and tolerates dissent only up to a point.

But the presence of two Australian broadcast journalists in Reagan's press entourage pushed that issue to the forefront when they were barred from entry by Suharto, who had been angered by an article in a Sydney newspaper.

After initial hesitation, White House officials decided they had no choice but to bring the unwelcome guests into the country and let the Suharto government throw them out, which it did in full view of a press corps hungry for news on what for Reagan was a leisurely journey across the Pacific.

The president and his party tried to gloss over the issue during the Suharto talks but not without some embarrassment on both sides.

Bali was also the site of Reagan's first encounter with the new Philippine government, whose vice president and foreign minister, Salvador Laurel, came to the ASEAN meeting. Separate talks were arranged for both Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Reagan.

During the Shultz meeting, which took place first, the secretary was said to have been irritated by Laurel's "laundry list" of aid requests, which he sought to add to the $150 million package the administration had announced just before Reagan left Washington.

And Laurel followed that with a news conference, in which he not only spoke openly about the fledgling government's need for substantially more outside assistance, but also said some "cobwebs of doubt" remained in the minds of many Filipinos over whether Reagan still supported Marcos or recognized the new government of President Corazon Aquino.

Sources who discussed the matter privately said the Reagan meeting, by contrast, went well and that the president made "a very personal statement" about the special closeness between Filipinos and Americans, particularly in times of adversity.

But Shultz, tired and irritable and still smarting over Laurel's public statements, did not disclose that part of the conversation at his own news conference later the same day.

Instead, when pressed by reporters about whether the president gave Laurel the assurances he sought, the secretary told them to ask Laurel, who was no longer available.

Before leaving the summit, Reagan called the meeting of seven industrial democracies a "triumph at Tokyo." But a U.S. initiative to bring stability to the world monetary system was followed immediately by another jump in the value of the yen, a most unwelcome development in Japan because the rising yen and falling dollar make Japanese exports more expensive — and thus less competitive — abroad.

That brought a rain of domestic criticism down on Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone and could, if sustained, hurt his chances if he decides to seek a rule change within his party that would permit him to take a third two-year term.

Michael Putzel has covered the White House since 1979 and accompanied the president on his journey to the Far East.

Senate backs military revamp plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Spurred by complaints about faltering military effectiveness and powered by a unique bipartisan coalition, Congress is moving toward enacting the most sweeping reorganization of the leadership of the nation's armed forces in 30 years.

The Senate gave that move powerful impetus Wednesday, voting 95-0 for legislation aimed at ending disruptive interservice rivalries and improving military operations involving more than one service.

The House is expected to begin consideration of its version of the bill next month. The bill, resisted by many Pentagon officials but supported by President Reagan, strengthens the hand of the chairman of the military joint chiefs of staff and increases the authority of joint commanders while reducing that of the individual uniformed service chiefs. It also makes hundreds of changes in current military procedures and requires a 10 percent reduction in the Pentagon's civilian work force.

The measure is the product of more than four years of hearings and study by the Senate Armed Services Committee, its chairman, Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., and its ranking Democrat, Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga.

Goldwater, who contended that cooperation between the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps is so poor as to endanger the success of future military operations, called the passage of the measure the proudest moment of his career. Goldwater retires at the end of the year and the Senate, in an unusual tribute, voted to name the entire bill, "The Barry Goldwater Department of Defense Reorganization Act of 1986."

"If this bill does what it is intended to do, it is going to make a better fighting force out of the military," Goldwater told reporters after the vote. "What this bill really does is to give the commanders in the field more responsibility and authority to move."

"I'd say the biggest advance is the overall thrust to give responsibility and incentive to the armed services to think beyond one service," Nunn said.

"This landmark legislation is something the country needed," said Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia. "The current arrangements favor the parochial interests of the services too much and the broader interests of the nation too little."

The legislation, in effect, gives the chairman of the joint chiefs and the commanders of the worldwide unified commands more authority to set priorities and guide and coordinate military policy.

The Senate bill designates the chairman as the "principal military adviser" to the president, the National Security Council and the secretary of defense.

While the other chiefs are not cut out, the role of the chairman is enhanced.

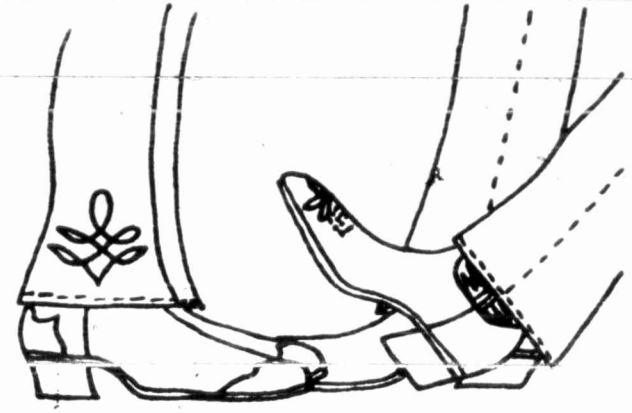

Several former secretaries of defense have complained that the joint chiefs acting as a unified body produced least-common-denominator advice aimed mainly at protecting the interests of the individual uniformed services.

VA loans drying up fast

WASHINGTON (AP) — The home mortgage program for veterans is threatened with a shutdown next month unless Congress approves a second increase in the Veterans Administration's loan guarantee authority this year.

The drop in mortgage interest rates that sparked this year's nationwide homebuying spree created an unprecedented demand for VA-guaranteed mortgages, R.J. Vogel, the VA's benefits director, told a House subcommittee Wednesday.

The VA's $18.2 billion loan guarantee ceiling will be hit next month if the heavy volume of applications continues, Vogel told the Veterans Affairs housing and memorial affairs subcommittee.

Vogel's testimony followed Senate approval Tuesday night of a bill to raise the VA's guarantee authority to $30.9 billion. In March, Congress raised the loan guarantee authority from $12 billion to its current level.

The VA projects that it will guarantee 400,000 new mortgages during the current fiscal year, which ends Sept. 30, compared to the 179,000 it backed in the 1985 fiscal year.

Spring cleaning pick-up set for Monday

The pick-up day for Area 4 has been changed from Saturday to Monday to allow enough time during the weekend for cleaning up the areas and getting the large items on the curb

The next scheduled spring cleaning day for pick-up of large items has been changed from Saturday to Monday, said a City Hall spokesman.

The pick-up day for Area 4 was changed because a number of people did not have sufficient time on Saturday mornings to clean up their areas and get items on the curb before the garbage trucks pass, according to the spokesman.

Area 4 is bounded on the north by the railroad, south and west by FM 700, and east by Gregg Street.

Changing collection days to Monday will allow more time for individuals to get unwanted items out to the curb for pick-up, the spokesman said.

The remainder of the Spring Clean '86 will be as follows:

- Area 5 — north railroad, south 11th Place, west Gregg Street, east Farm Road 700, May 19.

- Area 6 — North 11th Place, south and east Farm Road 700 and west Gregg Street, May 26.

- Area 7 — Coronado Avenue, Highland Drive, Capehart, Douglas Street, north Farm Road 700, south city limits, west city limits and east Highway 87, June 3.

Band cancels European trip

ARLINGTON (AP) — A high school band has canceled a summer trip to Europe for fear of terrorism.

Martin High School's jazz band was picked to play at the Montreux Jazz Festival in Switzerland after winning a high school jazz contest at the University of Texas at Arlington in March.

The 21-member band was scheduled to play in Italy and Germany and planned to visit France and Austria.

After the Libyan air raid, the band considered playing only in Switzerland, said director Jim McDaniel.

Soviet secrecy casting shadow on arms talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet secrecy about the accident at its Chernobyl nuclear plant is casting a shadow over arms control talks that resumed yesterday in Geneva, U.S. officials say.

One official, who briefed reporters Wednesday in advance of the talks, echoed President Reagan's statement earlier in the day that Chernobyl clearly had demonstrated the need for effective arms control verification measures.

"Imagine what they do to priority national security items if they handle themselves like this with just a civilian power plant," said the official, who spoke only on condition of anonymity.

Reagan and other U.S. officials have complained that the Soviet Union did not do enough to warn neighboring countries of the threat of radioactivity that was spread beyond its borders by the April 26 accident.

The president renewed this criticism as he pressed U.S. demands that any arms control agreement contain strong provisions for verification to assure compliance, and urged the Soviets to "get down to business" at the negotiating table.

"After resisting for years U.S. proposals for verification, the Soviet Union recently has professed in its public statements that it now shares our interest in effective verification," he said.

"We are seeking to put these Soviet pronouncements to the test at the negotiating table," Reagan said. "In light of the unfortunate events of the past week, moreover, the need for effective verification measures has become clearer than ever."

Meanwhile, Kenneth L. Adelman, the director of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, said in a written statement that although the Soviets "appear interested in projecting a more innovative image, their general approach to arms control has not shifted in any fundamental way."

Adelman argued that events since the superpower summit last November point to a continued — "perhaps even heightened — Soviet tendency to regard arms control more as a propaganda tool than as a means to enhance mutual security."

Reagan said the instructions he has given U.S. negotiators "provide them with the flexibility they need to explore all promising approaches for agreement."

"It is high time now for the Soviet Union to get down to business by addressing seriously with us in Geneva the practical implementation of the mutual commitments which Mr. Gorbachev and I made" at last November's U.S.-Soviet summit, he said. "If the Soviets truly join us in this vital effort, real progress in nuclear arms reductions is clearly within our reach."

The chief Soviet negotiator, Victor P. Karpov, on the other hand, said on arrival in Geneva on Tuesday that the United States has done "virtually nothing" to carry out the summit pledge to speed up the pace of the talks.

The official who briefed reporters said the United States would go into the negotiations prepared to focus on four areas it considers to be highest priority.

He said the objectives would be deeply reducing offensive weapons, blocking the Soviets from achieving a first strike capability, putting an end to Soviet violations and beginning a shift from offensive to defensive weapons under the administration's proposed Strategic Defense Initiative, or "Star Wars," program.

Reagan touched on the same objectives in his statement and said, "Unfortunately, little progress was made during the most recent round of the negotiations, largely due to the failure of the Soviet Union to act on the commitments it undertook in the Nov. 21 joint statement" issued at the Geneva summit.

The U.S. official declined to predict whether the new round will lead to progress, saying, "I can't predict what's in their (the Soviets') briefcase."

Registration for talented youth slated

Applications will be accepted through May 16 for "College for Kids," an enrichment program for high academic achievers and talented youth, ages 11-15.

Applications may be obtained from the continuing education office at Odessa College or from the student's school.

"College for Kids" meets 8 a.m. to 12:10 p.m. Monday through Thursday, June 9-19. Cost of the camp is $88, which includes four daily class sessions.

Students can choose from courses such as "Showtime," a mini-musical drama class designed to develop singing, dancing and acting talent and technical skills.

Students can also enroll in "Up, Up and Away! NASA and Space," a science class in which students actually build small flying machines.

Then there's "Introduction to Video Production," a television journalism workshop that teaches the fundamentals of TV production and techniques of the news media. Other classes to be offered include beginning intermediate and advanced microcomputers, personal development, art, touch typing and math.

Youth applying for the program must meet certain criteria, including achievement test scores and recommendations from the student's school.

Because of the popularity of "College for Kids," early registration is urged. For more information, contact the continuing education office at Odessa College, 335-6582.

West believes in good, clean fun

By CARLEEN EVERETT
Lifestyle Editor

Creating activities for the youth is a way to show kids they can have good clean fun in a Christian environment without drugs, said Eddie West, new music and youth director at College Baptist Church.

"It's an alternative to things they could be involved in that may not be good for them," he says.

West came to Big Spring in April with his new wife, Brenda, from Bethel Baptist Church in Roswell, N.M. There he was the music and youth director for five years, he said. "It was my first full-time job out of college."

A man who thought he'd never be free from the student life, West graduated in 1978 from Oklahoma Baptist University where he received a bachelor of church music degree with a major in voice and a minor in organ. After three years at Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary in Fort Worth, he completed his master's degree in church music with a major in music education and a minor in youth education.

West chose his profession because "I felt like God wanted me to do this," he said. "I guess you could say it's a calling. I love music and enjoy working with the youth. And in the Baptist Church there is a demand for music and youth directors."

At College Baptist, West is responsible for planning all worship services, scheduling soloists and quartets, and rehearsing the choirs. He works with three of the four choirs at the church: "The Golden Glory Gang," composed of senior adults; the sanctuary choir; and the older children's choir for grades 1-5. Paula Hill works with the preschool choir, he said.

As activities director for the youth, West plans retreats, fellowships, parties and "fun things," he said. He also coordinates with the Bible study teachers and helps them "reach" the students.

"I love what I do. It's a privilege to do something I enjoy," he said. "So many people work in jobs they dislike. The first time I got a paycheck, I felt guilty because I enjoy it so much."

As music and youth director, West has set some goals, which include "bringing a saving knowledge of Jesus Christ as their saviour to the students and applying the Bible to their lives," he said. "The Bible, even though it's a very old book, is a very current book."

West is an avid swimmer and enjoys yard work, painting and tinkering around the house. He also enjoys singing and playing the piano and organ.

Moving to Big Spring brought a "new challenge" to West's life. He likes it here, he said. "I

Women of Church of God meet

Women of the First Church of God met Monday in the church sanctuary for their monthly meeting.

Renee Loy, spiritual life director, presented a program entitled "Free Gift, One String Attached," written by Shirley Hardwick. She was assisted by Nelda Reagan, Elsie Smallwood and Jodi Rivers.

Program objectives were to remember and appreciate God's gift of love to each of us; to discover possible gifts to use in serving others; and to celebrate our spiritual birth.

Sentenced prayers were voiced by each lady along with the drawing of a spiritual gift. Next meeting will be in the church sanctuary June 2 at 7 p.m.

Several delegates will attend the West Texas District Family Camp at Camp Inspiration in Eastland May 16-18. This will be the 25th anniversary of the camp. A service will be held May 17 at 2 p.m. to dedicate Inspirational Walk, the youth building, and the pecan tree contributed by the District Women of the Church of God.

Mother of the Year honored

During the 10:50 a.m. service on May 11 in the sanctuary at the Church of the Nazarene, the Mother of the Year will be revealed and honored, said Dr. Carl Powers, pastor of the Church of the Nazarene.

Mother of the Year was selected by a secret vote of the congregation last Sunday. Her selection was based on her example of love, dedication to her family, her Christian example of motherhood and filial piety, Powers said.

Special music will be provided by reJoice Choir and Phyllis Powers will be soloist. Powers will present a Mother's Day sermon "She's the

Religion Roundup

By the Associated Press

NEW YORK — Amid a reported wave of objections to a joint Lutheran commission's decision to make Milwaukee the headquarters for a planned merger of three Lutheran denominations, Bishop Stanley E. Olson said: "There is no support out here for Milwaukee, and I think the decision has to be killed."

Olson, head of the Pacific Southwest Synod of the Lutheran Church in America, largest of the three bodies, complained that getting flight transfers into Milwaukee were difficult and the city lacked prominence. In Milwaukee, Glen Holmquist, an assistant to the LCA bishop in that area, said there was "deep disappointment" at the negative reactions to the Milwaukee choice, adding: "We feel a bit put down."

WASHINGTON — In dealing with a growing shortage of Roman Catholic priests, a majority of U.S. Catholics think it is more important for the church to develop good lay leadership than to recruit more priests, a survey finds.

Sociologist Dean Hoge of the Catholic University of America says the study finds that 54 percent of Catholic adults say providing for more participatory parish leadership takes priority over enlisting more priests.

HOUSTON — United Methodist Bishop Finis A. Crutchfield, disagreeing with the broad religious criticism of President Reagan's backing of rebels against the Nicaraguan government, says church protests don't represent the rank-and-file.

Crutchfield wrote to Reagan, saying, "The overwhelming majority of church people support your position."

NEW YORK — Proposing that videotapes of Jewish high holiday services be supplied to synagogues to familiarize them with the liturgies, Casntor Saul Z. Hammerman, president of the Cantors Assembly of Conservative Judaism, says: "We lead prayers for a generation of illiterate Jews — not ignorant or stupid, mind you, but simply untutored in the glories of our heritage." He says providing videocassettes to local congregations would enable them to "more readily understand and follow high holiday ritual."

CHICAGO — Eighteen Soviet church leaders, arriving Thursday, are making an official, decennial visit to churches of the United States — an event that has occurred once each 10 years for the last four decades.

American church representatives began the process in 1956, visiting the Soviet churches, which returned the visit that year. The periodic exchange has continued since under sponsorship of the National Council of Churches. The current two-week Soviet stay, the fourth such visit, is led by Metropolitan Filaret of Moscow, head of the Russian Orthodox Church's external relations department.

The group, after initial activities in the Chicago area, will then be hosted in groups of two-to-four by churches in Minneapolis, Minn.; Corning, N. Y.; Wausau Wis.; Cleveland, Ohio, and on Long Island before a farewell worship service and banquet in New York.

Besides the official delegations, various other Christian trips have been arranged between the two countries, including a planned visit to the Soviet Union this summer by about 250 American Christians.

WASHINGTON — Defenders of church-state separation say they plan an appeal of a court's decision throwing out challenges to President Reagan's appointment of an ambassador to the Vatican.

The Robert L. Maddox, executive director of Americans United, says the group may ask for a rehearing and if that is not successful will carry the case to the U.S. Supreme Court.

The federal appeals court in Philadelphia last week rejected religious and other organizations challenging the appointment had no legal standing to bring the suit, and that it would have failed anyway since the president alone has power to appoint ambassadors.

Dear Abby

Teen-aged virgin wonders how far is too far

DEAR ABBY: I am a 19-year-old college student, and even though I've dated quite a bit, I'm rather naive about sex. I am still a virgin and hope to remain one until I marry. Don't get me wrong, I'm not "Goody Two Shoes," but I don't want to risk an unwanted pregnancy.

I'm dating a guy right now who has been around. He knows how I feel about sex before marriage, so he's never pressured me to go all the way, but I've come closer with him than I have with any other guy. I'm ashamed to tell you how far we've gone, but I'm still a virgin (I think).

A long time ago you explained how a virgin could get pregnant. I'm sorry I didn't save it, but I never dreamed I'd need it. Well, last night I was with this guy and things really got out of hand. Everything happened so fast. Please run that piece again about how a virgin can get pregnant. I'm worried.

B., ST. PAUL
DEAR B.: The piece is from my booklet, "What Every Teen-ager Ought to Know." Many junior and senior high school teachers wrote to say that they had read it aloud to their students:

HOW TO GET PREGNANT
One of the questions I have been asked often by teens is: "How far can I go without getting pregnant?"

That is not a dumb question. It's a very intelligent one. A lot of kids get aroused by just lying close to each other while kissing. Then they just naturally proceed to the next step, which is petting.

Sometimes they remove some of their clothing because it's "in the way," or they burrow underneath it to explore each other's bodies with their hands. This is known as heavy petting, or "doing everything else but."

The technical (and legal) definition of sexual intercourse is "penetration." (The male's sex organ must penetrate the female's.) However, as impossible as it may sound, in the medical literature can be found cases where there has been no penetration — the girl remained a virgin, but after engaging in heavy petting, she found herself pregnant. How can that be? Simple. The boy and girl were lying very close to each other (unclothed), doing "everything but," when a small amount of sperm leaked out ... near (not inside, but very close to) the girl's vagina. The sperm got into the moisture around the vagina and found its way up into it, and fertilized the egg!

DEAR ABBY: This is to express my appreciation for printing that excellent poem, "Slow Me Down, Lord." At 91 years old, I am memorizing it to use in some of my meetings with older persons. Gratefully,

THE REV. H.T. MILLER,
ANDERSON, IND.

(Every teen-ager should know the truth about sex, drugs and how to be happy. For Abby's booklet, send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents) self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38825, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Dr. Donohue

Infants birthmark may fade

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I have my first baby at home and have noticed an ugly red mark on her neck. It is where even a relatively short hair style would probably cover it up, so it would not be a cosmetic nuisance. She was born with this. I know it is really nothing to worry about, but with so much cancer talk around I am concerned. And I wonder if it will stay there or perhaps fade with years. — Mrs. I.B.

You describe a portwine stain. Just about every infant, if you look closely enough, will show evidence of some degree of skin stain of this kind. It can range from pinkish to deep purple. And it can be really large in area or just a small spot. In some it can extend on the body or face or neck. I'm sure it isn't cancerous.

We're not sure why these stains occur, except that they represent an irregularity in how blood vessels develop locally. With the millions of tiny capillaries throughout the body, a handful are bound to act this way. In the case of portwine stain, a few capillaries have become a bit too dilated and have filled with red blood cells. Some theorize that the vessel dilation may be from lack of proper nerve supply to them.

I can't predict whether your daughter's stain will stay in its present status, darken or, as most do, fade with time. Birthmarks are usually harmless quirks, although some can be quite serious. For example, there is concern for such marks that extend into deep tissue. Portwine stains are not this kind.

There is nothing you can or need to do to stop the process. However, later in her life if there is need for it, there are many cosmetic corrections available, especially if such a stain is on a prominent part of the anatomy. A dermatologist is expert in evaluating and treating such conditions.

For now, you can trust your pediatrician to keep a watch over the area. Such marks should be brought to the doctor's attention if he is not already aware of them.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: What is the parotid gland? Does it ever cause a swelling near the ear? Can it be removed? Can it be cancerous? — Mrs. F.D.

The parotids (puh-ROT-ids) are a pair of small glands located at the angle of the jawbone, just under and to the front of the ears. They are saliva producers.

You will get a good referent for them if I tell you that these glands are ones that usually swell noticeably with mumps. Yes, a tumor can cause them to swell, but those tumors are usually non-malignant.

Other causes of parotid swelling? There are many. Bacterial infection, stones in the ducts and certain drugs, like those containing iodine. Swelling might occur with several kinds of illnesses, like liver cirrhosis, diabetes, high triglycerides. Pregnancy might cause a swelling in some women. In short, they are glands that react easily to events like infection or any disturbance from the norm.

You ask about surgery. They can be removed totally or in part, for example, depending on the tumor type, its size or its degree of spread. Removal requires surgical skill, since the trigeminal nerve, the one serving the facial area, passes through the immediate area.

The booklet "Dizzy Spells" discusses loss of balance, vertigo and nausea, Meniere's disease and labyrinthitis. For a copy write to Dr. Donohue in care of the Big Spring Herald, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, IL 60611. Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 50 cents. Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

NCAA slaps TCU with stiff fine

FORT WORTH (AP) — Texas Christian University will be banned from participating in a bowl game for a year under the NCAA probation to be announced today it has been learned by The Associated Press.

TCU football Coach Jim Wacker held an early team meeting with the players before today's scheduled press conference to announce the sanctions received by the Horned Frogs who admitted boosters paid at least seven players.

Players were mostly tight-lipped after the 45-minute meeting with Wacker, but the indications were TCU's penalties had been lessened by the NCAA because of self-disclosure.

"The one-year ban on bowls is going to hurt the seniors, but we can live with it," said Ricky Stone of the Horned Frog football team. "The bowl ban is really the only bad part. It hurts the seniors and except for that, though, the NCAA action is fair."

Sophomore Jarrod Delaney said Wacker didn't give the Horned Frogs all the details.

However, Delaney said, "The penalty wasn't severe and we all have a good attitude about it. The way Coach Wacker talked he seemed almost to be happy. We're just glad it's over."

The NCAA's David Berst, head of the organization's enforcement arm, was expected to give the details later followed by TCU Chancellor William E. Tucker.

TCU wasn't expected to announce an appeal of the penalties.

Texas Christian knew from the moment it turned itself in that the day of reckoning with the NCAA would come in a case involving cash payments of thousands of dollars from boosters to the seven players, including All-American Kenneth Davis.

The Horned Frogs, in effect, threw themselves upon the mercy of the court.

TCU's case of self disclosure was the first in NCAA history. Then the Horned Frogs sat back and waited.

Tucker had confirmed Tuesday that TCU received notice of the upcoming penalties.

A source close to the investigation had indicated that the penalties were milder than those discussed by school officials and the NCAA's Committee on Infractions.

The penalties that had been discussed included a drastic reduction in scholarship awards of 35 over a two-year period. Also included was a one-year ban on bowl games and television appearances and three years probation.

TCU had 15 days in which to decide whether to accept the penalties or appeal. Historically, such appeals have not been successful.

On the afternoon of Sept. 19, following one of Coach Jim Wacker's "honesty and integrity" sermons, a player approached a TCU assistant and admitted that he and five others were receiving cash payments from a secret alumni slush fund.

The revelation reportedly came from Davis, TCU's first consensus All American since Bob Lilly and the player most responsible for leading the Horned Frogs out of football's dark ages.

Nicknamed the "Temple Tornado" to enhance his Heisman image, Davis was Saturday's hero in 1984 as TCU won eight of its first nine games and flirted with a SWC title before season ending losses to Texas and Texas A&M.

"Cinderella's a Frog," Wacker chortled during these heady times.

A remorseful Davis would say later:

"The money was there... That's the biggest reason I took it. Because it was there."

Davis said he received some $20,000 during his days at TCU.

Wacker talked with the six players before suspending them that evening, then notified Athletic Director Frank Windeger and Chancellor Tucker of his actions.

They concurred.

The suspension not only crippled the offense but jettisoned five defensive starters as well: Egypt Allen, Gary Spann, Gearid Taylor, Darron Turner and Marvin Foster.

The scandal subsequently claimed a seventh player on Sept. 24, reserve tight end Ron Zell Brewer.

With the campus and the conference still in a state of shock, Fort Worth oilman Dick Lowe identified himself as the administrator of the slush fund and also implicated former TCU coach F.A. Dry, now an assistant to Grant Teaff at Baylor.

Lakers drop Mavs

DALLAS (AP) — The aroused Los Angeles Lakers charged into the NBA western conference playoff finals on Thursday night with a 120-107 victory over the upstart Dallas Mavericks behind Kareem Abdul-Jabbar's 27 points and Earvin Johnson's clutch fourth quarter play.

The Lakers, the defending world champions, took the bitter best-of-seven series from the feisty and talkative Maverick's 4-2. The Lakers will play Houston, who dispatched the Nuggets in overtime last night.

The Lakers built a 73-53 lead early in the third period, then had to beat back a Maverick rally that narrowed the deficit to 91-89 early in the fourth period.

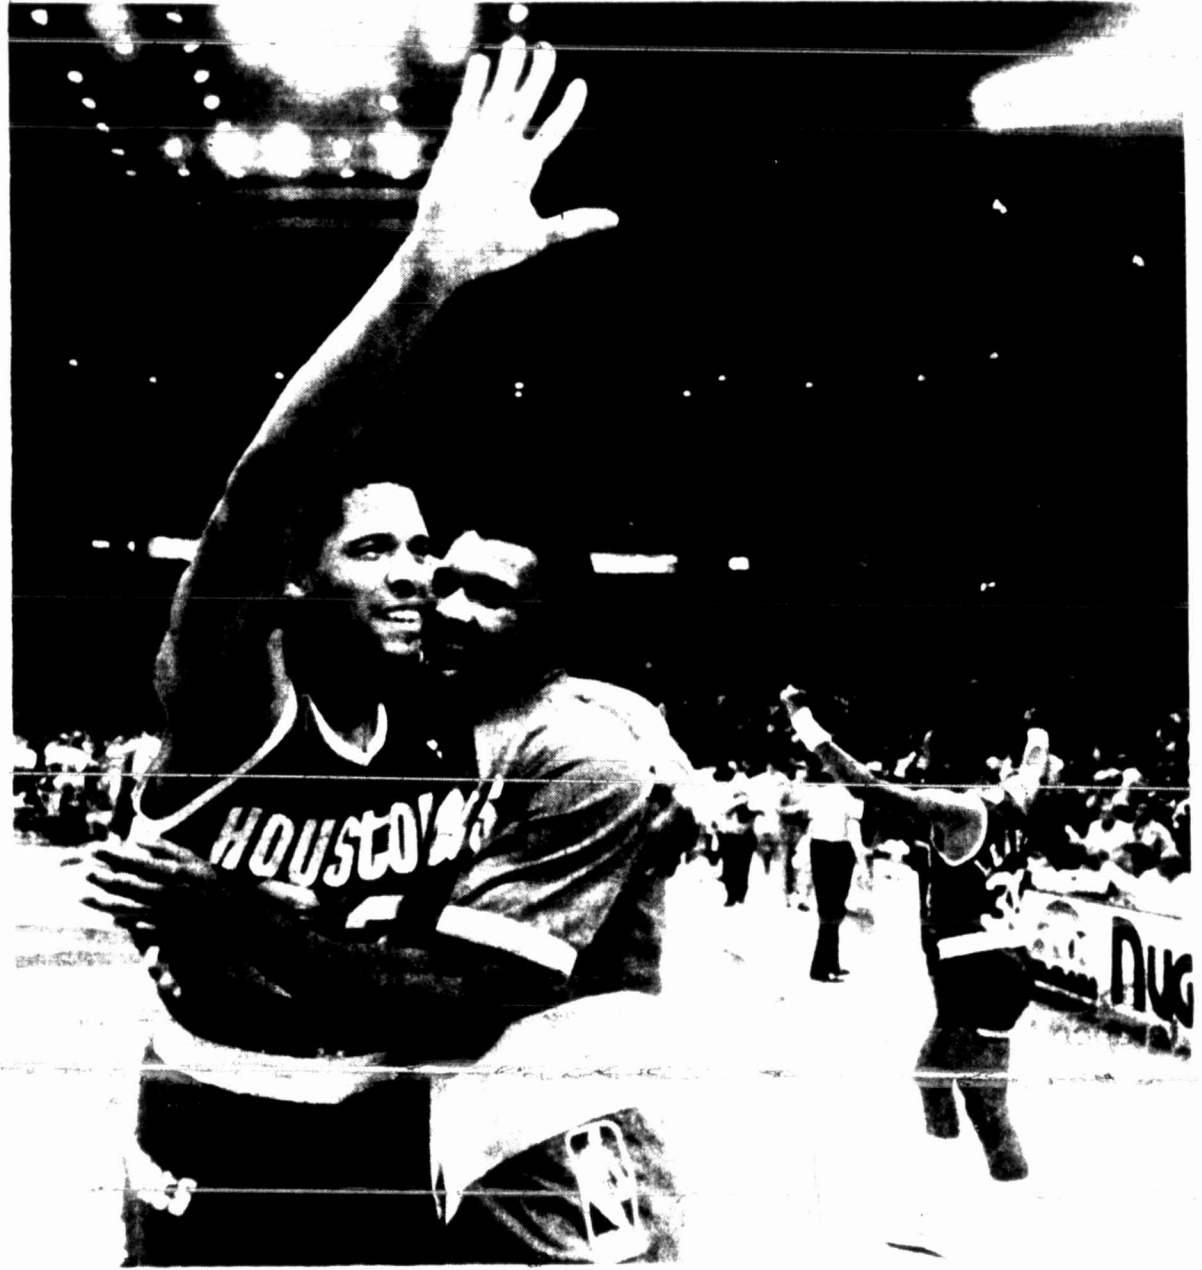

Mark Aguirre, who injured an ankle and missed most of the fourth period, had 14 of his 28 points in the third period.

Dallas' Rolando Blackman scored 12 straight points at the start of the fourth period.

Worthy and Johnson got the Laker offense into gear. Blackman finished with 23.

Worthy had 21 points and Johnson added 23, including 13 in the fourth period. Johnson made nine free throws in the quarter.

The Lakers were called "clowns" by Dallas General Manager Norm Sonju before the game, but the intense defending champions took control from the start.

Bring on the Lakers!

Hayes out of slump; takes Nelson lead

DALLAS (AP) — Mark Hayes, delighted with the apparent end of a four-year slump, put at least one worry behind him.

"Maybe," he said Thursday after shooting a six-under-par 64 for a two-stroke lead in the storm-interrupted first round of the Byron Nelson Classic, "I don't have to worry about making the cut."

And that's been a problem this season for Hayes, who once was ranked among golf's more promising young players.

"It looks like I've been trying to miss the cut this year. I'd be four or five shots under the cut with five holes to play and then make double bogey or something and miss it again," said Hayes, who has failed to qualify for the final 36 holes in half his starts this year.

But since he held a two-shot lead when a thunderstorm forced a suspension of play late Thursday, his chances of failing to qualify for the final 36 holes seems remote.

Twenty one players who were stranded on the new Tournament Players Club at Las Colinas by the thunderstorm, completed the first round today, then went to second round play.

Steve Jones led today's finishers with a 67 that put him in a tie for fourth, three off the pace. He was two under par when he resumed play today, then birdied the 15th hole.

Of the 135 golfers who completed play Thursday, Andy Bean and Barry Jaeckel shared second at 66. Ken Brown of Scotland was next at 67.

The group at 68 included George Burns, Ronnie Black, Bobby Wadkins, Jim Gallagher, Mark Brooks and Trevor Dodds.

Lee Trevino had a 69, defending champion Bob Eastwood 71 and Tom Watson, a four-time winner of this title, struggled to a 74 in the strong, gusty winds.

Hayes, the first man off the tee shortly after dawn, beat the worst of the winds and weather and birdied the first five holes. He once got it to seven under par for the day, but three-putted for bogey on the 18th.

But one good round, Hayes said, doesn't mean he's completely out of the woods.

"I need to back it up with something. I haven't had four good rounds in a long time. For four years or so at least," Hayes a non-winner since 1977, said.

"It's hard to come back when you've completely lost your confidence and don't know why.

"I can feel it coming back, but there's still a long way to go," he said.

White Sox decide to keep manager

CHICAGO (AP) — White Sox Manager Tony LaRussa was given a vote of confidence today to continue running the slumping Chicago ballclub, ending days of speculation that he was on the way out as the club's management openly interviewed successors.

"The players were concerned and told (his fate as manager) was in their hands and they went out and lost six (games) in a row," said LaRussa at a news conference near O'Hare International Airport, where the club was set to board a flight to Cleveland.

"This morning, we've been given a chance to go back to the way things were done in the past," he added.

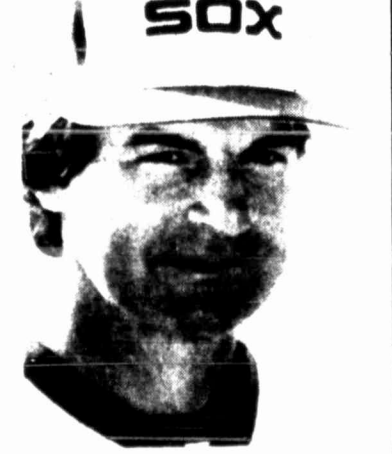

The announcement came amid speculation the White Sox would replace LaRussa with Billy Martin, former California Angels Manager Jim Fregosi, or another, unnamed candidate.

Martin's agent, Ed Sapir met for 2½ hours Thursday at an airport hotel with White Sox owners Eddie Einhorn and Jerry Reinsdorf, and Ken Harrelson, the club's general manager.

Sapir called it an "intermediate meeting." "What we agreed to do is meet within the next 24 hours," he said.

Meanwhile, Sox pitcher Tom Seaver criticized team officials Thursday for leaving LaRussa and his players twisting in the wind. "It's been so absurd," the 41-year-old Seaver said. "You either keep a guy or fire him — one of the two."

Sapir said he would recommend the 57-year-old Martin —

TONY LARUSSA... still with Chicago who has managed the New York Yankees four times and skippered four other major league baseball teams — accept nothing less than a three-year pact.

But Harrelson — who met in Chicago with Martin, an old golfing buddy, on Wednesday — is against multi-year contracts. He and LaRussa both work with the players.

Martin, a controversial figure because of fights on and off the field, also had been engaged in "preliminary" talks with the Seattle Mariners about the possibility of taking over that ballclub, Sapir said.

But the Mariners fired Chuck Cottier later on Thursday and The Associated Press has learned that Dick Williams will be named the new Seattle manager in a few days.

B-County netter after the gold

By STEVE BELVIN
Sports Editor

GAIL — For Kelli Williams, the third time may be the charm, at least that's what she's hoping when she competes in the singles competition at the state class A tennis tournament in Austin next weekend.

The Borden County High School junior will be making her third trip to the state tournament, but the gold medal has always eluded her.

Williams, who has been playing the sport since the sixth grade, qualified for state her freshman year playing doubles competition. She and Tammy Miller lost in the finals to a duo from Narazeth. Last year she got third in the singles competition.

Her coach Bill May feels that this might be the year his junior tennis star gets the gold. "In the past two years Kelli has lost to the eventual state champions. Last year she lost in three sets in the region finals to the girls that won state. The last set was a 11-9. So she's lost to the best, this year she might be the best."

Williams has been almost invincible this season. She breezed through the regular season undefeated. Her only blemish came at the regional tournament last week in Levelland where she was defeated by O'Donnell's Stacy Bessire, a player she had beaten twice before.

But in all fairness to Williams, she played the match under adverse conditions. She went into the match an hour after defeating Garden City's Danette Holdampf, an all-state tennis player herself. That match lasted two hours. Then she and Bessire played for three hours before Bessire pulled out a 4-6, 6-3, 3-6 win.

"She just ran out of juice," said May. Williams agreed with her coach. "I got tired. I wasn't too thrilled about going back out for the third set. I just wanted to stay in that chair and rest," she said.

Ironically, Williams and Bessire are good friends and practically neighbors when it comes to the spread out communities in West Texas. "Yes, Stacy and I are pretty good friends. We live close, about 20 miles from each other. We even sit together in church."

While Williams' mind will be on tennis next week, her thoughts have been on typing this week. She will compete in the State University Interscholastic League typing contest this weekend in Austin.

Just like in tennis, she has a good chance to win the gold. She won the regional meet by typing 72 words per minute with four mistakes. A bad day she calls it. "I typed terrible, I guess I was kind of nervous. For instance, today I typed 72 words and no mistakes. That's what I'm capable of."

Williams' success also carries over to the basketball court and classroom. The 5-4 guard averaged 17 points this past season and was named to the all-district, all-region and all-state basketball teams. She says she got her love for the game from playing with older sister Kara, who went on to Hardin-Simmons University on a basketball scholarship.

She has also been a model student through the years. She has carried a straight-A average through high school and it's a good chance she'll graduate as head of her class next year.

But getting back to a state encounter on the tennis court, her coach feels the weather in Austin will be a definite plus. "After fighting this West Texas weather, Austin is paradise. It's a mental

Headed to state
Borden County athlete Kelli Williams will be going for a gold medal in the typing contest this weekend in Austin. Next weekend will try for a gold medal in the state singles championship in Austin.

In a letter of resignation from the university's board of trustees, Lowe, a former TCU football player, said the seeds of the slush fund were planted at a dinner meeting with Dry and two assistant coaches before the 1980 recruiting season.

In the letter, dated Sept. 23 and addressed to Tucker, Lowe wrote in part:

"At that dinner it was said by someone other than myself that everyone else in the conference was buying players and that the only way we could compete was to buy players also."

"The next day an assistant coach came to my office with two other alumni and a third joined us a little later to discuss methods and people to wrongfully recruit in competition with those already doing it."

"This meeting eventually led to a group to actually recruit the players and another that only supplied funds."

"The assistant coaches would collect the funds and distribute them to the wrongfully recruited players."

Lowe said the payoffs continued through the 1981 and 1982 seasons but that before the 1982 season he became "disgusted with the mess" and wanted out.

Lowe said he extended the monthly cash payments only because an assistant coach told him the players might otherwise transfer and turn TCU in to the NCAA.

Lowe said the payoffs did not stop with Wacker's arrival after 1982 season but continued without his knowledge.

"I felt that if I told him we would be a cinch to go on probation and if I didn't we would have a chance to make it through and run an ideal program from then on," Lowe said.

TCU won its first game in 1985 with Davis and the others in the lineup. They also beat Kansas State and North Texas without the seven players involved in the booster scandal.

However, TCU finished last in the SWC with an 0-8 record.

Wacker would say later "It was an agonizing season. We certainly paid for our sins right there."

At least four other SWC football programs are being scrutinized by the NCAA at Houston, Texas, Texas A&M, and Texas Tech.

SMU is currently serving probation that included loss of scholarships, television appearances, and bowl games.

Mariners' boss gets ax

SEATTLE (AP) — It was a polite goodbye, but it still was goodbye. Chuck Cottier, the Seattle Mariners' manager since 1984, had been fired, and is being replaced by Dick Williams.

"This is the toughest baseball decision I have ever had to make," club President Chuck Armstrong said in announcing the firing Thursday. "I have a great deal of respect for Chuck as a manager and a person. Every time he put on his uniform, he gave us his best effort and we thank him for his contribution to the development of this organization."

"Unfortunately, the club's current standing in the American League West is far below our expectations," Armstrong said. "This fact has moved us to seek a new direction."

However, the team would not confirm Williams' hiring. A source who spoke on condition he not be identified told The Associated Press earlier Thursday that Cottier called a Mariners' clubhouse attendant and told him to clean out his locker because he had been dismissed and was being replaced by Williams.

Cottier refused to take telephone calls Thursday night.

But his wife, Laurie, finally put a message on his answering machine: "You have reached the Dick Williams answering service ..."

Williams, in Coronado, Calif., told the Los Angeles Times he has a verbal agreement to manage the Mariners through 1988.

Williams, who quit earlier this year as manager of the San Diego Padres, said he was first contacted by Mariners owner George Argryros and Armstrong last week when he was doing promotional work for a beer company at Orlando, Fla.

Williams appeared at a charity banquet Tuesday in Detroit, then was met Wednesday by Argryros and Armstrong at a stopover in Denver. Thursday morning, Argryros made an offer and Williams accepted, Williams said.

"Seattle kept after me and presented something I liked very much," said Williams, who turned 57 Wednesday. "By that, I mean I like my contract and the thoughts they presented. ... I didn't want a five-year contract."

lift," said May. "I think Kelli will win it. She's a special person. There's people with more ability but none with more competitiveness and desire to work. I wouldn't trade her chances with anyone in Austin."

Williams is taking the state tournament in stride. "I'm still going to be nervous, but it will be easier for me since I've been there. It would be nice to close out the season with a gold medal."

May concluded things by adding — "One's already got a bronze and silver medal hanging on her wall. Now she needs the gold to make it a set."
