By HANK MURPHY

Staff Writer A 68-year-old man accused of beating his roommate to death with a baseball bat April 8 remains in Howard County jail in lieu of $25,000 bond.

L.H. Williams is awaiting a hearing to determine his mental competency to stand trial, Assistant District Attorney Robert Morris said Friday. Morris said attorney Don Richard has been appointed Williams' legal counsel.

Williams stands accused of killing 66-year-old William Jewell, his roommate at 907 N. Gregg St. The two men were living there under a foster care contract between the Veterans Administration Hospital in Big Spring and Marie McGregor, said Linda Rodriquez, who is in charge of adult foster care with the Texas Department of Human Resources. Jewell and Williams were rooming in a separate living unit adjoining McGregor's home, police said.

A Veterans hospital official declined comment on the agreement, referring questions to hospital director John Steward, who was out of town and unavailable for comm

The day after the murder, police Sgt. Ray Meek said police had no motive in the killing "that makes any sense."

District Attorney Rick Hamby said Tuesday he understood Williams has a history of mental

The motive Williams gave police was that Jewell was causing him chest pains, Police Detective Bill Anderson said Tuesday, Williams told police an electronic device had been implanted in his chest while he was at the Big Spring State Hospital, and Jewell was controlling the device, causing pain, Anderson said.

Anderson said the pain apparently was caused by Williams going off his blood pressure medication.

Comptroller corrects spending figure

AUSTIN (AP) - The comptroller's office goofed when it reported earlier this week that a major category of state agency spending was up 24.6 percent, Comptroller Bob Bullock acknowledged Friday.

That spending total, from the general revenue fund, actually ran only 0.9 percent over the average for the first six months of the budget year, Bullock said.

'Uh oh. Haste makes waste," an obviously pleased Gov. Mark White said when asked about the error.

White in February issued an executive order calling on some 200 state agencies to reduce spending of general revenue money to offset declining oil income.

The general revenue fund contains money from most major state taxes, including oil and gas severance taxes

White's spending cut order was designed to erase a projected $1.3 billion shortfall between anticipated revenue and the 1986-87 state budget. His order did not apply to dedicated funds such as those for school aid and highway construction.

In releasing the revised report Friday, Bullock spokesman Tony Proffitt said general fund spending in April actually totaled $405.5 million - not the $500.7 million cited earlier.

mistake was made in the spending figure attributed to the Department of Human Services. The supervisor responsible has been fired, he said. But despite the error, spending from all funds - a tally that includes school and highway accounts — continued to show the previously reported 19.9 percent increase over the first six months' average, Proffitt said. "The bottom line remains the same," he said. "The all-funds total was correct."

he would seek the Democratic Proffitt said the $95.2 million gubernatorial nomination but chose not to challenge White this year - began issuing spending reports last month, following

> The erroneous report earlier this week specifically noted that the 24.6 percent jump came in the spending category that was "the target of Gov. Mark White's mid-February executive order.'

White's spending cut order.

White has rejected suggestions that Bullock's motive in issuing the reports might be political.

Bullock - who once announced say that his spending cut plan is working. He said the Texas Education Agency and the highway department were required to make substantial "one-time" payments this spring that won't be repeated.

> "I think the overall savings goal we've set is still on course. We still feel we're going to achieve those numbers," he said.

White also said the effects will build from his order that job vacancies due to resignations and retirements not be filled, and from the other economies he requested the agencies make.

Reactor fire under control

MOSCOW (AP) — Officials of the U.N. atomic energy agency said Friday that the Chernobyl disaster is by far the worst nuclear accident in history, but Soviet experts are getting it under control.

They said radiation still leaks slowly from the nuclear power plant's stricken No. 4 reactor, but the fire in its graphite core has been stopped and the Soviets will 'entomb" it in concrete for a years-long cooling process.

Based on their observations and Soviet data, "It's clear ... that the radioactive consequences of this accident are far more serious than in any accident so far, also that the radioactive releases to the environment are much more serious, Hans Blix, chief of the International Atomic Energy Agency, told a news conference.

SAN ANGELO (AP) - Try reading when p's, d's, b's, q's, m's and n's look the same — sentences resemble mirror images — and listorted sounds float into the ear.

"I thought my name was Robert Dallen Hamblen," said Dr. Robert Allen Hambien.

Hamblen was moderately dyslexic. The word, itself a jumble of unmatched syllables, comes from the Greek word dys (bad) and lexis (speech), and means reading impairment. Some experts believe believe the problem stems from a lack of maturation of the left hemisphere of the brain, where language is processed, according to psychologist O. Paul Smith.

'The child stays continually behind," he said.

When he was nine years old, Hamblen couldn't read. His classmates and teachers thought ne was lazy or stupid. His parents hed him if he carned a grade equivalent of C.

"If you don't read in our society, you're a dummy, a social misfit. I bet a lot of social misfits are dyslexic," Hamblen said.

But Hamblen earned degrees in geology, pediatrics and anesthesiology thanks to a determined nature and a Zane Grey novel. Back in the early 1940s when the term "learning disabled" was unheard, Hamblen struggled to understand the simplest written phrases, yet his math and science grades were good.

'Most people can overcome the problems of dyslexia with enough motivation," Hamblen said.

Hamblen was motivated, all right. Hamblen learned to read because he wanted to own and ride

For three years Hamblen skipped lunch at school and saved his money to buy a horse. "Sometimes I came home from school dizzy, (from lack of food) and my mother would get angry with me," he said. If Hamblen's parents gave their children money to go to a movie and buy a soda afterwards, Hamblen would forego the fun and bank the money.

"I would go to the school playground and swing or whatever until time to go home," he said. Hamblen also asked for money in lieu of Christmas or birthday presents.

As the horse fund grew, the 9-year-old youngster realized his father would never allow him to ride if his grades didn't improve. In the summer between the fourth and fifth grade, Hamblen set a plan

Dr. Robert Allen Hamblen, now a doctor at a San Angelo hospital, overcame moderate dyslexia to achieve different goals. According to Hamblen, "most people can overcome the problems of dyslexia with the right motivation."

"I worked eight hours a day. I read 'The Last Trail' by Zane Grey. I skipped over a few words, but I worked the rest out phonetically. My brother helped. It took four weeks to read the book."

Hamblen still owns the book that played such a monumental part in his life. "I still remember the characters and the plot.' The following Christmas when

Hamblen was 10, he paid $75 for horse and saddle. The magnificent campaign turned into a Pyrrhic victory, however. The two happiest days of my life were the day I got the horse and the day he left. That was the meanest horse that ever lived."

'Once I was reading aloud in a College was not difficult, accortime reading than most people." Hambien depended on his memory to get him through tests. "Timed quizzes were worst. It took so much time to read the question, I had to have the answer at my fingertips."

One day, while Hamblen was attending pediatrics class, at Southwestern Medical School. heard Dr. Lucius Waites of Dallas discuss dyslexia.

"I said 'My God that's what I

I'm just wired differently.' I had a better self image after that."

For a time he was so excited about what he had learned, Hamblen considered entering pediatric neurology.

Hamblen, who was graduated ding to Hamblen. "I spent more from college with a geology degree, could only find work as a detail man for a drug company. 'My Dad said, '1960 was the year Bobby worked.'

The job inspired Hamblen to attend medical school. After his pediatrics residency he switched to anesthesiology. 'I had to deal with the parents, not the kids. I also realized I wouldn't see my own children.

In all, Hamblen had attended

The government said the 1.6 billion bushel crop compared with the 1985 yield of 1.83 billion, and was the smallest since a 1979 crop

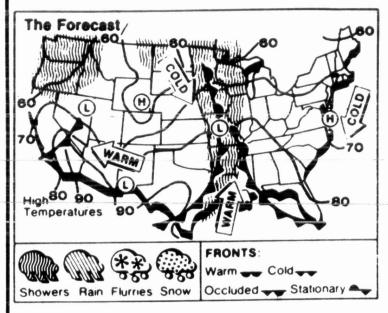

The smaller crop was attributed to the effects of bad weather in the Southeast and part of the Great Plains, and to farmer participation in government acreage reduction programs.

Hamburgers pose risk

LOS ANGELES - Hamburgers that are broiled or fried well-done contain six chemicals that cause mutations, chromosome damage and possibly cancer in rodents, scientists said Friday.

The $2 million, six-year study at Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory found the well-done ground beef contains three newly discovered mutagens and three known mutagens. Two other mutagens also were found, but they have not been identified or tested in animals

Two of the three previously known mutagens are known to cause malignant tumors in mice and rats.

AUSTIN — The State Board of Education got a proposal Friday from one of its committees to require local districts to take action in schools where students consistently fail.

Each board shall establish a procedure to reteach non-mastering students," said the proposed rule approved 2-1 by the Students Committee.

The full 15-member board will consider the rule change on Saturday.

Jack Strong of Longview, chairman of the committee, said if the rule is adopted Saturday, he will call a public hearing on the issue before the board considers it on a second reading in June.

FBI involvement alleged

WASHINGTON - FBI agents, with the knowledge of the Justice Department, actively undermined a Labor Department investigation of Teamsters President Jackie Presser. a Senate subcommittee was told Friday.

Witnesses told the Senate Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations that as late as mid-1985 senior Justice offcials were declining to pursue the details of Presser's connection with the FBI and how it might damage a 32-month effort to bring criminal charges against him.

The hearing was the first public airing of the Justice Department's decision last July to close the investigation into allegations that Presser had authorized $700,000 in salary payments to "ghost workers" employed by a Teamsters local in Cleveland but who performed no work

Aquino: U.S. proposal falls short of need

MANILA, Philippines (AP) -President Corazon Aquino on Friday told Secretary of State George P. Shultz the Philippines' crippled economy needs more than the proposed $150 million boost in U.S. aid.

Mrs. Aquino, in comments released by her spokesman Teodoro Locsin, also promised that she will not go along with Cabinet members seeking "selective repudiation" of the nation's $26 billion debt to foreign banks.

But the president urged an easier payment schedule, Locsin said in a news conference following Shultz's 45-minute meeting with Mrs. Aquino, who assumed power in late February when former President Ferdinand E. Marcos fled during a military-civilian revolt.

Locsin quoted Mrs. Aquino as saying the $150 million in additional Philippines aid for which Reagan has asked Congress, as well as other foreign assistance, would "fall far short of what was needed.

'In the first and last analysis, she said, our problems will be solved, as in the recent past, by the Filipino people," Locsin said, describing Mrs. Aquino's discussion with Shultz. They have dislodged an entrenched dictatorship. No mean task. Now they will lift this country to the progress it has long looked Locsin said.

Shultz, winding up a 26-hour visit to the Philippines, told reporters in a news conference before leaving that Mrs. Aquino left him confident that the island nation will emerge strong from its economic

He also said Marcos probably will remain in exile in Hawaii despite pressure from President Reagan and Marcos himself for Mrs. Aquino to renew his passport. She revoked Marcos' and his family's passports when they fled Feb. 25.

The Aquino government has accused Marcos of plundering up to $10 billion of the country's assets.

Chief economic planner Solita Monsod, who has recommended

"review" of some of the foreign loans, said after she and other Aguino economic advisers met with Shultz Friday that the U.S. official was "very sympathetic" but that she was left desiring "a more concrete expression" of support.

Mrs. Monsod said, "I don't know if the others brought it up (with Shultz), but I said if we can't get the aid and the trade, we are going to have to concentrate on lightening the debt burden because that debt burden is too large.

French wizard sculpts an electronic sound

Associated Press Writer

PARIS (AP) - Jean-Michel Jarre, France's electronic music wizard whose multi-media outdoor concerts tap many forms of entertainment technology, calls himself a sculptor of sounds who wields the synthesizer like hammer and

"It's the first time a musician has had the possibility to work on basic sonic material itself," says Jarre, who is regarded as one of the world's most successful explorers of the sound barrier.

His technique involves taking existing sounds produced by conventional musical instruments, such as the violin and saxophone, and distorting them through condensation or extension to "fine tune the sonic palette."

'We're like sculptors in front of stone," he said in an interview. "We invent our sound anew each

In 1979 Jarre broke world records for attendance at an outdoor performance when his dazzling show at the Place de la Concorde drew more than 1 million spectators. In 1982, he became the first Western artist to perform in the People's Republic of China.

Jarre's international success is all the more striking because he is French. While France boasts a host of popular rock artists, they rarely make it abroad.

Good-looking and articulate, he has been compared to the finefeatured filmstar Alain Delon and avant-garde composer and conductor Pierre Boulez.

The 37-year-old Jarre's latest project is one of his most ambitious: Phosphorescent laser beams reproducing stars, space shuttles and astronauts floating in space will illuminate the Houston skyline next month in an extravaganza concert celebrating the 150th anniversaries of both Texas and Houston.

About 2,000 projectors and giant screens will turn the city's glass and steel skyscrapers into one of the biggest and most spectacular hackdrons ever used in the history of outdoor performance. It will be up to 1,200 feet tall and nearly a mile wide.

The event, called "Rendez-vous: A City in Concert," also commemorates the 25th anniversary of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Johnson Space Center.

With elaborate fireworks, computer-controlled lasers and a 45-foot-tall reproduction of the downtown skyline as the stage, virtually the entire city will be able to watch and hear the show. Besides coordinating the light show and directing 220 French and American technicians, Jarre has written a special musical score in three movements recounting Houston's development from its rural origins to its role as a leader in space technology.

Jarre, who is married to British actress Charlotte Rampling, is the son of composer Maurice Jarre who wrote the theme music to "Lawrence of Arabia" and "Doctor Zhivago.'

"It's a total concept that allows the mixing of different technologies," Jarre said. "It's an audiovisual performance that's total art. This is the future of stage performances which will have to become more and more visual if the live concert is to last."

Jarre said the project was more than a year in the making, and he stressed that it was not affected by the explosion of the Challenger space shuttle.

"Of course, the tragedy changed my attitude towards space, and therefore to the concert," Jarre said. "Astronauts really are off in space when you push a button — the reality is that they take huge Jarre said he worked closely with several Houston-based astronauts who were "really excited about the celebration." In fact, he wrote "Last Rendez-vous" especially for astronaut Ron McNair who was killed Jan. 28 when the space shuttle Challenger exploded. He played saxophone on the record and who was to have performed at the concert.

"The situation is something else now, and I think the show will be even more moving," he added.

Jarre's music is neither difficult nor abstract. Rather, its lilting, almost classic rhythms and eerie acoustics produced by synthesizers make for easy listening.

Born into a family of musicians, he began playing the piano when he was 5 years old. Later, he studied harmony, counterpoint and composition at the Paris Conservatory. Heavily influenced by the British rock groups of the 1960s, he took up the electric guitar and played in several short-lived rock bands.

public release in 1976, "Oxygene." became an international success. selling 8 million copies. It remains one of the greatest commerical successes in contemporary French music history.

His first album intended for Jarre's most recent album, 'Zoolook,'' is a phonetic symphony laced with catchy, funk-rock rhythms based on the intonations of various exotic languages.

Deep-down, Jarre is a humanist. One of the Houston show's most poignant moments is a slowmoving piece structured around the recorded heartbeat of an astronaut that Jarre obtained directly from NASA medical files.

"We worked from the lowly sound of a saxophone and the heartbeat, which I slowed down for E BLUIC, TO CAPI CES UNE HOLIUIT DI the lonely astronaut lost in space," Jarre said.

Jarre has abandonned many of the natural sounds such as train whistles, the crunching of broken glass and human squeals that punctuated his earlier music, and has turned toward computers. Anything can be used to express a musician's emotions, he said: "Technology is simply a tool that makes my job easier.

poetry with politics. "I can see all sorts of terrible things possibly happening," says 79-year-old Stanley Kunitz, the 1959 winner of the Pulitzer Prize for poetry.

"Relations between politics and poetry have been almost always destructive to poetry," says Josephine Jacobsen, former consultant in poetry to the Library of Congress. "However, as much as some of us may regret this, the matter is already signed, sealed and Kunitz and Jacobsen voiced their concerns at a recent conference on writing in Washington, sponsored by George Washington University.

The board of governors of the Poetry Society of America voted recently to thank Matsunaga for his action, but the society's president, poet William Matthews, had reservations.

"I suspect a couple of provisions of the legislation would be disturbing individually to some board members," he said. "Our official position is simply that we are pleased with any public recognition of the importance of

When Robert Penn Warren received the designation in February, he said he was amused by politicians' impulse to create such positions.

'The people who create these posts don't give a damn about poetry," the 81-year-old poet, essayist and novelist said. "They do it because it's a nice thing to do. They think, 'There's a poet down the road; let's make him a poet laureate.

Warren twice won the Pulitzer Prize for poetry and is the only writer to have received the prestigious award for both poetry and fiction. His "All the King's Men," a novel based on the life of demagogue Huey Long, won the Pulitzer in 1946.

Though early associated with the Southern agrarian poets and writers, Warren's verse later was profoundly influenced by the metaphysical poets. He won Pulitzers in 1967 for a volume of poetry called "Promises," and again in 1979 for "Now and Then.

England has had a poet laureate for more than 300 years and the post has been held by such literary greats as John Dryden, William Wordsworth and Alfred Lord Tennyson. The present holder of the post is the highly regarded

Other laureates, however, have included such obscure figures as Thomas Shadwell. Nahum Tate and the Rev Laurence Eusdon. When Tennyson died, Rudyard Kipling and Algernon Charles Swinburne, both at the height of their eminence, were passed over for the now-forgotten Alfred Austin. Jacobsen said that when she was poetry consultant in 1972-73, the Library of Congress would send her calls from irate members of Congress who wanted to know why there was no poet laureate.

"Now and then one would discover that lurking in the background was the candidacy of a poet innocent of repute but hailing from the congressman's state," she said.

Matsunaga, a Hawaii Democrat, has introduced bills about the appointment of a poet laureate to a five-year term ever since he came to Congress as a representative in 1962. "Our country is one of only a few advanced nations which has failed to give adequate recognition to its great poets," he said.

"When the idea has been proposed in the past, the library has not welcomed it with open arms," said John Broderick. assistant librarian of Congress for research services. He said one reason was the impact on the library's own position of consultant in poetry, established 48 years ago under a private endowment and held by such noted poets as Robert Frost, James Dickey and Robert Lowell. "The other was the question of the appropriateness of such position in the United States,' Broderick said.

In the face of a general sentiment in the Senate supporting the move, he said, the library worked out a compromise with Matsunaga. Under the bill as passed, the post of laureate is combined with that of consultant in poetry and the laureate-consultant will be appointed for one or two years by the librarian of Congress, as the consultant

Matthews of the Poetry Society said he thinks it was a mistake to tie the position of laureate to the consulting post. He also regrets a provision authorizing

Circulation Department Phone 263-7331 Open until 6:30 p.m. Mondays through Fridays Open Saturdays & Sundays a $10,000 appropriation to the National Endowment for the Arts to sponsor an annual reading by the laureate.

"The moneys for the consultantship were always private moneys," the Brooklyn College English professor said in a telephone interview. "I think it's too bad to have it come from public rather than private funds."

The bill received final approval in December. In February, Librarian of Congress Daniel J. Boorstin appointed Warren, who served as the library's poetry consultant in 1944-45, as the first consultant-laureate.

Like other recent consultants, he will annually receive $36,000, paid for out of a private bequest. Unlike most consultants, he has said he does not plan to leave his Connecticut home and come to Washington on a full-time basis because of his age and failing health.

'There could not have been a better choice than Warren," Kunitz told the Washington conference. "But after Warren, I wonder. I simply wonder. And to think that we will have to appoint every year or every two years a new national poet frightens me. Broderick, on the other hand, said, "If we make a mistake, we'll have a chance to correct it in a year or two."

Some poets particularly object to a clause in the new law that provides: Each department and office of the federal government is encouraged to make use of the services of the poet laureate for ceremonial and other occasions of celebration.'

Traditionally, the British laureates were supposed to write poems for state occasions. Wordsworth balked at this and some modern laureates have followed his lead. Hughes, however, wrote a "celebratory pageant" for the 60th birthday of Queen Elizabeth II, which appeared in the London Times on April 21 with a border of engraved flowers and birds.

On the other hand, the poetry consultant, said Jacobsen, has never been 'expected to tear off an ode on the arrival of a new member of Congress.'

Even though the bill permits the librarian of Congress to set rules to assure that such work does not interfere with the poet's own writing, Kunitz said that the laureateship "just seems to me a kind of albatross around the neck of the consultant.

Customer satisfaction key to growth

Both of my books, "In Search of observed business practice Excellence" and "A Passion for ly in the toughest markets. dictum rigorously. Our five-day executive seminars are organized around a series of "promises" which demand of our participants practical action in four areas: customers, innovation, people and leadership. We quantify wherever possible. Although some of the promises may seem wildly ambitious, each is thoroughly grounded in observed business practice, usual-

I think the soundest compensation and annual performance evaluation for virtually every person at every level in function throughout the My own organization applies this organization. We also urge every organizational unit in every function to develop key quality measures. Progress should be posted on charts in every work space, and a quantitative goal report should be the first item of business at every staff meeting, regardless of topic.

Next, we specify that all marketers should be out in the field, listening to customers, at least 50 percent of the time. Even manufacturing or operations managers should be out with customers, listening, at least 15 percent of the time. In a related habitually call at least four customers (ultimate users, distributors or major franchisees) each week from a "top 100" customer list kept in his, or her, upper desk drawer or wallet. To enhance competitiveness, companies should join in partnership, rather than in adversarial relationships, with suppliers and customers. We ask that 75 percent of important customer and supplier relations be covered, in the next 18 months, by joint problemsolving teams. The teams are given an immodest objective of 90 percent reduction in delivery time and inventory. Finally, we insist that all products and services be improved constantly by adding ten small "differentitors" to each product or service every 90 days; for instance, a minor new feature or new tool for the field service force.

Even innovation can be quantified. Following the lead of the constantly self-renewing 3M Company, we propose that each profit center in an organization establish a tough quantitative target for percentage of revenue stemming from new products and services introduced in the last 24 months. And we spur participants to aim for no less than a 75 percent across-theboard reduction in product development cycle-time in the course of the next 18 months.

People programs, too, are amendable to quantification. Far too few firms use profit sharing, gain sharing and other forms of quality and productivity-based incentive compensation.

Lakers, Rockets start championship chase

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — The defending NBA chapion Los Angeles Lakers try to continue their march through the playoffs — and teams from Texas - when they open the Western Conference finals Saturday against the Houston

The first game of the best-of-seven playoffs, the final stepping stone to the NBA title series, will begin at 3:30 p.m. EDT at the Forum. The second contest is scheduled for Tuesday night, also at the Lakers' homecourt

The Rockets and Lakers both are coming off six-game victories in the conference semifinals. Houston closed out its series against the Nuggets with a 126-122 double overtime victory at Denver Thursday night and made a big impression on Nuggets Coach Doug Moe. "I think Houston has a great chance of beating Los Angeles if they don't tighten up during the close games," Moe said. "I really think they'll win. They don't have the experience L.A. has, but if they can relax and stay calm, they've got a

Los Angeles, seeking to become the first club to repeat as NBA champion since the Boston Celtics did it in 1969, had a tougher time than expected in their conference semifinal against Dallas.

The Mavericks won a pair at home to tie the series 2-2, but the Lakers then won Game 5 at the Forum and finished the Mavericks off with a 120-107 win Thursday night in Dallas.

Both the Rockets and Lakers had breezed through the opening round of the playoffs. Houston swept Sacramento in three games, and Los Angeles posted three lopsided victories over San Antonio.

Dallas Coach Dick Motta said the series against the Mavericks honed Los Angeles for the Western Conference final

'The Lakers will be much better prepared when they go on from here," he said.

Houston is led by its "Twin Towers," Akeem Olajuwon and Ralph Sampson. Center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, still going strong at 39, and guard Earvin "Magic" Johnson spearhead the Lakers'

After the opening two games at the Forum, the series will shift to Houston for the third and fourth games, on May 16 and May 18. If necessary, the remaining games will be played in Inglewood on May 21, in Houston on May 23, and in Inglewood

Bean fires 68 to take Nelson Classic lead

DALLAS (AP) — Andy Bean managed a 68, which he said "was like a yo-yo," and took a one-stroke lead Friday in the second round of the $600,000 Byron

"It was a day that I could have shot a 63 or 64 and turned it into a 68," Bean said after he reached the tournament's halfway point at 134, six under par for two trips over the new Tournament Players Club at Las Colinas and one shot in front of Mark Wiebe and Jim Gallagher

Tom Purtzer did manage a competitive courserecord 63 that included nine birdies. He is in a large group three strokes off the lead.

But Bean, a 6-foot-4, red-haired power-hitter called 'Li'l Abner" by his fellow pros, said his lead should

Tom Watson is still looking for his first and he will have to wait at least another week to get that. Watson, a four-time winner of this title, could do no better than match par at 70 and failed to qualify for the final two rounds at 144, four over par. It marked the first time he missed the cut in this event. Wiebe, winner of the Anheuser-Busch Classic last summer, shot a 66 moved into a tie for second at 135 with Gallagher, who had a 67 Friday. Payne Stewart, who double-bogeyed the 72nd hole and eventually lost this tournament in a playoff last season, also had a 66 and moved to within two strokes

He was tied with first-round leader Mark Hayes, Ed Fiori, Scott Simpson, and Charles Bolling. Fiori and Bolling had 65s, Simpson 66 and Hayes slipped to

Bean, who won at Doral and finished second in two other tournaments earlier this season, birdied three of the last four holes on the front nine and reached the turn in 32.

Then his adventures began.

He three-putted for bogey on the 10th, then got the shot back with a 20-foot birdie putt on the 11th.

Brooks, who also homered and tripled, hit a one-out pitch from Dodger left-hander Fernando Valenzuela, 4-2, over third base to score Tim Raines and Andre Dawson. Andres Galarraga followed with his fourth home run of the year into the right-field seats.

Jeff Reardon, 5-2, pitched the final two innings for Montreal.

The Expos had tied the game with a pair of runs in the seventh. Tim Wallach singled to left, but was erased on a fielder's choice grounder by Galarraga. Vance Law singled Galarraga to third and went to second on the throw from the outfield.
