West Texans voice concern over proposal on snake

By PHILLIP SWANN

Harte-Hanks Washington Bureau WASHINGTON - Any federal bureaucrat who wants to stop Stacy Dam is a snake in the grass. That's what West Texans are telling Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Stamford.

Stenholm's office has been flooded with more than 100 letters protesting the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service's proposal to put the Concho River Snake on the endangered is rearing his ugly head and tempspecies list.

If approved, the snake and its environment, which includes areas targeted for the reservoir and dam, would be protected under the En-dangered Species Act of 1973.

"We are against preserving the Concho Water Snake," said a Wingate resident. "We think we need water much more than a snake. The only good snakes we've ever seen are dead ones."

Stenholm and Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, have introduced legislation to force the federal government to issue permits for

"Let's join hands and work together to find a solution, and not delay another day to save the one thing neither man or snake can live without, precious water," one let-ter stated. "This is the bottom line NOTHING -- lives without

Rising liability insurance hurts medical profession

Harte-Hanks News Service

DALLAS - Skyrocketing costs for liability insurance have hit the medical profession in Texas.

"Liability insurance has gone up

"As many as one-third of the obstetricians are no longer delivering babies because they can't afford to," Dr. Jim Bob Brame said, adding that 35 percent of the family physicians have also chosen to stop delivering babies.

Brame, an Eldorado, Texas. family physician, was installed as president of the 25,000-member association last weekend during the 119th annual TMA session in

He succeeds Dr. D. Clifford Burross of Wichita Falls.

TMA indicated doctors are ordering more lab tests and X-rays and seeking more consultations due to the threat of malpractice suits. According to the report, more than three-fourths of the members practice what is sometimes referred to as "defensive medicine."

When asked how they would handle, any future increase in their prosional liability insurance, nearly 60 percent said they would need to raise their fees. But doctors said they would not raise fees for Medicare and Medicaid patients.

The survey also said one-third of the physicians have limited their practice due to the threat of a suit

Of the 4,000 Texas physicians who received the survey, 928 responded.

According to Dr. Bernard W. Palmer of San Antonio, chairman of the TMA Committee on Profes-

> More than half of the respondents have experienced one or more malpractice claims or suits, according to an article in the December issue of Texas Medicine, the official journal of the TMA. For obstetriciansgynecologists, the figures are six in 10, for neurosurgeons, eight in 10.

Approximately one-fourth of all physicians surveyed indicated that some of the claims or suits against m resulted from their care of indigent patients not under their continuing care. Despite this fact, 77 percent said this did not affect their desire to continue to treat indigent patients, such as emergency

U.S. divided on proposed Nicaraguan compromise

WASHINGTON (AP) - Deep signed." divisions emerged within the Reagan administration and Congress on Friday over whether a proposed compromise agreement on Nicaragua, arranged by the socalled Contadora countries, is in the United States' best interest.

Opponents worry it would force an end to the U.S.-backed Contra insurgency without adequate enforcement for changing the behavior of the leftist Sandinista government in Nicaragua. Proponents believe the chance is worth taking, arguing that the Contra insurgency has not worked anyway.

An agreement is tentatively scheduled to be signed by the five Central Americans countries on June 6.

While Nicaragua has not yet agreed, the other four - El Salvador, Costa Rica, Honduras and Guatemala - have.

Prospects for a signed agree ment have ebbed and flowed before, but an informed U.S. official said in an interview Friday that this time "odds are it will be

The official, who insisted on not being identified by name, was in a position to speak for those who think the agreement may not be in the U.S. interest. He said enforcement mechanisms are inadequate to make certain the Nicaraguans fulfill commitments to national reconciliation, military restraints and free elections.

Charles Redman, the State Department spokesman, said Friday the United States would not be bound by an agreement that the Sandinistas violate. "The Sandinistas are apparently calculating that they can a have their objectives without giving up anything."

Both opponents and proponents agree Congress would be unlikely to approve Reagan's request for $100 million in new Contra aid if the agreement is signed on June 6. Congress is not scheduled to reconsider the aid request, already rejected once by the House, until have rallied behind Philip Habib, President Reagan's new Central American envoy, who, from all accounts, has given a new impetus to the Contadora negotiations.

However, Elliott Abrams, the assistant secretary of state for Latin American affairs, is on record as saying the Sandinistas cannot be trusted to carry out any agreement and has suggested they should first be replaced by a different government.

And Reagan himself has voiced his strong support of the Contras, but has been silent on the latest negotiating efforts.

A group of conservative conmen, including Dan Burton, R-Ind., is requesting a meeting with Reagan to seek confirmation that he has not waivered in his support for the Contras. Burton said he and other congressmen met with Habib last week and that he came away "very concerned there is a move to get a Contadora agreement signed at almost all costs and that aid to Con-

WASHINGTON - Teamsters President Jackie Presser, head of the nation's largest labor union, was indicted today on charges of racketeering and embezzling money from the Cleveland local where he first rose to power and then paying it to "ghost" employees who performed no work.

In a related case, an FBI agent was indicted for making false statements that led to the collapse of the government's probe of Presser a

Freak blizzard

Two mountain climbers cling to dear life

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Two teen-agers who survived three days huddled with six companions in a snow cave on Mount Hood were in critical but stable condition Friday, as families and schoolmates mourned the others who died in the worst accident in the mountain's history A doctor said one of the survivors, 16-year-old Giles Thompson of Longview, Wash., apparently thought he had died during the ordeal and was "somewhat surprised that he was alive" when he woke up in his hospital room.

In all, nine of the 13 people who set out on the expedition Monday died as a rsult of the freak blizzard that trapped them high on the peak.

Thompson and Brinton Clark, 15, of Portland, were conscious but unable to speak when they and six others were pulled from the cave late Thursday in a dramatic rescue that came after an intense search by about 100 people.

Late Thursday, both were taken off heart-lung machines and doctors were optimistic they would

"Given the fact that they were in such extreme conditions for two, three days, I think the whole situation is really miraculous, that we did have some survivors," said Dr. Gregory Lorts at Providence Medical Center.

The other six, four students and two faculty members at Oregon Episcopal School, showed no vital signs on arrival at Portland hospitals.

The bodies of three other teen-agers were found Wednesday on the 11,235-foot mountain 50 miles east of Two other members of the climbing party had hiked off the mountain Tuesday seeking help.

Throughout the week classes were held as usual at the school, but the chapel was kept open. A special service was conducted at the chapel on Thursday. Thompson was "somewhat surprised that he was alive" when he woke up, Lorts said. "When he did awake from the anesthetic and the cardiac bypass he related some information that he thought he was dead.

"In questioning him, I understand he is able to nod. blink his eyes in the affirmative, he does understand what's going on," Lorts said. "As you may know, he is on a ventilator, which means he is unable to speak because of the breathing tube. Hopefully that will be removed as the day goes on."

Surgery performed Friday morning to reduce the swelling in Thompson's legs and an arm was successful and no amputation was anticipated, said Dr. Duane Bietz. His temperature had returned to normal.

Twisters, storms batter

SIKESTON, Mo. (AP) — Floodwaters surged through southeast Missouri on Friday following a barrage of tornadoes and thunderstorms that killed four people and left hundreds of homes and businesses shattered or buried in

The tornadoes swooped down Thursday on two communities in Missouri, five in Illinois and two counties in north-central Ohio. The deluge in Missouri did not let up in many areas until midmorning Friday. Some areas had received more than 10 inches of rain since the storms began, and more was expected to fall through Saturday, the National Weather Service said.

Cape Girardeau Mayor Gene Rhodes, who has lived in the city about 30 years, said the flooding was the worst he had ever seen.

There was no immediate estimate of damage or of the number of people left homeless by the twisters and flooding.

Gov. John Ashcroft toured the stricken areas at Sikeston and Vanduser, just to the northwest, after surveying flood damage in Cape Girardeau. The governor was asked to declare the areas a disaster and to call out the National Guard to help with cleanup

Beverly Stevener and her daughter were in their home in Sikeston when the tornadoes struck. The house was destroyed, but they were not injured.

"We ran and hid in the hall," Mrs. Stevener said.

"The windows began to crack and my ears started to pop. Then all of a sudden the roof cracked. It sounded like a tree snapping. I could feel the wind blowing. The hall was the "ely place where something di w't fall."

Scott County Sheriff Bill Ferrell said homes damaged in Sikeston and Vanduser numbered "in the hundreds." He said several large businesses on the main highway into Sikeston were destroyed.

Authorities estimated that 100 or more businesses in Cape Girardeau were damaged by floodwater and mud.

An elderly man, Roy Hicks, died Thursday night when his home in Vanduser was smashed by a

Scott County Deputy Sheriff Jerry Bledsoe said that when he and other deputies arrived at Vanduser Thursday night what had not been destroyed by the tornado had been flooded.

"There was water practically everywhere and utility lines down," Bledsoe said. "Buildings were destroyed and debris was scattered everywhere.'

Tom Shemonia, a Scott County paramedic, said he was among the first rescue crews to reach Vanduser. He and others had to remove trees and wires from the roads to get into town.

"We'd be working with someone and we'd hear screaming from 50 yards away," Shemonia said. 'Some homes had roofs torn off, away. Their bodies were found at others looked like they'd just

The tornadoes, rain and hail knocked out electricity and telephone service throughout the area, and a Southwestern Bell Telephone spokesman said full service would not be restored until late Saturday.

In Illinois, tornadoes damaged homes in rural Herod, Simpson, Charleston, Dixon and Isabel on Thursday evening, and flash floods covered highways on Friday. No serious injuries were reported.

In Ohio, a tornado leveled at least five barns and two garages as it cut a path through Crawford and Huron counties in north-central Ohio, but no one was hurt, the Weather Service said.

he elderly, the chronically ill and those who live alone in West Texas no longer have to worry about being helpless during an emergency.

TMB security systems of Big Spring is offering a new service: a medallion with a button that, when pushed, automatically calls help.

The medallion, a little bigger than a quarter, is worn around the neck on a chain. It also comes in the form of a bracelet, keychain or belt clip, but the necklace model is recommended for easier access during a medical emergency, said TMB owner Gerald LeClair.

When activated, the medallion sends out a radio signal to a device on the wearer's phone. The device then dials the security company and, through a computer monitoring system. gives the wearer's phone number and account number.

A person monitoring the system at the Big Spring company can immediately call the wearer to ascertain the nature of the emergency. If there's no answer, the police and ambulance are immediately called, LeClair said.

If the wearer has chronic heart problems or a similar life-endangering condition. an ambulance is called first, he said.

If the phone is off the hook when the button is pressed, the device will automatically hang up the phone and call the security company, LeClair said.

The monitoring system at TMB can take care of up to nine calls simultaneously, he said. If the device can't get through to the Big Spring office, the call goes to the home office in Atlanta, Texas, about 30 miles south of Toxarkana. The phone attachment will not give up until someone answers, he said.

An additional attachment can be added to the phone device to monitor smoke detectors and burglar alarms, and call the company if the alarms are tripped. The device will tell the company what kind of emergency was detected - a fire, intruder, or the medallion.

The medialion system costs $399.97 for the neck, bracelet or keychain model, and $379.97 for the belt clip, LeClair said. Some people may be eligible for state financial help to purchase the device, LeClair said. He said the company will help arrange for the aid.

The company can be contacted by calling 263-2456.

Water district budget ahead but usage soars in dry heat

Income was slightly ahead and expenses slightly behind projections for the Colorado River Municipal Water District for the first four months of the year, according to a news release

Total income through April was $4,044,343, or 2.9 percent above budget estimates. Water sales accounted for $3,964,843 of this, 8.58 percent ahead of projections.

Expenses for the first four months of the year amounted to $2,187,707, which was 4.6 percent under estimates.

Energy costs, which amounted to about three-fourths of operations and maintenance, were $376,008 for April and $1,341,740 for the first four months of the year. The figure is 2.34 percent under budget estimates

Revenues were based on a sale of 6,195,064,320 gallons of water through April. Of this, 90.18 percent was in potable water from lakes and wells and 9.82 percent was nonpotable water diverted from the low flows of the Colorado River and its tributaries and marketed to oil companies for secondary recovery.

The first four months of 1986 were the driest on record for the district, according to the release.

With the advent of warmer weather, the percentage of well water, which averaged 6.59 percent for the four months, jumped to 19.97 percent in April. Lake Spence had 183,380 acre feet in storage at the end of April and Lake Thomas had 23,192 acre feet. Withdrawal for April was 4,673 acre feet and inflow only 640 acre feet.

Multi-layered structure hinders growth

By TOM PETERS

Corporate culture has spawned an entire industry. It has inspired cover stories in Fortune and Business Week. If a firm is not working on an extensive "culture change program" — and paying a consultant a pretty penny to guide it through the jargon-infested thicket - it's clearly not with it in

But culture, love of the customer and consideration for the individual worker still are not sufficient to ensure progress, or even survival. At least not if your firm is burdened with a 10-layer organization structure.

Structure kills. Good intentions and brilliant proposals will be dead-ended, delayed, sabotaged, massaged to death and revised beyond recognition by the overlayered structures at most large and many mid-sized firms. In fact, one executive cautions, "It's the smart guys who are the problem. You can avoid a dummy's query. But a smart guy, let alone a horde of smart guys, can tie up your entire line operation with endless brilliant requests for information spend so much time responding and sitting on their damn 'multifunction committees,' that you don't have time to do anything." Indeed, my most frustrating experiences as a consultant have been at firms hip-deep in brilliance, but incapable of timely action. They prefer to study it instead of try it.

Peter Drucker's still-timely 1954 book, "The Practice of Management," recommended seven layers as the maximum necessary for any organization. I insist that five be the maximum — that's the number of layers the Catholic Church makes do with to efficiently oversee 800 million members. In fact, the five-layer limit should only apply to complex organizations such as multi-division firms. Three - sunorvisor, department head and unit boss — should be tops for any single facility such as a plant or distribution center.

A meticulous 1985 study by management consultants, A.T. Kearney, Inc., contrasted winning and losing companies. Winners had 4.1 fewer layers of management than losers (7.0 vs. 11.1) and five and situation assessments. You hundred fewer central staff bodies per one billion dollars in sales.

The Dana Corporation had 15 layers a dozen years ago, and was barely eking out a profit from its then-$1 billion sales to the thenhealthy auto and trucking markets. Today, with just five layers of management, Dana earns a healthy return on its now $4 billion sales, despite a much tougher external environment.

Dana Chairman, Gerry Mitchell, explains how he came up with the magic number: "It's a lot better than six and not as good as four.' And that is about as profound and systematic as you need to be when you cut back your layers. If you use logic, you are doomed because, without exception, every coordinating, staff and line position in every department makes perfect sense. The creation of bleated structures was not the work of fools. The micro logic was always sound. But at some point the macro logic comes back and bites us. General Electric Chairman, Jack Welch, acknowledged this when he said he figured out why his company has twice the number of staff needed: "The second half was hired to process the studies and papers the first half generates."

The root of the problem runs very deep, starting with basic no-tions of "acceptable span of control" at the lowest level in the organization. Years ago, that kind researcher Jim O'Toole commented, "The American worker would appear to be oversupervised." That's no slight understate-ment when you consider that the ratio of supervisors to nonsupervisors in the U.S. runs 1 to 10. At Honda, that ratio is 1 to 200.

Lincoln Electric Co. is a star in the eclipsed arc welding industry. Undoubtedly the $500 million firm prospers because of more than 50 years of enlightened management methods, including a revolutionary gain-sharing incentive scheme. An equally key element is that the Cleveland based firm makes do with one supervisor for every 100 nonsupervisors.

General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co. have experimented successfully with elimination of several layers of plant management. In some extreme cases, 1,000-persons operations have only one formal layer of supervision the plant manager.

The total absence of formal structure sometimes can be quite effective. In other instances, new forms of nonsupervisory coordination are being tried. Take Herman Miller Inc., the successful Zeeland, Michigan-based office systems firm. Its interlocking structure allows it to minimize traditional formal structure. Every person is part of a work team, and every work team elects a caucus representative to a departmental body. Each department elects one representative to a division-level

For those readers who are hooked on the corporate culture craze, consider the cultural value of the limitless contribution of motivated and well-trained first-line workers, who are receiving their tasks to include construction and monitoring of budgets, development of complex measurement systems, inventory management, self-inspection, plant or shop-floor layout, machine and work-station redesign, team problem-solving and enhancement

Artist tries to overcome ugly strokes of bad luck

DALLAS (AP) - Dmitri Vail, who earned the title of "Painter of the Stars" by stroking the likenesses of movie stars, politicians and business executives onto canvas, is trying to overcome legal problems, debts and deteriorating

Twenty years ago, Vail's celebrity portraits were featured in Dallas hotels and busy centers. He once had exclusive clientele ranging from actor Maurice Chevalier to former President Lyndon B.

But on Friday morning, 17 pertraits seized by court order, including those of Sophie Tucker and Mickey Rooney, were auctioned in Irving to raise money for a $5,200 default judgment against Vail. The judgment stems from Vail's failure to answer a lawsuit alleging that he substituted another artist's work for a portrait he had contracted to paint, court records

A second lawsuit alleges Vail, 83, broke a contract to paint two portraits for a family that made a $10,000 deposit. The suit is scheduled to be heard in June.

Vail also faces a misdemeanor trial on charges that he wrote a bad check for $250. An arrest warrant for Vail was recalled last Tuesday after his lawyers entered an innocent plea for Vail, The Dallas Morning News reported.

Vail denies wrongdoing and says he has consulted attorneys.

tells true story

As far as law enforcement officials are concerned, Henry Hill, the mobster, doesn't exist any more. He's assumed a new name, moved with his family to another part of the country and gone on the government payroll — under the U.S. Justice Department's witness protection program. In a series of interviews over a period of nearly three years, Hill told crime reporter Pileggi about his life in a Mafia family. The result is a riveting book far superior to most of the romanticized fiction on the subject.

Rockets drown Lakers

HOUSTON (AP) - Houston's Akeem Olajuwon scored 40 points to nullify a comeback performance by Los Angeles' James Worthy and 33 points by Kareem Adbul Jabbar to lead the Rockets to a 117-109 victory and a 2-1 lead in their NBA Western Conference title series Friday night.

The best-of-seven series resumes Sunday in The Summit, and the fifth game is scheduled Wednesday in Los Angeles.

Houston's Lewis Lloyd hit two quick baskets to start the frantic fourth quarter and give the Rockets a 94-91 lead. The Lakers never led again.

Ralph Sampson, who scored 18 points for the Rockets, hit a basket with 4:15 to go, breaking the last of four fourth-quarter ties for a 107-105 Houston lead.

Worthy, who had averaged only 13.6 points in the two previous games, scored 27 points, but was scoreless in the fourth quarter. Lloyd finished with 26 points for the Rockets

The Lakers held the lead through most of the second quarter, but the Rockets surged near the end of the period for a 60-59 lead at halftime.

Trailing 57-53, Houston scored seven straight points on a free throw by Akeem Olajuwon, followed by a basket by Olajuwon and two Lloyd jump shots.

Los Angeles did not regain the lead until Byron Scott's bucket with 7:22 to go in the third quarter. and from that point, the lead changed hands 11 times until the Lakers edged to a 91-90 led going into the final period.

Worthy led Los Angeles' third quarter with 15 points.

The Lakers scored the first eight points of the game before Sampson almost single-handedly pulled the Rockets back into the game.

Sampson scored 12 points in the quarter and the Rockets outscored Los Angeles 23-8 over a 4:08 span for a 23-16 lead.

But the Lakers then made their first quarter charge, outscoring the Rockets 22-14 over the final 4:47 for a 38-37 lead at the first-quarter

B-County netter advances

AUSTIN - Borden County High School tennis player Kelli Williams won her opening match at the Class A girls state tennis championships Friday at the University of Texas Intramural courts.

Williams, a junior who finished third in the tourney last year, defeated Lee Ann Rutherford of Irion County 6-, 6-1. Her match with Kathy Hernandez of D'Amaris, scheduled for 5 p.m. Friday, was cancelled because of rain. It will be played today at 11 a.m., according to Borden County coach Bill May.

"It was nerve racking," said May. It rained off and on all day. Evertime the courts would get dried up, it would start to rain again.

Los Angeles Lakers Karem Abdul-Jabbar (33) reaches between the outstretched hands of Houston Rockets Rodney McCray (22) to take a loose ball in first quarter NBA playoff action.

Two tied for Colonial lead

Twitty finished off a 68 with birdies on two of the last three holes and moved into a share of the lead Friday in the second round of the $600,000 Colonial National Invitation Tournament

The journeyman Twitty, winner of two titles in a 12-year PGA Tour career, completed two trips over the Colonial Country Club course in

He was tied at that figure, 4 under par, with David Edwards. who had a 3-under-par 67 in the tricky winds.

"It was gusty, and swirling around in the trees. Real hard to figure. The golf course plays difficult when you've got a cross-wind like this," said Edwards, who teamed with older brother Danny for a victory in the 1980 National Team Championship and also won the 1984 Los Angeles Open. Bob Tway, a winner at San Diego earlier this season, and Dan Pohl

> Gene Sauers, the longshot who held the first-round lead, slipped to a 72, two over par, and was tied at 138 with Bill Rogers, defending champion Corey Pavin, Bob Gilder and Bob Lohr.

> Lohr had a second-round 69. Rogers, a former British Open champion, shot 71. And Gilder closed up with a 5-under-par 65, the best round of the day

'I'm rather surprised at the position I'm in (two shots off the lead)," said Pavin, a winner at Hawaii earlier this season, who had a solid 68. "I expected somebody to jump out and take charge.

But no one did. And, going into the last two rounds of the chase for a $108,000 first prize, 15 players were within three shots of the top

"If you roll the dice, sometimes you get a 7, sometimes you get a 12. Sometimes somebody will jump out in front, sometimes they bunch up," shrugged Edwards. And some of the game's more well-known names remained bunched up, but they were bunched up well off the lead.

The threesome of Tom Watson, Fuzzy Zoeller and Curtis Strange, which attracted the largest gallery of the day, all had second-round 68s. That's an aggregate 20 shots better than they played the first round. Zoeller finished two rounds at 142, Watson and Strange at 143.

Twitty moved into a share of the top spot with 10-foot birdie putts on the 16th and 18th holes.

Edwards ran in a 40-foot putt on the 15th to get close, got a tie for the lead with a 10-footer on the 16th, then preserved his piece of the lead with a saving par from a bunker on the 17th.
