Police probe brutal murder

By HANK MURPHY
Staff Writer

Police are investigating the murder of a 56-year-old Big Spring woman found dead in her home Friday afternoon after being brutally assaulted.

Ara Erlene Bohannon of 1006 Howell St. was pronounced dead at the scene by Justice of the Peace Willie Grant at 3:15 p.m. Friday.

Grant has ordered an autopsy to be performed by local pathologist Dr. Robert Rember, said police.

Police Lt. Jerry Edwards said at the scene that Bohannon's home had been ransacked and her 1973 red Ford Maverick, license plate BAH-778, stolen. Police were unsure if any other items were missing, he said.

Police are looking for two young men who, Edwards said, are suspects in the burglary/capital murder.

The assailants apparently gained entry at the back of the house where Bohannon lived alone, Edwards said.

The woman's body was discovered by officers after neighbors, concerned for her welfare, called police, Edwards said. The last time she was seen alive was Thursday night, he said. Police do not know when the assault occurred and how long Bohannon had been dead.

Shortly after the woman was found, police investigators began gathering evidence at the neatly kept, one-story white house after a search warrant was issued by Justice of the Peace China Long. The murder is the fourth this year in Big Spring.

On March 22, Albert Gonzales, 23, was found shot to death outside his car at 610 N.W. Eighth St. Police detained a juvenile in connection with that murder but later released him.

Mishap sends oil gushing from tanker

City crews work through night to clean spill

By HANK MURPHY
Staff Writer

An oil tank-trailer broke loose from its cab, crashed to the pavement and sent thousands of gallons of slick, black crude streaming south on N. Gregg Street Friday afternoon.

"It's a freakish thing," said

Fire Chief Carl Dorton of disconnected tank.

Traffic was stalled and rerouted around the spill area as police sealed off Highway 87 from N. First Street to Interstate 20 and all the streets from one to two blocks east of the main thoroughfare.

Highway 87 north of the Gregg Street overpass and a number of streets east of the highway were expected to be closed to traffic through the night as crews worked to clean the spill.

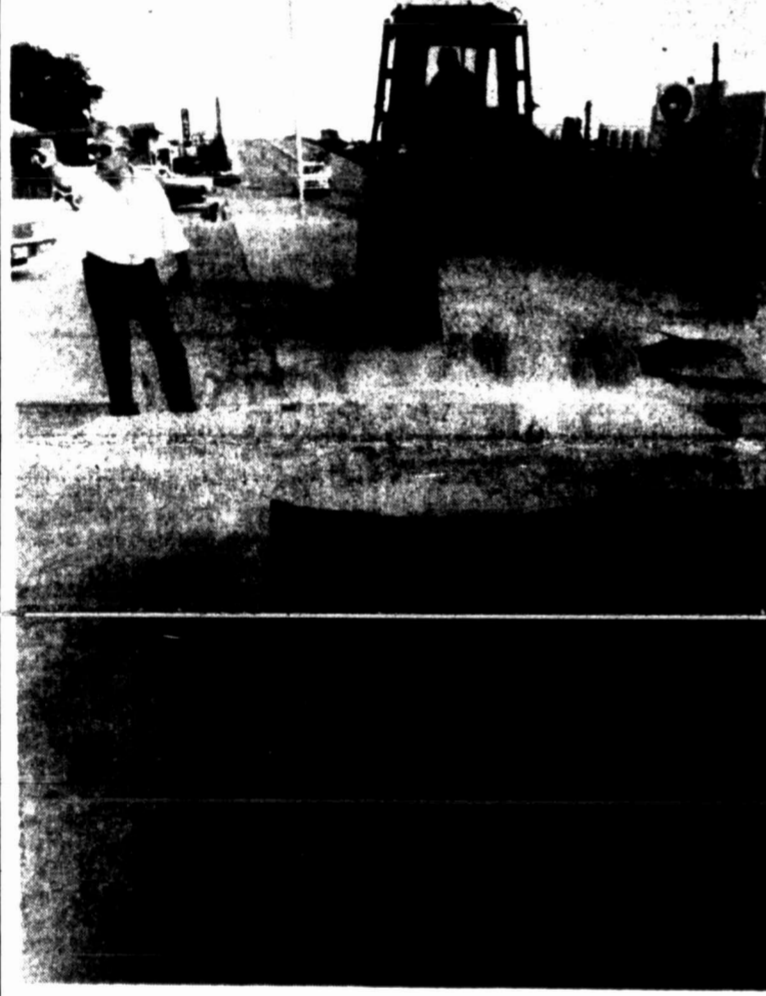

The mishap occurred at the intersection of Highway 87 and the south service road of Interstate 20 shortly before 4 p.m.

The highly flammable oil also rushed down 10th and 11th streets just east of the spill near McDonald's making small black pools at several locations. Cars splashing through the oil sported black fenders and slippery tires before police were able to divert traffic from the area.

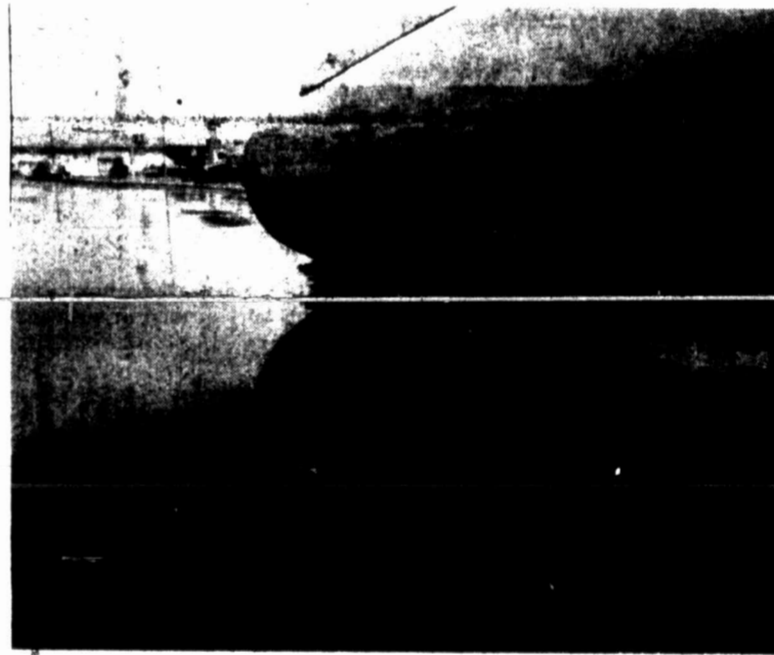

The tanker, owned by American Crude Transport Inc. was on its way to Cosden refinery from a location north of town with 178 barrels of oil, said the driver. Something apparently went wrong with the mechanism where the tank and cab connect, he said. A man who was with the driver said he "heard something pop" before the tank came loose.

City crews and the fire department worked feverishly to keep the spill from contaminating the sewage system and Beal's Creek. The bulk of the spill formed a pool several feet deep where city crews diked the stream with sand nine blocks

Public Works Director Tom Decell shouts orders to his men as a worker builds a makeshift dike with sand to halt the flood of oil on N. Gregg Street. Traffic was rerouted for most of the night while the spill was cleaned up.

Oil pours from a 7,000-gallon tank that somehow came unhinged from its cab Friday afternoon. The giant spill made its way nine blocks south on Highway 87, almost to Beal's creek, before being dammed by city workers.

Guide dog Duke is Vann's best friend

By SPENCER SANDOW
Staff Writer

When four-footed Duke came to Coahoma Elementary School Friday, no one chased him home.

Duke came to visit Judith Prince's first-grade class with his friend, Tom Vann of Stanton, who is blind. Duke is Vann's guide dog.

Vann, who went completely blind in 1979 as a result of diabetes, explained to the class how Duke helps him find his way around.

"If I get mixed up, Duke will take me to the house," Vann told the children. "I've been outside just walking in circles with a walking cane until I find something I recognize, but Duke will find people. If you're ever out where there's no humans, he'll take you where humans are."

Duke stays with Vann wherever he is, Vann said. He also plays ball and helps Vann take out the trash.

When Duke has his harness on, it's legal for him to go into any public place. But sometimes, his owner said, people don't understand about Duke. Restaurant owners especially are hesitant to let Duke come inside. When that happens, Vann said he advises the other owner to call law officials, who will tell him it's legal for a guide dog to be in a restaurant.

The first-graders were curious about being blind. How does it feel? asked Tanya Sparks.

"To start out with, you're real scared," Vann said. "You sit around and cry a lot. But then you say, if anybody's going to win this game, I'm going to have to do it. So you get up and quit feeling sorry for yourself and get going. But when you get used to it, it's not so bad."

He said people are very good to blind people, "sometimes too good." They hold doors open for him and similar acts of courtesy, he said.

Jessica Wallace wanted to know how blind people read, and someone else asked how they write. Vann explained the Braille system of reading raised dots and told the children about "talking books," which are recorded on tape.

"Some people can read Braille as fast as with their eyes, but I'll never make that," he said. Vann said he writes "just like everybody else would. I can write as good now as when I could see."

Someone else asked how blind people draw pictures. Vann said a good way to find out is to blindfold yourself and try draw a stick man. Marshall Wright tried it, but the figure came out looking somewhat less like a man than he expected.

"Now I know how hard it is," Wright said. "Look at my man!" Mike Mansfield tried writing his name with his eyes closed. The

Scientists: SSC will boost state

By WILLIAM GARLAND
Harte-Hanks Washington Bureau
WASHINGTON — Congressional support will be needed to win selection of a Texas site for a huge physics laboratory that would be a boon for the state's economy, Texas congressmen were told Thursday.

At a luncheon sponsored by four of the state's regional chambers of commerce, Texas scientists told about 15 congressmen that a laboratory for the "superconducting super collider" would put the state "on the cutting edge of the field of physics."

Energy Secretary John S. Herrington is expected to announce by the middle of next month whether the federal government should proceed with the super collider project that would help scientists study the smallest forces of nature.

Several sites in Texas are under consideration for the project, including two in West Texas and several in East and Central Texas. The collider would consist of an underground tunnel with a 33-mile circumference that would be used to create high-speed collisions of small particles.

"What we need to do in Texas is diversify our economy," said Peter McIntyre, a Texas A&M physicist who has headed efforts to design a collider for the state.

New Goddess of Liberty unveiled

HOUSTON (AP) — The new Goddess of Liberty statue, slated to be perched atop the state Capitol dome in Austin, made its public debut Friday in unveiling ceremonies at Sam Houston Park.

The statue is a reproduction of the original zinc-plated figure that stood above the Capitol for 97 years.

"I thought it looked exactly like the old one," said Bonnie Campbell, the curator of the Capitol. "And that's the way it should be."

The new aluminum statue, cast in 48 pieces by Dell Ray Bronze Inc. of Houston and then welded together, was to arrive Saturday in Columbus and then head for San Antonio, Rockdale and Austin, where on May 31 a National Guard helicopter is to lift it to the top of the Capitol building.

"This sculpture is a symbolic thing," Bill Griggs, president of the Harris County Heritage Society said. "Liberty is a very important thing to everyone in the United States, particularly in Texas, because Texans fought for their liberty and the United States fought for its liberty a little bit earlier. So we think of liberty, and this is our symbol of liberty in Texas."

The statue is painted eggshell white to match the color of the original one. The goddess is holding a gold-leafed Lone Star in its left hand and a sword in its right.

The $523,000 for the project was raised by a non-profit support group for the State Preservation Board.

"I'm glad to see it standing there — finally," said Bill Steely, owner of Dell Ray Bronze. "Now we can get things back to normal."

Steely and his employees had eight weeks to complete the casting job, but had it finished with more than a week to spare, he said. Since then, his shop has been badgered by visitors wanting to get an early look at the goddess, he said. The old statue was removed in November after engineers determined it had deteriorated to the point where it had become a safety hazard. It will be on display inside the Capitol after restoration work in Rhome. At close look, the 16-foot-tall, 3,000-pound goddess has exaggerated facial features, a common practice used by sculptors making statues for the tops of buildings. But from 313 feet above Austin, those features will appear less prominent. "She is certainly not going to grace the pages of Vogue or Harper's Bazaar," said Robert Sakowitz, chairman of the Houston-Harris County Sesquicentennial Committee. "She is very stern. But we also like to think that she is stern in defense of what we all hold probably more close than any other state of the United States. And that is our sense of freedom and independence. "She typifies strength in that face and the conviction that regardless of whatever we have to go against, Texans will overcome," he said.

Weather

Forecast

West Texas — Considerable morning cloudiness, otherwise partly cloudy with widely scattered to scattered thunderstorms through Sunday. Highs Saturday and Sunday mid 70s Panhandle to near 100 Big Bend. Lows Saturday night mid 50s mountains and Panhandle to mid 60s south.

State

Hail pounded parts of Arkansas and Florida on Friday as showers and thunderstorms were scattered over parts of the Mississippi Valley and the East Coast.

Showers and thunderstorms were scattered from northern Arkansas to most of Kentucky and Tennessee. In northern Arkansas, hail the size of golf balls fell in Stone County and Heber Springs and dime-size hail pelted Batesville.

Showers and thunderstorms were also scattered over New England, the central and southern Appalachians, the northern Plains and the middle Missouri Valley. Strong thunderstorms developed over south Florida, dropping marble-size hail on the western suburbs of Miami.

The temperature in Casper, Wyo., dipped to 28 degrees, breaking the record low for the day of 30 degrees set in 1974.

Temperatures around the nation at 3 p.m. EDT ranged from 46 degrees at Lewistown, Mont., to 94 degrees at Needles, Calif. The nation's low Friday morning was 19 degrees at Butte and West Yellowstone, Mont.

The forecast for Saturday called for rain to linger across most of New England. Showers and thunderstorms should be scattered from the northern Plains across the upper Mississippi Valley to the Ohio Valley. Widely scattered thunderstorms should extend from the southern Rockies to central Texas, and from the lower Mississippi Valley across the Tennessee Valley to the southern Appalachians.

Thunderstorms should also be scattered over southern Florida and rain should spread across the northern Pacific Coast.

Most of the nation should have highs in the 60s and 70s. Readings should be in the 80s from the south Atlantic Coast across the lower Mississippi Valley, most of Texas, parts of the southern Plateau to the southern Pacific Coast. Afternoon temperatures should warm into the 90s over the desert Southwest and the Rio Grande Valley.

from the source at the intersection of N. Gregg and Second Streets, the edge of the Super-Save parking lot. "It if gets down in the storm drain — I got worried," yelled Public Works Director Tom Decell as he barked orders to his men.

Decell said oil in the sewage system would cause trouble but "if it gets in the creek it'll be worse." Fortunately, the spill was contained before any oil entered Beal's Creek, Dorton said later Friday.

City crews with dump trucks and bulldozers were able to check the spill several hundred feet short of the storm drain. It took city crews and fire department personnel about two hours to contain the black mess, and crews were expected to work all night soaking up the petroleum.

Safety experts from Cosden were at the scene, providing assistance in handling the volatile spill, Dorton said. The company also provided a foam-like substance that acts as a detergent to lift the oil from the pavement when flushed with water, he said.

Besides Cosden personnel, tanker trucks from Basin Construction, Earthco and M&M Construction were at the scene to help pump up the sudsy pool of oily water. L.G. Nix Co., along with city trucks, brought dirt for soaking up the spill, Dorton said.

Three defendants await hearing on drug charge

LUBBOCK — Three Big Spring residents await a pre-sentencing hearing in U.S. Federal Court after each pleaded guilty Monday to one count of a multiple-count drug trafficking indictment.

U.S. Federal Attorney Richard Baker of Lubbock said this morning that Anastasio Trevino, 21, of 407 Sunset; Evaristo Trevino Jr., 24, of 409 Sunset; and Fernando Paredes, 25, of 1308 Lamar each pleaded guilty to one count of distribution of cocaine. Two ounces of cocaine was involved, said Baker.

Punishment is a 15-year maximum federal prison term and a $250,000 fine, he said.

The three men were arrested Feb. 19 by a Drug Enforcement Agency agent from Midland along with former police chief Rick Turner and four of his detectives who had been investigating the subjects.

A fourth defendant, Juan

"Johnny" Mata, 21, of 2511 W. 15th St. did not enter a plea at the hearing.

Mata, who works at Big Spring State Hospital, was arrested Feb. 28 with co-worker Edward Chavarria, 33, of 1210 Marijo after a federal grand jury had returned indictments containing counts of delivery of a controlled substance.

Chavarria's charges were dropped on Monday because lack of sufficient evidence, his Abilene attorney Steve Suttle said.

Mata's attorney, George Gonzales of Abilene, said he expected charges against his client to be dropped soon.

Baker, however, said Mata's attorney "is optimistic, because I have no way indicated that I will drop the charges."

Baker said he would review Mata's case to determine whether evidence was sufficient to prosecute.

Search on for missing girl

The sheriff's department is searching for a 16-year-old girl who has been missing since Wednesday night.

Teresa Moore was last seen about 8:30 p.m., her mother, Joyce Moore of Route 3 Box 83-A, said Friday afternoon.

She was wearing a pair of black shorts, a pink tube top and no shoes, her mother said.

Moore said the family recently moved to Big Spring from Coahoma and that her daughter had been having "trouble with a certain guy."

She said Teresa may have run away from home, but said she is concerned that her daughter could have been taken by someone against her will.

She asked that anyone with information about her daughter's whereabouts call her at 263-6139. She also requests that Teresa contact her.

Nursing home warned

DALLAS — State officials say they will continue efforts to revoke the operating license of a nursing home they said was overextended by the opening of a 50-bed, 24-hour skilled nursing unit.

The Corinth Manor Nursing Home is accused of gross negligence in the deaths of 11 patients. A recent investigation showed that medical needs of the patients were not being met, said Charline Stowers of the Texas Health Department's long-term care bureau.

State officials said the home's problems started after it opened the skilled nursing unit in January.

Reagan to lend a hand

WASHINGTON — Saying the first family "will do its part," President Reagan abruptly changed his plans and decided to join Hands Across America on Sunday to help raise millions of dollars for the nation's hungry and homeless.

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said Reagan told aides Friday morning that he and his wife, Nancy, after a long family discussion Thursday night, concluded they should participate in the privately organized effort to raise $50 million by forming a nearly unbroken human chain from New York to California.

Town loses its fame

DORSET, Minn. — This community of 20 people cited in "Ripley's Believe It or Not" as the smallest town in America with its own bank lost that claim Friday when the bank president packed the records in his car and moved them to another town.

"We're changing the charter location from Dorset into Park Rapids and closing the Dorset office," said President Mark Hewitt of Northwoods Bank of Park Rapids.

"This was the last day of business in Dorset," said Hewitt. "What I moved, I just moved in the trunk of my car this afternoon. We had only one employee left working out in Dorset so there wasn't much to move."

No more the lowest paid

MCLEOD, N.D. — Janice Herbranson fought back tears Friday and said goodbye to her three pupils and their parents in the one-room schoolhouse where her $6,300 salary brought her the title of the nation's lowest-paid teacher.

The 80-year-old school is closing. Two of her three pupils graduate to seventh grade and a larger school.

Mrs. Herbranson plans to move to Alaska, leaving behind the school where she taught for 20 years and the saloon she ran to supplement her income.

Mrs. Herbranson, 51, was identified as the nation's lowest-paid teacher in a 1983 survey by the National Education Association. She has gotten a $500 raise since then.

Beirut blast

Christian militia blames assault on Syria

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A car bomb rigged with 200 pounds of TNT exploded Friday between a school and a crowded vegetable market in Christian east Beirut, killing at least nine people and injuring 84, police said.

The 7:50 a.m. blast collapsed two six-story apartment buildings in the Sinn el-Fil residential district and set 12 other buildings on fire. Authorities said three people were missing.

Police arrested two men, ages 19 and 22, in connection with the bombing, said a police official, who insisted on anonymity. He would not elaborate.

In other violence, Shiite Moslem militiamen fought Palestinian guerrillas with mortars and machine guns around two refugee camps in west Beirut, forcing closing of the main highway to Beirut international airport.

Police said two people were killed and 16 wounded in fighting around Chatilla and Bourj el-Barajneh camps which began as a personal shootout.

No group has claimed responsibility for the car bomb, the sixth in east Beirut this year.

The Lebanese Forces, the nation's largest Christian militia, accused Syria's intelligence service of masterminding the attack, aiming to obstruct national reconciliation.

The Christian radio station Voice of Lebanon said Syria also engineered artillery duels between Christian and Moslem militias. Since the fighting began at dusk Wednesday, 57 people have been killed and 171 injured.

Youssef Bitar, a police bomb expert, said the car bomb, a Renault 5, was rigged with 200 pounds of TNT attached to an 82mm mortar shell.

Rescue workers dug nine bodies from under two collapsed buildings. The police official said, "You cannot even tell whether some of the bodies were ... males or females."

Civil defense rescuers said they feared others might still be buried.

Women and children in pajamas screamed as the wounded were borne on stretchers out of wrecked buildings and taken to five major hospitals in east Beirut. Radio stations broadcast appeals for blood donations.

Firefighters battled blazes in other buildings. Survivors came running out of smoke-blackened apartments as other residents sprinted to bomb shelters. The blast burned out 10 cars and shattered windows within a 500-yard radius.

The rigged car was parked near a high school, but police said no students were reported hurt.

Among the injured were 25 women shoppers at the vegetable market. Many were cut by flying glass.

Militia members were searching for two other car bombs, one stashed in a Volvo and one in a BMW, said militia sources, who spoke on the condition of anonymity. They did not elaborate.

Island typhoon kills 97

HONIARA, Solomon Islands — With 97 people confirmed dead Friday and at least 35 missing, officials expressed fear that the typhoon death toll could rise sharply when reports reach the capital from outlying islands.

"So far we only know about the situation in Guadalcanal," said Dykes Angiki, chairman of the National Disaster Council. "Reports from remote areas haven't come in. We don't know what happened there yet."

Relief efforts centered on airlifting tons of food, medicine and tents to outer areas, where the fate of thousands of people is unknown.

Crewmen talk of ordeal

TAIPEI, Taiwan — Two fellow crewmen said Friday the defecting pilot who flew a Taiwanese cargo jet to China on May 3 chained one of them up, swung an ax at the other, and threatened to crash the plane if they interfered.

Co-pilot Tung Kung-shin and flight engineer Chiu Ming-chih also said 56-year-old pilot Wang Hsi-chueh and Chiu started fighting in the cockpit at one point.

According to Tung, the pilot made his move when the China Airlines Boeing 747 was approaching Hong Kong with a cargo of fruit, fish and tires from Bangkok.

French hostages well

PARIS — Four members of a French television crew held hostage in Lebanon since early March have sent letters and photographs indicating for the first time that they are well, their TV station announced Friday.

Color snapshots show the four men, unshaven, reading a May 14 edition of the Lebanese newspaper L'Orient Le Jour, said Paul Nahon, deputy director of the Antenne 2 editorial department. The station said the letters were being given to the families, and would not reveal their contents.

The first reported communication from the French captives also was believed to be the first from any of the foreigners held in Lebanon since four Americans sent letters to the public and their families in November.

NATO split on weapons

BRUSSELS, Belgium — A U.S. plan for resuming production of chemical weapons has split the NATO alliance, with some European countries saying it jeopardizes chances for a global ban on chemical arms.

Norway, Denmark and the Netherlands told a meeting of 14 NATO defense ministers Thursday that they strongly oppose a Pentagon plan to begin manufacturing a new generation of chemical weapons in late 1987.

U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger said the Pentagon intends to go ahead with the plan, which still requires final approval in Congress.

Actor does more

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Reread in Maine with Yankee values, Judd Nelson doesn't agree with many young actors who claim all they owe their studio and public is a good performance.

"It's an actor's responsibility to help sell his films," said the 26-year-old Nelson. "Plato said it: The state serves you, and you serve the state. The studio helps me and I help the studio."
"Paramount hired me to make a movie, and I'm going to help sell it. I know a lot of performers don't share that sentiment. But that's the great thing about a free society: You can do what you want."

And so, even in the face of withering reviews, Judd Nelson has made himself available for interviews to help publicize "Blue City," the Paramount release in which he stars with Ally Sheedy. He will even face television interviews, even though he dreads them.

"You give me words to say and I can act," he said. "Put me in front of a camera and ask me questions about myself, and I freeze. When I was on the 'Today Show,' I sat there with my knees knocking. Jane Pauley said, 'Relax, the people are out there in hair curlers having their first cup of coffee; just talk to them.' I was still scared."

"When TV interviewers ask me yes-or-no questions, that's usually what they get: 'Yes' or 'No.'"

This is from the outsider who tyrannized his fellow detention students in "The Breakfast Club" and who takes on a murderous Florida gang in "Blue City." With his brooding eyes and long unruly hair, Nelson seems well cast as challenger of the status quo.

"Actually, I was really more like the other two guys in 'The Breakfast Club,'" he admitted. "I was very good at studies and sports."

"I used to play a lot of tennis, but I gave it up because of a 'win mentality.' I had to go out and beat my opponent every time or I was unhappy. That's dumb. A lot of actors have that same attitude. You've got to remember it's only movies. It's not medical research or something."

Nelson was born in Portland, Maine, his father a lawyer, his mother a state legislator. He was sent to St. Paul's Preparatory then to Haverford College in Pennsylvania. While there he "fell into acting" and quit after two years, much to his father's distress.

"Even when I started working, my father would ask whether I was going back to college," Nelson said. "I said, 'Dad, I've got a job!' He has stopped asking me, but he tells me, 'Keep reading.'"

Nelson studied for two years at the Stella Adler conservatory and began acting in classic plays off-Broadway. In 1982 he went to Hollywood, making his film debut as a street kid who trades places with a rich prep boy at a boarding school. He followed with "Fandango," "The Breakfast Club" and "St. Elmo's Fire."

In "St. Elmo's Fire," he played the ultimate opportunist, Alec Newberry, who was willing to climb over anyone's body to win political success. Portraying the yuppie in a three-piece-suit was "like wearing a straitjacket," Nelson admitted, since the character was far removed from himself.

"But then, I've never played me in any role," he added, observing that acting is "a profession of illusions."

With his film career warming, Nelson took a year off to do three plays, "Planet Fires" and "Sleeping Dogs" at the Los Angeles Mark Taper Forum, and "Orphans" in Florida. Now he's getting ready for another film, "From the Hip."

ENTER TALKING. By Joan Rivers (with Richard Meryman). Delacorte Press. 398 Pages. $17.95.

Can we talk? Let's talk insecurity. It's the not-so-underlying theme of this autobiography (with Richard Meryman) of caustic comic Joan Rivers, nee Molinsky.

"You want to hear stupid?" begins this account of the life of the comedienne. "Major stupid? Stand-up comic." Yet, the stage — skill Mountains and Atlantic City resort hotels, in off-off-off-Broadway (above Broadway) was her more accurate description), honing her brand of personal comedy (once described as "scream of consciousness") at Chicago's Second City improvisation theater, at Greenwich Village coffee houses and finally — finally — television.

Along her relentless way, she sheds all close relationships, family and boyfriends, though she's not shy about asking a frequent date she's just jilted if he'd accompany her to yet another agent audition. Her insecurity again. (He does.)

first as actress, then as comic — was her holy grail since Brooklyn Ethical Culture School, when she played a cat in a pre-kindergarten performance. It continued through some school plays in more affluent Larchmont, N.Y., and Barnard College. Something about hiding her insecurities behind the mask of a stage role.

From then on, despite strong parental objections, nothing would deter her from The Dream, surely not marriage. So, it was a 31-year descent into rejection, from agents and audiences alike, as she appeared in sleazy strip clubs, at Cat-

Her recollections end with Success, at long last, with an appearance on Johnny Carson's "Tonight Show." Thirty-one years of "No" was over in a 10-minute appearance on the talk show. (The book is co-dedicated to Carson, who "made it all happen.")

A one paragraph epilogue tells us she eventually married Edgar Rosenberg, had a daughter and was named the "first and only permanent guest host of 'The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson.'"

Dead Hemingway plays himself out

By JOE WHEELAN
Associated Press Writer

DENVER (AP) — Ernest Hemingway's latest posthumous novel, "The Garden of Eden," with its theme of bisexuality, is evidence that the lode of unpublished Hemingway works is about played out.

It is the 10th posthumous Hemingway book, and Charles Scribner's Sons, the publisher, describes it as the "last unpublished major work" by the Nobel Prize-winning author who committed suicide a quarter-century ago.

Like the two other posthumous works of fiction by Hemingway — "Islands in the Stream" in 1970 and "The Nick Adams Stories" in 1972 — "The Garden of Eden" will raise questions about the propriety of editing unfinished literary work without an author's cooperation. The $18.95 book is to be released this week.

"I'd like to think that if Hemingway had lived he would have made the same sorts of decisions that ultimately I made," said Scribner's Tom Jenks, who edited the 1,500-page Hemingway manuscript down to 247 pages and 30 chapters. "The Garden of Eden" is more cohesive than "Islands in the Stream," but lacks that novel's complexity and depth, and it does not have the clarity of "The Nick Adams Stories." Add to that a tentative handling of bisexuality and a plodding narrative, and the novel emerges as the least impressive of the three posthumous works of fiction.

It was written between 1946 and 1961 — the year Hemingway put the barrel of a shotgun in his mouth, pulled the trigger with his toe and committed suicide at the age of 61.

He was 47 years old, married to Mary, his fourth wife, and living in Cuba when he wrote "The Garden of Eden." He was also alcoholic and struggling with his writing. His last great novel, "For Whom the Bell Tolls," had been published seven years earlier, and his major work of the 1940s, "Across the River and Into the Trees," would not be well-received when it finally was published in 1950.

"The Garden of Eden" describes a love triangle involving David Bourne, a successful American writer, his wife of three weeks, Catherine, and a woman they meet during their honeymoon along the southern coasts of France and Spain in the 1920s.

David at first humors Catherine's fantasies about transferring sexual identities. She crops her hair so that it is like his; they dye their hair the same silvery color. When they make love, she sometimes calls him Catherine and he doesn't object. Later, she takes to dressing mannishly and becomes dominating.

Tension grows as Catherine continues to explore her confused sexual identity, and things become even more complicated after she invites beautiful young Marita, another tourist, to join them at their hotel at la Napoule.

Ernest Hemingway's bisexual-theme novel, "The Garden of Eden," like other posthumous works of fiction, will raise questions about the propriety of editing unfinished literary work without an author's cooperation. The novel is due to be released next Wednesday.

Marita insinuates herself into the Bourne's sexual life. At the same time, Catherine begins displaying signs of mental illness. She is by turns irritable and charming, jealous of David and Marita's growing intimacy and violently critical of David's stories about hunting in Africa 20 years earlier with his father.

For David, the stories become more real than the sexual triangle that dominates his life at la Napoule.

Eventually, the growing sexual tension destroys their Mediterranean idyll, and the denouement is all Catherine's doing.

Hemingway has discarded the dependable themes in this novel that made "The Sun Also Rises," "A Farewell to Arms" and "For Whom the Bell Tolls" so powerful: strong masculine characters and values.

Instead, he experiments with a complex female character and the tricky subject of sexual ambiguity.

The trouble is that he does not explore either possibility with enough depth.

Catherine, on whose believability as a character much of the novel hinges, is only two-dimensional. In the Hemingway works with strong masculine themes, it didn't matter if the women were shallow because their main purpose usually was to buttress a male protagonist.

However, "The Garden of Eden" requires Catherine to be a fully drawn character, and Hemingway fails to explain her behavior. She is depicted as quirky, kinky and crazy, but no clues are provided that explain why she is this way.

As a result, the provocative issue of bisexuality never is adequately explored. It becomes only another symptom of Catherine's mental breakdown.

Hemingway had less trouble with Marita and David because he has created characters like them before.

Marita, who becomes David's companion and sexual plaything when Catherine begins behaving erratically, is eager to cater to David's appetites. By the novel's end she even speaks in the same Hemingwayesque cadences as David.

David Bourne is one of Hemingway's more passive protagonists because he allows Catherine to be abusive and manipulative, but he is similar to other Hemingway male characters in important ways.

Like most Hemingway men, David is fairly straight-laced about women and sex, although he rapidly gives in when Catherine presents him with Marita. David also manages to uphold the Hemingway virtues of being able to drink vast quantities of alcohol at all hours. He is athletic, both in and out of bed, and he is not afraid of hard work.

The best parts of the novel take place in David's writing room at the hotel. Long passages of David's African stories are written with Hemingway certitude and clarity. They provide a refreshing contrast to the slow-moving narrative of "The Garden of Eden."

Describing an elephant hunt that David went on as a boy with his father, David writes:

"It was afternoon before they had worked up to the herd and around it seeing the gray bulks through the trees and the movement of the big ears and the searching trunks coiling and uncoiling, the crash of branches broken, the crash of trees pushed over and the rumbling in the bellies of the elephants and the slap and thud of the dung falling."

In the main narrative, however, Hemingway falls into inscrutable rhetoric such as this: "Catherine was not his enemy except as she was herself in the unending unrealizable quest that is love and so was her own enemy."

"The Garden of Eden" is not vintage Hemingway, and readers who expect the novel to sound major Hemingway themes such as masculine courage and stoic survival — although hinted at — will be disappointed.

However, Hemingway fans will enjoy the little signatures throughout. The detailed descriptions of landscape, the attention paid to food, drink and other physical pleasures and David Bourne's compulsion to work all are unmistakably Hemingway.

And so is the dialogue, as is evident from this exchange between David and Marita:

"You don't fall in love with two people at once."

"You don't know," she said.

"It's rot," he said. "It's just a way of talking."

"It isn't at all. It's true."

"You just think it is. It's nonsense."

"All right," he said. "It's nonsense. But I'm here."

"Yes. You're here," he said.

Company provides security with emergency alert system

By SPENCER SANDOW
Staff Writer

Home Safety Response Systems Inc. has opened its doors in Big Spring to provide security alarm systems to local residents.

The system comes in the form of a machine that hooks onto the subscriber's telephone. When activated, it calls for help. The machine dials an 800 number in Euclid, Ohio, which sends an ambulance, police or the fire department to the address of the person in need, said president Brad Estill.

If the phone is off the hook, the machine will hang it up to dial the emergency number, he said. If the power goes out, it has a battery backup.

In addition to police, fire or medic buttons on the machine, the system can be activated by a remote control on a medallion worn around the subscriber's neck, hooked to a belt loop or just placed nearby. The unit sends a radio signal to the phone device.

Estill recommends placing a unit near the bathtub, he said, because most accidents in the home happen there. The button on the remote unit is geared to the medic alert, but in Big Spring, police respond with an ambulance, he said.

In the future, the company will offer automatic fire detectors and burglar alarms with the system. The fire detector is a heat sensor, he said, and should be available in about six months. The burglar alarm is wireless and responds to an open door or window. It should be available in a year to a year and a half, he said.

The system is portable, so it can be taken on a trip or if the subscriber moves, he said. All the subscriber must do is call the monitoring company and give them their new address and related information. The monitoring company keeps a file with medical and other emergency information on the subscriber, he said.

The system can be leased, bought, leased-to-own, or bought on a cash installment plan, Estill said. Prices vary according to method of payment, he said.

For those who need but can't afford the system, a group of community businesses, churches and other organizations, who wish to remain anonymous, will collect money to pay for it, Estill said. The needy should contact him at 267-5553 for more information.

Home Safety Response Systems Inc. is located in the Choate Building at 11th Place and Washington. The company is a franchise of Lifecall emergency systems. Wade Choate of Big Spring is the franchise owner.

Elgin Corrugated Box Co.: a saga of success

By TOM PETERS

After more than 110 years of producing several products in Elgin, Ill., dairy company Borden, Inc. moved out its last Elgin plant about 11 years ago. Elgin Watch bailed out of town a year before its centennial in 1964. But where these and other big businesses have fled the Rust Bowl, other smaller players have stayed behind. Some of them seem not to have heard that times are supposedly tough.

Elgin Corrugated Box Company, another denizen of Elgin (41 miles northwest of Chicago), just celebrated its 100th anniversary on April 30. The approximately $9 million (sales), 15,000-ton-a-year producer of paperboard for packaging is growing in a $12 billion market that is dominated by scale-obsessed giants. It is profitable despite a major decline in demand in its Chicago-area market.

To understand Elgin's success, you need to know the difference between an A-flute and a C-flute.

The flute is the accordion-like folding, or corrugation, of the middle layer of paper in corrugated packaging material. An A-flute, like the shape of the letter, is steeper and requires more material than a C-flute, but it is stronger. Elgin prefers to produce the A-flutes and uses only the finest quality inks for printing. Its quality-conscious customers don't mind paying a penny or two more for the product.

A visit to Elgin's plant is not impressive at first glance. The production lines, chugging along at a sluggish pace, look like they were designed from Rube Goldberg's sketchbook and seem as old as the company. The reason for the slower pace is not the age of the machinery; it is a conscious choice aimed at providing a virtually flawless product. As for the little gadgets and devices fastened onto machines here and there, they give better folds and squarer corners than the state-of-the-art, $25 million plants of some of its rivals.

Chief Executive Bob Wilson

delights in explaining these odds and ends, bragging on his hourly workers and plant engineers, who have invented almost all of these appendages. Pointing out one, Wilson boasts, "This cost $2,000. Ordering it outside, if possible at all, would have cost us $80,000."

Many of Elgin's quirks are shared by some of the most successful Japanese and West German manufacturing companies. A recent study by management consulting firm McKinsey & Co. concludes that the Japanese spend just one-sixth as much as we do in plant automation, per dollar of factory output. The reason is that their engineers work right on the plant floor and constantly tinker to add minor improvements. Professors Steve Wheelright and Bob Hayes, in their 1984 book "Restoring Our Competitive Edge: Competing Through Manufacturing," attribute Japanese and German manufacturing success to their penchant for incremental improvements, while Americans are obsessed by the quest for giant leaps and all but ignore day-to-day smaller opportunities.

Other crucial elements are flexibility, constant innovation and service. As Wilson puts it, flexibility means, "We'll make two boxes if we're asked. The big plants won't talk to you about anything less than a truckload order."

In fact, my plant tour included numerous machines making special boxes for pies or plumbing fixtures that others would not take on because of their "volume mentality," which has crippled so much of U.S. industry.

Innovation goes beyond plant improvements — more pervasively, it encompasses a transparent love affair with the humble corrugated box. New folds and shapes are discussed with as much satisfaction and passion as one senses in Detroit when car-model changes are revealed.

Service is the truly distinguishing Elgin edge. Wilson claims there has not been a single late delivery in the last four years. That doesn't mean they haven't got it close. Tales abound of drivers delivering boxes in personal station wagons in the wee hours of the morning. One satisfied customer believes the truck drivers are Elgin's best salespersons.

Indeed, marketing is everyone's business at Elgin. Wilson and the until-recently-active Schmidt family are fanatics about team work. They go out of their way to heap praise on every member of the team — although Wilson reserves special accolades for the dispatch office.

Most firms, Wilson explains, march to the beat of the often detached front office. Elgin is orchestrated by the tail-end of its operation, which pulls through the 250 or so orders a week. Dispatchers, a bit higher tech than the factory floor, use their state-of-the-art computer system that is the envy of the industry.

Part of the reason for the lack of front-office kibitzing is the spare "staff" operation, which consists of just two accountants, one production planner, one service person and one jack-of-all-trades to help out the other four.

While industry giants blame their ills on lack of sufficient scale to produce economical output and permit market control, the smaller independents' share of market has shot up to 30 percent from 12 percent in 1970. That share is still gaining, despite desperate price cutting by the big players.

The story is familiar in industries throughout the land, from Silicon Valley to Elgin's Fox River Valley, where smaller companies are inheriting the future. And they are doing so because like Elgin, rather than wasting time and money begging for protection, they spend their precious hours serving the customer with unrelenting responsiveness and care.

Drilling report

These are the latest oil and gas activity reports filed with the Texas Railroad Commission for the five-county crossroads country.

Two good producers — one flowing and one pumping — have been completed by A.K. Guthrie Operating in the Howard-Glascock Field, Howard County.

The wells are designated as the No. 1 John Cole and No. 4 Southland. They are located seven and eight miles northeast of Foran, respectively. The Cole well flowed 234 barrels of oil daily on an 11/64 choke, plus 283 barrels of salt water. The Southland pumped 230 barrels of oil with 30 barrels of water daily.

The well pumped 50 barrels of oil and 254 barrels of salt water per day from new perforations in the Strawn Formation, 9,076 to 9,080 feet into the wellbore.

It earlier had been completed in the Fusselman Formation, flowing 320 barrels of oil per day from perforations 9,068 to 9,077 feet into the hole. The well had the same operators when originally drilled. First completion was recorded on Nov. 15, 1984.

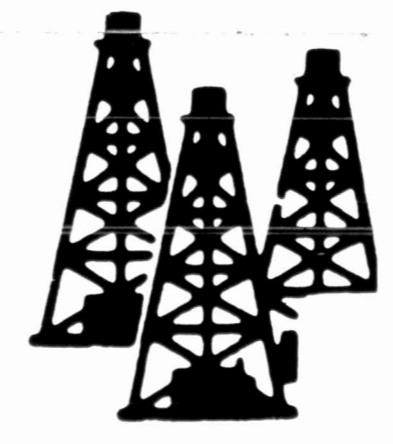

Plug-and-abandon orders have been executed for the No. 2 Winters "A," a developmental try in Howard County's Sara-Mag Field, about one-half mile north of Vincent. Spudded last Oct. 14, the well bottomed dry at a depth of 7,449 feet. Adobe Oil and Gas was the operator.

Nicklaus birdies 18th for share of lead

Jack Nicklaus and the gallery watch his third shot on the 15th fairway of the Memorial Tournament Friday in Dublin, Ohio. Nicklaus is tied for the lead with Dan Hallorsen, Don Pooley and Doug Tewell with an 8-under total at the end of the second round of play.

DUBLIN, Ohio (AP) — Jack Nicklaus rapped in a 15-foot birdie putt on the final hole and advanced to a tie for the lead Friday in the second round of his own tournament, the Memorial.

Nicklaus, who recently added a sixth Masters victory to his record collection of 18 major professional titles, was greeted by a standing, cheering ovation as he strode up the 18th fairway.

He responded with a wave, then gave them a more popular response with the putt that finished off a round of 70, 2 under par on the Muirfield Village Golf Club course that Nicklaus designed and built.

The tournament host and founder, now 46, completed two trips over the familiar, rolling hills in 136, 8 shots under par.

"I'm delighted to be 8 under, but I'm not at all delighted with the way I played," said Nicklaus, a two-time winner of the tournament he founded and which is growing in prestige on an annual basis.

"I felt like I played a little scratchy today. I guess you go through days like that when you don't feel very comfortable over the ball and just have to manage your game.

"I did that pretty well. I used my head pretty well today. I'm pretty proud of myself for the way I managed my way around," Nicklaus said.

He was tied with Dan Hallorsen, the Canadian who held the first round lead, Doug Tewell and Don Pooley, winner of last year's Vardon Trophy for the low stroke average on the Tour.

Pooley closed with a 67 and would have had the lead alone but for a bogey on the 18th, where he bounced his tee shot off a tree. Hallorsen shot 71 in the sunny, breezy weather. Tewell had a 70 that included birdies on two of the last three holes.

The group at 137, a single stroke off the pace with 36 holes to go in the chase for a $100,000 first prize, included Hal Sutton, Peter Jacobsen, Lennie Clements, Larry Mize, Chip Beck and Tom Purtzer.

Beck used only 21 putts in a round of 66. Clements and Mize shot 68s, Sutton and Purtzer 69s, Jacobsen 71.

Andy Bean, a two-time winner this season, had a 66 and was among those at 138, only two shots back.

Nicklaus, who broke a two-year non-winning string with his stirring Masters triumph, got away to a shaky start with a one-putt par on the first hole and bogeys on the second and fourth, where he missed the greens.

He birdied the fifth from six feet and made birdie off a spectator's foot on the par-5 seventh.

"My second shot ran through the green, hit some guy on the foot and bounced into a bunker," Nicklaus said. He came out of the sand to tap-in distance for the birdie-4.

He matched another birdie on the 12th against a bogey from a buried lie in a bunker on the 13th and remained two shots off the lead.

But Nicklaus played a great little pitch — "probably the best shot I hit all day," he said — to within a foot of the cup on the 15th and then gained a share of the lead before the huge, happy, howling crowd on the 18th.

Petty okay after crash

HARRISBURG, N.C. (AP) — Stock car driver Richard Petty suffered a concussion Friday after crashing into a wall at Charlotte Motor Speedway during a practice run, track officials said.

"He has a concussion, but he is awake and he's being taken to Charlotte Memorial Hospital by helicopter for tests and observation," speedway spokesman Ed Clark said.

"Nothing's broken, but they're going to take him to the hospital and X-ray his neck," said Winston Cup spokesman Bob Moore.

"He didn't remember what year it was," Moore said. "He kept asking (crew chief) Dale (Inman) what year it was, what race are we in and where are we at. By the time he left he remembered everything."

"He was talking all the time," Moore said. "He was joking. He was saying, 'Don't drop me. I'm not hurt now, so don't hurt me.'" Moore said Petty wanted to walk out of the hospital, but doctors would not let him.

"He said the last thing he remembered was going into the third turn," Moore said. "The doctors said more than likely he'll be back tomorrow."

Petty's red, white and blue Pontiac with the traditional No. 43 appeared to have suffered heavy front-end damage from the crash. Crew members were pounding out body dents, taking off flat tires and running engine checks shortly after the car was returned to the pit area.

Petty, who qualified Wednesday for the 15th starting position in Sunday's Coca-Cola 600 NASCAR race, will have to drop out of the race if his car cannot be fixed by Sunday's starting time, NASCAR spokesman Trip Williams said.

Mears favored at Indy

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) Rick Mears, the record-setting pole-winner for Sunday's Indianapolis 500, is the overwhelming pick of newspaper writers from throughout the country covering the 70th Indy classic to win the race.

Mears, a two-time Indy winner, was chosen by 16 of 39 writers taking part in the informal poll by The Associated Press Friday.

Cooper Rowley of the Chicago Tribune echoed the sentiments of most of the Mears pickers, saying, "I like Mears' durability and his ability to protect a car over 500 miles at all costs."

Joe Dowdell of the Detroit News said, "I've picked Mears right from the first day here."

Hal Bock, AP's sports columnist, said Mears has "a proven track record at this oval."

Michael Andretti, who will start on the outside of the front row, was the second choice with six votes, followed by Emerson Fittipaldi of Brazil, in the middle of the fourth row, with five, and Bobby Rahal, on the inside of the second row, both picked by four writers. Bruce Lowitt, an AP writer, picked Michael Andretti and added a partial vote for veteran Mario Andretti, the 1969 winner who is starting from the back of the field. Lowitt said, "He's going to spend the whole day trying to stay ahead of his father, and his father will finish second."

Defending champion Danny Sullivan, making a bid to become only the fifth repeat winner in Indy history and the first to repeat since Al Unser in 1970 and 1971, drew three votes.

Mike Harris, Motorsports Writer for the AP, cast the only vote for the Unser, a three-time Indy winner, who is starting from the middle of the second row. Harris said, "He's a wily veteran and he's going to be around at the end. That's what it takes to win here."

The only vote for four-time winner A.J. Foyt came from Tom Ford of the Tampa Tribune, who simply said, "He's due." Foyt last won here in 1977.

Sutcliffe cuffs the Astros

CHICAGO (AP) — Rick Sutcliffe scattered five hits and Leon Durham had a two-run fourth-inning double Friday, leading the Chicago Cubs to a 4-1 victory over the Houston Astros.

Sutcliffe, 2-6, walked three and struck out seven for his first complete game. In his six losses, the Cubs have scored just seven runs.

The win was only the Cubs second in their last nine games.

Julio Solano, 3-1, lasted 4 2-3 innings in his first career start. Solano has appeared in 65 major league games as a reliever.

The Cubs, who were held hitless through the first three innings, scored three in the fourth. Bob Dernier dropped a single in short center and took second on Davey Lopes infield hit off shortstop Craig Reynolds chest.

Two outs later Durham doubled just inside the right field line to score Dernier and Lopes.

Ron Cey then singled home Durham for a 3-0 lead. Solano gave up a leadoff double to Shawon Dunston in the fifth, and two outs later walked Lopes. Solano was replaced by Larry Anderson who gave up a run-scoring single to Ryne Sandberg, for his first hit in his last 18 at bats.

Houston scored their only run in the first. Bill Doran, who was hitting .370 lifetime against the Cubs, opened the game with a single to right. One out later, he stole his 14th base and scored on Denny Walling's single to center.

Red Sox 2 Rangers 1
ARLINGTON, (AP) — Boston pitcher Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd was mad Friday night and he took out his anger on the Texas Rangers.

Boyd, 5-3, pitched eight innings, striking out four and walking none, and retired 24 of the 27 batters he faced as the Red Sox beat the Rangers 2-1.

Boyd was the pitcher last Saturday in Boston when Texas catcher Don Slaught was hit in the face with a pitch, breaking his cheekbone and nose.

As Boyd was introduced Friday night he was booed loudly.

"That hurt me," he said. "I don't want people thinking I'm a headhunter."

He also said the boos made him angry.

"I'm mad. I'm a madman out there," he said. "When I go out there mad like that, I'm tough to beat."

The game was marred by a beanball incident. In the ninth inning,

Chicago Cubs' Davey Lopes is tagged at second by Houston Astros' Bill Doran during a first-inning steal attempt at Chicago's Wrigley Field on Friday. The Cubs won 5-1 behind Rick Sutcliffe's five hit pitching.

Rangers pitcher Ed Correa and Manager Bobby Valentine were ejected after Correa hit Boston rookie Rey Quinones in the head with a fastball. Quinones left the field under his own power.

"It was just a glancing blow," Boston Manager John McNamara said. "At that stage of the ballgame I don't think he was throwing at him."

Home plate umpire Ken Kaiser had issued a warning to both benches in the third inning when Correa brushed back catcher Rich Gedman with a fastball.

Correa also hit Don Baylor with a pitch in the eighth. Baylor homered in the fourth for Boston's runs.

Twins 8, Brewers 7

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Greg Gagne singled home Mickey Hatcher with one out in the bottom of the ninth inning Friday night to give the Minnesota Twins an 8-7 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers in a seven-homer slugfest.

With one out, Hatcher doubled reliever Dan Plesac, 3-2. Gary Gaetti was intentionally walked bringing up Gagne, who delivered his second hit of the game.

Winner Frank Pastore, 1-0, pitched two innings, allowing one hit as the Twins won for only the second time in their last 12 games.

Milwaukee, which trailed 7-3, scored twice in the seventh inning on Ben Oglivie's second two-run homer of the game off Minnesota starter Burt Blyleven. The Brewers tied it with two more in the eighth. Blyleven allowed 12 hits and five runs in 6 1-3 innings.

Reds 12, Pirates 9

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Eddie Milner hit a bases-loaded triple with two outs in the 12th inning Friday night, giving the Cincinnati Reds a 12-9 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Reliever Jose DeLeon, 1-1, walked Eric Davis with one out. DeLeon intentionally walked Dave Parker with two outs and Davis on third base, and then walked Nick Esasky before Milner lined a 3-2 pitch off the right-field wall.

Ted Power, 2-3, the fifth Cincinnati pitcher, earned the victory with two innings of scoreless relief.

Cowboys sign QB

IRVING, (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys signed USFL quarterback Reggie Collier to a four-year contract with an option, ending his three-season career with the league, a team spokesman said Friday.

Collier originally had been drafted by the Cowboys in the sixth round of the 1983 draft after he had already signed with the Washington Redskins, which moved to Orlando after the franchise was sold.

The 6-foot-3, 207-pound Southern Mississippi graduate signed with Dallas Friday and returned to Orlando. He will be back in Dallas Tuesday to begin practicing with Cowboys' quarterback coach Paul Hackett, said Greg Aiello, team spokesman.

"It's the best thing that's happened to me in the last three years, and I'm really happy to be here," Collier said.

During 1981, while at Southern Mississippi, Collier became the first quarterback to run for 1,000 yards and pass for 1,000 yards in the same season.

Memphis St. gets TCU'd

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Memphis State University was notified Friday that the National Collegiate Athletic Association intends to take disciplinary action against the school for violations of NCAA regulations.

But university officials would not say what would be the penalties.

Charles Holmes, director of the university's community relations office, said the letter outlining the NCAA decision would be released later Friday.

The NCAA began an investigation into the Memphis State athletic program last year. Among other things, the organization looked into allegations that some Tigers' athletes were permitted to accept more financial support under the federal Pell Grant program than is permitted by NCAA regulations.
