Dog liability

Q. Is the owner of a dog who has injured a person in a public place liable in a lawsuit?

A. If the owner was negligent in allowing the dog to run free and he could have reasonably foreseen that the dog could injure someone, he could be subject to civil liability, said Big Spring attorney Drew Mouton.

Supporters tell Austin panel university is vital to economy

By DANA PALMER

Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau AUSTIN - A plane-load of supporters came to Austin Friday to tell a higher education task force that the economic survival of West Texas depends on the continued existance of the University of Texas of the Permian Basin (UTPB).

"It is needed, deserved and is completely supported by the people of the Permian Basin," W.D. Noel of Midland, chairman of the the Select Committee on Higher Education.

Tough economic times for Texas and low-enrollment at the school have led to talk of possibly closing the upper-level college. Opposition to that possibility brought more than 100 business, civic and political leaders from a 22-county area of West Texas served by

While noting how important the economy, Development Board member Tom Wageman of Midland, said, "It took us almost 90 years to get our university."

He added that most students are older professionals changing careers or finishing degrees. "Our students don't take higher education for granted," Wageman said.

Bob Riley, president of Howard Community College in Big Spring reiterated the commitment of school's Development Board, told university is to the people and the UTPB students. "There are many place-bound students in the Permian Basin who could not or would not pursue higher education" if UTPB wasn't within commuting distance of many West Texas communities and junior colleges in Big Spring, Odessa and Midland. That fact alone is one of the best reasons for keeping the university open, said UTPB President Duane Leach. "The academic rose can only take root if the opportunity is available," he said, adding that in isolated West Texas, UTPB serves that purpose well.

Much was made of the area's and state's being dependent on the success of UTPB's new Center for Energy and Economic Diversification.

School taxes may increase 20.5 percent

Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau AUSTIN - School taxes for the Big Spring Independent School District would climb 20.5 percent if state aid is cut by 20 percent, according to budget options under study by the State Board of Education.

If the Big Spring district didn't want to raise taxes, it could instead cut the payroll by 70 people or cut pay by an average of $2,037 per

In light of a huge funding shortfall, state budget planners have been requested by Gov. Mark White to prepare four budget proposals — one detailing agency needs, one keeping current spending levels, one reducing expenditures by 10 percent and another cutting spending by 20 percent.

If state education funds are cut by 20 percent, school districts in Texas will have to hike local property taxes by an average of 19.8 percent, or fire 47,146 education employees or give pay cuts averaging $2,424, according to the Texas Education Agency.

In other Howard County districts, the necessary tax hike, staff firings or average pay cut would be: Coahoma ISD, 7 percent tax increase, 12 staff members lost, or $1,636 average pay cut; and, Forsan, 1 percent tax increase, one staff member lost, or $322 average pay cut.

County agrees on annex contractor

By SCOTT FITZGERALD Staff Writer

Howard County commissioners tentatively agreed Thursday to award a contract for courthouse annex work to Johnston Construction Inc. of Big Spring, County Judge Milton Kirby said this morning.

The decision is not final, however, until commissioners for-

Board adds 27 teachers to career ladder Level 2

By SPENCER SANDOW Staff Writer

The Big Spring school board placed 27 teachers on career ladder Level 2 at a meeting Thursday

The 27 are in addition to 77 teachers already on the ladder. Each teacher will receive a stipend of $1,659 this year, said Bill Mc-Queary, assistant superintendent for personnel and instruction.

The board acted in its decision on the advice of the career ladder advisory committee, comprised of teachers, administrators and two board members. The committee considered candidates using the teachers' social security numbers instead of names to assure objectivity, McQueary said.

Names of the 27 teachers will not be made public, said Superintendent Lynn Hise. Board members were not told the names, and Mc-Queary and Hise do not know them either, he said.

Out of 45 candidates, only 27 matched the criteria to qualify for Level 2, Hise said, although 33 places on the level were open.

Dock Voorhies was the only board member voting against placsaid he disagreed with the selection process because teachers who are already on Level 2 are allowed to remain with a lower performance level than candidates must have to be placed there.

In other business, the board: Heard a report of a survey taken among school districts and businesses on a policy of leave of absense for employees who adopt children. Hise and trustees Dan Wise and Voorhies will study the matter and present results at a future board meeting.

Owner wants to keep pit bull despite attack

By EDDIE CURRAN Staff Writer

The owner of the pit bull that attacked a family last Friday plans a fight to keep his dog after earlier giving permission to have the animal killed.

Gary Matthews of 3605 Dixon St. signed a euthanasia release for the dog Monday, said police Capt. Melvin Fowler, who notarized the release.

Matthews said he signed the release because he could not afford a $100,000 insurance policy required in the Big Spring City Code for persons who own dangerous animals.

But Matthews said Thursday he has a policy on his house that exceeds $100,000, which he believes will satisfy the insurance requirement.

Matthews' pit bull, while running with another dog, a white mixed breed, attacked a Big Spring couple and their 2-yearold son about 8 p.m. Friday as the family was taking a walk.

The attack occurred at the corner of Parkway Road and Laurie Street as Eugene and Kathy Yen, 1905 Wasson Road, were walking back home with their son, Andrew, from Comanche Trail Park.

Fowler said today he believes the white dog also must be considered a dangerous animal until he is advised otherwise. The owner of the white dog has not come forward, he said, adding that the dog can be destroyed after 10 days

Section 3-17 of the city code states a person may not keep a "dangerous animal" within the city without a permit obtained from City Council. The requirements of that permit, including the purchase of an insurance policy, are listed in Section 3-18.

Matthews said Thursday he intends to apply to City Council for the special permit and will build an eight-foot fence around his backyard.

Fowler, who said the pit bull is scheduled to be killed Monday or Tuesday, said this morning he hadn't heard from Matthews

Fair said Matthews had spoken to her about the insurance policy on his house. She said she wasn't sure if the home policy would cover a "dangerous animal" and recommended that Matthews take the matter before councilmen.

Matthews said it was an accident that his dog was running lose when Friday's attack

""Vanessa (the dog) stayed in the house every day, but I had to start putting her out because she had puppies and they smell up the house," Matthews said.

His backyard is surrounded by a wooden fence and chicken wire. He said he kept the dog on a chain until two weeks ago, when he stopped because the chain was snagging and hurting the puppies 'I was at work (the night of the attack), and the people that live here in the house with me were here. As soon as they noticed the dog wasn't in the backyard they went looking for him," Matthews said. 'When they realized what happened they called me and told me, and right after I hung up with them I called the hospital," he said.

The dog had burrowed through a space in the fence and under the chicken wire, he said.

The dog is not violent, but has been irritable after having puppies and because it was not accustomed to being kept outside, Matthews said.

"She didn't intend to kill them (the Yens). That's very apparant. If she had intended to hurt them she would have,' Matthews said.

"You need to see a pit bull in action, and then you can see what they can really do. They get a hold and don't let go," he said. "Friday night my dog was trying to run them from the neighborhood because the puppies were near.

Before Matthews had considered the possibility of using his home insurance to cover his dog, he said an $100,000 insurance policy would be too expensive.

They had me over a barrel and they knew it. They knew I couldn't pay it," he said. "I feel like there's prejudice toward my dog because it's a pit bull. They wouldn't even let me see the dog.'

The Yens said Matthews had apologized for the attack, adding they had no complaints against him. "We did not ask for the killing of the dogs. That's between him and animal control," Kathy Yen said.

"But to me I would feel safer (if the dog is killed). After the other night, when I go out I keep imagining the dog could be around," she said.

The Yens said the dogs attacked them, and Eugene Yen ran to try to draw the dogs away from his wife and son.

"'Don't panic' is what we thought at first," Kathy Yen said. She said the dogs had torn her husband's shirt before he ran, shouting to his wife to take Andrew and run the other way.

Eugene Yen said it was the pit bull that caused the injuries to him and his wife. The white dog just barked and ran around, he

AIDS projected to become major killer of Americans

WASHINGTON (AP) — AIDS could afflict 145,000 Americans by 1991 and claim more lives that year than the automobile did last year. according to a report that calls for a national effort to combat this 'staggering' menace to public health.

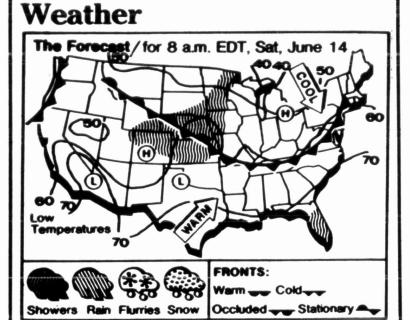

"Clearly, a national, coordinated response is necessary," Dr. Donald Ian Macdonald, head of the Public Health Service, said in a report

The study called for creation of a commission of government and private leaders to guide the nation's response to acquired immune deficiency syndrome

'We are suggesting that a national commission representing public, private and voluntary sectors, as well as all levels of government, be set up to look at anticipated needs and resource availability, and to make recommendations on how all sectors of our society can handle this major crisis," Macdonald said.

Macdonald, acting assistant secretary for health in the Health and Human Services Department, made the proposal in releasing the agency's master plan for dealing with AIDS.

By The Associated Press

WEST TEXAS: Mostly sunny and fair with not much change in temperature. Isolated late afternoon and evening thunderstorms extreme south. Highs 90 to 95 except as hot as 105 in the Rio Grande Valley. Lows tonight generally in the 60s.

State

Skies were clear across most of Texas today, as a weak high pressure ridge prevailed.

However, showers and a few thunderstorms, some producing heavy rain, were being detected over extreme Southeast Texas. The precipitation extended offshore along the upper Gulf Coast.

Light rainshowers also dotted a small section of the coastal waters between Corpus Christi and Port Mansfield. Skies were partly cloudy to mostly cloudy along the entire Texas coast.

Light southerly winds were common across most of the state, except for light northerly winds over the Big Bend and along the middle Texas coast. Winds speeds were generally in the 5 to 10 mph range.

Temperatures were in the 50s over the mountainous southwest while readings in the 60s and 70s were common across the rest of the state. Early morning extremes ranged from a cool 54 degrees at Marfa in the Davis Mountains to 80 degrees at Corpus Christi.

Isolated thunderstorms were expected this afternoon and tonight over parts of the Edwards Plateau and the Trans Pecos in West Texas and also over parts of South Texas.

Otherwise, conditions were expected to be warm and increasingly humid with clear to partly cloudy skies through Saturday. Highs this afternoon were expected to range from the upper 80s to near 105 along the Rio Grande in the Big Bend.

Nation

Rain dampened broad sections of the East and West today while much of the nation's midsection was under fair skies.

Showers and thunderstorms were scattered across New England and the mid-Atlantic Coast and along the central and eastern Gulf Coast. Showers and thunderstorms also were scattered across northern California and from the northern and central Rockies into the central High Plains.

Fair skies prevailed across the Mississippi Valley and the southern Plains, with early-morning temperatures in the 60s to 70s.

Temperatures were in the 40s to low 50s in New England early this morning because of clouds and rain while the desert Southwest had, readings in the 80s to low 90s

Olympia, Wash., was 84 degrees Thursday, breaking a record of 82

Today's forecast called for rain lingering in the mid-Atlantic states; rain likely in England; showers and thunderstorms scattered from the southern Atlantic Coast across the Gulf Coast to southwestern Texas; a chance of thunderstorms in southern Florida; and afternoon and evening thunderstorms scattered from the Rockies and central Plains to the upper Mississippi Valley.

Highs were forecast in the 60s across the upper Great Lakes region and northern Maine; 90s across interior California, southern Florida, the southern Plains, parts of the lower Mississippi Valley and from Florida to North Carolina; 90s to 112 across the desert Southwest; and 70s to 80s across most of the rest of the nation.

Temperatures around the nation at 3 a.m. EDT ranged from 44 degrees at Montpelier, Vt., and Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., to 89 at Phoenix, Ariz.

Firefighter Dennis Stovall of Cisco Volunteer Fire Dept. sprays down smoking debris after third fire in three days that has destroyed or damaged six buildings in downtown Cisco. Police say fires were set to divert attention away from burglaries being committed. Three suspects have been arrested in connection with the fire, but no charges have been filed.

CISCO (AP) - Residents edgy after three arsonsparked blazes in as many nights slapped a curfew on the city and kept a lookout despite the arrests of three

The curfew and state of emergency were declared by the City Council after the three fires damaged several businesses. Police believe they were meant to divert attention from petty burglaries, including the theft of cigarettes and change from a cash register.

The council, meeting in emergency session Thursday afternoon, clamped a midnight-to-6 a.m. curfew through Saturday. The town of about 4.500 residents is some 40 miles east of Abilene.

Three suspects were in custody Thursday night. But despite the arrests, Cisco officials were not assuming the fires would stop.

In addition to the curfew, members of the citizens watch group patrolled the streets Thursday night, and frustrated businessmen also assisted the seven-person police force in the watch, said city manager Michael

"We're a small West Texas city and we're awfully proud of our town. That's what makes senseless acts like this so frustrating," Moore said.

Jim Bob Cozart, 21, of Cisco, was charged with arson and was being held without bond at Eastland County Jail. The other two suspects, ages 20 and 22, are also of Cisco, said Cisco Police Officer Rick Kirkland.

Cozart was arrested about 3 a.m. Thursday a block

Botha meets with Tutu

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa - President P.W. Botha met today for the first time in six years with black Anglican Bishop Desmond Tutu as more arrests and police searches were reported under the day-old nationwide state of emergency.

Tutu, one of Botha's staunchest critics. described the 90-minute meeting as cordial. Shortly after the state of emergency was announced Thursday, Tutu condemned it as "iron-fisted" and urged the international community to intervene.

There were no reports of large-scale rioting in reponse to the government actions.

Bomb explodes: 8 hurt

LONDONDERRY, Northern Ireland - A car bomb exploded in Limavady near Londonderry early today, slightly injuring four police officers and four civilians and damaging scores of houses, police said.

The outlawed Irish Republican Army claimed responsibility for the bombing, which it said was aimed at homes of guards who work at Magilligan Prison a few miles away. The IRA says its members who are inmates at the prison are harassed.

One of the police officers was treated for cuts and shock at a hospital and was later released. The other people injured in the bombing were treated for minor injuries at the scene, said Belfast police Sgt. Isobel

VIENNA, Austria — Chancellor-designate Franz Vranitzky announced his new Cabinet today, less than a week after Kurt Waldheim's presidential election victory provoked a major shakeup of Austria's Socialist leadership.

Commentators said the Cabinet announced today reflected a swing away from the Socialists' traditional welfare-state outlook and a shift to the right. Waldheim, a former U.N. secretary-general supported by the conservative People's Party, took 53.9 percent of the votes in Sunday's election, defeating Kurt Steyrer, the Socialist candidate, who got 46.1 percent.

Fairness to workers reaches parking lot

General Motors and the United Auto Workers have reached a new labor agreement aimed at keeping GM's Van Nuys, Calif., assembly plant in operation.

Among other things, the agreement provides for abolishing class distinctions in the parking lot.

Currently, top management has its exclusive lot; middle management its lot; and the workers compete for what parking spaces are left.

With the new agreement, there will be one big lot with no assigned spaces, and equal opportunity for all employees workers, foremen and managers alike.

That's industrial democracy. GM may have learned it from the Japanese. Curious, that now America is taking lessons in egalitarianism from Asia.

Reagan decision keeps arms control hope alive

By deciding not to abrogate the Strategic Arms Limitation Treaties, President Reagan has avoided an unwise response to alleged Soviet violations. He spurned the advice of Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger that he scrap the treaties altogether and the suggestion of others that he selectively abrogate them.

For that, his decision deserves applause. Still, it doesn't revive the prospect of genuine arms control measures that constrain nuclear weapons spending and reduce the risk of war. Unless progress is made in the Geneva talks, arms control has no future.

The president's decision was compelled by the imminent commissioning of a new Trident submarine. This requires the United States to get rid of some existing missiles, say by destroying an old Poseidon submarine, to stay within the limit on missiles in SALT II which the U.S. hasn't ratified but until now has observed. His more hawkish advisers said it was folly to abide by the accords, since the Soviets are ignoring them.

On Monday, Reagan announced that he would go ahead and decommission a Poseidon, though National Security Adviser Robert McFarlane said it might be rebuilt, perhaps as a training vessel. The president also said the United States might speed up development of the single-warhead Midgetman intercontinental ballistic missile. He also urged the Soviets to correct their "extremely serious viola-" This won't appease the opponents of arms control, who urged Reagan to answer the violations by repudiating SALT II.

Soviet violations do call for some response. But most of the breaches cited by the administration and others are dubious at best. Only the phased-array radar in central Siberia appears clearly forbidden. It looks like an early-warning radar and under the Anti-Ballistic Missile treaty, such radars must be located "along the periphery" of the Soviet Union and "oriented outward." This one is neither.

Only two other alleged violations are significant. These are the encoding of radio signals from missile tests and the testing of a second type of ICBM. But the critic's case here has been legalistic and unconvincing. In both cases, the Soviets at least have gone to the limit of what is allowed. In neither is the supposed violation any threat to our security.

Commission set up to handle them. Compliance questions aren't new. What is new is the administration's insistence on making them public Past presidents have had great success with the SCC. In 1979, Defense Secretary Harold Brown said that when violations were suspected, "we raised these issues promptly with the Soviets, and in every case the activity ceased, or subsequent information clarified the situation and allayed our

For this system to work, though, both sides have to be committed to it. There is no reason for the Soviets to try to satisfy U.S. concerns if they believe the president plans to abandon arms control.

Reagan, who opposed SALT II as "fatally flawed," has made clear his general distrust of arms control and his specific eagerness to renounce the ABM treaty in his pursuit of a "Star Wars" defense. His decision to continue abiding by SALT II doesn't mean his views have changed. And his negotiators in Geneva have shown no inclination to accept reasonable constraints on both sides.

Given all this, his decision can't be grounds for optimism. It may be only a calculated political gesture. Abandoning the treaty would have enabled the Soviets to depict him as the man who killed arms control. This way, he can claim to be upholdinig it. It also gives him a chance, if he wants, to find imaginative ways to accommodate both American and Soviet interests in the arms control negotiations.

If nothing else, this latest development puts off the day when arms control finally is pronounced dead. There is still the chance of a breakthrough in Geneva that will bring it back to life. Both sides are obliged to use that opportunity while they can.

HOW DO STOU SPELL GADHAFT?

Potential far outweighs cost of exploring space

By JACK ANDERSON and DALE VAN ATTA

WASHINGTON — Five centuries after Columbus sought to explore the unknown, the same objections are being heard again: The risk is too great. The cost is too high. The dream is too impractical.

The voyage of Columbus was turned down, first by the king of Portugal, then by a Spanish blueribbon commission. But in the end, Columbus opened up new continents and new vistas of knowledge that made his critics look foolish. He also made possible the most successful anti-poverty pregram in history: the great ration of destitute peoples to the Americas.

Today Columbus has been superseded by astronauts eager to explore the space frontier, to lead mankind to other worlds. They believe untold knowledge and hidden resources await them - the enhance life on Earth.

They expect to assemble in space solar-powered satellites that can capture the sun's inexhaustible energy and transmit it to earth. They will mine valuable minerals up there, not only to supplement dwindling resources on Earth but to build and sustain society in space. They also hope to transfer industrial activities from Earth to space. This will improve old products, create new products and, at the same time, protect the Earth's fragile biosphere.

Even as the space program opens up future worlds, it will continue to advance science and enrich our everyday lives in the here and now. The Apollo program, which transported men to the moon, created many times more wealth than it cost - new jobs, new products and new industries. This becomes increasingly true as the old sources of jobs and prosperity - the raw-materials industries and the smoke-stacks plants — falter and decline. The new businesses — data processing, electronics, telecommunications, robotics, automation, services of many kinds — are based heavily upon information

In the Information Economy of today, the primary raw material is duces. The space program gave the that affect the health, environment and economy of the people. The nation that leads in space will assuredly lead in these other vital

Yet there are those who belittle space exploration, who see only the dollars in front of them and not the riches that lie beyond the horizon. The federal funding required for the space program is coveted for things of Earth — boondoggles for the rich and appropriations for pork-barrel projects.

We have spoken with many astronauts - men like Alan Shepard, the first American in space; Edwin Aldrin, who made the first landing on the moon; Thomas Stafford, who rendezvoused in space with Soviet cosmonauts; Eugene Cernan, the last man to walk on the moon.

They are united in their enthusiasm about the opportunities that await mankind in space. But space must be explored by living, breathing people — not by unthinking robots, the astronauts emphasize. They insist there is no substitute for human eyes, ears

They also stress the importance of keeping space exploration under civilian control. They fear some of NASA's critics have a hidden motive: They want to paint the space shuttle blue and turn it over to the Air Force to operate.

It is inspirational to listen to astronauts describe their experiences beyond the Earth. The words don't exist, they say, that can convey what it's like to see the Earth from space. Nor can any camera capture the spectacular beauty of our world set against the vast, black velvet of space.

The curve of the earth, the swirling eddies, the patterns of clouds marbling the surface above the brilliant blue of the water and the blue-green of the land — this is a information, and that is what the sight that must be personally space program pre-eminently pro- witnessed to be appreciated, the astronauts tell us.

> DIPLOMATIC DIGEST: Communist governments usually keep the serious social problems of their countries a deep, dark secret - until they get too big to hide. That's apparently what happened with Hungary's illegal-drug epidemic. The government recently gave out the appalling figures: In the early 1970s there were only a couple of hundred young drug abusers in Hungary; by the early 1980s there were an estimated 10,000; and by 1984 the figure had risen to 30,000. That's in a population of about 11 million. Has Marxism made opium the religion of the people?

> CONFIDENTIAL FILE: Like most wartime body counts, the figures are suspect, but Humberto Ortega, the Nicaraguan defense minister, recently told his countrymen that in 1985 the Sandinista armed forces killed 4.608 contras. He said the U.S.-backed rebels had killed only 1,143 government soldiers — and 1,560 civilians.

Thoughts on being a man

By SCOTT FITZGERALD Sometimes a man must break away from the confines of what Tom Sawyer once termed "sivilization" and return to that native island of malehood cronies.

And, as a man, we sometimes feel a need for reinforcement from that group of "buddies.

Such was the case for former Big Spring Herald sportswriter Charles Alcorn, who returned for a 20-hour visit Monday.

He has been busy making arrangements for his July 19 wedding to a young woman he has been courting for four years.

That probably entails notifying relatives he has never heard of. Ordering things he has never dreamed of. And making future plans for a life he is not quite aware

Upon his arrival, plans quickly were changed from attending a Midland Angel's baseball game to barbecuing in my backyard.

I had a 12-pound brisket marinating in the refrigerator. A 12-pound brisket always is present in my refrigerator because I like man-sized meals. Of course sportswriters Eddie Curran and Steve Belvin were present as we stood in the backyard gazing at the headlights of vehicles on Interstate 20, looking towards Midland and the lights that represent "sivilization. "Men," said Charles as he turned toward us.

"Yes sir," we replied in unison, clutching our tumblers of ice tea. "I want to look good and feel good walking down that aisle," he

"Son, you will," we replied, again in unison.

We could have told him other things — cliches such as: Life is a road we all travel on. And that marriage is one of the roads of life. Whatever we told him would have been of utmost importance. Keep in mind that neither Charles, Steve nor I have ever married

So I think we, and perhaps Charlie in particular, would have been better off going to that baseball game.

Family idea thriving in '80s

NEW YORK (AP) - The American family is strong and healthy, although the traditional model of a working father and a non-working mother is a thing of the past, says a recent poll.

The idea of family appears to remain deeply and unassailably imbedded in the nation's value system. But what people mean by family has not remained cons-C. Frederic John, senior vice president of Research & Forecasts Inc., which conducted the study, said Wednesday.

John said 89 percent of those surveyed said their families were among the most important things in their lives, and 52 percent said it was the most important element.

The telephone poll of 2,000 people was conducted last fall, and was commissioned by Ethan Allen Inc., the furniture company.

More than 70 percent of each type of household — traditional, dual-career and single-parent say their families are very close, and 84 percent put premium value on time spent with their families.

Eighty-six percent said they and their families shared at least one meal a day. About half said they see their extended families whenever possible; 64 percent said they did it because they enjoyed it. and only 6 percent said it was an obligation.

Seventy-three percent said they were very satisfied with their relationships with their children, and 70 percent said they were very satisfied with their relationships with their spouse or intimate companion.

The main causes of problems within the families was interpersonal conflicts, followed by money,

John said many people harbor reservations about how much of their lives should be devoted to family. A third disagreed with the proposition that parents should sacrifice to give their children the best, and 64 percent said parents should have their own lives and interests, even if it meant that they spent less time with their children. Half of all working people said they would not make sacrifices in their careers to spend more time with their families.

The survey found more acceptance of diversity. John cited a 1957 poll that indicated that 80 percent of the public believed a woman who remained unmarried was either sick, neurotic or immoral. John's poll found that only 28 percent believes that being single is not an acceptable lifestyle.

Eighty percent agreed that a family is any group that considers itself a family, and two in three agreed that single adults can do a good job raising children. But only 25 percent said they thought homosexuals could do a good job of child rearing, and 54 percent disagreed.

Nearly nine in 10 agreed that fathers should spend as much time with their children as mothers, but 73 percent felt that mothers with young children should work only if it is really necessary.

The survey has a margin of error of plus or minus 2 percent.

Complaint filed over bird's slur

SEATTLE (AP) — A black woman said Thursday she has filed a harassment complaint against a white neighbor who has trained a parrot to squawk a racial

Charlene Tymony said her neighbor got the parrot and trained it to speak the offensive word because of a dispute that began when she refused to trim her trees to improve the neighbor's view.

Police spokesman Gary Flynn said detectives will investigate the complaint, but he was uncertain whether the city's harassment law covers animals.

Ms. Tymony said she filed the complaint Wednesday after the bird squawked the word over and over for a half hour starting early in the morning. She said it happens three or four times a week and has been going on about two years.

"It wore my nerves to a frazzle," she said. "It's been driving me to where it made me sick at my stomach they could do that.'

She said the dispute began when the neighbors wanted her to cut her trees to improve their view of Lake Washington. She refused because she doesn't want to lose the shade in her yard.

She said she has complained to the neighbors about the bird, but they refuse to speak to her.

The complaint named Ms. Tymony's next-door neighbor Sue Kaufman. A message left on her answering machine seeking comment was not

Appeals court says bar owners liable

HOUSTON(AP) - A restaurantor bar owner can be held liable for damages if a drunken person is served alcohol and then injures someone else, a state appeals court

However, the 14th Court of Appeals, in the first Texas ruling to uphold what is known legally as the 'dram shop'' principle, did not address Thursday whether the restaurant involved in the case was liable, saying that question should be left to a jury to decide.

The case involves A. Bryan Poole and his wife, who filed suit against the El Chico restaurant company after their son was killed in 1983 by a drunken driver.

Rene Saenz pleaded guilty to involuntary manslaughter in the accident, which occurred after Saenz had been drinking at an El Chico restaurant.

A state district judge refused to allow the Pooles' suit to go to the jury, issuing a summary judgment in the restaurant's favor.

The appeals court, however, wrote in its opinion that the bar operator had a duty to not knowingly sell an alcoholic beverage to an already intoxicated person.

Whether El Chico breached that duty and whether that breach was a proximate cause of the fatal accident are issues for a jury to decide," the court wrote.

The Pooles' attorney, Tim Riley said his clients probably would seek more than $1 million in damages when the case goes to

'Senior Texans will now have the opportunity to establish legislative priorities for Texas lawmakers to consider in January," White told a news conference.

He received a list of the 116 members of the non-partisan organization of Texans 60 years of age and older from Harriet Griffin of Fort Worth, chairman of the steering committee.

The Silver-Haired Legislature was created by a resolution of the 1985 Legislature. On May 30, about 150,000 older Texans elected the 116 For too many years, there was no representatives from 28 districts over the state.

Howard County is in District 1 with Forrest Scott of Andrews as the representative.

On Sept. 29, the mock Legislature will be convened in the Capitol by White for three days of committee hearings and debate before selecting the issues they think should have priority in 1987.

A training session for the 116 representatives will be held in July by Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby.

"I am pleased that Texas has joined a list of 22 other states in sponsoring such a program,' White said Thursday.

"Some might ask why the Silver-Haired Legislature was created.

forum for senior Texans to discuss issues that concern them and no avenue in which to present their concerns to the regular legislature. 'Senior Texans represent a vast, untapped reserve of knowledge and experience, and their numbers are growing," White said.

The governor said that in other states with a similar program, 70 percent of the ideas that came out of Silver-Haired Legislatures have become law. In Arkansas, 90 percent of the proposals later became law, he said.

"There is an impressive group coming to Austin," White said, giving as examples the election of a former state representative, two retired judges and three retired

Senior Texans now have a chance to gain understanding of the legislative process through direct involvement," White said. 'And because of their advocacy experience with the Silver-Haired legislators, they will offer informed assistance to policy-makers here in Austin and in their own communities.'

Shooting censored from student book

HOUSTON (AP) - A high school yearbook editor upset because the principal has prohibited a shooting in the school cafeteria from being included in the book says even tragic events should be documented.

Hooper, however, refused to allow anything specifically about the shooting in the book, and took the material they were going to use in their layout.

The shooting occurred a month after the high school opened when a student pulled a gun in the cafeteria during lunchtime and started shooting, wounding Webster and another student. Webster's spinal cord was severed, and the other student was hit in the leg.

Clements says remarks for administrators

Clements' remarks about purging the Texas prison system of military veterans Monday night were meant only to include prison administrators with a military justice background, a spokesman for the Clements gubernatorial campaign says.

If elected, Clements doesn't intend to ask for resignations from all former military personnel in the Texas Department of Corrections - just some of those in administrative positions, including Director O.L. McCotter, said Reggie Bashur, campaign spokesman.

Some prison employees interviewed Tuesday said they support the Republican gubernatorial candidate's views on prison issues and McCotter. The former governor, speaking to a group of Walker County residents Monday night, addressed prison, education and economy issues.

He told an audience of about 200 that TDC promotions should be made from within and not sought from outside military and federal prison systems. He also expressed dissatisfaction at the state of the prison system in general, pinning much of the blame on Gov. Mark White and the current prison administration.

ter) has done the job," Bashur said. "All he said is that if he wins the election, he will make changes at the top.

A spokesman for the TDC said McCotter won't get involved in politics by commenting on Clements' remarks.

"Good administration is good administration and it doesn't make any difference where the experience comes from," said Phil Guthrie, director of public affairs for TDC. TDC's administration is composed of a 'dozen or so'' military veterans, he said.

"I tend to regard that talk about the military as political rhetoric," Guthrie said.

After reports of the remarks, Walker County Republican Party Chairman Joe Stivers said he received phone calls Tuesday from TDC employees who served in the military and were worried they would lose their jobs if Clements is elected.

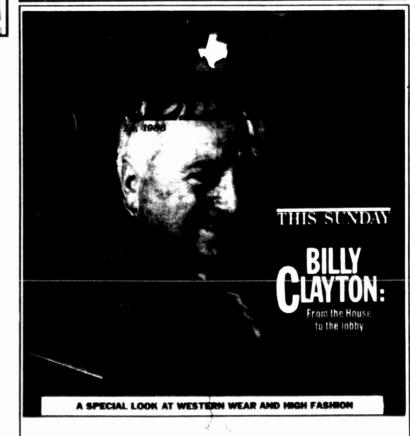

Clements didn't mean "all service veterans" when he made those remarks, Stivers said. "He has no objection to veterans. What he has an objection to is bypassing those persons who could have been upgraded from within and the (current TDC) administration's propensity to hire persons from

Teen's attempt to break away is breaking down her parents

DEAR ABBY: We have a beautiful 161/2-year-old daughter who is driving her father and me toward a nervous breakdown. She has done a complete turnabout in regards to everything and everyone who has ever meant anything to her.

She finishes her 11th grade this month, then she wants to quit school, find a full-time job and get her own apartment! She has no training or job experience, but she's "sure" she can support herself. She has forsaken all her old friends, her ideals, even her religion. Discussing anything with her is like talking to the wall. She knows it all, and that's that!

Her new friends are in trouble at school, and I'm sure they smoke pot on weekends.

Just getting this off my chest helps. Thank you.

Dear Abby

FLORIDA MOTHER DEAR MOTHER: Writing to me may help you, but it won't help your daughter. Consider this: The sudden "turnabout" in your daughter's behavior might be the result of drugs. The national hot line for drug abuse is: 1-800-COCAINE.

You need professional family counseling with or without your daughter. Find the Families Anonymous group in your area and meet with it. (The people there have been through this scene and can be enormously helpful.)

Let your daughter know that you love her, but you're not allowing her to quit school, get a job and move out as long as she's a minor.

DEAR ABBY: I am 121/2 and want more than anything else in the world to become a nun. Some of my friends view it as a joke, and my mother doesn't like the idea because she wants me to go to college (which I don't want to do.)

I haven't told anyone else about this, and I'm too embarrassed to discuss it with my priest. What

Thinking changes on cause of canker sores

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Am I missing some change in medical thinking? You now say that canker sores are not caused by viruses. I've been told for years they are. In fact, many years ago my doctor gave me a series of pox vaccinations to get rid of mine. Didn't work, though. When I was a kid, my mothr embarrassed me by asking if I had moved my bowels. She attributed canker sores to elimination. Later, someone told me that chewing gum brought them on. I would like an entire column devoted to canker sores, how we get them and how we get rid of them, preferably the latter. — R.E.

Well, you've certainly run the gamut of medical lore about canker sores, haven't you? Let me add my own thoughts.

We once confidently blamed these mouth ulcers on viruses. We no longer do that, settling instead for that vast wasteland of uncertainty encompassed by the term, "cause unknown." In fact, though, more credence is being given to the body's immune system as a cause than any today. That seems a more believable idea.

For unknown reasons, the body may be making antibodies that attack mouth tissue, somehow mistaking it for foreign substance. It's difficult to substantiate such cause, many events can trigger and detected only by microscope play some role. Others find that certain foods bring on the sores. High on the list are citrus fruits, melons, tomatoes, vinegar chocolates.

I can give you but a brief rundown on treatments. Over the years there have been treatments to match every theory, from the pox vaccination to folklorish fixation on elimination problems as the source Besides attention to food sources, most effects are directed toward alleviating the discomfort when they appear. Peroxigel, a form of peroxide, helps many. Others find a mixture of Bendadryl and Kaopectate helpful. A mouth rinse of the antibiotic tetracycline is another popular treatment.

I'm sorry you have this annoyance. You're not alone. Estimates of the number of fellow sufferers range from 20 percent to 50 percent of the population.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: What does this mean, "history of gross hematuria?" I had this years ago, but I never learned what it was or what to do. I am now 68 years old. - R.R.

Gross hematuria means bleeding into the urine, as from the kidneys or urinary bladder. The term, gross, means that the extent of bleeding was enough to turn the urine red. You distinguish that from microscopic hematuria, We do know that, whatever the which means the bleeding is small, (to find blood cell will use a microscope for this test. DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Do antacid tablets really supply the calcioum you need, the same as regular calcium supplements do? — Mrs. 0.F.

That's a very good question, O.F. I have read such reports, and it is a relatively simple and inexpensive way to get calcium to protect bones against osteoporosis. However, perhaps we should look at many other facets of the idea. It has to do with how calcium is absorbed.

Stomach acid is important in calcium absorption. Antacids do neutralize stomach acid. That is, after all, why they work. More study will have to be done to see just how great a factor this neutralizing of acid is in limiting calcium absorption. For now, I would feel more comfortable with the conventional supplements if my doctor prescribed them.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: My husband and I are both on the brink of 71. He is vigorous and healthy (iogs. etc.) and gets up at 5 a.m. He loves gadgets and feels I need a microwave oven. Years ago, I had pacemaker installed. I have heart rhythm problems and congestive heart failure. My doctor old me then to stay three feet Either kind should be on your away from an operating for your opinion on the microwave subject. — W.G.

Go ahead and get the microwave. Those made today won't bother your pacemaker. Some of the old ones did have leakage problems and maybe that's what your former doctor had in mind. It seems to me it will help your husband share some of the food preparation chores with you and absorb some of his apparently abundant energy. Read the instructions carefully. They heat foods in deceptive ways. I nearly burned my tongue to a crisp after heating a small fruit pie once.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I took an early retirement and am supplementing my income with small iobs. I have been doing some night watchman work of late. I had intestinal surgery done just prior to my quitting. Now, I find that I have lost my night vision acuity. I never was bothered before - night driving, etc. My doctor says there are reports of this happening. Will vitamin A supplements help? -

The only connection I can think of is that the surgery somehow interfered with your body's uptake of vitamin A, which is, of course, related to night vision acuity. If part of the intestine were removed, there might be a more or less permanent deficiency. Supplements of would correct it. Another point: Very often, when one deficiency arises others are also present other vitamin uptake problems as

Kids get help in coping with divorce Club news

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) -Every year, the parents of more than a million children get divorced. It's a decision that's tough on parents, and maybe even tougher on kids, says University of Rochester psychologist Joanne Pedro-Carroll.

'Many studies have shown that such youngsters are at high risk of becoming 'problem' children in the classroom," she says, "ones who fight too much with classmates, who seem perpetually distracted, who cry or lose their temper over small provocations, or who are so withdrawn that they don't participate in class or make friends."

She has developed a preventive program operating in 28 schools in and around Rochester to help such children. The program is designed not only to relieve the sense of isolation and stigma that so many children feel when their parents split up, she explains, but also to teach the skills that children need to cope with the disruption of their family

'Over a period of several weeks, children share feelings in support groups and discover that they're not alone," Pedro-Carroll says. This is an important step, but equally important, children also controlled conditions to see learn ways of resolving conflicts with others.

The techniques used to teach problem-solving skills vary with the ages of the children involved. In grades 1 through 3, leaders often use games, puppet shows or cartoons to convey the main steps involved in solving problems. A technique that is popular with older children, Pedro-Carroll says, is to role-play divorce-related scenarios on "WKID-TV," in which pupils take turns being members of "panel of experts" on separation and divorce. The experts' job is to comment on divorce-related questions, and suggest solutions for possible problems posed by the 'studio audience' made up of other group members. Panelists answer questions like "Is it true that kids can cause their parents' divorce?" or "Will I lose my friends if they find out my parents have split?'

From this exercise, Pedro-Carroll says, children develop a sense of mastery and take pride in their ability to help themselves and each other with difficult issues.

Because the "Children of Divorce" project is a low-cost way to improve the academic performance of the many school-age children whose parents separate, Pedro-Carroll hopes it will be widely imitated in districts across the

Though there are a few other similar programs around the country, possibly none is so thoroughly committed to research as Rochester's.

Pedro-Carroll supervises extensive testing of children, teachers and parents under scientifically whether the therapy has a measurable impact. Results from testing the approximately 215 children who have participated in the intervention programs have been encouraging, she

"After going through the program, most children become less anxious and worried and report feeling happier and more in control of their lives," she says.

Teachers say that after children

Teachers also say that children show an improved ability to get along with schoolmates, speak up for themselves, follow rules and tolerate frustration. The idea for the intervention came about when Pedro-Carroll was completing work on her doctoral degree in clinical psychology in 1982. She found that frequently children mistakenly blame themselves for their parents' problems, and exhaust themselves worrying about them.

"I reasoned that if I could show children how to distinguish between problems they can't solve ('How can I make mom and dad get back together?' for instance) from problems they can do something about ('How will I get Danny to stop teasing me at recess?') then the kids could focus their energy on matters important to their own development.

To keep the costs of the program low and reach large numbers of children, Pedro-Carroll designed the program to operate in schools.

side of the family, school is the most important socializing influence in a child's life," she says. 'And by training school professionals to conduct the sessions, we can help children for a fraction of what private counseling would

A church with personality

By CARLEEN EVERETT Lifestyle Editor

Every church has its own personality. Some are liberal while others are conservative. Some are strict and some are lax. Some even have mascots. Such is the case at St. Mary's Episcopal Church, where a furry little black and white critter, with a mustache, roams the grounds as if it owns the place. The church doesn't have a name yet for the well-fed feline, according to George von Hassell, a deacon at St. Mary's. "This is our church cat," he said after an interview this week. "We take in everything here. We started feeding the cat and now he has become a part of the congregation. The cat also has been included in the pictures taken of the staff and congregation, von Hassell

"St. Mary's is an unusual church. We have a great deal of support and concern for the community and ways of helping even the non-Episcopalians,' he said.

Von Hassell was received by the church - rather than ordained - an unusual action in the Episcopal church. It was unusual because his ordination was transferred from another

Von Hassell already was a deacon of the Church of Sweden, which is a member of the worldwide Lutheran communion. He had been functioning for years as a deacon in the Lutheran Church of America.

In 1981, he joined the Episcopal Church. Later, at the request of the Rt. Rev. Sam B. Hulsey, bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Northwest Texas, von Hassell's ordination was transferred.

'The deacon of the Episcopal church is a separate ministry. I'm a servant of the church, von Hassell explained.

As a deacon, his duties are to assist the priest, take communion to shut-ins, annoint people with oil for healing and work with the community, he said.

"A deacon's responsibility is to take the word out to nonmembers and bring the needs of the world to the members," he

For some, a deacon is the first step leading to priesthood.

"I don't want to be a priest," von Hassell said, adding, "I feel there's a need for the church to be in the world in the name of Christ.'

Von Hassell "grew up in the church," so it was natural for him to be involved in the church, he said. "I have a talent as a social worker and wanted to use it in the church."

Serving as part-time deacon in the church is only one aspect of von Hassell's life. He also serves on the board of directors of the American Red Cross, West Side Community Center and American Cancer Society (effective in September).

He also is a member of the Society of Mary the Virgin and he works full-time at Hall-Bennett Memorial Hospital, where he is a cashier and social worker.

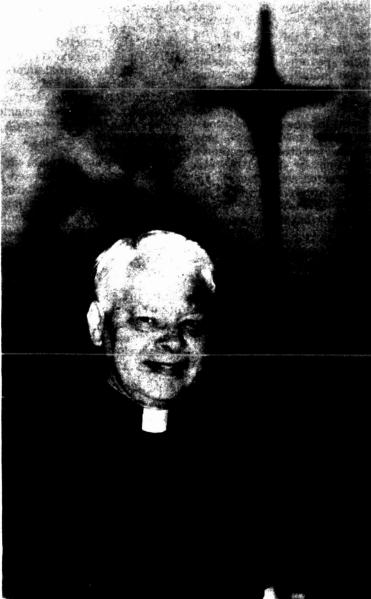

A native New Yorker, von Hassell was stationed at Webb Air Force Base here in 1952 while serving in the United States Air Force.

Prior to his return to Big Spring in 1975, he served as a deacon at two Lutheran churches in New York City. He also worked with Puerto Rican drug addicts in Spanish Harlem.

Later, he was transferred to a church in California. While there. he worked for two years with Caesar Chavez and the United Farm Workers Union at

Fundamentalists want liberal officials out

ATLANTA (AP) — Southern Baptist fundamentalists, newly dominant after election victories at their national convention, are racing to reprove or remove denomination officials they see as

One prime target ducked their fire, at least temporarily, Wednesday night. But others waited their turn as delegates from thousands of churches headed toward the end of the convention.

Meanwhile, the denomination's president and president-elect, fundamentalists both, called for peace, love and an end to the bitterness that has soured relations among factions in the 14.5-millionmember Southern Baptist Convention.

Those pleas won applause from the 20,000 or so delegates who remained on Wednesday after nearly 40,000 voted in the previous day's presidential election. But delegates lining up at floor microphones were asking for action against fellow Baptists rather than prayers for

Police have robbery suspect in custody

By HANK MURPHY Staff Writer

Police have a 21-year-old Big Spring man in custody in connection with a string of aggravated robberies that occurred between May 29 and June 4.

Lorenzo Jackson Jr., 906 N.W. Second St., was arrested at 7:18 p.m. June 6 near Rip Griffin Truck Stop on a emergency parole violation warrant issued by the state Board of Pardons and Paroles. He was apprehended by officers Drew Bavin, Mike Chestnut and Sgt. Oskar Everett after a foot chase, said police.

District parole officer David Harman said Thursday afternoon that Jackson gave statements to police Monday concerning the robberies of the Town & Country convenience store May 29 and the Pizza Inn June 2, and the attempted robbery of Deckers Liquor Store

During the robbery investigations, police say they received numerous Crimestopper tips implicating Jackson as well as other unnamed suspects. Police told Harman of the information and showed him a composite sketch of Jackson developed by a robbery victim, said police Lt. Jerry Edwards. A parole violation warrant was then issued.

Jackson was paroled in April from the Texas Department of Corrections in Huntsville after serving about a year of a sixyear sentence for the Jan. 31, 1985, robbery of Al's Grocery on Third and Runnels St

He was arrested in February 1985, indicted by a Howard County grand jury and plead guilty in 118th District Court on May 8, 1985.

Edwards said although Jackson is the primary suspect in the recent robberies, police are looking at other men who may have acted as accomplices Police had inadequate information this morning to obtain an arrest warrant, he said.

New clue may be AIDS vaccine secret

WASHINGTON (AP) — Infection with one strain of the AIDS virus appears to keep other variants from infecting the same person, indicating some unknown protective mechanism that might be useful in developing protective vaccines, resear-

New research on the action within the body of the virus which causes acquired immune deficiency syndrome indicates that the viral variants seen in single patients are closely related mutations of the same strain that originally infected the person, they say.

Even infected, promiscuous, homosexual men - who may have had hundreds of exposures to versions of the AIDS virus from infected sex partners - appear to carry one strain of the virus or several highly related variants of that strain, scientists

"The finding may imply that once infected with one AIDS virus, individuals are protected from infection by other AIDS viruses," says a report to be published Friday in the journal

Shaw and Maria E. Taylor of the University of Alabama Medical Center in Birmingham, working with researchers from three other institutions, said it is unlikely that this possible protection results from classical viral immunity mechanisms. Traditionally, a cell infected with one virus loses its receptor, or gateway, for that or related viruses to enter.

However, many people chronically infected with the AIDS virus, known as HTLV-3 or LAV, still have normal numbers of the uninfected white blood cells that the virus targets. These seemingly would be candidates for invasion by another strain of

"We really can't explain why a person seems to be infected by only one genotype of the virus," Shaw said in a telephone interview. "It may be some kind of immune response that occurs after the initial infection, or perhaps even a nonimmunologic

"In any case, if we could find out what it is, activating such a factor before any infection could be a way of preventing AIDS," he continued.

tionship between this preventive factor and a variant of the AIDS virus recently discovered in people in West Africa. Dr. Myron Essex and others at the Harvard School of Public Health announced in March that they discovered a form of the virus, which they dubbed HTLV-4, that does not produce disease.

"There has been some speculation, and that's all it is at this point, that perhaps HTLV-4 protects against infections by the disease virus," Shaw said.

In the newly reported research, the Alabama scientists and colleagues from Walter Reed Army Medical Center, the National Cancer Institutes and the University of Miami Medical School found that the AIDS virus inside each patient mutates very Samples of the virus taken from the blood of the same patients over periods of up to two years show that each variant goes through subtle genetic changes as it reproduces within infected cells, the scientists directly, they found, with one tion and treatment.

Shaw said there may be a rela- version springing from the last and moving to another. Instead, they say, isolates of the virus appear to evolve in parallel and a single patient can simultaneously be infected with several versions of the original infecting

"By looking at the genetic change of the virus in a single person, we can for the first time measure the rate of change within infected people," Shaw said, "and that rate is very fast."

The researchers said the genetic change of HTLV-3 may be tenfold greater than for other similar viruses, known as RNA viruses, and equally faster than influenza A virus. Constant change in the unrelated influenza virus, for example, is the reason new flu vaccines must be developed so often to stem epidemics.

This rapid, continuous change makes it hard to find a part of the virus that is stable enough to serve as a target for vaccines or treatment drugs, scientists say.

However, Shaw said, the research shows that there are some stable, conserved regions that appear to be shared by most variants of the virus which could The variants do not evolve be candidate targets for preven-

Winds and rain play havoc at U.S. Open

SOUTHAMPTON, N.Y. (AP) -Scores and golf balls, caught in the relentless grip of a punishing wind, soared to unintended targets in the opening round of the 86th U.S.

On a course with just one water hazard, water was a big hazard. Drenching rains and powerful gusts whipped the already challenging Shinnecock Hills layout and its field Thursday, leaving only Bob Tway standing at par, 70, with a one-stroke lead over Greg Norman.

'It was probably as difficult a day as I've ever seen in American (major) championship golf in all the years that I've played," Masters champion Jack Nicklaus, who shot a 77, said.

An early afternoon downpour caused a 14-minute suspension of play and darkness forced an end to the day's activity with six threesomes on the course. They were to complete their first rounds

Nicklaus, shooting for an un-precedented fifth U.S. Open title and trying to keep alive his Grand Slam hopes, had three double bogeys on par-4 holes on the back

For the first time in a major tournament since the 1959 British Amateur, he even lost a ball. It happened on the 10th hole when he pushed his tee shot into a berry

But he hasn't given up. "I need two pretty decent rounds and one real good one, which is what I played at Augusta" on the in calm winds and 80 degrees.' last three days to win the Masters, said Nicklaus, who had just 26 putts but struggled with his tee shots and hit only four greens in regulation. You could start the ball 50, 60, 70 yards left of where it ended up," Nicklaus said. "The wind was blowing that hard."

"With the weather conditions the way they are, it's probably the toughest course we've played all year," Kenny Knox said.

Knox was in a group of six players who squished up the narrow, rolling fairways to scores of 2-over-par 72. The others were Tom Watson, Denis Watson, Tommy Nakajima, Rick Fehr and David Bernhard Langer, Tom Kite and Lee Trevino shot 74s on the soggy, chilly 6,912-yard course. A large group at 75 included Seve Ballesteros, Hal Sutton, Ray Floyd, Hubert Green, Fuzzy Zoeller and 1986 NCAA champion Scott Verplank, who is making his professional debut.

"I think 71 was like shooting a 67 or 68 under good conditions," said Norman, who has two victories and two second-place finishes in his last five tournaments. "There were some par 4s where 5 was a good score today.'

"We've played in worse conditions than this, but I don't know if we've played in worse conditions on this tough of a golf course," said Tway, winner of the Westchester Classic last Sunday when it also rained. "This golf course is tough

That assessment figured to be tested in today's second round and over the weekend. Partly sunny skies and temperatures near 80 degrees were expected this afternoon with sunny skies and similar temperatures forecast for the last two rounds Saturday and Sunday.

On Thursday, just nine days before summer begins, the temperature ranged from 53 to 57 degrees. Winds averaged 15 to 25 mph and gusted to 30. The golfers' wardrobes expanded to include mittens and ski caps. But Tway stayed hot.

'Last week I played very well' in posting his second victory of the year, Tway said. "Anytime you're playing well, it gives you confidence and it carries over a little

The 26-year-old Oklahoman actually was two under par after sinking birdie putts of 20 feet at the 11th hole and 25 feet at the 12th. But bogeys on the 14th and 15th holes put him in a spot where no one has been for 12 years.

It was 1974 at Winged Foot when the first-round leader of a U.S. Open last failed to break par. Gary Player led then at even par.

"Today's just kind of a survival day," said Tway, a survivor in his long battle to play on the tour.

In 1981, 1982 and 1983 he tried and failed to qualify for the tour. He played in Asia, Europe, South Africa, "a lot of different places,"

Cubs say goodbye to Frey

CHICAGO (AP) — After firing Manager Jim Frey, Chicago Cubs President Dallas Green named John Vukovich as the team's in-

But the guessing game in Chicago is: For how long? Vukovich, who played on two National League pennant winners and has served as a coach on the major league level for the last five years, has been handed the reins of the Cubs as they opened a homestand against the

St. Louis Cardinals. After firing Frey on Thursday, Green would say only that Vukovich would manage the club today. He declined, when asked by reporters, to say whether Vukovich would serve as interim or permanent manager. Green also refused to say who he has in mind as possible candidates for the position. "Finding managers is a bit difficult," Green said at a Wrigley Field news conference Thursday. "I'm going to do what I think's right for this organization." Green said he wants to name a new manager quickly, provided the right man is available. "The availability of good people is sometimes difficult," he said. Asked how long Vukovich would serve as interim manager, Green said: "I think Vuk's a good baseball man. I don't like the word interim. I prefer to call him my manager. I told you he's managing (Friday) and that's good Vukovich, 38, played for Green on the Philadelphia Phillies' 1980 NL championship team. Considered a strong third baseman in his playing career. Vukovich also played on the Cincinnati Reds' 1975 NL championship

Chicago Cubs manager Jim Frey was fired Thursday after the team lost seven of its last 10 games. The announcement was made by Cubs president Dallas Green

Cubs, handling the first-base assignment the last two seasons.

Green said he fired Frey, who led the Cubs to their first baseball title of any kind in nearly four decades in 1984, because he "wasn't getting the job done.' "I think he did everything in his power to help the players and the oganization get back on the winning track. Unfortunately, in my opinion whatever he was doing at this stage of the game wasn't getting the job done," Green

The decision to fire Frey came after a disastrous road trip on which the Cubs drip ped seven of 10 games.

Frey said the decision surprised him. 'It's something I'm very disheartened by, he told WBBM-AM radio. "I wanted to stay here a long time. I wanted to stay here and

The Cubs also released third-base coach Don Zimmer, a close triend of Frey's

Green said he will never forget what Frey did for the Cubs in his first season as manager, leading them to the National League East pennant in 1984. It was the club's first baseball title since 1945, and Frey was named Manager of the Year by The Associated Press. Green hired Frey on Oct. 6, 1983, to replace interim Manager Charlie Fox.

After losing the National League Championship Series to the San Diego Padres in 1984, the Cubs started off hot in 1985, but slumped to 77-84 after a devastating series of injuries, especially to the pitching staff.

When Frey was fired Thursday, the team was 23-33, in fifth place, 161/2 games behind the division-leading New York Mets.

Frey is tied with Stan Hack for 12th on the Cubs' all-time victory list with 196.

Before joining the Cubs, Frey managed the Kansas City Royals in 1980 and part of 1981. He directed the Royals to the 1980 American League pennant, with a 97-65 record, but they lost the World Series in six games to the Phillies, then managed by Green.

Salado 'walks' into title game

Colmesneil ran its record to 27-0 by beating Gorman, 3-2, in its semifinal game.

Riviera Kaufer (26-5) and Frankston (23-2) earned positions in today's 11:30 a.m. Class 2A title The bad news was that Salado's match. Kaufer, the defending state pitchers also issued 24 bases on champion, blanked New Diana 3-0 Thursday and Frankston rallied from an early deficit to beat Coppell 6-5 in extra innings. Third baseman Shane Weaver had Archer City's only hit, a line drive single to left centerfield with the bases loaded and two out in the sixth inning. At that time, Archer City already led 10-8 on 21 Salado

Weaver's single scored the fifth run of the sixth inning, turning an ,8-6 deficit into an 11-8 lead. Three more runs in the seventh - on walks, of course - iced Archer City's victory.

Houston Bellaire held off a late challenge from Stroman.

Stroman, trailing 4-1 through five innings, took the lead with a wild four-run sixth

But Bellaire got RBI singles from Ben Austin and Fred Hinojosa to regain the lead 6-5 in the bottom of the inning.

Yanks withstand Beniquez's bate

Don Mattingly hit a two-run homer in the first inning and lined an RBI double that broke a seventh-inning tie as the New York Yankees withstood three solo home runs by Baltimore's Juan Beniquez and beat the Orioles 7-5 Thursday

Beniquez, who entered the game with one home run this season, hit his third of the night in the sixth inning for a 5-5 tie.

But Rickey Henderson led off the Yankees' seventh with a double and Mattingly followed with another double off Tippy Martinez,

"Everybody likes to hit with men on base ... sometimes it's hard to concentrate with nobody on," Mattingly said. "With Rickey out there, it always helps.

Beniquez connected for his first three-homer game in the major leagues. He had three previous two-homer games.

"I'm a line-drive hitter, a singles hitter," Beniquez said. "But tonight was one of those nights." "I just hit the ball good and it because of rain, Chicago rallied ed Kansas City 3-2. The Milwaukee at Boston game was rained out.

Houston beat San Francisco 4-1 in the only National League game. Beniquez homered in the second inning and again in the fourth off New York starter Alfonso Pulido, who was brought up from the minors earlier in the day.

Eddie Murray hit a two-run homer in the sixth that knocked out Pulido, and Beniquez greeted Brian Fisher, 2-2, with another home run.

Beniquez fouled out to first base in the seventh inning and grounded out in the ninth.

Mattingly hit a two-run homer, his 12th, in the first off Ken Dixon. Two outs later, Ken Griffey hit a solo homer for a 3-0 lead. Dixon, who did not finish the inning, has allowed 20 home runs this year, including 15 in his last 27 innings at Memorial Stadium

Beniquez's effort marked the second time within a week that a Baltimore player had homered three times in a game against the Yankees. Lee Lacy homered three times in an 18-9 victory over New York on Sunday

The Blue Jays had runners on second and third with two outs in the seventh when Gruber hit a routine fly ball to center field. But the ball disappeared into a thick fog and center fielder Pat Sheridan did not make a move until it landed behind Right fielder Kirk Gibson retrieved the ball at the fence in right-center, but Gruber had already circled the bases for his third home run of the season. Gruber went 3-for-4 and broke an 0-for-26 slump.

Home plate umpire Dave Phillips waved the players of the field after Gruber's homer, and the game was called 35 minutes later because of rain and fog.

Nothing certain in NBA

NEW YORK (AP) — With no Akeem Olajuwon or Patrick Ewing standing at the head of the class, the roll call in the first round of Tuesday's NBA draft could go in several directions. The Philadelphia 76ers won the first pick in last month's draft lottery and since then, there has been talk of trades, most of them involving that No. 1 pick and unhappy center Moses Malone. But Malone's $2.1 million annual salary make any trade difficult to complete, so the chances are the 76ers still will pick first.

Most of General Manager Pat Williams comments have been directed at North Carolina center-forward Brad Daugherty, who would give a 7-footer to the team with the shortest average height in the NBA.

"He's going to be stable," Williams said. "He's going to improve. He's going to score. He'll play big forward and center." The 76ers and the NBA champion Boston Celtics, who pick second, got their high selections in trades with non-playoff teams (the Los Angeles Clippers and Seattle). While there is no "franchise" player such as Ewing or Olajuwon, both teams figure to come away with a solid talent.

"This is a draft of great athletes and considerable depth," said Marty Blake, director of scouting for the NBA. "There are at least 30 potential first-round players. From a depth standpoint, this will be one of the best drafts in years.'

Following the 76ers and Celtics come Golden State and Indiana, teams that finished last in their divisions.

The consensus of general managers at the seven-team lottery on May 18 was that an upper echelon of Daugherty, North Carolina State's Chris Washburn, William Bedford of Memphis State and Len Bias of Maryland — in no particular order - probably would be taken by the first four teams.

Washburn is 6-11, Bedford 7-0 and Bias 6-8, reflecting a preference by most teams to draft for size, if possible. Once the first half-dozen players are chosen, however, size becomes less a factor.

"We really need help at guard, but if we had been in the top three or four picks, we might have felt bound to get a bigger player," said Norm Sonju of the Dallas Mavericks, who pick seventh. "For us, there is some advantage to picking where we are."

The New York Knicks, who got Ewing with the top pick a year ago, are fifth, followed by Phoenix, Dallas, Cleveland, Chicago, San Antonio, Detroit, Washington, New Jersey, Portland, Utah, Denver, Sacramento, Denver, Atlanta, Houston, Philadelphia, Milwaukee, the Los Angeles Lakers and Portland. Olajuwon was the No. 1 pick two years ago, by Houston.

There are 24 first-round picks because Cleveland, which traded its 1986 first-round choice to Dallas, was awarded an extra pick when new owners bought the team in 1983.

Washburn and Bedford are expected to be the cream of the crop of underclassmen who chose to enter the draft. Other potential first-rounders among the early eligibles are All-America Walter Berry of St. John's, Cedric Henderson of Georgia (who played in Italy last season), Dwayne Washington of Syracuse and John Williams of Louisiana State.

Top seniors besides Daugherty and Bias include Kenny Walker of Kentucky, Chuck Person of Auburn, Del Curry of Virginia Tech, Ron Harper of Miami, Ohio, Maurice Martin of St. Joseph's, Anthony Jones of Nevada-Las Vegas, Johnny Dawkins and Mark Alarie of Duke and Brad Sellers of Ohio State.

Carpenter headed to Rams

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) - New York Giants running back Rob Carpenter will be traded to the Los Angeles Rams today for a sixthround draft choice, according to a published report.

"I've agreed to all the terms, we just have to sign some papers," Carpenter told The Hartford Courant in a story published in today's editions.

Carpenter said the contracts would be signed today at Giants Stadium in East Rutherford, N.J. "The Giants weren't willing to make a financial commitment after last year, but the Rams have taken care of that," Carpenter said. Last season, Carpenter earned $250,000, as he rushed 60 times for 201 yards. He said the one-year contract he'll sign with the Rams will pay him much less, although he didn't say how much.

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY, JUNE 14, 1986

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A very good day to get into all of the specifics required in any undertaking or venture in which you are engaged, but you have to take the bull by the horns and do something about it.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You are able to handle your work most efficiently today, whether it be at home or in the outside world.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Early make appointments for evening's entertainment, then get that bill paid up. Your mate is in a testy mood. GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Good day to handle duties for family and get home in better condition. Steer clear of recreation in the evening.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) The morning is best for shopping and handling desk work. Later, don't get into a family squabble.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) You have an opportunity now to get your financial matters improved so that you become more prosperous. VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You can shop around for whatever you need and get good results. Buy a little gift for your mate and please this person.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Any intimate matters can be improved in the morning, so get busy at them, but don't be forceful in the evening.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Look to high-minded friends for good ideas that can help you to gain your aims, then do your work alone.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You can handle business well, even though it is the end of the work week, so get busy early.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You find that you can further your ambitions quite well during the day, but tonight could prove disappointing.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Garner data you need so that you can make a friend of a bigwig you can go to any time you need help.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Good day to converse with a partner until you come to a true understanding with this person. Save money today.
