Litter trashes city's image

Story by Hank Murphy
Photos by Tim Appel

For those who don't know the city, Big Spring conjures an image of cool, gushing water. A place that's green, an oasis of sorts at the crossroads of hot, arid West Texas.

But the image shatters when travelers drive into town along west Highway 80 and north 87 and look out at weedy lots strewn with broken beer bottles and paper trash; lots bordered by tattered buildings with burglar bars, smashed windows, peeled paint and crumbling walls; lots that are the boneyards of mangled Mercurys, Buicks and Chevys.

The travelers head downtown, missing the swank neighborhoods of Highland South, Hillside Drive, Indian Point, Washington Boulevard and Coronado Avenue. Instead they see more junk, more trash-infested lots, more rundown buildings.

An image of the cityscape forms in the brain — an image of demise and decay that says something's terribly wrong here.

"From looking at Big Spring with my own two eyes, I just see a pile of garbage," says Hayes Strippling III, chairman of the Chamber of Commerce Beautification Committee.

"We (Permian Research) entertain people about twice a week from all over the country, and it's kind of embarrassing to me," Strippling says. "Some have commented that 'this is the most desolate-looking place I've ever been to.' Instead of taking them downtown, I'll go around and try to find the best streets from the Park Inn to my place of business."

Strippling's sentiments echo those of the chamber's executive vice president, LeRoy Tillery.

"If you think of it as I do, you'll drive somebody down the street and you'll be selective of what streets you drive on," Tillery says.

The only thing that you can do when you drive through a particular part of town that looks bad is say, 'We're in a transitional stage or something like that.'"

On April 29, the Howard County Strategic Planning Commission identified litter and blight as a major detriment to the quality of life in Big Spring. Mayor Cotton Mize, a member of the body's executive steering committee, said of the blight: "What we see and what we are around every day is what we become ... it perpetuates itself."

Mize says litter and squalor become a way of life here, a cycle that's hard to break; similar to generations of families who know only welfare as a way to put bread on the table.

Throughout his campaign for mayor, Mize stressed the need to "re-instill pride in the areas where we live." The city, he said, must "shed its negative self-image" if it hopes to move ahead.

"We've deteriorated," he said.

"We've lost faith in a lot of things," Tillery says. Big Spring "has a hard time being proud of itself because of the eyesores that we have. It looks like nobody else seems to care, so why should I?"

"That's my point," Strippling says. "We've got to start from the bottom and build an attitude. I'm not really down on the city; the city just can't keep up (with the problem)."

But the city's image is not all that's ailing. A number of civic leaders say the city's ugly side pollutes the city's business climate.

"It definitely has an effect on trying to recruit industrial prospects," Tillery says.

With shaky oil prices and a sluggish farm economy, new, stable business is something the city desperately needs.

In January, Whites AutoCenter decided to pull stakes, tossing

VA party unites families again

By SPENCER SANDOW
Staff Writer

People came from all over the southwest to visit relatives at the Veterans Administration Medical Center on Father's Day weekend. A party was held Saturday afternoon on the front lawn to celebrate the occasion, with popcorn and homemade ice cream.

About 65 visitors came to the VA Hospital Saturday, said recreation therapist Adrian Bankawski, who organized the party with recreation director Jackie Conway and social worker Joyce Clanton.

Eli Valenzuela said she came with her family from Albuquerque, N.M., to see her husband's brother, Willie Valenzuela, a patient at the hospital. Valenzuela's wife, Irene, came from Alpine.

Valenzuela has been a patient at the VA for 2½ years, Irene said, and it means a lot for the two to see each other. The family visits him every year, she said.

Three brothers, all World War II veterans, laughed at their reunion at the VA hospital, where one is a patient.

The patient, Aaron Jackson, wore a white T-shirt with the slogan "America Is No. 1 Thanks to Our Veterans."

He was visited by his brothers David Jackson of Odessa and James Jackson of Midland.

A blue-haired clown called Perky Doc, who is a doctor at the hospital and a veteran of World War II, wore a white lab coat with patches and a child's toy stethoscope.

"I check reflexes," he said, pulling out a huge, foam rubber hammer to tap the knee of Mary Reyes, who was spending the day with her husband, Carlos.

Perky Doc gave balloons bent into animal shapes to two children in party clothes.

Eli Valenzuela, left, gives husband Willie a balloon animal while the two celebrated Father's Day at the Veterans Administration Medical Center Saturday.

Local man dies in 2-car crash

Another man hospitalized

One Big Spring man was killed and another severely injured in a two-car accident Saturday morning.

Herschel Leroy Black, 59, of 1311 Lamar Ave. was pronounced dead on arrival at Malone-Hogan Hospital at 12:17 p.m. Saturday, said Justice of the Peace China Long.

Billy Roger Kennedy, 34, of 501 E. 17th St. was in critical condition in the intensive care unit of Odessa Medical Center Saturday night suffering from multiple injuries, said nursing supervisor Mary Sanderlin.

The accident occurred at 11:10 a.m. Saturday on Highway 350, 17 miles northeast of Big Spring, said Department of Public Safety trooper Glenn Redmon.

Black's car was west-bound and Kennedy's car east-bound on the highway. Black, for an unknown reason, crossed the center line and the two cars collided, Redmon said.

Kennedy's car careened to the right side of the road, 75 feet from the point of impact, he said. Black's car traveled about 600 feet after the collision before going off the south side of the road, Redmon said.

Neither man was wearing a seat belt, he said. "It's very possible Kennedy could have avoided serious injury" had he worn a seat belt, and Black probably would not have been killed had he worn one, Redmon said.

Funeral services for Black are pending at Nalley-Pickle & Welch Funeral Home.

standing vacant, says Downtown Coordinator Teri Quinones. Moreover, only 14 percent of downtown's upper floors are occupied, she says.

Quinones, a retail specialist, says the city's appearance has a negative impact on the town's business environment.

"Cleanliness is a marketing tool," she explains. "You're marketing yourself to the target audience you're catering to. If I was to open a store downtown, I would want to make sure that the environment around me is conducive to pedestrian activity so that I can capture some of that activity to sell merchandise. At this point, downtown is not conducive to pedestrian activity."

Quinones works closely with the Downtown Steering Committee, a civic group hoping to infuse the city's faltering economy with a healthy dose of tourism.

"The atmosphere we're trying to create with tourism ... is a mix of entertainment, culture and restaurants," she says. But that atmosphere is currently polluted with litter and blight. "If your restaurant is not in a clean environment," people are not going to want to eat there, she says.

The Downtown Steering Committee's point of view, says chairman

Weeds stand like small trees in this neglected lot on the west side of town. The unrestrained growth of weeds is a major eyesore in many parts of Big Spring.

Troy Fraser, "is that before we can recruit new businesses, new industry into the downtown area, we're going to have to change the way it looks."

"We're (also) going to have to change the look of (the main thoroughfares)," he says. "There's no way you can recruit people off the highways and try to develop tourism in Big Spring with the way those two corridors look coming in."

Councilman Johnny Rutherford, who was elected last year on a platform of cleaning up the city, says he agrees that eyesores are a major detriment to attracting business to Big Spring.

"It's also why we're trying to do something about it," he says.

Stenholm rides out bad times

Congressman Charles Stenholm and his fellow "bollweevils" are back in favor with the mainstream of the Democratic Party after years of being branded too conservative.

By PHILLIP SWANN
Harte-Hanks Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — No one would have blamed Charlie Stenholm if he had just gone ahead and switched parties. After all, the Texas congressman had run into more brick walls than a Hollywood stunt man.

Stenholm and his band of Southern conservative Democrats, known as the Boll Weevils, were met with a stony resistance in the early 1980s when they attempted to force House Democratic leaders to steer a middle-of-the-road course.

"Sure, we had some terribly frustrating times," the West Texan recalled in a recent interview. "The conservative voice was absolutely ignored in the party."

But Stenholm refused to turn his back on the party — even when many members of the "Donkey" party turned their backs on him and threatened to back kick him and his kind out.

Now, after years of frustration and soul-searching, the politics of patience seems to have paid off. Liberal Democrats and the Boll Weevils have joined forces this year to produce spending plans that would sharply reduce the federal deficit.

"We've erased the stigma (of being a conservative Democrat)," Stenholm said. "I've always been very comfortable being a Democrat. And now we're getting the opportunity to show our true colors and it's a challenge."

This new union of lawmakers from the North and South has solidified the party, enabling the House Democratic leadership to capture several legislative victories this year over President Reagan.

Unlike former Rep. Kent Hance, a co-founder of the Boll Weevil group who decided to switch parties, Stenholm's political stock has soared as a consequence. He has been called on to be a spokesman for various Democratic proposals.

Stenholm, who now heads a subcommittee of the House Small Business Committee, said he expects he will get an agriculture subcommittee chairmanship next year. The Stamford farmer is a member of the House Agriculture Committee.

Chairing an agriculture subcommittee would be a tremendous plus for the farmers in his 17th Congressional District.

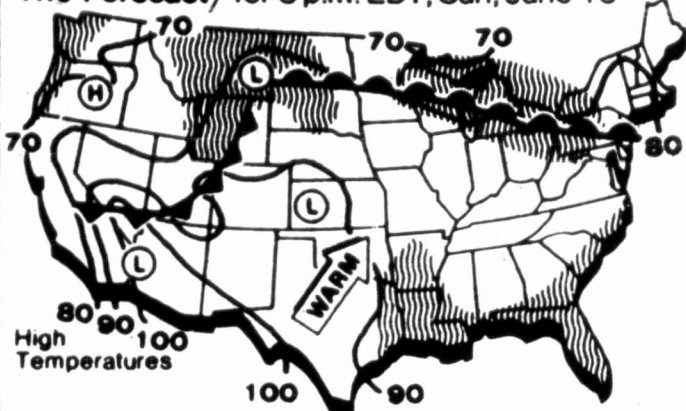

"I feel good about my position," Stenholm said. "My goal has been to be a credible spokesman for agriculture."

Of course, Stenholm's job is not without struggle. The Boll Weevils still meet weekly to plot strategies to keep the pressure on the House Democratic leadership.

Most party initiatives are still a far cry from being perfect in the eyes of most conservative Democrats.

2 hurt at music brawl

CLEVELAND — Two men were hospitalized Saturday and seven people faced misdemeanor charges after a brawl at a rap music contest spilled onto the street as 61,000 Cleveland Indians fans were leaving a baseball game.

Car and store windows were smashed and at least 10 other people were treated at a hospital after the incident, which began when police and security guards cleared a crowded downtown ballroom of about 3,000 people, authorities said.

Gas pipe explodes

BORGER, Texas — A critically burned man stumbled nearly a mile to get help Saturday after his dirt-grading machine struck an underground gas pipe, sparking an explosion and fire that could be seen for 15 miles, authorities said.

Eddie Hickman, 55, of Stinnett, suffered second- and third-degree burns over 75 percent of his body in the explosion, then walked a mile under scorching 90-degree temperatures to get help, Golden Plains Community Hospital spokesman Dennis Burton said.

"That sun was just beating down on him," Burton said. "It must have been sheer torture."

200 honor slain GI

ELLERE, N.C. — Two hundred friends and relatives on Saturday remembered a U.S. soldier who died from injuries received in the terrorist bombing of a West Berlin discotheque that prompted a U.S. air raid on Libya.

A cousin of Army Staff Sgt. James Goins said his death was not in vain if it helped to deter other terrorist acts.

"If anything is to come of this, it's the hope of the family and the hope of James that this will not continue to happen to our country," Felton Capel said at his cousin's funeral in St. Luke's Free Will Baptist Church.

MDs stage rally

WASHINGTON — White-coated, banner-waving doctors from more than a dozen states held a "Code Blue" rally Saturday on the Capitol steps, urging Congress to save lives by cutting off money for nuclear weapons testing.

"Code Blue means human life is at risk and immediate intervention is necessary," said Dr. Jack Geiger, a New York internist and epidemiologist, professor of community medicine at the City University of New York medical school, and president of the 50,000-member Physicians for Social Responsibility.

NOW rally disrupted by anti-abortionist

DENVER (AP) — Three anti-abortion protesters were arrested Saturday while trying to disrupt a National Organization for Women parade of 5,000 singing and chanting feminists, as the National Right to Life Committee's annual meeting drew to a close.

Elsewhere, authorities in suburban St. Louis blamed arson on a fire Saturday that caused $100,000 in damage to an abortion clinic, while five anti-abortion protesters were arrested Saturday at an Indianapolis abortion center when they allegedly tried to enter the operating room.

In Denver, 30 people carrying signs walked alongside NOW's "March for Women's Lives" through downtown Denver. Three of the protesters were arrested after they broke through a police line and a chain of hand-holding marchers encircling dignitaries in the parade. The two men and a woman arrested were released after being issued summons charging them with disturbance. One of the men was also charged with interference.

At a rally later at the state Capitol, NOW president Eleanor Smeal said "the vast majority of Americans are with us today" because they are outraged over recent bombings of abortion clinics.

Earlier Saturday, Joseph Scheidler, head of the Pro-Life Action League, knelt outside the Boulder Abortion Clinic along with eight followers and prayed for forgiveness for the clinic's director, Dr. Warren Hern.

The clinic, usually open on Saturdays, was closed because Hern was scheduled to receive NOW's "Unsung Hero Award."

At the Right to Life Committee meeting, Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., told delegates Saturday that "a Republican vote is a vote for the right to life" in 1986.

Of his own beliefs on abortion, Dole said, "I think it's clear I'm identified with this cause and I have been for a long time. I'm not here to take a litmus test."

When Dole had finished, the audience stood and applauded for nearly five minutes. He was the third 1988 presidential aspirant to address the convention, which ended Saturday. Television evangelist Pat Robertson and Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., spoke Friday.

NOW had Greece's first lady and leading feminist, Margaret Papan-dreu, on its agenda Saturday.

Before the march to the Capitol, Denver Mayor Federico Pena and Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., spoke to the marchers. Pena urged them to work for change at the local level, and Schroeder praised NOW for initiating legislation helping women at the national level.

NOW began its annual meeting Friday, a day after Right To Life convened blocks away. The NOW meeting ends Sunday.

Abortion became the two conventions' overriding issue after the Supreme Court issued a 5-4 decision Wednesday reaffirming its 1973 ruling legalizing abortion.

Central American shot

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador — The National Assembly on Saturday unanimously condemned the assassination of legislator Jesus Dolores Ortiz and declared three days of national mourning.

Witnesses said unidentified gunmen shot and killed Ortiz, 51, on Friday as he walked out of his San Salvador home.

Ortiz, a member of the ruling Christian Democrat Party, was the sixth legislator slain since 1982. There was no immediate claim of responsibility. Leftist rebels fighting in El Salvador's civil war have said they were responsible for three of the previous five killings.

Chinese lure experts

PEKING — More than 10,000 foreign experts worked in China last year, and the government plans to increase the number over the next five years, the English-language China Daily newspaper said Saturday.

The newspaper did not say how many experts the government plans to invite.

It said one 66-year-old foreign expert, retired West German engineer Werner Gerich, was appointed director of a diesel engine factory and since late 1984 had helped boost its efficiency by 250 percent.

Queen ignores threats

LONDON — Queen Elizabeth II ignored the possibility of a terrorist attack and rode horseback on London's streets Saturday, amid tight security, for the official celebration of her 60th birthday.

Thousands of spectators lined the route on one of the sunniest days of the year to watch the queen riding sidesaddle at the head of the marching ranks of Scots Guards in the Trooping the Color ceremony.

Row after row of soldiers in scarlet tunics and bearskin hats marched up the Mall, accompanied by the massed bands of the Household Cavalry and a Sovereign's Escort on horseback.

Argentine poet dies

GENEVA — Jorge Luis Borges, an Argentine whose poems and prose fantasies won him acclaim as one of the greatest modern writers, died Saturday of liver cancer. He was 86.

Critics compared Borges to Edgar Allan Poe and Franz Kafka, and he was a perennial candidate for the Nobel Prize in Literature. He liked to say it had become a Scandinavian tradition to deny him the prize.

But he won scores of other prizes, and his works were translated from Spanish into more than 20 languages. He produced more than 35 volumes of writings.

Marlin Perkins dead at 81

ST. LOUIS (AP) — R. Marlin Perkins, who for more than two decades brought the wild animal kingdom into millions of American homes, died Saturday at his home. Perkins, who had been ill for two years with cancer, was 81.

Considered one of the nation's leading zoologists and naturalists, he narrated Mutual of Omaha's "Wild Kingdom," a network television show, for 23 years. He relinquished the role last year but returned this year as host for "Nature Newsbreak," a series of 60-second public service radio spots.

Southwest flight weathers bomb scare

AUSTIN (AP) — Bomb-sniffing dogs ferreted out two pieces of luggage aboard a Southwest Airlines flight from Dallas to Austin Friday night, after an anonymous caller phoned in a bomb threat, authorities said.

Authorities confiscated the luggage, but said no injuries or bombs were immediately reported.

Flight 191 had already been in the air 25 minutes when the caller told a Southwest Airlines reservations agent in Dallas at 7:35 p.m. CDT that a bomb was aboard, officials said.

The Boeing 737-300, with about 100 passengers, landed at Austin's Robert Mueller Airport at 7:45 p.m., three minutes ahead of schedule, Southwest Airlines supervisor Tammy Adams said.

Not long after, dogs from Bergstrom Air Force Base swept through the plane and homed in on the two pieces of luggage, she said. The Austin police's bomb squad arrived at 9 p.m. and confiscated the luggage.

"We were sitting in the back of the plane and we had just gotten our drinks," said passenger Laura Svatek of Dallas. "The captain came on real calmly and said 'There's been a bomb threat.'"

"Nobody really said anything," passenger Harold Christmann told the Austin American-Statesman. "A few people laughed."

Ms. Adams said no other flights out of Robert Mueller were detained following the threat.

Shankles choice a sensible move

Howard County Commissioners Court is to be commended for its action in naming a justice of the peace to fill the vacancy left by the death of Lewis Heflin.

The commissioners last week appointed William "Bill" Shankles after he won the Democratic primary runoff for justice of the peace in Precinct 1 Place 2.

Because Shankles has no Republican opposition in the November general election, he is practically assured of filling the position in January.

That being the situation, it takes no mental giant to realize that appointing Shankles was the common-sense action to take.

Certainly it would not have made sense to appoint someone else to the vacancy for only six months, knowing it would take that person several weeks to learn the job.

But why is it we were a bit surprised to see the commissioners take the common-sense approach? Is it because too often we have seen politicians or governmental officials take actions that didn't make sense?

Just as we think a newspaper is obliged to point out actions that don't make sense, we have the same obligation to praise actions that do.

In this case the county commissioners deserve a pat on the back for taking the sensible action.

Texas could bounce from Mexico's woes

By JESSE TREVINO

The gut check on Mexico is fast arriving.

Last week, Mexico's Treasury Secretary Jesus Silva Herzog granted interviews in succession to the Wall Street Journal, The New York Times and — for good measure — the Associated Press, to warn that Mexico may suspend payment of its international debt.

Cynics may point out that Mexico is seeking to set a fire under the International Monetary Fund and the country's commercial creditors to speed talks about restructuring the country's debt — and even new money.

Altogether, Mexico owes a staggering $97 billion. Its annual interest totals about $7.5 billion.

Depending on how long such a suspension might last, Mexico would trigger a global financial crisis. U.S. banks, especially New York banks, would be hurt. Texas banks, too, are not immune to the repercussions of the debt crisis.

But any negative effects on New York banks — some of which are helping shore up some embattled Texas banks — could boomerang into the Texas economy.

What if Mexico is sending New York and Washington signals that a rescue package may indeed be needed before the summer is out to avert disaster?

If the balloons sent up by Silva Herzog are not merely filled with hot air, then we had better understand that perhaps the Mexicans — adroit at handling banks and bankers, how else could they have gotten this far? — are not fooling. The balloons may be grenades.

There are two things that stand out that do not fit the "get-the-IMF-moving" theory. One is the relentless free-fall of the peso, which last week pushed to 600-pesos-to-the-dollar and may be on its way to 700.

One of Silva Herzog's ideas to avoid default is having Mexico pay its interest payments in pesos. This was tried before — in 1982-83 — and it worked. But there's a catch.

At that time, a Mexican bank account was set up for Mexican debtors to deposit their payments in forms of pesos. The pesos were then converted into dollars and payment made to U.S. banks.

But, guess where the dollars came from? In between the time the Mexican bank accounts were opened and the time all payments made, the IMF had come in with new loans.

But will banks now want to go ahead with this peso-dollar swap in light of the fall of the peso?

Jesse Trevino

The other item to note is that Silva Herzog's statements come in the midst of the World Cup soccer games in Mexico. With Mexico consumed by the passion of the games, the Silva Herzog statements stand out like a flamethrower in a florist shop.

Is Mexico waiting to use the good will generated by the worldwide tournament to soften the blow of a debt suspension? The residual good feelings toward Mexico could prove helpful should Mexico be criticized by the developed nations for what could be viewed as a reckless act.

And reckless it would be. A Mexican default would be a serious misstep, jeopardizing U.S. support. That is why de la Madrid and his advisors — all trained as economists in the U.S. — must seek American-styled solutions.

I think most people understand that Mexico got into this situation because optimistic bankers lent money too freely, like Texas banks who offered themselves to the oil boom and now feel the pinch of a retracting state economy.

Mexico simply has got to be given the opportunity to get out of its present financial crisis in much the same way banks across Texas have had to restructure, write off and even, in some instances, forget some debts.

No greater proof exists of the close connection of the Texas-Mexico economies than the blows both are taking at the moment.

Undeniable, enormous pressures are building on de la Madrid to do something. When an impoverished country like Mexico pays $7.5 billion in interest alone annually and its people suffer, the temptation is great to begin assigning blame and forgetting everyone was dancing to the same tune.

Instead of doing that, let's just give Mexico more time to pay.

Location, reputation help to sell Big Spring

By DARRELL BERKHEIMER

Why Big Spring?

That's a question I expect to be asked many times during the next several months as I meet people and make friends in this community.

The answer, however, has many facets.

They included my need to leave Odessa to become the top leader in the newsroom of a smaller daily newspaper, where I could establish a more intimate relationship with the community.

At Odessa I filled the No. 2 spot rather than the top position in the newsroom. And Odessa is a somewhat larger community than I would prefer.

When I learned that the managing editor's position at the Big Spring Herald was opening, I knew it was just the position I was seeking.

I had visited Big Spring for the first time last summer when Jim Neary still was the business manager at the Herald — before he became financial director at the San Angelo Standard-Times earlier this year.

Both Jim and Sherry Neary told me how nice it was to live in Big Spring — particularly how much their children enjoyed going to school here.

"At least Big Spring has some

Berky's babblings

hills," I remarked, noting that the highest hill at Odessa was the water slide at Water Wonderland, east of the city.

After spending much of our lives in Utah and Pennsylvania, my family and I missed mountains and hills. I advised the Nearys that the Big Spring terrain was more to my liking.

In beginning my search for the right job, my wife promptly informed me that she did not want to leave Texas. To which I added that I wasn't very eager to leave West Texas, either.

The warm, dry winters here can grow on a person rather quickly.

And many years ago, while still in Utah, we decided that we really did not want to return to the humidity of the East if we had a choice.

While in Odessa, my news editor was Keith Briscoe, former city editor at the Herald, who continues to speak quite fondly of Big Spring. In most ways, he would prefer to be back in Big Spring, he said.

Briscoe and the Nearys explained that they weren't talking about the location of Big Spring, but the people who made it enjoyable to live here.

In addition, my newspaper contacts had many good comments about Herald Publisher Tom Watson.

That settled it; I wanted to go to Big Spring. And it was a day for celebrating when Watson called to offer me the job.

Of course Big Spring doesn't have everything. My family will miss the shopping density available at the malls in Odessa, and the additional cultural activities offered in Midland and Odessa. But those two cities aren't that far away, and who can afford to go shopping every day, anyway?

But now that I'm here, I'm hoping readers will write or call me whenever they think they have information the Herald should know. Just ask for "Berky."

Texas prison system could affect election of governor

By JIM DAVIS

Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau AUSTIN — The inmates of the Texas prison system may play a big role in electing the next governor of our state, which is mighty strange since they can't vote.

But they don't have to vote to influence the election. They just have to be in prison and be under the watchful eye of U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice.

For years, Texas ran a cheap, efficient prison system that other states envied. The focus was on making prisoners earn their keep. They worked long hours in the fields to grow food and usable crops, such as cotton. Or they worked in behind-the-walls factories making clothing, soap and other needed items.

Work still is stressed at the prisons, but with a carrot rather than a club.

Judge Justice ruled that using inmate guards and other tough methods of disciplining was inhumane and unconstitutional. Under his orders, more guards have been hired and restrictions placed on their ability to discipline prisoners.

Justice said the prisons were overcrowded and ordered reforms — reforms that cost the state millions of dollars and significantly changed the way the prisons are run. Some say the changes are for the better; some say they've created an intolerable situation in which the prisoners run the prisons.

Some say more changes are needed. Some say we've already done enough, maybe too much, and need to fight the court orders. The situation is a fine debate topic, but it could have a serious impact on us all.

Jim Davis

The prison board last week took a tough stand by failing to approve a proposed settlement of contempt of court charges raised by attorneys for prisoners. Maybe we should call it a semi-tough stand, since it was only a tie vote that killed the proposed settlement.

By deciding to challenge the contempt charges, the board has set up the potential for Justice to crack down on those areas of his order that haven't been met. He could even initiate a new review that could lead to other demands.

"It's a tremendous crapshoot," board chairman Al Hughes said after the vote. "It could cost us literally hundreds of millions of dollars."

Gov. Mark White, who opposed acceptance of the settlement, is involved in that gamble. Probably, his get-tough stand was aided by the get-tougher-and-tougher stand of his Republican opponent, former Gov. Bill Clements.

On the campaign trail, Clements is touting the time as governor when he put a bunch of prisoners in tents to get around charges of overcrowding.

The situation probably has progressed past such simple solutions today, but Clements' stand plays well among Texas voters who don't want to pay to "coddle" inmates.

White's problem is to appear as tough as Clements without forcing the state into a confrontation with a federal judge that could lead to a prison crisis.

Such a crisis could lead to a massive early release of prisoners. The federal courts also could order that the state quickly appropriate the money to build new prisons. Neither possibility would register well with the voters.

Both candidates have positioned themselves behind the get-tough-with-the-courts attitude, but it's always easier for a challenger to escape the blame than for an incumbent.

How those dice roll in federal court and whether they come up sevens or snake eyes could play a major role in the selection next November of a governor for the next four years.

State Sen. John Traeger, D-Seguin, told the Texas Good Roads Transportation Association meeting in Austin recently that he was retiring from government because "health and fatigue have taken their toll. My constituents got sick and tired of me," he said. He also said that when he was elected to the state Senate, he thought he had reached the pinnacle of success. But then one night, he received a call from a man complaining about a pothole on a county road.

Traeger said he asked the man why he didn't call his county commissioner. The man answered, "Well, I didn't want to go that high."

Custody to dad will aid budget

To the editor: Divorce! Balance the national budget.

If he's supporting them, give dear old dad custody and we'll be able to balance the budget.

Crazy? Not on your life. If we give dear old dad custody, mother won't file for divorce and there won't be very many divorces.

If there is a divorce, dear old dad will continue supporting the kids in his home, so there will be little need for AFDC (Aid for Families with Dependent Children) welfare.

When the number of divorces drop from a flood to a dribble, lots of good things happen:

- Discipline in the home increases, resulting in more discipline in the schools, reducing education costs and improving the results.

- The demand for dope dramatically decreases, and the number of teen-age suicides fall.

- The number of illegitimate births drops.

- There is much less drinking and driving, resulting in fewer disabled victims.

- The crime numbers, reflecting the declining divorce figures, shrink to acceptable levels, resulting in less crowding of jails and prisons.

- Single-parent poverty would practically disappear and the welfare budget, for all but the elderly, would make a spectacular drop.

This all translates into a reduction of government spending to the extent we could balance the national, state and local budgets without increasing taxes.

All we have to do is give dear old dad custody.

Some pit bulls make good pets

To the editor: After reading Eddie Curran's "Around the Rim," I really took good offense!

We have owned a pit bull dog since she was a puppy; she is now seven years old. She was raised with a Miniature Dachshund and is probably one of the sweetest and loyal dogs we could have. She has always gotten a lot of care and love and that is why she is so sweet-natured.

I don't care what kind of dog a person may have. You can make it mean or turn it into a loving pet, which is what we have done. I would not have a mean dog. Our dog has never been allowed to run free; she is either in our home or in our fenced yard.

I really feel it is very unfair and unfortunate that all pit bulls be put in one category, and that is that they are all vicious. Ours is not!

Please do not feel emotional toward me for owning this loving pet. If, like you say, dogs are like their masters, then my pit bull is a really nice dog!

Why send three to do interviews?

To the editor: Why are we cutting back with city expenses if we have enough money to send three of the council members to interview the three final candidates for city manager?

Why not have the candidates come here and save all that expense of sending three people to three places when it seems much cheaper to bring the three candidates here?

Why should we go to the candidates? If they are interested in the job, I think they would be more than happy to come here and check out the city and the job.

Business works for handicapped

Rosa Renteria, left, watches and learns as Sandy Parra gives instructions at the Howard County Center for Human Growth and Development. Renteria is mentally retarded, and is at work earning a paycheck for the first time in her life.

By EDDIE CURRAN
Staff Writer

Carol Green calls it Big Spring's new, innovative business. John Hayes, who contracts work for the business, says he bids for jobs the same way he would for any business — with the intent of getting the highest bid possible despite the fact the workers are mentally retarded.

Both are talking about the Howard County Center for Human Growth and Development, a non-profit program run by the Howard County Association for Retarded Citizens in conjunction with the Abilene State School.

The center opened in March to provide paying jobs to retarded citizens in Big Spring.

"It is the first time most of them have worked in their life," says Green, the president of the Howard County Association of Retarded Citizens. As an example she cites Raymond Holguin, who at 31 had been sitting home for years doing little more than watching T.V.. Now Holguin and 10 co-workers work five days a week, six hours a day at the center.

On this day, the employees at the center work at six tables putting together and packaging recipe organizer reliefs. They rarely look up from their work, and by day's end stacks of recipe packages stand high on the tables.

"They don't spend much time lollygagging around. They really come here to work," Green says.

Sandy Parra and Fred Paredes, employed through the Abilene State School, supervise the workers. Parra says some of them require little attention, while others need close supervision. They work at various speeds, and get paid according to their output.

Parra says payday is a particularly exciting time around the center because it's the first time in their lives the workers have gotten a paycheck. They get paid once a month, and Parra and Paredes encourage them to go to the banks by themselves to cash their checks.

"When we're not working, we try to teach them to count money. For some it's hard to count to even 25," Parra says.

"They want to blend in and have self-worth like anyone else. They don't want to sit around and watch T.V. all day," she says.

John Hayes, a contract specialist from the Abilene State School, bids on jobs for the center. "We have to make sure they're paid right. We're not doing favors. I bid on the minimum wage or on the prevailing wage, whichever is higher," he says.

The workers, he says, get paid according to how much they produce in relation to the industry norm for an hour's work. "We're not looking for a charity. We run it as a business and bid it as a business."

"We do the work as good or better than anyone else," he says, and emphasizes that the workers don't fall back on the fact that they're retarded.

By the end of the day the workers have sorted and packaged countless recipe organizers. Lettie Anguino stands at a side table and puts on the final touch, operating a machine which melts the packages closed. If she's not careful, the package will look sloppy and unfit for sale. But Anguino lines up the organizers perfectly, and the packages look ready for the store shelves.

"They're so proud of their work," says Green. "The community is not aware of what can be done here. They look at the negatives of retardation. But as you can see, there are no negatives here."

Afghans to seek U.S. arms

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Four Afghan guerrilla leaders will ask for more and better weapons and increased public support for their war against Soviet forces when they meet President Reagan this week, a guerrilla official said.

The leaders, representing four of Afghanistan's seven main guerrilla organizations, were scheduled to meet with Reagan in Washington on Monday, said Masood Khalili, a senior guerrilla official.

"It's to get more political support and talk about all sorts of help," he said Saturday.

Khalili said the delegation also was due to meet Vice President George Bush, Secretary of State George P. Shultz and congressional leaders during their four-day visit.

Western diplomats, guerrilla leaders and intelligence officials have said fighting has intensified in Afghanistan during the past 12 months and that the Soviets have pushed the guerrilla forces more and more into the defensive.

The Afghan delegation includes Professor Barhanuddin Rabbani, head of Jamiat-i-Islami; Pir Syed Ahmad Gailani, head of the National Islamic Front for the Liberation of Afghanistan; Maulavi Nabi Mohammadi, leader of Harakat Inqilab Islami Afghanistan; and Sibghatullah Mojaddedi, head of the Afghan National Liberation Front.

The four also plan to visit Britain and France.

The Soviet Union intervened in Afghanistan at the end of 1979 and about 115,000 Soviet troops have been helping the communist government battle a nationwide insurgency by anti-Marxist, Islamic guerrillas.

Estimates on the number of insurgents vary.

Judge upholds adoption

HOUSTON (AP) — A black couple who lost their bid to adopt a 10-month-old black girl to the child's white foster parents will return to the courthouse later this month after the black couple filed for a new trial.

Bernadette Johnlewis, attorney for Wendell and Ruth Robbins, said she filed a motion asking for a new adoption trial on Thursday. A hearing on the motion is set for June 30.

Mary Elizabeth Neu, whose name was Ashley Dennis until her adoption was finalized April 28, was found abandoned at birth in a trash bin, officials said.

State District Judge Robert Lowry granted a petition by Arnold and Jana Neu, Ashley's white foster parents, to adopt the child. He denied a petition by the Robbins, who were chosen by the Harris County Children's Protective Services to adopt the girl.

In her motion, Ms. Johnlewis challenges a part of the Texas Family Code that states that only judges — not juries — can hear adoption cases. She claims the statute violates the Texas Constitution because the constitution gives everyone a right to trial by jury.

Ms. Johnlewis said she believes that a jury would have ruled for her clients. Community sentiment, she said, is generally opposed to adoption of black children by white families.

But Emmett Moore, the Neus' attorney, said he isn't concerned about the motion.

"I don't think she will get very far on that one," he said. "They are trying to elevate this thing into some sort of crusade."

Horse racing hearing set

AUSTIN (AP) — Sen. Tati Santiesteban said Friday his Senate Natural Resources Committee will meet June 20 in Tyler to hear testimony of the effects of horse race betting in Texas.

"Legalized pari-mutuel wagering could inject $250 million a year into the Texas farm economy," the El Paso Democrat said in a statement. "With its multiple effects, it can add $713 million a year to our state's economy in the agriculture sector alone. And that doesn't count the non-agriculture impact of Texas horseracing."

He said previous Legislatures had looked at pari-mutuel wagering for possible economic effects but one area not studied as closely has been the specific effect on our farm economy.

"Obviously, this is not a panacea for all the farmer's problems, but it would be of definite benefit to a key sector of the Texas economy at a time when that sector definitely needs help," Santiesteban said.

The committee hearing will be held at the University of Texas at Tyler at 9 a.m., he said.

IRS probes former justice

HOUSTON (AP) — Computer experts with the Internal Revenue Service seized records of indicted former Supreme Court Justice Donald Yarbrough, including those in connection with alleged attempts to set up a money-laundering system for cocaine dealers.

Court records obtained by the Houston Chronicle show that Yarbrough also had other business dealings which are now being investigated by the Houston-based federal Financial Task Force.

Sources told the Chronicle Friday that officials seized papers indicating Yarbrough either had business dealings with a Dubai company, or wanted people to believe he had the financial backing of the United Arab Emirates company.

"There's indications of other contacts," Assistant U.S. Attorney John Lenoir said Friday. "He was doing some things with other people as well. Whether we can characterize it as money-laundering at this point, that would be a little unfair."

Mississippians perch Goddess

A CH-54A Skycrane helicopter from the Mississippi National Guard eases the new Goddess of Liberty atop the Capitol dome Saturday morning in a 10-minute operation after several attempts two weeks ago by the Texas Guard crew were unsuccessful.

AUSTIN (AP) — Much to the relief of Texans who had watched their guardsmen fail on the same mission, the Mississippi National Guard put the new Goddess of Liberty statue atop the Texas Capitol on Saturday.

A crowd cheered as a "Sky Crane" helicopter flown in from Mississippi eased the 3,000-pound aluminum statue onto its 300-foot perch on the Capitol dome. Police said as many as 6,000 people watched the airlift.

For their efforts, the Mississippi crew members were given Texas Sesquicentennial medals and a heroes' welcome in which they were made honorary Texans.

"It makes you more nervous with all those people watching," said Chief Warrant Officer Cecil Culpepper, one of four Mississippi Guardsmen on board the 18-year-old CH-54A "Sky Crane" helicopter that got the job done in 10 minutes.

Chief Warrant Officer Gary Fisher, the pilot, said, "We do some odd missions, but this is the oddest I've ever done."

Two weeks ago, a Texas Guard crew using a Chinook CH-47 helicopter failed to get the statue on the dome in 25 attempts over two days. Clouds, wind and a helicopter not quite suited for the job made the mission impossible.

The old zinc Goddess was taken from the dome — by a Texas Guard helicopter — last November after officials decided the weather-beaten statue had become a potential safety hazard.

The replica was made, and officials — who are not sure how the original was placed on the dome 97 years ago — planned the replacement mission.

They turned to Mississippi earlier this week because its guard has the "Sky Crane" chopper designed for similar jobs. The pilot of the Texas Chinook could not see the target.

The "Sky Crane" has a rear-facing seat from which a crew member could see the target and control the aircraft.

It also has a line that can be raised and lowered. In the Chinook, the entire helicopter had to be moved to make the fine adjustments needed to lower the statue.

Capitol architect Roy Graham, supervisor of the project, watched from atop the Archives Building next to the Capitol as the helicopter with four Mississippians and one Texan on board completed the mission at 10:15 a.m. CDT, an hour late because of morning clouds.

Graham accepted congratulations as he gazed up at the 16-foot statue that sported a Texas flag for the ride up.

"I wasn't worried at all," Graham said as the helicopter hovered so its crew could get a look at its work. "But I wasn't worried last time either."

The statue wound up facing almost due South, as it is supposed to. Graham said minor adjustments could easily be made to correct the slight eastward pitch.

"I'm so glad to have this behind me you wouldn't believe it," Graham said.

The attempts to put the new statue on the dome had become a popular topic of conversation in Austin, with just about everybody having a suggestion. Spectators armed with cameras and binoculars gathered Saturday. At least two types of Goddess T-shirts were available from entrepreneurs.

Texas Gov. Mark White, who watched the failed attempts but was out of town Saturday, proclaimed the Mississippi crew honorary Texans. In a prepared release, White noted that Mississippians fought at the Alamo.

"The brave sons of Mississippi proved their mettle once more this morning," he said.

IRAs to survive tax reform?

TEXARKANA (AP) — U.S. Rep. Jim Chapman predicts that Individual Retirement Account deductions will manage to live through congressional battles over the tax reform bill.

Those deductions were eliminated in a version approved by the Senate Finance Committee, prompting what Chapman on Friday called a storm of protest.

"I've gotten a lot of letters," the Sulphur Springs Democrat told a conference of Northeast Texas county judges and commissioners in Texarkana. "I think it's safe to say that (the elimination of IRAs) is going to change."

In general, Chapman said, tax reform will mean "the average taxpayer is going to pay less, the average corporation, even though rates are lower, will pay more, and there will be enormous closing of loopholes."

Referring to the Senate tax reform plan, which reduces the number of tax brackets from 14 to two, Chapman said a family of four "can have nearly $44,000 in income and pay 15 percent on $29,300 (of it), which is about $4,300."

Boy encounters a brown recluse

SEGUIN, Texas (AP) — Six-year-old Josh Koenig was just getting ready for school. It was a Monday one month ago, and time for the youngster to head for classes at Lizzie M. Burges Kindergarten.

As the boy reached for a pair of socks from a drawer, he felt a small sting or bite on his hand. At first, it didn't hurt, and the boy went on to school.

Later he visited the school nurse. "When I went to school, it started stinging a little bit," Josh recalled. "My wrist was going to sleep, and I couldn't hold it up."

Meanwhile, the boy's parents, Jim and Chris Koenig, who manage McQueeney Mill and Grain, remembered an article they had read just a few days earlier in their May issue of Texas Parks and Wildlife Magazine.

Alerted by the fact that the bite hadn't hurt at first, Koenig went to check out the sock drawer.

"Jim went back and pulled out his sock drawer, and right there on top was this brown spider about the size of a quarter," Mrs. Koenig said.

Koenig killed the spider and showed it to county extension agents Gus Person and Eddie Harrison. They confirmed what the parents had recognized from the article. It was a brown recluse spider.

Josh's parents got him to a doctor quickly, and the doctor treated the bite and removed a small plug of skin from the boy's palm to prevent the venom from spreading.

The brown recluse, or Loxosceles reclusa, joins the black widow spider as one of only two groups of spiders considered dangerous to people, according to Texas Agricultural Extension Service entomologists J.A. Jackman and P.J. Hamman.

The two groups make up a small percentage of nearly 3,000 species of spiders living in the United States. The type of spider that bit Josh lives in many southern and midwestern states, and often lives around human dwellings, being found in bathrooms, bedrooms and closets, as well as under furniture, behind baseboards and other secluded locations, the entomologists explain.

The brown recluse is described

Six-year-old Josh Koenig of Seguin peers through a magnifying glass a month after he was bitten by a brown recluse spider as he reached for a pair of socks in a drawer. Thanks to an article in Texas Parks and Wildlife on the spider, the boys parents understood the problems connected with such a bite.

by Jackman and Hamman as a "nonaggressive spider that spins white or grayish, non-descript webs."

"Its body and legs together cover about the same area as a quarter. The coloring of the recluse varies from an orange-yellow to dark brown or almost black."

The little arachnid is identified by three pairs of eyes in a semicircle on the forepart of the head. Its eyes also form the base of a violin-shaped marking on the back, leading to the nickname "fiddleback."

The effects of a bite, authorities say, vary widely.

According to the story Josh's parents read, "Fiddleback," in the Texas Parks and Wildlife magazine, the reaction can run from a tender welt to inflammation, blistering over large areas, abscesses and skin destruction requiring corrective surgery, as well as in some cases nausea and other systemic problems.

The article's author, Mary-Love Bigony, recommends being careful around the spider's outdoor habitat such as rocks and loose bark, keeping clean all closets, cellars, attics, areas behind furniture, shaking out clothing and bedding, washing out outside areas, such as roofs and eaves, with a water hose. If you run across one, "don't swat it; brush it off gently," she said.

Composer Lerner dies of cancer

NEW YORK (AP) — Alan Jay Lerner, the Oscar- and Tony-winning composer, playwright and lyricist who penned such Broadway successes as "Camelot," "Brigadoon," "My Fair Lady" and "Gigi," died Saturday of lung cancer. He was 67.

Lerner died at 10:15 a.m. at Sloan-Kettering Memorial Cancer Center, said hospital spokeswoman Sally Benjamin Young.

He had been ill for about five months and hospitalized for the last two, said Sydney Gruson, a longtime friend and vice chairman of The New York Times.

Lerner wrote the book and lyrics for the smash Broadway hits "Brigadoon," in 1947; "My Fair Lady," in 1956; "Camelot," in 1960; "On A Clear Day You Can See Forever," in 1965; and "Gigi," in 1973. "Gigi" won him a Tony Award.

Lerner also captured a Tony in 1956 for "My Fair Lady," one of several award-winning works he co-wrote with composer Frederick Loewe.

His story and screenplay for "An American in Paris" won an Academy Award in 1951, which was followed by two more Oscars in 1958 for the best screenplay and song for the film version of "Gigi."

In 1965, he won a Grammy Award for "On A Clear Day You Can See Forever."

Lerner was best known for his collaboration with Loewe, which began in 1942. Their first success came five years later with the Scottish fantasy "Brigadoon," featuring the song "Almost Like Being in Love."

Their work together, with Lerner providing book and lyrics and Loewe the music, continued through "My Fair Lady," "Paint Your Wagon," "Camelot" and "Gigi."

Lerner also collaborated with other theater greats, including Kurt Weill, Burton Lane and Leonard Bernstein.

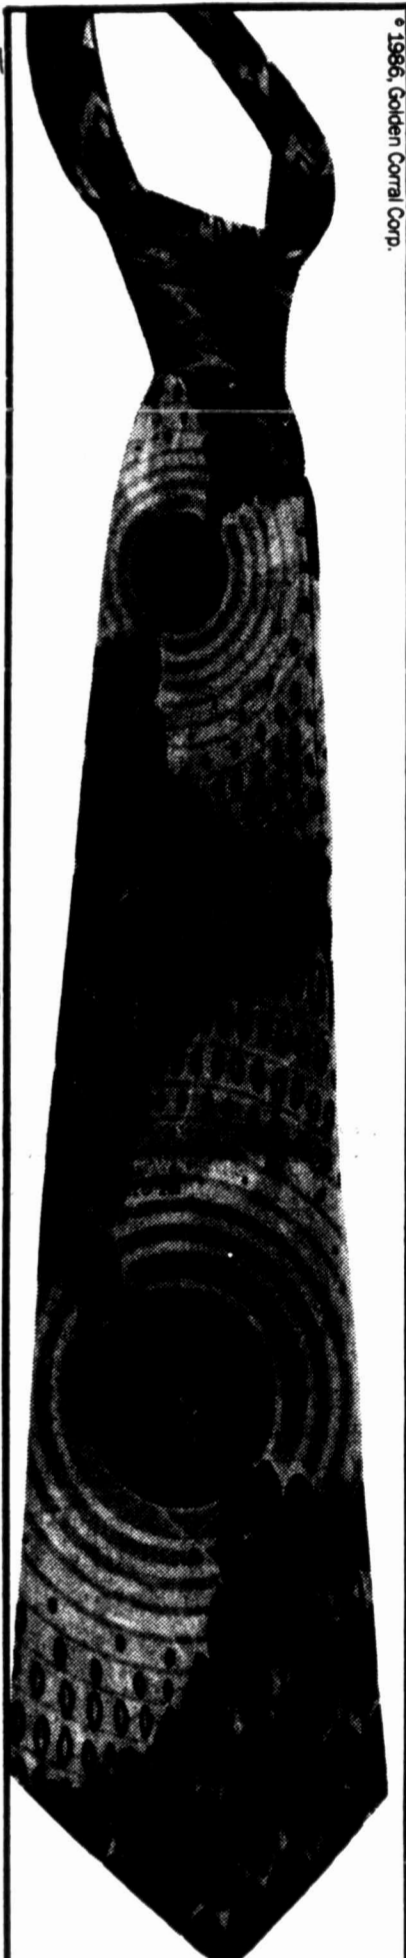

Rex Harrison, who played Professor Henry Higgins in "My Fair Lady," recalled last year how easily Lerner and Loewe worked together. When they were giving him an informal tryout for the part in London, Harrison said, his limited singing range quickly became obvious.

"I had four or five notes they could use. They produced a song embracing just those four or five notes and it was called 'I've Grown Accustomed to Your Face,'" he recalled.

Learning to appreciate baseball

The National Basketball Association allowed a few teams to go home early, banned the use of calendars, and stubbornly ordered the leg-weary to return to the court. But they again fell short in their bid to join tennis and golf as the country's year-round sports. The boys of fall, winter, spring and a good bit of summer finally hung it up. Basketball season is over.

This means that for the next several months sports fans will turn to baseball when they want to watch a game. Some could hardly wait. Others spell baseball S-O-M-I-N-E-X.

But no real American sports fan ignores baseball altogether. I say altogether because I ignore baseball somewhat, but certainly not altogether.

The reason many think baseball a snooze is because it puts two demands on fans, at least one of which must be met for the game to be appreciated.

You must either be in the stands; or, if watching on television, you must pay attention to detail, know the names and histories of at least some of the players, and have a good working knowledge of the game's history and rules. The result being, if you don't live in a major metropolitan area, and you don't know baseball, then nine innings will likely put you to sleep.

To make this clear, let's consider that classification of fan that probably doesn't read the sports page; that large lobby group which gets excited by only the most spectacular of visual displays. I'm talking about women.

Granted it's rare, but I have seen women go nuts over a football game, and on rarer occasions, a basketball game. But I can't recall ever seeing a female running around like a chicken with its head cut off yelling, "Homer! It's a homer! Hot dog!"

Men I've seen do this, but not women.

No, women especially do not like baseball. I could tell my mother or sister that the St. Louis Yankees were playing the Houston Rangers and neither would bat an eye. For that matter, I could tell them Dr. J was pitching to George Steinbrenner and to please be quiet.

The point being that baseball, more so than any sport, requires the spectator to relish in its past in order to enjoy its present. And baseball has a more storied past than football and basketball put together and multiplied by three. Abraham Lincoln doesn't have much on Babe Ruth, but on Bill Russell and Red Grange, he has quite a lot.

And baseball players go on and on, summer after summer. Can you imagine a summer without Pete Rose or Reggie Jackson getting hits and saying mouthfuls?

Baseball players last forever, and we get to see their faces and expressions because they stand still and don't wear helmets. They love to talk, and with 162 games and 162 chances for post-game interviews, they get lots of chances.

And in what other games do number and records attract so much attention. I say 20, you say wins; I say 200, you say hits; I say 300, you say average, and so on up to 4,000. Every summer has its share of record chases. Last summer Rose passed Cobb, Carew hit his 3,000th, Seaver won his 300th, and Niekro nailed down his 300th after stalling at 299 until almost the last day of the season.

Yesterday, Don Sutton of the California Angels came up short in his bid for 300, but he'll be trying for it again in five days.

In contrast to the interest in baseball records and numbers, consider: How many career points does Jabbar have, or how many yards did Unitas pass for? Get within 10,000 on each and it'll be a good guess.

Oddly, the average sports fan may enjoy listening to baseball talk and reading baseball stories more than watching baseball games. But I have faith that the more you pay attention to this most subtle of games, the better it gets.

As it is, I have no doubt that hordes of the little subtleties blow by me like Nolan Ryan fastballs. But my day will come. I will call a pitchout that Joe Garagiola and Vin Scully could not have seen from a mile away.

And my pride will lift me from the couch and I will shout, "I told you so!"

SOUTHAMPTON, N.Y. (AP) — Greg Norman, disturbed by taunts from an unruly gallery just when he seemed ready to run away with the tournament, regained his composure and a one-shot lead Saturday after three rounds of the 86th U.S. Open Golf Championship.

"It was like being at a hockey match or a football game," Norman said. "There's no reason for them to yell those type of things."

Norman, who lost to the rejuvenated Jack Nicklaus on the last day of the Masters, had a four-stroke lead with 27 holes to play and still led by three when the tournament turned.

It happened on No. 13. Norman drove into the rough, ran his second shot through the green and down a slope, chipped back through the green again, chipped to four feet, then missed the putt for a double bogey.

During the course of those troubles, a television reporter on the course said, someone shouted "Choke!" at Norman, who later went to the gallery ropes to shake his finger at a man in the crowd.

While all this was going on, Trevino tapped in a one-foot birdie putt and went stalking off the green — biting his lips to keep back a smile — with a share of the lead.

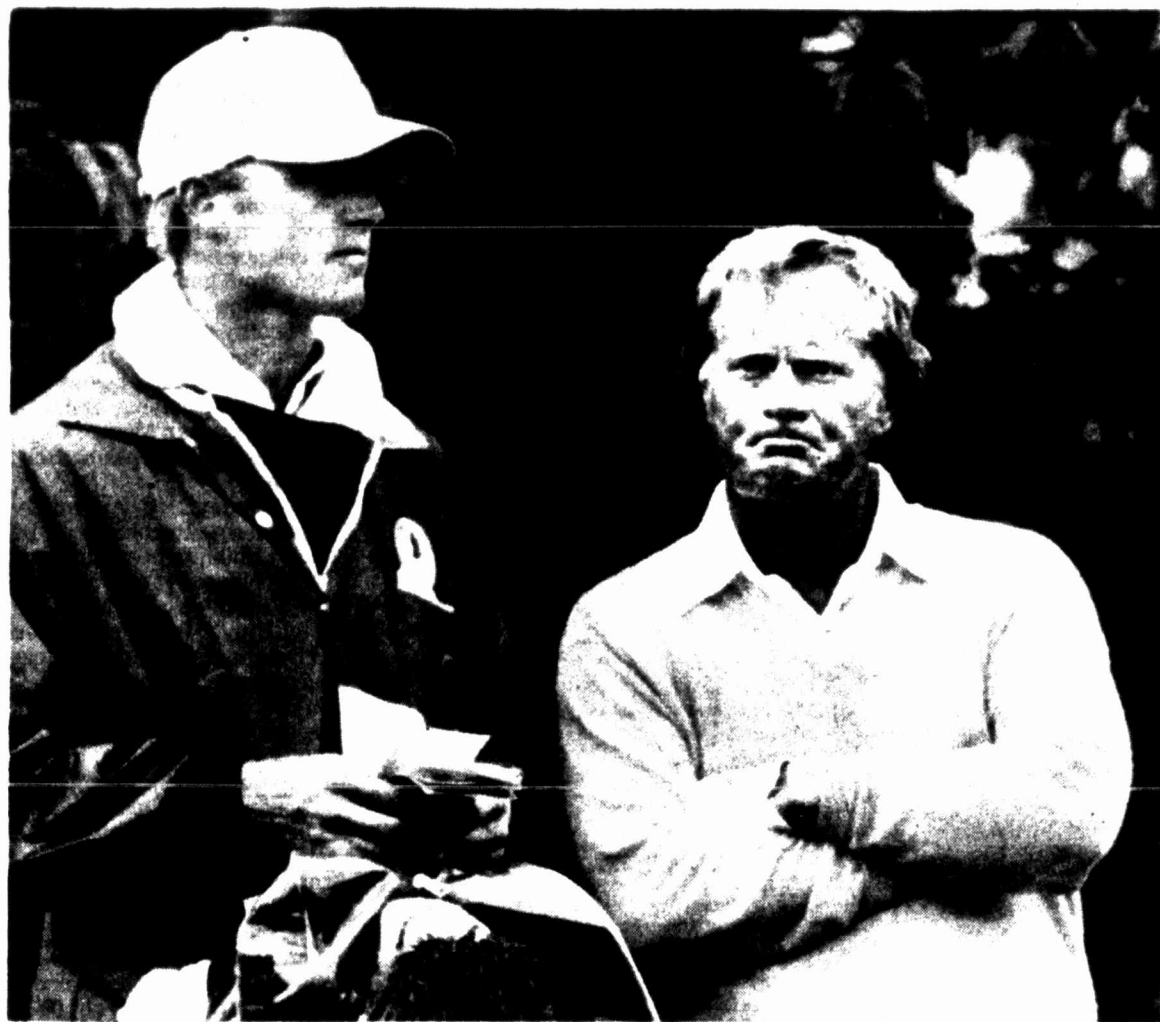

But that wasn't the end of it. As Norman stood over a putt on the 16th, someone shouted from the crowds, "This is New York. You've got to expect an abusive crowd."

Norman got the lead back over Trevino and former PGA champ Hal Sutton with par on the 18th, after Trevino drove into the rough and put his second shot into the bunker, but Sunday's final round nevertheless shaped up as a dramatic showdown — and a crowded one, at that.

After a day when fickle Shinnecock Hills gave up 17 subpar rounds included competitive course record-tying 66s by Sutton and Mike Reid, no one was under par.

Only Norman, at 210 after Saturday's 1-over 71, was even. Trevino, seeking a third Open title at age 46, closed with a 1-under 69, his second straight subpar round.

Yet, there were no less than 15 players within four shots of the lead.

First-round leader Bob Tway was alone in fourth at 212 after a 69. Tied at 213 were Ray Floyd (70), Denis Watson (71), Payne Stewart (69), Reid and Mark McCumber (68).

At 214 were Scott Verplank, whose 67 was the first subpar round in his first tournament as a pro; Lennie Clements (67), former Masters winners Ben Crenshaw (69) and Bernhard Langer (70), and five-time British Open champion Tom Watson (72).

Even Nicklaus, who started the day 10 shots out of the lead, had renewed hope for a record fifth Open title after a 3-under-par 67 that left him six back.

He now has improved five strokes each day, from 77 in Thursday's wet and cold misery to 72 Friday, and he said, "I need to improve five more shots on Sunday and I'll be just fine. I suppose I'll have to shoot a mid-60s round to have a chance."

It was still a longshot at best.

Norman, twice a runnerup but never a winner in any of golf's four major championships, still had to be beaten.

The double bogey was his only real mistake in a round that included a 50-foot putt, and he showed on No. 18 that it would take more than one bad hole to keep him from atoning for his 1984 Open playoff loss to Fuzzy Zoeller.

"I've never seen a man playing as well as Norman is now. ... He could run away and hide. If he keeps on playing like this, nobody is going to catch him," Nicklaus said.

Cowgirls going to finals

By EDDIE CURRAN
Staff Writer

Five members of the Howard College Women's Rodeo Team caravanned up to Bozeman, Montana this weekend. Monday it will begin a week long quest for the title of national college women's rodeo champion.

Coach Dusty Johnston says it was the first time the Howard College cowgirls had qualified for the national finals since 1979 when they were Southwest Regional Champions. This year they finished second in the 20-team region after coming up one place short with third place finishes the last two years. The top two teams in each of 11 national regions get to make the trip to the finals.

Johnston, in his fourth year of heading the rodeo program at the college, has confidence in his girls. "The team that we're sending has a very good chance at success. They're young, but they're all experienced, hardworking cowgirls."

Johnston is in the pleasant position of being able to send more than the allotted three persons per team. He says that because two of his girls qualified individually, they will make the trip in addition to the three who will compete for the team championship. He stresses that the scores of the two girls competing in individual events won't go towards the team standings.

The cowgirls will be vying in breakaway roping, the barrel race, and goat tying. In breakaway roping the cowgirls rope a calf with a lasso attached to their saddlehorn. The rope is tied to come off the saddlehorn as soon as it is pulled by the roped calf. Johnston says 2.5 seconds is a good time in the event.

In the barrel race, the girls ride a horse specially trained for the event around three barrels in a sort of extended figure eight. Johnston says this is like an equestrian event, and he stresses the importance of having a good horse.

For the goat tying, the cowgirls ride their horses from a starting line to a goat tied on a 10-foot rope fastened to the ground. The girls jump from their horses and the clock stops when three of the goat's legs are tied together. Johnston says one of the keys to this event is drawing a good goat that will stand still. He says a rowdy goat means trouble when fighting the clock.

Coach Johnston emphasizes that this is the national college championships, and not simply the national junior college championships. With this in mind, and the fact that four of the five girls are freshman, it is clear this team will

Rockets shopping for guards

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Rockets, limited at point guard since John Lucas was dismissed from the team, would like to bolster that position with their 20th pick in the first round of Tuesday's NBA draft.

But if a legitimate first round guard isn't available, the Rockets may opt for the time honored "best athlete available."

They might even seek more Tower Power.

The Rockets advanced all the way to the NBA finals without a true point guard directing traffic for Twin Towers Ralph Sampson and Akeem Olajuwon.

Lucas provided the Rockets with a veteran floor leader until he was dismissed from the team in March 15 after failing a drug test for the second time.

Robert Reid stepped up from his sixth man position to take over the starting point guard position. He got help in the latter stages of the playoffs from Allen Leavell, recovering from a broken bone in his hand.

Houston's patch-work point guard setup worked well enough to get the Rockets to the NBA finals before they lost to the Boston Celtics, 4-2, in the best-of-seven series.

Some of the point guards likely to go high in the draft include John Dawkins of NCAA runnerup champion Duke, Dwayne Washington of Syracuse, Michigan State's Scott Skiles and Alabama-Birmingham's Steve Mitchell.

If the Rockets are unable to grab a top guard from the collegiate ranks, their shopping list could even include going for another big man.

Jim Petersen's late-season development provided the Twin Towers with relief off the bench. But beyond Petersen, the Rockets have no solid help.

Another area of concern could be the championship series performance of guard Lewis Lloyd, who averaged 16.8 points in the regular season and 16.7 in the first three rounds of the playoffs.

Lloyd lost his shooting touch in the title series against the Celtics. He averaged 7.7 against Boston and was frequently benched by Fitch.

Sutton fails in bid to win number 300

By The Associated Press
Don Sutton failed to win his 300th game Saturday, but it was otherwise a profitable afternoon for the California Angels.

Chased in the seventh inning by a Kansas City rally that tied the game, Sutton wasn't around at the end to reach the historic level in his first try at 300. But he did win the affection of the crowd at Anaheim Stadium in a game eventually won by the Angels 6-5 on Doug DeCinces' eighth-inning home run. Rob Deer drove in a run with a sacrifice fly in the second inning and Jim Gantner singled home a run in the seventh, enabling Leary to beat Mike Brown, 4-3.

Baseball

Twins 9, Indians 3
Greg Gagne's two-run double keyed a three-run eighth-inning, sparking Minnesota over Cleveland. An error by Mel Hall in left field opened the door for the Twins' rally off Neal Heaton, 3-6.

Minnesota added three insurance in the ninth a three-run double by Tim Laudner. Keith Atherton, 4-3, gained the victory in relief of Mark Portugal, with three scoreless innings of relief.

Blue Jays 6, Tigers 5
Cliff Johnson and pinch-hitter Buck Martinez hit consecutive homers off reliever Willie Hernandez in the bottom of the ninth to lift Toronto over Detroit.

Hernandez, 2-3, relieved Detroit starter Jack Morris after Jesse Barfield led off the ninth with an infield single. On Hernandez's second pitch, Johnson hit his ninth homer of the year to tie the game. It was Johnson's second homer in two nights off Hernandez.

Three pitches later, Martinez, batting for catcher Ernie Whitt, hit his first homer since June 6, 1985.

A's 3, Rangers 2
Rookie Eric Plunk allowed only three hits in 7 2-3 innings for his first major-league victory, helping Oakland beat Texas and break a nine-game losing streak.

Plunk, 1-2, struck out 10 and walked five. He left the game in the eighth when Texas scored twice against him and Bill Mooneyham. Steve Ontiveros got the final four outs for his fourth save.

Plunk and the Oakland relievers combined on a five-hitter. The A's managed only three hits off Ed Correa, 4-4, and relievers Mickey Mahler and Dale Mohorcic.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Reds 2, Braves 1
Cincinnati's Eric Davis led off the ninth inning with a single and eventually scored on an error by Atlanta third baseman Rafael Ramirez, lifting the Reds over the Braves.

Mets 5, Pirates 1
Sid Fernandez pitched a three-hitter, retiring 26 of the final 28 batters, as the Mets defeated Pittsburgh for their fourth straight victory and seventh in the last eight games. Fernandez, 7-2, defeated the Pirates for the second time in a week, having beaten them 4-3 last Sunday.

Cardinals 1, Cubs 0

Tom Herr's home run backed the five-hit pitching of Ray Burris and Todd Worrell as St. Louis defeated Chicago, spoiling the debut of Cubs Manager Gene Michael, who was ejected. Herr's homer, his second of the season, came in the second inning off Scott Sanderson, 3-4.

 be going against older competition. The sophomore of the bunch, Lisa Berry of Carlsbad, New Mexico, has a particularly good shot at national honors after coming back from a mid-season car wreck that probably cost her the region breakaway roping championship. She'll be competing in that event in Bozeman.

"Lisa's as good a roper as we've ever had here," her coach says. "She is a very serious, motivated girl, and I think she can compete with anybody in the nation." He says as far as her accident is concerned, she is healed and ready to go.

Johnna Puckett of Sweetwater is the other Howard College cowgirl who will compete for an individual title. Puckett was the top barrel racer in the region, and is ranked eighth nationally going into this week's championships. Her coach praises her energetic and enthusiastic attitude, and says her determination could bring her the title.

If Howard College is to bring home the team trophy, it will have to be won by three freshmen, Karen Cochran of Aspermont, Karen Snodgrass of Texico, and Shannon Garrison of Channing. Last year Cochran won the national high school goat tying championship, but this year she fared better in breakaway roping, finishing fifth and eighth in the region in the events. "She has all the talent in the world and has a real good chance of winning a lot at the finals," her coach says.

Garrison will be trying to win points for the team in the goat tying and breakaway roping. "This girl is competitive," her coach says. "She's as good in one event as the other."

Latin teams doing well in World Cup soccer

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The South American teams and the host Mexicans were expected to have an advantage over the others in this World Cup because of the heat, the altitude and the fan support.

And all five Latin American teams — Brazil, Mexico, Paraguay, Uruguay and Argentina — qualified for the second round of the global soccer championship.

But now, that edge could be offset by something which many of the Western Hemisphere players have rarely — if ever — experienced.

Knockout games. The new single elimination format. Overtime, followed by penalty kick shootouts if the game is still tied.

The second round begins Sunday with Mexico playing Bulgaria at Aztec Stadium in Mexico City, and the Soviet Union opposing Belgium at Leon.

On Monday, it's Argentina vs. Uruguay in Puebla and Brazil against Poland at Guadalajara.

Italy plays France at Olympic Stadium and Morocco (Y4aB;ays Paraguay at Aztec and Denmark goes against Spain at Queretaro on Wednesday.

In Europe, particularly in club championship playoffs and European Cup competitions, the single-eliminations are common. Many European players, particularly the English, Spanish, Danish and Germans, are used to it. They know the strategies involved, when to gamble and when not to.

But the South Americans, particularly the Brazilians, who are favored to win an unprecedented fourth championship, are strangers to overtime.

Not that they don't understand what they could be headed for if, after 90 minutes, the score is tied. Two 15-minute extra sessions will follow, though there is no sudden death in the overtime periods. If, after those two periods the score is tied — whether neither team has scored or both have scored a goal or more — it goes to the shootout.

"The play will be hard, rough, life-or-death," Mexico's Javier Aguirre said. "I expect us to play at our true level and get the win, because there is no time for gambling, because there is no tomorrow for the loser."

Brazil Coach Tele Santana said his players "knew about this when we came here, so we are prepared." He also knows that the better defensive teams, which also have quick-striking capabilities, have a distinct advantage in extra time. Brazil fits that description perfectly.

There has been much criticism of the new format.

When FIFA, the world governing body for soccer, expanded the tournament from 16 to 24 teams, it devised the formula under which second-round games were single elimination. In the past, group play carried through two rounds, with two teams from each of four groups moving into the second round.

Then, two groups of four were formed and the top two from those groups made the semifinals, where knockout play began.

Soviet Coach Valery Lobanovsky called the current setup "unfair to the better teams." Lobanovsky fears that upsets in a one-game playoff are more likely than in a round-robin of three games.

Italian Coach Enzo Bearzot was even more emphatic.

"We are the defending champions. France is the European champion. Our game should have come in the semifinals, not now. It is just too early. And it is too bad that one of us will have to leave the Cup in the second round," Bearzot said.

Astros hurler on disabled list

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Astros placed right-handed relief pitcher Charlie Kerfeld on the disabled list Saturday after Kerfeld suffered discomfort while throwing prior to a game against the San Francisco Giants.

Kerfeld has a 5-1 record and two saves for the Astros with a 1.88 earned run average. He had been bothered by a sprained medial collateral ligament in his right elbow.

The Astros recalled left-hander Jeff Calhoun from their Triple AAA affiliate in Tucson to replace Kerfeld on the roster. Calhoun began the season with the Astros, going 0-0 with a 1.54 ERA in 11 2-3 innings. At Tucson, Calhoun was 0-2 with a 4.91 ERA.

Richmond gets Miller pole spot

BROOKLYN, Mich. (AP) — Tim Richmond led an assault on the record books Saturday, winning the pole position for the Miller High Life 400 stock car race with a Michigan International Speedway-record qualifying speed of 172.031 mph.

Richmond, 31, of Ashland, Ohio captured the pole position for Sunday's race after taking his Chevrolet around the two-mile oval in 41.853 seconds.

Visions of fatherhood...

on Father's Day

By CARLEEN EVERETT
Lifestyle Editor

"It's a girl!" said new father Patrick Parras.

"It was great," he said. "I was there when she was being born and all of the sudden I saw a little girl coming out. I started jumping up and down."

Baby Dominique was born Tuesday at 2:38 p.m., weighing 7 pounds 12½ ounces.

Being a father is an indescribable feeling, Parras says, adding it's definitely an exciting one. "Making a life ... it's neat," he added.

Two other fathers-to-be, James Gross and Greg Brooks, anxiously are awaiting the birth of their first children.

"I'd like to be a father by Father's Day," Brooks said. "Then I'll get a present."

"I have lots of anticipation and uncertainty," Brooks added.

Gross said he, too, is "excited about being a father."

The two men have participated with their wives in the lamaze birth preparation program, which helps them play a vital role in the birth of their children.

The goals of lamaze, according to Diane Fine, lamaze instructor at Malone-Hogan Hospital, are to promote a positive, family-oriented birth experience through physical and psychological means.

She added it provides an opportunity for couples to work together in the birthing process — through education about the birth, breathing techniques and pre-natal exercises.

"The father is no longer an observer," Fine says.

"Lamaze is great," Brooks said. "I didn't know anything about it. We learned a lot about what to expect during birth and when the child is born."

Do eager-to-be fathers have any second thoughts about what they're getting into?

After taking lamaze, Gross said he's ready.

"My wife tells me she won't spazz out, but I think she will. It might be scary," Brooks said.

After the births, the two men said they also plan to help at home.

Brooks has been practicing. "I changed my wife's sister's baby. I did great," he said.

His wife, giggling a bit, said, "Except, he powdered the baby like it was fried chicken." She said he poured the powder on a pile and dipped the baby in the powder. (For inexperienced fathers, a sprinkle of powder on the baby's bottom is sufficient.)

"We're going to use cloth diapers," Mrs. Gross said.

Her husband retorted, "She's using cloth diapers. I'm using Diane Fine, lamaze instructor at Malone-Hogan Hospital, leads expectant fathers, James Gross and Greg Brooks and wives, back to front, in practicing their hee-hee-hees. It is a Lamaze breathing technique that will be used during the birth of their children.

Pampers."

Neither couple is predicting what they're going to have.

"You hear all kinds of wives' tales," Brooks said.

And both families have experimented a little with home forecasting methods in hopes of detecting the sex of their unborn child.

"I had a friend do the Mexican-Hoodoo needle," Mrs. Brooks said. "She says it's a girl."

"We did the drano test," Mrs. Gross said. She explained it requires two teaspoons of morning urine and two teaspoons of drano. If the color turns yellow, brown or gold, it's a girl. If the color turns blue, green or purple, it's a boy, she said.

Both couples have some anxieties about raising a child.

"It's scary to raise a child. Hopefully we can raise it right,"

Gross said.

"Our opinions of raising a child differ. Just like they do for raising a dog or a cat," Brooks said. They'll figure it out as they go along, he added.

"We just can't decide whether the dog should stay in or go out," Mrs. Gross said.

Of course, the inevitable — a change in lifestyle — will occur.

"Our lifestyle will have a drastic change. Before this, we could just get up and go," said Gross.

"We're going to have to figure in the 30-minute allowance, giving ourselves 30 extra minutes to go anywhere," Brooks said.

Baby Brooks was due June 9, so the couple is very anxious. "I was a half hour late one night. I called home and asked Lisa how she was and she said, 'It's a boy,'" Brooks recalled.

"I'm confident that it will all work out," Mrs. Brooks said.

"Greg will keep a good head."

In case he faints, Brooks said, "I'm going to buy a headband with a piece of foam rubber on the back of it. I've always been told, 'Don't faint in the delivery room because everyone is so busy with the baby that they don't have time for you.'"

Baby Gross is due June 25.

"We're having the baby in Abilene," Gross said. "Debbie is supposed to go next week, but I want her to go this week just in case."

Father's Day: how the annual holiday really began

By KAREN McGRATH
Associated Press Writer

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) —

William Jackson Smart was a nurturing father before nurturing fathers were in vogue. When his wife died in 1898, he single-handedly raised six children, one of whom founded Father's Day in his honor.

Smart's only daughter, Sonora Smart Dodd, started the holiday June 6, 1910, by persuading the Spokane Ministerial Alliance and the city's YMCA to establish a day to acknowledge fathers.

The idea blossomed when William Jennings Bryan and presidents Woodrow Wilson and Calvin Coolidge endorsed it.

Congress gave the day its blessing in 1914. Another congressional endorsement and a presidential proclamation by President Richard Nixon in 1971 firmly established the holiday's permanence.

Father's Day is observed the third Sunday of June, the month Mrs. Dodd's father was born.

Mrs. Dodd, who died at age 96 in 1978, said she sought the holiday to honor her father, who brought his wife and children from Arkansas in 1887 to Washington Territory, where they settled as farmers.

"It is not difficult to recall the twilight of an early March day at the turn of the century, when bereavement came to us at the loss of our mother," she said more than 20 years ago. "Father assumed the father-mother role in the rearing of his six children. This role he performed with courage and selflessness until we were all in homes of our own."

Mothers already had a holiday early in the century. Mrs. Dodd argued that it was unfair that fathers had no similar day.

Father's Day might not have existed had it not been for Mrs. Dodd's perseverance, according to her daughter-in-law, Helen Dodd of Whitefish, Mont.

"She worked very, very hard to honor her father and all fathers because she felt her own father sacrificed a lot to raise the kids," she said. "He never remarried."

Sonora Dodd had a romantic vision of what Father's Day should mean.

"With the object of establishing a reciprocity between God and man, the sacredness of the home, chum life twixt father and son, and the golden rule between man and man, the time was expedient for the emancipation of father," she said in a newspaper interview shortly after the first

Father's Day.

Mrs. Dodd often said she approved of the direction the holiday had taken.

She was not bothered by the gift-giving commercialization of the holiday, said Ted Kaufman, executive director of the non-profit Father's Day Council, which promotes the holiday. This year the council named Treasury Secretary James Baker, the father of eight children, as National Father of the Year.

While families take mother out of the house for Mother's Day, Kaufman said families tend to get together at their homes for Father's Day.

"Father's Day is a cook-out day. There's a lot of barbecues," he said. "The beef industry will sell 80 million pounds of beef for Father's Day this year. About 60 percent of families get together in some fashion. It's also a big day for telephone calls."

The greeting card industry also benefits from Father's Day and expects to sell 85 million Father's Day cards this year, according to Rachel Bolton, a spokeswoman for Hallmark Cards Inc. in Kansas City, Mo.

Father's Day cards have changed radically over the years because the roles fathers play in families and society have greatly changed, Ms. Bolton said.

"Stepfathers and other people, other males who are significant, are being honored on Father's Day," she said. "We have cards for someone who is like a father. We have cards for someone special — mother's friend who is not yet married to mother. And we have regular Father's Day cards."

"What they all have in common is that the sender is very, very appreciative of what that one person has done.

Fathers are now in a more nurturing role, and that's being reflected in the cards."

Fathers' new roles are actually a return to roles fathers played in the country's early history, Kaufman said.

"Before the Industrial Revolution, father stayed home and raised the kids after mother went through the process of breastfeeding," he said. "After the revolution, father left the home to go to the factories and offices. Mother became not only the child-bearer, but the disciplinarian and teacher because father wasn't home."

"Now you see in the past 20 years father beginning to implement that role again. He's now not just the moral leader of the family, he's adopted the role of part-time disciplinarian and teacher, and he does the laundry and helps clean up."

Father's Day letter is lifetime gift

DEAR READERS: Last year, my Father's Day column brought as surprising number of requests from editors of church bulletins, newsletters and other publication is asking permission to reprint it. Many readers wrote to say that they had put my suggestion to use, and found it more appreciated than any gift they had given Dad. I was encouraged to run it annually, so here it is:

DEAR ABBY: The week before Father's Day, you wrote: "Don't give Dad another tie, shirt or wallet, give him something he will cherish forever — a letter telling him how much he means to you."

Well, I composed a letter on the bus to work that very morning, typed it on my lunch hour and mailed it to my father in a beautiful card that evening. He was actually my stepfather, but he had been more of a father to me than my real father. I knew it would mean a lot to him, especially since he was in the hospital at the time. He died on July 5, and I'm so glad I wrote that letter. Now I can live with myself, knowing that he knew how I felt about him.

Thank you so very much for making me put my thoughts of love and gratitude on paper. If this letter helps just one person to do what I did, it was worth writing.

NO NAME, PLEASE

***

DEAR ABBY: My father wrote

Dear Abby

to you at least 12 years ago, and you put his letter in your column. (You reprinted it twice on request.) My father had it framed, and when we brought him here last year to live with us, he carried it in his hands for fear it might get damaged or lost.

When he heard that his letter had been framed and hung in the chapel of a cemetery, he said, "What a pity it will be seen only by those for whom it is too late. It would accomplish more posted on a bulletin board in a high school."

Abby, he made me promise that after he died I would write and ask you to run it once more. He died one week ago today (72), so I hope you will print it once more in memory of my beloved father. Here it is:

"DEAR ABBY: I am the most heartbroken person in the world. I could always find the time to go everywhere else, but never time to go visit Mom and Dad. They sat at home alone and loved me just the same. It's too late now to give them those few hours of happiness I was too selfish and too busy to give. Now when I go to their graves and see the green grass above them, I wonder if God will ever forgive me for the heartaches I must have caused them when they were alive. I pray to God that those who still have their parents to visit, do so, and show their love and respect while there is still time, for it's later than you think.

***

DEAR ABBY: While driving to work this morning, I noticed a few automobiles with little "signs" displayed: CHILD IN CAR. That strikes me as somewhat absurd. Shall the rest of us put up a sign that says, FAIR GAME — ADULT ON BOARD? Or perhaps, SMASHABLE — ELDERLY INSIDE!

Is not all life sacred? NOT EXEMPT IN PHOENIX

DEAR NOT EXEMPT: Your point is well-taken. It assumes that people would be less likely to hit an automobile with a child in it — as though one is given a choice of accidents. Weird.

Check legs before active in jogging

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: As a trainer of runners, I have read your column with interest. I note an emphasis on physical examinations to assess a person's aerobic capacity prior to embarking on a running program. I agree wholeheartedly with that. I wish you would add the need for a musculoskeletal exam as well. As important as heart and circulation are to the athlete, I find that most difficulties involve bones and muscles, particularly the knees. You should advise these people to have their legs checked out to see if they will stand up under the tremendous new strains imposed by intense running. — M.S.

You are right. Even though most musculoskeletal problems might become obvious soon enough to the new runner before damage occurs, a dedicated novice might indeed, continue an unwise program despite the signals his body is giving him.

Abnormalities, like flat feet or bowed legs, for examples, might subject the runner to subtle, but dangerous forces. Many times, such an abnormality can be helped with a change of gait or with adaptive orthotics, which may have to be prescribed. A sports medicine doctor sees many athletes and many such irregularities and can readily make an assessment, also suggest appropriate action. Your thought is often neglected.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Should a person who has the flu run or rest? What is the recommendation? — D.D.

You should never run when you are ill. That is when accidents and damage can occur. You have to feel strong to run well.

As to the flu, the admonition to rest and take fluids applies to runners as well as to others. We are not sure just what effect vigorous exercise does have on a body harboring the flu virus. Some studies point to potentially serious effects. Dr. Harvey B. Simon of the Harvard Medical School, a cardiovascular health authority, suggests that elevated body temperature that accompanies vigorous exercise might be detrimental in a body whose immunity system is already compromised, as with the flu. It may even become a factor in sudden death should the virus find an opportunity to attack heart tissue.

More studies will be needed for definitive answers, but the warning is clear. Joggers should heed it and follow the dictum of resting during an illness.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: A prof of mine is a fitness nut. He told us all that if we got off our duffs and ran a mile or so at night instead of heading for the bars, we would find our gray matter worked better for us. Was he giving us a straight clue or smoking us? — L.J.

There are studies nowadays to prove almost any clue you get. At least one study has shown some merit in the idea of exercise as an enhancer of mental ability.

One involved a group of elderly people. They were divided randomly into an exercise and a non-exercise group. The exercising group trained modestly for three months. Then they were tested for mental ability along with the non-exercise group. The exercisers outscored the nons.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: How can you tell a "running shoe" from an ordinary sneaker type? And is it important? — E.V.

It's important, believe me. The simplest way is to visit a sports equipment store and look around. You will find dozens of running shoes. They all have certain features in common. These include a well-padded tongue to protect the top of the foot from friction. They also have the familiar protrusion at the top of the heel for cushioning of the Achilles tendon. There is a rounded heel, also standard. That facilitates the heel-to-toe pattern of the foot striking the ground in running, the prescribed manner.

Millions of out-of-shape men and women desire fitness, but shy away from formal programs because they think it's all too complicated and difficult. Dr. Donohue's newest booklet, "Introduction to Fitness," puts the esoteric terminology of aerobics into plain language and offers a fitness program system, regardless of age, can adapt. For a copy write to Dr. Donohue in care of the Big Spring Herald, P.O. Box 11216, Chicago, IL 60611. Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and $1.00.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Scarecrow building traced to early times

By Country Home
A Meredith Magazine

The practice of scarecrow building is as old as man's efforts to till the earth.

Our Asian, European, and African ancestors all erected forms of one kind or another to frighten marauders from the fields, says Country Home magazine. When the first colonists arrived in North America, they found scarecrows watching over stalks of corn the Indians had so tediously coaxed from the rocky New England soil.

As farming grew more sophisticated, so did scarecrows. Sticks draped with flapping rags gave way to lifelike figures dressed in cast-off clothes. In Victorian times, when fashion reigned supreme in middle-class households, and when vagabonds rode the rails, scarecrows often became unwitting haberdashers. A traveler in the night would come upon a nattily dressed wooden gentleman, and he would trade his own worn garments for the scarecrow's sturdy but out-of-style finery.
