Spring board

How's that?

Water meter

Q. Is it illegal in Big Spring to turn off your water at the water meter?

A. It is not illegal, but it isn't a good idea, said public works director Tom Decell. He said the area from the meter to the water main belongs to the city. If a property owner turned off the water at the meter and it broke, the property owner would be responsible for damages, he said.

A better idea is to install a water cutoff on your side of the property in a place where you can get to it in a hurry if necessary, he said.

Lighter side

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Some Californians who are tired of the beers available in supermarkets are stepping out to brewpubs — saloons where the owners make a header, heartier brew in the back room.

"This is not Burger King," says "Buffalo" Bill Owens, who owns a Hayward brewpub. "If you want it your way, you'll have to make your own."

The Legislature changed a law three years ago to join five other states in allowing such operations. In most states, brewers must sell to wholesalers, wholesalers to retailers and retailers to consumers.

Assemblyman Tom Bates of Berkeley was tired of commercial beers and pushed through the laws allowing direct sales by brewers.

Agent testifies in drug case

By SCOTT FITZGERALD
Staff Writer

Police undercover agent Kimberley Phillips testified in district court this morning that some of the information she gathered to establish a drug case against Charles Briscoe was undocumented.

Briscoe, 26, a former Big Spring High School teacher and coach, is charged with delivering 23.5 grams, or nearly an ounce, of marijuana.

Monday afternoon, Phillips testified that drug contacts she established as an undercover officer were documented and used to establish cases for the police department.

But, she told jurors this morning she may have made several undocumented phone calls to Briscoe in an attempt to buy marijuana.

When asked by defense attorney James LeFevre if she kept a personal diary detailing activities and contacts made as an undercover agent, she replied that she did not. She testified that Briscoe arranged ed a meeting Nov. 13 between herself and James Magers, 24, 2011 W. Highway 80 No. 58, so she could buy marijuana. She said Briscoe was present at the sale.

She said she faked smoking the substance with Magers after the purchase, but Briscoe did not take part in smoking.

Magers also has been charged with delivery of a controlled substance.

Phillips, who joined the police force in June 1984 at the request of former police chief Rick Turner, told jurors she first saw Briscoe talking to a waitress at the Greenhouse club.

She explained that one of her duties as an undercover narcotics agent was to frequent bars, shopping centers and pool halls to meet people who were involved in or knew of drug trafficking.

She said she used an alias and rented an apartment at Sandra Gale Apartments, where she lived with her son and husband during the undercover drug operation.

She also said she had to fabricate stories about herself to ensure that her identity as a officer was concealed.

She spent about $5,000 in "buy money" provided by the police department during a period of several months, she told jurors.

Phillips testified that her first meeting with Briscoe occurred at Players night club Sept. 7.

She said she couldn't recall who approached whom, but she remembered that he initiated a conversation with her and asked TRIAL page 2A

New city manager seeks police chief

By HANK MURPHY
Staff Writer

New City Manager B. Mack Wofford said this morning he'll look for Big Spring's next police chief both from within and outside the police department.

The City Council unanimously hired the 50-year-old after emerging from a half-hour closed door session Monday afternoon. He will be paid a first-year salary of $47,500 with a $2,500 jump to the next year, Mayor Cotton Mize said.

said: "Quality of life is in the eye of the beholder. I'll try to get a good cross-section of what people want and then try to be responsive."

The new city manager said it's important to be active in community affairs. Wofford was a member of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce and Salvation Army advisory board. He is also a former president of the Pampa Noon Lions Club.

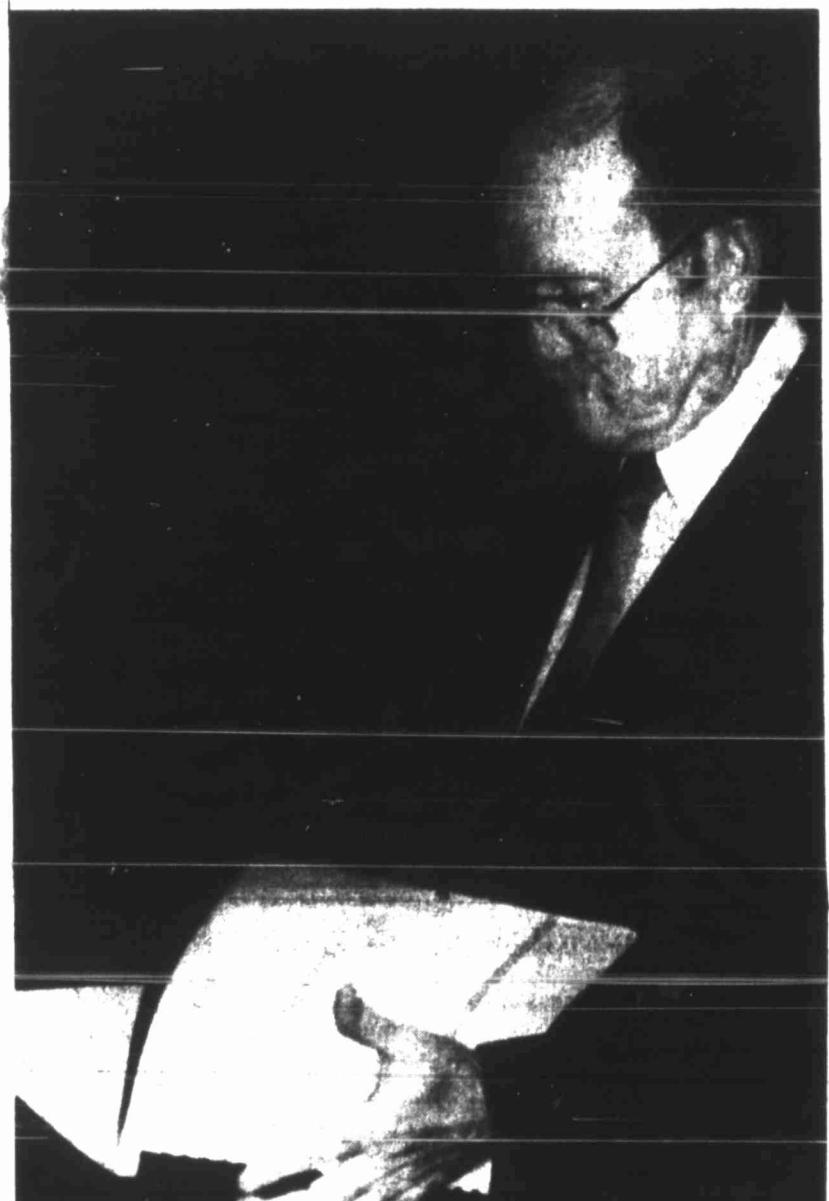

On press relations, he said he'll try to "give the press everything I have. The open approach is the best approach in the long run," he said.

"It's difficult to inform people of what's going on," he said. "We'll try to be as definitive as we can."

After Monday's meeting, Councilman Johnny Rutherford said he was impressed with Wofford's ability to get things done. He noted that Wofford was able to push through the demolition of more than 400 dilapidated structures in Pampa. Rutherford said Wofford was "stable with a lot of experience."

Mize said Wofford's resume stood out.

"The people of Big Spring are extremely fortunate to get a man of B. Mack Wofford's caliber and experience as city manager," he said.

SWCID director chosen

Ron Brasel of Gallaudet College for the deaf in Washington, D.C., has been selected as dean of instruction at the SouthWest College Institute for the Deaf.

A five-member selection committee met Monday to choose the new SWCID director from among three top candidates.

Brasel was in Big Spring about two weeks ago for an interview, said Dr. Bob Riley, committee chairman and president of Howard College.

The Howard County Junior College District board of trustees must approve the appointment before it is official, said Linda Woodley, director of community relations for the district. The next board meeting is July 22.

Brasel is expected to begin Aug. 15, she said.

He replaces Sam Hill, who resigned June 1 to become associate dean of instruction at South Plains College in Lubbock.

Brasel is presently coordinator of the Gallaudet College graduate school's sign communication program and is director of sign language and interpreting services at the school. Before that, he was dean of students at the South Dakota School for the Deaf for seven years.

He is a Ph.D. candidate at Gallaudet. He has a master's SWCID page 2A

Most elderly living independently

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than half of the oldest Americans still live independently, with nearly one in 10 living by themselves despite a disability, a new study shows.

The analysis of Americans aged 85 and over found that 54.3 percent lived independently, meaning they had their own homes and lived alone or with a spouse, despite their age and likelihood of infirmity.

Mostly born before the start of this century, this age group "grew up in an era when residential independence was very important," explained Charles Longino of the Center for Social Research in Aging at the University of Miami.

Living with someone else, going back to a dependent way of life, can be a big comedown for them," something many resist as long as possible, he said.

Longino analyzed 1980 Census statistics to produce his report, The Oldest Americans. Released Monday, it is the first detailed analysis of Americans aged 85 and over. His work was funded by the Washington-based Andrus Foundation.

tion of the American Association of Retired Persons.

For the elderly, the important sense of independence can be helped through home-delivered services, Longino commented.

Drifter arraigned on three charges

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — A burned and bandaged 22-year-old man was arraigned Monday on murder, kidnapping and robbery charges stemming from the botched holdup and hostage siege at a jewelry store on posh Rodeo Drive that left three people dead.

After the arraignment on 15 charges of Steven Livaditis, a drifter from Las Vegas, Nev., mourners gathered at a church in nearby West Hollywood for the funeral Mass of one of the victims, Van Cleef & Arpels sales manager Hugh Skinner.

Skinner, 64, was accidentally shot by a sheriff's marksman on June 23, as Livaditis allegedly emerged from the rear of the store with three hostages as a human shield. Sheriff Sherman Block said the marksman mistook Skinner for the gunman.

Killed in the store earlier in the 13½-hour standoff were security guard William Richard Smith, 54, and saleswoman Ann C. Heilperin, 40.

Members of Skinner's family have filed a $2.5 million lawsuit against Los Angeles County and Beverly Hills.

At the arraignment, a July 8 date was set for Livaditis to enter his plea. He could face the death penalty if convicted on the three murder charges against him.

Dressed in blue overalls issued by the jail, he answered in a clear and calm voice to questions from the judge and prosecutor in a heavily guarded room in Beverly Hills Municipal Court.

His upper torso showed the burns he suffered when sheriff's deputies tossed diversionary "flash-bang" grenades at him during the alleged escape attempt.

"He's in apparent pain. There's an open wound on his chest. Really a lot of pain. He hasn't been able to sleep," said Deputy Public Defender Richard Millard, who spoke to Livaditis for about 15 minutes.

The charges against him include three counts of murder, four counts of robbery, five counts of false imprisonment and three counts of kidnapping.

Playboy to search for 7-Eleven women

CHICAGO (AP) — Playboy magazine says it has a plan to rekindle the bond between its readers and the 7-Eleven stores that no longer distribute it. That plan is to run a nude pictorial featuring 12 of the chain's most attractive female employees.

Playboy hopes to include the 'Women of 7-Eleven' in the December issue, eight months after the convenience store's parent company, Dallas-based Southland Corp., pulled the magazine off the shelves.

"We don't see it as a revenge type of thing," Bill Paige, a spokesman for Playboy Enterprises Inc., said Monday. "We would like it to be viewed as a moment of levity."

Southland executives said they ended Playboy sales at 4,500 stores after witnesses testified before the U.S. Attorney General's Commission on Pornography that adult magazines are linked to crime, violence and child abuse.

Playboy founder Hugh Hefner has filed a lawsuit against the commission, charging that an intimidating letter sent to Southland and other magazine distributors caused the ban.

"We've got nothing against 7-Eleven; it's the Meese Commission we're pointing at," said Paige, referring to Attorney General Edwin Meese.

The chain was "named on a blacklist by the Meese Commission. We see them as victims in this thing, too," he added. "We can talk ourselves blue in the face about censorship. This is just something fun."

Frank McKeown, Southland vice president of marketing, said he didn't know if the company would try to stop employees from posing nude.

"We expect our employees to act in decorum on and off the job," McKeown said in a telephone interview from Dallas. "I can't begin to determine if employees are breaking our code of conduct until I've seen a pictorial."

Jeff Cohen, Playboy's managing photo editor, said some readers had sent letters calling for a boycott of 7-Eleven stores.

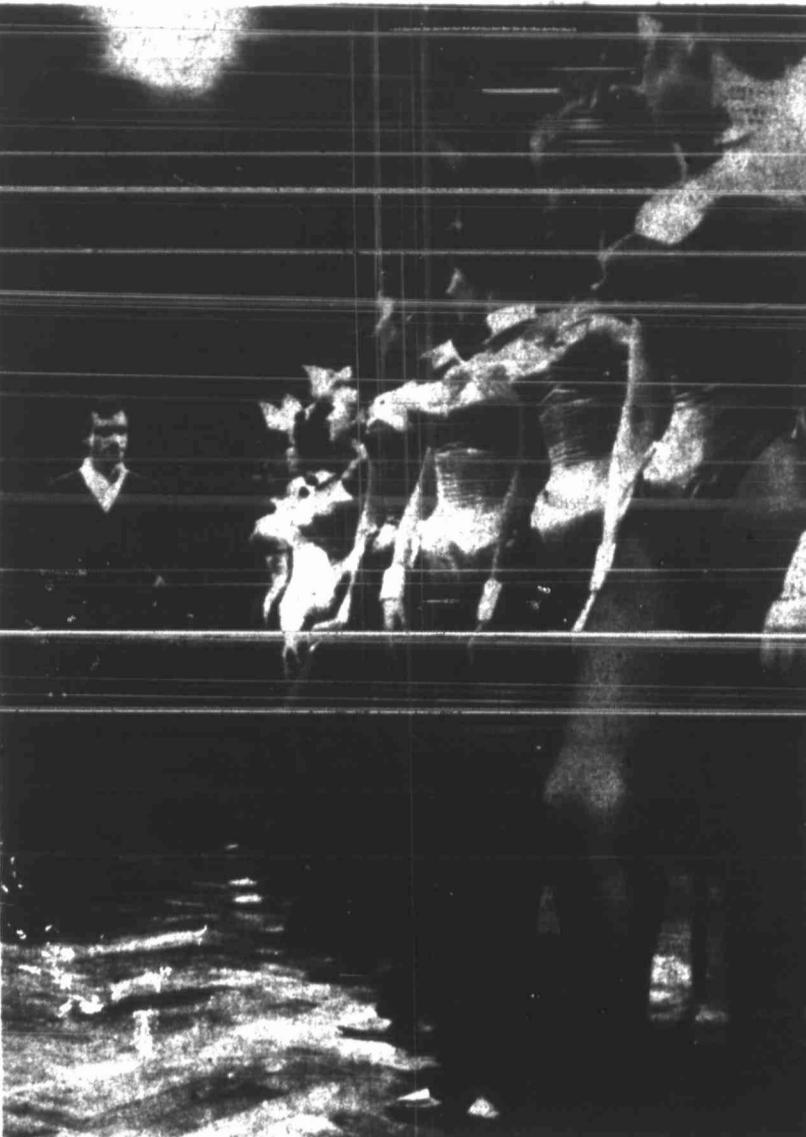

"For them, this pictorial will be something of a reunion with their favorite clerks," Cohen said.

Chicago-based Playboy sells about 4.1 million magazines per month. 7-Eleven stores accounted for 5 percent of the 2 million magazines sold in stores, Paige said.

When the sales ban was announced, Moral Majority Leader Jerry Falwell, said, "This is going to bring the pornography industry on its knees."

Besides 7-Eleven, Hefner also has charged that government intimidation forced Thrifty Corp., People's Drug Stores and Rite Aid Drug Stores to end Playboy sales.

7-Eleven also refuses to carry Penthouse and Forum magazines.

Hugh Hefner, founder, chairman and chief executive officer of Playboy Enterprises Inc., sizes up Bunnies in this early 1960s photo. His magazine hopes to run a nude pictorial featuring 12 of 7-Eleven's most attractive female employees.

her where her hat was.

"He invited me to his residence to smoke a marijuana cigarette," Phillips said. She also said Briscoe gave her phone number and said she could call him any time.

She said her next contact with Briscoe was Nov. 8 when she called and told him she wanted to buy a bag of marijuana.

Briscoe told her, "No problem — I'm the doctor," she testified.

She said she and Briscoe agreed to meet the next night at the Lamplighter Club in the Homestead Inn. However, Briscoe did not appear and told her during a Nov. 13 phone conversation that he had been too tired from officiating an athletic contest at Forton, she said.

During that same phone call, Phillips told jurors she again asked Briscoe to help her buy some marijuana. She said he told her he needed 30 minutes to make some contacts.

"He said he knew somebody at the Sandra Gail Apartments,"

Phillips said.

A short time later, Phillips returned, Briscoe met her in the apartments parking lot, then drove her across the lot to Magers' apartment.

"He told James (Magers) that I was looking for a quarter," Phillips said. She said she then asked Briscoe if the amount could be increased to an ounce.

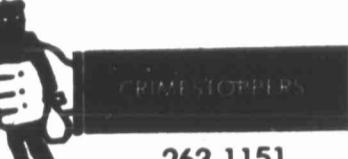

Magers told her he would check it out and left the apartment, she said.

He returned with a plastic bag containing a leafy green substance that appeared to be marijuana, Phillips said. She purchased the substance for $100, she said.

Also called to the stand this morning was Burgess Cooke, a chemist with the Department of Public Safety laboratory in Midland, who testified that the amount delivered to the lab in November was 23.5

grams of marijuana.

A seven-man, five-woman jury is hearing the trial, which was to continue this afternoon.

Many vets must meet VA hospital requirements

WASHINGTON (AP) — It now takes more than a signed oath for veterans to receive free care at Veterans Administration hospitals.

Beginning today, many former service personnel seeking treatment at VA hospitals will have to show they can't afford to pay for the care. And some of them will have to finance part of their treatments, under the new rules.

A law passed by Congress this year established the new eligibility requirements, aimed at making sure hospital space is available to needy veterans and to those who have service-related medical problems.

Other veterans, whose treatment is not related to service and whose income exceeds new minimum levels, will be eligible for care as space is available.

Veterans whose income exceeds minimum levels and who aren't being treated for service-connected ailments will be charged fees for a portion of their treatment in hospitals, in nursing centers, or for outpatient visits, said VA spokeswoman Donna St. John.

Beginning in October, the VA also plans to begin billing insurance companies for some of the costs of care, in cases where veterans are covered by health plans, she said.

With the new rules, veterans of all ages who do not fall in the service-connected category or who otherwise receive priority care — such as former prisoners of war, veterans of World War I and those receiving VA pensions — will have to answer questions regarding their income and net worth, Ms. St. John said.

Previously, veterans under the age of 65 were required to sign an oath saying they can't afford to pay the cost of medical care.

Under the new rules, there will be three eligibility categories, with differing requirements and income levels, Ms. St. John said. They are:

- Category A. Veterans whose injuries are service connected or who otherwise receive priority eligibility, and those veterans whose ailments aren't service connected but have an income not exceeding $15,000 a year if single or $18,000 with one dependent, plus $1,000 for each additional dependent.

- They will be entitled to free care and have the highest priority.

- Category B. Veterans whose ailments are not connected to service and whose income does not exceed $30,000 if single or $35,000 with one dependent, plus $1,000 per additional dependent.

They will be entitled to care on a space-available basis.

- Category C. Veterans whose ailments are not service connected and whose income exceeds the limits of category B.

- They will be entitled to care on a space-available basis, provided they agree to pay a portion of the cost.

- The patient costs for hospital care would be up to $492, the deductive amount for Medicare patients, for the first 90 days of treatment. They could be charged up to half that amount for each additional 90 days of treatment during the year.

For nursing home care, the full Medicare deductible would be charged for each 90 days of care. For each outpatient visit, the veteran would pay $16, she said.

Although the new procedures are effective July 1, the VA said that veterans receiving treatment prior to that date will not be affected until their current treatment is completed.

Space control moved

SPACE CENTER, Houston — Management of the nation's space station is being shifted from the Johnson Space Center to NASA headquarters, a move that follows recommendations by the presidential commission that investigated the Challenger disaster.

NASA administrator James C. Fletcher said at a news conference Monday that moving the space station control to NASA headquarters in Washington was "the first step in the realignment of the management structure." He said other changes were being evaluated.

The change will cause about 100 engineers to move from Houston to Washington and "will require the services of a systems engineering contractor in some ways similar to the way the Apollo program was managed," he said.

Benefits going up

WASHINGTON — Social Security benefits will go up by $14.30 a month starting Thursday for more than 2 million people, thanks to money they earned in 1984.

Social Security Administration computers have finished recalculating those people's basic benefits with the 1984 earnings included, and what benefits they are due retroactively.

Dorcas R. Hardy, the new Social Security commissioner, said Monday that checks averaging $265 for retroactive benefits will be sent out to the same people along with the new higher monthly payments.

In addition, a half-million others who had wages in 1984 can expect increases and retroactive payments by the end of the year after their benefits are recalculated manually, she said.

Economic activity rises

WASHINGTON — The government's measure of future economic activity rose a slight 0.2 percent in May, substantially below the pace of the last three months, the Commerce Department said today.

The department said the gain in its Index of Leading Indicators was down from a robust 1.3 percent increase in April, which had been the strongest advance in almost three years.

In March, the index had risen a solid 0.6 percent following a 1 percent February gain.

Still, analysts said the four consecutive monthly increases point to an economy that should begin performing better in the second half of the year. The index is designed to give an indication of economic growth six to nine months in the future.

Liberty Weekend

Numbers show celebration will be large

Barbara Bullock of Jersey City, N.J., waits Monday for Fourth of July customers at her cart at Liberty State Park. Up to 250,000 revelers are expected at the park near the Statue of Liberty.

You can bet that the 5,000 accredited members of the media, representing 668 news organizations, will be there. And 400 ABC staffers will be deployed, using 113 cameras, 44 microwave dishes, 23 video microwave links, 11 remote production trucks and four boats.

Pewh.

From the very start, Liberty Weekend will be enough to make a statistics fanatic ecstatic. One-hundred twenty trumpets will play a fanfare to open the ceremonies; a chorus of 186 and a dance troupe of 44 will join in.

About 40 minutes later, Chief Justice Warren Burger is to administer the citizenship oath from Ellis Island to petitioners around the country, including 10,000 at Miami's Orange Bowl and 1,200 at San Francisco's Golden Gate Bridge. The actual lighting of the statue will follow. It requires 1,500 racks of lights, 600 strip lights, 15 arc lamps and 1.4 million watts of power.

Organizers are expecting 40,000 pleasure boats in the harbor, which may begin to look like the clogged Long Island Expressway after a storm. The Coast Guard says it will dispatch 330 vessels and 2,300 sailors to keep order.

On land, 300 FBI agents and 6,500 police officers will be attached to Liberty Weekend in the city, at an overtime cost of $4 million. Police said they would use 3,006 portable radios, 230 telephones, 36.8 miles of cordon tape and rope, 6,811 wooden and metal barriers and 48 bullhorns.

And that's just in New York.

A sampling of New Jersey's numbers is the 60,000 people, an hour Service America Corp. expects to serve in Liberty State Park, behind the statue's back. For the first day alone, the company plans to have ready 750,000 gallons of drinks and up to 100,000 pounds of beef for hot dogs and hamburgers and another 100,000 pounds of sandwich meat and cheeses.

In all of this number-numbing multiplicity, there is only one Statue of Liberty. Of course, her fingernail is 13 inches by 10 inches.

Texas plaintiff: Appeal of sodomy law is 'last hope'

DALLAS (AP) — An appeal of a Texas sodomy law is the "last hope" for homosexuals after a U.S. Supreme Court ruling upheld a similar Georgia statute, said the plaintiff in the Texas case.

Donald F. Baker of Dallas, who filed suit in 1979 claiming the Texas law threatened his teaching job, said the hopes of the gay community "are dimmed, but not totally out" after the Supreme Court ruled Monday.

But Potter County District Attorney Danny Hill, who took up Texas' appeal after Attorney General Jim Mattox dropped out of the case, called the high court's decision "a great day for Georgia, the people of Texas and anyone else who believes in states' rights."

Nothing in the Supreme Court's sweeping language cast doubt on the constitutionality of state laws that also make heterosexual sodomy a crime, even when performed by married couples.

The Texas law was struck down in 1982 by a Dallas federal judge, whose ruling was affirmed two years later by a three-judge panel of the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

But the full appeals court, in a 9-7 ruling handed down last August, reinstated the law, saying it was a permissible effort to implement morality. The judges said the law is constitutional "in view of the strong objection to homosexual conduct, which has prevailed in western culture for the past seven centuries."

Monday's Supreme Court's ruling was assailed by the Texas Civil Liberties Union.

"This decision permits states to make criminals of millions of Americans and assaults the centuries-old principle of privacy in the home," said TCLU Executive Director Gara LaMarche.

Opinion

Jailed judge should resign

Federal District Judge Harry Claiborne of Las Vegas went to jail, facing congressional impeachment hearings, and yet still draws a federal salary of $78,200 annually.

Sound like a monstrous farce? Unfortunately, it isn't.

Nominated to the bench in 1978 by then-President Jimmy Carter, Judge Claiborne was tried twice before being convicted of income-tax evasion in 1984.

In the first trial, the jury deadlocked on accusations that Mr. Claiborne received $85,000 in bribes from the owner of a Reno brothel.

In the second trial, he was convicted of failure to report $106,000 in income and sentenced to two years in a stockade at Maxwell Air Force Base in Montgomery, Ala. When he took up residence there last May, he became the first federal judge in history to be convicted of a felony and actually go to jail.

Yet, Mr. Claiborne is unfazed. Even though he lost an appeal and hasn't been active on the bench since December 1983, he has refused to resign and thus forfeit his federal pay.

Worse, he is insistent that the House of Representatives undertake impeachment proceedings so that he has an opportunity to clear his name.

Claiborne's ridiculous obstinacy not only reflects poorly on his state, it serves to erode public confidence in the judiciary. Commenting on Mr. Claiborne's annual prison wages of $78,200, federal Judge Charles Wiggins observes, "The absurdity of such a spectacle is evident to all."

Leading Nevada politicians are anxious about the negative publicity the state likely will receive from the congressional impeachment proceedings. But not even U.S. Sen. Paul Laxalt has been successful in persuading Mr. Claiborne to resign.

To be sure, every person deserves his or her day in court. But Mr. Claiborne had his and now is unnecessarily torturing the federal judiciary and Nevada.

The lifetime appointment for federal judges shouldn't extend to convicted felons. Mr. Claiborne has done enough damage. He should resign immediately.

Attorney corrects 'How's that?'

To the editor:

Your sloppy and incomplete research has again caused the publication of an incorrect statement. I refer to your "How's that?" column appearing in the Thursday, June 26 issue, stating no Big Spring attorney is a member of the State Bar Association. Nothing could be further from the truth.

Each and every practicing attorney in Big Spring, plus our district judge, district attorney and County Attorney are all members of the State Bar Association. A simple, single telephone call to any of them, or the newspaper attorney, or the State Bar Association headquarters would have given you the same correct information. Reference could have also been World Bank underwriting colonization of Indonesia

By JACK ANDERSON and JOSEPH SPEAR

WASHINGTON — Every time we rattle the cages at the World Bank, top officials of the bank are outraged — but staff-level experts who know what's going on applaud. The high muckamucks draft and redraft letters to the editor, and the working stiffs slip us more inside information.

Here's the latest chapter:

In his latest attempt to stifle the "winds of freedom" that President Reagan's speechwriters detected in April, Indonesian President Suharto has embarked on a massive colonization scheme to solidify his control over disputed border areas.

Grandly titled "Transmigration," the costly program will uproot as many as 4 million Indonesians — including soldiers, veterans and their families — and ship them from overpopulated Java to such outposts as the border area between the Indonesian state of Irian Jaya and independent Papua New Guinea.

Anti-Suharto rebels, opposed to Indonesia's determined colonial ambitions, have been infiltrating the jungle border areas, and retreating into Papua New Guinea when attacked by Indonesian troops. The soldiers and pensioned veterans who will be "transmigrated" into the area presumably will put a stop to this trans-border traffic by Suharto's enemies.

Grindly titled "Transmigration," the costly program will uproot as many as 4 million Indonesians — including soldiers, veterans and their families — and ship them from overpopulated Java to such outposts as the border area between the Indonesian state of Irian Jaya and independent Papua New Guinea.

Although the World Bank loans amount to only about 10 percent of Transmigration's cost, they make sioners under Transmigration: "The active members are to guard the area (they are experienced in this job), the pensioned do work making the area productive for agriculture or industry."

As to what the soldiers would be guarding, Martono said: "It is very important that this kind of pattern be used in sensitive areas. Sensitive areas are, for instance, places where robberies may occur or where nobody is on guard. We will try to establish Sapta Marga villages along the borders of the country."

Thus the World Bank is underwriting Suharto's plan to make Indonesia's border area secure from native rebels who resent the forced "Javanization" of their homeland.

The underlying military motive behind Transmigration was revealed at a closed meeting of Indonesian and foreign officials on March 20, 1985, in Jakarta, Indonesia. World Bank and International Monetary Fund officials were present, as well as ambassadors from a dozen Western nations, including the United States. Our associate Donald Goldberg has obtained a transcript of the meeting, which was called by the World Bank's member nations.

Indonesian Minister of Transmigration Martono explained the rationale of the military-based "Sapta Marga villages" this way: "Sapta Marga is the doctrine of our armed forces, showing that, in addition to being members of the armed forces, they also are people who are fighting for the country. They are the front of the country."

Proxmire noted that the government loses 83 cents on every dollar it spends preparing to sell logs.

Talk about a classic case of rollong, he said. "The taxpayers get rolled while the timber companies get the logs."

Around the rim

Two deaths: coincidence or message?

By EDDIE CURRAN

The common way to brush off a coincidence is to say, simply, "It's just a coincidence." The assumption is that coincidences just happen, as naturally as rain falls.

But occasionally a profound event occurs when the phrase "just a coincidence" fails to help us understand. In such a case, the explanation that the two events occurred merely by chance seems a cop out.

An example is the deaths, eight days apart, of Len Bias and Don Rogers.

Both were described as outstanding physical specimens, and both died during the night from heart attacks attributed to cocaine overdose. Bias was 22; Rogers was 23.

Bias' death alone seemed a message cryptically delivered. Two days before dying, he was drafted by the Boston Celtics as the number two choice in the National Basketball Association draft.

He was, said scouts, "the stud of the draft." In other words, Len Bias was the greatest athlete in a sea of great athletes.

In the first days succeeding his death, reports leaked that cocaine could have been involved. But it generally was agreed that cocaine alone could not have killed Bias.

Lester Grinspoon, a Harvard professor renowned for his expertise on drugs, said that cocaine could only have helped kill Bias by putting stress on a defect already in his heart. He said the damage to Bias' heart was too extensive to be caused by cocaine and nothing else.

Most people expected the autopsy would reveal that cocaine and the excitement of the week had provided the necessary nudge to some hidden congenital heart problem.

A widely considered explanation was that Bias had Marfan's Syndrome, a congenital defect in a heart valve — fairly common among tall, thin people. Flo Hyman, the great U.S. volleyball player, died of Marfan's Syndrome earlier in the year.

The autopsy revealed that Bias' heart had been in exceptional condition. Cocaine had killed him, and his death so stunned the sports world that Bias appeared on the cover of the next week's Sports Illustrated.

Eight days later, three-time All-America and pro football defensive rookie of the year Don Rogers died. Again, the cause of death was attributed to cocaine overdose.

The two deaths — so rare, so eerily similar, and so close together — seem more than "just a coincidence." Rather, there's that spooky sensation that somebody somewhere is trying to tell us something.

Opinions expressed in this column are those of the staff writer and do not necessarily reflect the views of the newspaper's management.

when he calls on the U.S. to invoke sanctions?"

"We don't say anything to Bishop Tutu if we can help it. Our policy is to remain neutral in South Africa."

I then asked Nattily, "Does it bother you that Botha has instituted a state of emergency and anyone can be locked up for no reason?"

"That means your chance of using sanctions could hurt our relations with South Africa?"

"Correct. I think Secretary of State George Shultz summed it up best on the evening news when asked if the U.S. would levy sanctions, he replied, 'No.'"

"With Communists they work," Nattily said. "But sanctions against a friendly fascist power would hurt the people we are trying to help."

"What if you can't?"

"Then we continue our quiet diplomacy, hoping the South Africa leaders will see the light."

"Does quiet diplomacy really work?" I asked.

"All the time. We've used it in and it's never failed."

"You mean governments have President Reagan sent Botha a very tough note about the South African martial law edict."

"Did it have any effect?"

"No, but that is the advantage of quiet diplomacy. Very few people know that Botha told Reagan to stuff it."

"That's a foreign policy?"

"Nattily said, "Do you have a better one?"

"I might go for the sanctions if I was bankrupt in ideas."

Son plays the spoiler in Mom's dating game

DEAR ABBY: I am the single mother of a 9-year-old boy. Whenever I go out on a date, "Ryan" throws a tantrum and spoils the evening for me.

Baby sitters are reluctant to sit with him anymore. I've just about given up dating, and the situation makes me resent my son.

Do you have any suggestions?

DISCOURAGED
IN CLEVELAND

DEAR DISCOURAGED: Yes. Start now to "undo" the damage you have already done by permitting your son to put you on the defensive for doing what you have every right to do — seeking the companionship of a male friend.

Ryan is understandably jealous. He feels threatened. He's competing with your dates, and at this point, he's winning.

He needs to know that you love him, but need another male in your life. It would be reassuring for Ryan to be included in an occasional outing with your date — the zoo, a museum or a ball game.

And if he doesn't overcome his anger and hostility at having to share you, I think some counseling from a professional is in order.

Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: How do you know if a man is gay or not? I am an attractive, successful young woman, presently involved in a loving but rather dull relationship. I recently met a man who is single, successful, smart, tall, handsome and affectionate — and I know he likes me very much. The problem: He's already involved with someone else, and I'm fairly certain that person is a man.

He treats me with great tenderness, and we share the same tastes and values. He talks endlessly of the future, saying he wants a family — which is exactly what I want — but he claims he is not ready to make a commitment.

Last night he held me in his arms, kissed me and said he "feared" he was falling in love with me. I do believe he is, but before I go another step, I'd like to know whether it's possible for a man who has had significant homosexual relationships to make a long-term commitment to marriage and children. Any advice?

CAUTIOUS

you had it, you wouldn't think it was nothing.

I am the wife of Roy B. Smythe. This is my second marriage, but that's beside the point.

We get invitations for Uncle Roy and Marion. Shouldn't it be "Uncle Roy and Aunt Marion?"

This Uncle Roy and Marion sounds like we aren't married, and I don't like it one bit, as we have been married for 26 years. Please answer soon.

AUNT MARION SMYTHE

DEAR CAUTIOUS: You can't be too cautious in this situation. Obviously you don't know him very well. Get to know him better — but keep your distance physically so that your heart doesn't rule your head. Don't play games. Ask him pointblank if he is gay or bisexual. If he is, it's no crime, but that should be your cue to wish him well, say goodbye and keep on walking. My experts tell me that it's possible for a person who has had a significant homosexual relationship to make a long-term commitment to marriage and children, but it's highly unlikely.

DEAR ABBY: This problem may seem like nothing to you, but if

DEAR AUNT MARION: You should be addressed as "Uncle Roy and Aunt Marion." Mention it, but don't make an issue of it, or they may refer to you as something other than Aunt Marion.

DEAR ABBY: Regarding the problem of a middle-aged woman having to explain why she's not married: A friend of mine who is single and in her 50s says, "How did I know the last one who asked me was going to be the last one who asked me?"

S.H. FROM OHIO

Exercise therapy is essential arthritic children

Dr. Donohue

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I wish I knew how to handle my child's arthritis (juvenile). We're told to encourage exercise, but you hesitate to insist on it if it will only cause him distress. What is your feeling about exercise and the child with rheumatoid arthritis? — Mrs. I.N.

Experts in control of juvenile arthritis state that exercise is essential and it should be insisted upon to the extent of the child's capabilities.

But that advice applies to some degree in all potentially disabling joint diseases, if only to maintain mobility and to avoid freezing the joints. Children, though, are special cases, and handling the situation calls for a balance between overproducing and overcoordinating. It is easy for parents to let their emotions get in the way of necessary therapy.

Yes, you should encourage all activity your child can manage. And you should absolutely minimize use of supports, such as crutches, limiting their use to actual need.

You and the child should take encouragement from the fact that today the outlook for most juvenile arthritis patients is rather good. That optimistic forecast can be jeopardized if great emphasis is not given to good sound physical therapy.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I am 87 years old. Just got my driver's unmercifully, over the years.

Our noses are industrious mucus producers, making a pint a day, maybe more on a good day (or bad, depending on your situation). They produce in response to changes in the environment. And it's true, if it's dry, they will produce. This facilitates the cleansing mechanisms of the nasal passages.

Some noses are extra sensitive. At the slightest provocation they begin to work overtime. A slight change in temperature, from one room to another, for example, may send these mucous glands into activity. Spicy food may cause it.

The only thing I can add to what your doctors have told you is in the area of prevention, which means avoidance of the triggers. And when things get unbearable, you can turn to drying drugs — decongestants and anticholinergics. The latter medicine stops nerve messages from going to the nasal mucus machinery. Glycopyrrolate is an example.

Let me also give you just a brief list of potential underlying triggers for excess mucus production. They include overuse of nasal drops and sprays, allergies, deviated nasal septum, blood pressure medicines, nasal obstructions, pregnancy and even low thyroid hormone production.

I've exhausted my research file.

I hope I've been able to help you. I'm not sending you a bill. If you wish, you can look into my booklet on sinus-related signs and symptoms. Other readers can order by writing me, enclosing a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope and $1.00.

New drug may help boy beat disease

WICHITA FALLS, Texas (AP) — Anthony McCoy said it took a while for his girlfriend Brandy to get used to his tarantula collection.

She wouldn't touch them, he said, no matter how many times he showed how gently the furry spiders rested in his palms or walked on his shoulders. But she made the adjustment, he said, pleased with the outcome. "She's a dog," he said, "a dynamite, outasite girl."

Expanding the tarantula collection is Anthony's primary goal, now. He said he wants a room with 6,000 of the creatures lining the walls. Another happy ending may be in store for the 10-year-old Wichita Falls youth. An experimental drug appears to have cured a rare blood disease for Anthony. Blackfan-Diamond Syndrome is a form of anemia that keeps bone marrow from producing the red blood cells necessary for carrying iron and oxygen to the body's organs.

Afflicted with the disorder since birth, Anthony has had to have almost 200 blood transfusions to keep his bloodstream stocked with red cells. But even this treatment is only temporary, according to Wichita Falls oncologist Robert Delizio, because the body has no way of eliminating the iron deposited by the fresh blood. The mineral can reach a lethal level for the patient, he said. "As far as timing," he said, "I don't think he could have gone on much longer without some major complication."

It's been five weeks since Anthony's last transfusion, double the usual interval. The youth is also packing his bags for his first trip to summer camp, an activity that was prevented by his medical condition.

Susan McCoy's determination lead her to Delizio, who had read of the disease being treated with a drug usually used to help transplant patients recover from surgery. He also knew of a Dallas specialist who was trying the drug on blood disease patients. Susan McCoy said she had only received dim predictions from physicians who told her to accept that her son couldn't be helped. "When you've got a kid with a disease," she said, "you don't sit around and go with what one doctor says. Once the doctors say 'Give up,' you know they don't know everything."

Anthony said the worst part of the treatment was the medicine's taste. "Lo and behold," Delizio said, "he's making blood again. It's sort of miraculous or magic."

The will and drive of Susan McCoy to get the best and latest treatment for her son was as incredible as the medical technology, Delizio said. "The interesting thing to me is his mother's persistence," he said.

Hester and Robertson handles cooling needs

Hester and Robertson Mechanical Contractors has the employees and stock to meet anyone's air conditioning needs quickly, says Carol Hollingsworth.

"And if we don't have what's needed in stock here, we've got quick availability of anything we need."

The servicemen and office personnel are eager to help residential customers. The company handles all air conditioning equipment its customers may want.

Hester and Robertson offers free heating and cooling surveys and price estimates. "We measure the square footage of the home, check ductwork and insulation in order to give an estimate of what kind of equipment they need, the cost and any improvements needed to make the units work efficiently," Hollingsworth said.

The company also performs all kinds of residential and commercial plumbing, everything from lawn sprinkler systems, whirlpools and spas to installing or replacing water heaters. We mainly keep popular-size Lennox air conditioner and furnace units for residential customers, Hollingsworth said. "We also have a full stock of State water heaters in all kinds of sizes and in gas and electric."

Hester and Robertson has one of the best sheet metal shops in the area. It's a fully-equipped sheet metal shop where the employees custom fabricate metal duct and shop fabricate lightweight, quiet fiberglass ductboard ducts, she said. They use these ducts with the units they install.

"We have a complete filter stock and parts stock for our service customers and retail sales. We don't mind people coming in and buying what they want," she said.

For your air conditioning, plumbing and heating needs, call on Hester and Robertson Mechanical Contractors at 263-8342. The company is located on North Birdwell Lane.

State golf decision still up in air

By STEVE BELVIN
Sports Editor

It's still not known for sure if the Stanton Buffaloes are the Class AA state golf champions.

The announcement came from University of Interscholastic League Writer and Golf Director Bob Young Friday from his Austin office.

At the state meet in late May, the Stanton team of Mark Gonzales, Kevin Giampie, Skip Hopkins and Greg Avery shot a 664 to finish second behind Weimar's 651.

But the UIL state committee disqualified Weimar because all but one team member had violated a UIL rule by playing a practice round on the Colony Creek Country Club Golf Course at Victoria. The practice round occurred on Sunday, April 20, prior to the regional tournament on Monday.

The coach, John Kroll, who drove the team to the course on a school bus, was given a public reprimand and was placed on one-year probation.

Young said a decision hasn't been made about the state champs. "We do know that the state executive committee disqualified Weimar for practicing on Sunday at the regional golf site," said Young. "We don't know if Stanton will become state champions or if Weimar has to give back their medals because UIL Director Bailey Marshall is on vacation."

Young added that Marshall will be back from his vacation on July 7. "I know that some sort of decision will be made but I don't know exactly what it will be. We'll just have to see what the director says."

Abilene Wylie, Class AAA golfer, was also disqualified for playing at its regional site. On April 20, the team played at Odessa's Mission County Club, eight days before the tournament, and was also disqualified for playing the same course again on Sunday, April 27.

The UIL State Executive Committee ruled May 7 that no school prior to regional competition may play more than 18 holes at the regional site, nor may the school practice on Sunday at the regional site.

Australia's Pat Cash flies across the Centre Court at Wimbledon in an effort to reach a shot by Mats Wilander of Sweden. Cash won the match 4-6, 7-5, 6-4, 6-3.

Giants linebacker found guilty

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — New York Giants linebacker Byron Hunt has been found guilty of speeding and drunken driving by an Essex County judge, whose ruling follows a similar municipal decision.

Superior Court Judge William Harth Monday ordered 27-year-old Hunt to give up his New Jersey driving privileges for one year, pay $250 and spend 12 hours at an alcohol treatment center.

Seaver goes to Red Sox

BOSTON (AP) — Tom Seaver, claiming he had been "pitching like an idiot the last couple of weeks" said it was time "to go back to work" Monday as he checked in with the Boston Red Sox.

The 41-year-old right-hander with 306 career victories reported less than 48 hours after being acquired from the Chicago White Sox in a straight swap for outfielder Steve Lyons.

"I'm very happy to be here," Seaver told a news conference before donning a Boston uniform for the first time. "Up to this point, this has been a very difficult year for me. This is a breath of fresh air."

Grand jury checking Bias' death

To decide how to deal with questions about the athletic program and use of illegal drugs.

One task force on drugs will be headed by former U.S. Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti. It will take a look at the effectiveness of policies against possession of drugs on campus, drug counseling and education programs and how the university cooperates with outside law enforcement agencies.

Coach wants more drug education

SEATTLE (AP) — Seattle Seahawks Coach Chuck Knox wants to use education, not testing, to combat the drug problem.

Angered by the cocaine-related deaths of Cleveland Browns' safety Don Rogers and University of Maryland basketball star Len Bias, Knox on Monday called for the establishment of a drug program in the nation's schools starting in the first grade.

"So many times, we treat the symptoms rather than the cause," Knox said. "As a nation, it's a challenge to do something about the drug situation."

To Knox, that "something" is education, which he feels is the "ultimate answer" to a growing problem.

"We need to begin educating our children that young and continue to educate them all the way through school to show them just how harmful drugs are to human beings. If we believe that the goal of education is to prepare people for life, then we need to start preparing our young people in every school in America about the consequences of drugs," he said.

According to Knox, stricter drug testing in pro and college sports isn't the answer to the drug problem, because athletes have continually found ways "to get around" the tests.

Knox said the deaths of Rogers and Bias showed the deadliness of drugs, and hoped they would serve as a warning for other pro and college athletes.

"It scares me that something like this could happen to these two outstanding young men," he said. "This could have been their first time using drugs but it only takes one time with cocaine. Cocaine does kill, as evidenced in these deaths."

"I'm also angry, very angry. It angers me because I'd like to think that there was a way where this would not have happened. We certainly ought not to let these two men die in vain," he said.

Knox, preparing for his fourth season as Seahawks' coach and 14th in the NFL, said a drug education program would be costly, but cost-effective.

"We can still have the police and do things to these drug dealers," he said. "But what we need to do is eliminate the demand in this country for drugs through education. We need to dry up the market. If there aren't the customers out there who feel the need for drugs, then there really isn't going to be a market place for it."

The drug problem goes far beyond professional sports, according to Knox.

"It's society's problem, not just a problem of the NFL or the NBA," he said. "It is a problem from the corporate board rooms down in America."

Bosox walk by 'Jays'

By The Associated Press

The Boston Red Sox continued to dominate the Toronto Blue Jays at Fenway Park, winning 10-9 Monday night when Dwight Evans drew a bases-loaded walk with two outs in the 10th inning.

Boston won its fifth straight game and ended the Blue Jays' five-game winning streak. Toronto went 0-6 at Fenway last season and Monday night's game was the Blue Jays' first this year in Boston.

Barrett singled off Jim Acker, 2-4, and took second on a sacrifice bunt. Both had three hits and raised his major league-leading average to .382.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Yankees 3, Tigers 2

New York broke its record 10-game Yankee Stadium losing streak on Ron Hassey's tiebreaker, two-run double in the eighth inning.

Dennis Rasmussen, 8-2, scattered six hits in 8 2-3 innings. Reliever Dave Righetti gave up an RBI single to Tom Brookens before posting his 17th save.

The victory kept the Yankees from going the entire month of June without winning at home. The only other time a Yankee team lost 10 straight home games was in 1913 when they played in the Polo Grounds.

White Sox 4, Angels 3

Ozzie Guillen's bases-loaded triple keyed a four-run fifth inning, leading Chicago over California in White Sox Manager Jim Fregosi's triumphant return to Anaheim.

Mariners 3, Royals 2

Mark Langston scattered six hits over seven innings for his fifth straight victory and Scott Bradley drove in two runs with a double as Seattle beat Kansas City and handed the Royals their fourth straight loss.

Indians 8, A's 3

Joe Carter drove in two runs and scored twice as Cleveland took advantage of three Oakland errors to score four unearned runs.

Oakland errors in the fourth and fifth innings helped the Indians take a 5-0 lead.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Mets 7, Cardinals 0

Bob Ojeda scattered seven hits and Kevin Mitchell homered and singled twice, pacing New York over St. Louis.

Mitchell, Ray Knight and Rafael Santana each rapped two hits off John Tudor, 6-4, who gave up 10 hits in five innings. Tudor gave up his highest hit total in 53 starts during the past two seasons.

Padres 9, Astros 2

Garry Templeton's disputed three-run homer in the first inning sent San Diego past Houston.

Templeton hit a drive to left-center field that seemed to hit the top of the wall and bounce back onto the field. Third base umpire Jerry Crawford ruled the hit a home run, triggering an argument from Houston Manager Hal Lanier and several Astros players, and television replays seemed to show the ball had not cleared the fence.

Expos 4, Cubs 3

Relief pitcher Dan Schatzeder drew a two-out walk in the 11th inning, took third on a single by Tim Raines and scored on Mitch Webster's single, lifting Montreal over Chicago.

Braves 5, Giants 1

Dale Murphy hit the 250th home run of his career and Rick Mahler claimed his sixth straight victory as Atlanta downed San Francisco.

Murphy, who also had two singles, became the 85th player in major-league history to reach the 250-homer mark.

Mahier, 10-5, gave up eight hits, including Joel Youngblood's leadoff home run in the ninth inning. Mahier also hit a two-run single.

Reds 6, Dodgers 5

Jackson gets first hit

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Always the patient hitter, Bo Jackson may wait months for a ball more to his liking.

The Heisman Trophy winner made his much-awaited professional baseball debut Monday. He went 1-for-4, including an RBI single in his first at-bat for the class Double-A Southern League's Memphis Chicks.

After the single, in the first inning, the ball was taken out of the game for Jackson to keep.

They can put it back in play today.

"I don't want it," Jackson said. "Why? I've got enough at home in my trophy case."

Is there any ball he would like? Yes. His first "after I get to the Royals — if I get there."
