How's that? Water safety

Q. We learned in 1964 that there was too much trihalomethane, a carcinogen, in the water. What was done to reduce it, and what shape is the water in now?

A. The trihalomethane level has been reduced below 100 micrograms per liter, the Environmental Protection Agency safety standard, said public works director Tom Decell.

The reduction was achieved with the addition of ammonia to the treatment process, he said. The ammonia forms chloramines, which "tie up" the free chlorine and prevent its interaction with organic elements in the water, thus preventing the formation of trihalomethane.

Clements opposes tax hike

By HANK MURPHY
Staff Writer

Former Gov. Bill Clements said this morning he is "absolutely opposed" to Gov. Mark White's proposal to boost the state sales tax 1½ percent and added that he opposes a tax raise of any kind.

Clements, White's GOP opponent in November, was stumping in Big Spring today, first with a morning press conference at the Airpark and later at a reception at the Park Inn attended by about 100 people.

"I am absolutely opposed to any new taxes," Clements said emphatically. "We do not need any new taxes."

Clements said state revenues have surged 38 percent — $3 billion a year — since he left office in 1982. State spending, he said, needs to be brought under control.

"We've been spending money down there in Austin like a bunch of wild Indians," he said.

"I am just delighted that we have the kind of leadership in Austin, in the House, that's saying exactly the same thing. I'm not a voice in the wilderness."

Clements refused to say in what areas he would make cuts, saying it would be "highly presumptuous" as a candidate to "hibbit" about a job that belongs to the current state leaders.

The gubernatorial candidate did say, however, that he would avoid cuts in law enforcement, the Mental Health and Mental Retardation budget or the education budget.

Moreover, he said he would increase the law enforcement budget to help deal with the state's rise in crime and to build a better prison system.

Clements attacked White's plan to deny state workers a 3 percent pay raise scheduled for September and to roll back current salaries by another 3 percent.

"That's exactly the wrong thing to do," he said while claiming that White has raised his own salary 32 percent since taking office.

The former governor also blasted White for his poor relations with the White House. Clements said he has a good working relationship with President Reagan that will "guarantee" him access to the White House. Access, he said, "that's terribly important to the people of Texas."

"White does not have that" because of his "fetish about saying CLEMENTS page 2A

MARK WHITE...supports tax ban

Panel approves state income tax ban

By SCOTT ROTHSCHILD
Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A resolution proposing a constitutional ban on a personal state income tax won sudden approval Thursday from the House Ways and Means Committee.

The committee members voted 7-5 to throw out a proposed ban on separate income taxes.

The move came during the second day of the special legislative session to deal with the budget crisis and only one day after Gov. Mark White surprised a number of legislators by saying he, too, supports a constitutional ban on both a personal and corporate state income tax.

Chairman Stan Schlueter, D-

Killeen, said corporations wanted to be left out because they feared the ban would make them a target for specific industry taxes.

"They don't want to be singled out," Schlueter said.

Adding a ban on corporations, he said, also could jeopardize passage of the ban on state income taxes in the November general election.

"The opposition would demagogue that big corporations aren't paying enough taxes as it is," Schlueter said.

Told of the decision to leave out corporations, the chairman of Texans Against State Income Taxes said, "I feel a little bit betrayed."

Richard Ford of Dallas said the state must send a message to all corporations that it will remain a haven for business and the jobs they create. "Maybe there are some major corporations pulling some strings," he said, "but this is not any kind of grassroots move."

Building into capital that would be taxed under a state income tax allows businesses in Texas to accumulate the extra money needed to expand and create more jobs, he added.

Schlueter said he talked with a number of corporations, both big and small, about the proposed ban, and they did not want it in the bill.

Although the bill the committee voted out Thursday would likely pass by a 4-to-1 margin at the polls, he said, the proposed constitutional amendment was unlikely to win necessary Senate approval.

The House and Senate are at odds over how to fix the $3.5 billion deficit. The Senate wants a sales tax increase. But Schlueter, whose committee is the starting point for any tax legislation, said there was no chance of a tax bill during the special session.

The committee met on the floor of the House and voted 11-1 for the ban on a state personal income tax. Only state Rep. Daniel Morales, D-San Antonio, voted against it.

Schlueter said the bill that he co-signed with state Rep. Bill Haley, D-Center, is expected to be debated on the floor of the House next week.

'Community Under God' draws support

By SPENCER SANDOW
Staff Writer

Local residents have rallied in support of the "Community Under God" conference set for this weekend, said coordinator Everett Bender.

Evangelist Pat Robertson, when asked how he kept up with his worldwide ministry, television network and university, replied "When God ordains things to happen, it's no sweat," Bender said, adding that this "has sure been the case" with the local rally.

"With all of the volunteers who are working on every aspect of the weekend, combined with the tremendous amount of excitement from such diverse areas of our community, it is obvious that this is an event people are hoping will have a lasting, positive effect," he said.

"A Community Under God" will kick off with a rally and patriotic song service at 7:30 p.m. Friday. All events will take place at Dorothy Garrett Coliseum.

Harold Bredeson, author of "Yes Lord" and "Need a Miracle?" will speak.

A mayor's prayer breakfast will be served at 8 a.m. Saturday. Reservations can be made by 5 p.m. Friday at the Chamber of Commerce.

ABC's documentary film of a world leader's call to prayer with Anwar Sadat and Bredeson will be shown at the breakfast, and a prayer service will be conducted.

At 3 p.m. Sunday, a community church service will take place with a countywide choir and orchestra.

Local artist Sam Kelton has designed a logo for the project. Bill Sprinkle, owner of Speedy Printing, worked until 4 a.m. one morning to print the posters and cards in time for publication, Bender said.

The Big Spring Council of Garden Clubs, coordinated by Edna Womack and Anna May Angel, worked with Country Flowers to design floral arrangements for the event.

Son Shine Christian Bookstore has volunteered to be a central drop-off point for literature and telephone calls.

The Big Spring Christian Fellowship church staff is distributing literature and coordinating activities for the weekend.

Also, Jim Atkerson, director of Dorothy Garrett Coliseum, has been flexible and creative in offering his services and staff to insure the project's success, Bender said.

Several area merchants have donated portable signs and space for posters to promote the event. Churches have distributed bulletin inserts and mailings, and some have canceled their Sunday evening services to encourage parishioners to attend the community event, Bender said.

Tim Thornton, minister of music at the First Baptist church, is coordinating the countywide choir and orchestra.

In addition, ministers from surrounding West Texas communities have announced plans to bring caravans to the event, Bender said.

Father begins local equal rights group

By HANK MURPHY
Staff Writer

A local man has started a Big Spring chapter of Texas Fathers for Equal Rights, an advocacy and support group for divorced men that encompasses child support, custody and visitation, grandparent visitation and family law.

The organization began in the early 1970s, soon after the revision of the Texas Family Code, and has chapters in Austin, Dallas, Fort Worth, Wichita Falls, Waco and San Angelo.

C.W. Jordy of 2604 Hunter St., a divorced father himself, said he started the chapter here "because it's desperately needed."

The Big Spring chapter of Fathers for Equal Rights will have its first meeting Monday at Jordy's home. Anyone wishing to join the organization should call him at 267-1515, he said.

Child custody laws in Texas are hopelessly lopsided, Jordy maintains. Jordy, who lives with wife Debra and their two teen-age sons, said laws favor the parent who's granted custody, which nine out of 10 times is the mother, according to the Fathers for Equal Rights Austin chapter.

While going through the divorce of his second wife, Michaelle, last April, Jordy said he had wanted joint custody of their young son, Claude Wayne Jr.

"She agreed to think about it," he said. "But after she got through talking to her attorney — no way."

Moreover, Jordy's said his lawyer told him that District Judge James Gregg would never grant joint custody.

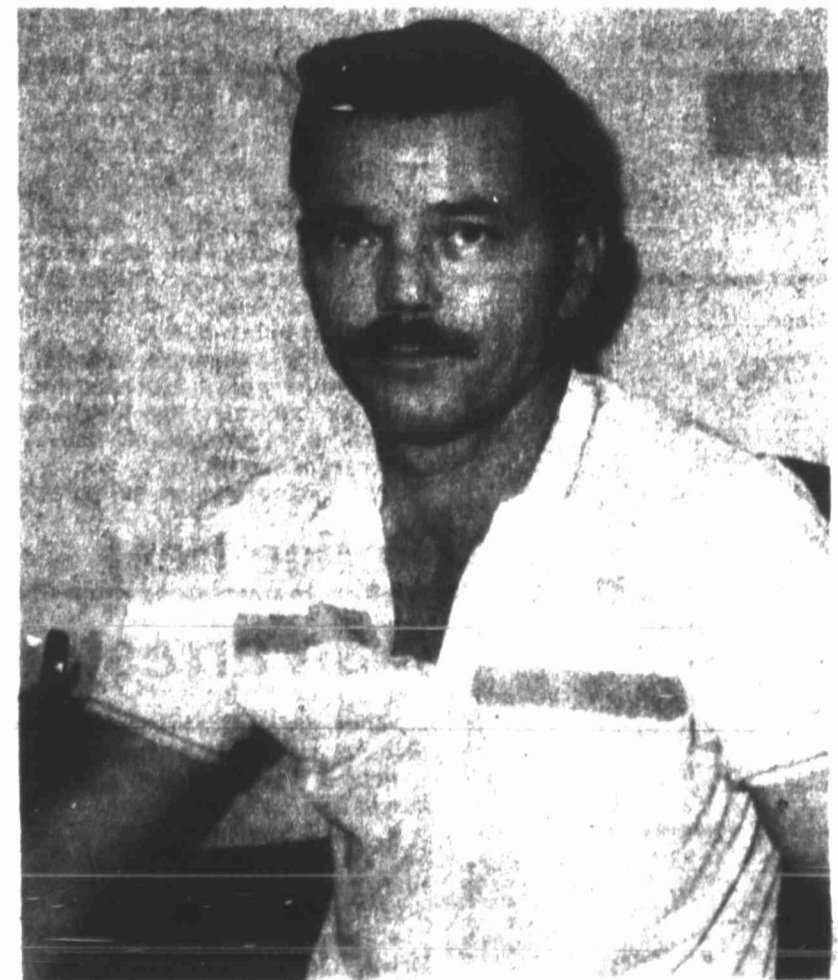

The court made Michaelle custodial parent. Jordy got visitation privileges that allow him to see his 2½-year-old son the first and third weekends of the month, and July 14 through July 31 on odd numbered years.

"The maximum I get to see my son is 58 days," Jordy said. That's not right. There's nothing fair about it."

Jordy said he also has a beef with rules governing child support.

"If the non-custodial parent gets in a position where they can't afford child support, (there's a series of laws) forcing them to pay," he

Herald buys Ballinger newspaper

The Big Spring Herald has purchased the Ballinger Ledger, Herald publisher Tom Watson announced.

The sale of the Ledger by West-Com Inc. of San Angelo was in conjunction with the sale of the Devil's River News, another West-Com newspaper, to the Del Rio News-Herald.

The Ledger was purchased by West-Com in 1982 from Tom Roy.

"Acquisition of the Ballinger Ledger is an exciting opportunity," Watson said. "There is a bond since both communities have an overwhelming interest in the Stacy Dam project."

"A pooling of resources adds strength to both newspapers, and it allows the Herald to use its production facilities more effectively to the benefit of both newspapers," he said.

No changes are planned to either paper, he said. Terms and purchase price were not disclosed.

The sale follows the purchase of the Herald by Garden State Corporation, effective May 2, from its former owner, Harte-Hanks Corp.

Circus couple defects

MIAMI — A husband and wife tightrope team with the famed Moscow Circus arrived in Miami today after defecting during the circus' visit to Buenos Aires.

"We are happy. We are happy ... very happy to be here," Bertalina Cazakova said in broken English.

"We are artists of the high-wire circus. We hope luck in America," the woman said shortly before an unmarked blue U.S. government car sped the couple away from Miami International Airport.

Perry Rivkind, district director of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service, said he picked up Ms. Cazakova and her husband, Nikolai Nikolaski, at the airport and took them to his office.

Navy plans new ports

WASHINGTON — The Navy plan to build new ports around the nation for its growing fleet of warships is steaming ahead after winning a key political test in the Senate.

The Senate voted 65-34 late Wednesday against an attempt to strip $141 million from next year's defense bill for construction of the first new naval ports in Everett, Wash., and Staten Island, N.Y.

The service wants to build new ports in those areas and along the Gulf and Atlantic coasts, and senators from those areas supported the plan Wednesday.

The Republican-run Senate made the decision as it considered a huge bill authorizing next year's Pentagon budget.

Seven going to Moscow

WASHINGTON — President Reagan, seeking a response to his latest "Star Wars" proposal, is sending seven negotiators to Moscow to step up preparations for a 1986 summit with Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

The U.S. delegation, which includes chief negotiator Max M. Kampelman and Pentagon strategist Richard N. Perle, is under instruction to solicit a Soviet reaction to the letter Reagan sent Gorbachev two weeks ago on anti-missile defenses and weapons cutbacks, a U.S. official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Wednesday night.

Expectant dad hits officer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — An expectant father rushing home to take his wife to the hospital was charged with vehicular homicide after his car collided with a car driven by a sheriff's officer, authorities said Wednesday.

Killed in the wreck Tuesday night was Roy E. Deering, 60, a Davidson County sheriff's lieutenant. His wife, Ramona Deering, 53, was critically injured, police said.

Traffic Lt. Michael Mitchell said Roger K. Hammers' car ran a red light and collided with the car driven by Deering.

Relative to Hammers' wife, Deborah, to Donohoe Hospital and she gave birth to a girl early Wednesday. Hammers, 28, was released from jail shortly after midnight.

William J. Schroeder, the world's longest-living artificial heart recipient, died Wednesday at Humana Hospital-Audubon in Louisville, Ky.

Strokes strike

Longest-living artificial heart patient dies

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — William J. Schroeder, who had hoped to gain 10 years of life with an artificial heart, died after 20 months filled with strokes and setbacks and two extra Christmases with his family. He was 54.

The plastic-and-metal pump he once likened to "an old-time threshing machine" kept him alive for 620 days. The second of five permanent artificial heart recipients, Schroeder lived the longest with the implant and on Wednesday became the last to die.

Dr. William C. DeVries, who implanted Schroeder's Jarvik-7 heart on Nov. 25, 1984, said he will remember Schroeder's battle to stay alive.

"The thing I remember most about Bill Schroeder is all of the things that kept him alive," he said.

"It's incredible to look at him and all these times we thought the heart would be the thing that would finish him off," said DeVries. "But he kept alive throughout it and a lot of that was due to his personal strength and his attitude."

Schroeder's death followed the fourth series of strokes he suffered since the implant. He appeared lethargic Monday night and Tuesday morning, stopped breathing and was resuscitated, DeVries said.

What next for artificial hearts?

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — The hope that artificial hearts would be as common and permanent a remedy as pacemakers and plastic valves dimmed with the death of William J. Schroeder, but his pioneering surgeon plans to carry on.

Schroeder, who died Wednesday, was the youngest and last survivor among the five men who had traded in their failed heart for a plastic-and-metal Jarvik-7 pump.

"We're ready to go and move on again," Dr. William C. DeVries, who has federal permission to perform another three implants, said at a news conference Wednesday night. "We're very anxious to find another patient."

Schroeder's family, who had watched him suffer multiple strokes and celebrated two extra Christmases with him, backed DeVries' determination.

"This shouldn't be considered the end of the artificial heart, but rather a continuation of the beginning," his son Mel said at the news conference.

However, many surgeons have seen the devices not as permanent replacements but as a means to keep patients alive until a human donor heart is found.

Presbyterian-University Hospital in Pittsburgh, for example, has performed five implants, all temporary, of the Jarvik-7 artificial heart.

Even its inventor, Dr. Robert Jarvik, said last year that temporary use of his invention offers the greatest hope for patients at this time.

Former agent defects

MOSCOW — A fugitive ex-CIA agent charged with selling U.S. intelligence secrets to Moscow has been given political asylum in the Soviet Union, the government newspaper Izvestia said today.

Edward Lee Howard was "given the right of residence in the U.S.S.R. for political reasons" and out of humanitarian concerns, the paper said in a brief announcement on its back page.

Howard, 34, worked for the CIA from January 1961 until June 1963, when he was fired, according to the FBI.

According to State Department records, his last post was at the U.S. Embassy in Moscow, where he operated under the cover of being a budget analyst.

Howard was believed to be the first American to defect to the Soviet Union since the 1960s.

30 injured in rampage

VITORIA, Spain — Several thousand people protesting the expulsion of suspected Basque separatists by France went on a rampage early today, throwing gasoline bombs and rocks and injuring at least 10 policemen, officials said.

An estimated 20 demonstrators were also injured in the melee, which took place as crowds in this Basque city in northern Spain were celebrating an annual fiesta.

There were no reports of arrests.

Hostages moved

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Interior Minister Abdallah Rassi said today the kidnappers of American and French hostages have been moving their captives from one secret prison to another in Lebanon.

He also said in an hour-long interview with The Associated Press that Syrian President Hafez Assad's government was determined to help free the hostages.

Discovery shakes theory

NAIROBI, Kenya — The discovery of a skull belonging to a man-like creature who roamed northern Kenya 2.5 million years ago will force scientists to reconsider widely held theories about modern man's ancestors, experts say.

"It (the find) is going to stimulate ... a lot of questions about things that have been taken for granted, about things that have been believed by some of our colleagues and taught ... for the past 10 years," said Richard Leakey, Kenya's national museums director and a member of the expedition that discovered the fossil in August 1985.

The find, called the "black skull" was unveiled at a Wednesday news conference by scientists who say it challenges the theory that 3 million years ago there was only one species of primitive man.

Boy saves girlfriend from choking Newscope

LYNN, Mass. (AP) — Five-year-old Brent Meldrum can't pronounce Heimlich maneuver — he calls it "the time-life remover" — but he knew how to use it to save the life of a pal choking on a piece of candy.

"She (turned) almost full blue," Brent said Wednesday of 6-year-old Tanya Branden, who got a piece of hard candy lodged in her throat. "My mother was screaming at me to get away from her."

"I ignored her. I knew what do to. I said to my mother 'I saw this on the ABC situation comedy starring Robert Guillaume as Lt. Gov. Benson DuBois.'

"Benson was choking," Brent recalled. "His cheek was blown up like a balloon and a different guy went behind him, put his arms around, squeezed him, lifted him up and saved Benson."

So Brent, who weighs 40 pounds, slipped his arms around Tanya from behind Monday evening, clasped his hands together and squeezed, lifting the 41-pound girl off the floor.

"I lifted her up and banged her on her feet. She bended over and she coughed and it plopped out," the youngster said.

As a crowd of reporters descended on the little hero, Brent was cool about the publicity. "I'm not even 6 yet!" he said, mildly puffed.

"Everybody's calling me. When I'm watching cartoons its brrrrng, brrrrng, brrrrng," said Brent, who says he wants to be a fireman, policeman, farmer and plumber when he grows up.

"I saved a little girl's life. I feel good."

Tanya said in a small voice that when she was choking "I didn't think anything. Uh-uh." But afterward, she said, "I said thank you. I'll never forget this, until, for the rest of my life."

"Uh-uh," she said. "He's my boyfriend and my hero. But I never let him kiss me."

Brent's mother, Susan, 27, said friends, relatives and strangers have been visiting and calling with congratulations.

She said she was in her bedroom when her only child was about to save a life.

"I heard Brent ask Tanya if she was choking, so I went into the room to see why he was asking her that. I looked at her and her face was bright, bright red. Brent got behind her. ... I screamed at him to get away from her. I started to go into a panic and was ready to run next door," she said.

But in seconds Brent had expelled the candy from his friend's throat.

"He's pretty strong. He takes karate and everything. He's overly confident. But thank God for that."

Band rehearsal starts Monday

Members of the Big Spring High School Steer Band should report for summer rehearsal at 9 a.m. Monday in the band hall, said band director Ricky Mitchell.

Information will be distributed then about the summer rehearsal schedule, uniforms and performances.

Instruments will be required at the first rehearsal, Mitchell said. Students who need school instruments may pick them up this week from 9 a.m. to noon or from 1 to 4 p.m.

Mitchell can be contacted at the band hall at 267-7463.

More food assistance available

A recent release in federal funds will result in more food assistance and nutritional education for low-income women, infants and children through the Texas Supplemental Food Program for Women, Infants and Children.

Officials of the local organization are encouraging those who may be eligible to apply for services.

To be eligible, applicants must have health- or nutrition-related problems and meet specific low-income criteria, according to a news release.

Applicants can contact the program clinic at 201 Lancaster in the Big Spring-Howard County Health Department. The clinic is open from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Mondays only.

Participants receive a monthly supply of nutritious foods such as milk, eggs, fruit juice, iron-fortified cereal and infant formula.

Monthly nutritional education classes also are provided so participants can learn about the relationship between health and good nutrition, and how to buy and prepare nutritious foods.

Low-income infants, children to age 5, and pregnant or breastfeeding women are the most vulnerable to the effects of malnutrition, the release said.

Project aims to repave Highway 80

By SCOTT FITZGERALD
Staff Writer

Howard County motorists can expect to journey on smoother roadways beginning in October if improvement projects undertaken by the state highway department go according to plan.

Construction will begin next week on Loop 402 or what is commonly known as Highway 80, consisting of Third and Fourth streets.

Bob Lindley, temporary Big Spring resident engineer for the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation, said the resurfacing project will begin with the removal of 2 1/2 to 3 inches of existing pavement.

The new pavement "will be a big improvement for Big Spring — especially downtown," Lindley said.

Curb gutters will be excavated in the downtown area to allow a smoother runoff flow when it rains, Lindley said.

The 4.7-mile-long project, which extends from Interstate 20 east of Big Spring to I-20 west of the city, was awarded to Strain Brothers Inc. of San Angelo at a cost of $668,815, he said.

The project will temporarily disrupt traffic through Third and Fourth streets, Lindley said.

Construction is expected to be complete by mid-September or early October, he said.

The highway department also will begin work next week on a section of Highway 350, six miles northeast of Big Spring.

The work will entail raising the road grade 5 feet "to keep water from running over the roadway," Lindley said.

The estimated two-month project was awarded to West Texas Roads of Big Spring at a cost of $212,872, he said.

Motorists who travel on Highway 350 will be detoured to FM 669 for about four miles, Lindley said.

Tragedy hits Little League team

PUTNAM — After an early exit from a state tournament at Waco and an outing at Six Flags Over Texas, members of the Pecos Little League baseball team were on their way home when tragedy struck in a construction zone on Interstate 20.

One of two Chevrolet Suburbans carrying the 14-member squad of 11- and 12-year-olds overturned about 1:30 p.m. Wednesday in a construction zone on Interstate 20, killing the 41-year-old driver and injuring nine youths, one seriously.

The accident occurred just west of Putnam, 35 miles east of Abilene, the Texas Department of Public Safety said. The team's destination, Pecos, is also on I-20, about 250 miles southwest of Abilene.

Officials say illegal alien beaten

PRESIDIO — Investigation into the July 24 beating of an illegal alien by three heavily armed men has failed to link the attack with a controversial paramilitary group that patrolled to stop aliens and drugs from crossing the Mexican border, officials say.

Presidio County deputies arrested three Odessa men near the border six days later. But Chief Deputy Gary Brown said the men denied affiliation with Civilian Materiel Assistance, the paramilitary group. They have not been charged in connection with the beating.

They were charged with unlawfully carrying weapons, Brown said.

Prison locks down after stabbing

ROSHARON — Inmates remained in their cells at the Darrington Unit after a stabbing and the discovery of two homemade weapons prompted a lockdown, officials said.

Guards Wednesday searched cells for more weapons after the lockdown began that morning at the maximum security prison, Texas Department of Corrections spokesman David Nunnelee said. The prison in Brazoria County houses about 1,700 inmates.

Authorities called the lockdown after an inmate was stabbed in the thigh Tuesday night as he was being escorted to the showers, Nunnelee said.

Willie Anderson, 30, who is serving a life sentence for theft of property out of Dallas County, was stabbed with a spear-like weapon made of iron, he said. Anderson was treated and released at the prison.

Pit bull ordinance growing trend

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Unwelcome mats are being put out in some communities for pit bull terriers, sometimes bred to participate in illegal fight-to-the-death confrontations where money is wagered.

The Idabel City Council took up the issue Tuesday, an action observers said was a response to attacks by the dogs on people and other animals.

The Tahlequah City Council voted June 2 to prohibit pit bull terriers from the city limits, but the effect of that ordinance has been delayed by a court challenge filed by the Endangered Breed Association.

Jean Fletcher, a spokesman for the American Dog Owners Association in Castleton, N.Y., told the Tulsa World newspaper that the bans enacted by about 10 other communities nationwide are misguided.

She said her organization condemns the illegal gambling events for which pit bulls are often bred. But she said that public education, stronger vicious dog laws and better enforcement of anti-dogfighting laws are preferable to banning a specific breed from a community.

"There are other dogs just as prolific a killer," said Roger Scott of the Green Country Pit Bull Terrier Club.

He said cities should demand that vicious dogs be chained and kept in escape-proof pens.

"It's like owning a gun," he said. "The owner of a vicious dog has to take responsibility."

Idabel Mayor Rex Helms, who has proposed the ban in Idabel, said the ban was brought up after pit bull terriers attacked a 14-year-old girl and killed two pets.

"She was just walking down the street," Helms said of the teenager. "If it hadn't been for a neighbor, she would have been killed."

"For some reason this dog has become popular," Helms said. "I don't know why. One man had six. You see them walking the dogs with chains up and down the streets."

Texarkana, Ark., officials enacted a vicious dog ordinance two months ago after a pit bull terrier escaped from a pen and killed a neighbor's dog. City commissioners in Arkansas City, Kan., also scheduled a vote on a vicious dog ordinance.

Report: Walking stairs lengthens life

BOSTON (AP) — What would happen if a man climbed 5,000 stairs — about the same as sauntering to the top of the Empire State Building three times — each week for 45 years?

one of several commenting on a major study on exercise and health published in the journal last spring.

"This was a tongue-in-cheek response to the article, but I think the message is one that has some validity for the average person," Herrington said. "If people wanted to take this letter as encouragement to walk rather than ride elevators at work, I would be very pleased."

way at age 35 and keeps it up through age 80 will live an average 2½ years longer than a sedentary man, the study concluded.

Petty and Herrington applied these findings to stair climbing. Their calculations work this way:

Climbing 70 stairs expends 28 calories of energy. This means it's necessary to walk up 5,000 stairs a week to get rid of 2,000 calories. Since there are 22 steps between floors at the hospital where they work, this amounts to about 228 flights of stairs each week, or 38 floors a day during a six-day work week.

stairs. This means it would take 41.7 minutes per week to expend 2,000 calories, or 36.1 hours a year.

According to the previous research, a man who exercises of 2,000 calories a week between ages 35 and 80 lives roughly 2.5 years, or 916.2 days, longer than an inactive man. It would take 101.6 days climbing stairs — with eight hours per day set aside for sleeping — to gain the 916.2 extra days of longevity. That's a net gain of 814.6 days or 13,034 waking hours or 782,044 minutes.

This gain requires climbing 228 flights a week, 52 weeks a year, for 45 years. That's 533,520 stories. Dividing minutes gained by stories climbed works out to 1.47 minutes of waking life gained for each story climbed. At 22 stairs per story, each step increases waking life by about four seconds.

The answer, if a pair of calculator-wielding doctors can be believed, is that he might live an extra 2½ years. That's an additional four seconds of waking life for each step taken.

Actually, the doctors who came up with those figures don't take them entirely seriously. But they do believe their computations contain a sober message about the health benefits of exercise.

Drs. Brent G. Petty and David M. Herrington of Johns Hopkins University outlined the statistics in a letter in today's New England Journal of Medicine. Theirs was

The two began their calculations after Dr. Ralph S. Paffenbarger Jr. of Stanford presented research on nearly 17,000 Harvard graduates. He found that men who burned up 2,000 calories a week in such activities as walking, sports or stair climbing had death rates one-quarter to one-third lower than the least active people in the study.

A man who starts exercising this

The doctors recruited 15 physicians, nurses and administrators to figure out how long it would take to do all this stair climbing. They found that the volunteers averaged just under 37 seconds to climb 70 about four seconds.

Ways to cut water losses and save money

By DON RICHARDSON
County Extension Agent

Now that water is being rationed in Big Spring it is more important than ever to be careful in watering lawns. Your conservation efforts help solve the community's water shortage, while cutting costs for yourself.

Right now, the city of Big Spring charges $1.65 per 1000 gallons of water for residents inside the city limits. The charge is $3.06 for those outside. This translates to about one dollar and two dollars, respectively, to apply an inch of water on 1,000 square feet of lawn. If we assume that an average size is around 1,500 square feet for the front lawn and 2,000 square feet for the back, then each inch of water over the whole lawn will cost about $3.50 (twice that for households outside the city limits).

Lawn water use (bermuda grass, well cared for) estimated for Big Spring is one to three inches a day. Although the seasonal water requirements is about 40 inches, a portion of that can be supplied by the rainfall Howard County usually gets. A typical household — taking all facts into consideration — should have water bills about $40 to $35 higher in July and August than during winter months. This will vary relative to your yard's size in respect to our typical size. If your bills are higher you should be able to lower them with better management.

"One good method to lower water use is to water at night," says Joe Henggeler, Irrigation Specialist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. "The wind is less then and so there will be less evaporation and wind drift. Also, the relative humidity in Big Spring drops from about 75% in the early morning to 30% in the late afternoon. Everyone with an evaporative cooler knows how the drier, low humidities greatly effect evaporation."

A second important step in effecting good water management is matching watering amounts to the soil. Most of residential Big Spring is located in Potter, Mobeetic fine sandy loam and Mansker loam soils. These soils do not hold much water. However a well-trained lawn will have roots much deeper than what most people expect — at least three feet. The combination of soil type and rooting depth of lawns means that two and a half inches of water can be stored. So even during the high water-use months of July and August, water intervals of 8 and 9 days are possible if each watering reappplies this two and a half inches. If a lawn has previously been watered with small frequent irrigations the roots will be shallow. Deep roots must be trained over time. Slowly increasing the amount while increasing the interval will develop the deep roots that are important for a healthy lawn.

The type of sprinkler equipment is important. An automated system is ideal since the sprinkler heads are placed for ideal distribution and a timer can turn the system on in the wee hours of night. For those that hand move their sprinklers attached to a garden hose, placing the sprinkler at the wetted fringe of the last setting will insure even coverage. Sprinklers that throw the water out at low angles are less likely to have wind loss.

If your lawn is not the deep lush green that you would like it to be despite your efforts to keep it well-watered, it might be a nutrient imbalance. Iron and nitrogen are likely suspects, especially the latter which moves out readily in soils like ours. If you suspect this is the case, bring in a composite soil sample. Do this by taking soil samples in locations down to a foot in depth, mix them together and bring in about a pint worth to my office in the courthouse. This will be forwarded to the Extension Water and Soils Testing Laboratory at Texas A&M University. The charge is $17.00.

The most likely culprit in water loss is deep watering. Do not put over 2 1/2 inches on at once. Placing a few tuna fish cans around the sprinkler is a good gauging method. Since they are about 2 1/2 inches deep, water until most of them around your sprinkler are full. Knock off about 25% of the time it took, since the next overlapping set can be counted on to provide some of the water, and that is your ideal watering time. Henggeler concurs with this and adds, "To get all edges of the lawn well, some amount of water is going to end up on the sidewalk, driveways and streets. A little waste here is necessary and is usually a lot less than what it appears. The big loss occurs when sprinklers are left for long periods of time or overnight."

A good tool for every homeowner is described by Henggeler: "A metal rod or wooden dowel can always be used to see how deep you are wetting. Push its end into the ground; it will come to a stop when the wet-dry interface is met," he says. Do this several places in your yard to also check the evenness of your watering."

God's instrument of instruction (The Bible) is the only religious instrument that is authorized by God. To use another we have neither precedent nor command nor authority from God. God's instrument secures inspired instructions both perpetual and unlimited to time, and uniformity. By this glorious skillfully constructed book offered to God's creatures is the same in all places, and for all time. To past generations it has spoken the same inspired language and presented the same inspired ideas which it addressed and exhibits to the present race, and to future generations it will present no variation. Like its unchangeable Author, it is the same today, yesterday and forever. Here the never changing nature of God shines forth in all its unclouded majesty. How unlike the disagreeing, conflicting and every changing instruments of religious instruction invented by men. The Bible displays the uniformity of the divine conduct towards all God's offspring. He offers to all his human creation to delight and lavish themselves, all from the same source. It contains no conflicting, confounding, separating, and dividing creed, just truth!

Male breast growth usually temporary

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I have noticed in the last few years enlargement of my son's breasts. He's 12, weighs 97, and is 5 feet. Two pediatricians have seen him, the last one six months ago. They say it is "not too much." I know he is ashamed. Classmates make fun, asking, "what about a bra?" He used to enjoy swimming, but he'll only do it now with a T-shirt. I am worried. I will really appreciate your help. — Mrs. W.

Males make female hormones, so they do have breast tissue. During puberty, before the balance of male and female hormones has been established, up to 70 percent of normal boys will have some enlargement. It usually regresses in one to two years.

Your son appears to be healthy. He was examined by two pediatricians. Patience is usually rewarded in such matters, but if you feel strongly that there is potential for psychological damage, you can seek immediate help. If the breasts are inordinately large, then you can discuss it with a surgeon to get an opinion regarding possible tissue removal.

Sometimes, gynecomastia is an indication of problems such as testicular or adrenal gland tumors interfering with the hormone balance. For this reason, the doctor should take a look at a youngster with extra large breasts. Gynecomastia can also occur later in life. Certain drugs can cause enlargement, marijuana being a notable example.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I am concerned about a patient who has some form of epileptic seizures, and who also has angina pectoris. The question is whether the drug, Dilantin, prescribed for the seizures, could have an ill effect on the angina. By "ill effect" I mean could it cause the angina attacks to be more frequent or more severe? — Mrs. A.A.

I can find no reference to implicate phenytoin (Dilantin) in worsening of angina pectoris. In toxic dosage or if given too rapidly into a vein, it might cause heart rhythm disturbance. But in the ordinary dosage used for treatment of epilepsy, it shouldn't affect the angina.

If, as I suspect from your note, you are a nurse caring for a patient at home, report the worsening angina. There can be many reasons for it. Your other questions are answered in the angina booklet. Other readers may get a copy by writing me and enclosing a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope and $1.25.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I am 33 years of age and have cured myself of the illness bulimia. It had been an ongoing thing for more than 12 years. I'm scared out of my mind as to the damage I've done to myself. My swallowing isn't right. Will I ever be right or will my years be limited? Please let me find some peace of mind. I'm the only one who knows about this. Even my husband doesn't suspect anything. — Young and Stupid (once).

Bulimia is the practice of bingeing and purging food to avoid weight gain. Once bulimia is over it has no other effect on your body. But I have to backpedal here in your case.

You tell me you are having trouble swallowing. I could make a case, based on that, for scar formation in your esophagus. In the purging part of bulimia, the corrosiveness of the stomach acid brought up can cause that. I don't know for sure.

I'm happy you took things into your own hands. Now that you have resumed sound nutrition, I'm sure your lifespan will be normal. But your swallowing problem has to be investigated. If there is scar tissue, that can be corrected.

You tell me in your longer

(edited) letter that you feel shame. You have no reason to feel this way now. You have every reason to feel pride. You have overcome a distressing illness. Be examined.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: What is the cause of blood in the semen? I'm 55 and sexually active. — R.S.

Blood in the semen almost never means trouble. Usually, it is from a small surface vessel broken in the seminal vesicle, the sperm storage container. If you see your doctor, he can put your mind at ease while he looks for some of the more unusual causes of the symptom. No one can ever give you 100 percent assurance about that without an examination, though.

For a better understanding of colitis and other intestinal ailments, their causes and treatment, write to Dr. Donohue in care of the Big Spring Herald, P.O. Box 11310, Chicago, IL 60611, for a copy of his booklet, "Colitis and Kindred Complaints." Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and $0 cents.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his columns whenever possible.

Wife doesn't like husband digging in purse

DEAR ABBY: Please print my letter as soon as possible. I want your opinion of the kind of man I discovered I married. You can bet I will gladly hand it over for him to read.

Once again, my husband has gone through my purse! The first time he did it I was outraged. I felt violated — I couldn't believe he could be so low-down, sneaky and deceitful. He promised it would never happen again. But it did.

I asked him exactly what he was looking for, and he said, "Oh — just things." Abby, I am a decent and honorable woman. I've done nothing to make him suspect otherwise, but apparently he doesn't trust me — otherwise why would he go through my purse? It's a typical housewife's purse — wallet, checkbook, keys, hairbrush, makeup and assorted coupons.

Worse yet, he actually believes that he has the right to do this. He says he owes me no apologies; he's convinced that he as done nothing wrong.

Abby, I would never, never, never go through my husband's wallet. To do so would show a lack of trust and confidence. An insult!

I trusted this man. Is he sick? Is there any good reason for his doing what he did — not once (that I know of) but twice?

DISILLUSIONED

DEAR DISILLUSIONED: People who respect and trust each other do not go through their personal belongings looking for "things." Obviously your moral values differ if he thinks he has the "right" to look through your purse — particularly after having been told that you felt violated. I would be suspicious of a person who sneakily looks for "things." I am reminded of a French saying: "A man is not likely to look behind a door unless he's stood there himself."

DEAR ABBY: I have never written so much as a letter to the editor, but when I read about the Cleveland 9-year-old who threw a temper tantrum every time his mother had a date, I had to share how I handled the same problem.

I was divorced six years ago when my twin daughters were 5. When I finally felt up to "dating" again, my girls went through the crying, clinging and temper tantrums. I put up with it for a while, then I had a brainstorm. One day when they asked if they could go play with some of their friends, I threw a tantrum — complete with kicking, screaming, crying — the whole bit. They were startled, to say the least. But it initiated a conversation about how Mommy needs to go out and play with her friends, and since adults work all day, they usually play in the evenings. I emphasized that I always made sure they were well taken care of, but I needed to play, just like they did, or I would get grouchy.

My daughters are now 11, and if I get grouchy, they say, "Mommy needs to play," which is enough to bring on the giggles about Mom's "temper tantrum." Thank God for kids!

Carlton says it's over

Lefty quits with 4 Cy Youngs and 319 wins

By The Associated Press
Steve Carlton rarely talked about his accomplishments. Instead, he let his numbers speak of his success.

With a hard-breaking slider and a penchant for blocking out distractions, Carlton established himself as one of the greatest left-handed pitchers in major-league history.

He was the only man to win the Cy Young Award four times and his 319 victories are the 11th on the all-time list. When he announced his retirement Wednesday from the San Francisco Giants at age 41, Carlton ranked in the Top 20 in six career categories — including second with 4,000 strikeouts.

Yet Carlton rolled up most of his Hall of Fame numbers during a 22-year career shrouded in silence. Carlton stopped speaking to reporters eight years ago, claiming he was being treated unfairly, and would reply "Policy is policy" when asked to talk to the media.

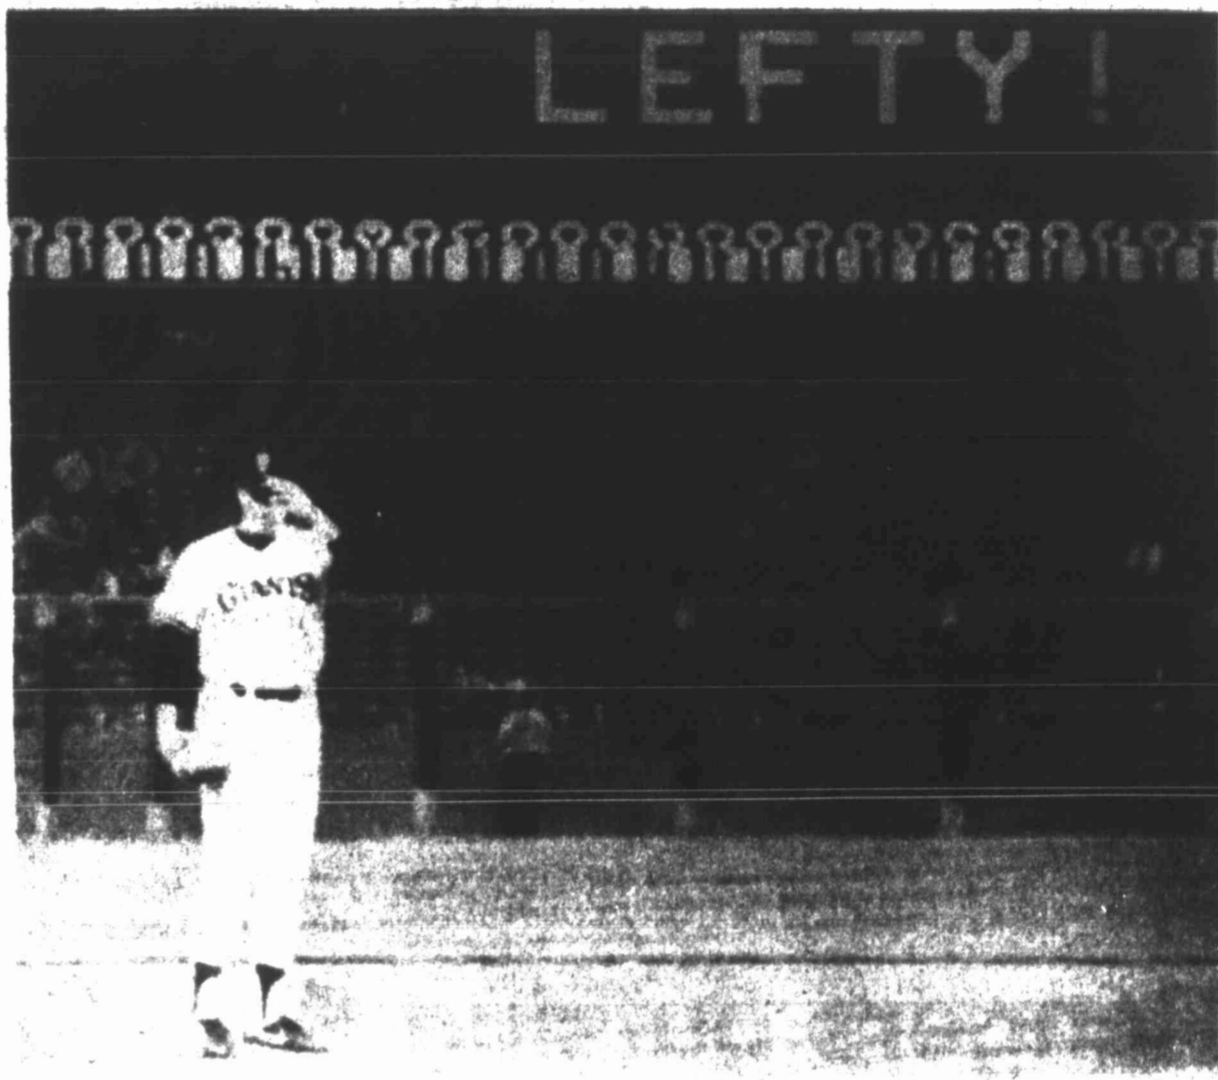

Carlton broke that posture in July, when the Giants signed him after he was released following 14½ glorious years with the Philadelphia Phillies.

"You can't make a move like this and not talk to the media. I can't say if it will continue in the future," Carlton said at the time.

It didn't. He did not speak to reporters during his month-long stint with San Francisco, during which he was often hit hard, going 1-3 with a 5.10 earned run average. Nor did Carlton talk with reporters on the day he announced his retirement, instead releasing a statement through the team.

"Upon reflection, I realized that I've reached a career milestone (4,000 strikeouts) never before accomplished by a pitcher spending his entire career in one league," the statement said.

Carlton recorded his 4,000th strikeout on Tuesday night against Cincinnati, during which he was the losing pitcher as he pitched 2-3 innings and runs on seven hits who has struck out 4,209, is the only pitcher ahead of Carlton.

"Further, I realize that the San Francisco Giants are committed to the younger players in their organization, specifically the talented young men on their pitching staff," Carlton's statement said.

Carlton went a combined 5-11 with a 5.89 this year. He retired with a career record of 319-226 and a 3.11 lifetime earned run average.

Carlton, always in top physical shape, began this season anxious to show that last year was mistake, and the Phillies were willing to give him that chance. In 1985, he was 1-8 and went on the disabled list for the first time in his career. Despite his poor record, Carlton's ERA was a respectable 3.33.

But Carlton never regained the form that made him a 10-time All-Star. He lost to long-time nemesis Cincinnati on Opening Day and did not win until April 23 in his fourth start. Carlton then lost his next three decisions.

As his losses mounted, speculation grew regarding Carlton's future. Even though he would show flashes of dominance and ex-

Cowboys may get 'dream backfield'

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Herschel Walker's agent said the New Jersey Generals running back will announce at his news conference today that he wants to explore the opportunity of playing for the Dallas Cowboys.

Agent Peter Johnson told the Dallas Morning News Wednesday, "Herschel is free and clear to negotiate with the Cowboys. We hope he is in uniform as soon as possible."

Johnson said Walker had made the decision to play for the Cowboys in the last two days.

Johnson said Walker would announce today that "he would like to explore the opportunity of playing for the Cowboys."

Dallas Cowboys President Tex Schramm claimed to have no special knowledge of what Herschel Walker would say at a news conference in New York today, and said he was as anxious as anyone else to find out.

Dallas holds Walker's rights in the National Football League and ever since the announcement that the USFL was suspending play, training camp has been alive with talk of Walker and Tony Dorsett playing in the same Cowboys backfield this fall.

The Cowboys have the rights to Walker because they chose him in the fifth round of the 1985 draft, after he had already finished one season with the New Jersey Generals of the USFL.

Walker was eligible for the draft then for the first time because he had left college a year early to enter pro football.

Walker is under a personal services contract to New Jersey owner Donald Trump, but Trump said Wednesday he planned to allow Walker to negotiate with the Cowboys if that was his wish.

The Dallas Morning News reported today that Walker had told friends he wants to play with the Cowboys this season.

Dorsett said Wednesday he sees "awesome" potential for the Cowboys if Walker comes aboard.

"The more you think about this becoming a reality, it could be a pretty awesome backfield. I can appreciate the man's talents," Dorsett said.

Both Dorsett and Walker won the Heisman Trophy, symbolic of the nation's outstanding college football player. Dorsett played at Pittsburgh and Walker at Georgia.

"It would put pressure on the defense. You can't key on one guy when you have two guys who are equal threats. For sure, it would draw a lot of attention," Dorsett said.

Paul Hackett, the Cowboys' new pass offense coordinator, said adding Walker to the team "would just pick up the level of our performance. This is an exciting prospect. Tony and Herschel — you're talking about guys who every time they touch the ball can put it in the end zone. You're not talking about four or five yards."

In addition to his running skills, Walker is an excellent receiver. Dorsett's use as a receiver has also increased; he caught 97 passes over the past two seasons.

Although the 5-11, 185-pound Dorsett and the 6-1, 220-pound Walker are tailbacks, the Cowboys have indicated they would play them together.

"A backfield of Tony Dorsett by himself means a great deal," the News quoted Walker as saying. "People get very excited just to see him play. But I think we would be great together."

Dorsett has developed a reputation as a fast, elusive running style. Walker, a world-class sprinter, is known as a fast, straight-ahead runner who drives through defenders.

"He's a strong runner, not a very elusive guy," Dorsett said. "He has a lot of explosion and power and has the ability to take off and leave you. He doesn't juke and jive. But I'm sure he can do that and will have to do that. This league is pretty serious. You have to make them miss you."

Male breast growth usually temporary

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I have noticed in the last few years enlargement of my son's breasts. He's 12, weighs 97, and is 5 feet. Two pediatricians have seen him, the last one six months ago. They say it is "not too much." I know he is ashamed. Classmates make fun, joking, "what about a bra?" He used to enjoy swimming, but he'll only do it now with a T-shirt. I am worried. I will really appreciate your help. — Mrs. W.

Dr. Donohue

Males make female hormones, so they do have breast tissue. During puberty, before the balance of male and female hormones has been established, up to 70 percent of normal boys will have some enlargement. It usually regresses in one to two years.

Your son appears to be healthy. He was examined by two pediatricians. Patience is usually rewarded in such matters, but if you feel strongly that there is potential for psychological damage, you can seek immediate help. If the breasts are inordinately large, then you can discuss it with a surgeon to get an opinion regarding possible tissue removal.

Sometimes, gynecomastia is an indication of problems such as testicular or adrenal gland tumors interfering with the hormone balance. For this reason, the doctor should take a look at a youngster with extra large breasts. Gynecomastia can also occur later in life. Certain drugs can cause enlargement, marijuana being a notable example.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I am concerned about a patient who has some form of epileptic seizures, and who also has angina pectoris. The question is whether the drug, Dilantin, prescribed for the seizures, could have an ill effect on the angina. By "ill effect" I mean could it cause the angina attacks to be more frequent or more severe? — Mrs. A.A.

I can find no reference to implicate phenytoin (Dilantin) in worsening of angina pectoris. In toxic dosage or if given too rapidly into a vein, it might cause heart rhythm disturbance. But in the ordinary dosage used for treatment of epilepsy, it shouldn't affect the angina.

If, as I suspect from your note, you are a nurse caring for a patient at home, report the worsening angina. There can be many reasons for it. Your other questions are answered in the angina booklet. Other readers may get a copy by writing me and enclosing a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope and $1.25.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I am 33 years of age and have cured myself of the illness bulimia. It had been an ongoing thing for more than 12 years. I'm scared out of my mind as to the damage I've done to myself. My swallowing isn't right. Will I ever be right or will my years be limited? Please let me find some peace of mind. I'm the only one who knows about this. Even my husband doesn't suspect anything. — Young and Stupid (once).

Bulimia is the practice of bingeing and purging food to avoid weight gain. Once bulimia is over it has no other effect on your body. But I have to backpedal here in your case.

You tell me you are having trouble swallowing. I could make a case, based on that, for scar formation in your esophagus. In the purging part of bulimia, the corrosiveness of the stomach acid brought up can cause that. I don't know for sure.

I'm happy you took things into your own hands. Now that you have resumed sound nutrition, I'm sure your lifespan will be normal. But your swallowing problem has to be investigated. If there is scar tissue, that can be corrected.

You tell me in your longer

(edited) letter that you feel shame. You have no reason to feel this way now. You have every reason to feel pride. You have overcome a distressing illness. Be examined.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: What is the cause of blood in the semen? I'm 55 and sexually active. — R.S.
Blood in the semen almost never means trouble. Usually, it is from a small surface vessel broken in the seminal vesicle, the sperm storage container. If you see your doctor, he can put your mind at ease while he looks for some of the more unusual causes of the symptom. No one can ever give you 100 percent assurance about that without an examination, though.

For a better understanding of colitis and other intestinal ailments, their causes and treatment, write to Dr. Donohue in care of the Big Spring Herald, P.O. Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his columns whenever possible.

Joy and Don Chandler, however, overcame the heat to catch 38 sandies in the one pound range. The water temperature is 73 degrees, and the lake elevation is 532.3 feet, just below normal.

Carlton says it's over

Lefty quits with 4 Cy Youngs and 319 wins

By The Associated Press
Steve Carlton rarely talked about his accomplishments. Instead, he let his numbers speak of his success.

With a hard-breaking slider and a penchant for blocking out distractions, Carlton established himself as one of the greatest left-handed pitchers in major-league history.

He was the only man to win the Cy Young Award four times and his 319 victories are the 11th on the all-time list. When he announced his retirement Wednesday from the San Francisco Giants at age 41, Carlton ranked in the Top 20 in six career categories — including second with 4,000 strikeouts.

Yet Carlton rolled up most of his Hall of Fame numbers during a 22-year career shrouded in silence. Carlton stopped speaking to reporters eight years ago, claiming he was being treated unfairly, and would reply "Policy is policy" when asked to talk to the media.

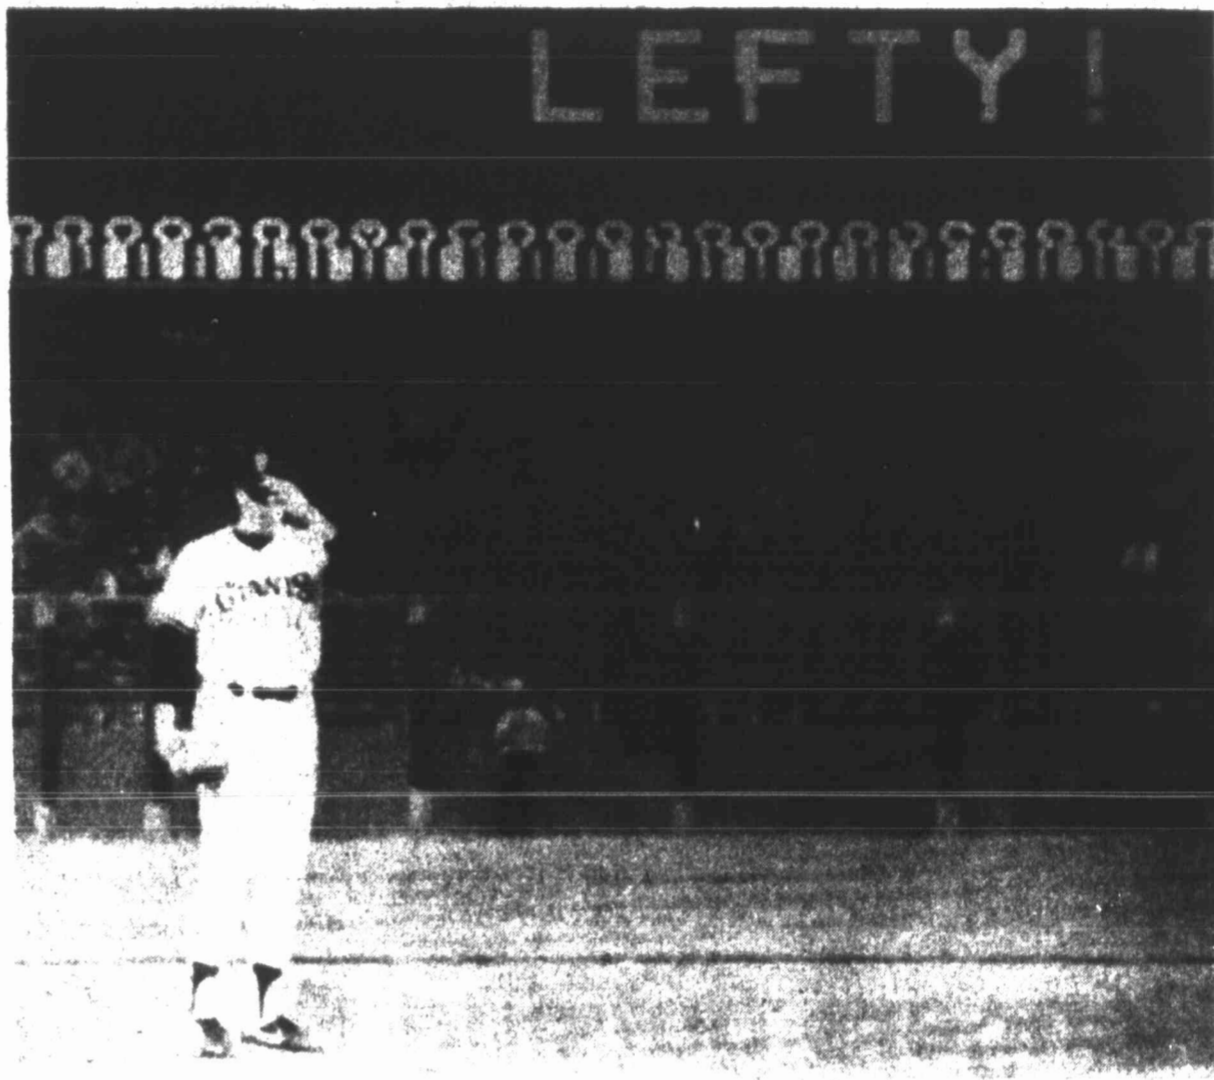

Carlton broke that posture in July, when the Giants signed him after he was released following 14½ glorious years with the Philadelphia Phillies.

"You can't make a move like this and not talk to the media. I can't say if it will continue in the future," Carlton said at the time.

It didn't. He did not speak to reporters during his month-long stint with San Francisco, during which he was often hit hard, going 1-3 with a 5.10 earned run average. Nor did Carlton talk with reporters on the day he announced his retirement, instead releasing a statement through the team.

"Upon reflection, I realized that I've reached a career milestone (4,000 strikeouts) never before accomplished by a pitcher spending his entire career in one league," the statement said.

Carlton recorded his 4,000th strikeout on Tuesday night against Cincinnati, during which he was the losing pitcher as he struck out 10 in 6 2/3 innings and runs on seven hits. Carlton, who has struck out 4,209, is the only pitcher ahead of Carlton.

San Francisco Giant's pitcher Steve Carlton is shown in front of the scoreboard's flashing of his nickname "Lefty" Tuesday night after he recorded his 4,000th career strikeout against the Cincinnati Reds. This was to be Carlton's last major league game as he announced his retirement following the Giants' Wednesday game against the Reds in San Francisco.

"Further, I realize that the San Francisco Giants are committed to the younger players in their organization, specifically the talented young men on their pitching staff," Carlton's statement said.

Carlton went a combined 5-11 with a 5.89 this year. He retired with a career record of 319-226 and a 3.11 lifetime earned run average.

Carlton, always in top physical shape, began this season anxious to show that last year was mistake, and the Phillies were willing to give him that chance. In 1985, he was 1-8 and went on the disabled list for the first time in his career. Despite his poor record, Carlton's ERA was a respectable 3.33.

But Carlton never regained the form that made him a 10-time All-Star. He lost to long-time nemesis Cincinnati on Opening Day and did not win until April 23 in his fourth start. Carlton then lost his next three decisions.

As his losses mounted, speculation grew regarding Carlton's future. Even though he would show flashes of dominance and ex-

Cowboys may get 'dream backfield'

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Herschel Walker's agent said the New Jersey Generals running back will announce at his news conference today that he wants to explore the opportunity of playing for the Dallas Cowboys.

Agent Peter Johnson told the Dallas Morning News Wednesday, "Herschel is free and clear to negotiate with the Cowboys. We hope he is in uniform as soon as possible."

Johnson said Walker had made the decision to play for the Cowboys in the last two days.

Johnson said Walker would announce today that "he would like to explore the opportunity of playing for the Cowboys."

Dallas Cowboys President Tex Schramm claimed to have no special knowledge of what Herschel Walker would say at a news conference in New York today, and said he was as anxious as anyone else to find out.

Dallas holds Walker's rights in the National Football League and ever since the announcement that the USFL was suspending play, training camp has been alive with talk of Walker and Tony Dorsett playing in the same Cowboys backfield this fall.

The Cowboys have the rights to Walker because they chose him in the fifth round of the 1985 draft, after he had already finished one season with the New Jersey Generals of the USFL.

Walker is eligible for the draft then for the first time because he had left college a year early to enter pro football.

Walker is under a personal services contract to New Jersey owner Donald Trump, but Trump said Wednesday he planned to allow Walker to negotiate with the Cowboys if that was his wish.

The Dallas Morning News reported today that Walker had told friends he wants to play with the Cowboys this season.

Dorsett said Wednesday he sees "awesome" potential for the Cowboys if Walker comes aboard.

"The more you think about this becoming a reality, it could be a pretty awesome backfield. I can appreciate the man's talents," Dorsett said.

Both Dorsett and Walker won the Heisman Trophy, symbolic of the nation's outstanding college football player. Dorsett played at Pittsburgh and Walker at Georgia.

"It would put pressure on the defense. You can't key on one guy when you have two guys who are equal threats. For sure, it would draw a lot of attention," Dorsett said.

Paul Hackett, the Cowboys' new pass offense coordinator, said adding Walker to the team "would just pick up the level of our performance. This is an exciting prospect. Tony and Herschel — you're talking about guys who every time they touch the ball can put it in the end zone. You're not talking about four or five yards."

In addition to his running skills, Walker is an excellent receiver. Dorsett's use as a receiver has also increased; he caught 97 passes over the past two seasons.

Although the 5-11, 185-pound Dorsett and the 6-1, 220-pound Walker are tailbacks, the Cowboys have indicated they would play them together.

"A backfield of Tony Dorsett by himself means a great deal," the News quoted Walker as saying. "People get very excited just to see him play. But I think we would be great together."

Dorsett has developed a reputation as a fast, elusive running style. Walker, a world-class sprinter, is known as a fast, straight-ahead runner who drives through defenders.

"He's a strong runner, not a very elusive guy," Dorsett said. "He has a lot of explosion and power and has the ability to take off and leave you. He doesn't juke and jive. But I'm sure he can do that and will have to do that. This league is pretty serious. You have to make them miss you."

Legends discuss the major championships

Hubert Green, the defending PGA champion, tees off Thursday in the first round of the 1986 PGA at the Inverness Club in Toledo, Ohio.

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — PGA President Mickey Powell, perhaps unwittingly, opened the door to an old and unwinnable argument: a comparison of golf's major championships.

He did it by declaring, on the eve of 68th PGA National Championship, that "the PGA cannot be compared with the others."

But, of course, it is compared — sometimes favorably, sometimes not so favorably — with the U.S. and British Opens and the Masters, the other tournaments recognized as part of golf's Big Four.

First, it must be noted that the word "recognized" is critical.

There is nothing that officially designates those tournaments as "the majors." It is something that just happened and is now accepted, both by the players and by the public.

Jack Nicklaus, who has won those four tournaments a record 18 times, did perhaps more than any other single individual to raise public awareness of "the majors" when, as a young star, he spoke of his overriding interest in those events.

It is inevitable that they be grouped, however, particularly so when one of the game's most coveted goals is a career sweep of those four titles.

Only Nicklaus, Gene Sarazen, Ben Hogan and Gary Player have done it.

Tom Watson is on the brink of it. He's won five British Opens, two Masters and the 1982 U.S. Open. Now, because of that, he calls the PGA "the most important tournament in the world to me. To get it would round it out, put me on a level I haven't yet reached."

While it may be the most important to Watson, Nicklaus placed them in different order.

"The PGA obviously has the best field of the majors. But it is difficult not to say the U.S. Open is the most important, particularly for an American. It's the national championship of our country. Then the British Open, then the PGA and then the Masters. I'm not putting down the Masters (which he won for the sixth time this spring) at all, but the Masters does have a limited field," Nicklaus said.

"I don't think you can rank them. They all have their own flavor, their own personality," said Ray Floyd. "All have their histories and traditions and reputations, and none of them got those reputations unjustly."

Astros fall 7-4 to rejuvenated Dodgers

Carlton

By DICK BRINSTER
AP Sports Writer
For Len Matuszek, the rash of injuries that took the wind out of the Los Angeles Dodgers' sails was a breath of fresh air.

The Dodgers, beset by injuries that sidelined seven of eight starters at one time or another, remained barely alive thanks to the contributions of players such as Matuszek. Now, with most of the regulars back, Matuszek is still contributing.

Matuszek hit two homers Wednesday, marking the first time he has accomplished that feat in the major leagues, and drove in three runs to lead the Dodgers to a crucial 7-4 victory over Houston, moving them to within 5 1/2 games of the Astros in the National League West.

Matuszek began the season on the disabled list recovering from off-season shoulder surgery. Since his return in late May, Matuszek has been invaluable as a pinch-hitter and occasional first baseman and left fielder.

"I'm very confident and very comfortable in my surroundings," said Matuszek, who has hit eight homers in just 96 at-bats. "I'm playing and contributing and enjoying myself."

Matuszek hit a two-run homer to right in the third inning and homered to almost the exact same spot in the seventh. Both came on the first pitch.

Mike Marshall added a two-run single to break an 0-for-15 slump in support of Rick Honeycutt, 9-6, who worked 5 2/3 innings. Matt Keough, 2-3, was the loser.

Mets 7, Cubs 6
New York's depth proved decisive, with Mookie Wilson coming off the bench to drive in three runs, the last two coming on a broken-bat single off Lee Smith, to give the Mets the win in the opener of a doubleheader.

Keith Hernandez had three hits and Gary Carter homered and knocked in three runs as New York led 6-4 in the nightcap, which was suspended because of darkness after seven innings. It was to be completed before the start of today's regularly scheduled game.

The Cubs tied the game at 5-5 on Jody Davis' two-run homer off Dwight Gooden with one out in the ninth. Gooden said it was the first time he ever gave up a game-tying home run in the ninth inning.

Roger McDowell, 10-6, got the win. George Frazier, who was knocked out of the game by a Gary Carter line drive, fell to 2-4.

Giants 2, Reds 1
San Francisco got the big hits and made the big play defensively to break a three-game losing streak and avoid a sweep at home by Cincinnati.

Pinch hitter Mike Aldrete's two-out single to center scored Chris Brown. Will Clark's one-out ninth-inning single had tied the game.

Chili Davis kept the Giants in the game in the 11th, when he caught Kurt Stillwell's shallow fly ball and nailed Nick Esasky on a perfect throw to the plate.

Jeff Robinson, 6-2, the fourth San Francisco pitcher, got the victory with one inning of perfect relief. Carl Willis, 1-3, took the loss.

Expos 3, Pirates 2
Run-scoring triples by Tim Lincecum and Mitch Webster backed Floyd Youmans, who scattered five hits over seven innings, and Jeff Reardon, who collected his 25th save.

Youmans, 11-7, won for the 11th time in his last 14 decisions. He walked two and struck out four.

Cardinal 2, Phillies 1
Philadelphia's Don Carman balked home Ozzie Smith from third base with two outs in the eighth inning to give St. Louis its victory.

The balk, Carman's second of the game, handed the decision to St. Louis rookie Greg Mathews, 7-3, with Todd Worrell pitching the ninth to pick up his 22nd save. That tied the record for rookie pitchers in the National League, established in 1975 by Rawley Eastwick of Cincinnati. Carman fell to 5-3.

Braves 4, Padres 2
Pinch-hitters Bob Horner and Rafael Ramirez came through in the ninth inning off relief ace Rich Gossage to help Atlanta complete a three-game sweep in San Diego.

Horner doubled in the tying run on Gossage's first pitch and Ramirez, batting for Paul Assenmacher, 5-2, followed with a two-run single after the Braves managed just five hits over the first eight innings off LaMarr Hoyt, 5-8.

permitted with a bouncelike ball was apparent to the Phillies that Carlton was no longer the power pitcher he thought he was.

On June 28, after going 4-8 with a 6.19 ERA, the Phillies gave Carlton his unconditional release. Team President Bill Giles announced the move the day before, breaking into tears several times during a news conference in which he said Carlton had given the Phillies "14 memorable and remarkable years."

Carlton did not attend the news conference. "I think he knew it was coming," Giles said.

Giles added that Carlton had been unemotional when the Phillies' hierarchy had discussed his future with him.

"I try to take the emotion out of the game," Carlton said later. "It only adds to losing, not to winning. I am a science-type pitcher."

A week later, the Giants decided to take a chance on Carlton. They signed him for $30,000, with the Phillies responsible for the rest of his $1.1 million salary.

"He must have thanked me 10 times for bringing him over here," Giants Manager Roger Craig said. "Here he is, a Hall of Fame pitcher, and he was really excited, like a young rookie."

Carlton also said he would be willing learn Craig's specialty, the split-fingered fastball.

"I'm always open to new pitches," Carlton said.

But Carlton was hit hard in his first game with San Francisco and never pitched the way that either the Giants or he himself expected.

And on Wednesday, he announced his retirement from a career that began after he signed with the St. Louis Cardinals in 1964 for a $5,000 bonus. Carlton spent only his first year entirely in the minors and by 1967 was with the Cardinals to stay after splitting the previous season between St. Louis and Tulsa.

Over the next four years, he posted records of 14-9, 13-11, 17-11 and 10-19.

In 1969, he set a modern major-league record for a nine-inning game by striking out 19 New York Mets, but lost 4-3 to future teammate Tug McGraw when Ron Swoboda hit two two-run homers.

Carlton went 20-9 in 1971, the first of his six 20-game victory seasons. He signed with a contract dispute with the Cardinals and they were happy to put him on the trading block.

Rangers outslug Birds in grand slam fest

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

Larry Sheets and Jim Dwyer hit grand slams in the fourth inning that put Baltimore ahead. But the Orioles didn't have anybody who could slam the door on the Texas Rangers.

Toby Harrah went 5-for-5 with a grand slam and Larry Parrish's two-run double keyed a six-run rally in the eighth inning Wednesday night that led the Rangers past Baltimore 13-11.

The three grand slams were the most ever in a major-league game. The homers by Sheets and Dwyer, during a nine-run inning, marked just the fifth time a team had hit two slams in an inning.

"I've been in the major leagues 12 years, and a couple in the minors and that's the craziest game I've ever seen," Parrish said. "It was the kind you usually see in the minors."

Texas ripped Baltimore five pitchers for 19 hits, including Steve Buechele's solo homer in the eighth and Pete O'Brien's three-run shot later in the inning. Baltimore had just seven hits, including a two-run homer by Lee Lacy.

The Rangers rallied with six hits in the eighth against Rich Bordi, 4-2, who was charged with six runs, and Nate Snell, who gave up Parrish's two-run double and an RBI single by Scott Fletcher in the ninth.

One pitcher who did not work for the Orioles was Don Aase, who leads the major leagues with 28 saves. Aase was not available because he hurt his back earlier in the day while lifting up his 4-year-old son.

The game in Baltimore also included: a bench-clearing incident following a knockdown pitch to Jim Traber by Mike Mason after Dwyer's slam; a black cat running loose on the field; and a rain delay of 73 minutes that delayed the start in Baltimore.

"If this isn't the greatest Rangers' victory ever, it is tied for first," Texas Manager Bobby Valentine said. "The bullpen pitched its heart out, and the hitters never said die."

Harrah connected for his fourth home run of the season and fifth career slam in the second inning after Baltimore starter Ken Dixon walked Buechele with the bases loaded. An RBI single by Gary Ward made it 6-0 in the third.

Red Sox 9, White Sox 0
Bruce Hurst threw a three-hitter and Boston beat Chicago's Floyd Bannister for the 11th straight time.

Bill Buckner and Marty Barrett rapped three hits during a 15-hit attack for the Red Sox, their biggest offensive output since June 30.

Hurst, 7-5, struck out four and walked none. In Hurst's five losses, Boston scored only six runs.

Bannister, 6-4, lost to the Red Sox for the fourth time this season and remained winless against them since May 16, 1982. Bannister did not retire any of the six batters he faced during Boston's four-run first inning.

Earlier in the day, Red Sox Manager John McNamara signed a new two-year contract through 1988.

Texas 5, Angels 2
Gary Gaetti homered and doued, driving in three runs and leading Minnesota over visiting California.

Bert Blyleven, 11-10, pitched a five-hitter, struck out seven and walked none.

Reggie Jackson and Doug DeCinces hit consecutive home runs for the visiting Angels leading off the fourth inning. Jackson hit his 10th homer of the season and 540th of his career, and also moved into 14th place on the all-time RBI list with 1,637.

Blyleven retired 18 straight batters after the home runs.

Gaetti homered in the bottom of the fourth. Gaetti and Randy Bush hit consecutive two-run doubles in the fifth.

Don Sutton, 10-8, went five innings and took the loss.

Blue Jays 8, Royals 0
Jimmy Key and Tom Henke combined on a five-hitter and Garth Iorg drove in three runs as host Toronto defeated Kansas City.

Key, 10-7, gave up four singles in seven innings and did not allow a runner past second base. Danny Jackson, 6-8, was the loser.

The host Blue Jays scored five times in the fourth inning. Iorg blooped a two-run double, Cecil Fielder hit an RBI single and two more runs scored on third baseman George Brett's error.

Damaso Garcia hit his fifth homer in the fifth.

Yankees 5, Brewers 3
Ron Guidry pitched 7 2/3 strong innings and Dave Winfield homered and singled twice as New York beat Milwaukee.

The host Yankees rapped 14 hits in winning for only the fourth time in their last 13 games.

Guidry, 6-9, gave up seven hits, struck out seven and walked none.

Winfield homered in the third inning off Juan Nieves, 10-5. Winfield added an RBI single in the fifth.

A's 7, Mariners 5

Rookie Jose Canseco, leading the major leagues with 92 RBI, doubled home the tie-breaking run in the top of the ninth inning and then scored on a single by Carney Lansford as Oakland beat Seattle.

Canseco's double drove in Alfredo Griffin, who opened the ninth with an infield single off Matt Young, 7-5, and continued to second when second baseman Harold Reynolds threw the ball away for an error.

Dave Kingman hit a solo home run, his 27th, capping a three-run fifth that gave the visiting A's a 5-2 lead. Kingman hit four homers in the three-game series, and has hit 12 home runs in 19 games at the Kingdome.

Jay Howell, 1-4, pitched 2 2/3 scoreless innings for the victory.
