Lighter side

DETROIT (AP) — Want some dirt from Hollywood stars? Entrepreneur Barry Gibson says he has the scoop.
Gibson, a 38-year-old delivery driver for a Lansing lumberyard, travels around the country with his spade, digging in when he gets to homes owned by the rich and famous.
"We take a little skim of dirt here and there from around shrubbery and sidewalks," he said in a recent telephone interview.
The "Celebrity Dirt," packaged in small plastic vials encased in wood blocks, comes with a certificate of authenticity and retails for $5.95 in stores in eight states, Gibson said.

Howard County Fair opens Monday

Fairgoers can look forward to good food, entertainment and animals at the Howard County Sesquicentennial Edition Fair, which opens at 4 p.m. Monday on the fairgrounds.
For the first time, a swine show will be featured at the fair.
Pigs raised by area youth will be judged at 7 p.m. Thursday. Winners will go to the state fair in Dallas at the end of the month, according to coordinator Richard Christi.
Christi said many people had requested a pig show. Other animal contests include goats, lambs, steers, rabbits and horses.

Special awards will go to open grand and reserve halter champions, high point youth 13 and under, high point youth 14-18, high point open western, performance horse, high point open English performance horse, and high point open timed events horse.
The Children's Barnyard opens at 4 p.m. Monday and at 10 a.m. Tuesday through Saturday.

See page 7A for a complete schedule of Howard County Fair activities.

The roping competition will be conducted over two evenings this year. Ladies' barrel race, calf roping and ribbon roping are scheduled for Tuesday, beginning at 7:30 p.m. Entries will be taken at 6:30.

Team roping is Thursday, beginning at 8 p.m., with entries taken at 7 p.m. Entrants must be 25 years of age or older. Buckles will be given to each event winner and a saddle will be presented to the average winner on four-head, organizer Valenci Ditto said.
A pet show is scheduled for 7 p.m. Friday. Categories will be dogs, cats, farm animals and exotic animals, including best dressed dog and cat.

The fair queen will be crowned at 8 p.m. Monday. The winner will receive a $300 scholarship to Howard College, a gift and a banner.

The first alternate will receive a $200 scholarship to the college. Contestants will vote on a Miss Congeniality.
Senior citizens are admitted to the fair for half price Tuesday.

Entries will be accepted from 7:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Monday for the women's division, cake day, flower show, art and photography, agriculture products and country store contests.
Judging will be at 1:30 p.m. Monday for the above contests, except for agricultural products, which will be judged at 5 p.m.
Exhibits will be open to public viewing at 4 p.m. Monday.

The Sesquicentennial Committee of the Chamber of Commerce is offering a $50 grand prize for the first place winner in the Sesquicentennial quilt category, according to the fair handbook. Quilts will be judged on theme, creativity, workmanship and difficulty of quilting.

At least eight die in quake

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — A powerful earthquake rattled through southern Greece Saturday and a Cabinet minister said at least eight people were killed in the port city of Kalamata.

Environment Minister Evangelos Colombis also said more than 200 people were injured, 70 seriously, as buildings collapsed during the quake that measured 6.2 on the open-ended Richter scale. A quake registering 6 can cause severe damage in populated areas.

Another quake measuring 5.4 struck Zakynthos Island in the Ionian Sea a few hours later but there were no reports of damage or casualties, the Athens Seismological Institute reported.

Undersecretary of the Interior Tassos Sechiotis said 15 seriously injured victims were airlifted to Athens. He also told state-run radio that rescue teams were struggling to free people trapped under rubble.

"Three children and a woman were freed from one apartment building. We are trying hard to get any other people out," Sechiotis said. "The situation seems to be coming under control."

Colombis said earlier that at least three people perished when a five-story apartment building on the Kalamata waterfront collapsed when the first quake hit at 8:24 p.m. The building contained 17 apartments.

In an interview with state-run television, he said it was believed other people were trapped in the wreckage of the building that contained 17 apartments.

He said five other deaths were reported in Kalamata, which has a population of 42,000. Communications with the city were knocked out.

A Defense Ministry official, speaking with the condition that he not be identified, said: "Half the buildings in Kalamata appear to have been damaged. The casualty count could go much higher."

Colombis said in the interview that "it seems there is very little damage in the area surrounding Kalamata."

"At the beginning I didn't think it was so serious, though we felt it strongly," George Argyrakis, a Kalamata resident told a radio operator aboard a ship anchored in the port.

"Then I drove down to the harbor and saw the damage to the houses and people running to see what happened to their relatives," he said.

His comments were broadcast in a special news program on state television.

The first quake's center was beneath the Gulf of Messene, nine miles south of Kalamata and in an area where a seabed fault is located, the Seismological Institute reported. It was felt throughout central Greece and in Athens.

Shigella outbreak slowing diners

Staff and wire reports
ODESSA — Restaurant business in the Permian Basin has plummeted in the wake of a contagious bacteria infection that has left more than 100 people ill in the Midland-Odessa area, a restaurant group official said.
"And it's getting worse instead of better," said Sid Clark, Permian Basin Restaurant Association president.

Clark estimated Friday that business at various restaurants has fallen anywhere from 40 to 90 percent since the area-wide outbreak of shigella, which causes symptoms such as diarrhea, headaches, nausea and stomach cramps.
Kathy Wythe, community relations coordinator at Odessa's Medical Center Hospital, said Friday that more than 140 people have visited the hospital emergency room to report the symptoms. Of 140 stool samples, 40 came back positive for shigella, she said.

As of Friday, the Health Department said 102 people in Midland and Ector counties were confirmed to have contracted shigellosis.

San Angelo health officials reported two shigellosis cases since Sept. 1 and Fort Stockton health officials reported one case on Thursday.

On Friday, a dozen cases of shigella had been reported in Big Spring by Howard County Sanitarian James Luck. Three of those cases had been confirmed, with two others undergoing further testing. The remaining seven cases were yet to be tested.

Local health officials said they could not find the source of the disease, which spread in the Permian Basin last week.

A statement jointly released Friday by Dr. James Humphreys, Midland Health Department director, and Dr. Robert Rowntree, Odessa-Ector County Health Department medical director, said:

"At this time, the data collected so far cannot definitely implicate a food distributor, a restaurant, or even lettuce."

Health officials said lettuce is considered a prime carrier of the shigella bacteria.

Fred Phillips, regional manager of Taco Villa fast-food restaurants, on Friday placed losses to the chain at "hundreds of thousands of dollars" because of rumors concerning the source of the infection.

Phillips emphasized "it is safe to eat" at Taco Villa restaurants.

"If a restaurant was serving unsafe food, it would have already been closed," Phillips said, noting that no Taco Villa restaurant has been closed by the state Health Department.

Big Spring Taco Villa owner Gary Cox reported that testing of hifood products had proven negative as sources transmitting the bacteria.

"We've taken extra measures in our restaurants regarding sanitation and disinfecting procedures," Cox said.

Phillips said about 2,000 pounds of lettuce were destroyed by the SHIGELLA page 2A

Developer decries planning

By SCOTT FITZGERALD
Staff Writer

A San Antonio investor's skepticism and opinionated position concerning the redevelopment of downtown Big Spring has annoyed a local coordinator and the chamber's director of tourism.

Gil Cuadra, owner of eight downtown buildings including the Settles Hotel, said earlier this week he questions whether Big Spring residents support the Main Street Inc. redevelopment plan the Downtown Steering Committee endorsed in July.

"To me it's unfair they (Cuadra Associates) go to the media and say they disagree with our plans," said Downtown Development Coordinator Teri Quinones. "If they have criticisms, they should come directly to us," she added.

The source of disagreement lies in attracting tourists downtown. Cuadra proposes a total commitment from the community to work toward the development of tourism as Big Spring's primary industry.

"The real issue before Big Spring right now," Cuadra said about the master plan being developed by city planner Robert Lima, "is whether that is what we really want to accomplish."

Elizabeth Taylor, the Chamber of Commerce's director of tourism, said in response to Cuadra's zeal for tourism that it has created "a standoff situation" between him and the downtown steering committee.

"I studied the master plan and it does follow a control plan to promote tourism.
"The idea behind the plan is to build up the retail economy so they, themselves become attractions," Taylor said.

Cuadra said small Main Street cities such as Kerrville "are limited in what they can do."

Big Spring's unique location as the crossroads of West Texas could spur tourism, pour thousands of dollars into the local economy and create jobs, he said.

Cuadra seeks commitments from county government to purchase buildings that would be remodeled into museums and from city government to provide additional services promoting and facilitating tourism.

He said city officials should agree to sponsor all types of state government grants that Big Spring is in excellent position to receive because of its high unemployment rate.

Cuadra said traffic counts he received from the Texas Department of Highways and statistics from the state's Parks and Wildlife Department, lead him to project 1,000 additional cars could be lured to downtown tourist attractions.

"I can see where he (Cuadra) has investors and they're looking at high money from quick attractions," Taylor said, "but a city this size can only handle so much."

The master plan is "controlled enough not to distort or interrupt the city," she added.

Implementation strategies concerning the master plan should be completed around the first part of January, Quinones said.

The goal is to establish a pro-

City youth's condition stabilized

A 7-year old Big Spring boy is in good condition at Scenic Mountain Medical Center after he was struck by a car Friday afternoon at the 2700 block of Ann.

Russell E. Sumpter of 2612 Cindy Lane suffered fractures of both legs and an arm, said relief supervisor Barbara Holdampf Saturday.

He was moved from the Intensive Care Unit into a regular room, and the possibility of internal injuries has been ruled out, she said.

Sumpter was hit at 3:20 p.m. Friday when he drove his bicycle into the path of a 1969 Oldsmobile Cutlass driven by Michael William Garcia, 34, of 1300 Baylor Blvd., according to police reports. No charges were filed.

Kellye Cash named new Miss America

By ANNE McGRATH
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Kellye Cash, the blonde grandniece of country star Johnny Cash, wearing a white sequined gown with platinum sequined stripes, was crowned by Miss America 1986 Susan Akin, 22, of Meridian, Miss., and took her victory stroll down the runway in Convention Hall as emcee Gary Collins sang the pageant standard "There She Is."

The 21-year-old from Memphis, Tenn., whose father is a naval fighter pilot performing strategic NATO exercises off the coast of Norway, mouthed the words, "Oh, my God" as her name was announced and lifted her palms upward in a gesture of disbelief to the crowd of 20,000 in the hall and a national television audience of millions.

Miss Cash, the only contestant to win preliminaries in both talent and swimsuit, accompanied herself on the piano and sang, "I'll Be Home." She said her famous granduncle hadn't given her any tips, but that she has tried to emulate his charisma in her performing.

On Saturday, the scores were wiped clean except for those earned in judges' interviews, and the finalists competed against each other in the swimsuit, evening gown and talent contests.

The names of eight non-finalists awarded $3,000 scholarships in recognition of their talents also were announced Saturday. They are: Miss California Lisa Karen Kahre, 19, of Salinas; Miss Colorado Carol Janson, 21, of Boulder; Miss Florida Molly Scott Pesce, 23, of Longwood; Miss Hawaii Cheryl Bartlett, 23, of Honolulu; Miss Kentucky Melinda Katharine Cumberledge, 23, of Lexington; Miss Louisiana Amanda Mainord, 20, of Baton Rouge; Miss Oklahoma Mignon Merchant, 25, of Oklahoma City; and Miss Vermont Michelle Shelley Dawson, 18, of Charlotte.

The 65-year-old Miss America Pageant is the largest contributor of scholarships to young women, awarding more than $5 million among many of the estimated 80,000 contestants who enter local contests every year.

Miss America receives a $30,000 scholarship, which she can request in cash after her year's reign, and can expect to earn more than $100,000 in appearance fees. Many former queens have used the experience to launch careers in show business.

The first runner-up wins a $17,000 scholarship and the next three finishers get $11,000, $8,000 and $6,000 in scholarships.

The other finalists are awarded $4,000 to be used toward their educations.

"There She Is" was first sung at the pageant in 1951, but was dropped in 1981 in a dispute with composer Bernie Wayne over money. The song returned last year.

The judges were film and stage star Theodore Bikel; Miss America 1975 Shirley Cothran Barrett; actress Dody Goodman; television agent Sam Haskell; choreographer Dee Dee Wood; 1983 Tony Award winner Lilliane Montevecchi; Bernard J. Dobroski, dean of the School of Music at the University of Oregon; and Bernard A. Maguire, the federal government's associate director for national preparedness.

Initial test results on that lettuce came back negative Thursday, said Dennis Baker, Texas health department director of food programs in Austin.

Taco Villa supplied samples for the Health Department Sept. 5 and destroyed the lettuce from the 19 stores Sept. 6, said Phillips.

"The lettuce that was discarded was the exact lettuce that was tested by the state," Phillips stressed.

"I don't know if the public understands why we destroyed that lettuce," Phillips added. "The purpose of destroying it was we did not want to take any chances with the public safety. We were willing to throw away 2,000 pounds, at almost a dollar a pound. We were willing to bite the bullet," he said.

Quarterly tax revenue down

Howard County received $84,650.20 from the office of Comptroller Bob Bullock for the city sales and use tax for the quarter ending Aug. 29.

The figure is 4.06 percent less than last year, and brings the annual total to $1,156,813.30.

The city of Big Spring received $82,718.34 from the Comptroller, 3.29 percent less than last year. Big Spring's payments total $1,125,666.93 thus far for 1986.

Coahoma received $1,294.85, which is 21.87 percent less than last year, bringing its yearly total to $20,823.94.

Forsan received $637.01, which is 31.71 percent less than last year, bringing the community's annual total to $10,322.43.

Martin County received

$3,354.30, 19.65 percent more than last year, bringing the yearly total to $44,376.25.

Mitchell County received $15,282.89, which is 4.54 percent less than last year, bringing its annual total to $207,563.20.

No figures were listed for Borden or Glasscock Counties.

Man remains hospitalized

A man remains in Scenic Mountain Medical Center after being injured in a two-car accident at 1200 S. Gregg St. at 1:45 a.m. Saturday.

Ricky Lopez, 20, is at the Center for observation and shows no signs of injury, said relief supervisor Barbara Holdampf Saturday evening.

Lopez was a passenger in a Ford pickup driven by Joey Herrera, 20, of 2522 Hunter, who was treated and released Saturday morning from the center, according to an emergency room spokeswoman.

Herrera was north bound in the 1200 block of Gregg St. when his vehicle was struck by a 1984 Ford LTD driven by Mark Holland Adkins, 34, of 2602 Ent, according to police reports.

Adkins, west bound in the 200 block of West 12th Street, failed to yield the right-of-way to Herrera, the reports said. Herrera's pickup was struck on the right side.

Police arrested Adkins on suspicion of driving while intoxicated and failure to maintain financial responsibility. He was transferred to the county jail and released on $1,000 bond.

Presbyterians' choices to three

NEW YORK (AP) — A location committee on Friday narrowed from six to three the number of cities being considered for the new headquarters of the 3.1-million-member Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). Those still in the running are Fort Worth, Kansas City and St. Louis.

Eliminated from the selection process at a meeting of the committee were Indianapolis, Cincinnati and Charlotte, N.C., which had been among six cities to which the choice earlier had been narrowed.

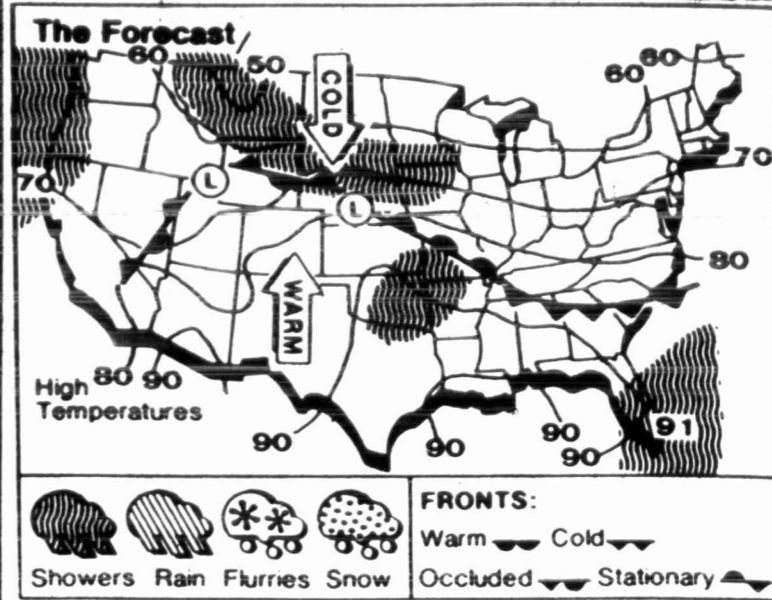

One of the three remaining is to be recommended by the committee in January for a subsequent conclusive choice in June by the denomination's governing general assembly.

The Rev. Judy Fletcher of Wynne, Ark., who heads the locations committee, said favorable factors particular to each city were Fort Worth's being where North and South American cultures come together, Kansas City's urban as well as rural culture, and St. Louis' ecumenical possibilities, with the United Church of Christ also considering locating there.

She said the three cities still on the potential list have been found to look better than the others on the basis of several factors, including:

- An international flavor.
- Conveniently accessible by air.
- Diverse cultural opportunities.
- Strong points in the church's mission.

Voters select Demo in East Texas race

By SUSAN ASCHOFF
Associated Press Writer

Democrat Richard Anderson outran Republican Edd Hargett in almost every county in a runoff for the state Senate Saturday, garnering 58 percent of the vote after an absentee-ballot snafu delayed the final tally for hours.

Anderson, the Harrison County judge, had 41,947 votes, or 58.16 percent, to 30,178, or 41.84 percent, for Hargett, an electrical engineer.

The Secretary of State ordered a recount in District 1's most populous county of Bowie, delaying a vote total for several hours after the polls closed at 7 p.m. The tally wasn't completed until nearly midnight.

Of the 15 counties, Anderson lost only in Gregg, and called the 56-to-44 percent defeat there "acceptable" in what he described as the only Republican area of the strongly Democratic district.

In Bowie County, which includes Texarkana, Anderson had 5,863 to Hargett's 4,255 with absentee votes still unreported.

"I'm delighted with the margin and feel very, very good that both Democrats and independents showed support for the campaign, which has been positive," said Anderson, 37. "The people of East Texas have rejected the negativism."

Hargett, 39, crediting labor and minority support for Anderson's win, said his supporters did not turn out at the polls.

"We are disappointed," he said. "We felt with a large turnout, Edd Hargett would win."

"It doesn't make any difference what you tell them. If you can't make them ashamed to vote for a guy like Mr. Anderson, I don't know what you can do," Hargett said. "I hate to say that, but its true."

The turnout was close to the 65,000 predicted by both campaigns, or about one-fourth of the district's registered voters.

The runoff campaign was often marked by bickering between the two candidates as their campaigns traded barbs.

Hargett went to court repeatedly to get Anderson's name off the ballot, charging that he was ineligible to run because he was already holding a county post. Hargett also said Anderson had been detained in Belton in 1980 for overdue child-support payments.

More recently, several dozen applications for absentee ballots were determined to be forgeries, and Anderson and state Democrats pointed the finger at Hargett supporters.

In Harrison County, where Anderson is county judge, he had 6,120 votes, or 57 percent, compared to Hargett's 4,702, or 43 percent.

Even Hargett's home county of Cass went to Anderson, albeit narrowly, 3,731 to 3,155.

Hargett vied with Anderson after the two triumphed over a four-candidate field in the Aug. 9 special election to replace Ed Howard, who resigned in April to become a lobbyist.

Hargett, a former football player, received 40.3 percent of the vote in the Aug. 9 special election that had a 21.7 percent turnout. Anderson won 32.3 percent.

Pushes pushers' death

NEW YORK — First lady Nancy Reagan said drug pushers should be given the death penalty if they are responsible for someone's death.

Mrs. Reagan made the remarks in a taped interview to be broadcast Sunday on NBC-TV's "Meet The Press" before she and President Reagan make a televised appeal to the American public to join the fight against drugs.

"I think the death penalty should be used against anybody who is proven to be responsible for a death," Mrs. Reagan said. "And certainly, I think that drug pushers should get the maximum of penalty," she said.

She said other government officials should follow her husband's example and take drug tests.

Claims bag, gets jail

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — A man who claimed a lost shaving kit at a casino wound up with a trip to jail.

Metropolitan Police said the bag was found early Friday in a men's room at the Silver Slipper casino and was taken to security guards.

When guards opened the bag, they found three bags of cocaine, $5,000 in $100 bills and various drug paraphernalia. They also found identification listing the owner of the kit as a John Ryan of California.

Guards contacted police, who paged Ryan in the casino. A man who identified himself as Ryan claimed the shaving kit and was arrested.

Cartier's burglarized

NEW YORK — Quick-working thieves drilled through the front-door locks at a branch of Cartier's, an exclusive jewelry store, and made off with more than $100,000 in valuables Saturday, police said.

The burglars broke into four display cases, but left some jewelry behind, said Sgt. Norris Hollomon, a police department spokesman.

Police received a call from the store's alarm company shortly after 4 a.m. When officers arrived a few minutes later at the shop in the Westbury Hotel on Madison Avenue, the thieves had already fled, Hollomon said.

The shop is a branch of the larger Fifth Avenue store.

Tapes expose racism

BOISE, Idaho — A public-access cable TV station's broadcast of videotapes produced by a white supremacist may at least expose racism in the community, says a civil rights leader.

Stan Sorensen, leader of a small group calling itself The Arm of God, arranged to have at least 35 videotapes shown at the rate of two a week on cable Channel 12 in Pocatello. With 50,000 residents, it is the largest city in southeastern Idaho. The first tape will be broadcast Tuesday.

Rehnquist

Confirmation process rare scrutiny

WASHINGTON (AP) — The bumpy road taken by William H. Rehnquist's nomination to likely confirmation as chief justice has given the Senate and the nation a rare chance to scrutinize the record, character and candor of the man chosen to be America's top judge.

While some senators have questioned the effectiveness of the confirmation process, it at least may have enhanced public awareness about Rehnquist, the job he seeks and the role of the Supreme Court.

Despite vigorous opposition by some Democrats, the nomination appears on track for confirmation by a comfortable margin Tuesday.

If so, that approval will have followed five days of often-contentious hearings before the Senate Judiciary Committee and four days of floor debate.

What have we learned?

No one disputes the considerable intellect or personal warmth of Rehnquist, who for 14 years has been the Supreme Court's most politically conservative member. But his critics say Rehnquist is insensitive toward minorities and women, and owns a "pinched view" of individual rights.

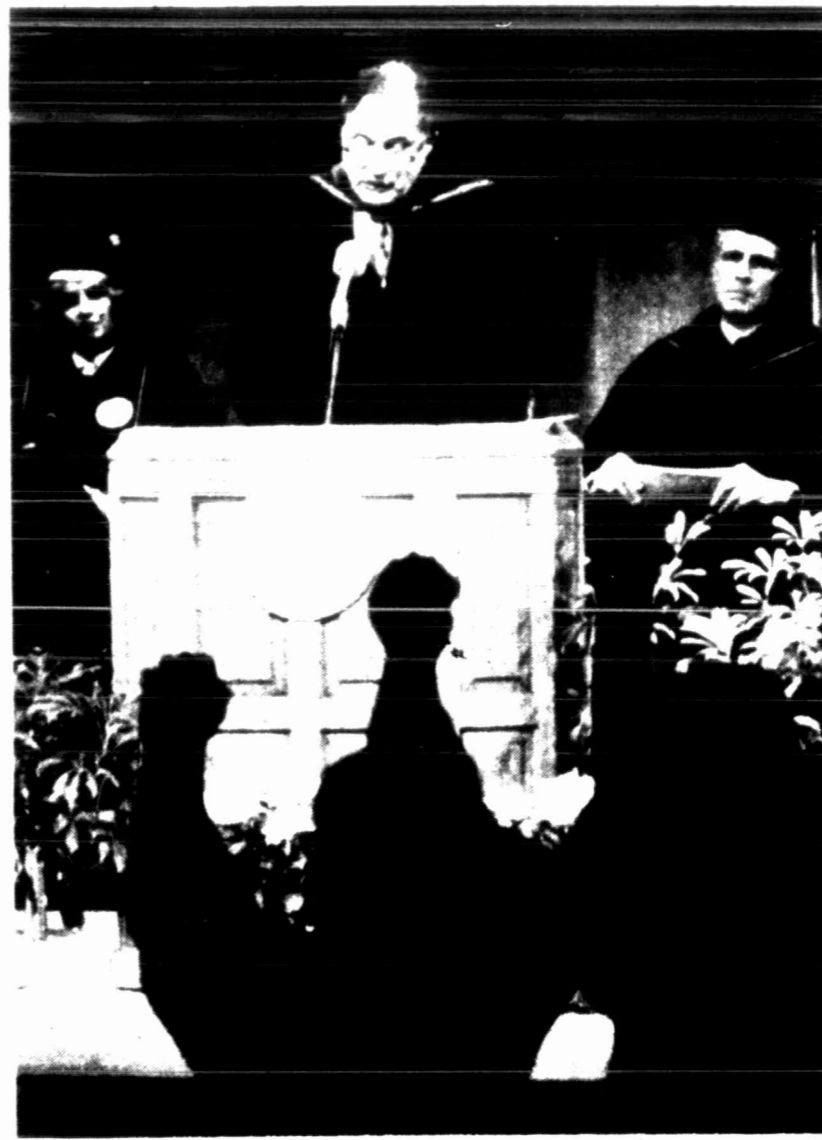

Opponents disclosed that the deed of Rehnquist's summer home in Greensboro, Vt., contains a restrictive covenant barring its sale to Jews.

Rehnquist said he had been told about the legally unenforceable restriction by his Vermont lawyer when he bought the home in 1974 but had forgotten about it. He now is taking legal action to have the restriction stricken.

As a lawyer in Phoenix, Ariz., two decades ago, Rehnquist owned a home with a deed bearing a similar clause barring its sale to non-whites. He said he had not known about it.

His brother-in-law, Harold D. Cornell of San Diego, says Rehnquist unethically did not tell him about the terms of a $25,000 family trust in which Rehnquist had a legal duty. Rehnquist has refused to comment on the allegations.

Five people swore under oath that Rehnquist played an active role in harassing and intimidating black and Hispanic voters as a Republican Party official in Phoenix in the early 1960s. As he had during his 1971 confirmation hearings, Rehnquist swore under oath he could remember no such incidents.

Demonstrators raise their arms in protest as Chief Justice nominee William Rehnquist speaks at an Indiana University Law School dedication ceremony. The demonstrators' shouts Friday caused Rehnquist to cut his speech short.

The confirmation spotlight also reached an area Rehnquist believes should be strictly confidential — his health.

It was reported that the justice has no lingering problems from a withdrawal reaction he suffered from medication four years ago. Rehnquist was hospitalized in late 1981 and early 1982 to try to withdraw from a potent drug, Placidyl, that had been prescribed for his chronic back pain.

Senate Democrats — led by Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts, Joseph Biden of Delaware and Howard Metzenbaum of Ohio — say the evidence points out Rehnquist's unfitness for the job.

Even though they know rejection of his nomination as chief justice will not remove Rehnquist from the nation's highest court, they contend he should not become, as Biden put it, "the symbol of justice for all Americans."

Republicans, with Sen. Orrin Hatch of Utah serving as point man, say all the criticism is ideologically inspired — merely a matter of liberals opposing a conservative.

If Rehnquist is confirmed, the Senate would then turn to the nomination of Antonin Scalia, a federal appeals court judge, to fill the court vacancy created by Chief Justice Warren E. Burger's retirement.

Summit stay ends

CHAMONIX, France — Alpine rescue expert Jesus Fernandez of Spain has ended a 40-day stay on the summit of Mount Blanc, Europe's highest peak, the Chamonix Mountain Rescue Center said Saturday.

Fernandez, of Grenada, came down from the 15,770-foot mountain on Thursday.

During his stay he lived in an igloo he built and ate survival rations. He took a short walk each day to stay in shape, and was in daily radio contact with the Chamonix rescue center.

Fernandez studied his physical and psychological reactions to the prolonged high-altitude conditions and the solitude, often in extreme weather conditions.

His results will be compared with those of another Spaniard who spent 30 days on the top of a mountain in South America in 1978.

Phone service restored

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico — Telephone service for most of San Juan's residents was restored early Saturday following a fire at the phone company's headquarters, and complete restoration is expected by Monday, the company's president said.

About 15,000 city residents remained without telephone service Saturday, said Pedro Gallarza, head of the Puerto Rico Telephone Co.

Wednesday's fire knocked out service for most of historic old San Juan, including the governor's mansion, and about 45,000 residents.

Mourners seek revenge

BAGHDAD, Iraq — Hundreds of thousands of mourners shouting "Revenge! Revenge!" marched through Baghdad on Saturday in a funeral procession for 24 people killed when an Iranian missile struck the capital.

The military command said Iraqi warplanes attacked oil fields at Ram Hormoz, Razan, Tang-i-Fanni, Bagh-e-Malek and Val Vava in mid-morning raids, and later struck an army camp at Khaneh in western Iran.

It claimed its forces repulsed an attack, killing 70 Iranian soldiers, in the southern war-front near Iranian-occupied Faw.

Bomb causes no injury

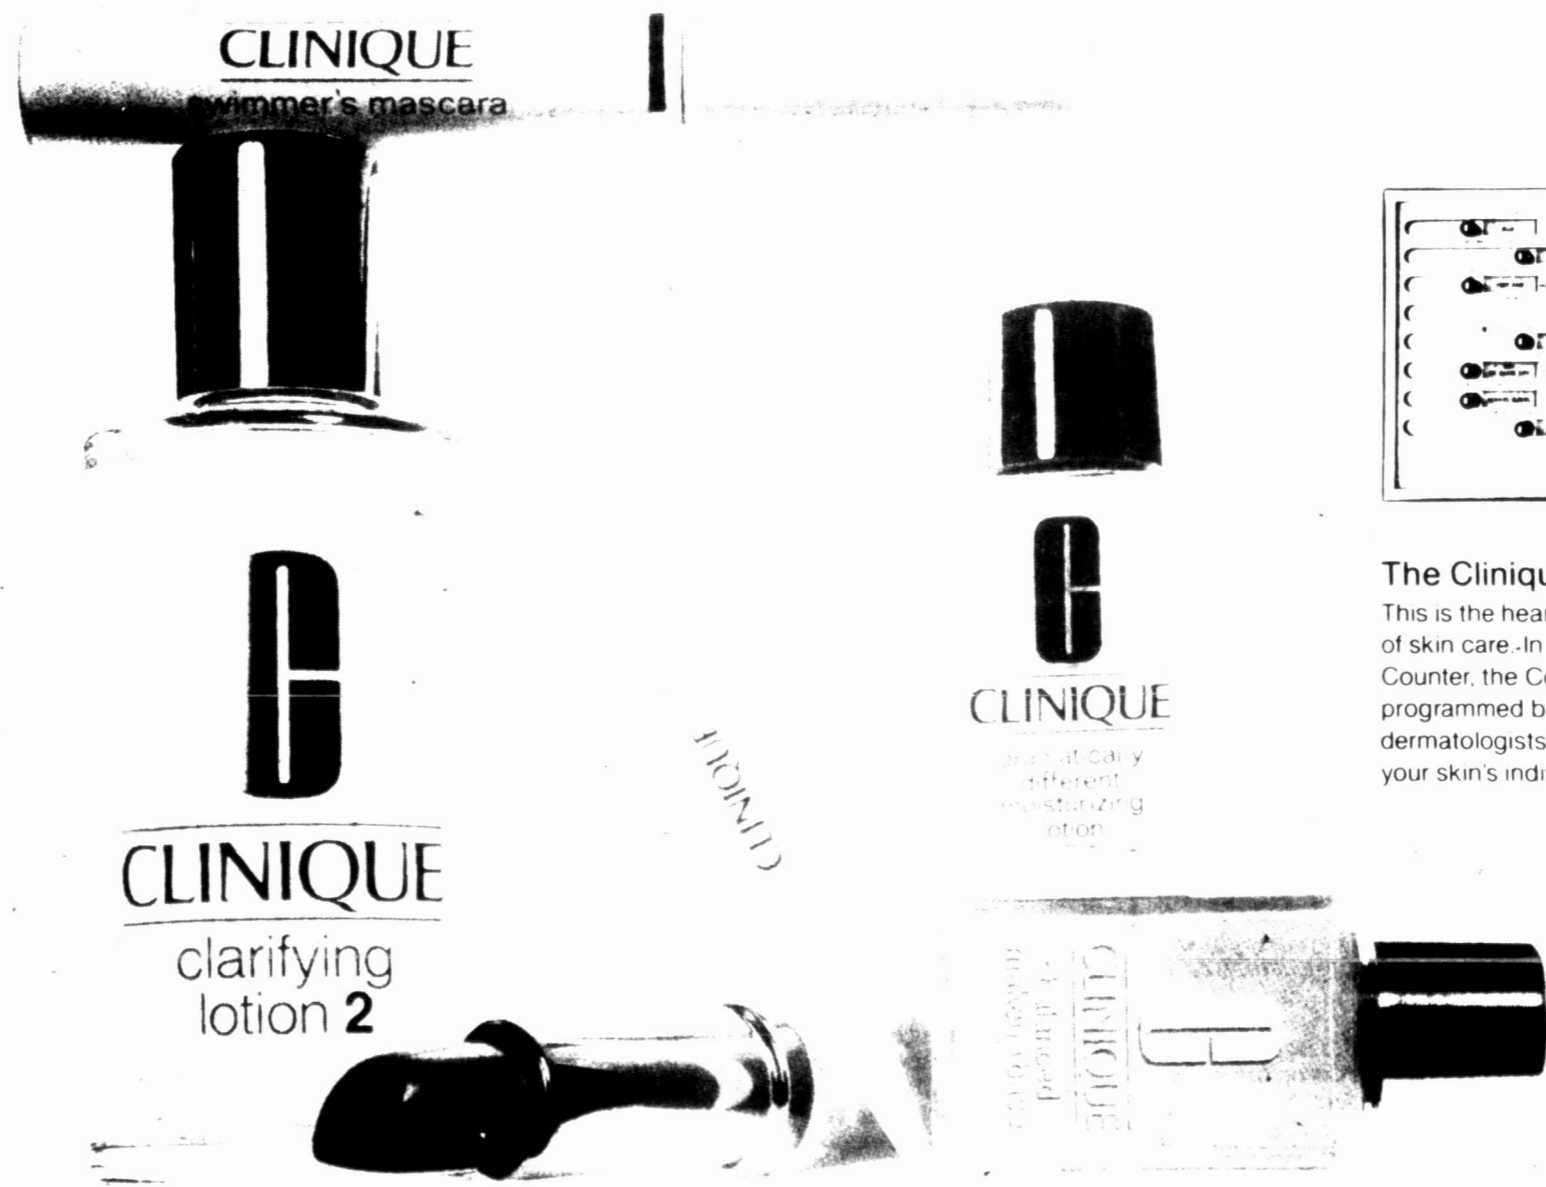

HANOVER, West Germany — Unidentified assailants threw a smoke bomb early Saturday through an open window of a shelter for people seeking political asylum, police said. No one was injured.

The bomb landed in a ground-floor corridor and exploded with a flash of light, spreading smoke throughout the center, said a police spokesman in this northeastern city.

The spokesman, who demanded anonymity, said witnesses saw two men run from the scene, but had police made no arrests. He said the smoke bomb appeared to have come from army supplies.

Police said Eastern European refugees are among those at the shelter.

Opinion

Positive news very welcome

OK, so the Steers lost their second football game by a wide margin. Let's not allow that to dim our spirits, particularly because some positive news developed on the local scene during the past week.

After all, it was just one game. A winning season and a shot at the playoffs remain as strong possibilities.

Stepping down a notch in competition certainly didn't mean the games would be easy. Chalk marks in the win column still must be earned by tough play on the field.

Meanwhile, Forsan's Buffaloes tallied a second win — both by two touchdown margins.

The more positive news of the past week, however, came in the categories of business and jobs — indicating some strong faith in the future of Big Spring.

At mid-week we learned that the Safeway store on Gregg Street would remain open because the employees there are willing to sacrifice approximately one-third of their wages in order to retain their jobs.

We empathize with their loss in wages, but agree that less pay is better than no job.

By week's end we received more positive news with the disclosure that a Wonder World discount department store will be opening at College Park and that three new businesses are planning to open in the Big Spring Mall. Each will be a help in improving the jobs and payroll situation.

The mall report came in the wake of recent openings by two other stores there.

In addition, the city learned that it will receive some flood repair funds from the state.

After a period punctuated more by business closings rather than openings, plus a series of water troubles, these latest developments are greatly welcome.

They show that the optimism and efforts of many local leaders are reaping some rewards, and that a positive outlook for the community's future is justified.

Now if the Steers can win next weekend, the outlook will be just that much brighter.

Esteem Machine offers good ideas

To the editor:
Esteem Machine came to Big Spring bringing with it some powerful ideas for helping young people handle today's pressures. Planned Parenthood did something positive for youth when it sponsored this exciting event.

First Christian Church opened its doors for the presentation when our park amphitheater was unusable.

More power to all groups who are addressing adolescent and teen problems.

Letter draws 'fresh air' thank you

To the editor:
Thank you sincerely for printing the very refreshing letter by Darryl Hammonds in the Tuesday, Sept. 9th issue of the Herald. His letter was like a "breath of fresh air." We seldom get inspiring "fresh air" like that in our newspaper.

We are happy that you printed Darryl's answer to the youth who were interviewed for the Aug. 31 paper (on the change in the drinking age).

These youth need to know that a "natural high" and true happiness comes from knowing God personally. Our hearts ached for them and the myriad of youth who are looking for happiness in the bottle and in drugs. Only despair and ruin are theirs in the end.

Mail brightens cancer victim's life

To the editor:
Although I am now a resident of East Texas, I lived in Big Spring 24 years. I can't honestly say I added much to the town, but then when I left I didn't take anything, either.

I left a lot of friends and a few very dear friends that I still miss today. I have lived in Henderson the past six years.

I have new friends, though not as many, and my lifestyle has changed considerably for the better. I'm not writing my autobiography, just giving a little background as to why I'm writing from a town so far away.

In June I went to visit my sister and brother-in-law in Climax, Mich. My brother-in-law is fighting lung cancer. I stayed a week, but had to return home. I prayed about the useless feeling we all have when someone we love is in this position. What could I do to make things easier or happier for him?

The answer was "mail." While I was there, the mail was very important to him. So I wrote an article to the Henderson News, asking people to write him if they found the need to brighten someone's life. The response was overwhelming. The mail poured in.

But this was in July. Although the mail still comes, the letters are few. So I thought why not Big Spring?

Maybe some of you will care. I know we are all very busy with our own lives, but surely God will bless you. I will thank you. Please write: Bill Machin, P.O. Box 116, Climax, Mich. 49034.

I miss you Big Spring!

Haunting memories result when failing to show love

By DARRELL BERKHEIMER
His death was a year ago — just shy of his 15th birthday.

Feelings of guilt continue to linger, clouding the memory of his loss.

Some people might say, "He was just a dog!"

Nevertheless, the guilt remains — because I think of how much I neglected him during the last couple years of his life.

I think about how we sometimes made him wait too long for fresh water or his supper.

I think of how we sometimes yelled at or scolded him for bothering us or getting underfoot when all he sought was a little attention in exchange for the unceasing love he offered us.

Often, all he wanted was a little neck-rubbing, a few pats on the head, some kind words or a couple minutes of ball-throwing. His tail quickly showed his eagerness and gratefulness for any such attention whenever he caught one of us looking his way.

Even at 14 years old, he bounded after a ball, a stick or a bone as if he were a puppy, and he would bring it back for more throws even though his hind quarters didn't work too well anymore.

We could tell, too, that he was losing his hearing and smelling abilities while his eyes were glazing over.

His name was Tracey, and we got him from the animal shelter on a Thanksgiving weekend — when he was only six weeks old.

He was a "schmoole" — part poodle and schnauzer — with bushy white and gray hair that was only half as curly as a poodle's, giving him the appearance of a small sheep dog.

Berky's babblings

He provided our family with many years of enjoyment.

I guess what we did to him during his last couple months was nearly a sin. We took him from his large grassy yard at the home we had in Utah to a small, sunbaked concrete patio behind the Odessa townhouse we occupied.

Of course he didn't like it at his age — an age when he needed more creature comforts, rather than fewer.

I chastise myself with thoughts about how I could have made his last weeks better if I only would have been a little more caring and considerate.

At least we took him along with us those last two days when we visited the Davis Mountains. We're sure he enjoyed that, and it might have reminded him of how often we took him camping with us in the mountains of Utah.

We had just returned from the Davis Mountains that Sunday evening when one of us must have left the patio gate open, or else it didn't shut properly.

We spent a couple hours searching for him when another townhouse resident reported spotting him walking along the median strip in the highway about a half-mile away. Not long after, my wife and daughter found him — dead, along the road where he had been hit.

Amid tears, we buried him — in an old blanket he frequently had laid on in the back of our station wagon.

It was no consolation to hear how veterinarians advise that old dogs often will wander away when their time has come — so their family will not have to see them die.

We've also speculated that he may have been trying to go back to his grassy yard in Utah, because he was heading north.

Yes, he was just a dog. But one thought remains fixed in my mind — how similar the guilt feelings after his death are to the thoughts I had when my aunt and grand-mother died a few years earlier.

How I wished then that I would have visited or phoned them more often, or simply told them more frequently that I loved them — perhaps by card or letter.

Are we doomed to thinking about what we could have done — when it's too late?

Perhaps there are some people I can tell — today, this week — how much I care for them, before ...

Airlines missing the boat

By JESSE TREVINO

The South Texas and border region, as most people know, lags the state in almost every economic indicator. While it has become the state's fastest growing area, it remains the state's poorest.

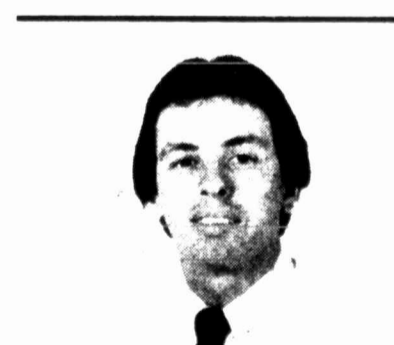

However struggling its economy, certain economic development tools lay unused and should be picked up to pry open a closed economy.

Airline service is one of those tools. Airline companies in Texas could make a critical contribution to the future economic development of the region by reshaping their perception of that market's ability to carry enough passengers to justify air service.

Like most Texans, airline companies see the border cities of Texas as final destination points instead of what they are: Intermediate stops from larger cities in the U.S. and Texas to larger cities in Mexico.

The airlines cannot bear full blame for the inadequate air service to South Texas and the border region. Too often, Texas border cities have touted themselves as the end of air routes, counting on the mysterious quality of the border alone to generate the kind of traffic that in turn attracts the attention of airline executives.

That line of thinking has cost cities dearly. A more innovative argument would be to cast these cities as intermediate stops to build an airline's so-called "load factor" — the measurement airlines use to determine the profitability of a route.

Jesse Trevino

This is no statistical nicety. It has killed South Texas and border cities in the past because their population could not carry the 60-percent load factor necessary to support the air links.

But were Laredo, McAllen, Harlingen and Corpus Christi considered intermediate stops between Houston, Dallas, San Antonio, Oklahoma City and New Orleans and the Mexican cities of Monterrey, Guadalajara and Mexico City, then the local load factor might become insignificant because the passenger load could make the route profitable.

Airline companies routinely make one or two stops during many of their Washington-Dallas or New York-Houston runs, for example. The same line of thinking should be applied to the Texas-Mexico air routes.

Another answer to increasing air service — critical in industrial site selection decisions — lies in using existing airports on the Mexican side as truly international airports.

McAllen and Laredo, for example, could each use airport facilities on the Mexican side that easily could be improved.

U.S. companies operate an industrial zone inside Mexico encompassing 1,000 miles along the Rio Grande. Using already constructed international airports on the Mexican side seems logical; and given the growth of the industrial zone, taking advantage of Mexican airports seems highly advisable.

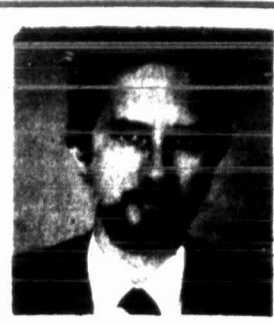

Border cities and their sister cities along the river already participate in industrial, commercial and social affairs and activities. Why not extend their co-operation to airline service?

The cities in this region haven't realized their full potential because ground — not air — transportation is the primary mode of traveling. Inadequate air service costs South Texas millions of dollars in lost tourist and convention trade and in the form of companies going elsewhere because no convenient air service exists.

When the problem of the South Texas economy is discussed, visions of multi-million dollar programs dance in people's heads. Improving the availability of air service into this part of Texas is only a small part of what can be done cost-free.

A few determined people should arrange to talk to those who are flying over the obvious.

Jesse Trevino writes on Hispanic social and political issues.

Gib Lewis caught in tax circle

By JIM DAVIS
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Pictures in many Texas newspapers are featuring House Speaker Gib Lewis as he's surrounded by the news media — a scene replete with bright television lights shining in his eyes, microphones and tape recorders held near his face and reporters with notebooks pressing close to hear his comments.

For some politicians, such media attention would be welcomed, but Lewis obviously is getting tired of it, and it's hard to blame him. Mob journalism seldom is pretty, even if warranted.

But it's hard to feel too sorry for Lewis, because he caused most of this fierce attention himself. The media is anxious to catch the latest version of his position on a tax bill.

The House speaker says his position hasn't changed at all, but that's stretching the facts a bit.

Exactly what Lewis has said is open to interpretation. The following interpretation is mine:

1. He said a tax increase might be avoided if the Legislature would adopt certain budget cuts and accounting changes.

2. He said no tax increase would be needed until the 1987 regular legislative session if the Legislature in special session would adopt certain budget cuts and accounting changes.

3. He said he would support a tax hike if the Senate agreed to all his proposals to avoid one and it turned out the state still would bounce checks for lack of funds, which he didn't expect to happen.

4. While campaigning for re-election in his Fort Worth district, he predicted that a tax bill would be passed in the special session because the Legislature would not be able to do enough to avoid bouncing checks prior to the 1987 session.

5. He returned to Austin to say he was just making a prediction and still is opposed to a tax increase.

6. He said a tax increase in the current special session is a "strong possibility" after the houses agree on spending cuts and accounting measures.

Subtle changes are noticeable in his stand, and that's really to be expected. Compromise is an integral part of the legislative process, and Lewis knows how that game is played. He can't be faulted for shifting his position; he's only guilty of awkwardness in doing so.

The big question is whether he can convince enough House members to join him in moving toward a compromise with the Senate. Many House members remain unconvinced that a tax hike is necessary, and no bill can take effect immediately without a two-thirds vote by both houses.

Without such a vote, no new taxes could be collected until 90 days after the end of the session, expected later this month or in early October. A 90-day delay could mean that cash-flow problems will occur later this year, with the state unable to pay all its bills.

Lewis is in an unenviable position in his re-election bid.

If he yields too easily to the pro-tax movement, he could lose the support of some fiscal conservatives.

If he stands too firm against new taxes, he's in a position to be blamed for any fiscal disasters that occur later. They wouldn't come until after his election, but predictions of them would.

He also could be seen by some loyal Democrats as helping Republican Bill Clements recapture the Governor's Mansion from Democrat Mark White.

It's likely, however, that none of that will occur because a compromise plan probably will be negotiated between the houses and among Lewis, White and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby.

The three top officials, all Democrats, then will smile and say their differences weren't so deep after all.

Depression days now a far cry from bank directorship

By LAURA MURRAY
The Brazosport Facts
LAKE JACKSON (AP) — Times were tough, but 24-year-old Nenad Baron knew he could make it.

The Depression was in full swing. Baron's family couldn't have picked a worse time to move to America from their native Yugoslavia.

Shortly after their arrival in Chicago, the young man's father became one of the many victims of the Depression.

He lost everything. "Banks was closed, and business to the hilt. Twenty million people went out of jobs. No jobs. No language. No trade. No nothing," Baron recalls.

"Some people went to bed at night and they were rich. They got up in the morning and didn't have a dime for a cup of coffee," he said, in a heavy accent.

Those days are a far cry from being a stockholder and director at the First City Bank in Lake Jackson.

Baron, who climbed the ladder of success over 20 years in the shrimping industry, found that hard work is the key to making it.

"Thinking back, and where I come from, and all my life, I could never dream that I'd wind up over here," the Lake Jackson resident said.

Baron left Chicago shortly after arriving in America because he could not find a job there and didn't want to be a burden to his father.

"I went from city to city looking for a job. No job."

He decided to stay put in Pennsylvania. He lived on credit for six months before he finally found a job in a refinery, making 45 cents an hour.

When that job ran out, he went to New York and worked in a defense plant, then was hired on as a hand in a shipyard.

After that, he painted houses for $4 a day.

"I was in this country about two or three years by that time. I understand a little bit of English and he (the boss) could see that I wasn't doing good so he said to me he wasn't going to keep me," Baron recalls.

That news was like a knife in the heart.

"So I said to him, 'don't let me go. Pay me whatever you want,'" and the shipyard boss made an offer of $2 a day, Baron says.

"So I stayed and before six months was over he was paying me $6 a day. You see that I was ambitious and anxious, but I didn't know how."

Baron doesn't believe in laziness. Children in Europe spent their time before and after school working on the farm, unlike today's children, who spend spare time playing.

"I hate to do it, but if I have to, I would dig ditches with my bare fingers not to be lazy. Lazy people never accomplish nothing," he said.

"When you do nothing, you think nothing, and you die."

When Baron came to America and times were rough, President Herbert Hoover promised prosperity was around the corner.

"But the prosperity never did come," Baron said, at least not until President Roosevelt came into office.

Baron met his wife, Tiveda, in New York, and married her when he was 35.

In 1946, Baron decided to try his hand at shrimping. He moved to Georgia and bought a boat, keeping it until he could afford a bigger boat, and a bigger one.

He heard the shrimping was good in Texas so he decided to move to Freeport in 1957.

Baron built up his finances by building boats and then reselling them for a profit. He also learned to save his money.

"I shrimped for about 20 years until I got up on my feet," he said. "Some people make the same kind of money, but they spend it."

"I figure save some for rainy days. I always say 'take care of pennies and dollars will take care of themselves.'"

And he learned the art of investment.

In the early 1960s, Baron was among a group of people who bought American Savings & Loan, then sold it at a profit. He later invested in the First Capital Bank of West Columbia.

The work ethic Baron learned as a child in Yugoslavia is apparently to be with him for life, he says.

"My mom used to say to me that I'm going to die standing up, that I won't have enough time to die lying down."

Grand Ol' Opening

Howard County Republicans gathered in Big Spring Saturday morning to commemorate the grand opening of the county Republican headquarters. Located at 501 Gregg St., the facility is to be open afternoons throughout the week during the remainder of the campaign season.

Workers hopeful seals may save themselves

By SUE CROSS

Associated Press Writer

YAKUTAT, Alaska (AP) — Volunteers aboard a Coast Guard cargo plane carrying nearly five tons of gear said Saturday they were short of equipment needed to rescue seals and porpoises trapped when a glacier dammed a fiord.

Workers still hope to save some of an estimated 50 porpoises dying in remote Russell Lake, formerly a fiord open to the sea, and a team leader said the seals might save themselves.

When the would-be rescuers brought their equipment together for the first time late Friday, they were short seven of the 12 boats needed to herd the marine mammals to capture.

They also expected a donated float plane to carry their gear into the lake basin 25 miles from Yakutat, but the plane became useless to the effort when it arrived without floats.

"It has been a blow," said coordinator Ken McCann, who was trying to buoy, against local skepticism, the spirits of about 20 volunteers and find a way to keep the mission going.

"We're not saying that we're going to rescue animals. We are saying that, as organizations, we believe we should make an attempt," said McCann, an administrator at the Whale Museum in Friday Harbor, Wash.

The museum is coordinating the rescue bid with the Sausalito-based California Marine Mammal Center.

Two researchers watched the lake during the weekend to check reports that seals were crossing the mud-and-ice dam that the surging Hubbard Glacier pushed across the mouth of the fiord this spring.

"If they are getting out, that's great. We would look very foolish mounting a mass assault on them on Monday when they can get out of there themselves," McCann said.

But if the seals can escape, it creates a new set of problems.

If the seals were rounded up to be flown to the sea, the volunteers could call in a Coast Guard helicopter to carry them. During that time, McCann had hoped, the porpoises could be corralled and prepared for airlift.

But McCann said he cannot justify calling in the Coast Guard without a large number of seals to rescue. The porpoises must be caught one at a time, and McCann said he would have to rent a float plane — at $200 to $300 per flight — to carry out each one.

Scientists helping the group disagree whether the porpoises are healthy enough to be saved even if the logistics can be solved.

The mammals have been sickened by exposure to fresh water as the lake's salt water is diluted by rain and runoff, and are starving as their saltwater food supply dies.

Researchers who landed on the lake over the last few days reported porpoises swimming within 10 feet of their float planes.

"We all have a lot of faith that if we feed them, they'll come close," McCann said, adding he hoped to begin catching the porpoises by mid-week.

Those that are strong enough to survive an airlift would be taken to a rehabilitation center being built in Yakutat.

In the meantime, the rescuers tried to make as few waves as possible among Yakutat's 450 residents, who seem incredulous that people are spending thousands of dollars to save seals that local fishermen consider a nuisance and the Tlingit Indians consider a delicacy.

Townfolk also were taken aback by the waves of camera crews and reporters who camped out in schools and in residents' living rooms and overwhelmed the town's three restaurants.

"We've never had this much attention for Yakutat," said Ben Thomas, the school accountant. "Before, we never used to be mentioned even on the weather."

Candidates find polls favorable

AUSTIN (AP) — Republican gubernatorial candidate Bill Clements says a new poll shows him with a "comfortable" lead, while officials in Gov. Mark White's campaign says its polls show the Democrat moving up.

Clements, the former governor ousted by White in 1982, told the Dallas Morning News that a recent survey he commissioned showed him leading White.

White campaign press secretary Mark McKinnon disputed that Wednesday, saying their most recent survey and those of other politicians show White rapidly gaining ground on Clements.

Neither side agreed to make the actual poll results public.

In an interview with a News reporter in Uvalde, Clements said a survey by his pollster, Richard Wirthin of Washington D.C., showed him leading White.

The newspaper Wednesday quoted "campaign insiders" as saying the margin was more than 20 points. It said the survey of 600 likely voters was taken Aug. 23-24 and had a margin of error of plus or minus 4 percentage points.

Clements said the poll disputes suggestions by Democrats that White has closed the gap because of his leadership in calling the Legislature into special session and advocating a temporary tax increase to solve the state's fiscal crisis.

"All this nonsense that the White people and are putting out that he is a great hero and making progress with the special session is nothing more than baloney," Clements said.

But Mark McKinnon, White's campaign press secretary, said White's polls show positive results for the governor.

"Our polls show dramatically different numbers. There are congressional district polls where we have moved 10 to 12 points in the last month," McKinnon said.

He also charged the Clements camp with claiming a big lead to hide the results he said White's polls are showing.

"We think they're floating bad numbers because they're getting desperate. The numbers are shifting dramatically in our direction," McKinnon said.

Meanwhile, in Houston Wednesday, Clements said he still opposes raising taxes, although House Speaker Gib Lewis has predicted the Legislature will enact a temporary sales tax increase.

Clements also said Texans can expect no relief from the state's budget woes by the federal government enacting an oil import fee.

State leaders need to control spending and not raise taxes, the Republican told two Kiwanis chapters in Houston.

"I'm against any tax increase," Clements said. "I have yet to hear one Texan come up to me and say, 'Bill, will you raise my taxes?'"

The former governor said one of his campaign surveys showed about three-fourths of Texans were against higher taxes.

He said raising taxes was inappropriate when some 10 percent of the nation's unemployed are in Texas.

Clements said he had not talked to Lewis recently and did not know what he had planned.

1986 TAX ACT

(What to do now?)

Now that the 1986 Tax Act is out of the joint committee, it's possible to make some tax planning suggestions with the hope that the law doesn't get changed in the House or Senate before final approval.

Some planning suggestions:
 • Go ahead with sales of long-term capital assets before the end of 1986 so gains on those assets will be taxed at the preferred capital gain rate. The maximum capital gains tax in 1986 is 20%; that rate will be 28% when the law is fully in effect.

• If you have losses from certain tax shelters, you might want to consider investing in good income-producing limited partnerships. The new law would allow such losses to offset income from other passive investments.

• Defer income into later years when possible. Professionals should consider delaying their December billings into the following January.

• Due to the drop in tax brackets, charitable deductions will be worth less to you after 1986. Consider increasing your 1986 charitable deductions.

• Even though the IRA deduction will be disallowed for certain taxpayers, the earnings in the IRA will still be non-taxable until withdrawn. Review the benefits of an IRA in your situation.

• 401(k) pension contribution deductions drop from $30,000 in 1986 to $20,000 in 1987. Contribute as much as you can to your 401(k) plan this year.

• Pay the balance of your state and local tax bills before December 31, 1986, to provide for deduction on your 1986 federal tax return.

• Consider borrowing against your home to reduce consumer debt on automobiles, credit cards, etc. Consumer interest deductions will be phased out, home mortgage interest remains deductible (with some limits).

We will be watching progress of the tax bill through the House and the Senate and keeping you posted on tax planning opportunities.

International confessions unconfirmed

EL PASO (AP) — A Texas Ranger testified that none of Henry Lee Lucas' self-proclaimed international murders could be confirmed following an investigation.

The validity of Lucas' murder confessions is the subject of a lengthy pretrial hearing that will continue Monday in state district court here.

Authorities said Lucas confessed to more than 600 murders. But he eventually retracted all of them, including the killing of 72-year-old Librada Apodaca, for which he was indicted almost two years ago.

Lucas also confessed to killing a French prostitute in Northeast El Paso, former Teamsters Union President Jimmy Hoffa and unidentified victims in Canada, Switzerland and Finland, Texas Ranger Clayton Smith testified Friday.

In addition, he said Lucas claimed he was "a contract killer in Mexico."

Smith went with El Paso police and Lucas almost two years ago in search of the apartment where Lucas claimed to have killed the prostitute. But he couldn't find the apartment, Smith said.

He said he doubted that Lucas' claims about Hoffa's murder "was even looked into."

But a Texas Rangers special task force participated in investigating about 3,000 cases during Lucas' 18-month-long confession spree, Smith testified under cross-examination. Smith was part of that task force.

Economist: Brighter business horizon

AUSTIN — Although Texas currently faces an economic bind, the state's business horizon is brighter than most people realize, a University of Texas economic expert said Friday.

James Smith, acting director of UT's Bureau for Business Research and former chief economist for Union Carbide, predicted a boost in the national economy next year and continued diversification in Texas industries would help solve the state's money problems.

The service, information and machinery industries have begun to take up much of the slack in the state's economy and unemployment, Smith said.

Continued expansion into these and other industries, like microelectronics, has made Texas' business profile look very similar to California's, he said. "The diversification of the economies is almost identical," he said.

The national economy has already begun to benefit from low-interest rates and rock-bottom oil prices, he said, which should encourage new industry eager to take advantage of Texas' depressed real estate market.

Charge dump site search violated law

WASHINGTON (AP) — The General Accounting Office says the U.S. Department of Energy violated federal law when it dropped its search for a second possible site for a high-level nuclear waste dump earlier this year.

That finding prompted Sen. Lloyd Bentsen to vote to correct the situation. Deaf Smith County in the Texas Panhandle is on a list of three sites being considered for the nuclear waste.

The Energy Department said in May that Deaf Smith County, along with sites in Nevada and

Washington state, would be tested as possible sites for the nation's first nuclear waste dump.

At the time, Energy Secretary John Herrington said a search for a second site had been halted.

The GAO informed Bentsen of its finding, and Bentsen vowed Friday to try to correct the situation when Congress convenes in January.

Bentsen said he believed the Energy Department violated federal law when it decided to drop its hunt for a second site.

Man wrongly accused; mistrial declared

LONGVIEW (AP) — Friends and former coaches say they knew all along that a man who has been found wrongly accused was innocent of killing a store customer in a Dallas area robbery for which he was about to go on trial.

A state district judge on Friday released 22-year-old Marvin Maurice Wells and declared a mistrial.

Wells was to go on trial for killing the teen-ager in a convenience-store robbery that was videotaped.

"That's great," said Darryl Johnson, a senior basketball guard at Michigan State University who was a teammate of Wells' at Flint Central High School.

"I never could believe that Marvin could get mixed up in such a situation," he said.

Limited waivers granted

AUSTIN (AP) — Officials told the State Board of Education Saturday that only 52 of the Texas teachers who flunked their competency tests have been given emergency permits to teach another year.

"Across the state there is just not the teacher shortage to necessitate the waivers," Commissioner William Kirby told the Board.

The only waivers granted were for specialized teachers in building and industry trades, Kirby said.

"There was not a single waiver other than that," he said.

Kirby's report Saturday followed an announcement Friday by the Texas State Teachers Association that it was dropping two federal lawsuits which challenged the Texas Examination of Current Administrators and Teachers (TECAT), as the competency test is called.

TSTA said all the teacher plaintiffs in the legal action had ultimately passed the TECAT test, which means they can continue teaching.

The controversial examination, ordered by the 1984 Legislature to see if current teachers were capable of holding their jobs, was first given the state's 210,000 teachers in March. A second test was given in June for those who failed.

Kirby said 99.1 percent of the state's certified teachers ultimately passed the exam on reading and writing with 6,579 educators filing both tests.

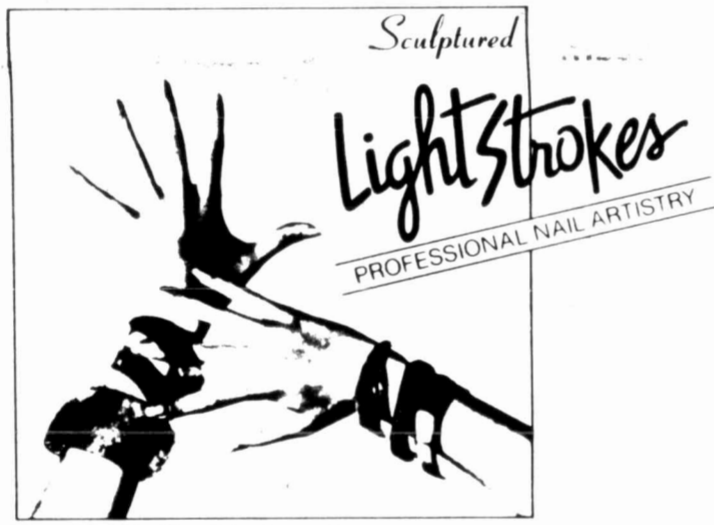

School districts unable to replace the failed teachers could ask the Texas Education Agency for a one-time, one-year emergency extension of a teacher's permit.

Kirby said Saturday that 72 districts requested exceptions for 231 administrators and teachers who had failed the tests. The TEA granted the request to 26 districts, involving 52 teachers.

Seven district requests are pending.

"We have in our computer banks the names of 3,000 certified teachers who registered when they took the TECAT test and said they wanted to come back into the profession," Kirby said.

"Then we have schools advising us, like Houston, that they are having as many as 200 applicants a week for teacher jobs."

Sooners will decide runoffs

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Oklahoma Democrats pick the winner of a fiery gubernatorial runoff campaign on Tuesday.

Also on the ballot are several hotly contested runoffs for other statewide offices.

Attorney General Mike Turpen and Oklahoma City businessman David Walters are seeking the Democratic nomination for governor and a spot on the Nov. 4 general election ballot.

Waiting in the wings for the general gubernatorial election campaign are Republican Henry Bellmon, a former U.S. senator and governor, and two independents — state Rep. Nelson Little of Tulsa and truck stop operator Jerry Brown of Oklahoma City.

A light to moderate turnout for a runoff election has been forecast by election officials.

Walters, making his first political race, led Turpen during the primary with 46 percent of the vote to 40 percent for the attorney general.

Since then, the two have engaged in a heated battle with charges over campaign loans and the use of state phones overshadowing such issues as falling state revenues.

The gubernatorial candidates are seeking to succeed Democratic Gov. George Nigh, who is prohibited from seeking a third term.

Turpen, 36, complained primary election night that Walters pulled off the surprise of the election after using a massive, negative television campaign that distorted Turpen's record.

Campaign expenditure reports showed Walters outspent Turpen 7-1 in the weeks before the election.

Turpen, vowing to "take the gloves off," charged a few days after the primary that Walters broke state law by borrowing $162,000 on his home from individuals to finance the last-minute media blitz.

Walters said he consulted two lawyers before taking the loans, adding that the attorneys advised him the action did not violate a state law prohibiting campaign donations or loans of more than $5,000.

He said he was putting his personal assets into the campaign.

Walters announced late last week that he had obtained a loan from a financial institution to repay the $162,000, adding that "should remove any concern that I may have violated the law or the spirit of the law."

Turpen countered that Walters' repayment was "too little too late" and did not negate acceptance of the earlier loans.

Walters' loan also drew criticism from the state Republican Party, which hinted the GOP would make it a major issue if Walters is successful in the runoff.

The primary saw the defeat of one incumbent state office-holder — Lt. Gov. Spencer Bernard, a Democrat.

Another incumbent Democrat, Corporation Commissioner Hamp Baker, is being challenged in the runoff by state Sen. Bob Hopkins of Tulsa. Hopkins held a slight lead in the primary.

The Republican Corporation Commission runoff pits Phyllis Gault and Steve Davis, both of Norman.

One of the closest contests is expected to be for the Democratic nomination for lieutenant governor. The candidates are Cleta Deatherage Mitchell, former chairman of the state House Appropriations Committee, and Robert S. Kerr III, former state representative. Both are from Oklahoma City.

Another Democratic incumbent, state Treasurer Leo Winters, withdrew his candidacy after finishing second in the primary.

Three years away from jail, Estes is out of the fast lane

EDITOR'S NOTE — When Billie Sol Estes left prison three years ago, he said: "I'm just one drink away from being a drunk and just one deal away from being back in prison."

By MIKE COCHRAN
Associated Press Writer

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — West Texas con artist Billie Sol Estes says he's abandoned life in the fast track but has not ruled out a book that might change history, or at least put it in the "right perspective."

Still portly and personable at 61, Estes insists his wheeling and dealing days are over and that he does not want to stir up any fires.

The paroled swindler said he is content just sitting back thinking and observing, living one day at a time and keeping his options open.

But he conceded that a book "that would change history" remains one of those options.

"It might put things in the right perspective," he said, running a hand through his thick, graying hair and adjusting a pair of new glasses.

With his lawyer seated nearby, Estes talked recently about his current activities in Abilene, where he lives with his wife Patsy and holds down an unspecified job in the oil industry.

"It's real, real slow right now," he said.

Surprisingly, Estes was less reluctant to discuss his arrest last year for allegedly raping a 38-year-old Mexican widow who had come to Abilene to be his housekeeper. The charge subsequently was dismissed.

Estes maintains the woman's charges were unfounded and said prosecutors would have "looked like complete fools" if the case had gone to trial.

Two years ago, he stirred up a hornet's nest when he told a grand jury in Franklin that the late President Lyndon Johnson ordered the 1961 slaying of a U.S. Department of Agriculture official.

Confirming reports leaked to three Texas newspapers, Robertson County District Attorney John Paschall said Estes told grand jurors that Johnson ordered the killing of Henry Marshall because the USDA official could have linked the then-vice president to Estes' illegal activities.

However, Paschall pointed out that the unsubstantiated testimony by Estes was not endorsed by the grand jury.

Marshall was an upper level official in a federal agency that oversaw cotton-growing licenses in Texas. He was shot to death in June 1961 on his farm in Franklin, 120 miles south of Dallas.

Several of Johnson's former associates disputed the Estes allegations and denounced him as a publicity seeking "pathological liar."

The uproar coincided with the release of a book by Estes' daughter Pam entitled "Billie Sol: King of the Texas Wheeler Dealers." The book dealt largely with Pam's childhood memories of her father and shed little light on Estes' darker side.

"The book was real successful, a bestseller," Estes said the other day, perhaps stretching things just a bit.

Whatever its sales and success, "Billie Sol" offered no real insight into events leading up to Estes' conviction in the early 1960s for federal mail fraud and conspiracy to defraud. Creditors claimed Estes owed $38 million.

He was assessed a 15-year prison sentence, but served less than half that time, mostly at a minimum security facility outside El Paso.

Estes was paroled in 1971, but, as he later told the Associated Press, he remained haunted by a history of bizarre and ill-fated compulsiveness. He said it was a form of insanity that persists even today.

"I'm one of the unfortunates," he sighed.

By 1979, Estes was back in prison, convicted of mail fraud and conspiracy to conceal assets to avoid paying back taxes. The fraud case involved a farmer who swore that Estes conned him out of $50,000.

On the eve of his 1983 release from the federal prison camp at Big Spring, Estes told the AP:

"I'm just one drink away from being a drunk and just one deal away from being back in prison. I'm a compulsive person. I'm a compulsive drinker, and if I smoked, I'd be a compulsive smoker."

"Anything I've done, it's been compulsive."

Now, seated in his lawyer's office, Estes indicated with a laugh that he's still a little crazy but that he no longer has the urge to wheel and deal.

"I think your character changes as you go through the years," he said. "When you're a child, you want to play with marbles. Those marbles are real important to you. When you get older, those marbles are not important to you anymore."

He said he's happy now just being with his family, most of whom have stood by him in and out and between prison stints.

"I've got no complaints against anyone today," he said. "No vengeance, remorse or ill will."

Any goals?

"Each day, I take life as it is. There comes a time when you don't have all the answers, and you start observing."

What's next?

"You never know," he said. "A person who's been over the road a lot like I have, you wait for an opportunity. And you might take advantage of it."

Five years from now?

"Only a fool says what he'll be doing tomorrow, because tomorrow might not come. And yesterday's gone and will never return. So I live one day at a time."

And probation?

"It's not a problem for me because I don't really care about getting in the fast lane of life again. It might interest me to go to an Alcoholics Anonymous meeting with you tonight. But it wouldn't interest me to drill an oil well tonight."

"Your values change."

How?

"You know, what I'd say or what I'd do or what I'd think ... Right now, I'm just going to lay back and observe."

Billie Sol Estes kisses his wife Patsy in this file photo taken upon his release from the Big Spring federal prison camp. Three years later, Estes says he may write a book, but has no intention of getting back into the fast lane.

Shaw will announce candidacy

State Rep. Larry Don Shaw (D-Big Spring) said he plans to seek re-election to the post. He plans to make a formal announcement at 3 p.m. today at his campaign headquarters, Suite 210-C of the Permian Building.

He said he feels compelled to seek a fourth term of office because of the many problems Texas faces, including the devastation of the oil and agriculture industries.

Shaw, 33, was first elected to the state House of Representatives in 1980. He was selected to serve on the Election Committee and the Environmental Affairs Committee.

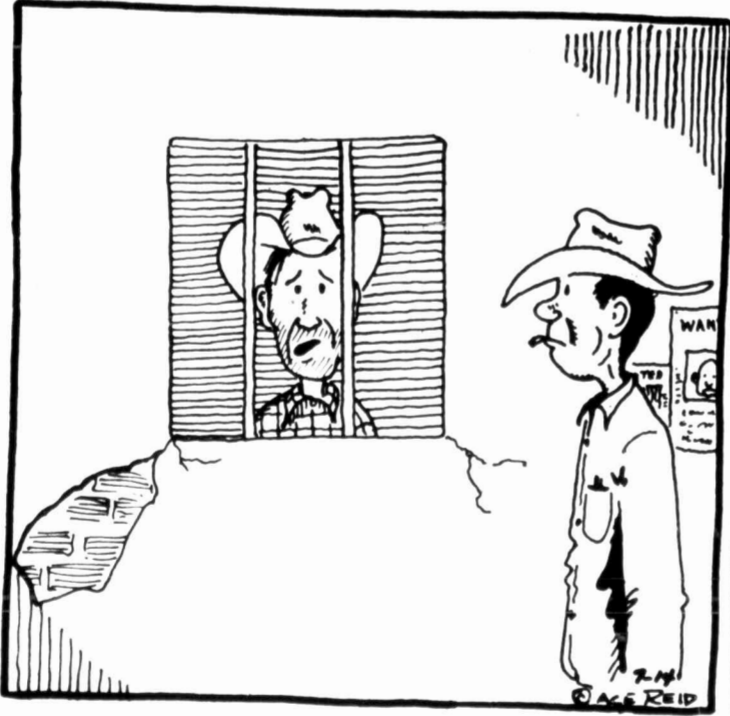

He now serves as vice chairman of the Budget and Oversight Committee for Science and Technology and is a member of the House

General Investigating Committee. As vice chairman of the Natural Resources Committee, passed the first state-wide water plan passed, which had failed in all previous attempts to pass.

Steers support merits looking forward

By EDDIE CURRAN
Staff Writer

With a few minutes left in the fourth quarter of Friday night's game, and the Steers down 56-6, I was still hearing cheers from three men in Steer caps sitting on the very top row of the west side of Memorial Stadium, right in front of the press box.

"Come on D!"
"Thataway to go!...Way to go Phillip!"
"Let's go Steers!...Let's go!"

The men were standing, sitting down, standing up again — all the time yelling encouragement to the troops. You would've thought the Steers were driving for the game winning score from all the noise these men were making.

And these three men in the gold and black caps weren't the only people cheering on the Steers in perhaps their darkest hour in years. Others yelled encouragement, and even those who were all yelled out remained in their seats.

It would have been so easy to rise ceremoniously halfway through that disastrous third quarter, look your buddy or wife in the eye, and proclaim dramatically, "I'm leaving."

That didn't happen Friday night, for one reason. Class. And class is the most important ingredient in any program. The Steers had stunk up the field, as I'm sure they'd tell you, but there was no indication of frustration or sarcasm from the fans. The players, already ashamed of themselves, didn't need to be jumped on.

Having played high school football, I could sympathize somewhat with the Steers predicament. My senior year, our team played a team called Silas, and we had been warned all week to beware of their speed. As a defensive end, and a slow one at that, it was my duty not to let Silas' quick little backs around my end.

To my dying day, I'll never forget one play. A Silas runner, who probably didn't weigh 150 pounds but who could run 100 yards faster than I could run 50, took a pitch and headed around my end. I ran outside, trying to stretch out the run and buy time for some teammate support, when the little guy planted his foot, shook his hips one way, his head another, and seemed to vibrate.

His move didn't last a tenth of a second, but it was long enough to suggest several different possibilities. He was going right, he was going left, he was going right, he was going left.

The conflicting messages from my brain must have confused my legs, because I went down in a heap. My legs had said to hell with it. I don't remember if he went around or over my prostrate mass, but I do remember silently cheering several teammates as they tackled the little whippet 30 or so yards down the field.

On that play, and throughout the game, me and my teammates simply couldn't move fast enough. For this reason, I always preferred playing against big people who tried to run over you. An Earl Campbell type might knock you into next week, but at least you'll tackle or slow him down in the process.

A good hard hit is what makes a player feel like he's in the game — like he has his rythm. Early on Friday night, the Steers were unable to land solid blows, and from then on, they never found a groove. Early on, they were confused and awed by Estacado's speed, and they played like they were on a field of marbles. Rather than attacking, they simply didn't know what to do.

Intimidated by speed, they played hesitantly when they should have 'Damned the torpedoes, full speed ahead.' The point being that, by the second quarter, they were no longer playing Steers football. The game was over.

For this reason, the 56-6 loss was not as discouraging as it appears. Routs are not that indicative. All it takes is for a team to lose it's cool, stop playing its game, and the rout is on. We have only to look back to last week's game against El Paso to know the Steers can play good football.

In next week's game, however, the Steers must find their groove and play with confidence. That's going to be the test — will the Steers play with confidence after losing by 50 points?

The loss was, for the players, embarrassing and disheartening. After such a loss, they can't help but ask questions about themselves. Hopefully, the Steers will have the maturity to see that tomorrow's another day. At the same time, the humiliation of the loss hopefully will make them stronger, more determined, rather than weaker.

Humiliation is a tough word, but not too strong for the way the players surely felt Friday night. I remember feeling it after the Silas runner blew by me. It wasn't so much that I felt humiliated in front of Mom and Dad (they were going to love me either way) or friends. But rather, in front of my defensive line coach.

After I got burned, I locked for some time at my feet, and finally, because I had to, I glanced at my coach on the sidelines. He was waiting for me to do so, and when I did, he stomped his foot and turned away in disgust.

We were a good team that year, probably because we respected our coaches. From my little time around the Steers, I sense they respect their coaches, and I sense they were ashamed after Friday night.

Anyone who's ever played high school football knows that some of the finest moments come just after the gun signals the win. Dirty, sweaty, maybe a little bruised, you savour the victory on the grass and under the lights for a few short minutes.

Parents and friends come on to the field, curious and congratulatory, and you feel like the world is your oyster. I remember loving the way my hair felt, matted and sweaty, when I took off my helmet. Heck, I even liked the way it looked.

But after a humiliating loss, the armor and the hair feel the same, but the tide is turned. Rather than the rush of the warrior, you experience the lack of respect of the clown. The suit is the same, but you don't feel like you deserve to wear it.

Next Friday night in San Angelo the Steers owe it to the three fans in black and gold caps to play their hearts out. Most of all, they owe it to themselves. For better or worse, failures on the gridiron, like successes, are never forgotten.

Netters master the mental

By STEVE BELVIN
Sports Editor

On the walls of Big Spring High School tennis coach John Strahl's office are such motivational messages as 'choice, not chance determines destiny' and, 'if it's worth doing at all, then it's worth doing well.'

He is a man with many mental messages to his team, constantly pointing them into their heads, guffing his team ready for fall tennis competition.

Big Spring High School tennis coach John Strahl make no bones about his firm belief in the mental aspect of tennis. "I'm preaching mental discipline to the kids. We've come so far in the last two years."

So they have. The Big Spring tennis team has grown from a group of timid underclassmen to a team filled with experience and ability.

For his fourth year at the helm, Strahl inherits seven experienced players, including last year's number one girls singles player Angie Wilson, along with number two player Laura Cunningham.

Strahl says that Wilson, a junior, has been very impressive in the past two weeks of workouts. "Angie has been showing me what she can do in practice. She's willing to make the four steps we have made as our goals."

Those goals the Illinois native is talking about are ones he has been stressing since the beginning of his tenure at BSHS. He refers to them as the 'fourth dimensions'. They are: 1) desire, 2) dedication, 3) determination, and 4) discipline.

"Right now we're at the fourth

Other veteran players Strahl is counting on to lead the way are Aaron Allen, Amber Logback, Taff Wennek, Quade Weaver and Stacey Parks. "We should be in good shape with seven of the 18 team members having experience."

Strahl says the future looks bright for the Big Spring tennis program. He should know, having long had an inside source at the lower tennis levels.

It's none other than his wife,

Deanna, who's in her second season as tennis coach for the junior high program. In essence, it creates a great 'farm system' for the high school program.

Lady Steers miss setters in loss

By EDDIE CURRAN
Staff Writer

In Saturday afternoon's game against the Fort Stockton Panthers, the Big Spring Lady Steers could have used some setters to pave the way for their spikers.

As it was, the lack of good sets spelled doom for the Lady Steers, with Fort Stockton taking the match by a 15-8, 15-9 score.

"We lost our setters, and we're trying to use two hitters as setters," explained Lady Steers coach Elaine Stone.

Four Big Spring girls combined for just 17 sets, not all of which were good enough for strong spikes. Sheri Myrick led the way with 10 sets, followed by Lisa Hale with five. Myrick is the tallest player on the team, and ideally should be on the receiving end of the sets.

"We didn't execute at all today. We didn't execute what we've been practicing. There were just a lot of mistakes on everyone's part," Stone said, though she did cite Katrina Thompson for her alert play.

In both games the Lady Steers started well, swapping leads with the Panthers until the five and six point stages in both games.

In the first game, the Lady Steers took a 6-5 lead, with Cary Brooks and Kathryn Burrows nailing winners on spikes. A Panther burst, however, soon had the home girls trailing at 11-7. Though Myrick made a great block to temporarily stave off the Panther rally, the Lady Steers lost the opener 15-8.

Myrick opened game two with a dink for the first score, and the teams battled to 5-5 before the Panthers broke to a 9-7 lead. At 9-7, the Panthers broke the Lady Steers backs by winning the play of the match.

Twice, Lady Steers went out of bounds to retrieve errant balls on the point, and the two teams hooked up for the longest rally of the day, reminiscent of a Chris Evert point on a clay court. But the Panther's big hitter Kim Payne ended things suddenly with a vicious slam to put Fort Stockton ahead 10-7. The game ended soon after at 15-9.

The Lady Steers next game will be at home against Snyder, which won state last year, but which graduated its two big hitters.

In jayvee action, the Lady Steers fell to Fort Stockton in overtime in the third game. The score was 17-5, 5-15, 18-16.

Big Spring Lady Steers volleyball player Sheri Myrick sets the ball during Saturday afternoon's match against the Fort Stockton Panthers. Fort Stockton defeated the Lady Steers 15-8, 15-9.

Holtz loses Irish opener on failed PAT

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Jamie Morris scored his second and third touchdowns six seconds apart in the third period on a 1-yard run and a 27-yard pass after a botched kickoff return as third-ranked Michigan spoiled Lou Holtz's Notre Dame coaching debut Saturday by rallying for a controversial 24-23 victory.

The two quick touchdowns by Morris, who also scored on a 8-yard run in the first period, put Michigan ahead 24-14 and made Holtz only the second Notre Dame coach in the 20th century to lose his inaugural game. Elmer Layden's 1934 team bowed to Texas 7-6.

Notre Dame's John Carney, whose missed extra-point was the difference, was wide left on a 45-yard field goal attempt into the wind with 13 seconds remaining, one of three times Notre Dame drove into Michigan territory in the final period only to waste two of them.

Morris' short touchdown run from one of numerous wishbone alignments shown by both teams capped a 12-play, 78-yard drive with the second-half kickoff and put Michigan ahead 17-14. It was the first lead of the game for the Wolverines, who were favored by a touchdown.

Then came the game's key play and Michigan quickly turned it into the decisive touchdown.

Rick Sutkiewicz's short kickoff was held up by the 12 mph breeze and blown away from Notre Dame's James Sass, a sophomore walk-on.

Michigan's Doug Mallory recovered at the 27. On the next play, Morris caught Jim Harbaugh's perfectly thrown pass in the end zone despite tight coverage by cornerback Marv Spence to make it 24-14.

Steve Buerlein, who passed Joe Theismann and became Notre Dame's career passing leader, brought the Irish back with a 2-yard touchdown pass to tight end Joel Williams at 11:50 of the third period but Carney's extra-point try sailed wide to the left. Carney's field goal, a 25-yarder with 4:26 left, left the Irish one point short of a dramatic victory.

Miami buries Tech; Texas falls

MIAMI (AP) — Vinny Testaverde passed for 330 yards and four touchdowns Saturday night as second-ranked Miami routed Texas Tech 61-11 before turning its attention to a Sept. 27 showdown with No. 1 Oklahoma.

Testaverde, a senior from Elmont, N.Y., threw scoring passes of 49 and 18 yards to Alonzo Highsmith, 33 yards to Michael Irvin and 19 yards to Charles Henry.

Three of the touchdown passes were thrown in the first half when the Miami quarterback also scrambled 12 yards for a TD to help the Hurricanes to a 28-3 halftime lead.

The victory before a crowd of 41,925 hiked Miami's record to 3-0 for the first time since 1980. Texas Tech, a 41-7 winner over Kansas State in its season opener, fell to 1-1.

Stanford posted two quick first-half touchdowns, both on Paye passes to James.

The Cardinal aerial show clicked for its first score with eight seconds to play in the first quarter. James grabbed Paye's 18-yard bullet in the end zone despite tight coverage by cornerback Tony Tillmon.

Paye and James victimized Tillmon for another score on the second play of the next Cardinal possession. James grabbed the pass at the Texas 32 and scampered into the end zone after Tillmon fell to the turf on a missed tackle.

The 56-yard touchdown pass came with 12:41 to play in the first half.

Texas' first major offensive threat was stymied by a holding call that erased Charles Hunter's three-yard touchdown run. The Longhorns settled for a 26-yard Jeff Ward field goal with 2:31 to play in the first half, giving Stanford a 14-3 lead.

Texas Christian 48, Tulane 31
NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Texas Christian running back Tony Jeffery didn't want his record-setting afternoon to end.

"Can we spend the night?" he asked Coach Jim Wacker after leading TCU to a 48-31 triumph over Tulane in a college football game Saturday.

Jeffery turned in the best rushing performance in major college football so far this young season and just 14 yards shy of the NCAA all-time record of 357 yards in a game.

He got 343 yards on 16 carries, including five touchdown runs.

"It isn't that hard when you are getting the kind of blocking that I was from your offensive line and your receivers downfield," Jeffery said after the game. "They were doing a great job opening holes — big holes.

"Also, the quarterback was doing a terrific job of reading the tackle and making the pitch," he added. "I would just read my blocks and take off. Truthfully, I was dreaming about having a good game last night, once I finally got to sleep."

It was a return to form for Jeffery, who was voted the Southwest Conference offensive newcomer of the year after his freshman season in 1984. Last season, during the troubled times following revelations of NCAA violations by TCU, he fell off to what was, by his standards, a mediocre season.

"The biggest difference between this year and last year? Experience and a desire to win," Jeffery said. "Last season was a tough one."

Three of Jeffery's touchdowns came in a 9-minute span of the third quarter as TCU overcame a 17-10 halftime deficit to take control of the game.

Jeffery's five touchdown runs were for 11 yards in the second quarter, then 38 yards, 32 yards and 81 yards in the third quarter, and 67 yards in the fourth quarter. Including the five touchdown runs, Jeffery carried 15 times in the game.

The previous SWC record was by Roosevelt Leakes of Texas, who amassed 342 yards against Southern Methodist in 1972.

Prior to Saturday, the best single game rushing effort in major college football this year was turned in by Tony Citizen of McNeese State, who got 304 yards on 30 rushes against Prairie View A&M last weekend.

TCU is now 1-0. Tulane opened its season 0-1.

Baylor 38, Louisiana Tech 7

WACO (AP) — Matt Clark, a starting split end who quarterbacks Baylor's short yardage offense, scored twice and passed for another touchdown Saturday night to ignite the 12th-ranked Bears to a 38-7 non-conference victory over the Louisiana Tech Bulldogs.

Clark, a junior who was a high school quarterback at Corsicana, Texas, ran twice for touchdowns each time from a yard away in the first period.

In the second quarter, Clark hit tight end Scott Huckabay from three yards out for a touchdown.

It was the first time Clark had run or passed for touchdowns in college.

The Southwest Conference Bears, now 2-0, made it 28-0 over the Southland Conference Bulldogs (1-1) at halftime when redshirt freshman halfback Jeffrey Murray dashed six yards for a score.

Arkansas 21, Mississippi 0
LITTLE ROCK (AP) — For 30 minutes Saturday night, the Arkansas offense was in midseason form, and that was too much for Mississippi.

The Razorbacks made 236 yards and 16 first downs on their way to a 21-0 lead in the first half, a score that would stand as the final.

"In the first half our offense was as fine as I've ever seen in a first game," said Ken Hatfield, coach of the 18th-ranked Razorbacks. "In the second half we tried some different things that didn't work."

"I've never been prouder of a first-game defensive performance," Hatfield said. "We had eight new starters since last year and turned the ball over twice on our end of the field. The shutout was one of the greatest I've ever been around."

The Razorbacks' first possession was textbook — 11 straight plays of four yards or more and never a third down. The Rebels finally stopped Rouse for no gain on first down from the 9, but then Thomas kept right and got into the end zone behind a shielding block by James Shiest. The 13-play drive consumed 4:45 and covered 80 yards.

Bulldogs shock 8th ranked Vols

By The Associated Press

Third-ranked Michigan spoiled Lou Holtz's coaching debut at Notre Dame by edging the Fighting Irish 24-23 on Saturday while Mississippi State and No. 17 Washington posted surprising victories on the first full weekend of the college football season.

Mississippi State, meanwhile, remained unbeaten for its new coach, former Bulldog quarterback Rocky Felker. State, 2-0, stunned No. 8 Tennessee 27-23 at Knoxville, Tenn., as Don Smith passed for three scores and then romped 62 yards for the game-winning touchdown in the fourth quarter.

No. 10 Ohio State figured to have trouble with Washington but the Buckeyes got much more than they could handle in a 40-7 drubbing at Seattle. Quarterback Chris Chandler passed for 204 yards and two touchdowns and Husky runners combined for another 204 as Washington handed Ohio State its worst loss in 19 years.

The Buckeyes, 16-10 losers to Alabama in the Kickoff Classic, are 0-2 for their worst start since 1896.

In other games involving Top Twenty teams, No. 4 Alabama beat Southern Mississippi 31-17, No. 11 Brigham Young rallied to beat New Mexico 31-30 and No. 19 Georgia topped Duke, 31-7.

In night games, No. 2 Miami, Fla., was at home to Texas Tech, No. 7 Texas A&M visited No. 14 Louisiana State, Louisiana Tech was at No. 12 Baylor, Mississippi played No. 18 Arkansas at Little Rock, and No. 20 Michigan State was at Arizona State.

No. 4 Alabama 31, So. Mississippi 17
At Birmingham, Ala., Alabama's Mike Shula combined with Greg Richardson on touchdowns of six and 21 yards and placekicker Van Tiffin set a Southeastern Conference record with four extra points, giving him 105 in a row and breaking the old record of 101 set by Georgia's Rex Robinson in 1980.

In the final minute of the first half, Shula completed five consecutive passes to give Alabama a 14-0 lead. The Crimson Tide, 3-0, took control in the second half on Tiffin's 23-yard field goal and Gene Jelks' 5-yard run. Southern Mississippi dropped to 1-1.

Mississippi St. 27, No. 8 Tennessee 23

After Smith's 62-yard run, Mississippi State had to hang on before celebrating an upset of the defending Southeastern Conference champions. Tennessee drove to the Bulldog 16-yard line in the waning minutes before Bruce Plummer intercepted a fourth-down pass in the end zone.

Smith ran for 105 yards and accounted for 231 more in the air while completing 15 of 30 passes. Smith hit Louis Clark for two TD passes and combined with Fred Hadley on a 43-yarder. Mississippi State is 2-0, 1-0 in the SEC; Tennessee, 1-1 and 0-1, got three short scoring runs from William Howard.

No. 11 Brigham Young 31, New Mexico 30
With BYU trailing 30-17, quarterback Steve Lindsley led two late scoring drives to pull out the victory at Provo, Utah. He hit Mark Bellini with a 21-yard TD pass with 5:51 left and later combined with Richard Zayas on a 47-yard pass which brought the ball to the Lobos' 8-yard line. Lakei Heimula's 1-yard run and Leonard Chitty's conversion kick decided the Western Athletic Conference game.

Lindsley completed 28 of 40 passes for 361 yards and three touchdowns as BYU improved to 2-0. New Mexico, 0-2, got four touchdowns from quarterback Billy Rucker.

No. 17 Washington 40, No. 10 Ohio St. 7
Ohio State was rated a slight favorite, but the Buckeyes never had a chance. Chandler passed 31 and five yards to Lonzell Hill for touchdowns and Tony Zackery recovered a blocked punt in the end zone as Washington opened its season in spectacular fashion.

Despite dominating possession, Washington was held scoreless in the opening period. But the Huskies rolled up 24 points in the second quarter and then registered three touchdowns within 3:20 late in the third period. Fumbles by Ohio State sophomore Vince Workman set up the Huskies' last two scores.

No. 19 Georgia 31, Duke 7
Georgia led only 3-0 at halftime before James Jackson led four second-half touchdown drives in the Bulldogs' season opener.

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Freshman quarterback Tommy Hodson didn't quail at the prospect of opening his college career before one of the nation's top ranked offenses, LSU Coach Bill Arnsparger said Saturday night after Hodson led LSU to a 35-17 victory over Texas A&M.

"Tommy worked hard, but he kept the game in perspective," Arnsparger said. "He said good or bad, he would still be here on Sunday."

Hodson threw 15 passes for 193 yards to lead 14th ranked LSU over 7th ranked A&M.

A&M Coach Jackie Sherrill said he had nothing in particular to blame the loss on.

"We made a lot of mistakes, but they made the big plays offensively," Sherrill said.

Aggie quarterback Kevin Murray, sacked three times and intercepted four times, blamed himself for the team's defeat.

"I've said it before and I'll say it now, when the quarterback doesn't play well in this offense, the chances are not good for winning. It's very simple, the quarterback didn't play well tonight."

Hodson, sidelined with an injured throwing arm all last season, threw touchdown passes of three yards to Sammy Martin and five yards to Brian Kinchen before defensive linebacker Michael Brooks intercepted a pass and ran it 36 yards for the final touchdown for the 14th ranked Tigers late in the fourth quarter.

Reserve quarterback Micky Guidry added a 66-yard touchdown pass to Martin in the second quarter and freshman Harvey Williams capped a 69-yard scoring drive with a one-yard run midway in the third quarter.

A&M opened the scoring on its first possession with a five-yard pass from Murray to Shea Walker. Murray threw 24 passes for 209 yards, scoring again early in the second quarter with a 13-yard pass to Rob Bernstine and Scott Slater added a 22-yard field goal to conclude the Aggies scoring in the third quarter.

LSU played catch-up until Williams' touchdown run midway through the third quarter, which lifted the Tigers to 21-17. Williams, the object of a recruiting tug of war with A&M, carried 14 times for 57 yards. Murray called signals for A&M until late in the fourth quarter after throwing four interceptions, two of them to Kevin Guidry. Guidry's first interception, a 41-yard return, set up Hodson's second touchdown as the third quarter ended.

The other principal in LSU's "no-name offense" was Martin, who rushed for 65 yards and caught passes for 99 yards, and Wendell Davis, who caught 10 passes for 162 yards.

A&M's favored receiver was Bernstine, eight carries for 71 yards, while Roger Vick led the rushing attack with 21 carries for 63 yards.

The game was nationally televised by ESPN, but that failed to discourage a Tiger Stadium crowd of 79,713, the second largest in LSU history.

Steers Tennis

Deanna and myself coach the same way, only our (high school) drills are harder than the ones for the junior high players. The players come up in the same type system, and I know what's going on in the junior high level. Right now we have a very good group of seventh and eighth graders."

Mrs. Strahl works with the Runnels eighth graders in the mornings and the Goliad seven graders in the afternoon. "What we have is good because it takes about four years to establish a good feeder system from junior high to high school."

Strahl says being moved to class 4-A was like having a great load lifted off his team's back.

"In District 4-5A there were stronger individual players and more depth. You always knew what to expect. The two (Abilene High and Cooper) schools would finish one-two and San Angelo Central and Odessa Permian would follow.

"It's more open in 2-4A — not as predictable. Andrews normally does well, but that's about all you can predict in this district. It should give our kids a new sense of competitiveness. The door is wide open for us now."

Although his team has played in three matches already this season, the squad really hasn't worked on their tennis strokes that much. "The main thing we've been concentrating on is conditioning," says Strahl. "We've done more sprints, more lines, pushups, situps and shuffles than anything. The kids are beginning to get into shape."

So far Big Spring has won one and lost two in dual matches. At a triangular meet in Snyder last week, Big Spring romped over Lubbock Estacado 14 matches to four and then lost to Snyder by the same score. "I wasn't too worried about the loss to Snyder. We had to turn around and play them after playing Estacado. The kids were dead tired."

The Big Spring tennis coach was bothered about his team's last outing against Odessa High though. Big Spring won only one match, after having defeated Odessa high twice last year.

"We definitely didn't have it together, that's for sure. Maybe the kids were overconfident from last year, but that's about the worst show of lack of effort that I've seen from them."

"The kids know it's not how many we win or lose as long as we're successful. Our definition of success is the piece of mind knowing that you gave it your best. They didn't give their best against Odessa High," he said with a frown.

"It's just like that poster," he said pointing to a poster on the wall showing Ivan Lendl smashing a forehand over the net. Under the picture it reads: "Forehands speak louder than words." "That's what it's all about, I tell the kids — don't talk about what you can do, show me."

So Strahl enters this year determined more than ever to get his team in the right mental state. "We've got the ability. Our mental discipline will make us or break us this year."

Spoken like a man who's in the right frame of mind.

A home where love grows

Pete Marsalis, above, displays dolls on a desk that awaits a young girl. Mr. and Mrs. Marsalis want to be foster parents and have requested a girl between two and six years old.

By CARLEEN EVERETT
Lifestyle Editor

Their lives are complete — yet so empty.

Bill Marsalis and his wife, Pete, have four daughters and five grandsons, but want to share their lives with a child who needs them. They've chosen to become foster parents.

"Pete's here all day and she wants a little company," Marsalis said. "There's such a need for foster parents."

Mrs. Marsalis added, "we thought we'd get a foster child. We'd be helping them and they'll help us too."

The couple, both 57, were skeptical at first. After attending the classes required to be licensed through the Child Protection Services Department, however, they feel more prepared to once again play the role of parents.

"It's been awhile — we've forgotten," Marsalis said with a laugh.

Mrs. Marsalis says she thinks it will be easier parenting a foster child than raising one of her own. "We have someone we'll be able to turn to for any kind of problem we might have," referring to specialists in the Department of Human Services.

The couple is requesting a girl between the ages of two to six years.

"With all those grandsons, we've got to get a little girl in here somehow," Marsalis said.

"We want to try the two to six (year) age group — we prefer that. I think it will be an easy age to start out with. We would like a girl, but we'll take a boy, too," Mrs. Marsalis noted.

The Marsalises will also take siblings, they said, "we don't want to separate the kids," Mrs. Marsalis added.

They're ready for either a boy, a girl or both. Two bedrooms in their three bedroom home have been especially prepared for two young children.

The girl's room, decorated to suit any little girl's fancy, is complete with a double bed, a desk and a doll collection.

Model airplanes, cars and trucks are displayed in a book case with plenty of books in the boy's room.

The couple received their license to be foster parents on March 11.

In order to qualify for the licensing, a study is completed with each family making application. It includes interviews, fire and health inspections, TB (tuberculosis) tests and pet vaccinations, said Toni Rash, foster home developer.

"There is also a training session that helps people to prepare for fostering experiences. This training includes information on separation and grief, understanding the families and how to work with the sexually abused child," Rash said.

Jeannie Hunt, foster home recruiter, says there is a real need for foster homes.

"There are four active foster homes in Big Spring, but they're taking kids from other cities. By licensing standards, each foster home can have up to six foster kids including their own," Hunt said.

There is a need for foster homes for infants and teenage children, Rash reported.

"The whole area has been hit hard by the economy. People are scared. They're afraid to make the commitment to be foster parents," Hunt said.

Reimbursement and resources (clothing and medical expenses) are reimbursed to foster parents, Hunt explained. "They get $8 a day for a child under 10 and $9 a day for a child 10 and older."

"During tough times, the stress level goes up and the tolerance level goes down. We expect there will be a need for more foster homes soon, with the holidays coming and with the economy still bad. Holidays are very stressful times."

Foster care is a protective service for children and their families. These children are provided with a substitute family experience in a licensed foster home. This is for a planned and temporary period of time. The parents of these children receive support in working to get their children to return home if at all possible, Rash explained.

Many people think that it's the minority children who get placed, but "it's a myth," Hunt said.

Children who need foster homes are of all races and creeds. They need homes because they have been abused, neglected, sexually abused or abandoned. Their ages range from infancy to 17-year-olds, she noted.

"We have no openings in Big Spring for anyone over 12," Rash said.

"A lot of people think that parents come to the foster homes to visit their kids," Hunt said. An important part of the foster care is that the youths visit with their parents, but only in supervised visits at the Department of Human Services office.

"Our goal is to get children back in their home," Hunt said.

Although the Marsalises have requested a girl, they say they'll take a boy. Bill Marsalis, above, puts books in the book shelf in the room decorated to make any boy feel at home.

Tony Rash, foster home developer, left, presents Pete and Bill Marsalis with their foster home license. The couple were officially licensed on March 11.

Wedding

Jansma-Angel

WACO — Lisa Anne Jansma and James Robert Angel, grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Angel of Big Spring, exchanged wedding vows on Aug. 16 at the St. Louis Catholic Church with Monsignor Mark Deering, officiating.

Parents of the bride are Dr. and Mrs. David Jansma of Waco. Bridegroom's parents are Dr. Robert Angel, formerly of Big Spring, now of Waco and Jimmi Lou Shaver of Long Beach, Calif.

The bride is a cum laude graduate from San Marcos Academy and received a bachelor of science degree in nursing from Baylor University. She received a master of science degree from Texas Wesleyan College.

The bridegroom is a student at the University of Texas at Arlington.

Following a trip to Jamaica, the couple made their home in Fort Worth.

Men give wives failing grade on first aid test

DEAR ABBY: You have many faithful readers who are senior citizens, so we wish you would print more in your column that would benefit us. We are a large group of over 65ers in Brighton Beach, Brooklyn, who have a problem we need your help to solve.

There are more widows than widowers here, and we now know why. First we questioned the women on first aid: "What would you do if your husband suddenly collapsed with a heart attack, and was laid out on the floor just staring at you?" Nearly all the wives came to the same conclusion. They said it would be so traumatic and unnerving that they would first have a glass of tea, then finish the lemon meringue pie, then spring to action and try to revive the husband. If they failed, they would call for help.

We husbands concluded from this that when a man reaches the age of 65, he should immediately divorce his wife and marry a nurse who doesn't care for lemon meringue pie.

What do you think?
BROMAL AUERBACH,
DEBORAH HOSPITAL
FOUNDATION,
BROOKLYN, N.Y.

DEAR BROMAL: All kidding aside, I think you men should stick to your wives and forget the nurses. Furthermore, if more over 65ers would learn CPR, their spouses would live longer and they could enjoy tea and lemon meringue pie together! (P.S. CPR courses are offered by your local American Red Cross and/or American Heart Association.)

DEAR ABBY: First, let me say that I love my daughter-in-law as I would my own daughter. Now the problem: Some years ago, my son and his wife were given a lovely sterling silver heirloom tea service by a family member. It was complete with coffeepot, teapot, cream pitcher, sugar bowl, tray, etc. Over the years, it has become tarnished. I doubt if it has ever been polished. It is out in the open, and I cringe every time I go to their home and see that lovely set so badly tarnished.

I do not want to tell my son privately to tell his wife to polish it.

She is a good homemaker, and we get along beautifully, and I want to keep it that way; however, this oversight bothers me.

Last year I brought a jar of silver polish to her saying I had extra jars, but she didn't get the hint.

Am I being petty? My husband says I should mind my own business.

MIDWEST MOM

DEAR MOM: Petty? No. Your husband is blessed with sterling wisdom. Heed his advice.

DEAR ABBY: Twenty-seven years ago I wrote to you for advice, requesting a personal reply. I was a pregnant, frightened, Ohio farm girl with no one to turn to. You sent me to the Catherine Booth Home for Unwed Mothers in Cincinnati and you added, "I care" on your letter. I can't tell you how much those two words meant to a young girl who felt like no one cared.

My daughter was born at the home and I placed her for adoption. I saw her only once, briefly, through the nursery window — then no more. Since she was born on the Fourth of July, I was reminded yearly of her birth in a "bang-up" way. I'm sure some people wondered why I cried while watching fireworks.

Well, my daughter found me after an eight-year search! What strong feelings surfaced after all those years. I was in a daze for a while. We sent pictures and talked on the phone, and now she, her husband and their two children are coming to see me! I want you to know about this, Abby, because I have always considered you an important part of my life.

Thank you, not only for your column, but for the personal help you give people privately. I'm signing my name, but please don't use it.

YOUR FRIEND
IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR ABBY: A lady wrote to say that her family chilled her because she accidentally called her brother's third wife by his second wife's name.

A slip of the tongue does occur. I know. Mine was much more serious. I was married for 10 years the first time. We were divorced, then I married for the second time. On our wedding night, after we had made love, my husband kissed me tenderly. Then I called him by my first husband's name!

For the next eight hours all I got was the cold shoulder. The next morning he told me that all was forgiven.

High tech jewelry

Though it is not designed for it, this modem printed circuit board developed by Gandalf Technologies is small enough to double as a high-tech earring. The miniature modem is designed to enable computers and computer devices to communicate with each other over distances of up to four miles. The modem, using a new manufacturing technique known as a surface-mount technology, is reportedly four times smaller than others of its type.

Big Spring High School Class Reunion slated

The Big Spring High School Reunion for Classes 1947, 1948 and 1949 will be Oct. 17th and 18th.

Part of the weekend reunion festivities will include: a float built by classmates for the parade on Oct. 17; an "Over the Hill Golf Tournament - Phase 2" at the Big Spring Country Club on Sat., Oct. 18 at 8 a.m.; and a decorating party beginning at 9 a.m. at the Dora Roberts Community Center with coffee, rolls and soft drinks being served.

The highlight of the reunion will be an informal evening on featuring a dinner and dance with live entertainment on Oct. 18 at 6:30 p.m. at the Dora Roberts Community Center. Classmates are encouraged to dress comfortably - jeans and boots, because there will be a hoe down.

Letters were mailed and many were returned from those classmates who haven't turned in a change of address to the Big Spring High School Exes Association. Be sure to turn in a change of address to receive your invitation.

Bartenders learn to handle drunks

JOLIET, Ill. (AP) — Some bartenders have been collecting a lot of tips lately.

But the tips aren't in money. They are in nuggets of knowledge on how to keep customers from overindulging and how to handle those who are drunk.

In a daylong seminar called TIPS — Training for Intervention Procedures by Servers of Alcohol — even veteran bar owners said they had learned things they hadn't known.

The program, offered four times in Joliet during the past year, was designed by the Health Education Foundation in Washington, D.C.

"You learn a little more how to handle the people that are rowdy," said Edward Kucinic, a bar owner for 19 years. "You learn to smile at them and talk to them in a slow, moderate voice."

Bartenders also learn about the law and liability, said Kucinic, who owns Kuchi's, in Joliet.

"If a person came in here intoxicated and we never served him, by law we still are required to get this person not to drive and to get him home safely," he said.

Also, Kucinic said, bartenders learn how to handle underage drinkers.

"Don't be crazy and chase them out," he said. Instead, try to get phony identification away from them.

Shirrell Hall, owner of The Diamond bar in Diamond, said that when someone who is drunk wants another drink, she drags her feet in serving him.

"I can always be busy at the other end of the bar," she said.

She also tries to get the heavy drinkers to eat. Sometimes, she puts more ice in a glass to weaken the drink of a person who already has had enough, she said.

Ursula Heiy, of Uncle Richie's in Lockport, said she learned more about spotting a drunk.

People who wipe their mouths right after taking a drink may be overindulging, she said.

"They feel like they've spilled it (the drink) on their lips," she explained.

Although she's been a bartender for 15 years, Linda Latimer said she had never realized that a shot of 80 proof liquor was equal to 12 ounces of beer or 5 ounces of wine.

"I never knew that. I should have, but I didn't," said Latimer, who owns The Corner, in Wilmington. "Basically, you'd think a glass of wine hasn't got much alcohol in it. (But) the person drinking wine can get just as drunk just as quickly."

Though participants are enthusiastic about the class, Jim Willis, president of the Will-Grundy Illinois Retail Liquor Association, said he was disappointed with attendance so far.

"Probably 30 bars have responded and about 70 bartenders have taken the course," Willis said. There are 610 liquor licenses in the Will-Grundy area.

The volunteer program costs $25 per person. Willis estimates that a mandatory program being considered by the state would cost $100 to $125 and last three days.

One problem with sending bartenders to the seminar is the high turnover of employees in the business, said Kucinic.

Others interviewed said the program was too long or that it offered information most veteran bartenders already knew.

Even so, some insurance companies offer 10 percent off dramshop insurance if 75 percent of a bar's bartenders take the course, said John Gorsky of Kozol Brothers, who has taught the class.

Low-impact aerobics
save tension on legs

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I was discouraged from aerobic dancing because of leg pains. All that jumping and hopping was too much for my middle-aged body, I guess. Why does it have to entail such jouncing? I understand the idea of aerobic exercise is to build up heart and lung strength, not muscles as such. Now my girlfriend wants me to go with her to a low-impact aerobics class. Is that my answer? If it isn't, I'll go back to my specialty — aerobic sleeping.
— K.M.B.

Dr. Donohue

It's probably your answer. Many aerobic dance enthusiasts got turned off by leg pain from jumping on hard floor. So someone came up with low-impact aerobics. The hallmark is non-bouncing movement. Usually, one foot is kept planted on the floor at all times.

I've said this before, but it bears repetition. You don't have to devote yourself to one from of exercise to make aerobic gains. Any exercise you can manage that gets the heart pumping to your target rate serves the purpose. Jogging, swimming, rowing — whatever suits your fancy. I rule out aerobic sleeping, even if you snore.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I am on Inderal, and since going on it (for blood pressure) I don't get my pulse up the levels I'm supposed to for heart conditioning. Why is this? My other question is, do I get aerobic benefits at the lower rates?
— A.J.

Inderal is one of the beta blocker drugs. It is supposed to slow the pulse rate, so it's not at all surprising that you should find your exercise heart rate below what the tables say it ought to be for you.

Do you benefit at the lower rates? The short answer is yes. So many people are taking the kind of drugs you are and so many of them are into exercise programs that your question comes up frequently.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I am doing weightlifting. After 10 months I find that my biceps are not improving. I do five sets of 10 reps bar bell curls with 30 pounds. I exercise three times a week. I am 19. Can you help me?
— K.S.

I think what you're really concerned about is that the circumference of your upper arms is not increasing the way you want. You're concentrating entirely on you biceps muscles, the ones at the front. You have to work on your triceps, the back ones. The triceps constitute 60 percent of the arm's girth.

Good triceps exercises include are extensions, dips on parallel bars, and pushups from the floor.

Are you using the overload principle, adding new challenges in the form of increased weight? Add five or 10 more pounds of weight and drop the reps back to six or eight. When you can comfortably curl this weight 10 or 12 times, add more weight and drop back the reps again.

I urge you to look at your diet, something many body builders neglect in their programs. You'll find many good references to carbohydrate, protein and fat balances for bodybuilding in the library. I can recommend a good book to give you a better idea of exercises for various muscle groups. It's "Sports Conditioning and Weight Training," by Stone and Kroll (Allyn and Bacon, publishers).

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I have a nutrition question. Can a person's digestive system digest protein, starches, sugars, and liquids at the same meal? I've heard that this is not healthy, but I eat like this all the time.
— J.K.

So do I. I don't know where you heard or read that, but your digestive system is a lot smarter than some diet book writers would have you believe. You can digest all those substances, and all at the same meal.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I am a 20-year-old male. I have been into bodybuilding for a few years. I have begun using steroids to help my program. Since then, I have had a worsening of an old acne problem. Any connection?
— W.J.

Could be. A worsening of acne has been noticed in some who use steroids.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: What is the standard recommendation for stepped increases in jogging mileage?
— S.B.M.

Mileage increase should not be greater than 10 percent in a week.

Club serves cake to V.A. patients

Odeli Turner, hospital chairman, and Kathryn Thomas reported at a recent Gold Star Mothers meeting that they served refreshments of coffee and cake to the patients of the Veterans Administration Medical Center.

Edna Perkins, community service chairman, reported that chapter members have sent seven vases of flowers and 29 trays of food to shut-ins, made four courtesy trips, given $30 donations to charity and donated $130 for memorials.

Dorothy Tischler, state president, will be guest speaker on Sept. 27 at the home of Kathryn Thomas, 1608 Osage Rd. for a meeting and supper salad.

The club expressed a need for volunteers who can play chess with patients in the nursing care home unit at the V.A. Medical Center. Wester paper back books and domino counters are also needed at the V.A.

Mu Zeta plans for year's activities

Mu Zeta Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi met recently at the home of Tine Steffen, club president, to discuss the coming year's plans for ways and means, service and activities.

Members made plans for the club's annual Indian bread sale and to assist Xi Pi Epsilon with their Christmas wrapping project.

A dinner and bowling party with prizes has been planned for Sat., Sept. 20 at Highland Bowling Lanes at 7 p.m. Members are asked to gather in the meeting room.

Next meeting is Sept. 22 at the home of Carolyn Clark at 7:30 p.m.

Women over 40: Living, learning and loving it

By HARPER'S BAZAAR
A Hearst Magazine

Linda Evans has learned a lot, Joan Collins wants to change the image and Susan St. James is having another baby — that's how three big stars react to breaking the 40 age barrier.

Evans, Collins and St. James were among the women profiled in the August issue of Harper's Bazaar, devoted to "Over 40 & Terrific." Others include Valerie Perrine, Ali MacGraw, Patti LaBelle and Maud Adams.

"For years I didn't recognize my own potential," said "Dynasty" star Evans, 43. "Whether it was choosing my acting roles or making a dinner reservation at a restaurant, I always relied on other people's opinions. Now I handle my own decisions, and if I fail, well, that's the breaks."

Collins, at 52 more successful than ever in "Dynasty," does not believe 40 should be a cut-off point in finding new opportunities and taking advantage of them.

"But it's not necessarily the case," she said. "Age can be a big obstacle. I'm proud of my accomplishments, and those of women like Jane Fonda, Linda Evans and Sophia Loren.

"If we can set a good example of what life after 40 can bring, and if that can change societal attitudes, it's all for the better."

Collins said she would not consider a facelift, explaining:

"It erases all the character — the natural beauty. Skin may look smoother, but the whole appearance is artificial."

St. James, star of "Kate & Allie," turned 40 in August and expects her fourth child in November.

"I've always had very easy pregnancies," she said. "This time around, I feel the aches and pains more. Also I know this will be my last one, so there's a little sadness, too, kind of like my baby-making days are over."

Perrine, 42, keeps in shape with dance classes, playing soccer and general house and yard work. She said:

"Basically, I believe no matter how careful you are, you're going to age anyway. The trick to looking good is to be satisfied with yourself. I am, and plan to stay that way."

MacGraw, 47, thrice married, has been single since her divorce from Steve McQueen eight years ago.

"My 40s have been the decade of biggest change for me," she said. "I've figured out what I like about myself and hopefully eliminated the things I don't."

"I've also determined that whether you're old or young has nothing to do with chronological age. I have friends in their 60s who seem much younger than some people I know in their 30s, simply because their interests are more vital. And that's what I am striving for, that's the person I want to be."

For LaBelle, who lost two sisters to cancer in the last five years, being over 40 has special significance.

"Sometimes I think I will die of cancer because they did," she said. "That's why, when I think about being 42, I welcome every day that comes into my life. When I'm 65 or 70, I'm going to brag about it, because just to live is a wonderful thing."

"People who hide their age, that's sick. I'm very happy to be 42. I can't wait to become 55. I'm gonna be an awesome diva by then."

Adams summed up the attitude of many over-40 women.

"The last thing I expected was to like being over 40," the model-turned-actress said. "In fact, I love it!"

Millie's Laws describe events that 'will' go wrong

By COSOPOLITAN
A Hearst Magazine
 Murphy's Law holds in general that whatever can go wrong, will go wrong — but Millie's Laws give you the specifics.

Some disasters could befall anybody, but the September issue of Cosmopolitan lists some of the things that happen to today's women as they juggle job and personal life.

—The only times the boss ever stops at your desk is when you're on the phone talking to Mom.

—Any dress you finally give away will be the height of chic the following season — if not before.

—The men who dump you are always brighter, richer and taller than the ones you love you.

—When you have finally decided a puppy could warm up your life and you get an adorable scrouzer from the ASPCA — you immediately fall in love with a man who is allergic to dogs.

—After four too many margaritas with the girls at lunch, you wobble straight into the bigshot who will decide whether or not you are right for the job you are dying to get.

—Whatever you throw out in the trash you will need desperately within four days.

—The month you are totally broke is the same month you must buy wedding or birthday gifts for three good friends.

—The night you have finally mustered the courage to tell him the bad news — that it's all over — he arrives bearing roses, champagne and Godiva chocolates.

—Five minutes after you've said yes to dinner with the creep who lives down the hall, the new hunk in accounting calls to see if you are free.

—You bound eagerly on the scale after three days of nothing but grapefruit and arugula and discover you have gained two pounds.

—As soon as you decide it is OK for women to make the first move, he answers your telephone call with, "Gloria, who?"

—You bravely quit your job, having decided that trying to have it all is just too much — and come home to find out that your husband has lost his job.

—When you are on the way to a wedding reception wearing your best silk dress and most fragile sandals, you will get your first flat tire in years.

—The evening you invite an absolute charmer in for a drink is the evening your liquor supply is down to one bottle of cactus liqueur.

—You never lost dime-story jewelry — only expensive gems and family heirlooms.

Decision-making on care for an elderly parent can be difficult

By NAOMI HUNT
County Extension Agent

Coming to terms with the fact that a once proudly independent parent can no longer manage on his or her own is an emotional experience. As you work through these feelings, however, it may also be crucial to do your best at some rational decision-making.

Making a change in an elder parent's living arrangements, is like many other life-decisions, such as moving or taking a new job. For every decision there are pros and cons. There are implications for the whole family. And there may be alternatives to consider.

Involve your parent in the decision-making process, unless he or she is beyond rational thinking.

You can begin by listing the elder's practical needs for assistance. Then put them into categories of physical, nursing, medical, social or emotional, financial or other assistance.

Now consider what is available in your community to meet these needs. The Area Office on Aging nearest your location can provide information and referrals on a number of support services, including home-delivered meals, friendly visitors, and adult day-care centers.

Talk with your parent about his or her preferences. Determine your own preferences and those of other family members. Then examine why they are, or are not acceptable alternatives.

Focus on family

For example, if your mother wants to stay in her own home, but none of your family have the emotional or physical resources to be on 24-hour call, the support systems other than family members may be necessary.

Or if your father's presence in your home is sure to result in constant conflict with your spouse, then this alone is not an acceptable alternative.

Ultimately, you may decide that the best decision may not meet everyone's preferences and may involve a combining a number of alternative services — some given by family members and others provided by professional caregivers.

CHOICES IN CARING FOR AN ELDERLY PARENT
A common stereotype about aging in our culture is that the elderly go from being independent straight into a nursing home. That's simply not true. Only five percent of the aging population live in nursing homes, and the vast majority of them are over 85.

In selecting care for an elderly parent who needs assistance, you have many options from which to choose.

- You can bring some new or additional help into your parent's home. This might take the form of a home health aide, adult sitter, or visiting nurse.

- You or another family member may invite the parent to live with you. You can convert a room or build on a "granny flat" to accommodate both you and your parent's needs.

- Perhaps someone else in the family is elderly and needful. If your parent shares housing and caretaking services with that person, the joint household may relieve several family problems at once.

- You can arrange for your parent to live in a boarding home that specializes in caring for frail or elderly people in a homelike setting.

- You may find you need to place your parent in a more sheltered environment where nursing and perhaps medical care is available and reliable basis. This may be a home for the aged or a nursing home. If you are concerned about the attention your parent is receiving, you may hire an adult sitter to relieve you.

These are just some of the options available. The best choice will depend upon your parent's needs and preferences as well as your own.

Ways to preserve your child's artwork

By BETTER HOMES and GARDENS
A Meredith Magazine

Children often present their parents, grandparents, and other family members with gifts of original artwork. Framing is one way to preserve their artistry; another way is by translating their "masterpieces" into imaginative keepsakes of needlework.

If you don't already have on hand enough raw material, such as salvaged scribbles and carefully saved classroom drawings, Better Homes and Gardens Holiday Crafts magazine suggests you guide your children toward making drawings that will translate effectively into craft designs.

Provide your youngsters with a good selection of crayons, paints, or wide-tip felt pens. Suggest they use dark colors for outlines and lighter, more vibrant colors for filling in the designs. If necessary, when making a pattern from artwork, eliminate extraneous details for the sake of balance or composition.

If you have a particular project in mind, suggest that the kids work to the scale that suits the project. Give them sheets of paper to work on that are the size and shape required. Enlarging a portion of a picture can produce bold and dramatic results.

Transfer the pattern to a sheet of sturdy paper and go over the lines of the design with a heavy black marking pen. Keep the original artwork protected between sheets of acrylic or plastic to avoid damage. You may want to frame it later.

To work a design in needlepoint, slip the paper pattern under a piece of needlepoint canvas and trace the design onto the canvas with a permanent marker or acrylic artists' paints.

Select yarns and stitches to brighten and emphasize areas for the sake of contrast. A child's use of color is often highly original, and purple dogs can be part of the fun.
